

Asbestos delays re-opening of Vandal Cafe

By CHARLES RICE
Staff Writer

The Vandal Cafe will be closed for two weeks while $172,000 worth of remodeling and asbestos removal is completed. The cafe planned to close for just one week to finish the remodeling project, but the discovery of asbestos tiles in the floor led to an additional $11,000 asbestos removal expense and another week-long delay.

Funding for the project will come from a $225,000 fund that the Marriott Corporation allocated for food service facility renovation at the beginning of its 18-month contract, which expires June 30, 1990. Walker Construction of Spokane is the general contractor, but subcontractors are also working on the project.

According to Retail Dining Director Mike Thomsen, the blue carpeted area is being changed to a booth style, and the new decor will be 1950s-style neon and chrome.

"The main remodeling emphasis is to create an even flow of customers through the Vandal Cafe area," Thomsen said.

Last semester some people expressed concern about plans to remove the sunken carpeted areas that provided privacy in the cafe. However, Thomsen said that the new booths will offer privacy and make 50 more seats available.

The Blue Bucket Inn will not be affected by the remodeling.

Remodeling will also start this month at the UI golf course, where University Dining Services by Marriott will begin operating a restaurant in late March.

Additional food service plans include expanding the Vandal Carte system to other areas on campus, according to Jerry Wallace, assistant vice president for budgeting and planning.

King celebrations planned for campus, community

By BRIAN KINDALL
Staff Writer

This year the University of Idaho's Martin Luther King Jr. Commemoration Committee will be celebrating diversity with several activities.

Through such events as unity marches, we hope to bring the community together and create a sense of unity.

The main event of the year is the Unity March on Monday, January 15, to avoid conflict with the beginning of classes and to allow greater participation from students. The committee elected to hold the majority of the march on campus through the night.

One of the celebrations scheduled for the inter-campus area will be held Sunday at 7 p.m. at the dark United Methodist church. Wallace said the committee will host the all-inclusive non-denominational year-interfaith, hopes that people of all faiths will make a difference in the world and ease the burden of coming into a new year.

Speaking at the interfaith service will be Bill Wassmuth, executive director of the Northwest Center Against Marijuana Abuse, and a host of other speakers.

Wassmuth said he believes the general condition of contemporary life is conducive to reactions such as racism.

Racism is a very simple answer to the complicated questions of the world. In the face of diversity and challenges, Wassmuth said he said he felt it is imperative that this attitude be changed.

UI accredited through 1994, praised for progress

By VIVIANE GILBERT
& DENISE BUNCH

The Northwest Association of Schools and Colleges reaffirmed the University of Idaho's accreditation and praised the progress made since the last visit five years ago.

In the Interim Report for The Commission on Colleges, NWASC stated that UI is "a well-managed, solid institution with a quality faculty and a well-served student body."

The UI's accreditation has been reaffirmed by the association until 1994. The evaluation report followed a visit to the campus this fall.

The NWASC praised the university in several areas but took particular notice of UI's plan to offer engineering courses on the Boise State University campus. Also praised was the cooperative relationship with Washington State University. The UI and WSU have a two-way television system that, according to the NWASC report, is a wise use of resources.

The accreditation team noted that "the tone of the campus is optimistic, illustrating a great deal of confidence in her (UI President Elisabeth Zinser's) leadership."

The report did state, however, that faculty salaries are the most serious long-term issue facing the state universities in Idaho. A study of salary levels, salary compression and faculty age levels was suggested.

Zinser credited the favorable review to her predecessor, saying former President Richard Gibb was the "guiding force whose leadership and judgment led Idaho to the status it enjoys today."

The report made special note of the series of 10 major recommendations that were made after the 1984 accreditation visit to campus, saying they were clearly taken seriously by the university.

"It is quite evident that substantial progress and a higher level of institutional maturity have been achieved since the 1984 visitation," the report stated.

According to the report, UI undergraduate classrooms and laboratory teaching/learning resources have improved greatly over the past five years. In 1984, there were 12 computer labs at the UI. Today there are 33 computer cluster sites, with a total of more than 450 personal computers and 200 mainframe terminals available for student use and instructional support. More than 36 classrooms have been remodeled or upgraded and more than $1.2 million has been spent on remodeling seven major classrooms and labs.

The university also received high marks in the field of research and graduate programs. Among the successes the report listed were a $7 million NASA grant for microelectronics research and $3 million for biotechnology. Research and development funds garnered by faculty and staff also increased from $12 million in 1984 to $23 million in 1989.

The report also praised the UI's Long Range Plan, which was developed and implemented since the 1984 visit. The visitors said the plan has added emphasis in several of the university's strongest research areas, such as biotechnology, water resources, microelectronics, materials sciences and aquaculture.

In the area of finance, the report said the university has clearly taken the attitude of helping itself fiscally through vigorous efforts to secure gifts, contracts and donations.

The team noted that, like many institutions accredited by the NWASC, salaries are, "low and compressed and budgets are tight, making careful management of major resources imperative."

DATE RAPE

By MATT HELMICK
Editor

Many people misunderstand what sexual assault is, and many inaccurate myths exist regarding sexual assault.

As Betsy Thomas, director of the University of Idaho Women's Center, will tell you, the definition of rape is relatively simple. Rape occurs any time a person has sex with another person against his/her will. This includes cases when the victim is intoxicated or incapable of communicating lucid consent or refusal to a sexual act.

However, sober consent is not the only deciding factor. Having sex with a person under the age of 18 is considered statutory rape, regardless of whether consent is given by the minor.

The idea that most rapes involve strangers attacking women is a myth. Most rapes are acquaintance rapes.

In an Idahonian column, Washington State University Police Chief Dan Wareing defined acquaintance rape as "forced sexual intercourse (or other sexual acts) that occur between two individuals who know each other."

In more than 80 percent of all sexual assaults, the victim and the assailant know each other, according to Thomas.

Of the 12 rapes reported on the UI campus last year, 10 were perpetrated by persons the victims knew. Thus, most of the rapes were acquaintance rapes, more commonly referred to as "date rape."

Ignorance regarding the effect of rape on the victim and the psychological suffering it causes has led to misunderstanding and unsympathetic attitudes regarding rape. To describe the psychological suffering of a rape victim, Thomas uses the analogy of a knife wound.

"If you end up with a bad wound and it isn't treated from the bottom up, it will never heal properly," Thomas said. "It may not bother you for a while, but the pain will return. With any encounter with a member of the opposite sex, the scab may break loose."

However, Thomas said that with counseling the wound can heal properly. Counseling is available at the UI Women's Center, the UI Counseling Center, the UI Psychology Clinic or through Alternatives to Violence of the Palouse.

According to a pamphlet provided by the Pocatello YWCA Women's Advocates and the Idaho Network To Stop Violence Against Women, a victim of rape undergoes "rape trauma syndrome." This term describes the emotional anguish the rape victim continues to experience long after the rape has taken place.

Rape trauma syndrome entails mentally and physically reliving the sexual assault many times. Frightened of seeing the rapist again, the victim may be fearful of all men for a while.

Rape trauma syndrome also affects the victim's total well-being with physical discomfort, nightmares, loss of appetite and fear of sexual intercourse. Mood swings and cycles of denial, resolution, anxiety and grief are other attributes of rape trauma syndrome.

The pamphlet points out that women undergoing rape trauma syndrome require counseling. Spouses and the families and friends of rape victims may also need counseling.

Another sexual assault myth is the assumption that rape is always reported to the authorities. According to Thomas, an FBI report states that only one in 10 women who have been sexually assaulted report the crime.

Thomas said that although the majority of sexual assault victims are women, it is important to note that men can be victims of rape as well.

"Men have the same rights to counseling and legal action as women do," Thomas said.

Women's Center and MPD to survey students to determine problems, needs

By MATT HELMICK
Editor

Because many sexual assaults take place and go unreported on the University of Idaho campus, the UI Women's Center and the Moscow Police Department are issuing a questionnaire to living groups to find out just how many and what kinds of sexual assaults are taking place.

Betsy Thomas, director of the UI Women's Center, said about 12 rapes were reported by victims last year. However, Thomas said she receives reports of many other sexual assaults through the "grapevine" or through second-hand accounts that are rarely verified by the rape victims.

"We are concerned about this and we need to find out more than grapevine information," Thomas said.

For this reason, the Women's Center and the Moscow Police Department are issuing a questionnaire to living groups the first two weeks of this semester to get an accurate account of how many and what types of sexual assaults are taking place on the UI campus.

Lieutenant Dan Weaver of the Moscow Police Department said it is vital to get reports of sexual assaults from the victims themselves.

"There are two reasons why victims of sexual assault need to report the assault," Weaver said. "The first is that a victim's report and possible testimony is needed to prosecute. The second is that even if the victim decides not to prosecute, we can at least take steps to ensure that it doesn't happen again."

The questionnaire will also assess how much UI students know about sexual assault and find out what services students may need to reduce the incidence of rape.

Weaver said he doesn't want to stir up a panic about rape, but he said UI students should be aware that rape does take place on the UI campus.

"We want to tell people that we are still a safe campus," Weaver said. "On the other hand, assaults need to be reported."

Police list steps to take, offer support for victims

By MATT HELMICK
Editor

According to Moscow Police Department Lieutenant Dan Weaver, rape victims need to follow a specific procedure immediately after a sexual assault has taken place.

Although the first impulse for a rape victim is to take a bath or shower, Weaver said the victim should first go to the hospital and explain that she has been sexually assaulted so that any evidence the assailant has left on the victim can still be collected. The hospital staff can then report the rape to the police.

Although the involvement of the police might worry some victims, Weaver may give some cause for relief.

"Just because you file a report to the police doesn't mean the victim will necessarily be standing up to give testimony," Weaver said.

Weaver said the rape victim should not change clothes after the assault since evidence may be present on the clothes. Instead the victim should take a change of clothes to the hospital so clothes can be changed after the necessary examinations and medical treatments have taken place.

Weaver said police officers are trained to deal sympathetically and professionally with female sexual assault victims. If the victim prefers, there is a female police officer available for the victim's support and questioning.

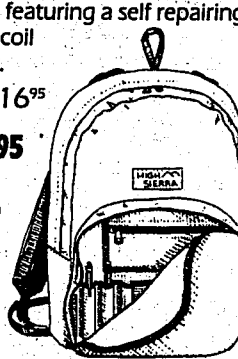

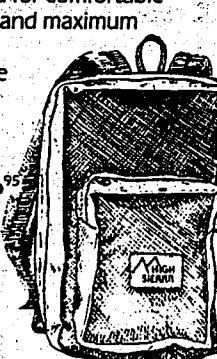

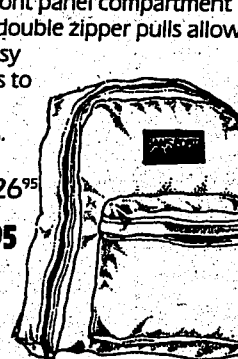

Weaver said the police department can also provide the sexual assault victim with access to counseling and other support services.

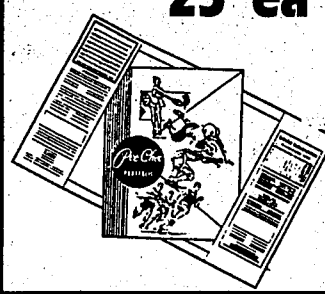

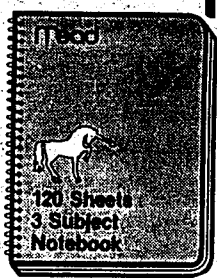

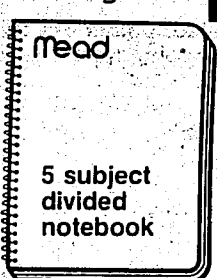

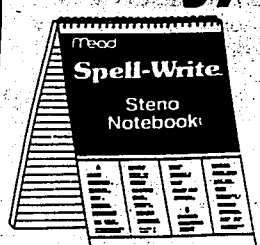

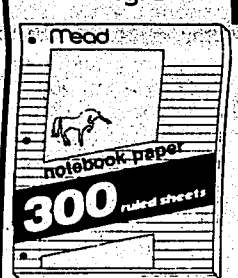

"There are probably better trained people here than students may find in their home towns," Weaver said.

Rape is more of a problem than supposed

If you think rape is a problem that isn't endemic to the University of Idaho, you're dead wrong.

Call her Sarah; it's not her real name. Sarah is a freshman who came to UI last semester and, like many other incoming freshmen, attended the parties on Old Greek Row the night before registration.

Sarah thought it was safe to party at her friend's fraternity; she found out the hard way that she was wrong. After playing some beer drinking games, a fraternity member came down to invite Sarah and some of her girlfriends to watch movies in a room upstairs.

Sarah and her friends went up to the room, but her friends left her to use the restroom. They never came back. As Sarah watched the movies, she passed out.

When Sarah woke up about 6 a.m., she noticed that her underpants were pulled down to her ankles.

"I knew I had been raped," Sarah said. "A girl knows when she has been raped."

Sarah ran home. Although she didn't report the sexual assault to the police, she told her friends at the fraternity that she had been assaulted and told them whose room she was in.

A few days later, Sarah was called by the fraternity member she had watched the movies with — the fraternity member she thought had raped her. He said that he didn't rape her, but that he was sorry if she had been raped and offered to do anything for her he could. Sarah couldn't speak; she just listened and hung up when he finished speaking.

Sarah never reported the rape to the police, nor did she ever attend counseling sessions.

"I'm a pretty strong person," Sarah said, "so I didn't think I needed counseling."

Yet, Sarah said the memory of the rape lives on; it caused a great deal of emotional anguish. It was a difficult beginning for a freshman college student.

There are undoubtedly many stories like

Sarah's. Although there were only 12 reported rapes on the UI campus last year, the number of unreported rapes is much greater. Betsy Thomas, director of the Women's Center, said that only one out of 10 rape victims actually reports the crime.

It is crucial that UI students recognize that sexual assault takes place on this campus. Situations like Sarah's are not isolated scenarios; they can happen to virtually anyone.

Only by opening our eyes to the problem of sexual assault and recognizing that it is a problem on this campus can we begin to deal with the problem. We must know what advice to give sexual assault victims, and we must be able to take steps to stop sexual assault before it happens.

The UI Women's Center and the Moscow Police Department are taking such steps, and they deserve to be commended for their efforts. Page two tells all about it. Please read it.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Realist easily dismissed

Editor:

As a newcomer to the community, I have just had my first encounter with the paid supplement The Realist in the Nov. 17 Argonaut. It's a pathetic exercise in "outreach" and easily dismissible, as it of course will be by anyone more highly evolved than an amoeba.

What disturbs me, however, is the possibility that people might mistake this twaddle for the only brand of Christian truth available. Other brands more thoughtful, more realistic, exist. We at the Campus Christian Center would be happy to introduce them to University of Idaho students.

U.S. policy fails in Latin America

The last days of 1989 were filled with events that gave hope to the people of the world who had watched the dreary years of the Cold War unfold. Eastern European events moved quickly as democratic reform replaced stagnant Stalinistic Soviet policies, and the United States press and government were quick to list these events as a victory for our anti-communist policies and democratic capitalism.

The European colonies of the Soviet empire are much closer to being sovereign nations, but this is not true of the Latin American colonies of the American economic empire. The Panama invasion did replace a military dictator with an elected government, but it showed once again that the United States is not willing to allow political events to take their natural course in Latin America.

It is appropriate that U.S. power removed Noriega since he had been propped up by U.S. power, but this continues a policy that has prevented the growth of democratic politics in Latin

CHARLES RICE

America. The lack of stability in Latin America allows U.S. presidents to have short, victorious wars that bring political benefits to the United States, but these wars have killed thousands of people and have not brought peace, democracy or stability to the region.

This can only be called a total failure of U.S. policy to date, and this failure has one main cause: the policy of backing feudal landowners who are concerned only with maintaining their position as the cream of society. The rich politicians of Latin America are not Jeffersonian Democrats; they are murderers of labor leaders, nuns and priests. These people promote Gestapo-style death squads and live in fear of true democratic reforms that will end the centuries of privilege that a few families have enjoyed.

In Nicaragua and Cuba, the U.S.-supported feudal dictators were replaced by revolutionary regimes that espouse Marxist ideals but lack the resources to create a true industrial proletariat or independent economies and so remain dependent banana republics. Castro and Ortega have evened out the economies of their countries so that the vast differences between rich and poor have been eliminated, but

Non-credited classes to begin

More than a dozen noncredit classes ranging from cooking to karate begin this month at the University of Idaho.

Coordinated by the UI's Enrichment program, the courses are just a fraction of the 170 offerings listed in New Directions, the program's official course catalog.

Most classes meet evenings and weekends, and registration is by phone, mail or in person. To get a copy of the catalog, or for more information about classes and fees, call the UI Enrichment Program at 885-6486. Here's a rundown on the offerings and their starting dates:

- Beginning Yoga, Jan. 16, 5:15 to 6:15 p.m.
- Drug Abuse and Chemical Dependency in Our Children, Jan. 18, 7 to 8:30 p.m.
- Typing for Beginners, Jan. 22, 7 to 9 p.m.
- Bookkeeping on Computers, Jan. 23, 7 to 9:30 p.m.

- Beginning Bookkeeping, Jan. 24, 7 to 9 p.m.
- Quilt Making for the Busy Woman, Jan. 25, 7 to 9 p.m.
- Active Parenting I, Jan. 25, 7 to 9 p.m.
- Computer Record Keeping for the Farmer, Jan. 27, 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.
- Beginning Kokondo Karate, Jan. 29, 6 to 8 p.m.
- Freedom From Food: How to Lose Weight and Keep It Off, Jan. 29, 7 to 8 p.m.
- Advanced Kokondo Karate, Jan. 29, 6 to 8 p.m.
- Valentine Heart Basket, Jan. 29, 7 to 9 p.m.
- Wildfare: the Art of Game Cooking, Jan. 29, 6 to 9 p.m.
- Introduction to Microcomputers, Jan. 29, 7 to 8:20 p.m.; and Jan. 30, 5:30 to 7 p.m.
- All That Jazz, Jan. 31, 6:30 to 8 p.m.
- Intermediate Conversational Sign Language, Jan. 31, 7 to 8:30 p.m.

■ WEIGHT CONSCIOUS CLASSES TO BEGIN

Two new non-credit classes aimed at people interested in controlling or maintaining their weight are set to begin this month as part of the University of Idaho Enrichment Program.

Light and luscious Low-Calorie Cooking, a one-time-only class that will meet Monday from 6 p.m. - 9 p.m., will focus on preparing lighter and healthier foods, according to instructor Mary Schwantes, a nutrition educator for the last 20 years.

Laurel Branen, a consulting dietitian specializing in the treatment of obesity and eating disorders, will teach a course on Freedom from Food: How to Lose Weight and Keep it Off.

Classes are held in Home Economics 101 and preregistration is required.

To register for either of these classes or to obtain additional information, call the UI Enrichment Program.

they remain dependent on Soviet subsidies to support their stagnant economies.

As long as the United States is unwilling to allow the natural development of governments in Latin America, the danger of radical Marxist revolution remains. The forces that lead to revolution can only be defused by true democracy, economic progress and U.S. respect for the sovereignty of all Latin American nations.

The history of Latin America shows that U.S. taxpayers' money has been wasted on military aid to inefficient, corrupt governments. It is time for the United States to switch from aiding feudalism to aiding progress, and this means ending all military equipment shipments.

Latin America needs tractors, libraries and health clinics, not guns, tanks and bombs. Soviets and Americans must deal with this issue because sending military equipment into the area only adds to the misery of the people. If the Cold War can be ended in Europe, where it started, it can certainly end in Latin America.

UI agrees to pay

$12,000 in settlement

By SHERRY DEAL
Managing Editor

The University of Idaho agreed to grant back pay and examine several aspects of hiring and promotion practices at Student Advisory Services in a confidential sexual discrimination case settlement reached in December.

In the settlement, reached after many discussions between UI President Elisabeth Zinser and the four women involved in the case, the university agreed to pay more than $12,000 in back pay to the four complainants.

A copy of the settlement was obtained by the Idahonian, and according to a copyrighted story, the complainants dropped their formal complaints against the university and agreed not to take any further legal action.

According to the report, Innam Fenton will be paid $3,200, Dianne Milhollin $3,794, Betsy Thomas $3,355 and Tiajuana Cochnauer $1,905. The UI also agreed to pay all attorney's fees and expenses.

The four complainants are still employed by the university.

The specifics of the settlement included a commitment by the university to conduct a study to determine salary equity at SAS. Any inequities in salaries are to be identified by June 1, 1990. The university will then be required to recommend necessary salary adjustments to the Idaho State Board of Education.

The university agreed to monitor SAS to ensure UI hiring and promotion policies are followed. The promotion of James Bauer from director of student activities to assistant dean of student services with a $10,000 salary increase last spring prompted the four complainants to file formal complaints with the Idaho Human Rights Commission. The university also agreed to examine the length of appointments within SAS, to revise SAS's annual evaluation procedures for employees and to counsel Bruce Pitman, dean of student services, and other SAS officials so that supervisor/employee relations will be more effective.

The settlement is not an admission of sexual discrimination by the university. Zinser said she feels the problems in SAS were due to misunderstandings and perhaps sloppy management, rather than discrimination, according to the report.

Andrus proposes increased funding

By M.L. GARLAND
Senior Staff Writer

Boise — Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus proposed dramatic percentage increases for both public and higher education state funds in his budget message Wednesday during a joint session of the Legislature.

"The budget is responsible and forward-looking," Andrus said. "It meets the legitimate needs of our people, but it also articulates a long-range vision for Idaho."

In his address, Andrus also proposed state aid for counties and a state construction program emphasizing his willingness to work with the Legislature.

Higher education would receive $130.8 million, a 13 percent increase.

"The first business of this Legislature and our state is educating our citizens," Andrus said. "My budget provides the tools."

The recommendation includes $6 million for library and laboratory equipment at the University of Idaho, Lewis-Clark State College, Boise State University and Idaho State University. Community colleges would also receive $500,000 for similar needs.

Andrus also proposed a 5.8 percent salary increase for all personnel and a 1.2 percent equity adjustment for non-classified personnel.

Andrus commended Sen. Atwell Parry's work-study program and allocated state aid to the plan for "students who otherwise would have struggled without financial support."

The proposed $903.9 million budget breakdown includes:

- Public Schools — $450.0 million
- Other Education — $193.8 million
- Social Services — $118.1 million
- Public Safety — $48.2 million
- Government (general) — $47.3 million

- Natural Resources — $19.1 million
- Health — $18.0 million
- Economic Development — $9.4 million.

The surplus for fiscal year 1990, which ends June 30, is projected at $125 million, despite earlier analysts' estimations of $100 million. Andrus' top priorities include building funds for "Idaho's children" and aid to counties.

The state's $125.1 million surplus, as proposed by Andrus, would be divided between the following areas:

- Permanent Building Account — $42.4 million
- Budget Reserve Account — $38.0 million
- Fiscal Year 1990 One-Time Items — $24.1 million
- Higher Education Buildings — $13.6 million
- Water Pollution Center — $6.0 million
- Lottery Commission Loan — $1.0 million.

Manager/secretary moves to new office

By SHERRY DEAL
Managing Editor

University of Idaho President Elisabeth Zinser's house manager has moved from Zinser's home to an office in the Administration Building.

In an interview in early December, Zinser said she thought the house manager title was misleading and interpreted by many as housekeeper. She said by moving the office into the administration building, some of the confusion about the duties of the manager might be eliminated.

Zinser planned to have the house manager stop by the president's house for about an hour each day to take care of a few housekeeping-type duties. The rest of the house manager's time will be spent performing duties as the president's personal secretary.

Susan Moffett of Moscow was hired as house manager temporarily in October, at a salary of $30,000. The Idaho Board of Education delayed making the position permanent at a meeting in November to give Zinser more time to provide information on the details of her request.

The board will consider making Moffett's position permanent at its Jan. 24-25 meeting in Boise if Zinser brings it up at the meeting, according to state board officials.

UI production selected for regional contest

By MARY HEUETT
Staff Writer

The Hartung season began last fall with a sparkling performance of The Marriage of Bette and Boo. That same spark is sending the 20 members of the play's production company to the regional American College Theater Festival Competition in Bellingham, Wash., Feb. 8.

A benefit production will be held Feb. 3 at 8 p.m. in the Hartung Theater.

The company will use all proceeds from the benefit to pay for expenses incurred in reviving the show and taking it on the road, according to technical director Dean Panttaja.

The university is paying for two nights lodging and the company's registration fees. A Ryder truck has been donated to move the sets and props. All other expenses must be paid by the production company.

"A lot of changes in the play cost money," said director and theater arts graduate student Tom Armitage.

Because the stage at Western Washington University is dramatically different from UI's stage, parts of the set had to be revised or eliminated.

Armitage said the entrances and exits that the actors use for the 33 scenes have to be changed, and the actors must prepare for a theater almost three times the size of the Hartung.

Nominated to compete for the first time since 1983, the UI production company will vie with three other regional companies for the chance to compete at the national level. Four plays were chosen from 28 productions judged in the Alaska, Idaho, Montana, Oregon, Washington and Wyoming region.

Linfield College actors will present Stop The World I Want To Get Off, University of Washington students will perform Edmond's Stories, and the Univer-

Zellner to give speech on civil rights movement

By JOE MCMICHAEL
Staff Writer

With the proliferation of intolerant monoethnic and religious groups present in this country today, it is hard to imagine a time when the situation was worse. This may be the case for the majority of college-age students who were not alive during the '50s and '60s or who have not studied the impact of such groups as the Ku Klux Klan (KKK) or the Montgomery Improvement Association (MIA).

At the same time, many among us do remember these times of painful and bloody upheaval and the slow change that came after years of protest against previously accepted notions and laws. One such man is coming to speak at the University of Idaho during Martin Luther King Jr. Week.

Robert Zellner was one of the first whites involved with the civil rights movement in Montgomery, Ala., according to Jim Rennie, ASUI program director.

Zellner grew up in Alabama, where he attended Huntington College. In 1960, during his senior year, he was asked to write a paper on the "racial problem" and its possible solutions. To research the topic, Zellner not only attended KKK meetings but also MIA gatherings, for which he and four other students who attended were later asked to leave Huntington.

Zellner was reprimanded by the school, and the KKK burned four crosses in his front yard. He then witnessed the beating of the Montgomery freedom riders at the local Montgomery bus station. At this time Zellner decided he had seen enough bloodshed and moved to Atlanta, Ga., to join the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee (SNCC) staff.

The situation did not improve, however, as he was beaten by a mob of angry whites while marching to protest the death of SNCC registration worker Hurbert Lee, who was shot to death by a white Mississippi legislator.

As a point of reference, the Earth was new for its first 600 to 800 million years. We expect to be new for only a fraction of that. The Earth was hot for ... well, many parts are still hot. Vandal basketball teams enjoy success over break

Women move to 3-1 in BSC Face Montana and Montana State weekend

By RUSS BIAGNE
Sports Editor

The University of Idaho Lady Vandals improved their record to 11-3 overall and 3-1 in the Big Sky Conference with their 66-47 victory over Idaho State University Saturday.

UI was led by Julie Balch, who scored 17 points in the contest. The Lady Vandals led by one point at halftime, but used a 16-6 run at the beginning of the second half to increase their lead to 11 points.

ISU pulled to within six later in the game, but UI was not to be denied and went on a 20-5 run to finish the game.

The victory was the Lady Vandals' 16th over ISU, which has only defeated UI once.

During Christmas break, the Lady Vandals posted wins over two other Big Sky opponents as well as a 77-70 victory over New Mexico State University Jan. 2.

The Lady Vandals held their home Big Sky opener

Jan. 5 and came out with a 57-43 victory over the University of Nevada-Reno. Although the Lady Vandals only shot 37 percent from the field, they used a man-to-man defense to come up with the win.

The next night, UI used a fast break offense and a press defense to smother Northern Arizona University 52-33. The Lady Vandals only led 23-19 at halftime, but used a 9-0 second half run to go up 38-25 and never looked back.

UI's five-game win streak ended Friday when Boise State University (9-5, 3-1) nipped the Lady Vandals 59-58 in Boise. BSU's Niki Gamez hit a free throw with four seconds remaining to give BSU the win. The successful free throw capped BSU's rally that brought them back from a 10-point second half deficit.

UI travels to Missoula to face the University of Montana Friday and to Bozeman to take on Montana State University Saturday.

Men go 6-1 over break, lose to MSU

By RUSS BIAGNE
Sports Editor

While University of Idaho students enjoyed three weeks of sleeping in and searching for ski mountains with snow during Christmas break, the Vandal men's basketball team was busy traveling around the Big Sky Conference and compiling a 6-1 record.

The first to fall to UI was University of California-San Diego Dec. 23. The Vandals then participated in the Albertson's Classic at the Boise State University Pavilion. In addition to the Vandals, BSU invited Kent State University and Brooklyn College. UI went 2-0 in the classic, defeating Kent State 70-65 and humiliating Brooklyn College 93-62. UI's Ricardo Boyd scored a career-high 26 points in the win over Kent State.

Next came the long-awaited UI-BSU matchup Jan. 4 at Boise which drew national coverage on ESPN. Once again, the Vandals' high-powered offense and relentless defense wore out the Broncos, and UI came away with a 79-61 victory. The Vandals were led by standout Riley Smith, who sank 28 points (18 in the second half) and grabbed seven rebounds.

UI returned to the ASUI-Kibbie Dome Jan. 6 to destroy Idaho State University 97-56.

Every Vandal player scored, and the win was UI's 12th straight victory over the Bengals in the Dome, dating back to 1979.

The Vandals ended the break with a road trip to Montana during which they went 1-1 with a 77-68 victory over the University of Montana and an 86-82 loss, their first in the last 11 games, to Montana State University.

In the win over Montana, the Vandals raced to a 12-0 lead in the first three minutes of the game and never trailed. It was the Grizzlies' home league opener.

In the loss to Montana State, the Vandals scored more field goals and free throws but lost due to the Bobcats' 12 successful three-point goals; UI only made two. The Vandals only shot 41 percent from the field, and only 29 percent in the second half. The Vandals were down 79-65 with 5:07 remaining and went on a 7-0 run led by Boyd, but a series of missed three-point attempts sealed the Vandals' fate.

UI is currently 13-3 and is third in the Big Sky at 3-1, behind Eastern Washington University at 10-5 and 4-0, and Weber State at 7-6 and 2-0.

Prior to the Montana road trip, the Vandals were ranked 39th in The Sporting News Top 40 poll. However, because the poll did not include UI's victories over BSU, ISU and UM, and the loss to MSU, the Vandals are expected to move up in the poll.

UI continues league play Thursday at home against the University of Nevada-Reno (6-8,1-3) and Saturday against Northern Arizona University (6-8,1-3). Both games begin at 7:30 p.m. in the ASUI-Kibbie Dome.

FASTBREAK

TRACKSTERS HITTING THE BOOKS. The University of Idaho women's track team enjoyed a successful fall semester academically. Out of the 23 athletes on the roster, 17 achieved grade-point-averages of 3.0 or better and one had a perfect 4.0. Twelve of the women have cumulative G.P.A.'s over 3.0 for their careers. The team sports a cumulative G.P.A. of 2.85 for the past fall semester as well.

NCAA looks to improve college athletic programs

By STEVE SMEDE
Staff Writer

After the 84th NCAA convention last week, University of Idaho and Washington State University athletic directors say that in spite of a few lingering controversial issues, the new reforms are a constructive step toward improving college athletic programs.

However, UI's Gary Hunter and WSU's Jim Livengood say they feel the changes will do little to improve athletes' classroom performance.

"It's an attempt to express to the public that we are moving in the direction of improved academic integrity," Hunter said in an Idahonian article. "But practically speaking, it had absolutely no effect on improving (the academic atmosphere)."

The new NCAA rules modify Proposition 42, which concerns financial aid, cuts the number of season games and practice time, and requires athletes to subject to year-round drug testing.

Originally, Prop 42 was intended to withhold financial aid to freshmen who did not meet NCAA standards for college entrance exam scores and grade point averages. The convention decided that financial aid would be made available to freshmen who did not necessarily meet all the requirements, but "not for athletic scholarships."

"It is now strictly on a common need basis," Hunter said.

At the heart of the Prop 42 amendment are the controversial college entrance exams, which under the old law would deny financial aid to freshmen whose scores fell below the required marks of 700 on the SAT or 15 on the ACT. Both tests have often been labeled as biased, which may deny opportunities for minorities and women.

Two motions that would allow athletes more study time drew heavy skepticism from many convention voters, including both local directors. The rules would supposedly provide increased study time by cutting the number of basketball games and reducing spring football practice.

"Too many games is not the problem," Hunter said. "What really needs to be addressed is the amount of time spent in daily practice."

The motion also pushes the first permissible day of practice to Nov. 1 from Oct. 15.

According to Hunter, the reduced number of football practices, from 20 to 15 days, "won't make any difference" as far as grades are concerned. However, he may support a proposal that would eliminate full contact from spring drills or cut down off-season weight and conditioning programs to help enhance academics. Hunter said the extra time allowed during spring football is an opportune time for coaches to meet with players and to "re-emphasize the importance of spring finals."

In past years UI and WSU athletic programs have followed a controversial process for random drug testing. After a 1987 court ruling against drug testing programs at the University of Washington, many schools feel compelled to walk a thin line between the law and the NCAA. Both local directors support enacting a new year-round testing program, although Livengood may find it harder to compensate for Washington's legal precedent set three years ago.

"I think there are a number of credible surveys that indicate that drug testing is a deterrent now," Hunter said in the Idahonian article. "Whether or not you believe drug testing constitutes an invasion of privacy is a different matter."

"In addition to the original motion, harsher penalties for drug use, especially steroids, will be implemented," Hunter said.

Like many other proposals, the new decisions on drug testing will most likely be defied or amended at future NCAA conventions. Expected legislation for next year's convention will focus on strengthening academics for all college athletes. Meanwhile, the new rules will run the test of time to see if they are still applicable in the NCAA in the future.

Theater students compete for award

By MARY HEUETT
Staff Writer

Four University of Idaho theater arts students have been selected to compete for the prestigious Irene Ryan Scholarship, named for the television and motion picture actress whose most memorable role was Granny in The Beverly Hillbillies.

Jean Leah Lund, Eric Jacobson, John Hurley and Jim Petersen will compete Feb. 8 in the annual American College Theater Festival Competition hosted by Western Washington University in Bellingham.

Lund and Jacobson were selected for their roles as Boo's parents, Soot and Karl, in The Marriage of Bette and Boo.

Hurley and Petersen were nominated for their performances in The Death and Life of Sherlock Holmes. Hurley played Dr. Watson and Petersen played Arthur Conan Doyle.

At the regional competition each actor will present a monologue and a scene with a partner. The actors select pieces from plays of their choice.

This year about 800 U.S. college productions were judged. Two actors from each contest were chosen to participate in regional competition.

At the regional contest the four UI students will compete against actors from eight other states. Only two actors will advance to the national finals at The Kennedy Center in Washington D.C.

Regional winners receive a $1,000 scholarship, and the two national winners each receive a $2,500 scholarship.

The scene partners at the national level are eligible for a $250 scholarship.

Both scene partners and actual competitors benefit from exposure at the regional and national levels, according to theater arts graduate student Tom Armitage.

How to spot a Bad Horror Movie

By LINDA GRIFFITTS HARPER
Guest Columnist

I've come to believe horror movies are a necessary evil in this day and age as an outlet for violence and terror. But while the well-done horror films serve a purpose, the horrible ones just leave you feeling nauseous and tired. A good horror movie is cathartic because you scream a lot, releasing pent-up tensions and frustrations.

Good horror movies have fantastic, believable special effects, and the fear of the unknown scares you more than a nasty, bloody killing. The subtleties set good movies apart, with their thought-provoking consequences and implications.

Bad horror movies manipulate your emotions to try to get you to like the characters so you will care when they die in nasty ways.

There are basically four ways to spot a Bad Horror Movie:

- Notice the director, cast and crew. Do you recognize anyone? No? This is usually a good indication of a nasty little low-budget film, and anybody with anything better to do (a week-long visit to the dentist or another face-lift) stayed completely clear. Only the most desperate young actors will stoop to play these parts, and later the lucky ones will become famous and always be ashamed of starring in the movie.

- Does the dialogue sound stilted, sophomoric or chauvinistic? Are the characters stereotyped? Is the foreshadowing about as subtle as a brick? Can you predict the plot with 98 percent accuracy (give or take a few points for the order of the murders)? Writers of these plot lines probably write B-grade Harlequin romances and soft porn stories on the side. Most of the same plots will show up over and over, no matter what the genre. They learned how to write from a mail-order video series and have just barely enough money for their next lesson each month.

- Are the set changes limited? Do many of the locations look similar? Is most of the movie outside? These are good indications since Bad Movies typically don't have much operating capital because they looked bad on paper in the first place. They only have one or two sets, so all the girls have a suspiciously similar bedroom and all the men's offices look the same. Of course, since much of the great outdoors is public property, these movies can be filmed cheaply outside.

- Probably the nastiest trick of these horror films is the wanton manipulation of your emotions to produce feelings of hatred, revenge, pity and terror. They really hit below the belt because they don't have the time or intelligence for subtleties. Because of the repeated offenses, they must also believe the audience is incapable of understanding anything else. These are the directors with heavy hands on emotional scenes. For example, the man who we know will be brutally murdered appears in a sappy scene with his pregnant wife. We are supposed to feel extra sympathy during and after his death because we know "he had so much to live for." Of course these exact words appear in his lines so we don't miss it. The killers are also physically repulsive and warm up by abusing animals. This forces us to hate them before they brutally dismember someone.

Most of these characteristics will show themselves quickly enough, so don't sit through the whole movie unless you are interested in the genre of Bad Horror Movies. Also be aware of the sequel syndrome.

Beware of any movie title with Roman numerals after it, such as Halloween XIV. Be sure to distance yourself so as not to be drawn in and manipulated unfairly. There is nothing worse than a bad horror movie when you're feeling depressed or unusually stressed; it's enough to make you kick a puppy and then maybe a third-grader. Chain saws are on sale at Sears. ...

Armitage said he has heard only good things about the other productions and expects the competition to be incredibly stiff.

"Just being selected for regional competition is a real accomplishment, although we'd certainly like to make it to the national level," Armitage said.

The competition is judged by adjudicators selected by the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, which funds and administers the competition.

Four to six of the best productions from all regions are selected to compete nationally April 16-24 at the Kennedy Center in Washington D.C.

"Most productions chosen are directed by faculty members," Armitage said. "It's pretty unusual for a show directed by a graduate student to be nominated, so I'm pretty excited."

Armitage said he is fond of Christopher Durang's The Marriage of Bette and Boo.

"The play hits one of the major problems that is wrong with American society — the American family," Armitage said.

The play is highly autobiographical, focusing on problems like alcoholism, communication and religion, according to Armitage.

"Durang feels families misuse or misunderstand what the church is," Armitage said.

Durang's mother, the prototype for Bette, expected the church to do things for her and failed to accept responsibility for her own actions, according to Armitage.

"The play is a biting satire," Armitage said. "It is funny but it also cuts right through to some important issues."

Armitage compares The Marriage of Bette and Boo to the recent film The War of the Roses. The play makes you wonder whether to laugh, cry or leave, Armitage said.

All About Eve mellow, soulful

REVIEW By SALLY GILPIN
Staff Writer

Scarlet and Other Stories, the second album from the popular British group All About Eve, is a romantic yet realistic look at love and life.

All About Eve netted top 40 hits in Britain with its first album, Martha's Harbour. The group consists of Tim Bricheno, guitar; Andy Cousin, bass; Mark Price, drums; and Julianne Regan, vocals.

All About Eve has changed a great deal since its creation in 1983. The group began as a Gothic band but found that style was too depressing to write and play. The band then changed to a retro-hippie style, using several acoustic instruments and writing about fantasy.

All About Eve then decided to become more modern and based in reality, but all the earlier influences come through on this album. One can see the melancholy romanticism of the group's Gothic period and the illogicality of its hippie period. Despite All About Eve's success in the United Kingdom, people in the United States are fairly unaware of the group's existence. When people listen to Scarlet and Other Stories, they will become as fond of All About Eve as they are of groups like Edie Brickell, the New Bohemians and Indigo Girls, who play similar types of music.

The album displays a range of emotions in its lyrics, from dark-toned soulfulness in "Only One Reason" to optimism and playfulness in "More Than the Blues."

The band members say "the album fills the void between reality and fantasy." They feel that Scarlet and Other Stories expresses

"the suspended logic of dreams." The lyrics do seem like they belong in a daydream.

All About Eve uses a variety of instruments, including banjo, cello and violin, to create different moods for each song. Yet, the songs are similar in that they all feature mellow guitar chords and a mournful synthesizer.

All About Eve's daydreamy tone is enjoyable, and listening to the album is relaxing and peaceful. Anyone who is looking for something different should consider adding this album to their music collection.

UI receives premiere IBM Lab Builder computer system

By RICH WRIGHT
Staff Writer

The University of Idaho has the first IBM Lab Builder computer laboratory in the country, and the beginning stages can be found at the College of Forestry, Wildlife and Range Sciences.

IBM presented five new Personal System/2 computers to the UI as part of a new program.

This plan, announced last October, was created to provide computer equipment for faculty and students. Under this program, the UI will receive as many as 15 additional computers, valued up to $75,000, and could receive as many as 45 in the future. Purchases made by faculty and students will give the UI credit toward grants under the program.

The Lab Builder program was initially a response to a need voiced by the college last summer. Leon Neuenschwander, associate dean of the College of Forestry, contacted Bill Accola and Max Nelson at UI's computer store and discussed the possibility of a computer lab for the college.

"The College of Forestry is one of the best schools in the country and the IBM Lab Builder program will make it better," Associate Dean Leonard Johnson said.

UI Financial Vice President Joe Geiger played a key role in obtaining this program.

"This is an excellent example of university and industry cooperation, allowing the university to maximize and leverage its resources," Geiger said.

These computers will be available to all university students and faculty. Software for word processing, graphics, spreadsheets and charting, along with color monitors, will also be available.

Possible UI land annexation to improve campus law enforcement

By DENISE BUNCH
Staff Writer

The city of Moscow might annex 370 acres of University of Idaho land, including the Shattuck Arboretum, parts of the UI golf course, and the west farm area beyond the Sixth Street extension.

The proposed annexation will put the entire university under the jurisdiction of the City of Moscow and will make law enforcement in these areas much easier.

The annexation will occur if approved by the Planning and Zoning Commission and the Moscow City Council. A public hearing on the application is planned for Jan. 24 at City Hall.

The annexation idea first emerged six months ago when several UI departments complained of law enforcement problems in the portion of the university within Latah County.

Because most of the campus is located within the city of Moscow and is patrolled by the Moscow Police Department, Moscow police are unable to respond to trespassers or unauthorized vehicles on UI land under Latah County jurisdiction.

If the proposed annexation is approved, the university should not be affected financially, and extra work will not be imposed on the police department, according to UI Facility Planning Director Joanne Reece. Reece also said that since UI will continue to include the 370 acres in its zone, all university privileges will still apply to the property.

Wassmuth's ideals are close to those of the Martin Luther King Jr. Committee. He sees his purpose much as the committee sees its own — as a matter of "building bridges to bring people together, creating bonds rather than divisions."

Committee member Stephen Lyons said he agrees that this is the recent and lasting trend in human rights. No longer is it black against white, Jew against gentile, minority against majority. Human rights groups stress that now, more than ever, we must all pull together.

"The world is growing smaller," Lyons says. "The boundaries of communities and countries are disappearing. We are now a world community."

Since its conception in 1985, the Commemoration Committee has sought to celebrate the life and message of the late Martin Luther King Jr. The ideals of equality for everyone and of reaching solutions through non-violence, cooperation and diversity have been the mainstay of this message.

Ward cites the recent developments in East Berlin as an example of how these ideals can come to a peaceful fruition if all sides are willing to work together.

Other celebration activities include:

- Friday, 7 p.m.: Dance at the Moscow Community Center

- Monday, 8:30 a.m.: Color Guard Ceremony, Administration Lawn; 9:30 a.m.: "Eyes on the Prize" Film Series (hourly showings until 3:30 p.m.), Ag. Science Auditorium 106; 12:30 p.m.: "Racism: What are We Talking About?", Ag. Science Auditorium 106; 6:15 p.m.: Candlelight March from Friendship Square to the UI SUB; 7:00 p.m.: "Celebrating Diversity," Borah Theater, UI SUB

- Tuesday, 12:30 p.m.: "Speaking Out: Minority Writers and Artists," presentations by UI students, Collette Theater; 7:30 p.m.: Speaker Robert Zellner, SUB Ballroom.
