

Damage to Dome less than originally reported

By M.L. GARLAND
& SHERRY DEAL

Although previous estimates of Boise State University football players' damage to the ASUI-Kibbie Dome reached almost $1,000, Monday Dome manager Rick Bouillon said actual damage was $250.

After the intense UI-BSU face-off Nov. 18, emotional BSU players damaged the visitors' locker-room door, tore down the plastic guards around the phone in the hallway on the east end of the Dome, broke some folding chairs, and destroyed one headset.

Headsets are used by the team's assistant coaches to communicate with sideline staff from above the field.

"It's very emotional on both sides of the ball," Vandal Head Coach John L. Smith said. "Maybe they were upset with how they played and at losing."

Bouillon denied reports claiming he had been injured by restraining Bronco players and coaches from approaching officials about a disagreement that occurred in the final seconds of the football game.

Early reports claimed that Bouillon was hit and injured by a thrown helmet and that he almost had to go to the hospital.

"I was involved with something after the game, but not injured," Bouillon said. "The reports were false."

BSU Head Coach Skip Hall was verbose to the media last week, claiming the rivalry was to blame for his players' actions. Both he and BSU Athletic Director Gene Bleymaier were unavailable for comment.

"Rivalry is what college football is all about," Smith said. "I think the rivalry is great."

He said the rivalry was responsible for the 17,600 turnout at the game.

Smith said Hall contacted him and requested that he tone down the anti-BSU press. Hall was concerned about a statement printed in a Moscow paper before the game. He said the article was defamatory to academics at BSU.

"No matter what anyone wrote in any paper, that would not happen (Vandals damaging property)," Smith said. "And if it did, heads would roll."

A damage bill will be sent to BSU, and a report of the incident will be given to the Big Sky Conference. However, Bouillon stressed the importance of not judging the team on the actions of a few players.

"I think anything like this leaves a negative impression of the entire team, and that's unfair," he said. "It's time to move forward."

University Inn property damage is estimated at $600. However, the general manager is out of town, and staff members had no knowledge of the incident.

North Idaho schools unite to lobby legislature

By J.E. ERICKSON
Senior Staff Writer

A lobbying group representing nearly 15,000 Idaho college and university students has become a reality, according to ASUI President Tina Kagi.

Last week during a meeting at the College of Southern Idaho in Twin Falls, student leaders from the University of Idaho, Lewis-Clark State College and North Idaho College officially formed the North Idaho Student Lobby. The lobby is intended to provide a more effective voice for student interests in the state Legislature.

However, the NISL is not the organization student leaders originally had hoped to form. For nearly two years, student officials from all of Idaho's colleges and universities have been working on the Idaho Student Lobby. But Boise State University, Idaho State University and the College of Southern Idaho have been unwilling or unable to join in the effort. Therefore, the northern schools have come together to start the lobby.

While Kagi is excited about the group's organization, she is also concerned, since the southern schools are not involved.

"We're disappointed that we aren't representing more students," Kagi said.

According to ASUI Senator and NISL Delegate Lisa Krepel, the three southern schools have had difficulties in becoming members of the group.

"The BSU Senate is adamantly opposed to the lobby," Krepel said. "But their student body president really wants it."

In addition, Krepel said the ISU student government could not afford to become a member at this time but intends to budget for it next year.

Kagi said CSI student leaders have not shown enthusiasm for the program, but she said she believes they will become involved in the future. Both Kagi and Krepel say the group might have a stronger start with just the northern schools.

"We may be able to do better for geographic reasons," Krepel said. "And the schools that are involved are those that have been behind it from day one."

"It has been the three northern schools leading the charge for this from the beginning," Kagi said.

In addition, Kagi said she believes the geographical closeness of the three schools will also contribute to a successful beginning.

"It will facilitate the entire organization," she said. "It will make for easier decisions, more meetings and better communication."

Kagi said the group has already made provisions for the other schools to eventually join the lobby.

"The only reluctance we had in forming NISL is that the southern schools may feel alienated by the name change," Kagi said. "But a provision has been included that when the group represents more than half the students in the state, the name will automatically become ISL."

Zinser asked to rethink proposal for house manager position

FROM STAFF REPORTS

Despite approving University of Idaho President Elisabeth Zinser's requests for three staff members, the Idaho State Board of Education postponed Zinser's proposed $30,000-a-year house manager position until January's meeting.

The Nov. 17 meeting held in Twin Falls led to controversy over the four positions. In reporting the situation, the Boise media referred to Zinser as "Queen Elisabeth" and reiterated the fact that she makes twice as much as Gov. Cecil Andrus.

Zinser prepared a four-page report on her staffing plan for the board. Her accepted requests for a production typist, an office coordinator and an editor will be funded from discontinued positions.

State Superintendent of Public Instruction Jerry Evans was the only board member to cast a vote opposing the three new office positions.

The board approved a temporary house manager, Susan Mofett, last month. At the meeting, however, Zinser was asked to review her requested job description and salary and look into other options in preparation for the January meeting.

ASUI President Tina Kagi said the salary for the proposed house manager position is more than that paid to many university professors and would essentially be funded through the general education budget.

"It seems inappropriate and extravagant," Kagi said.

Zinser refused to comment on the situation at this time.

Accident takes lives of two students Olesen Hall deals with loss

By BETH PETTIBON
Staff Writer

Two University of Idaho freshmen were killed and two were injured Nov. 17 while returning home to Hailey for Thanksgiving break.

Tierra Lael "Terri" Chaves-Boender, 18, and Julie Ellen Grant, 18, both residents of Olesen Hall, died instantly when two recreational vehicles directly in front of them collided near the center line, causing one to jack-knife and enter the other lane. Their Toyota Tercel wagon, which was behind the two vehicles, hit the trailer that had swung into the southbound lane. The accident occurred north of Horseshoe Bend on Highway 55.

The other two passengers were taken to St. Alphonsus Medical Center in Boise by ambulance and Life Flight helicopter.

Angela M. Ovard, 19, had surgery on a broken ankle and suffered from a concussion, but she was reported to be recovering and is back at school. Ovard, a freshman and a pledge at Pi Beta Phi sorority, was sitting on the right side of the car in front of Thomas L. Jenkins, 19, an off-campus student. Jenkins suffered from head lacerations and will return to the UI today.

Grant, who was driving the Toyota, was sitting directly in front of Chaves-Boender when the accident occurred. An Idaho State Police report showed that Grant and Ovard, both in the front seats, were wearing their seat belts, while the two passengers in the back, Chaves-Boender and Jenkins, were not.

Friends and family attended a vigil the night before the funeral in Hailey, the girls' hometown, and a joint memorial funeral was held Wednesday.

"There were hundreds of people there," said Molly Smith, a friend of Chaves-Boender and Grant. "It was huge."

Both were 1989 graduates of Wood River High School in Hailey. Chaves-Boender was active in volleyball and track and was homecoming princess for her class.

Friends remember the two as positive women who were active in many areas.

"They were real energetic, real fun, and real sensitive toward world peace," said Olesen Hall resident adviser Linette Ballestro.

Jim Bauer, director of housing and residence life, and several people from the UI Counseling Center met with Olesen Hall residents last night. Bauer said the counselors were hoping to help hall members deal with their feelings of loss.

"It's terrible to come back to school after a break like this and find out people you know are gone. We want to help them deal with that loss," Bauer said.

UNICEF to sell Christmas cards and social services for mothers and children throughout the United States.

The greeting cards will be sold in groups of 10 for $6. One dollar contributed to UNICEF can buy enough vaccine to immunize 50 children against diphtheria, whooping cough and tetanus, or enough vitamin A capsules to protect 30 toddlers for one year from nutritionally caused blindness.

Bauer urges hall presidents to stop snowball fight

By KARA GARTEN
News Assistant

Jim Bauer, director of housing and residence life, pleaded with hall presidents at Monday night's Residence Hall Association meeting to put an end to the annual GDI-Greek snowball fight.

The fight, anticipated any day now, resulted in about $4,000 in damages to residence halls last year. Although Greeks and GDIs have been working toward a plan for paying for any damage resulting from this year's fight, no solution has been reached.

"I'm calling on you guys as presidents of residence halls to stop this thing."

— Jim Bauer
Director of Housing and Residence Life

"It's your choice whether we have a snowball fight or not," Bauer said.

Bauer asked hall presidents to put pressure on their members to not even take part in the fight. He also said he understood that presidents don't always have much control over the actions of their members.

"I'm calling on you guys as presidents of residence halls to stop this thing," he said. "Rarely are you called upon to be a leader of a group of people like we're calling on you now."

Bauer said the housing office has looked at ways to protect windows from flying snowballs, including covering them with chicken wire and plywood, but nothing has worked very well. He said he feels the fight should be avoided altogether rather than boarding up Gault and Upham Hall windows and turning the halls into "forts." Gault and Upham received most of the damage last year. Even if those windows were protected, Bauer said the fight would move somewhere else and other windows would be broken.

He said that while the police could help control the fight, they should not be held responsible for stopping snowball throwers.

"This is our problem, not theirs," Bauer said. "There's not enough jail space to deal with the mob mentality we had last year."

Although the possibility of using water cannons to disperse a mob has been discussed, Bauer said he has checked into it and found that it is illegal. He said he feels the best solution is to not have a fight.

"It's really a simple solution to a big problem," he said. "We won't have to deal with who pays for what. We have ducked a lot of bad publicity about this, but we won't continue to."

Bauer proposed that students plan an organized snow event similar to GDI Week if they want to, and housing would pay for it.

"I'll pay for it," he said. "It would be cheaper than paying for damages."

Godwin says 'snowballers' face arrest

The Moscow Police Department has been asked to help control the traditional University of Idaho GDI-Greek snowball fight.

According to Hal Godwin, acting vice president of student affairs, the MPD will take measures to ensure the personal safety of students and to control vandalism.

"The university does not condone, sanction or want a snowball fight to occur," Godwin said.

And in talks with MPD Chief David Cameron and Sgt. Donald Lanpher, Godwin has asked the department to fully enforce all Moscow city and Idaho state laws.

"If they (the MPD) see someone hitting someone else with a snowball or causing damage, they will be arrested," Godwin said.

Godwin said he expects that students charged with civil violations will be prosecuted through the court system and not through the University Judicial Council.

While Godwin applauds the communication between the Residence Hall Association and Greek leaders, he believes they are "missing the basic point" by focusing solely on the damage costs.

"I have had many students say they are concerned about it (the snowball fight) and don't want it to happen," Godwin said.

In addition, Godwin said he has asked Bruce Pitman, dean of student services, and Jim Bauer, director of housing and residence life, to hold proactive discussions with student leaders. He wants students to realize the risks inherent in snowball fighting.

—J.E. Erickson

CORRECTION. Due to an Argonaut misunderstanding, Hal Godwin was incorrectly quoted in the Nov. 17 Argonaut. In the story about the GDI-Greek snowball fight, he should have been quoted as saying that the police were present the second night of the snowball fight. The Argonaut regrets any confusion this error may have caused.

with the organization looked doubtful just a month ago. After the ASUI Senate approved the lobby's constitution and bylaws, the bill was vetoed by ASUI Vice President Lynn Major. Major was acting student body president while Kagi was attending an ISL meeting in Coeur d'Alene. Several senators had expressed concern about the lobby's fee structure and the ability to amend its constitution.

According to Kagi, these concerns were addressed by lobby officials during the Coeur d'Alene meeting. As a result, the veto was unanimously overridden by the ASUI Senate the following week.

The NISL will meet in Moscow Dec. 9 to begin the search for a professional lobbyist. The group wants to have an individual in Boise representing its interests before the start of the legislative session in mid-January. The NISL will also elect an executive director, a treasurer and a public relations officer at the meeting.

The queen deserves help, not exorbitance

Proclaiming her the prodigal "Queen Elisabeth," Southern Idaho had a royal bash taking University of Idaho President Elisabeth Zinser to the guillotine last week.

What atrocity didst thou queen commit? She requested a house manager. Zinser proposed three office personnel and a house manager/personal secretary at the Nov. 17 Idaho State Board of Education meeting. The request for office staff passed with minimal opposition, but Zinser was sent to the gallows to rethink the other position until January's meeting.

Can anyone honestly dispute the need for the position? As a single professional, Zinser does not have the time to prepare for the entertainment aspect of her job, much less scrubbing toilets. Her predecessor, Richard Gibb, rather than use the money in the budget for a housekeeper, employed five students part time. "We unofficially adopted them, and they became our daughters," he said.

The majority of the conflict evolved when individuals discovered her plan to pay the glorified maid a whopping $30,000 a year. "In my mind, $30,000 is ridiculous for that type of position," ASUI President Tina Kagi said. "In the long run, it harms both Zinser and the university by the impression it makes to potential contributors to the university."

In a year of fee increases and accreditation problems, it seems a tad bit frugal to pay a housekeeper a larger salary than many university professors. Especially in the state of Idaho. "I am not about to get involved in my successor's administration," Gibb said. "If she believes she needs the position of a housekeeper, then I fully support her." Due to the nature of the necessity of the position, perhaps Zinser should reconsider the salary or at least where the money will come from. Constantly referred to as the queen who makes twice as much as the governor, she must consider cutting the pay to a more reasonable amount or pay for it out of her $115,000 salary.

"That should come out of her own pocket," Kagi said. "That person is performing very personal services that any other professional woman would be expected to cover herself." To cover herself from more bad press, this "Queen Elisabeth" needs to remember where she is living and lower the pedestal. But don't get off. You do deserve a little royal pampering.

Marching Band motivates Moscow schools

Editor:

On Nov. 10, the University of Idaho Vandal Marching Band took time from their day to perform for all students in the Moscow School District from grades seven through nine.

Since the student body of the UI supports this organization through the use of student fees, it is important that they be aware that the band not only entertains and supports the university, but they motivate and educate the public school students of our area.

On behalf of the Moscow School District, I would like to thank the Vandal Marching Band and the Associated Students of the University of Idaho for supporting this fine program.

Veteran feels 'let down' by coverage

Editor:

Upon reading the Nov. 14, 1989 edition of the Argonaut, I was somewhat amazed at the lack of coverage about the Veterans Day observances of Nov. 10 and Nov. 11, both on and off campus, which were participated in by University of Idaho students and staff.

While I fully realize that editorial space should (and must) be devoted to the 1989 ASUI General Elections, sporting events, visiting speakers and other "hot" on- and off-campus issues and concerns, I also realize that you left these people OUT by NOT covering these Veterans Day observances.

Frankly, you should be ashamed of yourselves, and you "missed the boat" on this one, folks. So here, let me cover these events for you.

Nov. 10 at 11:00 a.m. at the Ad Building flagpole, a UI Veterans Club color guard performed a flag-raising ceremony in honor of veterans who have served and died for their country, past and present. These students looked sharp and presented themselves in a professional manner, representing the university well in front of an audience of about 50 people. The long hours of nightly practice in the cold rain paid off with a fine ceremony, but no coverage.

Nov. 11 at 11:00 a.m. at the Moscow Community Center downtown, Army, Navy and Air Force ROTC color guards as well as a Navy ROTC firing squad participated in a ceremony in honor of all veterans. These students and their staff advisers associated with this ceremony put in some long hours practicing for this event, and it showed because they did an outstanding job in representing the university to the citizens of Moscow. Again, no coverage.

Look, all veterans past and present represent a part of the UI. Thousands of alumni, students, faculty and staff have served, while hundreds have died in service to their country (of which the UI is a part). By not covering these events, you have done a disservice to the brave men and women who have served and died for this country of ours. And let me tell you, this veteran feels let down by your inattention to detail. You should get it together, people.

Right or wrong, this is still our country because of our veterans who risked their butts to save yours for the future, which you seem to have forgotten. I thank them, because you will not.

Deaths raise road questions

November 17 a three-car accident at Horseshoe Bend took the lives of two University of Idaho students who were driving home to Hailey for Thanksgiving break.

Freshmen Julie Grant and Terri Chaves were from the same town, and shared the same room on Olesen Hall. They were 18. The next day, Saturday, should have been Terri's 19th birthday; her parents had already bought a cake.

This column is dedicated to the memory of Julie and Terri. The following are the reactions of some who loved them.

"In memory of Terri and Julie. I love them so dearly that words could never explain what I feel for them.

I try to understand why my girlfriend and her best friend would have to leave us so soon, but I can never come to a conclusion.

The times we spent together were some of the greatest of my life and shall always be remembered. I only wish we could've had more time with each other to enjoy Terri's jokes and Julie's laughs.

Until that day when I go to heaven and see them, I will never forget Terri and Julie and the love that we will always share."

Love, Fred.
"I wanted to know you better, to see those beautiful eyes again, that hand, laughter that echoes and fills with joy, to be together and to love. I've just fallen off a cliff. I love you and will never forget.

Jana Brevick.
"I love you both very very much. I will miss you, and you will be in my prayers.

I'm happy we became such good friends. I enjoyed all the good times we had together, and I will always remember them as long as I live. I will miss you both so much.

Love, Eric.
"Never shall I forget the days which I spent with you ... continue to be my friend as you will always find me yours." — lyrics from Ludwig van Beethoven.

I love you and will never forget you.

"If I don't see you no more in this world, I'll meet you in the next ... I won't be late." — lyrics from James Marshal Hendrix."

Pam.
"Some people come into our lives and quickly go, some stay awhile and leave footprints on our hearts and we are never the same."

I will love you both always and forever cherish the memories which we shared together."

Love, Melba.

"It's the laughter we will remember whenever we remember the way we were."

We went through a lot of rough times throughout the years. I will cherish every moment, both good and bad, that I spent with you. I love you both and will never forget the wonderful memories you've left behind for us. I'll miss you."

Boo.
These are only a few of the many stricken by the deaths of Julie and Terri. For family and friends, Thanksgiving break was spent at a funeral, and crying. To the families of Julie and Terri, I extend my deepest sympathies, especially to Julie's sister Angie.

Everyone I talked to about Julie and Terri told me how wonderful and special they were. They will be greatly missed.

I can only hope that the Idaho Legislature will get its act together and provide a decent road connecting Northern and Southern Idaho before anyone else has to die. In this case, the road was as much at fault as the drivers.

It's utterly ridiculous for Idahoans to have to consider driving through Washington and Oregon just to get from Moscow to Boise.

The money spent to fix the road will not only save lives but will actually make driving through Idaho attractive to tourists, an added boom to our economy.

The Beanery features live music, art along with coffee

READY FOR BUSINESS. The inside of The Beanery on the corner of Sixth and Main street. (CLINT BUSH PHOTO)

A hot cup of cinnamon-topped cappuccino, a good novel, a slice of homemade cheesecake, and some pleasant music in the background. If this sounds like a nice way to pass a chilly afternoon, then The Beanery is for you.

The Beanery, a coffee house located on the corner of Sixth and Main streets in downtown Moscow, opened its doors about two months ago and has become a popular spot for Moscow residents.

The Beanery's owner, Dennis Lindberg, moved from Corvallis, Ore., to Moscow in July so that he could begin working toward a master's degree in architecture.

Lindberg decided to open a coffee house along with his partner and mother Flora Lindberg, his wife Carrie, and his daughter Christina.

The Lindbergs had a favorite coffee house in Corvallis, but when they moved to Moscow they did not find a place for coffee that was quite the same.

"We wanted a place where all sorts of good, quality coffees are served, a place where every type of person feels comfortable," Lindberg said.

"This is a place where people seem to check their problems in at the door. ... Every type of person comes in here: blue collar, professionals, university staff and students, grandmothers, a broad diversity of people," Lindberg said.

The Beanery features coffees, cappuccino and espresso from Four Seasons Coffee in Spokane. The Lindbergs chose coffee from the Four Seasons after doing a blind taste test.

"Quality is very important to us, and Four Seasons roasts the beans the same day they send them to us, so you know it is fresh," Lindberg said.

He said Four Seasons has excellent quality control since one man who takes his job very seriously is in charge of roasting the beans.

"You know the decaffeinated is decaffeinated, and the Costa Rican is really from Costa Rica," Lindberg said.

"Mom is a business partner and baker," Lindberg said.

Each weekend The Beanery features live music. Lindberg said that he is pleased with the musicians who have approached him and asked to play at his coffee house.

The Lindbergs also feature the works of various artists at their coffee house.

Holiday ballet features worldwide performers

By SALLY GILPIN
Staff Writer

The Sugar Plum Fairy will dance her way into Pullman and Lewiston next week to welcome the Christmas season to the Palouse.

The American Festival Ballet will present its version of The Nutcracker Thursday at the Beasley Performing Arts Coliseum in Pullman and Sunday at Lewiston High School.

The Nutcracker, the classic ballet by Tchaikovsky, tells of a young girl's Christmas dreams about a magical Nutcracker.

The American Festival Ballet's production closely follows the original story line. It opens with an American ambassador's Christmas party, to which he invites the ambassadors of several foreign countries, including Russia, Spain and Arabia. Each ambassador gives the American ambassador's daughter some ethnic candies. After eating all these sweets, she dreams of a trip to the Land of Snow and Kingdom of Sweets.

The ballet will feature performers from around the world. Rebecca Seily of Utah will dance the role of the Sugar Plum Fairy, Leona Hopkins from Liberia, Africa will be featured in the Spanish variation, and Ares Perzmurphy of Mexico will dance the role of the Nutcracker Prince.

Tickets for the Lewiston performance of The Nutcracker are on sale at Owl Drug in Lewiston. Tickets for the Pullman performance can be purchased at the Beasley Coliseum, at Cavanaugh's in Moscow, or at Albertsons in Lewiston.

UI students read to raise money

A presentation of a different sort featuring audience participation will be performed this weekend at the Moscow Community Center.

"A Celebration — Why Not?!" is a collaboration of various literature and drama pieces performed in a "Reader's Theater" setting. In Reader's Theater the audience doesn't just sit back, listen and watch the performance.

"Through vocal tone, slight movement, and good writing the audience can create scenes and characters using their imaginations," said performance director Angel Katen.

The performance is a benefit fundraiser for the Moscow Community Center. The readers, director, and promoter of this show wanted to show their appreciation for the support and opportunity the Community Center delivers.

The Community Center is run by the Moscow City Parks and Recreation Department. It is a place where all members of the community can gather for meetings, plays, meals and community events.

The Community Center was originally constructed in 1911 as a post office and federal building. It officially became the Moscow Community Center in the fall of 1981. The building is listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

This weekend's performance is being directed by Angel Katen of the UI Communications Department. Katen teaches a oral interpretation of literature class here at the UI. Some of her current and former students will be among the reader's at this weekend's performance, including Tim V. Johnson, Eric Jacobsen, Craig Whitney, Gretchen Kelley, Jeff Stoffer, Colleen Katen, Kelly Dawson-Mousseaux, Alan T. Page, Keith Koupal and Rozlyn A. Simmons.

Reader's Theater is a combination of oral interpretation and theater, said Katen. Some schools compete in Reader's Theater like they compete in debate.

"A Celebration — Why Not?!" will be performed this Thursday, Friday at 8 p.m. and Saturday at 2 p.m. at the Community Center. Tickets are $3 for the general public and $2 for students and seniors. They may be purchased at Book People or at the door.

Sherlock Holmes play at Hartung

By MARY HEUETT
Staff Writer

Sherlock Holmes and Arthur Conan Doyle embrace in a struggle of life and death in Suzan Zeder's The Death and Life of Sherlock Holmes.

Directed by Fred Chapman, the play runs this week and next at the University of Idaho Hartung Theater.

Holmes' popularity as a detective is legendary, and every year many letters arrive at 221-B Baker Street addressed to Holmes. They are written by people worldwide who believe Holmes exists or existed. Holmes is better known than Doyle, his creator.

"The play is about how a creator becomes consumed by his creation until he becomes overshadowed by it," Chapman said.

Zeder addresses Doyle's obsession with Holmes in the play. Doyle was driven to create Holmes in story after story. Chapman said Doyle wrote about 56 short stories and five or six novels about Holmes.

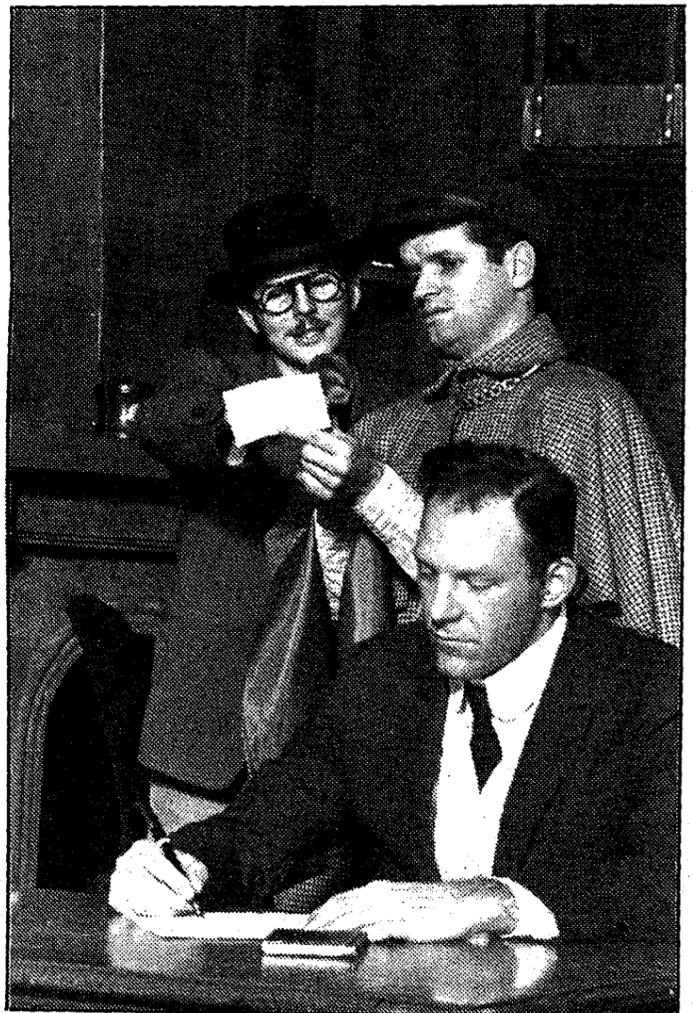

"He gave up everything to constantly write about Sherlock Holmes," said Carolyn Redington, theater arts public relations director.

Doyle was a skilled historian, spiritualist, sportsman and doctor, yet he set these accomplishments aside to write about Holmes.

"The play is a series of playlets taken from some of the more famous short stories in which Zeder interweaves Doyle and his daughter Mary, and tries to find a way to kill Holmes," Chapman said.

Doyle must either kill Holmes or sacrifice his own freedom and personal existence, Redington said.

Dancing Man, Red-Headed League and The Adventure of the Empty House are a few of Doyle's stories that are woven into the plot.

IT'S ELEMENTARY. John Hurley as Dr. Watson, Richard McKinnon as Sherlock Holmes and James Petersen as Arthur Conan Doyle in a scene from The Death and Life of Sherlock Holmes.

The play is filled with snakes, gunshots, seances, and a multitude of disguises.

James Petersen Jr. plays Doyle and Amy Edelblute plays his daughter Mary. These two face off against Rick McKinnon as Holmes and John Hurley as his sidekick Dr. John Watson.

Other members of the cast are Sara Hansen as Mrs. Hudson, Madame Bergolia, and a Lady of the Street; Richelle Graham as Wiggins; Shane Nilsson as Inspector Lestrade, Zoltan, and John Clay; and Phillip Eilmann as Officer Hopkins and the Swiss Messenger.

Designers are: Kevin Seime, scenes; Debbie Dutkiewicz-Zetterberg, costumes; Dean Panttaja, lights; and Brent Karlberg, sound and special effects. Panttaja is the technical director and Kimberley Bouchard is the stage manager.

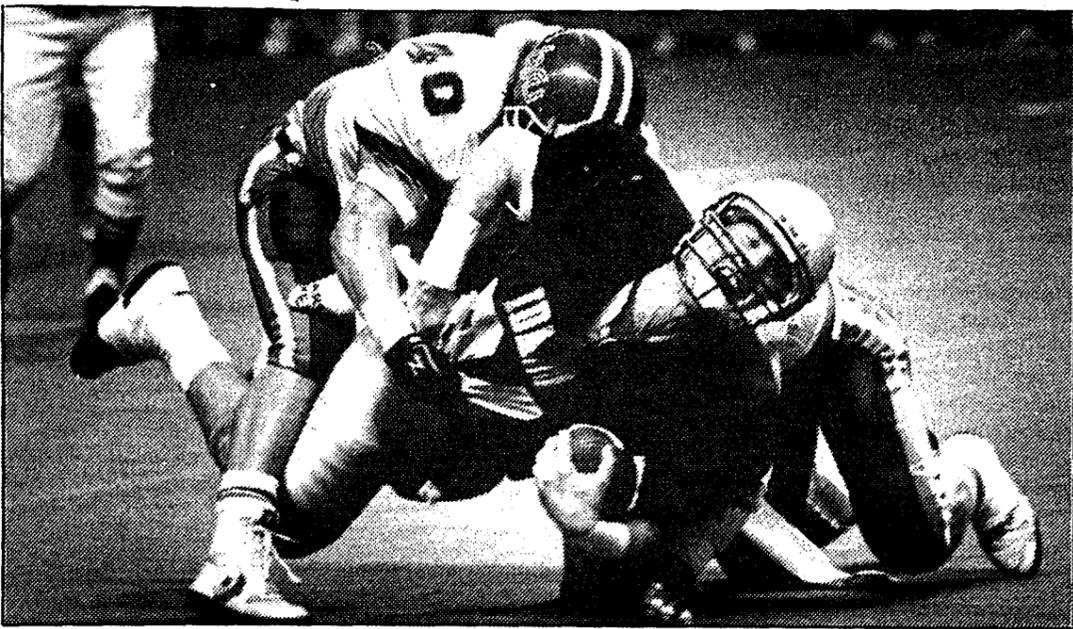

The Death and Life of Sherlock Holmes runs Thursday through Sunday and Dec. 7 - Dec. 10. Sunday shows start at 2 p.m. and all other performances begin at 8 p.m.

Tickets can be purchased at Ticket Express in the UI SUB

Vandals face formidable Jayhawks

By RUSS BIAGGNE
Sports Editor

The University of Idaho men's basketball team faces a big challenge Thursday in Lawrence, Kan., in a game against the University of Kansas Jayhawks.

The Jayhawks, probably the most formidable opponent the Vandals have faced in recent years, have already defeated the likes of fourth-ranked Louisiana State University, first-ranked University of Nevada-Las Vegas (who defeated the Vandals last year in the first round of the NCAA playoffs) and St. John's University.

"They will be ranked number one in the nation when the polls come out this week," said Vandal Head Coach Kermit Davis.

Davis said that although the chances for a victory are slim, he and the other UI coaches will give the players every opportunity to win.

"We will go out with intentions to win," he said. "We will play at full intensity."

Davis said the players feel good about the challenge.

"The players look forward to the challenge of playing a team like this," he said. "I see it as a learning experience whether we lose by 40 points or one point."

Davis said that regardless of the results, the Vandals need to think of the game as a positive experience.

Regarding the rest of the season, Davis said that the team is coming together quite well.

"We're improving," he said. "We have the talent. It is just a matter of time now."

Davis said that more is expected of the Vandals than of many other Big Sky teams, and that the Vandals are meeting the high expectations of the coaching staff.

After Thursday's game against Kansas, the Vandals will spend the weekend preparing for the game against the University of Gonzaga, which will be held Dec. 5 at 7:30 p.m. in Spokane, Wash.

Women dominate Classic

By AMY JAMISON
Staff Writer

The University of Idaho Lady Vandal basketball team did a little more than relax over Thanksgiving break. They dominated the Mark IV Classic at Memorial Gym to take championship honors in two games.

In the first game, the Lady Vandals chalked up a 78-61 win against Texas Christian College.

Senior center Sabrina Dial earned high-point honors for the game with 25. She also had 11 rebounds.

Vandal guard Sherry Peterson had six points, seven rebounds and nine steals, just one short of the UI record for steals per game. Sophomore Krista Smith added 11 points.

In the championship game, the Lady Vandals defeated the University of Wyoming 55-47.

Dial had 19 points, 16 rebounds and three blocked shots, and junior Hettie DeJong was close behind with 12 points and eight rebounds.

Peterson, who had just one turnover in 76 minutes of play in the two games, was named to the all-tournament team.

Dial was voted the tournament's most valuable player and was recently nominated as the Big Sky Conference Player of the Week.

The Lady Vandals will tip off Friday against the University of Santa Clara in Santa Clara, Calif.

Tryouts being held Thursday as search for new Joe Vandal begins

Yes, the wild 'n crazy person who makes Joe Vandal come to life is leaving us.

Let's call him Jo.

Actually, Jo is graduating this semester to pursue life in the big world. So, the search is on to find a new Jo, or Josey as the case may be.

What does the current Jo have to say about being Joe Vandal?

"I have an incredibly good time," Jo said. "I make people laugh, get Vandal fans yelling and cheering at the games, and I am a hit with the kids at the games. Actually, grown-ups seem to get just as big of kick out of me as the kids do when I shake their hands or interact with them in some way."

What does it take to be a good Joe Vandal, one may ask.

"Mascots are an interesting breed," Jo said. "We have to be a little weird, and very crazy. The hardest thing is overcoming your own inhibitions about what is normal, acceptable behavior. Being Joe Vandal allows me to be someone else for a while, someone who has the freedom to do almost anything."

"Mascots are an interesting breed."

cot training camp, football and basketball season tickets, travel to selected away games and a P.E. credit.

Plans are also in the works for purchasing a new Joe Vandal costume.

"One of the highest priorities is getting a costume with better ventilation," Jo said. "It gets pretty hot and stuffy in there sometimes, but it's amazing what applause, cheers and smiley faces can do to keep you going," Jo said.

Tryouts for Joe Vandal will be held Dec. 7 at 5 p.m. at the Physical Education Building, in the small gym on the first floor. The tryout session will consist of a short mascot workshop given by Jo, followed by a round of judging that will give each potential Joe Vandal a chance to show off his/her particular brand of craziness. For more information, contact cheerleading adviser Judy Sanchez in the Athletic Department.

Joe Vandal has been known for such antics as: imitating unsuspecting fans, posing for anyone with a camera, signing autographs, "giving five" to fans in the stands, kissing babies, wrestling with a stuffed grizzly bear at the University of Montana game, lying down in front of semis in the homecoming parade, and even shining a bald man's head with a trainer's towel. Joe has also been seen at games with his arm around many a beautiful woman. He has also been on TV quite a few times, including on ESPN.

Being the person inside Joe Vandal has its rewards: scholarship money, three days at a mas-
