Lambda Chi Alpha runs for Moscow Humane Society

By SCOTT TROTTER
Associate Editor

7:40 a.m. Saturday with a football donated by the UI athletic department.

"We ran in alphabetical order until people began to pass out later in the night," said member John Kowatsch, who added that he happened to be one of the fortunate participants who got plenty of sleep.

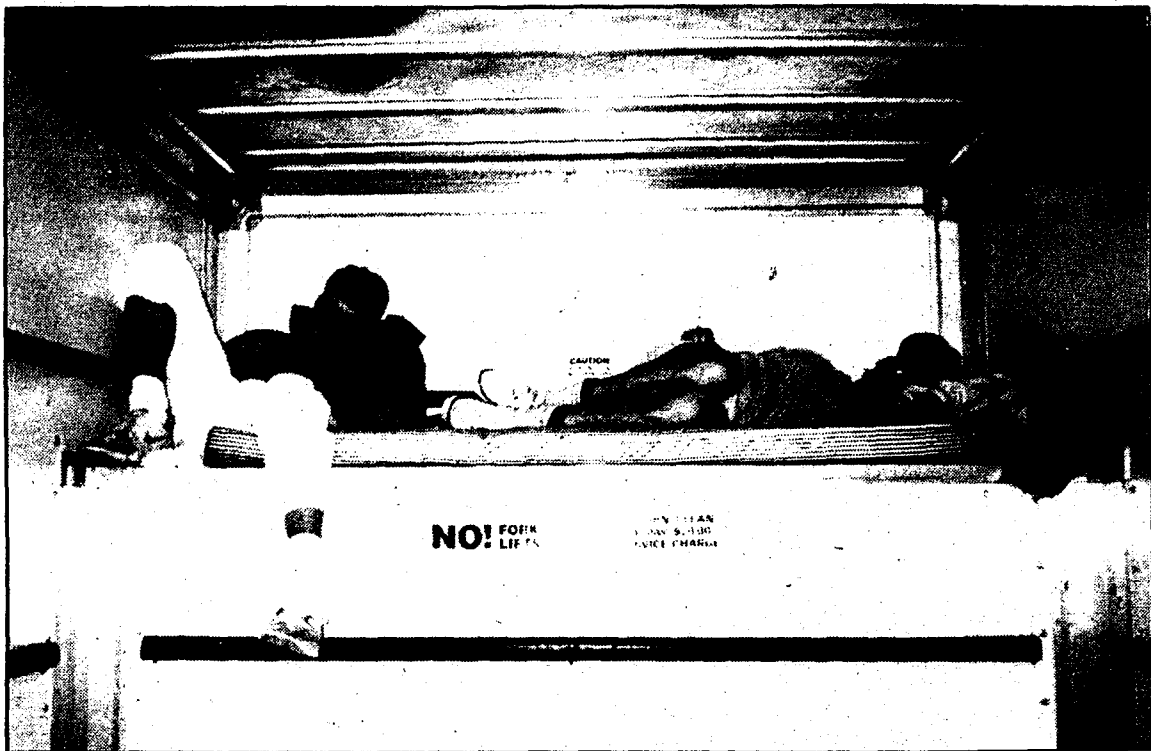

"We sang sing-alongs, high school fight songs and anything else we could think of," Durk said. "There were about three times that I remember wanting to quit. One was after the first 20 minutes. We had gone about what seemed like a quarter of a mile, and I thought to myself that this might just take forever. The second was in the middle of the night when it started raining, and the third was just before Moscow, when we hit the five-mile, what seemed like 50-mile, stretch of mixed mud and gravel."

It started as "the run from hell" and ended with rejoicing as the men of Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity ran a football from Eastern Washington University to the University of Idaho Friday and Saturday to raise $400 for the Moscow Humane Society.

"It was kind of one of those events that at the start you don't really want to do, and then it's the morning and it's over, and you actually had a lot of fun doing it," said Lambda Chi member Larry Durk. "Though it rained a lot, it was a good time."

Approximately 30 Lambda Chis loaded up in the back of an enclosed truck and left the EWU football stadium at 9:15 p.m. Friday. The group, which averaged seven mph, ran behind the truck and in front of safety vehicles during the 78-mile trip and eventually made it back to Moscow at

Board to allow ASUI funds for student lobbyist

By M.L. GARLAND
& AMY JAMISON

Student representatives from five Idaho higher education institutions met Saturday in Coeur d'Alene to revise the proposed Idaho Student Lobby Constitution.

"ISL is a very positive, cooperative force between the State Board, the Legislature and Idaho colleges," ASUI Sen. Lisa Krepel said. "It benefits all students in Idaho."

Friday's Idaho State Board of Education meeting resulted in an opinion from the board's attorney general, Bradley Hall. His opinion supports ISL as an educational tool and will allow student fees to be used.

"It's a positive vehicle of communication," said Executive Director Rayburn Barton. "We will know what's on your mind and you will know what's on ours."

Students from the University of Idaho, Lewis-Clark State College, Idaho State University, Boise State University and North Idaho College discussed concerns voiced by the student senates and adopted provisions to address them.

Wednesday, the ASUI Senate passed 7-4 a bill to approve the ISL program and named Krepel as the elected delegate. However, ASUI Vice President Lynn Major, as acting president, vetoed the bill Thursday while ASUI President Tina Kagi was in Sandpoint for the State Board meeting.

In a letter dated Oct. 20 to ISL, the ASUI was in "full support of forming and joining the Idaho Student Lobby in concept." However, the letter stated that the ASUI Senate would not ratify the proposed ISL Constitution and Bylaws until certain provisions were made concerning fee structures, procedures for constitutional amendments and financial and legal liabilities in the event of succession or disbandment from the ISL program.

"Our senate had valid questions that were brought up to the steering committee, and the constitution was amended to take care of all those concerns," Krepel said.

The ASBSU Senate voted Thursday to decline membership from ISL and stated in their resolution: "The considerable advantage that BSU has over the other four-year institutions will be severely damaged by joining this program."

However, ASBSU President Pat Reilly said he is in favor of the ISL program but

Student fees labeled 'public funds'

Board can prohibit litigation

By SHERRY DEAL
News Editor

The ASUI cannot use student funds to hire an attorney, according to a memo issued by the State Board of Education's attorney general.

"The board may legally prohibit the use of student fees for litigation against the board by student groups."

— Bradley H. Hall
State Board Attorney General

Bradley H. Hall, who specializes in education issues, was asked by the board to form an opinion on the role the board plays in controlling student fees, and the legality of their use to hire attorneys.

Hall concluded that once collected, the student money becomes public funds, and any use of the funds must be approved by the president of the university, in this case, University of Idaho President Elisabeth Zinser.

The memo Hall presented to Rayburn Barton, state board executive director, concludes: "Board authorized and institutionally collected student activity fees are 'state funds' under the ultimate control of the board."

In the memo Hall also said, "The board may legally prohibit the use of student fees for litigation against the board by student groups."

The memo also expressed an opinion about whether the ASUI could use student funds to hire a lobbyist. Ultimately, the board has control over this, too, but according to Barton, the board members will allow students to fund a lobbyist because they feel it is educational.

"Such activities have been termed part of the educational process," Barton said. "We're all in the same game - advocating education."

The ASUI has not made any move toward a suit against the university. Attorney Ray Givens was retained by the ASUI to investigate the constitutionality of last spring's $25 fee increase, when student leaders learned the money from the increase would be used to pay faculty salaries.

The ASUI agreed to pay Givens $2,000, but it has not been determined whether the university will allow him to be paid with student fees.

According to Barton, the memo is not an official attorney general's report, but just an opinion. However, Barton said he thinks the the Board of Regents is the only group that can override the memo.

Hall reached his conclusion by citing previous court cases concerning similar student issues in other states. Hall said he could not find any Idaho cases with circumstances similar to those in the ASUI issue.

He cited a Washington Supreme Court decision in which the court ruled that Associated Students of the University of Washington student funds were "public in nature" and "subject to the ultimate control by the Regents."

Hall further concluded that the state board ultimately controls the funds by citing a case where the Student Government Association at the University of Massachusetts filed suit against its Board of Trustees for terminating student-funded legal services at the university.

The student government association said the board terminated the service because students had been successful in the past with suits against the board and claimed the board had violated students' first amendment rights.

The court ruled in favor of the board, stating that student activity fees are voluntary and that a student can refuse to pay fees, and not enroll. Further, the court decision said the Board of Trustees was authorized by statute to determine how the fees were to be spent, and that students wishing to file litigation charges of any kind would be required to pay out of their own pockets.

Environmental committee to encourage awareness

By M.L. GARLAND
Editor

To combat pollution and waste, the ASUI is forming an Ad-Hoc Committee on the Environment that will provide educational and public awareness programs while also overseeing several campus projects.

"This reaches beyond ASUI bounds and beyond political statements," said Sen. Lisa Krepel, who proposed the resolution that was passed Wednesday. "This is something we all need to be concerned with."

Projected projects for sub-committees include aluminum recycling, paper recycling, energy conservation and food service. Several projects could lead to competitions between living groups, according to Krepel.

University Dining Services by Marriott has already begun a phase-out of harmful disposable plates, cups and packaging. Global warming is aided by the energy produced when fossil fuels are burned. These items also increase harmful toxin use and fill up landfills.

"It's affecting more people's lives than our own," Kagi said. Kagi has approached UDS about their program and has also looked into solutions for the existing problems.

"This is probably the most important habit we can carry through life."

— Lisa Krepel
ASUI Senator

Krepel is circulating among living groups the following list of products that can generate funds:

- Recycling one glass bottle could keep a 100-watt light bulb burning for four hours.
- Recycling one aluminum can could operate a TV set for three hours.
- Recycling one ton of paper (the average student uses half a pound per day) provides enough energy to power an average home for six months.

"I foresee the committee examining environmental shortcomings on campus and making recommendations while also being active in the nationwide conservation program," Kagi said.

The committee is working in cooperation with the national program "Cool It," which provides information, program suggestions and a funding incentive of $2,500 for increased effectiveness of existing projects, technical innovation, cost efficiency, community involvement and creativity.

"We hope to attract non-typical ASUI types, those involved with Greenpeace and the National Wildlife Federation," Krepel said. "I see it as loosely tied to the ASUI, with student government as a means of support."

ASUI President Tina Kagi said she foresees the committee in action within a month and encourages interested individuals to sign up for the committee at the ASUI office.

"It is a lifelong process," Krepel said. "This is probably the most important habit we can carry through life."

"Tony (McMillon) is missing half his right (buttock) cheek from falling out of the truck," Durk said jokingly.

"And (Tom) Rudfelt got a broken toe — probably from rolling out of the back of the truck more often than running," Kowatsch said.

"But the good thing is that we only fumbled twice," Durk said.

The members, who presented the ball to Vandal Head Coach John L. Smith before Saturday's EWU-UI football game, have fundraisers regularly for the Moscow Humane Society.

"We did it for all those poor, suffering, little creatures," Durk said. "When I was running the ball, all I could think about was starving kittens and other wounded pets."

"It was worth it," he said. "(Even though) I'm hurtin'. I'm hurtin' bad."

RHA to sponsor ASUI candidate debate

By SALLY GILPIN
Staff Writer

The Residence Hall Association decided to sponsor a debate between ASUI candidates during its meeting Monday night.

The decision was sparked by Willis Sweet Hall President Lara MacConnell, who suggested that RHA should not let ASUI candidates speak at hall meetings. MacConnell said her hall was concerned about the amount of time candidates took to make speeches.

MacConnell suggested a debate sponsored by RHA instead. The other hall presidents did not support MacConnell's idea, however.

"It (the hall meeting) gives more opportunity for candidates to get known by people," said Upham Hall President Elwood Rennison. "Not everyone may attend a debate."

Rennison suggested having a debate but still allowing candidates to speak at hall meetings. It was suggested that individual halls could ask candidates to limit speaking time or ask them not to speak during hall meetings.

A motion was passed to sponsor a debate, which the RHA Events Committee will hold.

In other business, Sen. Lisa Krepel spoke to RHA about last weekend's Idaho Student Lobby meeting.

Gov. Cecil Andrus, Sen. Larry Craig and UI President Elisabeth Zinser all support the ISL, Krepel said. Several hall presidents were concerned that Boise State University might not participate in ISL, which would make the program less effective since BSU has the largest enrollment of the state schools.

Krepel said BSU will reconsider adopting ISL and will probably be in favor of it.

Krepel also said she had spoken with other schools about placing condom machines on Idaho state school campuses.

"Three years ago the ASBSU surveyed students to see how they felt about putting condom machines on campus. Students were in favor three to one," Krepel said. "Their administration said 'no' because they might lose funding from a predominately LDS area."

Upham Hall is conducting a similar survey and had requested information from Krepel, according to Rennison.

RHA also approved vendor permits for Crossroads Bookstore and Sportswear U.

Crossroads Bookstore applied for a permit that would allow the store to slip religious information under dorm room doors.

Some halls had previously decided not to allow Crossroads to distribute the information.

"My hall doesn't want it at all," said Forney Hall President Ellen Falter.

Shoup Hall President Nick Nachbar suggested other means of distribution, such as bulletin boards or mailboxes.

Crossroads' permit will allow the store to place information under doors once every two weeks. Halls can call Crossroads and ask that the material not be distributed in their halls, however.

RHA also approved Sportswear U's vendor permit, which allows the store to place sign-up sheets for shirts in halls.

finds a lot of hesitancy stemming from the ASBSU Senate.

"There is a lot of resentment of the program," he said.

"It's dismaying. We've (student presidents) worked so well together, and we've really cultivated a feeling of unity," Kagi said. "I know all the presidents felt very positive about ISL. I hope that those opposed are only a vocal minority."

Idaho State University is finding similar opposition, but according to ASISU President Tony Rodriguez, the problem comes from lack of funds.

The ASISU Senate, which has yet to vote on the ISL program, was waiting for the revised ISL Constitution. Rodriguez said ISU hasn't approved the program yet because of financial concerns.

"Our senators are definitely in favor of it, but we don't know where the money is going to come from," he said. "If we can come up with the money, I'm sure it'll go through. That's the bottom line."

Rodriguez expects a senate decision within two weeks.

Despite opposition, several schools, including neighboring NIC in Coeur d'Alene and LCSC in Lewiston, have approved the program.

LCSC voted in favor of the professional lobbyist program Oct. 9.

"We feel it's the way of the future," said ASLCSC President Lon Jackman.

Jackman and the executive branch at LCSC do not plan to use a student lobbyist if the ISL program is approved.

"We want a professional all the way," he said.

ISU will eventually do the same, according to Rodriguez.

"The student lobbyist might be done away with in the future," he said. "It's another issue facing the senate."

For the ISL program to exist, a 50 percent representation of Idaho students in public schools must support the program. With everyone's support, excluding BSU's, ISL may represent the majority of the students at the Legislature in January, according to Krepel.

Board skeleton claims fee authority

They're running scared. They must be hiding something. Obviously those skeletons in their closets must have started shaking.

No, Halloween is still a week away.

But the Idaho State Board of Education and University of Idaho administrators have misplaced their calendars.

A fear seems to have set in about students and their fees. Oops, actually public fees. Don't let the word "student" mislead you.

Rarely does anything labeled "student" by the UI administration actually belong to the students. No matter how much money a student may contribute to a student fund.

The State Board's own attorney general, Bradley Hall, stated at Friday's meeting that all students have just joined a forced union.

"Student activity fees do not 'belong' to students," Hall read from a court case cited in his opinion.

He also quoted: "Payment of fees is voluntary, only in the sense one may choose not to enroll; apart from that, payment is a contractual condition of enrollment as a resident student."

But if you want to gain a "higher education" at this particular institution, we have never heard of anyone giving our students the option to not pay fees.

Their outrageous proclamation manifested from their fear of the ASUI's retention of attorney Ray Givens to delve into the constitutionality of using student fees. So Hall's opinion was no surprise.

Those skeletons must have been rattling and shaking out all their bats.

Their fear of our student body suing this fine institution is unfounded. ASUI President Tina Kagi has repeatedly said that was not their intent, but rather a drastic solution if answers were not provided.

Now we have no recourse to question any administrative procedures. We can't even hire an attorney to check the validity of their obviously biased opinion, and the board must override Hall's opinion.

But, they can't stop students from using their own funds to do just that.

After all, Halloween is just around the corner, and we wouldn't want to deprive the board and the administration of a ghoulish hallow's eve.

Boo. Still scared?

— M.L. Garland

• GOOD FOR U. •

You, yes you, could power the average home for six months, save 17 trees, 7,000 gallons of water and three cubic yards of landfill space, and even keep 60 pounds of air pollution effluent out of the air you breathe.

Plus, there are companies that will pay as much as $200.

"Sign me up!"

The ASUI is organizing an Ad-Hoc Environmental Committee that could accomplish the above with the average student's recyclable paper from class work.

In cooperation with "Cool It," a national campaign, the committee will work on projects such as:

- Aluminum Recycling
- Paper Recycling
- Energy Conservation
- Food Service

If conservation isn't enough, additional funding may be granted by "Cool It" to the tune of $2,500. Five merit awards will be given out on Earth Day, 1990.

To re-state a cliché: After all, this is the only planet we get.

Sign up now in the ASUI office to become environmentally aware.

• LETTERS TO THE EDITOR •

Acknowledge God

Editor:

This is written in reaction to a letter written by James Smith in regard to the removal of some posters announcing the Oct. 6 meeting of the Student Humanist Association. I saw a few things in the letter that I'd like to bring to James Smith's attention.

First of all, the very thing that you wanted was exactly what your letter lacked, courtesy. The letter was written all on an assumption that it was Christians who took down the posters and turned into an accusation to destroy a people's character. Secondly, anyone with a saving faith in Jesus Christ does not hate you or other humanists or anyone. Third, this God that you are talking about, the one and only true God, loves you with a love you couldn't even fathom. You matter deeply to Him.

Lastly, you may continue to shake your fist at God, but until you acknowledge God as God and for who He is, you will find this quest for freedom short-lived.

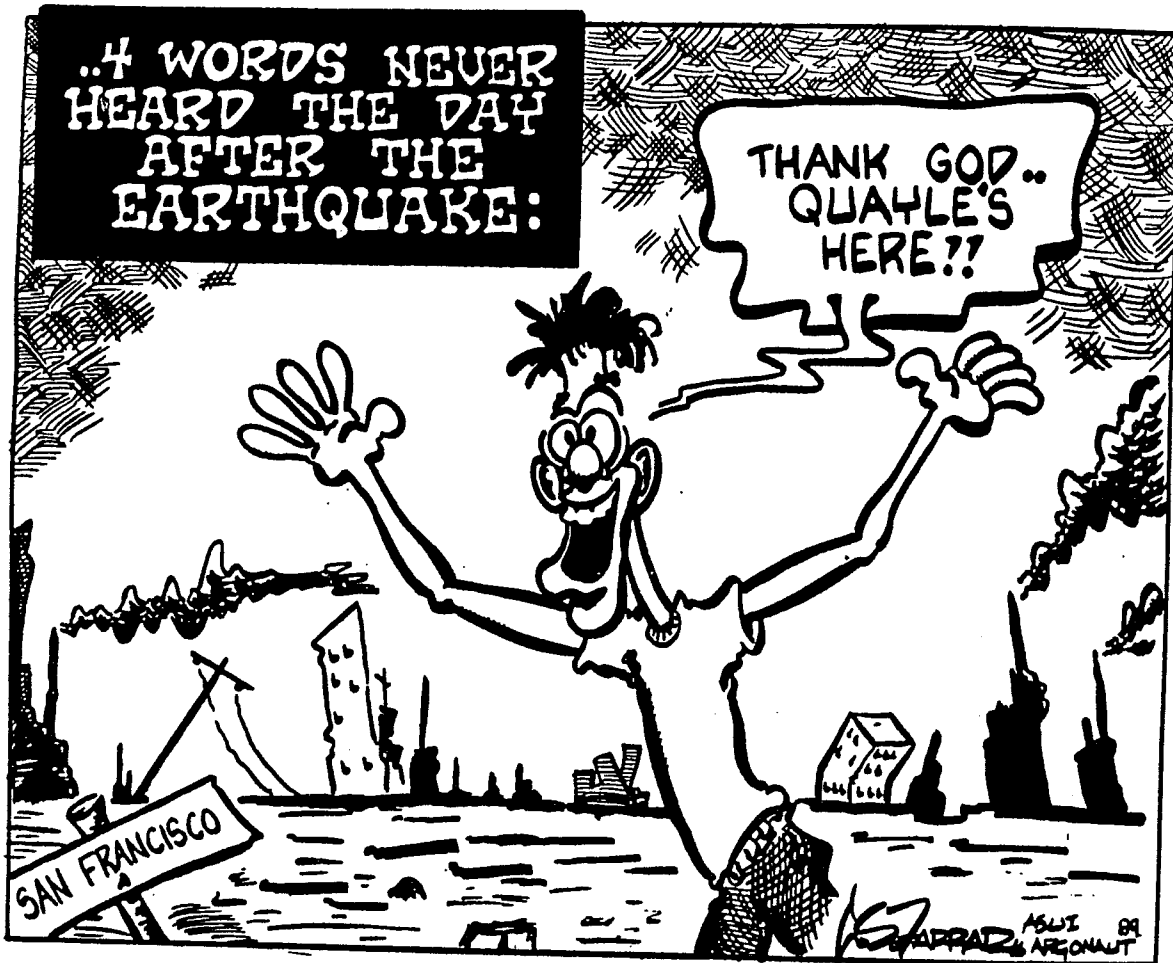

—Dave Meyer

Improper assumptions

Editor:

I was extremely disappointed by the letter entitled "Fundamentalist Fascist," printed in the Oct. 13 Argonaut. The writer of the article, James H. Smith, first jumped to the conclusion that Christians were responsible for the disappearance of posters

Congress fat cats raise pay

Ronald Reagan frothed at the mouth for eight loooooong years about "economic expansion." Nine years ago George Hornblende Vermouth Bush III called the Reagan rhetoric "doo doo economics." Shortly thereafter, he chewed up his words for a chance to become "the vice president." Then he won the '88 election, promising four more years of "Reaganomics" and a wife whose nickname isn't "the dragon lady."

Now he's the "education president." He accomplished this by: A) saying it. B) staging a nationwide governors' summit on education, where he was just about to break the bad news that there was no more money in the budget for education, that we'd just have to tighten our belts, that it was merely a question of misplaced priorities, when all of a sudden the waiter brought him a $2 million bill for the hors d'oeuvres and security.

But he's right. It IS a question of priorities. If we run out of hors d'oeuvres, there's always plenty of cake for the masses. After all, it's Reaganomics — which is based on the "tinkle-down" theory,

But the "poor people" ("welfare cheats," for you confused republicans), if they'll just get off their lazy duffs, can qualify for federal assistance in the form of subsidized "umbrellas" ("safety nets," for any republicans still reading).

But republican insensitivity to poverty isn't the subject (of this article). Some of my best friends know republicans. No, the point is, if you let the federal government manage your money, you're a fool. And you do, so you are (of course, so is he). For instance, you probably thought that at least $9 billion in federal housing funds would finance affordable housing for the poor, when in fact it was given to several friends of Samuel Pierce (who apparently thought he was the cabinet minister of housing, and didn't see the need to spend $9 billion on cabinets). Oh well, as President Bush actually said on national TV, "The poor never had it easy in the world." Then you probably didn't expect uninsured savings and loans to lose $150 billion in a poker game, and as a result may have been surprised when the government announced it would cover the debts.

You may have believed that with our nuclear capability of devastating life on earth several times over, that we didn't need a new line of bombers — bombers with "stealth technology" — which can evade enemy radar, but are easily detected by news correspondents (Moscow has already stationed 10 million photojournalists along its borders). Each of these costs $600 million. It seems like strategically-mailed Hefty garbage bags filled with toxic waste would be more economical.

At this point you're probably wondering, among other things, "Well, what with all the rampant waste, fraud, corruption and incompetence in government running hopelessly out of control, why hasn't Congress voted itself a pay raise?"

The answer is, they're working on it. Yes, Congress — the only people you know who take off Columbus Day, Veterans Day, Arbor Day and the month of August. ... The people who write off their trip to Bermuda as a "fact-finding mission." The people who, every few years and with a straight face, routinely accuse their worthy opponents of everything from burning flags in the '60s to having extra-marital affairs with sheep.

Have they been tested for drugs? Do they REALLY think we want to legislate their own large pay raises? We're talking about people like "Idaho's Senator" Steve Symms, whose major accomplishment this term was spearheading a drive to change Idaho's official name to "the gun-rack state." This is a man who will use up all his postage-paid privileges (try saying this real fast over and over without getting upset) to defend your constitutional right to manufacture elk and deer confetti with American-made assault rifles, but would just as soon grudgingly accept large campaign contributions from timber lobbyists before he would vote to increase the minimum wage. I'll quote you one of his latest gems, and you tell me if he's earned a pay raise: "Coins are productive investments because we produce a lot of silver and gold in Idaho and it takes a lot of production to produce it."

I don't know. Maybe I'm too hard on him. Maybe his old English teacher (who's lucky enough to make one-fourth Symms' salary) told him to use "production" four times in a sentence.

But the argument we get is that pay raises will attract people from the public sector. You know, flag-waving patriots who would love to enter public service, but not for a paltry $90,000.

Yeah, like we're supposed to believe that guys like Symms want a raise so they can be voted out of office by private sector scum who want to lay low 'til the insider trading thing blows over?

Teachers have to claw and scratch and go on strike to get a two percent raise. All Congress has to do is pass a bill. Why not base raises on performance, if it's such a good idea for teachers? Sure, professional athletes are overpaid, too, but a lot more people watch Monday Night Football than C-Span. Let's face it — a pay raise for Congress is an easy target. It's like beating a dead dog. And that's just it — would you vote for a dead dog? How 'bout a fat cat?

Internationals defeat Ducks; Soccer Club ties

By RUSS BIAGGNE
Sports Editor

Tough defensive play preserved a 1-0 victory for the University of Idaho International Soccer Team over the University of Oregon Saturday.

Walla Walla's Mike Rodriguez scored the winning goal of the match off an assist from Yaghoub Ebrahimi midway through the first half as center midfielder Allal Samih helped keep pressure on the Ducks' offense throughout the game. A strong performance by sweeper Ahmed Fahsi helped goalkeeper Reza Oskui tally the shutout.

The Internationals improved their record to 4-3-1 on the season. For their next home match the Internationals expect to face Whitman College from Walla Walla, Wash.

In the mid-afternoon sequel, the UI Soccer Club held on to tie Oregon 1-1 on an unassisted goal by co-captain Zach Yunker about midway through the first half. Oregon came back late in the half to deadlock the game on a shot by Oregon co-captain Sam Maccaronne, who was assisted by Andy Zelewski.

Oregon threatened in the last 10 minutes of the game with a penalty kick, often considered a sure shot, but goalkeeper Justin Seaman saved the day with a diving grab.

Outstanding defensive play came from sweeper Bobby LaCroix and defensive back Kim Bailey.

Ron McFarland, faculty adviser for the UI Soccer Club and full-back for the Internationals, said both teams were able to frustrate a very strong Oregon team with outstanding performances.

Vandals hang on to defeat Eagles 41-34

By RUSS BIAGGNE
& DAYNA WILLIAMS

The Vandal football team again played a game of halves and was again victorious ... luckily.

"Once again we didn't keep up our intensity," Head Coach John L. Smith said. "The guys were thinking about the upcoming game against the University of Nevada-Reno this weekend instead of concentrating on this one."

While the Vandals were thinking ahead, Eastern Washington University players had one thing on their minds: a win.

The game began when the Vandals received the ball and started the opening drive on their own 22-yard line. Running back Damon Daniels received the first call and plowed ahead for three yards. On the second play, quarterback John Friesz was sacked and fumbled the ball, which the Eagle defense retrieved. Five plays later, Eagle quarterback Mark Tenneson completed a one-yard touchdown pass to put the Eagles up 6-0. The extra point was good, and suddenly EWU was up 7-0 with 12:48 remaining in the first quarter.

Now it was Friesz's turn. The Vandals racked up 21 unanswered points in the next three drives to end the first quarter leading 21-7. These drives included an 82-yard scoring drive, capped off with a three-yard touchdown pass from Friesz to receiver David Jackson and an 82-yard touchdown pass from Friesz to receiver Lee Allen.

But the Eagles were not ready to give up. Within five minutes of the second quarter, the Eagle offense put 14 points on the board and tied the score at 21.

This didn't seem to intimidate the Vandal offense, which scored 14 unanswered points in the final 10 minutes of the first half to give the Vandals a 35-21 lead at halftime.

Just as it seemed that the Vandal defense was nowhere to be found in the first half, the same held true for UI's offense in the second half. After flexing its muscle in the first two quarters of the game, the offense, held to just six points in the second half, seemed to disappear.

While the offense was else-

OUTDOOR BY MATT WALO OUTLOOK

It seems that every elk season, or any season for that matter, many hunters do not take proper care of their game. Just recently I saw two mature bull elk piled on top of each other in the back of a pickup parked in direct sunlight.

The hunters who shot these animals have a responsibility to skin and hang them as soon as possible after they are down.

Proper meat care begins immediately after the trophy is found. In the case of an elk or a deer, gut it and split the chest all the way to the base of the neck. Remove the windpipe and prop the cavity open with sticks to allow air to circulate and cool the meat. The exposed cavity can be covered with a game bag to prevent flies from laying eggs in the meat.

I carry four large elk bags for each quarter and one for the neck, back, and heart and liver. As you remove each quarter, place it in a bag and hang it in the shade of a tree for faster cooling.

Some hunters, including myself, believe you should remove the hide which traps a large amount of body heat. Others argue that it exposes the meat to flies and dirt. But if the quarters are in the bags, the flies can't get to the meat, and dirt should be kept to a minimum. If the temperature outside is hot and the nearest meat locker is hours away, boning the meat may be necessary. This releases trapped heat from around the bone and keeps the meat from spoiling.

Regarding the two elk I mentioned earlier, those hunters made the mistake of not removing the hide, not allowing proper air circulation by piling them on top of each other, and leaving them in the sun instead of getting them to a locker as soon as possible.

This advice applies not only to big game animals, but to small game animals and game birds as well. Proper field care makes the difference between an enjoyable eating experience and having to choke down another elk steak dinner.

BSU, ISU hand losses to UI Lady Vandals fall to 4-6 in Big Sky

By AMY WILLIAMS
Staff Writer

The Lady Vandals ended their six-game winning streak at home by losing to Idaho State University and Boise State University over the weekend.

The University of Idaho, 4-6 in the Big Sky Conference, lost to ISU in four games, 13-15, 15-11, 15-12, and 15-6.

"We gave them too many chances to score too many points," Head Coach Tom Hilbert said. "We played consistently, but we just broke down, which was the key to the match."

ISU players combined for a

.339 hitting average that included 22 kills from Kristy Chatterley and 18 kills from Debbie Masak.

"We gave them too many chances to score too many points."

— Tom Hilbert
UI Volleyball Coach

Susan Opitz and Lori Heeter had 16 and 11 kills respectively.

UI stayed in the match with Debbie Thayer's 22 kills and Stacey Asplund's hitting percentage of .458, including 12 kills, seven digs, four blocks and one serving ace.

The Lady Vandals looked to bounce back into the win column Saturday when they hosted the Boise State Broncos.

"I'm pleased with the hard-fought match," Hilbert said. "We should've played the middle earlier. We didn't execute our game plan enough."

The Lady Vandals stayed with the Broncos' fast pace, but with their defensive effort, the Broncos were able to defeat the Vandals 15-9, 15-12 and 15-13.

BSU Invitational gets best of women runners

By AMY JAMISON
Staff Writer

According to University of Idaho women's cross country Head Coach Scott Lorek, this weekend's meet at the Boise State Invitational wasn't much to talk about. Neither was the weather.

"It rained and it was muddy," Lorek said.

The UI runners placed fourth with 96 points behind first place Weber State College with 35 points, second place Boise State University with 49 points, and third place Montana State University with 50 points.

"It was not a good showing for us teamwise," Lorek said.

Lorek noted the performance of Diane Knudson, however.

"We were up against some good teams," Lorek said.

"Diane did a real good job." Knudson placed sixth overall with an 18:30 time.

The Lady Vandal runners hope to improve this weekend when they travel to Spokane, Wash., to participate in the Wandermere Invitational.

where, the Vandal defense decided to wake up and win the game.

"In the first half, the offense played very well, while the defense was dead," Smith said. "This switched in the second half with the defense playing much better and winning the game."

The Eagle offense was held to a mere six points despite two fumbles lost by the Vandals, which gave the Eagles good field position each time.

It became obvious near the end of the game that whoever had the ball would win. This was evident when 1:24 was left and the Vandals were up 41-34. All UI had to do was waste time. But on the first play, Daniels ran up the middle and fumbled, which gave the ball back to the Eagles.

Fortunately, the defense held tough and wouldn't give the Eagles a chance to score.

The Vandals had the ball with 0:17 remaining, and this time Friesz decided to down the ball to preserve the 41-34 edge and claim a victory over the Eagles.

"This game was like the Superbowl to them. If they would of won, it would of made their whole season."

Despite the poor showing by the Vandals, Smith gives credit to the Eagles.

"They are a good enough team that if you let them, they stand a good chance of beating you," Smith said. "This game was like the Superbowl to them. If they would have won, it would have made their whole season."

Although the offense struggled in the first half, Friesz was able to surpass former UI quarterback Ken Hobart's all-time leading Vandal yardage record. Friesz, who needed just 138 yards in the game to surpass the record, was 13 for 16 with 334 yards, three touchdowns and one interception in the game. He is ranked 13th among all-time quarterbacks with 9,563 yards.

The Vandals will now prepare for their homecoming game with Nevada-Reno Saturday. The game will be held at 1 p.m.

BSU, 10-2 in the conference, was led by Tina Harris, whose nine kills, four digs and three blocks added to her hitting percentage of .666. Teammate Kelly Baker contributed seven kills, three assists, nine digs, four blocks and a hitting percentage of .385.

Coach Hilbert gives credit to BSU's team balance.

"We shut Sandy Stewart down, but the other team members stayed in the game and executed," Hilbert said. "They're a mature team that played well."

Coach Hilbert and the Lady Vandals are up and ready to continue in the Big Sky Conference.

"Mathematically, we're still in it," Hilbert said. "We must win the rest of the conference matches."

The Lady Vandals will take a break in conference action tonight as they host Gonzaga University at 7:30 p.m. in Memorial Gym.

Babylon A.D. offers new mix of old tradition

Just when I thought every rock band writing music would turn out to be another Bon Jovi look-alike with a repetitious "baby, baby," I stumbled upon a new group called Babylon A.D.

Granted, these boys wear black leather pants and have long, ragged hair, but their music tells a different story. Each song tells a tale of today's society: a fatal attraction, drugs, or a young girl trying to become famous by dancing naked in a bar.

Babylon A.D. was influenced by several traditional groups, including Kiss, Scorpions and Aerosmith. But Babylon A.D. does not sound directly like any of these classic bands. They have concentrated on forming their own distinctive sound and becoming a healthy role model to new-found fans.

All the members grew up together in the suburbs of Oakland's East Bay area. Derek is in charge of lead vocals and acoustic guitar, Danny DeLaRosa plays guitar, Ron Freschi plays guitar and adds vocals, Jamey Pacheco plays drums, and Robb Reid helps out with bass guitar and more vocals.

The album turns out to be a slice of rock pleasure. Babylon A.D. concentrates on a pulsing beat, the kind of rock 'n' roll you want to hear playing about midnight at your favorite bar, just hard enough for head banging, but with a distinctive beat for dancing.

The album starts out slow with "Bang Go the Bells" and warms up from there. "Desperate," which tells the story of the endless numbers of lonely lovers, shows Babylon A.D.'s talents in producing a ballad. "Caught Up in the Crossfire," complete with the steamy breath at the beginning, is the '10' of the album.

This band seems to be the perfect new mix of the old favorites and is definitely worth listening to. So save your milk money. Babylon A.D.'s self-titled album will be out soon.

By STEPHANIE BAILEY
Entertainment Editor

Beginning tonight and continuing through homecoming weekend, music will be provided nightly by the Lionel Hampton School of Music.

The festivities begin tonight at 8 p.m. when the Auditorium Chamber Music Series presents the Lark Quartet at the University Auditorium. The all-women group will play a variety of music.

Members of the quartet include Anna Kruger on the viola, Eva Gruesser and Robin Mayforth on violins, and Astrid Schween on the cello. Tickets, which are available at Ticket Express in the SUB, are $8 for the general public, $6 for seniors, and $5 for students.

The University Chorus will present a student recital Wednesday at 8 p.m. in the Lionel Hampton School of Music recital hall. The concert is free to the public.

A joint concert featuring the University of Idaho Wind Ensemble and Orchestra will be presented Thursday at 8 p.m. at the University Auditorium. This will be their first concert of the year. The orchestra, conducted by UI music Professor Robert Billups, will perform Beethoven's Symphony No. 7 in A Major. The wind ensemble, conducted by music Professor Robert Spevacek, will play a variety of classical and modern pieces.

A homecoming concert will feature the University Symphony Orchestra, the Vandaleers Concert Choir, Jazz Ensemble No. 1 and the Vandal Marching Band. The concert will be held Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. and Sunday at 3 p.m. Admission is free to the public.

The Third Annual Octubafest will be held Sunday at 8 p.m. at the recital hall. Outstanding soloists and ensembles will be performing. Admission is free.

LETTERS from page 4

advertising an upcoming humanist meeting. In the next sentence, however, he admits to "assuming" it was a Christian. Let's be reasonable, Mr. Smith. If you don't know who took down your posters, how can you make accusations? Whatever happened to the concept of innocent until proven guilty? Or perhaps you were just lacking adequate reason to lash out at Christianity. Your letter lacks logic, and is filled with loaded language. Your emotional approach against those "brainwashed" Christians may be good for the papers, but "where's the beef?" Nowhere in your letter did you present any evidence, personal experience, or corroborating opinion to back up what you wrote, "... hatred is usually the byproduct of fear, and fear the result of ignorance ..." Do you expect people to buy into your misunderstanding and unfounded hatred of Christianity? Why don't you find out what Christianity is all about, and you'll find that you have nothing to fear, and nothing to hate.

Cutting corners cross-country

Editor:

I recently attended a cross country meet at the UI golf course. It was a four- or five-team meet with the women running before the men. The UI teams performed fairly well.

What compels me to write a letter is this. I could not help but notice that various members of the men's team cut some corners of the course. I was certainly surprised to see them do this. I was even more surprised to see the UI men's track Head Coach Mike Keller watching as one of his runners cut a corner. Somehow my good judgment told me that that was unethical. The worst part was that Coach Keller said nothing to those individuals who cut those corners. I do not know if he said something later to his runners, but it sure seems to me that he encourages that type of behavior from his team. Coach Keller, if you are reading this, your runners are supposed to take the LONGER distance around the flags!
