Andrus meets with students, Zinser

Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus visited the University of Idaho campus Monday and met with students and administrators at a luncheon sponsored by the Campus Democrats in the Galena Gold Room at the Student Union Building.

After lunch, Andrus briefed students on state economics and fielded questions on such topics as timber exports and the wilderness controversy.

As part of his visit he toured campus, met with UI President Elisabeth Zinser, talked with Latah County Commissioner Dayna Magnuson and attended a potluck dinner Monday night with Latah County Democrats and Campus Democrats.

Sue Marangelli, head of the Campus Democrats, said she felt the luncheon was a success.

"I was glad that he had the opportunity to answer some questions," she said. "It was well appreciated that he came."

She said the visit was initiated by Andrus' office, and she credited former ASUI President Brad Cuddy with organizing the event.

Andrus said he does not see any reason why a legislative audit of the UI financial accounts should not be conducted. ASUI President Tina Kagi previously requested an audit of all UI accounts.

Humanist group opposes commencement practices

By M.L. GARLAND & SHERRY DEAL

Student Humanist Association members are opposing prayer at university commencement exercises, claiming it is unconstitutional. SHA members say they are willing to work with the University of Idaho administration, but they plan to pursue litigation if necessary.

"We fully support religious freedom, but it has no place at a state institution," said Todd Harper, SHA president and co-founder. "We hope it won't come to litigation. It would be very simple for them to avoid legal hassles."

According to Harper, American Civil Liberties Union officials are willing to assist in a writing campaign to the Idaho State Board of Education and the UI administration opposing invocation and benediction practices, and say they are optimistic about the results. ACLU members refused to comment at this time.

SHA members contacted former UI President Richard Gibb last spring to express their concern about the constitutionality of the commencement program. Harper said they want to mediate with UI President Elisabeth Zinser in late December or early January about the conflict.

"According to Richard Gibb, no one else had complained, and he dismissed the whole thing," Harper said. "We are approaching the administration as non-hostile. We want to make it easy for all those concerned."

Harper, in addition to being concerned about the benediction and invocation's constitutionality, says he is worried that with the university's large international population and diverse religious beliefs, many might be offended by the practice.

"We don't feel it is appropriate for a state institution to endorse one particular (the Christian) religion," Harper said.

Harper and SHA members are citing Supreme Court cases to support their views. According to an article reprinted in Freethought Today, a non-denominational publication from Madison, Wis., "Recent court decisions make it highly unlikely that any type of prayer at public school commencements could withstand constitutional scrutiny."

The article was taken from Law News, a publication distributed last April to Wisconsin public school officials by the Wisconsin Department of Public Instruction.

The article specifically cites Graham vs. Central Community School District of Decatur, in which the Supreme Court ruled that prayer at a high school commencement ceremony "violates the establishment clause of the First

"We fully support religious freedom, but it has no place at a state institution."

— Todd Harper
SHA President

Amendment of the U.S. Constitution."

However, recent court cases make the Supreme Court's stand on the issue of prayer and the state unclear.

In Marsh vs. Chambers (1983), the Supreme Court ruled that opening each legislative day with prayer by a state-paid chaplain does not violate the First Amendment because it is "deeply embedded in the history and tradition of this country."

Harper says he is optimistic about the chance the possible case has in court.

"Supposedly the Idaho Constitution is more strict than the federal Constitution," he said.

Association member Linda Griffiths-Harper says she will boycott the ceremony this spring when she graduates if the administration does not respond, or if a possible court verdict has not resolved the situation. She said about 10 other graduating members would join her in a boycott.

"I won't protest for me, but for my non-Christian family and friends," she said.

SHA was founded last spring under the name League of Atheist and Agnostic Students. The name was officially changed this fall to encompass all interested students who consider themselves humanists with a religious belief.

The association was formed to provide a format for interested individuals to discuss pertinent issues of the "spectrum of religion that affects society currently and historically," Harper said.

Scholarship to honor students who die

ASUI allots $6,000 to start memorial fund

By KARA GARTEN
News Assistant

The Residence Hall Association elected two more officers for next semester and discussed setting up a memorial scholarship at the last RHA meeting of the semester Monday night.

Rose Shur was re-elected RHA secretary and Elizabeth Kniep was elected vice president, both in uncontested races. Matt Frogness, who was re-elected RHA treasurer at the last meeting, resigned his position. He said he will not be at UI for all of next semester because of a heart condition.

Also Monday night, ASUI Sen. Mike Mick presented his idea for a student memorial scholarship to be established in memory of students who die while enrolled at UI.

A bill written by Mick and passed by the Senate last week releases $6,000 in ASUI funds to set up the scholarship.

"The idea is when a student dies, the family often wants to make a donation to a scholarship, but they don't have enough money to do a whole scholarship themselves," Mick said.

Mick said the scholarship may not be given for a few years to allow time to accumulate more money for it.

He asked hall representatives to encourage their hall members to plan some fundraisers to earn money to purchase a memorial plaque or monument, in hopes that enough money can be earned for the monument so that all of the $6,000 can be reserved for scholarships.

Mick suggested that GDIs challenge Greek houses to some sort of fundraiser to get them involved in the memorial.

Some money has already been contributed to the fund. Snow Hall went caroling throughout the residence halls this weekend and collected about $30 in donations. French Hall is taking donations from its members and matching the donations with hall funds.

A committee is being established that will decide what kind of monument to purchase. The committee will include the ASUI president, a senator, two students and three administrators. Mick said some ideas for the memorial include putting up a plaque in the Student Union Building or establishing a large monument somewhere on campus.

Olesen Hall, which recently had two of its members killed on their way home for Thanksgiving break, is planning to plant some trees in memory of the women.

In other business, RHA President Ray Horton said there was "a little occurrence that could have erupted into World War III" Saturday night between some hall members and Greeks, but he thinks the situation is under control now.

"There were a lot of roving gangs and dumb (people) out there," Horton said. "Some drunk people got out of hand."

Horton said he and Interfraternity Council President Doug Korn discussed the incident, and Horton said he doesn't believe any grudges will result from the near-brawl.

Alcohol abuse frequent among students

By DONALD K. CHIN, M.D.
Guest Columnist

In a recent survey, 77 percent of our nation's college students reported that they used alcohol during the last 30 days.

Of these, 43 percent reported drinking to intoxication (referred to as five drinks in a row on a single occasion) within the two weeks prior to the time they were surveyed.

More than 50 percent of college students reported driving after drinking at least once in the past year.

Traffic accidents are the greatest single cause of death among young people, and alcohol use causes more than 50 percent of these accidents. This translates to an average of one alcohol-related fatality every 22 minutes.

Two in every five Americans will be involved in an alcohol-related crash at some time in their lives.

People who drink to intoxication are at high risk for other problems as well. As a result of impaired decision-making abilities due to alcohol, many people are injured and killed in boating, swimming, diving, skiing and other sporting accidents each year.

Decisions regarding sexual behavior are often made under the influence of alcohol.

The effects of alcohol and other drug use, such as hangovers, fatigue, and preoccupation with parties and use, interfere with academic performance. Campus administrators estimate alcohol is a factor in 21 percent of drop-outs, according to a national survey.

Drivers with prior DUI convictions are at least 40 percent more likely to be involved in a fatal crash than drivers with no DUI convictions.

Even in small amounts, alcohol produces impairment in driving reaction time, vision, comprehension, attention, coordination and emergency response. A blood alcohol level of .1 (legally intoxicated) equates to 12 times more likely to be involved in a fatal crash.

That alcohol impairs driving ability is not in dispute. However, the fact that alcohol impairs driving ability at lower levels than previously believed is disturbing.

A blood alcohol level of .06 percent translates to a two times more likely chance to be involved in a fatal accident, .08 to three times more likely, and .09 to nine times more likely.

A typical 120-pound female drinking three drinks within one hour translates into approximately a .06 percent blood alcohol level, and drinking four drinks translates to a .09 alcohol level.

A 160-pound male drinking three drinks in one hour translates to a .05 percent blood alcohol level, and drinking four drinks translates to a .07 alcohol level.

With the holiday season upon us, remember, "DON'T DRINK AND DRIVE!"

Please consider the following suggested standards on alcohol use:

1) Drunkenness should not be laughed at or taken lightly. It should be considered irresponsible.

Fall grads depressed without commencement

Two more weeks and college is all over for many University of Idaho graduates. Graduates who will be catapulted out into the real world — maybe without jobs — and most definitely without a commencement day.

Yes, it's that time of year when December graduates at UI experience true depression.

While May graduates have an opportunity to put on their commencement gowns and square caps and receive their fake representations of diplomas in front of administrative officials, family and friends, December graduates load up their cars with all the junk and memories collected during their college experience and quietly head off onto Idaho's snowy roads ... depressed. Hoping just to make it home. Hoping to receive their real diplomas in the standard six to eight weeks following not a commencement day but the last dreadful final exams of their college careers.

There are 492 fall semester graduation candidates this year, but according to Registrar Matt Telin, about 10 percent won't make it. They'll have to wait and try to graduate in May — and yes, have a commencement day.

How fortunate for those 10 percent. While those 10 percent, along with the rest of the spring semester graduates, are receiving loads of money and cards congratulating them for a job well done and wishing them a wonderful commencement day, December graduates get the combination graduation/Christmas package wishing them a joyous Christmas and an additional "Oh yeah, I almost forgot, congratulations on graduating. Here's an extra $1.50."

Yes, December graduates could come back for UI's annual commencement in May and go through the ceremony. But the idea of going through commencement five months later in May 1990 when actual graduation occurred in December 1989 just doesn't seem like it would be worth the trouble, and it surely wouldn't be as festive.

Oddly enough, Telin — a seemingly great guy who has worked at UI since 1968 — was quite surprised when asked, "Why don't December graduates get a commencement?"

"Gee Scott, I've never had that question asked to me before," he sympathetically replied.

Mr. Telin has been at UI for — count them — 21 years, and not once has anyone had the heart to ask him, "Why don't December graduates get a commencement?"

No wonder graduating in December may be depressing for 492 candidates this year. Graduating in December stinks. And no one probably cares.

Yes, it's that time of year when University of Idaho December graduates experience true depression.

But, hey, what's so bad about not participating in a commencement when December graduates have so many other things to look forward to after leaving UI — such as possibly moving in with mom and dad for a few months, or at least until they can get a job.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Something to be thankful for

Dear Sports Editor:

With your help and that of many others our Sports Marathon was a big success! About 80 people participated in the Friday-to-Saturday event. Everyone had a great time and over $750 was donated or pledged. All of this money — 100 percent of it — will be used to alleviate world hunger in our nation and world.

Thank you for the part you played by writing an article for the Argonaut. Because you helped make it all possible, fewer people will go hungry this year. That is something for which we all can be thankful.

Loud cries

Editor:

Political changes taking place in Eastern Europe are welcomed by conservatives and liberals alike. It has been suggested that these changes and possible reactions in defense spending will weaken the conservative cause. There is no danger of that.

Conservatives have taken the lead in national defense issues because it is one of the few areas in which we believe government has a rightful place. If it is possible to reduce spending over the next few years, we will hear loud cries from liberals for increased spending for child care, health care and endless domestic programs.

There are two problems with this. First, instead of transferring spending from defense to domestic programs, we ought to simply borrow less to operate government. By doing this, we can reduce and eventually eliminate our national debt. Anyway, we were spending money we really didn't have.

More importantly, government has no business subsidizing

A look back at the 1980s

Americans are on the go more than ever before. They don't have time for in-depth news analysis, and a lot of it's depressing anyway. But now there's History Lite 'n Dry. It's less filling and doesn't leave you with that bitter aftertaste. So as 1990 approaches, and with insincere apologies to Dave Barry for stealing the format, let's look back at a history we can feel good about — a decade which has seen many of us grow 10 years older. The '80s — the "Microwave Instructions" Decade:

1980: RONALD Reagan, recently elected to the presidency, arouses suspicion among the press by angrily denying any involvement in the Iran-Contra scandal, which will not take place for six years. However, the story is quickly forgotten when earth-shattering allegations surface that one of our 535 elected congressional representatives may be having an extramarital affair.

1981: LEADING scientists, using a souped-up cuisinart, extract the color "taupe" from a announce they will cut costs by laying off all 43 of their claims adjusters.

THE FIRST commercial appears on pay TV.

1983: A DISgruntled ex-employee, armed to the teeth with automatic assault squirrel rifles, goes on a freeway shooting spree in Los Angeles after a former female co-worker refuses to have sex with him. Criminal charges are reduced to jaywalking in return for the movie rights to his fascinating story.

10:22 a.m.: Ronald Reagan awakens from his famous "Star Wars" dream, orders the invasion of a Ford Grenada, and finds U.S. Sen. Gary Hart and Donna Rice necking in the back seat.

LAWYERS, setting a dangerous legal precedent, absent-mindedly begin suing themselves for malpractice.

1984: RONALD Reagan is re-

making enough money,

SEVERAL large insurance companies, whining about not making enough money,

SECRETARY of the Interior James Watt calls for the summary execution of tree spikers.

child care, health care, or housing. When the government taxes the people to provide a service, the people become poorer at the expense of government control. We lose both ways. We lose financial freedom as well as freedom of choice in the area the government seeks to control.

This problem is clearly seen in public education. We have paid more and more for a public school system at a time when we were losing local control. The more money we inject into the system, the less control we have. The government takes our money, calls it theirs, and then tells us how to run our schools. Most of the decisions as to how schools should operate are not made by local school boards, but by agencies which are not accountable to the public. (Witness the recent ruling by the State Board of Education that no one can be a teacher in a public school without state teacher certification, regardless of their qualifications. This kind of decision ought to be made by local school boards, but they cannot for fear of losing state funding.)

This same process will be repeated in any area which state or federal governments fund. Child care, medical treatment, housing, and many other services will become products controlled by government.

This does not mean that conservatives believe that government has no purpose. Government should "establish justice, ensure domestic tranquility, and provide for the common defense." Government may rightfully engage in promoting trade and transportations, scientific and medical research, and many other activities.

It may be tragic if we wrapped ourselves in chains of socialism which Europeans are casting off.

Vandals stomp Centenary Gentlemen to end Classic

By RUSS BIAGGNE
Sports Editor

At this year's Palouse Classic, each team involved — the University of Idaho Vandals, the Washington State University Cougars, the Texas Southern University Tigers and the Centenary College Gentlemen — finished 1-1.

It all began Friday as WSU was humiliated 94-77 by Centenary, a school with 980 students.

Later that night about 800 Vandal fans watched UI blow a 15-point lead over TSU within the last five minutes of regulation time. The Vandals still led by 14 points with 4:13 remaining and by nine points with two minutes remaining, but they missed six consecutive one-and-one free throws and shot 1-for-8 at the line in the final minutes. Coupled with TSU's full-court press, the Vandals' actions inspired the Tigers' comeback and forced overtime play.

As overtime began, the Vandals had a four-point lead but faltered once again. TSU's Charles Price sank a 15-foot shot with 37 seconds remaining to ice the Vandals 78-77.

Many of the same events occurred again Saturday night, but this time Friday night's winners were the ones faltering. In the first game, the Cougars redeemed themselves by smothering TSU 88-75, and the Vandals made revenge sweet by embarrassing Centenary 94-63.

"You think you know the character of your team, and then this happens," Head Coach Kermit Davis said of the win. "I really thought this game would go down to the last second."

The Vandals showed no mercy from the very beginning of the game when guard Otis Livingston hooked up with Clifford Martin for an alley-oop/dunk that shook the house. Just 42 seconds later, Riley Smith answered with a slam dunk (not a normal thing for Smith to do) that set the tone for the rest of the game.

The first half continued in much of the same fashion, as the Vandal defense stifled the Gentlemen, who were averaging 90 points a game coming into this one, and held them to a season-low 29 percent from the field and 0-3 at the line. The Vandals were led by the relentless inside play of Riley Smith, who scored 16 of his 26 points in the first half. The Vandals led 41-25 at halftime.

During the second half, Centenary was never closer than 10 points, which allowed Davis to play his entire bench. With 11 minutes remaining, Davis began pulling starters, beginning with Smith, who sat for the rest of the game, and gave the younger members of the team some playing time.

"One thing I really liked about the game, and something I have been scared about, was keeping the score up after we take Riley out," Davis said. "Usually when we do this, our lead is cut back to two or three and he'll have to go back in. That didn't happen tonight. Our lead kept increasing."

Although the Vandals smothered the Gentlemen by 31 points, the game still had one low point, as the Vandals hit just 43 percent of their free throws.

Lady Vandals take second in Spokane

By AMY JAMISON
Staff Writer

The University of Idaho Lady Vandals were held to 45 points Saturday as the Washington State University Cougars powered the boards to capture a 71-45 championship win at the Wheatland Classic in Spokane, Wash.

WSU has reigned over the classic since it started three years ago. The Cougars were determined to keep the title Saturday night as they led throughout the championship game.

The closest the Vandals came to the Cougar lead was within four points, at 12-8, in the first half.

UI entered the locker room at halftime trailing the Cougars 33-17.

Sabrina Dial contributed 14 points and nine rebounds. Hettie DeJong added 12 points.

To earn their ticket to the championship game with WSU, however, the Vandals defeated Gonzaga University 61-51 Friday night.

The UI bench helped clinch the win, as Jennifer Ballenger scored 14 points.

Dial had a game-high 21 points and a career-high 18 rebounds. She also set a Wheatland Classic tournament record for the most rebounds and represented UI on the all-tournament team.

The Lady Vandals will tip off with Lewis-Clark State College today at 7:30 p.m. in the ASU-Kibbie Dome.

Wrestlers hope to improve season at PLU Classic

By RUSS BIAGGNE
Sports Editor

It has been one of those seasons for the University of Idaho wrestling club.

The 1989 season started out badly when four key veterans did not return: John Roberts at 118 pounds, Paul Blas at 142 pounds, 177-pounder Tony Mancilla, and 150-pounder John Boone, who was accepted to the Naval Academy.

"Mancilla had a 9-1 record for us last year, so losing him really hurt us," said coach Pat Amos. "All who left, except for Boone, did not give us any reason for not returning."

If that was not enough, five high school recruits who had verbally committed to the university changed their minds at the last minute.

When the season began, two starters quit: Kelly Amos, 158 pounds, is out for the season with a shoulder injury, and just last week, 177-pounder Noel Bailey was hit by a car, in a hit-and-run accident, while jogging.

"To lose all four of those guys really hurt us, especially Kelly, who was a team captain and probably our number one wrestler," Amos said.

There has been a bright spot, however.

Freshman 190-pounder Todd Brooking won another match Saturday at the Big Bend Open. Brooking pinned Highland Community College's Randy Creshier in the first round to pick up his second win of the season.

"Todd wrestled two good matches at the tourney, including a 10-5 loss to Yarrow Harnner from Western Montana," Amos said.

The UI wrestlers hope the season will improve when they travel to Tacoma, Wash., Jan. 13 to compete in the Pacific Lutheran University Classic.

Life of Hunter a busy one, but he hopes to stay awhile

By DAYNA WILLIAMS
Staff Writer

The University of Idaho's athletic director has only been in Moscow since July 1988, but he has not stopped to rest since he came here from the University of Kansas.

HUNTER

Gary Hunter first began working as a trial lawyer and judge in Kansas City, Mo. After 16 years, he decided to move into the athletic field and became assistant athletic director at the University of Kansas. He worked there for three years and then decided to make the big move from the Midwest.

"My wife and I love Idaho," Hunter said. "We had expected the state to be a lot different, but we find the people to be kind, and we thoroughly enjoy the Northwest."

Since UI has 13 intercollegiate sports, Hunter's workday is extremely busy. One minute he might find himself dealing with NCAA rules, and the next he might be talking to an alumnus about fundraising.

"I deal with a very broad group of subject matter every day," Hunter said. "Between myself and my assistants, we manage to do a little bit of everything."

Hunter works with the Vandal Boosters in contacting supporters. Vandal Booster fundraising efforts include an annual golf tournament.

"I think that the University of Idaho has a great future, and I certainly hope to stay here for a while," Hunter said.

Any non-perishable item will be accepted. Turn in food before the UI/WSU game at the ASUI-Kibbie Dome Ticket Outlet.

>VANDALS from page 7

Davis said he hopes this percentage improves.

"Our free throws are going to remain bad as long as Riley keeps missing because he's the one who is always shooting," Davis said.

Victorian Christmas planned for the McConnell Mansion

Old-fashioned Christmas decorations, a doll exhibit and seasonal music will be featured at the Latah County Historical Society's annual McConnell Mansion open house Wednesday from 4 p.m. - 7 p.m.

Flutist Consuelo Weitz, young cellists, and the University of Idaho Cello and Bass Choir, directed by Professor Bill Wharton, will perform. Marian Frykman will play Christmas carols on the parlor piano.

A "Dolls of Many Lands" exhibit featuring dolls from around the world will be shown upstairs.

Former Idaho Gov. W.J. McConnell and his family moved into the house, located at 110 S. Adams, on Christmas Eve, 1886. The Latah County Historical Society has been using donations to restore parts of the house for the last 20 years.

Wassail and homemade refreshments will be served. The open house is free to the public. Donations are welcome.

KUOI offers alternatives

By ANDREA CHAVEZ
Contributing Writer

Albums everywhere. In every room, behind every door, KUOI is packed full of every kind of album. And every album will probably be played by someone, eventually.

For 17 of its 44 years, KUOI-FM has cultivated a unique blend of musical tastes for its listeners. The current staff remains proud of the unusual sound.

"We want people to be exposed to a lot of different kinds of music," says Christina Hendricks, KUOI music director. "That's what we want to fight to keep, because it's extremely unique."

KUOI is different. The disc jockeys can play any type of music they want.

"We have a free format. We're unformatted," says Hendricks.

KUOI's brand of "free formatting" is becoming more and more unique. While most other non-commercial college stations seek and stick to one type of music, KUOI is one of the few stations in the country to practice the free-format technique.

"The reason we have the free format is to provide an alternative," Hendricks says.

Matt Kitterman, KUOI's program director, agrees. He likes to see both DJs and listeners branch out and experience new types of music.

"Everyone has preferences in music," says Kitterman, "including our DJs. Hopefully, especially our DJs! I like to see people exploring."

Kitterman sees the popularity of musical types as a bell curve. The most popular music types stay nestled in the center and the less popular kinds remain on the edges.

"I would like DJs to explore the skinny parts of the curve some-

Dogs D'Amour 'not terrible'

REVIEW By SALLY GILPIN
Staff Writer

Thirty-year-old, alcoholic, drug-abusing, party-till-dawn, out-of-work rebels, there is hope for you yet. You can get a job as a rock band. The Dogs D'Amour have paved the way for you.

King of the Thieves is the latest album from The Dogs D'Amour, the bluesy rock 'n' roll band from Wolverhampton, England. The band is led by singer/songwriter Tyla. Other band members include guitarist Joe Dog, bass player Steven James and drummer Bam-Bam.

The Dogs compare their style to The Rolling Stones, Aerosmith, Hanoi Rocks and Faces. I would compare their style to a bar band that escaped from the Betty Ford Clinic.

The band has the musical ability of a good bar band that plays in a dirt-floored backwoods tavern, where you go with a bunch of friends to drink cheap beer and party the night away.

Dogs D'Amour just doesn't have the originality and musical talent to make it on a larger scale.

Lead singer Tyla's voice makes the album somewhat interesting, however. He reminds me of Joe Cocker or Keith Richards, worn out and harsh after too many years of substance abuse. He croons and wails and cracks his heart out throughout the album, unfortunately to no avail.

Alcohol is the prevalent theme for the album and the group. The album cover, drawn by Tyla, depicts the group members engaged in a drunken brawl. If the band doesn't make it, at least Tyla could become a comic book illustrator.

The theme of alcoholism is continued in the album's first song, "Drunk like me." This song has a good rhythm and blues beat at the beginning, but then Tyla's froggy voice starts crooning about how wonderful it is to drink until you pass out.

The rest of the album continues in this manner through songs with titles like "Goddess from the Gutter," "Princess Valium" and the "Ballad of Jack (Daniels), The Prettiest Girl in the World."

It is obvious from these songs that the band members worship alcohol. The band has stated, "These songs are about: being drunk enough and happy enough to forget about the whole messed-up world, and they include many love songs to Jack Daniels."

The Dogs D'Amour's King of the Thieves is not a terrible album. In fact, I liked it simply for its humorous qualities. Another like-minded observer has said, "No one views the world from the bottom of an empty glass with such depth and insight and with such classic melodic style as The Dogs D'Amour."

Local production company holds auditions

By MARY HEUETT
Staff Writer

A Shade of Difference, a Moscow production company, is holding auditions for Jack Sharkey's Take a Number Darling at the Moose Lodge Wednesday from 5 p.m. - 7 p.m. and Thursday from 5 p.m. until all auditions are completed.

The production company needs three male and three female actors. One male must play the piano and one female speaks in Spanish. Auditions are open to everyone in the Moscow-Pullman area.

Take a Number Darling is sophisticated slapstick, according to artistic director Angel Katen.

The show will be produced as a dinner theater and will run the first, third and fifth weekends in March.

A Shade of Difference has been producing shows since January but did not have a name until just recently, Katen said.

The company does oral interpretations, plays, and the Reader's Theater, and intends to conduct a dramatic workshop for high school students this summer.

"Our projects center on benefiting several parts of the community," Katen said. "It's important to involve all aspects of the community, not just the 'art' community, in this project."

The company's past projects include Extremities, the Reader's Theater, and Talking With.

A Shade of Difference supports itself with revenue from its projects. The Take a Number Darling cast and crew will be paid on a percentage basis. All prior shows have been done with volunteers.

Katen said the company seeks to be professional.

"We based our company on professional standards," she said.

Company members vary from time to time. Currently the company wants to fill the following positions: production stage manager, promotional director, properties master, costume coordinator, and two crew members.

Those interested in company positions or auditioning can contact Katen at the UI School of Communication or home.

times," Kitterman says.

"It is basically the college-age person," says Hendricks, "but I know a lot of high school people who listen."

Recently, KUOI has been attempting to attract community listeners with such programs as Pacifica Radio News, an independent news program from Washington D.C.

"A lot of people in the community support that highly and they listen to that every day," Hendricks says. "I assume they might listen to shows outside of Pacifica once they know KUOI's around."

Rather than target the music and programs to a particular audience like most stations, KUOI management hopes the audience will find them.

"I think it would be hard to go for any certain audience," Kitterman says. "Hopefully, the audience is targeting us."

"There is so much new music coming out that you can't hear anywhere else," says Hendricks. "We all are pretty excited about it."

If only they can find room to store it.

ASUI Productions offers spring semester entertainment pass

By STEPHANIE BAILEY
Entertainment Editor

Next semester students can purchase an entertainment pass that will admit them to all spring 1990 events sponsored by ASUI Productions.

"This will provide a way to introduce students to what's going on," ASUI Productions Director Jim Rennie said.

Rennie said the entertainment pass will help students save money and will encourage them to attend many interesting events. The pass also benefits

ASUI Productions, since more events can be scheduled if enough money is generated at the beginning of the semester.

The ASUI Productions entertainment pass will be on sale for $8 during the first two weeks of the spring semester. The pass also entitles students to one free game of bowling at the SUB and a discount on outdoor equipment rentals.

Lectures scheduled for next semester include: Robert Zellner, featured in the movie Mississippi Burning, on the Civil Rights Movement, Jan. 23; Maurice Ellsworth of the Department of Justice on Idaho's drug problem, Jan. 25; a speaker on cults and magic, Feb. 8; and a Greenpeace program, April 14.

The Nikon camera company will sponsor A Day in the Life of America, a Time/Life multi-slide presentation, Feb. 3.

ASUI Productions will continue to show Saturday night double features and will begin sponsoring a free coffee house night with music and entertainment in February.

Holiday House Tour raises money

By SHIRLEE CARBAUGH
Staff Writer

The Holiday House Tour combines visits to historic houses with the music of the Symphony Orchestra and Chorale.

This year's event, to be held Dec. 17, will include four houses in Moscow's historic Fort Russell District.

The first of the four houses is the Miller-Wilson house at 325 N. Polk St., built in 1911 by Mark P. Miller. This 8,000-square-foot house was built with a Bavarian-style exterior. The entrance was designed so that horse-drawn carriages could access the home easily. Inside, the house sports such details as a solid oak interior, Prairie-Mission light fixtures, rose-stained glass windows, and a built-in grandfather clock in the hall.

The next home is the Brown-Hackmann house at 622 E. B St. This house, built in 1885, has an arched Tiffany window and Greek-style columns. The interior includes a splendid front staircase, original woodwork and beautiful fireplaces in the two front rooms. This house has been called "one of the handsomest homes in Moscow."

The David-Butterfield house is the third home featured in the tour. Architect Rudolph Weaver designed the home in 1927 for Howard David. The entry is accented by leaded glass side panels, a classic fan-light, pillars and a curved porch roof. The interior has sitting rooms, studies and a large stairway. An antique wood stove still stands in the kitchen area.

The final house is the Melgard-Baron House at 925 E. B St. Built in 1934, this house has elements of asymmetrical plans, idiosyncratic window groups, and floor plans that resemble an English-style cottage. The interior features oak floors, mahogany window trim, leaded glass windows, built-in cabinets, and curved ceilings.

Prior to the day of the tour, tickets can be purchased for $7.50 per person at the symphony office at 105 E. Second St.

Tickets are also available at Moscow's Unitarian Church. An illustrated pamphlet describing the tour will be provided with each ticket purchase. The church will also have complimentary hot cider and cookies. The musical performances will begin at 2:30 p.m. Dec. 17.

ble behavior and could indicate personal problems.

2) Excessive drinking that leads to intoxication is neither healthy, safe, nor socially acceptable.

3) Alcohol is not essential for the enjoyment of family or social events, or for celebrating success.

4) The use of alcohol is a personal choice. No one should be pressured to drink or not to drink, or be made to feel uneasy because of a personal choice.

5) Drinking should not be an activity for its own sake, but an adjunct to other activities.

6) The use of alcohol at luncheons or meetings during work hours or class days should be discouraged.

7) The person responsible for setting up parties or social events is accountable for seeing that alcohol, if used, is used legally, moderately and appropriately.

8) Most importantly, everyone should know their limits of moderation. Many factors are involved, including body weight, food eaten, fatigue, strength of drinks and mental state.

If you feel that alcohol is a problem in your life, please contact the Student Health Center or the Student Counseling Center.
