

Profs explain effects of open door in Berlin Wall

By SHERRY DEAL
News Editor

The opening of the gate in the Berlin Wall, which has stood as a barrier between East and West Germany for more than 25 years, will probably lead to the removal of United States troops from West Germany, according to a University of Idaho professor.

Richard Spence, assistant professor of history, said the troops' presence in the country no longer serves a purpose.

"There is already a widespread feeling of willingness and even eagerness among the military to see the army come home," he said.

Spence said about $50 billion of the $300 billion spent each year for defense is used to keep approximately 250,000 soldiers in West Germany.

According to Spence, the unemployment rate in West Germany is approaching nine percent. Katherine Grinde, assistant professor of landscape architecture, who has friends in East and West Germany, said she thinks the influx of people from East to West Germany will place some additional strain on the West German economy, but said it may not be as bad as many people think.

She said many of the people who left East Germany last week are already heading back to their homes and their jobs.

Grinde said she thinks the best thing about the removal of the wall is that she can now visit and communicate freely with her friends in both East and West Germany. She said when a friend from East Germany visited her last year, she had to go through a lot of red tape to get her here.

"It's nice to know that won't happen anymore," Grinde said.

Spence said the removal of the wall has also made the reunification of East and West Germany a possibility. The reunification was thought to be impossible a month ago.

However, even though reunification is now within reach, Spence said if it does happen, it will probably still take some time.

Grinde agrees.

"There are deep philosophical differences between the people as well as the two governments," she said.

Spence also said many differences, aside from political ones, exist between East and West Germany. For example, West Germany only recognizes one German citizenship, while East Germany only recognizes East Germans as citizens of their country. If East Germans enter West Germany, they are instantly recognized as citizens rather than refugees.

"Their whole social organization is different," he said.

Moscow residents march for choice on abortion

By BETH BARCLAY
Staff Writer

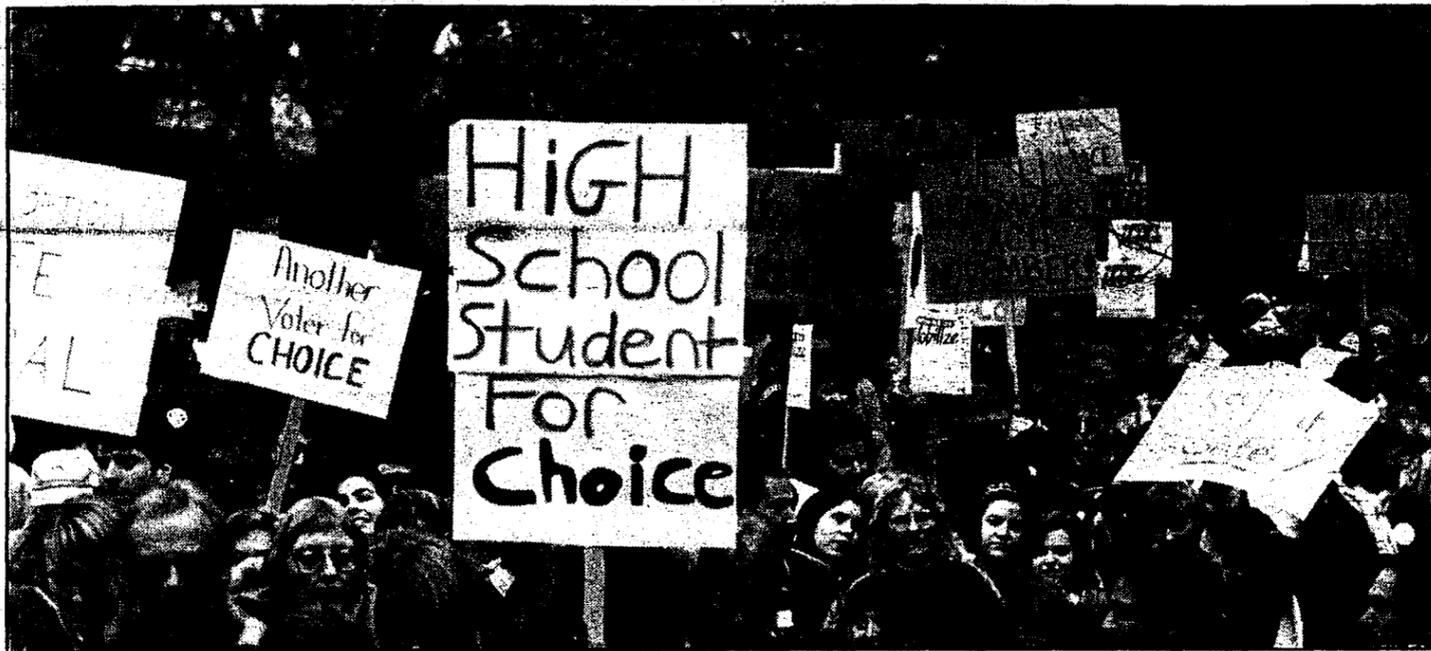

Hundreds of Moscow residents rallied last Sunday in support of the Supreme Court decision made in Roe vs. Wade 17 years ago.

The march and rally were part of a nationwide demonstration protesting the U.S. Supreme Court decision last summer that allows states to tighten restrictions upon abortion.

"Our bodies, our lives, our right to decide!" was what many marchers yelled on the walk from East City Park to Friendship Square in downtown Moscow.

The spirit of the marchers did not seem to be dampened by the slight drizzle, as cheers directed towards state legislators were yelled and picket signs waved in favor of the issue that some see as more "pro-life" than most anti-abortionists would like to believe.

As explained by the Reverend Mike Burr of the United Church of Moscow, who spoke to the group in PRO-CHOICE. Hundreds of students, faculty and community members rallied in support of individual choice on the abortion issue when they marched from East City Park to Friendship Square under rainy conditions Sunday afternoon. (JASON MUNROE PHOTO)

Friendship Square, the term "pro-life" can have more than one meaning.

"I'm pro-life in a really broad way that won't be defined by the single issue of abortion... It's because I'm pro-life that I'm pro-choice," he said.

The Moscow rally was sponsored by the Moscow/Latah County Coalition for Pro-Choice, which includes members from the American Association of University Women, Planned Parenthood, the National Organization for Women and the American Civil Liberties Union.

Other speakers at the rally included Marie Vogel, mayor of Troy, and a woman who identified herself as Mary Jane who told about her traumatic experience as a 17-year-old when she had an illegal abortion. She asked the people at the rally to make sure that illegal abortions do not become women's only choice once again.

State legislature proposes implementing chancellor system

By M.L. GARLAND
Editor

NAMPA — An Idaho Senate education leader supports legislation placing Idaho's higher education institutions under a chancellor system.

"We don't have any central governance of the education system," said Senate Education Committee Chairman J.L. "Jerry" Thorne, R-Nampa. "We need someone overhead — a decision-maker on who is the engineering school, the health school and the business school."

According to Thorne, Rep. Janet Hay, R-Nampa, House

Education Committee chairwoman, has drawn up a bill proposing the chancellor system. Hay is out of the country and is unavailable for comment.

The Idaho State Board of Education would hire a chancellor to serve as a central figure that the administrations from the University of Idaho, Lewis-Clark State College, Boise State University and Idaho State University would answer to. In the past, similar bills have never been released from the legislative education committees.

According to Rep. Eugene "Gino" White, D-Cataldo, the chancellor system would create a "super president" over the colleges and universities.

"I can't see changing," White said.

Each university and college currently operates under its own president and administration. The eight-member State Board oversees all the higher education systems.

The State Board hires an executive director, currently Rayburn Barton, to supervise the board. White said Barton's position, for practicality purposes, is similar to the chancellor position.

"Executive director (State Board of Education) goes toward chancellor but falls way short,"

Thorne said. "There's no real executive position."

However, UI Faculty Council Chairman Michael DiNoto, when presented with the possible legislation, questioned its effectiveness and the high cost of a chancellor.

DiNoto reminisced about Barton's "Pseudo-Chancellor Flow Chart," which prompted candidates to threaten to drop out of last year's UI presidential search.

According to Thorne, the chancellor would be paid more than UI President Zinser's $115,000 annual salary. The money would be appropriated in the higher education budget.

Both Thorne and DiNoto proposed a splitting of the board, one to deal with the public kindergarten through 12th grade levels, and the other with higher education.

"I'd like to see a split there," DiNoto said. "They are clearly serving different constituents."

He said that this system would be cheaper than the chancellor. White would like to see separate boards of regents for each institution.

"I think the universities deserve an individual board of regents to fight for them rather

RHA agrees to split snow fight bill

BETH PETTIBON
Staff Writer

The Residence Hall Association accepted an agreement last night that would divide any costs incurred during the annual campus snow fight equally between the halls and the Greek houses.

The agreement, which will be presented to Greek presidents tonight, says that each residence hall and Greek house will divide the total cost in half and bill each living group according to how many people live there.

"The fairest way to do it is if everybody pays," said RHA president Ray Horton at Monday night's RHA Leadership Retreat. "Each hall will pick up the tab."

In the event that there is some damage caused due to the snowball fight, Horton said each living group will be sent a bill. They will try to set up a special fund in this case for checks to be written.

The agreement also involves the idea of a telephone network. The committee will contact a list of hall presidents to distribute information regarding where and when the fight will take place. They can't use posters or any sort of print due to the liability involved if someone gets injured.

"I'm really for this because it's a compromise," said Kristi Rucker, president of McCoy Hall and a member of the snowfight committee. "It's just that we're all taking the responsibility from it, those Greeks and GDI's that didn't get involved."

There was some concern that the women shouldn't have to pay since it was mainly fought by men, but Horton said there is no possible way to get out there and count who's there.

"I think this year we're actually encouraging girls to participate," said Doug Korn, Interfraternity Council president. "It's going to be fun."

Bruce Pitman, dean of student services, told the group the administration was meeting this week to discuss what they will be doing to work with the agreement. Pitman said he plans on informing the police.

"We'll basically work in concert with what you came up with," Pitman said. "I appreciate every hour you have spent agonizing over this issue. I'm delighted that it's leading to a dialogue between the Greeks and the RHA."

Pitman hopes this will lead to better relations between the two in the future and sees positive things happening because of it.

Korn agreed the communication gap between the two has lessened and said he has had daily contact with RHA president Horton since this issue started.

"This is the most communication I've seen between the Greeks and the residence halls since I've been here," said Korn. "It came about in a brutal type of way but it has developed a comradery."

Korn is hoping the Greek presidents will approve the agreement tonight, and asked for several RHA representatives to attend in order to encourage its approval.

"Hopefully everyone will sign with an open mind," said Korn. "It's going to make the Greeks look stubborn if they refuse to sign an agreement after half the campus agreed."

KUOI to broadcast pre-recorded Candidates' Forum

Last Thursday's ASUI Candidates' Forum will be broadcast tonight at 7 p.m. on KUOI 89.3 FM.

Debate moderator Bill Broadhead said he hopes students who could not attend the debate will take advantage of this opportunity to hear the candidates' stands on the issues before voting Wednesday.

"It was a pretty good exchange," Broadhead said. "It might really help an undecided person make up their mind."

The tape-delay broadcast is a slightly edited version of the three-hour debate that covered questions dealing with the use of student fees, budget management, credit requirements for ASUI officers, condom machines, lobbying and the proposed minimum wage increase.

Broadhead said there were some good questions asked by members of the audience.

"I think it was an educational experience even for the candidates," he said.

Thirteen of the 16 candidates for the six available ASUI Senate seats participated in the debate.

Nicotine gum may help stop smoking

By ED WIMER, R.Ph.
Guest Columnist

Quitting smoking. That seems to be a tough proposition. Many people try to quit smoking and fail. Why is this? Well, in the first place, nicotine is addicting (from the Latin "addictus," meaning "given over"). That's right, your body is given over to it, craves it, wants more and lets you know that it wants more. There's also the habit component of smoking, the actual instances that you find yourself smoking.

In addition to that, for some odd reason, it's still socially acceptable to smoke. There have been efforts to curtail that, but for the most part you can still light up, except in some buildings. And if that weren't enough reason to keep smoking, there's the tobacco industry itself. It's subsidized by the government (that's us) and has an advertising budget that I'm sure could support many small countries quite nicely.

Oh yes, and the advertising is so seductive. Why, you can have the best-looking women, enjoy the ultimate in life, be the most macho man on earth, and all you have to do is smoke. Unfortunately, they forget to mention the emphysema, the shortness of breath, the higher cholesterol levels, the increased incidence of heart disease and lung cancer, the dent in the pocket-book, and on and on. Of course, the advertising is supposed to sell cigarettes, and so it does.

There have been countless methods devised for quitting smoking, and all of them will work for some people: hypnosis, acupuncture, diet changes, timing devices that slowly increase the time between your next smoke, products that make your mouth taste terrible if you smoke, and even drugs.

That's where I come into the picture. As a pharmacist, I supply the nicotine gum (trade name Nicorette) that replaces nicotine in cigarettes with nicotine in a chewable form. This doesn't seem like much of a solution, but the results have been fairly good.

Smoking presents a two-fold problem. You not only have to deal with the addiction problem, but you also have to break the habits associated with smoking: putting the cigarette in your mouth and lighting up, smoking at certain times (like after eating) or in certain social situations, when you're bored, etc. Chewing Nicorette provides your body with nicotine while you work at breaking the habits. Then, in time, you increase the interval between pieces of gum and slowly break the addiction. The entire process usually takes about six months.

The most crucial aspect of quitting smoking comes from within, however. That is, you have to have the desire to quit smoking. Not unlike the desire you had when you started smoking, just channeled into a healthier way of living. Remember, though, there's no magical cure. Keep in mind that you have to want to quit in order to quit.

If we can help you stop smoking, see us at the Student Health Center.

Thorne said that he does not anticipate opposition from the public, and that the higher education presidents should cooperate. He said he feels it would be an opportunity for them to be more objective and effective.

"I think it should be done by the Legislature. If we don't do something, it may be a referendum from people," Thorne said. "It's the Legislature's responsibility."

However, Spence said if the East and West did reunify, they could possibly be the strongest economic force in the world, and would compete with, and possibly dominate, the United States and Japan.

Regardless of whether reunification takes place, Spence said he thinks the United States' role in Germany is over.

"We're outsiders looking in now," he said.

Guide helps voters but condom query remains

Condom machines, student fees, lobbyist positions, budget deficits and credit loads.

Pretty boring stuff (well, except for perhaps the condom machines), but they are issues in Wednesday's ASUI election.

There are also some pretty boring opinions. As Kara Garten reported in Friday's Argonaut, "the candidates debated for nearly three hours, and most of the time they agreed with each other."

Despite the apparent lack of diversity, there is one presidential candidate worth voting for.

But it won't be revealed here.

The Argonaut editorial staff voted Monday afternoon against endorsing any ASUI candidates on the editorial page. Some members of the staff were adamant in this decision. Others were indifferent. One was downright rebellious and threw a minor tantrum while rambling on about the virtues of condom machines.

Yet, democracy had its day and the majority decision was that members of the editorial staff would not endorse an ASUI candidacy in this issue of the Argonaut.

Damn!

So without the sagacious guidance of the editorial staff, the students of the University of Idaho will have to make voting decisions on their own.

Well, almost.

Inside this issue the reader will find a handsome, extremely informative insert called the Voters' Guide. The Voters' Guide contains the meat of all the issues and views that this election hinges upon (condom machines). It also provides the locations of the 12 voting locations on campus (hint: use the one closest to you).

So, disregarding the fact that the editorial staff won't announce the only viable presidential candidate, the Voters' Guide provides virtually all the information you need to make that correct decision. Simply read the guide, ruminant (think it over) and vote!

It's the next best thing to shaking the candidates' hands! (Official Voters' Guide slogan!)

Of course, despite this wonderful guide, one editor will continue to fret, fume and ramble about condom machines.

Incidentally, in last week's debate, all the senatorial candidates agreed to support living groups that want condom machines. However, many cautioned that they don't "advocate irresponsible sex." A Dweezil cartoon once featured a character who tried to purchase some M & M's out of a vending machine, but a package of condoms came out instead. ... Which brings to mind an interesting idea. Why not package M & M's inside the condoms. ... Of course, the lubricated condoms would pose a bit of a problem. ...

— Matt Helmick

• LETTERS TO THE EDITOR •

Forman threatens Argonaut

Editor:

I just want the students of the University of Idaho to know that ASUI senatorial candidates John Goettsche and Patty McCray (whose pictures were in Friday's Argonaut) are incumbents.

If the students want to elect efficient senators, maybe the Argonaut should pay more attention to the opponents as opposed to the current incumbents.

There are many candidates who feel that the Argonaut has received too much funding in comparison to other social clubs which benefit many off-campus students.

Perhaps not all of the incumbents will get re-elected. If that happens, just remember the phrase, "Don't bite the hand that feeds you."

—Matt Forman
ASUI Senate Candidate

responsibly to contemporary student issues as they arise. Adams has that unique ability. For instance, on Nov. 8, the administration issued a notice that there would be NO housing available for students over semester break. Many international students and others in various living groups with limited funds will be stranded here in the middle of the winter. On Nov. 9, Paul, a resident of McConnell Hall, took the initiative. Legal Aid has taken his case and is currently negotiating with the administration. He is also organizing a meeting of concerned students to take action on this issue.

The ASUI needs new leadership, a new agenda and a new direction. Candidate Paul Adams is the person who can provide that leadership ability.

Stagnating senate needs Doug Korn

Editor:

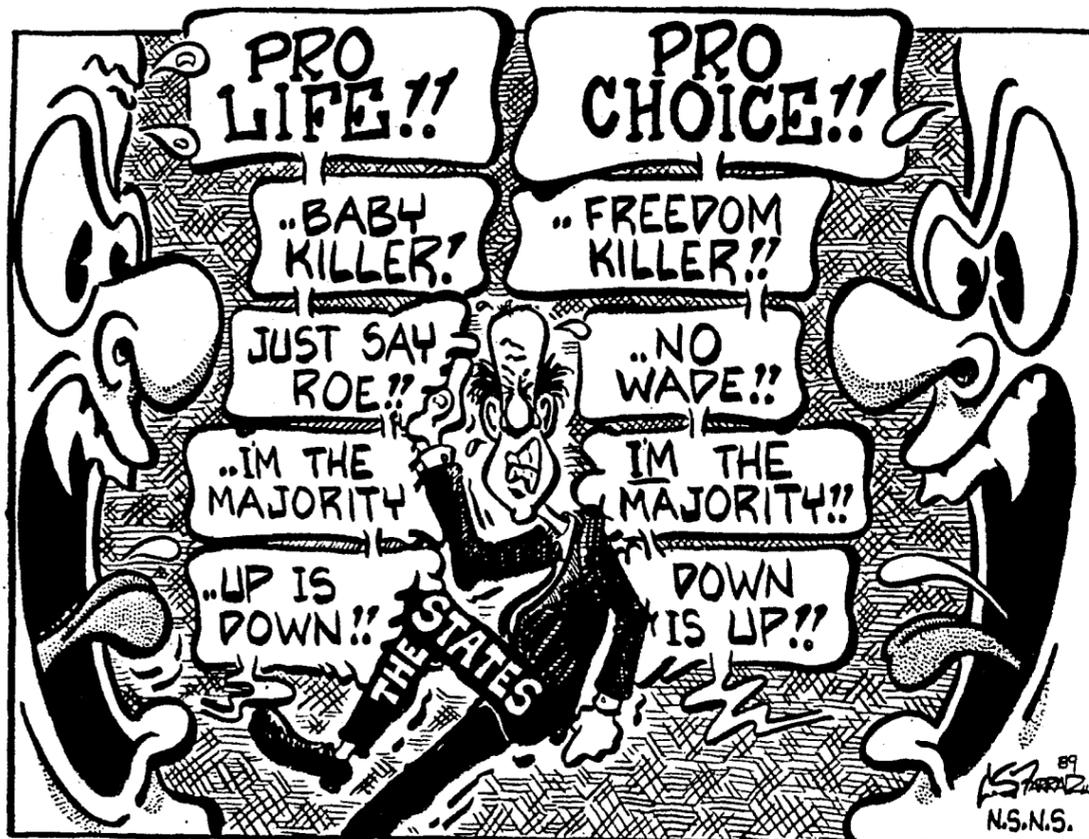

With the onset of yet another ASUI election, it is encouraging to see one candidate who stands head and shoulders above the rest. Doug Korn, who is currently president of Interfraternity Council, has shown thorough involvement in various campus clubs and organizations, holding several key offices.

During my opportunity to work with Doug, he has displayed a level of professionalism and responsibility that is exhibited in everything he does. He shows an unbiased attitude toward the issues concerning students, but is not afraid to voice his opinion.

Doug's philosophy that an ASUI senator is a voice for the students instead of an opportunity to air his personal opinions is an important characteristic. This will permit him to represent the widest range of students instead of becoming one-sided, Greek or dorm.

His diligent work for the minimum credit requirement of ASUI leaders shows his sincere desire

Injury results from slush for brains

It always starts out in innocence.

It always ends with someone at Gritman Memorial Hospital.

It always starts out in good, clean fun.

It always ends with repairmen cleaning up shards of window glass.

Late last week, nearly a dozen representatives from the University of Idaho residence halls and Greek system sat down to discuss the annual snowball fight. But the ad-hoc committee, led by Interfraternity Council President Doug Korn and Residence Hall Association President Ray Horton, didn't come to solve any problems; they came to "assign" financial responsibility.

In fact, the representatives might believe their constituents are too "young and immature" to eliminate the annual snowball fight between the fraternities and the dorms. And so they quickly disregarded any notion of eliminating the event.

What a shame that our living group leaders have week-old slush for brains. They don't seem willing to address the responsibility and leadership this issue needs.

The annual snowball fight is an "accident" waiting to happen. In fact, dozens of students always garner black eyes and abrasions from the event. According to Bruce Pitman, dean of student services, the injuries are usually a result of fist fights or objects placed inside snowballs.

But according to Dr. Donald Chin, injuries are often more severe. Over the past two years, the UI Health Center has seen several students with eye injuries as a result of the snowball battle. Chin says lacerations to this area are dangerous because blood may enter the internal chamber of the eye. Ear injuries are also common, Chin said. Often, students who come in will have ruptured eardrums as a result of the snowball fight.

But personal injuries don't seem to be the main concern of the student leaders. Instead, they are worried about who is going to pay for damaged windows. Nearly $6,000 in damage was done to university buildings during last year's fight.

During the meeting, it was made clear that both the Greeks and the residence hall members should be held accountable for damage to buildings. In fact, the committee is toying with the idea that the total cost of the damage would be split among all living groups on a per-capita basis.

The problem with this idea is two-fold. First, even living groups who didn't participate in the event would be obligated to help pay for the damage. Second, this assigned responsibility would not hold individuals accountable for their actions. The

Adams: candidate for new direction

Editor:

The ASUI Senate needs new leadership to move away from partisan politics and take action on important student issues. Candidate Paul Adams has that ability. He is a magna cum laude graduate of Western Michigan University with outstanding academic credentials. He has years of experience as a political activist in civil rights and environmental issues. He also uniquely represents non-traditional students, graduate students, and the campus living groups.

Who could be more capable of providing leadership and strategy regarding the complex political and legal questions facing the ASUI than a law student with a B.S. degree in public law? As a person with experience in controversial issues and legal/political maneuvering, we could not have a better person to deal with the fee issue, funding and student rights.

We need a proven leader who can react quickly, effectively and to serve the students in a constructive manner. Furthermore, his successful record speaks for itself, which is unparalleled by the other candidates. Doug works well with others and understands the system, which will breathe new life into a stagnating senate.

If you, the students, want a real voice in the senate, vote for a student, not a politician. That student is Doug Korn.

White gives no endorsement

Editor:

It has been brought to my attention that Lynn Major has distributed a campaign poster stating that she was my administrative assistant while I was president of the Associated Students University of Idaho. This is true.

It has also been brought to my attention that some students may be mistaking such a fact as an endorsement of Lynn. Nothing could be further from the truth.

I wish to make it clear that Lynn has not sought my endorsement, and if she had, I would not have given it.

Gotch will work for the students

Editor:

I would like to urge students to support Mike Gotch for ASUI vice president.

Gotch has served the students for three years as an ASUI senator and has worked on many projects that have benefited students, including parking and accelerated classes. He has also lobbied the state Legislature and State Board of Education on the students' behalf.

As vice president, Mike Gotch will work to ensure that senators visit their living groups, and Gotch supports finding new methods to reach off-campus students. Gotch will work to protect student parking interests through the parking forum he is working on. Gotch will also work to unite our student government and work to restore the ASUI's credibility by working on positive student service projects.

Please join me in electing Mike Gotch ASUI vice president.

Krepel has good leadership qualities

Editor:

I am writing to give my personal endorsement for the candidacy of Lisa Krepel for ASUI president. Although I have only known Lisa for the past month or so, I feel that what I have learned about Lisa and her platform has warranted my overt support.

I have been impressed with her aggressive action in the formation of the ad hoc Committee for the Environment. I believe this is a badly needed entity here at the UI. I have also been impressed by her enthusiasm and support of the newly formed ad hoc Committee for Off-Campus and Non-Traditional Students. This committee will soon be an integral link between the ASUI and its largest constituency.

I consider Lisa to be intelligent, direct and professional. These are prime qualities that I look for in student body or any other political office holders.

I encourage all University of Idaho students to get informed on the issues and to go and put their opinions to work by voting in tomorrow's elections. Lisa Krepel is a good choice for a well-informed, hard-working leader of the student government.

Editor:

Having observed the activities of the ASUI during the past semester, I have noticed that many of the participants sorely lack the qualifications to serve in their capacity as student leaders. Since moving into Wallace Complex in August, Paul has continued his activity in the American Civil Liberties Union and Amnesty International. typical freshman might think, "Gee whiz, I can break that window in Gault Hall, and everyone will have to pay for it."

What a great way to encourage more vandalism.

Furthermore, the group discussed setting up a "phone tree" to alert everyone about the possibility of a fight and where it would be held. Now everyone can participate, do damage, and possibly get injured.

The traditional snowball fight is a riot out of control. The university has not been willing to put its foot down and stop this violent activity. And it would appear the student living group leaders are too gutless to try to stop it.

By "organizing" this event with "phone trees" and a "contractual agreement," the student leaders are condoning this activity. Instead of recognizing the snowball fight as a problem and trying to solve it creatively, their actions may begin to "legitimize" this purposeless event.

These committee members need to drain that melted snow out of their brains, and replace it with some gray matter.

Competition doesn't need to result in injury.

1989 ASUI General Election

Don't let others decide for you

Editor:

I know you've heard it before. I'm going to tell you again. If you don't vote, you can't bitch. That's the simple truth. Don't tell me it doesn't make a difference. It does.

The fall ASUI General Election is Wednesday. The political fate of a number of candidates and a variety of issues lies in your hands. First, there is a three-way presidential shootout that's way too close to call. Second, a tight vice-presidential race is on. Third, there are 16 people running for six senate seats.

But wait, there's more. Act now, and you get to decide if the ASUI should pursue litigation over last semester's $25 fee increase.

Unfortunately, students tend to let others make their decisions for them. If last year's student turnout statistics repeat, less than one in four of the people reading this letter will even bother to vote.

We've tried to make this whole thing pretty easy for you. You don't have to preregister. You don't have to be a citizen of the United States. You don't even need a note from your mother. You just go to one of the 12 polling places, show them your University of Idaho identification card, and vote.

But here's the important part: Voting without knowing the issues is like driving with your eyes closed. You have an excellent opportunity to make the informed decision. Read this issue of the Argonaut. Listen to the candidates' forum on KUOI tonight at 7 p.m. Hear them out and make an educated choice.

Some people say we're apathetic. Some say that our generation doesn't care. This is our chance to prove them wrong. Please vote.

—Bill Broadhead
Political Concerns Board Chairman

Referendum 1:

To litigate or not to litigate: the choice is yours

In addition to voting for ASUI officers in Wednesday's general election, students will have the opportunity to voice their opinion on whether or not to pursue a proposed lawsuit concerning the fee increase approved by the Idaho State Board of Education in the spring of 1989.

The increase of $25 per semester for resident students and $100 per semester for out-of-state, tuition-paying students will generate an estimated $625,000.

A University of Idaho "Fiscal Year 1989-90 Budget Problem" answered the question, "For what purposes would the fee increase revenue be used?"

It stated that "... additional revenue would, by law, be used to support the operation and maintenance of the physical plant. The re-allocation of the state general account from the physical plant would allow allocations to be made to other areas. ... These include faculty in the Colleges of Engineering and Business and Economics. ..."

A University of Idaho Supplemental Funds Plan dated May 12, 1989, lists $312,800 of the estimated $625,000 as being budgeted for faculty funding in the engineering and business departments.

The charter establishing the University of Idaho prohibits the charging of fees to pay faculty salaries.

Opponents of the lawsuit cite comparative costs and possible legislature retaliation as reasons not to pursue further action.

On Wednesday's ASUI general election ballot, students will be asked to check one of two boxes under Referendum No. 1.

The two possible choices are:

"I support taking legal action against the University of Idaho in order to contest the constitutionality of the $25 per semester fee increase approved in the spring of 1989."

"I do not support taking legal action against the University of Idaho in order to contest the constitutionality of the $25 per semester fee increase approved in the spring of 1989."

Those who do not support taking legal action against the university are asked to also check another box stating whether or not they support "further negotiation with the UI administration" regarding the fee increase.

PRESIDENT

VICE PRESIDENT

Regarding the relationship between the ASUI and the University of Idaho administration, ASUI presidential candidate Lisa Krepel says she believes in cooperating when possible, acting professionally, but always pursuing student interests first.

"We're obviously serving different interests, and if we can cooperate, that's great," Krepel said. "If not, we can agree to disagree, and work in a professional manner. If you can't come to agreement through negotiation, then you have to go your separate ways."

Krepel, a current ASUI senator, is 22 years old and lives off campus. She is a junior history major and plans to take 12 credits next semester. She currently works part time but said she plans to drop that job if elected.

Krepel expressed the same hopes of professional cooperation from the ASUI's relationships with UI President Zinser, the Idaho Legislature and the State Board of Education.

"I understand that students don't want those (relationships) to be combative, but it's still very important that we have someone who's protecting student interests first," Krepel said. "Compromise is always good when it serves our best interest, but compromise for the sake of compromise is not what I would be after."

As for pursuing litigation against UI over last spring's $25 fee increase, Krepel said that issue would be up to the students.

"If students feel that is a worthwhile thing to pursue, then I would pursue it," Krepel said.

Krepel's budgeting experience includes two years of service on the Communications Board and one year as chairwoman, during which she budgeted $400,000 of ASUI funds.

She described her experience as covering all areas of budgeting, including personnel, depreciation, equipment outlays, operating expenses, and the formulation and actual administration of the budget.

Krepel listed the following as her contributions to the ASUI: her work with student body presidents statewide toward the formation of the Idaho Student Lobby, which will represent students at the Idaho State Legislature; her work toward creating an ASUI Off-Campus Housing Commission; the establishment of the ASUI Newsletter for off-campus students; and the formation of the Environmental Ad-Hoc Committee.

LISA KREPEL

According to ASUI presidential candidate Lynn Major, the relationship between the ASUI and the University of Idaho administration should be one of cooperation, communication, openness and honesty.

"We've gotten to a point where the ASUI works separate from the administration instead of working with them, and so when we do come together all we do is butt heads," Major said. "I think we need to get back to 'Let's work together on this.'"

She said differences of opinion are bound to occur since each will make decisions that the other will disagree with.

"But for every time that each of us disagrees, there will be many times that we agree," Major said.

Major, current ASUI vice president, is 33 years old and lives in UI Family Housing. She is a senior in communications, and plans to take 15 credits next semester. If elected, she said her only other commitment would be to the Moscow Mardi Gras.

When asked if students should pursue litigation against UI for last spring's $25 fee increase, Major said "absolutely not."

Major said that if student fees are being misappropriated and it is known that they are, the student body is not the proper authority to bring the charges against the university.

"I don't say I'm opposed to a lawsuit; I'm opposed to a lawsuit filed by the students," Major said. "The state has an obligation to its citizens to make sure that what is right is being done."

Major called her budgeting experience extensive. She was a corporate banker in commercial lending for four years, a corporate account manager for MCI Telecommunications for one year, and held accounts such as Hertz, American Express and United Airlines.

She has been through the ASUI budgeting process four times: twice as a senator, once as vice president, and once as an assistant to former ASUI President Gino White.

Major said her "shining glory" is the work she did from 1985 until the spring of 1988, which resulted in the formation of two math courses designed for liberal arts majors, Math 101 and Statistics 151.

Major said she is also proud of her role in the recent issue of minimum credit hours required for ASUI leaders and Argonaut editors.

LYNN MAJOR

Although David Pena is running for president, it is a job that he has held before — at Adams State College in Colorado.

As a business administration undergraduate at Adams State, Pena ran as a write-in candidate and won the election there.

Now as a second year law student at the University of Idaho, Pena said he still feels the same "duty to work for positive social change" as he did at Adams State and his performance in the president's office will have the same thrust here as it did at his alma mater.

That thrust, Pena said, "is improving student life for the student today."

In order to improve student life, Pena cited parking, lighting and the Marriott issue as some of the main concerns that he would like to address.

"Marriott is a major problem," Pena said. "This is the kind of issue that could bring the students and administration together."

Pena notes that the UI has an option on the Marriott contract and he sees this as being a great bargaining chip for bringing an improved quality of food and service to the UI students.

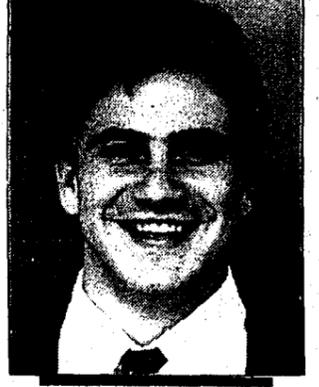

Pena said he would look forward to having a good working relationship with President Zinser and the UI administration in general. He said this optimism arises from faith in his own negotiating ability.

"I'm good at sitting down and discussing a problem or issue," Pena said. "I am also good at seeing what someone's bottom line is — whether or not they are trying to hide it."

Although Pena is a law student, he said he has made it clear to the Student Bar Association that he will not give them special favors or consideration. In the past, the SBA has requested not to pay ASUI fees on the grounds that they could not take advantage of ASUI programs.

Pena said if he were to win the ASUI president office he would only take about seven credits of course work and plan on committing at least 40 to 50 hours a week to the executive position. As president of Adams State College, Pena said he spent about 40 hours a week in that office and he said he realizes that he will probably have to spend more time here since it is a bigger college.

At Adams State, Pena prepared and ran a budget of $300,000. Although the ASUI has a larger budget, Pena said he realizes the responsibility that comes along with it.

DAVID PENA

The fee increase, the number of credits student leaders are required to take, and the ASUI's role as a representative of the students are the major issues in this campaign, according to Jason Albrecht, ASUI vice presidential candidate.

Albrecht, 20, is a junior studying secondary education, with an emphasis on history and political science. He lives in Upham Hall and is currently serving as Residence Hall Association vice president.

Albrecht, a former ASUI senator, said he would support litigation against the university, but only if agreement could not be reached by talking with the administration.

"If we do find our fees are being used inappropriately, we should discuss it with administrators, then proceed (with litigation) if necessary," he said.

Albrecht said the ASUI should have more of a role in administrative decision-making in the future, and bad relations between the administration and the senate have prevented more involvement.

"I know from my past experience in the senate that this type of relationship keeps things from getting done," he said.

Albrecht said relationships with University of Idaho President Elisabeth Zinser has been uncooperative from the beginning.

"I think currently with Zinser, things have started off on the wrong foot," he said. "We need to work with her on a professional basis, without being submissive."

Albrecht also said he thinks the ASUI needs to focus more on representing the students and their opinions.

If elected, Albrecht said he would like to see student activity centralized on campus, and that a new University Center would be beneficial.

He said he would support an increase in student fees to build the center if the increase was necessary and reasonable.

"It all depends on how much it would cost us," Albrecht said. "Twenty-five or thirty dollars, yes."

He said he would worry about what would happen to the current SUB, he said. Albrecht said as vice president, he would also like to see the placement center become more visible.

As a senator, Albrecht co-founded Students Against Driving Drunk and has helped organize RHA while serving as its vice president.

JASON ALBRECHT

Vice presidential candidate Mike Gotch said he feels the position is crucial in coordinating positive projects with the senate to better serve University of Idaho students.

"I really believe in making a positive difference and changes in the ASUI," he said. "I have always worked as a senator with my living groups to initiate projects and taken great pride in representing their views."

Gotch, 24, has been an active member of his living group, Tau Kappa Epsilon. He is currently working toward a dual degree in psychology and advertising. As vice president, he plans to carry a full, 12-credit load.

He said he feels UI President Zinser is willing to have student input, and as vice president he said he would attempt to work with her, rather than against her, if possible. And he would initiate a student lobbying effort with the administration.

"Zinser offers a great opportunity to start a new, better relationship with the university," Gotch said.

However, Gotch said he does feel that a line must be drawn in some instances.

"The students already paid for the Student Union Building, and I would have to oppose a fee increase for the proposed University Center," he said. "However, if the university were willing to compensate the students for the expenses, I could justify supporting it."

The litigation issue interested Gotch because of the implications it would have on the ASUI-Kibbie Dome and ASUI Golf Course, which the ASUI paid for, but lost control of.

However, as a student leader, he cannot make a decision to pursue action until the students have given him their decision on the referendum.

Gotch ran last year's budget hearings as finance chairman and has worked with three ASUI budgets, which he says is more than any other candidate.

While serving the last three years as an elected senator, he has initiated such projects as the parking forum, Gem of the Mountains yearbook sales charge slips, and the I-Tower watering project. He has surveyed students and is currently working on providing accelerated core classes, similar to a quarter semester system.

"As vice president I would work to improve the communication in the ASUI," Gotch said. "Only if we work together will we be able to provide a student service."

Would you be willing to pursue litigation against the University of Idaho if student fees are being misappropriated?

I would not support litigation at this time. The College of Business failed to obtain accreditation and has liquidated their entire graduate program. Other schools are not accredited. We have lost prestigious professors and federal grants. Litigations could force dramatic cutbacks in programs which currently are barely maintaining accreditation.

The students will ultimately decide if litigation should be pursued by their vote on Nov. 15, and I will support their decision.

Yes! If there is overwhelming evidence against the university and if a majority of the student body supports the litigation.

I think we, the students, need to work with the administration on this issue. I don't think that suing the university is the right thing to do. The only people that stand to profit in the long run are the attorneys.

There must be two conditions satisfied before I would be willing to litigate. First, it must be known that the funds are misappropriated, not just mislabeled. It's like the difference between misfeasance and malfeasance. Second, all efforts to negotiate must be exhausted. After that, we must litigate.

The Student Bar Association requested not to pay ASUI fees on the grounds they could not take advantage of ASUI programs. What is your position on this? Do you support the ASUI Senate's current funding method and level for the SBA?

The 1989-90 budget only has $425,000. Only a mere $31,243 was available for "presidential expenses." All student clubs and organizations are treated equally — they get nothing. I would re-allocate a significant amount of ASUI funds for equal access by all student organizations.

I propose to adjust the ASUI's current funding method for the SBA. I would like to create a fund for all graduate student programs by separating $6.25 from their $31.25 ASUI fee to be pooled and distributed for graduate projects. The money generated from SBA students alone would total $1,875, based on approximately 300 law students.

Last spring I voted down funding for the SBA. I believe they do take advantage of ASUI programs. ASUI should pump more money into the Activities Board from the general reserve, where all college organizations could request funding equally. Also, ASUI needs to re-evaluate the budgeting method and find a more sufficient way.

I think that the ASUI is here for all students. The SBA can study at the SUB and has access to the Argonaut. These are just two ASUI programs that they can use. The ASUI is here for them; it's up to them to use it.

This year's level for the SBA is $3,100. Next year's is $0. The SBA paid in $18,000 this year and will pay the same next. I don't approve. No student has a choice of whether to pay ASUI fees, despite the wording of Article I, Sec. 2 of the ASUI Constitution. I think they should pay, but I also think that their requests for funding are worthy.

What changes, modifications or projects do you plan to initiate as a senator?

Rep. Gino "I like students" White didn't say what he will do about our main problem: inadequate funding. Idaho spends much less on universities than most states. The Legislature is the source of the problem, not the university. I advocate we hire a professional lobbyist to seek additional funding.

Some of the projects I would like to initiate are creating a graduate students' program fund, working toward accreditation of the College of Business, budgeting for a UI parking structure, initiating an administrative forum to improve infirmary facilities, and working with the bookstore to find a book buyer who will give students more money for their books.

I would like to change university administrators' views about the senate and have the ASUI work as a team. Enough of that petty bickering. I want also to have students more informed and more decision-making.

My major concern is for a better relationship between the students and President Zinser. This will bring about a better relationship between the administration and the ASUI. I think this needs to be done before anything else.

Of the 15 ASUI officials, nine (60 percent) are from the College of Letters and Science, which is only 18 percent of the student body. One-fifth of the university is graduate students, but none are ASUI officials. Rather than 13 senators at large, there should be one from each of the 10 colleges in the university and the remaining three at large.

Would you be willing to pursue litigation against the University of Idaho if student fees are being misappropriated?

In the past few years, student fees in many state institutions have been raised. I am a recent transfer student from Ohio University. If litigations are brought against the university, I would hope that fees would be lowered in the future rather than instant remedies placed on the university.

University documents prove the appropriations of the revenue from the $25 fee increase is illegal. We should stand up for our rights, not bend over, because it's not nice to protect ourselves. The fact is, we are working with the administration on several other issues, and the fee issue is not interfering with them.

Definitely. If a person is committing fraud or deceit with the student fees, then it does the university harm to have him around. If the university as a whole is misappropriating funds, then first a compromise should try to be worked out. And if this cannot be done, litigation should be pursued.

Let the student body decide. Personally, I have a few problems with the idea. It seems like such a drastic step to take. The whole issue should have been examined and taken care of last year before we paid that extra money. Now that the administration has the money, the options are limited on such extreme actions.

I am against all current litigation concerning the lawsuit against the University of Idaho. I don't think spending university money on professors and equipment is a misappropriation of money. Our fee increase is being used to maintain the physical structures where our free education can be obtained.

The Student Bar Association requested not to pay ASUI fees on the grounds they could not take advantage of ASUI programs. What is your position on this? Do you support the ASUI Senate's current funding method and level for the SBA?

I do not know enough about the issue to make any credible comments.

The law students take advantage of ASUI programs; they can pay their fair share. In regard to funding methods for SBA, it definitely needs to be changed. I can support funding their programs which provide a needed student service like legal aid, but I'll never support funding law school graduation ceremonies, which were funded in the past.

To my knowledge, SBA didn't request not to pay fees to the ASUI. SBA requested that they be able to take more advantage of the fees that are paid in. After ASUI gives the Argonaut and Communications Services their subsidies, the rest of the students have to fight over a small chunk of pie.

No, I don't think the law students should be treated any differently from any other student groups. However, I do think there is some merit in their position. Graduate students in general, I think, feel like they don't participate in the same activities as undergrads, yet they get only a trickling amount of money back for the activities they do.

When an entire college makes a request concerning student fees, I feel they deserve to have their proposal considered and reviewed more than they are now. I do not support the ASUI Senate's current funding method because that method has yet to be defined. I do support actually considering the issue in an adult-like manner so the SBA issues can be resolved.

What changes, modifications or projects do you plan to initiate as a senator?

I would want to develop more projects related to people who live off campus. Some off-campus students have told me that they feel that the university does not pay enough attention to them. I would also want much more funding to social clubs such as chess, dungeons and dragons, baseball and rugby.

I want Marriott off this campus. They are not providing quality food at a reasonable price for students. I'd like to see the food service returned to the university-run program. At least with the university-run program, it didn't seem like they were sucking as much as they could from students.

Give more funding back to all the student organizations. That is where the students are and that's who pays the money into the activities fees.

I think the biggest change would be if the ASUI would quit arguing. I'd also like to provide a clear budget to show how students' money is spent and the large surplus available. Other issues are creating a social atmosphere for underage students and representation for off-campus and older students. I'm doing groundwork for setting up an informal student group to provide input and instituting a recycling project.

I would like to start spending some of the $211,000 surplus in the ASUI on programs that all students could have the chance to enjoy and benefit from. I would make an effort to bring back the concert and comedy series, schedule more guest lecturers and speakers, and develop some health and safety seminars to educate students on issues that are pertinent at the time. It's your money; it should be spent on you.

Would you be willing to pursue litigation against the University of Idaho if student fees are being misappropriated?

If student fees were being misappropriated and the student response was to pursue litigation, I would be in full support of taking legal action.

Personally, I am not in favor of pursuing litigation. I believe that the constitutionality of our student fees is an important issue. However, more investigation should be sought before the drastic move of litigation is made. As a senator, I will fully support the students in their decision, regardless of my own opinion.

This issue will be decided by a vote of the student body, and I will support that decision. The student body should consider that lawsuits are extremely expensive, time-consuming, and are a great source of animosity. The lawsuit will force the state of Idaho to seriously consider who should pay for higher education, the students or the taxpayers.

No. I would rather approach a collaborative effort with the administration. Litigation of this sort would not only be costly but time-consuming to the extent that it would not benefit students currently attending the university.

Of course I would be willing to pursue some sort of litigation if students' fees are being misappropriated. If the money everyone pays is being used for something other than what I was initially informed it would be used for, that is misrepresentation and, in a sense, stealing.

The Student Bar Association requested not to pay ASUI fees on the grounds they could not take advantage of ASUI programs. What is your position on this? Do you support the ASUI Senate's current funding method and level for the SBA?

I agree that the SBA does not take advantage of all ASUI programs but, on the other hand, the SBA does and has the capacity to utilize some of the ASUI programs.

I believe SBA is as much a member of ASUI as any undergraduate student. They read the Argonaut and take advantage of many ASUI programs, like Outdoor Recreation.

The SBA never requested exemption from ASUI fees. The SBA should control the funds for organizations that represent the law school nationally. Law Review and Moot Court are as necessary to law students as a newspaper is to journalism and communications students, yet the newspaper receives over 10 times the funds the SBA receives.

To my knowledge, the SBA never requested not to pay ASUI activity fees. Their request was to either have access to activity fees paid by law students or remain a line-item on the ASUI budget. There is no current funding method or level for the SBA.

It seems quite simple to me. If the SBA does not pay ASUI fees, then they won't get any ASUI funding. If they do pay ASUI fees, then they do get ASUI funding. There are plenty of other students not in the SBA that pay ASUI fees that do not or cannot take advantage of ASUI programs.

What changes, modifications or projects do you plan to initiate as a senator?

Changes and projects that I plan to initiate as a senator are more open lines to students on campus and off. Projects I would like to see started are more productions for the students. One idea that I am pursuing is an underage non-alcoholic dance club run by the ASUI.

I would like to address the lack of study space on campus. I believe this is a serious insufficiency. I also want to work on opening buildings that are normally not facilitated at night to study groups, and would also like to see phones placed in those buildings that remain open all night.

As a representative of the student body, I plan to listen to that student body. It makes no difference what I want. I want to know what changes, modifications and projects students would like. I'm not running for senate so I can arbitrarily dictate policy. I want to be an advocate for UI students.

Improvement of the campus security system, improvement of the problems with the parking situation, and improvement of the student health services.

There is enormous opportunity for new programs and changes here at the UI. The main problem might be to find out what the students want done. Many don't even know who their senator is, or how to get some of these ideas they might have to the senate. I would like to see a suggestion box in the SUB.

"Lisa Krepel has the ability to get past politics and personalities and pull the ASUI together."
-- Brian Casey, ASUI senator

"Lisa has been a consistently good senator for us. She keeps us abreast of the issues and represents our opinion well."
-- Brian Smith, president, Alpha Tau Omega

"Lisa has been really helpful and supportive as our living group senator. I think she is an outstanding choice for ASUI President."
-- Lynn Vershum, vice president, Upham Hall

"Having worked with Lisa on Communications Board, I know she is able to present issues in a very professional and unbiased manner."
-- Chris Wuthrich, president, Sigma Chi

"I am impressed by Lisa's enthusiasm and support of the newly formed Ad Hoc Committee for Off-Campus and Non-traditional students."
-- Steve Coffing, chairman, Committee on Off-campus and Non-traditional Students

"Lisa has the ability to make the ASUI work for U of I students. Simply put...it's like voting for yourself."
-- Michelle Rode, Alpha Phi; vice president, Panhellenic Council

• LETTERS TO THE EDITOR •

Korn can handle a 'full load'

Editor:
In the Nov. 10, 1989 issue of the Argonaut, Patti Rambo, current ASUI senator, submitted a letter titled "Elected officials to represent, not to take 12 credits." In this letter she defined, in her opinion, the role of our ASUI elected officials. She said that our officers are "employees" and should answer to the student body as the "employer," and that requiring them to take time away from their jobs is ridiculous. She ended by stating that during the upcoming election, do not buy the "con job"; support candidates who are not trying to get out of serving you; make them earn their wages. Since Ms. Rambo isn't fully informed herself on the credit requirement, I will update you.

The recommendation to change the regulation in the University of Idaho Bulletin concerning the eligibility and credit requirement passed through the University Curriculum Committee unanimously. This past week, some recommended amendments were made to better define the proposal. First, it was suggested that the proposal be defined for UI elected student officials, not the Argonaut editor and associate editor. It also suggested that senators be required to take 12 credits, and the president and vice president take nine each. This amended proposal will be suggested to the Faculty Council.

Currently, I don't know of any new senate candidates who don't plan on carrying a full-credit load. Your statement implies that we don't vote for anyone.

It is still a mystery to myself and some other student leaders why the ASUI officers, who will be directly affected by this change, never went out and spoke to the students about what they thought. On the other hand, myself and a few other concerned students went door to door and had petitions signed to support our position, around 900 signatures in two days. I thought the issue was important enough to get the students' opinion.

What is apparent, however, is this issue exemplifies that the ASUI officers are still speaking their opinion on the students' behalf. By not getting student input, the only voice being heard is the senators'.

The majority of living groups on campus have no idea who their senators are. They aren't being consulted or even informed about issues that affect them every day. So it is obvious to me, and the students as well, that the only "con job" going on is that we are paying you right now to do a job you aren't doing. In case you don't remember, your living groups are Shoup Hall, Theta Chi and Delta Sigma Phi. After talking to their presidents, it's obvious that they have no idea who you are. Maybe you should visit them, since they are paying you to do your "job."

In this election, elect those people who have proven they can handle a full load. Elect a full-time student leader. It's your choice. It's your right. It's your vote.

— Doug Korn

Pena is the only choice

Editor:

The ASUI needs a breath of fresh air in the ASUI president's office: David Pena. In a race full of backstabbing and political infighting by a brat pack of resume stuffers, Pena brings dignity and conscience back to ASUI politics.

While incumbent candidates tighten their strangleholds on each other's necks, Pena realizes that Marriott is still a problem that needs to be dealt with. Pena is concerned with the students and their concerns rather than chasing politically popular issues and platitudes.

Pena realizes that student government has a responsibility to address the average student and whatever his/her concerns may be. While president at Adams State College in Colorado, Pena made it mandatory for senators to devote time toward getting student opinions and evaluating the constituents' needs.

Pena can do the same here. But he can only do so if we ignore the mudslinging and catcalls of the incumbent ASUI blatherskites.

Time is an important factor in determining how well an elected official performs in office. The more time a person in office is willing to spend pursuing student concerns and needs, the better his/her chances are for success. Since Pena plans to take only seven credits if he wins, he will have plenty of time to attend to problems the students may have.

So make a difference in the ASUI government and vote for David Pena. If you realize what he could accomplish if elected, you will see there is no alternative. Evaluate what the candidates are saying, avoid the rhetoric, and vote intelligently!

Lady Vandals defeat WSC, lose to EWU to end season

By AMY WILLIAMS
Staff Writer

The Lady Vandals clinched their first winning record since 1985 with a victory against Weber State College Thursday.

UI defeated WSC 12-15, 15-10, 9-15, 5-13 and 15-13.

"Our defense outblocked them," Head Coach Tom Hilbert said.

Lady Vandal Kristy Frady set a new season record with six solo blocks and six block assists and brought her season total to 111.

"Kristy hit really well," Hilbert said. "Our offense was the most important factor."

Along with Frady's blocks and 22 kills, Karen Thompson had 23 kills and 20 digs, and Marianne Moore contributed 65 assists and 17 digs.

The Lady Vandals squared off against Eastern Washington University Saturday in Memorial Gym to end the season. Poor serving and tremendous play by EWU's Angela Rogers brought UI a 7-15, 15-7, 9-15, 5-13 and 15-11 loss.

"Our serving didn't go well. It would make a difference if we got the serves in," Hilbert said. "But that wasn't the factor of the game."

According to Hilbert, the key factor was EWU's Angela Rogers, who hit .513 and had 20 kills, 13 digs, and seven blocks. Hilbert said Rogers will be a future dominating force in the Big Sky Conference.

In the EWU match, Thompson had 14 digs, one block and two serving aces. And with 22 kills, she increased her total kills to 513, a single-season record.

This season Lady Vandal seniors Debbie Thayer and Marianne Moore ended their UI careers.

Thayer finished the EWU match with 12 kills and eight digs.

"Debbie is the most composed and mature player on the team," Hilbert said. "Most people don't know the struggle she went through this season. She had a chronic virus that kept her from top performance. She's a real competitor and did a great job."

Moore, who finished the game with 64 assists, 16 digs and six blocks, has been named one of the best servers in the Big Sky Conference.

"Marianne Moore is a great server and setter. She had not set since her freshman year, and when she got the job, she jumped in and was excellent," Hilbert said. "She has set some of the most exquisite games. I just wish she had another year."

Hilbert is already preparing for next year and is hoping for another winning record.

The University of Idaho wrestling club was busy this weekend with a match against Eastern Washington University Friday and the North Idaho

Junior College Takedown Tournament Saturday.

The Vandals were defeated by EWU 18-6. A pin by 177-pound Noel Bailey was UI's only win.

At the Takedown Tournament, two Vandal wrestlers collected wins. Mike Stutzke, 142 pounds, came back from a first-round loss to defeat Jessie Heinle of Yakima Valley Community College 1-0.

Stutzke then lost his third match to an EWU wrestler by criteria in a 1-1 tie. UI's Kelly

Amos, 158 pounds, defeated Bob Nuffy of Big Bend Community College 2-1 in his first match. He then lost to NIC's Mike Scott by injury default.

"It was 1-0 when Kelly got hurt, and he could have gotten the decision," Coach Pat Amos said.

Amos was unable to continue in the tournament.

Coach Amos cited some of the problems the club had this weekend.

"Our conditioning and intensity is not where it should be," Amos said.

Runners bend to altitude problems at finals

By AMY JAMISON
Staff Writer

The University of Idaho cross country men's and women's teams completed their 1989 season Saturday at the Big Sky Conference/District VII Championships in Salt Lake City.

The season is not quite over for one runner, however.

Bernardo Barrios finished second in the BSC and third in the district with a 30:33 time on the 10,000-meter course. His finish bought him a ticket to the NCAA Championship in Annapolis, Md. Nov. 20.

"There isn't a whole lot of training he can do from this point," men's Head Coach Mike Keller said. "He'll have to stay well and go."

Barrios, who will be one of 175 runners at the NCAA Championship, will become an All-American if he places within the top 20.

The last UI runner to go to the NCAA meet and become an All-American was Kole Tonnemaker, in 1980. Tonnemaker is now a graduate student at UI.

Keller said Barrios will face stiff competition at the NCAA Championship.

"He'll be facing the cream of the crop," Keller said.

Barrios enjoyed a strong finish this weekend, but the team did not fare as well.

"We didn't have a good meet," Keller said. "The altitude really affected our team."

"We were running a 10,000-meter meet with non-10,000-meter runners."

— Mike Keller
Men's cross country coach

Keller said five of the six teams finishing last were "non-altitude schools" that are not used to running at Salt Lake City's higher altitude.

"It's a real disadvantage," he said.

Running 10,000 meters, rather than the usual 8,000 meters, also affected the team's performance.

"We were running a 10,000-meter meet with non-10,000-meter runners," Keller said.

Brigham Young University and the University of Colorado men's teams took top honors for the district, and Weber State College won the BSC and took third in the district.

The UI women's finish was similar to the men's, and Head Coach Scott Lorek said the higher altitude also affected some individual performances.

"The altitude is such that some have trouble with it and some don't," he said.

Diane Knudson, UI's top runner, did have trouble with the altitude change, according to Lorek.

"She was looking great the first two miles," he said. "The last mile, though, she was breathing through a straw."

Knudson placed 18th in the BSC and 36th overall with an 18:24 time. Lorek said that she and other runners could have had better finishes if altitude was not an obstacle.

Kim Denham, who ran close behind Knudson, finished 30th in the BSC and 54th overall with an 18:51 time.

Kari Krebsbach finished 41st in the BSC and 87th overall with a 19:48 time.

"She had a real problem," Lorek said, referring to the altitude change.

However, according to Lorek, the altitude did not affect Kristy Klason, who ran her best race of the season. She finished 46th in the BSC and 101st overall with a 20:34 time.

Monica Langfeldt finished

52nd in the BSC and 115th overall with a 21:58 time.

The UI women's team finished eighth out of nine BSC teams. Northern Arizona University won the conference and took second in the district meet, and BYU won the district.

"I'm not disappointed with the team," Lorek said. "They ran real hard. The physiology was just working against us."

Bikers share road tripping experiences can be experienced in our world today. Some people wish to stay away, while others literally ride into the middle of such surroundings on purpose.

On Oct. 25, 1980, with $2,000 in their pockets, Tim Young and two friends, Steve Williams and Peter Wuerslin, left Jackson, Wyo., for a bike tour around the world. The bikers did not know what lay ahead, but they did know that they wanted to, as Williams said, "experience the montage of the planet Earth — an overview of every major religion, culture, language and geography."

The tour turned out to be a 6 1/2-year, 45,000-mile trek through 45 different countries.

The bikers, who averaged 62 miles a day, started their trip in North America and rode south through Mexico and Central America. From Panama they biked the west coast of South America before cutting over to Buenos Aires, where a plane took them to Africa.

From South Africa, Young, Williams and Wuerslin peddled north to Europe. While there, they stopped and spent a year in Geneva to refuel their bodies and their pocketbooks.

When the Du Pont company agreed to sponsor the rest of the trip, Young, Williams, and Wuerslin were off to the Middle East, then through the Far East. Next they flew to Australia to bike from Perth to Sidney before heading to Los Angeles for the last leg of their trip back to Jackson.

In all, they rode a distance equal to twice around the globe on their custom-made bikes and spent more than 2,000 nights camped next to the road.

"There is no institute on the planet that could match the variety of curriculum that has educated us over the last six years," Wuerslin said upon their arrival home.

"It shows you what is possible on bikes," said Joe Riley, owner of Paradise Creek Bicycles. "They're not just for riding to work, and school."

For those interested in hearing more about the trip, Young will present "Too Tyred Tour," a multi-media slide show, Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Borah Theater at the Student Union Building. The presentation is sponsored by Paradise Creek Bicycles, ASUI Productions and the ASUI Outdoor Program.

Nuclear physicist speaks on life beyond our planet

By JOE McMICHAEL
Staff Writer

"Flying saucers are real," according to nuclear physicist Stanton T. Friedman, who is coming to the University of Idaho to speak on the subject Thursday night.

Friedman, sponsored by ASUI Productions, has spent more than 30 years studying and investigating UFOs and is convinced that there is life beyond our solar system. He also believes he has evidence of them visiting our planet.

Among the major scientific topics to be discussed by Friedman are Air Force data, crashed and retrieved saucers, saucer landings and the probable star system origin of some UFOs.

Friedman's background includes 14 years of industrial experience, some of which were spent at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory in Idaho Falls in the development of a wide variety of advanced nuclear and space systems such as fission and fusion rockets, nuclear airplanes and nuclear systems for space applications. He has also completed a bachelor's and a master's degree in physics.

Jim Rennie, ASUI Programs director, said Friedman's "background as a physicist and his ties to Idaho through INEL influenced our decision to bring him here."

FRIEDMAN

"This presentation was chosen because of the recommendations received from other schools that have had Friedman come and speak," Rennie said.

The cost for bringing Friedman to speak is $1,500.

"Two years ago we had a speaker on the topic of UFOs, and it went over very well," Rennie said. "It seems to draw people's attention."

Friedman's presentation has been seen at more than 600 college campuses, and he has been interviewed on Nightline, Merv Griffin and Sally Jessy Raphael.

The presentation will take place in the SUB Thursday at 7:30 p.m. Admission is $2 for students and $3 for the general public.

According to FMLN representatives, the U.S. and Salvadoran governments are using propaganda and misinformation to create the impression that the Salvadoran government is committed to peace. But at the same time, the government is stepping up its campaigning to wipe out the popular movement of social change along with the peace movements of the FMLN. Radio Farabundo Marti and the other media organizations of the FMLN strive to let Salvadorans and the international community know the truth about these issues.

Brother Music appears in Moscow

By BETH BARCLAY
Staff Writer

Blues enthusiasts and music lovers in general are looking forward to the reappearance of Spokane's one-man blues band Brother Music.

"He's kind of a free spirit, with long hair and a beard."

— Ken Fate
KUOI Station Manager

Known to most as simply "Jessie," this guitarist has been touring the Palouse area for quite some time, according to KUOI Station Manager Ken Fate. Brother Music will perform live tonight in the KUOI lobby from 9 p.m. - 10 p.m.

Real blues fans, as well as those who have seen Jessie before, may want to take in more than just the radio show, as Brother Music can be as much fun to watch as he is to hear.

"He's kind of a free spirit," Fate said, "with long hair and a long beard."

Fate said that seeing the performance in person is entertaining simply because Jessie's talent with the guitar is obvious when one can see his fingers at work on his instrument.

KUOI Program Director Matt Kitterman says Brother Music has played other live KUOI shows with good student response.

According to Kitterman, Jessie has been playing in this area for years and has built a reputation as a spectacular performer.

Brother Music will also perform at the Beanery Coffee House Friday at 7 p.m. and at John's Alley Saturday at 8:30 p.m.

According to Wayne Hunt of John's Alley, during these performances Jessie will begin by demonstrating his talent with instruments such as the mouth harp and the acoustic guitar. The second set will feature the slide guitar, and the third set will be entirely electric, with possibly some other performers as backup.
