

Advisers urge students to complete FAF's ASAP

By RICH WRIGHT
Staff Writer

Although the deadline for financial aid forms is not for another month, the University of Idaho Student Financial Aid office is urging students to turn in their applications now.

Dan Davenport, Student Financial Aid director, said students should turn in their applications soon to meet the March 9 deadline.

The Financial Aid Form (FAF) and an $8.75 processing fee must be mailed to the College Scholarship Service in New Jersey. Students should allow four to six weeks to have their FAFs processed.

"The end of January would be the latest time a student would want to send in an application if he wanted to make the deadline," Davenport said. "UI Financial Aid is basically an intermediary between the feds and the students."

Last year, more than 7,000 UI students applied for financial aid.

A second form, the UI Scholarship and Financial Aid Application Form, does not have to be mailed anywhere, but is due at the Financial Aid office by March 9.

Students applying for merit-based scholarships need to fill out only the UI scholarship form.

Applicants for need-based scholarships such as Pell Grants, loans such as Stafford Guaranteed Student Loans (GSL) or Supplemental Loans for Students (SLS) and work study programs need to fill out both forms.

The new FAF forms contain several changes, but students should not be concerned, Davenport said.

"The changes in the FAF are basically structural," Davenport said. "Make sure to read it carefully before filling out the form."

Davenport said that students who are unsure about figures for the taxable income section should just estimate the amounts.

Davenport encouraged students to contact the Financial Aid office and make an appointment with an adviser if they have any questions.

FAFs and UI financial aid forms can be picked up at the office, located in the University Classroom Center, Room 228.

Zinser cites salaries as problem

By SHERRY DEAL
Managing Editor

Faculty salaries, salary equity, accreditation, and facility and equipment upgrading are major concerns at the University of Idaho, UI President Elisabeth Zinser told legislators Thursday.

Appearing before the legislative joint Finance Appropriations Committee, Zinser presented a budget request of $12.4 million for fiscal year 1991, up 15.9 percent or $12.4 million from last year.

Zinser addressed the decreasing number of UI faculty as a major concern, explaining that the faculty/student ratio has dropped from 1-to-15 to 1-to-16 this year.

She suggested combating this decrease with a 7.27 percent salary increase in addition to this year's usual change in employee compensation to reach faculty salary equity with regional peer institutions.

Zinser said lab and equipment deficiencies, along with decreasing faculty numbers, have created accreditation challenges for the UI engineering program. She requested $7.7 million to upgrade equipment and facilities.

Council approves resolution lamenting El Salvadoran deaths

By VIVIANE GILBERT
News Editor

The University of Idaho Faculty Council voted almost unanimously in support of a resolution lamenting the recent murders of eight El Salvadoran university faculty and staff and voicing their support of academic freedom.

However, controversy continues about the appropriateness of the action and the use of the UI logo in association with such a statement.

The resolution, drafted by UI English Associate Profesor Richard Dozier, was adopted by the council Tuesday with only one dissenting vote.

The resolution states that the council "profoundly laments" the brutal execution of six Jesuit priests, their housekeeper and her daughter last November at the Universidad Centroamericana Jose Simeon Canas (UCA) in San Salvador.

The resolution also states, "The ability to think and speak freely without fear of reprisal is a right that should be guaranteed not only to those under the protection of academic freedom, but to all citizens who live in a society based on democratic principles."

The resolution calls for the continued investigation of the murders by the El Salvadoran government, and urges El Salvador President Alfredo Cristiani to pursue the matter until "all those who participated in this abridgement of civil and academic freedom are brought to justice."

An El Salvadoran army colonel, three lieutenants and four other soldiers were arrested for the murders a week and a half ago. Four UI faculty members recently sent a letter to Cristiani asking for a thorough and objective investigation of the incident. Copies of the letter were also sent to Idaho's two senators and two congressmen.

According to Faculty Council Chairman Michael DiNoto, many faculty members were not certain that the resolution is an appropriate action for the council.

"The question is whether or not this is the appropriate way to express outrage," DiNoto said Thursday.

DiNoto stressed that the issue is not the murders or the invasion of academic freedom but rather whether it was a proper role for the faculty or a matter of individual conscience.

During Tuesday's debate, DiNoto questioned the appropriateness of using UI's name and symbols in connection with such a statement.

Math assistance center branches out
Hopes to reduce fear of math

By DENISE BUNCH
Staff Writer

University of Idaho students who need help with math can now find aid at the Mathematics and Statistics Assistance Center, temporarily located in the basement of the Life Sciences Building.

The MSAC has homework assistance tables, tutorial group review sessions, video machines and computers to help students with mathematics and statistics.

Three undergraduate students are available to help students with math homework. The undergraduate students have done well in the math courses for which they provide aid.

The secretary, Marcia Shea, works at the center full time and will be available to direct students to the appropriate help table and answer any questions.

Several graduate students present scheduled tutorial group review sessions. Because some of the graduate students actually teach math courses, they can help students with homework and explain concepts that were not understood in class.

The MSAC also has video machines on which students can play elementary and intermediate math tapes. Mary Voxman, MSAC director, said the tapes have good potential to help students because they can be played repeatedly until the concept is completely understood.

Also available on a drop-in basis are three Macintosh and five IBM computers that help students learn math and statistics and advanced subjects such as calculus.

Voxman said she believes the center can ease students' fears about math.

"We are eager for students to use this," Voxman said. "We know there is a considerable amount of fear of math. We think we can help."

The assistance programs are only offered in the afternoons and evenings, but the center is open daily for students wishing to study in the MSAC area. Students are encouraged to drop in at their convenience. Appointments are not necessary.

The entrance to the center is located on the northeast side of the Life Sciences Building, across from Morrill Hall.

Bush panders to China at a great cost

It has been said several times in the United States that George Bush is a wimp. This characterization may become internationally recognized.

Because Bush vetoed a bill waiving a legal requirement that Chinese students go home for two years after their visas expire before returning to the United States or elsewhere, he has demonstrated that he is right in the palm of Deng Xiaoping's hand.

After successfully vetoing the bill protecting Chinese students in the United States from deportation, President Bush renewed his "promise" that the Chinese students wouldn't be sent back.

"No student, as long as I'm president, will be sent back," Bush said.

This is not reassuring. Remember that after the Beijing massacre last June, National Security Adviser Brent Scowcroft made a number of clandestine trips on behalf of President Bush. While Bush made blustery and pompous declarations of horror and contempt about the Beijing massacre, Scowcroft operated behind the scenes, smoothing relations between Deng Xiaoping and the United States.

Waves of arrests and detentions have plagued the Chinese ever since the massacre, and Scowcroft's presence in China has merely meant acceptance of the situation by the U.S. administration. Anita Chan and Jonathan Unger described the situation best in a Jan. 22 Nation article:

"The signal to Communist Party hard-liners in China (Xiaoping and company) was clear: The White House is willing to turn a blind eye to renewed mass jailings, and Beijing need not fear retaliatory international sanctions."

Now, however, Bush is blatant in his disregard for justice and international law. Days before the vote on the bill, the White House mounted a strong campaign that included telephone calls from Bush to wavering senators and other top administration officials, as well as personal visits by Vice President Dan Quayle.

Appropriately enough, another great deceiver, Richard Nixon, telephoned senators to say Bush's position was in the long-term interest of the United States. Nixon is an old hand at lying and buddying up to authoritarian states.

Sadly enough, the phone calls and maneuvering by Bush and his cronies evidently paid off. The vote to override Bush's veto failed four votes short of the two-thirds margin needed.

An estimated 400,000 Chinese students are studying in the United States. Although Bush may make good his pledge to see that "no student is sent back," he still insulted international law and humiliated the United States in his pandering to the interests of the Communist hard-liners. — Matt Helmick

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Helmick is a hate-monger

Editor:

In the Jan. 23 Argonaut, Matt Helmick wrote that anti-abortion protesters turned out in Boise displaying "ridiculous" signs. One of these signs read "We Shall Overcome." I believe the slogan on this "ridiculous" sign was the battle cry of the followers of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and the entire civil rights movement. I see nothing "ridiculous" about civil rights for Americans, whether born or unborn.

Thank you, Mr. Helmick, for reducing the most important moral issue of our time to grotesque comedy such as the Monty Python movies. Isn't freedom to protest a cherished right of Americans, whether a person is anti-abortion or pro-choice? The Boise protesters deserve to have their voices heard without being labeled a mad pack of hysterical, over-zealous witch hunters. Let's cut the name-calling and stick to the real issues.

It is journalists such as Mr. Hel-

U.S. should pioneer in space

The United States is not a pitiful, helpless giant wandering through history without any purpose, or so we would like to believe.

One single U.S. government agency, NASA, does seem to have a sense of purpose. Looking into the future is part of the NASA program, as much as lofting MTV and military satellites. People who control NASA's budget do not always look into the future or have a sense of vision beyond the next election. Legislators have to vote for popular programs to satisfy voters.

Defense spending has been in vogue in America since the Pilgrims practically wiped out the Native Americans who showed them how to survive on this continent. Also, since Roosevelt's New Deal, the domestic welfare budget has become a popular way of spending federal tax dollars.

Somehow NASA spending has to compete with the guns and butter lobbies. With a limited budget producing many successes and a few spectacular failures, NASA has made major progress toward making the area near the Earth accessible to science and industry.

The Soviet Union has also made major progress in space and has provided the only real competition so far. This is about to change.

The Japanese, Chinese and western Europeans have figured out that there is money to be made in space, and now the United States will face real competition. The recent announcement of a Japanese moon probe is just a single example of a turn toward space financed by Japanese industrial interests.

The Chinese became involved because of defense issues but now have a commercial capability. The Europeans have concentrated on satellite launches but also have plans for true space industry.

What would it mean for the United States to be left behind in this new space race? One need only look at Spain and Portugal to understand the result of ignoring historical forces.

Prince Henry of Portugal started a school of navigation that led to the sea voyages that brought Europeans to prominence. Portuguese and Spanish sailors brought the wealth of Asia and America to their countries, but Spain and Portugal stopped developing sailing technology.

The seas were left to the Dutch and English innovators, and the Spanish and Portuguese were squeezed out of world power. Today Spain and Portugal are quaint little countries, but they ties. If approved, part of the $7.7 million will be used for a telecommunications project that will project classes to UI outreach programs around the state.

Zinser stressed the necessity of upgrading facilities to gain further funding from industry and federal government.

Although Zinser said the engineering program cannot be improved without a modern facility, she stressed the lack of accreditation in the College of Business and Economics, which needs additional faculty to meet accreditation standards.

Accompanying Zinser were Gary Williams, UI English department chairman, and Jean'ne Shreeve, associate vice president for research. Williams addressed core curriculum concerns and Shreeve spoke about research.

The presidents of Boise State University, Idaho State University and Lewis-Clark State College presented similar budget requests and emphasized the same general concerns Wednesday.

ASUI Lobbyist M.L. Garland said lawmakers' general reactions were positive and conducive to budgeting the UI's needs.

"Senator Mary Lou Reed (D-Coeur d'Alene) and Representative Janet Hay (R-Nampa) were enthusiastic with their praise of Zinser's 1991 budget request," she said.

The overall higher education budget request for the four universities was $149.6 million. Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus recommended $130.8 million for higher education in his budget message to legislators in early January. Lawmakers are expected to exceed Andrus' proposal.

using water from a shallow aquifer until the 1960s, when they decided to drill deeper wells because of poor water quality and a lower water level in the shallow aquifer. Since that time the shallow aquifer has been recharging, but the recharging of the deeper aquifer is not understood at this time.

authorized by the president, and forbids use of UI stationery for political or religious activities.

UI communications Professor Roy Atwood, who presented the resolution to the council on Dozier's behalf, called it a "profession of lament" and stressed it was not a political statement.

The letter sent by UI Latin American Studies program faculty members Dennis West, Daniel Greenberg, Alfred Jensen and Richard Keenan was printed on UI stationery. Greenberg teaches Latin American history and the other three teach Spanish language and literature and Latin culture.

Donald Crowley, UI political science professor, said during Tuesday's debate that he did not think using the UI letterhead was inappropriate since it was clear that the letter was from the Latin American Studies program's faculty members.

UI geography Professor Sam Scripser, who cast the one opposing vote on the resolution, said he was not opposed to the letter's content or subject, but felt it was not the business of the council.

"Our business should be with the day-to-day running of the university here in Idaho," Scripser said Thursday.

Scripser said he had polled his colleagues at the College of Mines and Earth Resources before voting, and fewer than half favored the letter.

Those who signed the original letter seemed surprised at the reactions of some of their colleagues.

Greenberg said he felt it was "highly appropriate" for faculty to take strong stances on defending academic freedom, and called the murders a gross violation of not only academic freedom but their basic freedom of expression.

"Members of United States faculties have a duty to express solidarity toward their colleagues in other Western Hemisphere countries," Greenberg said Thursday.

Jensen said Thursday he was surprised by the reactions to the letter and resolution. He said he still felt the action was appropriate but also said, "In retrospect I, too, might question the use of the logo."

Keenan said that if the council voted to send the letter, the UI letterhead would be appropriate.

"I would be shocked if the majority of the faculty would not approve of such a statement," Keenan said.

West is in Nicaragua to observe the election process there and could not be reached for comment.

DiNoto said he will not send the letter to the authorities until the issue is settled. He said someone would ask the council to reconsider the issue at the next meeting.

The next council meeting will be held Feb. 6 at 3:30 p.m. in the Brink Hall Faculty Lounge. Meetings are open to the public.

'Hat's off' to Pete

Editor:

I wish to illuminate one of your top businessmen of Moscow. It is increasingly difficult to find people such as this person nowadays, and I feel he deserves this recognition.

It all started when I found out my car was unalignable after a hit and run. I was told the rear axle was bent. I called around to an assortment of body shops and decided to get an estimate from Pete's 8th Street Auto Body of 225 West 8th Street, Moscow, Idaho.

Upon my arrival to the shop the owner, Pete, spent considerable time attempting to straighten the car's axle at no charge to me. It was decided that the axle needed to be replaced, and Pete offered to get one from a yard in Spokane. He then placed the new axle into the car and then proceeded to straighten the dent that was so carelessly put into the car by the hit and run bandits, all for around $75, plus the cost of the axle, of course.

My hat's off to businessmen like Pete. I will highly recommend him to anyone who needs body work on their car.

The U.S. will face the same situation if it turns away from space and ignores the future. It can now either consign itself to the dustbin of history or continue its pioneering spirit outward to space.

The University of Idaho has a privileged position in this story because of the micro-chip production program. The U of I is part of the solution rather than part of the problem.

Portrait exhibit at SUB gallery

By STEPHANIE BAILEY
Entertainment Editor

"Faces on the Wall" is the newest Student Union Building Gallery exhibit created by Doreen McCray. The exhibit will be in the SUB until Feb. 23. McCray received her bachelor of fine arts degree in 1988 and is currently taking classes to get exposure before beginning work on her master's degree.

McCray's mother is a painter, and McCray became interested in art when she was in her third year of college.

"I didn't realize how emotions and feelings affected people until then," McCray said.

She said she likes to show expressions in her paintings through "size, composition and color."

The portraits in the SUB are of celebrities and friends, and all of them are for sale except one "that holds a great sentimental value" to her.

"They are all oils except two airbrushes," McCray said.

"I didn't want photo-realistic paintings," she said. "I wanted more of a likeness that matched the personality and character of the person."

McCray said she welcomes comments because they provide input for her art. Comments may be left in a notebook at the SUB Information Desk.

Dancers, trapezes at WSU

Washington State University's Visual, Performing and Literary Arts Committee will bring five talented dancers, eight low-flying trapezes and the choreography of Robert Davidson to the Palouse as part of its "Nourishing Arts" series.

The company will present performances Feb. 2 and 3 at 8 p.m. in Bryan Auditorium at WSU.

The work portrays the life and times of 14th-century German mystic Meister Eckart, whose religious teaching and community had some ties with the Franciscans.

The performances will include excerpts from Davidson's acclaimed Airborne: Meister Eckart.

In 1986, Davidson was commissioned by On the Boards of Seattle to create a piece for the Northwest New Works series and the 1987 New Performance Series.

Davidson and company will also perform Shakespeare Dances, a series of pieces based on love themes from the Bard. Dancers accompanied by Elizabethan music will perform scenes inspired by A Midsummer Night's Dream, Anthony and Cleopatra and Romeo and Juliet.

Davidson began his career as an aerial choreographer in 1984 after witnessing the work of Terry Sendgraff in Berkeley, California. In San Francisco he created his first trio for trapeze and two dancers, "Floating by Thunder."

Quartet from New York to perform

By SALLY GILPIN
Staff Writer

The Da Capo Chamber Players, a professional chamber music group from New York, will make their regional debut Tuesday night at the University of Idaho Administration Building auditorium.

The Da Capo Chamber Players are known for their poetic performances of 20th century "classics" and music from previous centuries.

The group consists of Joel Lester, violin; Sarah Rothenberg, piano; Andre Emelianoff, cello; Laura Flat, clarinet; and Patricia Spencer, flute. The group formed in 1970 to play chamber music with a twist. Since then the players have enjoyed success on stage and in the recording studio and have received many honors, including the Naumburg Chamber Music Award.

The Da Capo Chamber Players are participating in UI's fourth annual Auditorium Chamber Music Series, a program consisting of visiting chamber musicians.

Mary DuPree, associate professor of music and chamber series director, decided to ask the Da Capo Players to appear here because of their talent and because of the variety of music and instruments they play.

"They have a wonderful reputation," DuPree said. "They will inspire and delight the audience."

Although the group specializes in music from the 20th century, the program will feature everything from medieval songs to a piece recently composed just for the Da Capo group, Machaut is My Beginning.

The program will also include Oliver Messaien's Quartet for the End of Time. Messaien composed the piece while he was a prisoner in a Nazi concentration camp, and he and other prisoners later performed the work. Quartet for the End of Time is considered a 20th century masterpiece for its expressive and compelling qualities.

The concert will be held Tuesday at 8 p.m. Prices are $5 for students and $8 for the general public.

Graduate review at Ridenbaugh

The University Art Gallery in Ridenbaugh Hall opens tonight with the Graduate Review Show.

Students featured in the show use all types of mediums, including black and white photographs, paintings and sculpture.

The yearly event allows students to show their work in a gallery setting and gives the Moscow community an opportunity to see students' work, according to gallery director Johanna Hays.

Included in the show are works from Philip Argent, Julie Bonasera, Jane Callister, Fred Deibel, Steve Fox, Marty Fromm, Ray Haydel, Al Isakson, Janet Lange, Sally Loeb, Jennifer Rod and Peter Vincent.

"I try to present what people may or may not see in advertisements," said Vincent, who uses black and white photographs to portray what he sees.

Vincent said he uses all types of mediums in his pictures, including TV advertisements, print media and other material that he feels represents what is portrayed in media.

Although the show is quite limited in size, considering the number of artists, it does give a taste of students' art work.

The show opens tonight from 5 p.m. - 8 p.m. The gallery will have daily viewing hours Monday through Thursday from 9 a.m. - 5 p.m., Friday from 9 a.m. - 6 p.m. and Saturday from 12 p.m. - 4 p.m. The graduate review will be at Ridenbaugh Hall until Feb. 16.

The show is free to both students and the general public.

Tracksters open with indoor scoring meet

Face tough Big Sky and Pac - 10 Conference teams

By TOM BITHELL
Staff Writer

The University of Idaho men's and women's track teams will open the 1990 indoor season Saturday as they host the University of Idaho Indoor Scoring Meet in the ASUI-Kibbie Dome.

Participants in the meet will include Big Sky opponents Boise State University, Eastern Washington University and the University of Montana, as well as Washington State University, the University of Washington and University of Portland.

The event will be a dual meet in which each team competes in a one-on-one dual against the other six teams, comprising a total of 42 meets.

Men's Head Coach Mike Keller, who in his 16th year has coached longer than anyone in UI athletic history, hopes his team will finish at .500 or better in the meet.

"A lot of the events we won't have anybody in," Keller said.

"We don't have anyone for the jumping events, so we lose those points automatically."

Keller said the men should do well in most running events, however.

"We're strong in the 55, 200, 400, 800 and 3,000 meter races," Keller said.

Among those running for the Vandal men are former 200-meter outdoor Big Sky champion Patrick Williams, and Steven Lewis, last year's 55-meter indoor Big Sky champion.

The women's team should be able to fill most events, according to women's Head Coach Scott Lorek.

"I think as usual we are a smaller team, but the quality is good," Lorek said. "I think we are very solid. I'm real excited to see them run."

Unlike the men, the women should be strong in the jumping events, according to Lorek. Stacey Asplund, last year's outdoor Big Sky high jump champion, is just one of the women to look for at the meet.

Lorek said he hopes the women will finish at about .500, since the indoor season is not the team's priority.

"Our whole emphasis is our outdoor season," Lorek said. "We're traditionally stronger in outdoor track."

The meet will begin at 8:30 a.m. Saturday with field events, and running will start at 10:30 a.m. Admission is free to the public.

Long - awaited weight room opens

Two hundred turnout for opening day

By RUSS BIAGGNE
Sports Editor

It's here, finally.

Yes, the long-awaited (and promised) new University of Idaho weight room has finally opened in the Memorial Gym basement to relieve the pressure and crowding of the ASUI-Kibbie Dome weight room.

"We are just delighted it opened up," UI Athletic Director Gary Hunter said. "It will definitely relieve the pressure from the Kibbie Dome weight room."

Jim Karabetsos, director of Campus Recreation, was delighted as well but described the difficulties of opening a new weight room.

"We were having the hardest time finding a place to put it," he said.

Karabetsos said just about every building on campus was considered as a possible location, including the Physical Education Building, the Kibbie Dome and the Wallace Complex.

"We considered the basement of Wallace Complex quite seriously, but it turned out that it was too cost-prohibitive," he said.

Karabetsos said that many

"We were having the hardest time finding a place to put it."

potential locations would have been too costly.

Although the weight room contains fewer weights than the one in the Kibbie Dome, it does have various workout machines and aerobic equipment. Currently the room is 2,900 square feet, with a maximum capacity of 45 people. More weights, storage areas, ventilation equipment, and a floor in the multi-purpose area will be added later.

Thus far, student reaction to the new weight room has been positive.

"We had a very good opening day. Over 200 people turned out," Karabetsos said.

The weight room is open from 10:30 a.m. - 9:45 p.m.

Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. - 8:45 p.m. Saturday, and noon to 8:45 p.m. Sunday.

Beginning March 25, physical education and weight training classes will be held in the new weight room.

UI makes stand against Wildcats, league-leading Eagles

By JOHN CARTER
Staff Writer

Weber State College and Eastern Washington University invade the ASUI-Kibbie Dome tonight and Saturday respectively to close out the Vandal basketball team's current four-game homestand.

Tipoff is scheduled for 7:30 each night.

Eastern Washington leads the Big Sky Conference with a 6-1 record after defeating Weber State in overtime Wednesday night. The Vandals hold second place with a 5-1 record, while Weber State is in third place at 3-2. The University of Idaho is currently ranked 35th in the nation by the Associated Press.

While most of the attention this year has gone to UI and Eastern Washington, Weber State has caught UI Head Coach Kermit Davis' eye.

"We are very concerned with Weber's talent and will have to play as well as we are capable of playing to beat them," he said.

Weber boasts the nation's leader in steals, Ron McMahon.

"I feel the key matchup will be McMahon against (Sweet) Otis Livingston," Davis said.

Livingston, the Big Sky leader in assists, is questionable for this weekend's games because he has tendonitis in his left knee. Livingston missed practice Monday and has been nursing his knee all week. Davis said he is confident that reserves Ron Shields, Leonard Perry and Mike Gustavel will rise to the occasion if needed.

Davis said he is also concerned about Weber State's 6-foot-8 post Anthony McGowan and forward Aaron Bell.

"Clifford (Martin) and Riley (Smith) played great post defense for us last weekend and will need to do the same this week," Davis said.

EWU is trying to overcome a two-point overtime loss to the University of Nevada-Reno last weekend. The Eagles are second in the conference in scoring offense, free throw percentages and three-point field goals, and they lead the league in turnover ratios. EWU forward David Peed is third in the BSC in scoring and also among conference leaders in rebounds, steals, blocked shots, free throws and three-pointers. UI forward Ricardo Boyd will cover Peed.

Davis said he does not feel he needs to change his game plan from last weekend.

"We're going to come out and play tough defense and hope that will help our transition game and create easy baskets," he said.

In the Vandals' 84-59 thrashing of Northern Arizona University last weekend, 34 of the 67 shots attempted were lay-ups.

Davis said he feels a key to the Vandals' success last weekend was the support of the crowd. Nearly 11,000 fans witnessed the two games in which UI routed its opponents by 44 points.

"We sure appreciate the support the students are giving us," Davis said. "It just makes us come out and play that much harder."

FASTBREAKING! Vandal guard Otis Livingston sets up the fastbreak after stealing the ball from a University of Nevada-Reno opponent. OUTDOOR BY MATT WALO OUTLOOK

The last time I reported on the steelhead fishing on the Snake and Clearwater rivers, the fishermen were having to spend an average of 50 hours per fish caught. Now, however, that average is down to 10-12 hours per fish.

University of Idaho student Brett Tiller has been catching three to five fish per outing. He will spend an entire day on the river but lately has been limiting out before noon.

Tiller's setup consists of a bobber and a 3/4 ounce lead egg weight tied above a swivel. He then attaches a three-foot monofilament leader and a jig that is fished about six inches off the bottom.

His rigging is similar to most Clearwater fishermen, but he uses his own hand-tied jigs. These jigs must be "magic," because he has caught 21 fish ranging from 13-20 pounds since Jan. 1.

He releases the smaller fish and keeps only the large, bright ones. Although Tiller would not reveal his secret jig, he did recommend fishing from sunrise to sunset with a 10-pound test line and a black, red or white jig.

Locating a spot to fish should not be too difficult. Just drive toward Orofino, and wherever you see fishermen elbow to elbow, chances are good there is a honey hole with a lunker steelhead waiting to be caught.

WOMEN'S TENNIS ACTION. The University of Idaho women's tennis team travels to Portland, Ore., to face Portland State University today at 3 p.m. and the University of Oregon Saturday at 10 a.m. The men's and women's teams travel to Lewiston next weekend to participate in the North Idaho Open Friday and Saturday.

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL ACTION. The University of Idaho Lady Vandals will try to improve their Big Sky Conference record Saturday when they face Eastern Washington University in Cheney at 7:30 p.m.

UI OFFERS SMALL BUSINESS HELP

Students in the University of Idaho small business class need a few good small businesses to work with student teams.

Businesses with potential for growth are especially needed. Cooperating businesses must be willing to provide a balance sheet and income statement and be willing to spend time with their teams.

Members of the class can provide assistance in market planning, organization or related areas.

Services offered are all free and under the auspices of the U.S. Small Business Administration.

The student teams will be supervised by Bill Parks, a business professor and president of Northwest River Supplies, Moscow.

For more information, call or write Parks at the College of Business and Economics.

SCHOLARSHIPS

Students interested in military service after graduation can get some valuable help in funding their education from the U.S. Army.

Both two and three-year Army Reserve Officer Training Corps scholarships are available to students already enrolled in college.

Both pay UI college fees, give the student an allowance of $1,000 per year and pay up to $385 for books, supplies and educational fees. Students also receive pay for attending a six-week summer advanced camp session between their junior and senior years at the university.

To repay their obligation, students are commissioned as second lieutenants and may serve in active or reserve Army units or with the Army National Guard.

Contact the military science department for more information.

High school bands to perform tomorrow

For those who delight in band music, the University of Idaho offers the 13th Annual Bandfest this Saturday.

Featuring some of the finest high school bands in the area, the free event begins at 9:30 a.m. in the UI Student Union Building Ballroom.

The event offers music by: Hermiston High School, Hermiston, Ore.; LaGrande High School, LaGrande, Ore.; Kamiakin High School, Kennewick, Wash.; Woodinville High School, Seattle, Wash.; Mead High School and University High School, Spokane, Wash.; Central Valley High School, Veradale, Wash.; and Wenatchee High School, Wenatchee, Wash.

The invited bands are selected for a past record of superior performances.

Each band will perform a 30 minute concert which will be critiqued by 1st Lt. Steve Grimo, executive officer for the U.S. Air Force Band.

The grand finale concert will be a performance by the UI Wind Ensemble conducted by Robert Spevacek.

Grimo will be assistant conductor. Chief Master Sgt. Randall Eyles, principal percussionist for the U.S. Air Force Band, will be guest soloist. He will perform the "Concertino for Marimba" by Niel DePonte and ragtime pieces specially arranged for xylophone and band.

The day's events and the closing concert are free and open to the public.

REGISTRATION DEADLINES

Tuesday is the last day for late registration for the spring 1990 semester.

Students who fail to register by Tuesday must pay a $5 petition fee, successfully petition the Academic Petitions Committee and pay a $50 late registration fee.

Tuesday is also the payment deadline for students who have not finalized their fee payment for registration or preregistration. After Tuesday, registrations will be canceled and names removed from all official class lists. Re-registration will require the above petition process.

Tuesday is also the last day to add courses, change course sections and change from pass/fail to regular grade basis.

After the end of the two-week registration period that ends Tuesday, students will be assessed a $5 fee for drops and adds. This fee will be paid at the Registrar's Office and is applicable to each transaction (all drops and adds presented at one time.) A student adding or dropping a single course will be charged $5; a student presenting several drops and adds at one time will be charged a total of $5.

TOURS AVAILABLE AT LIBRARY

Students now have an opportunity to learn about several changes at the University of Idaho library.

The computer catalog LaserCat locates books, reports and some government documents by title, author and subject.

With this new system, students can print selected bibliographies and find subject headings for further searching. The system also lists WSU holdings.

The library now has compact disk products for locating general magazine articles as well as specialized information.

Magazine Article Summaries, an index to 200 magazines, gives summaries of the articles students select and the call number of the journal in which the article appears.

Students can come to the library Wednesdays at 8:30 a.m. or 3:30 p.m. for a tour of the library, a demonstration of LaserCat and/or a demonstration of indexes in their new format.

PUA LOOKING FOR UMPIRES

The Palouse Umpires Association will hold its registration meeting for the 1990 season Wednesday at 6:30 p.m. in the auxiliary trailer classroom located in the Moscow Junior High School parking lot.

The PUA provides umpires for school districts in Latah and Whitman counties, the UI Club Team and summer programs. Games are scheduled on weekday afternoons and weekends. Umpires earn from $50 to $200 a week depending on their availability and the number of games scheduled.

The PUA provides the instruction and training sessions for rule knowledge and umpiring techniques. Prior umpire experience is not required. Registration materials and certification requirements will be covered at this meeting. Anyone who enjoys youth baseball and is interested in earning some extra money is encouraged to attend.

For additional information, contact any PUA board member: Kent Wellner, John Fahey, Bob Goodrich, John Danforth, or Barry Carr of Princeton, Idaho.

SEMINAR FOCUSES ON EL SALVADOR

Latin America is the focal point of three International Lunch and Learn seminars during the spring semester.

All seminars are held from 12:30 p.m. - 1:20 p.m. in UCC 112 and are sponsored by the University of Idaho International Trade and Development Office and the International Affairs Committee.

The first program, scheduled for Tuesday, features Sister Andrea Nenzel, who spent two years in El Salvador as co-director of the Calle Real refugee camp. Her talk, "El Salvador: Asking Questions and Seeking Answers," covers her personal experiences and perspectives of the situation in El Salvador and Central America.

Sister Andrea is currently province leader for the Sisters of St. Joseph of Peace in Bellevue, Wash., and is a member of the steering committee for the Washington State University "Going Home" project.

Other seminars include "The Nicaraguan Electoral Process," Feb. 15, and "Main Street Latin America and U.S. Policies," March 27.
