Associate professor to speak on Latin America

A University of Idaho associate professor who recently returned from Nicaragua will present a seminar on his experiences there at the Lunch and Learn Seminar Thursday.

UI Associate Professor Dennis West will focus on his observations on the Nicaraguan pre-election process during his lecture.

West's seminar, "The Nicaraguan Electoral Process," is the second in the series "Latin America: Changing Times," sponsored by the UI International Trade and Development Office and the International Affairs Committee.

He will be the featured speaker at the second International Lunch and Learn Seminar Thursday from 12:30 p.m. - 1:30 p.m. in the University Classroom Center, Room 112.

West, who teaches in the foreign languages and literatures department, has developed several interdisciplinary courses on Latin America to help students gain a comprehensive view of Hispanic societies.

While in Nicaragua, West was an official, accredited observer invited by the Supreme Electoral Council, an autonomous branch of the Nicaraguan government, and by its executive branch, in preparation for the upcoming elections Feb. 25.

West has supported a proposal passed by the UI Faculty Council lamenting the deaths of El Salvadoran university faculty and staff.

He was particularly concerned about the death of colleague Ignacio Martin Baro, an editor for the International Public Opinion Report, who was murdered in San Salvador for conducting a public opinion poll about poverty, health and politics.

As co-director of the UI Latin American Studies program, West plans to develop courses on Latin America in a way that blends politics, economics, literature, history, art, film and anthropology.

He has received National Endowment for the Humanities and Fulbright grants to develop interdisciplinary approaches to Brazilian studies.

West serves on the board of directors of the Coalition for Central America and on the Latin American Studies Association Film Council. He has been on Amnesty International missions to Uruguay, Guatemala and Costa Rica.

He was also a guest professor of Latin American literature at Pontificia Universidad Catolica del Peru in 1973 and has lived or traveled extensively in all the major countries of Latin America and the Iberian Peninsula.

The third and final program in the series will be held March 27, with a panel of UI Latin American students. UI history Assistant Professor Dan Greenberg will moderate the panel discussion, "Main Street Latin America and U.S. Policies."

All seminars are free and open to the public.

Library hopes for state funds for renovations, expansions

By CHARLES RICE
Staff Writer

The University of Idaho library is crowded, but help is on the horizon. A proposed library expansion is expected to be approved by the Idaho State Legislature.

The bills that provide funds for new state construction such as libraries are not usually voted on until near the end of the legislative session, but no apparent problems have developed so far.

"The UI library needs to be totally renovated as well as added on to," said Ron Force, associate dean of library services.

"This building is 30 years old, and its heating and cooling systems are wearing out, so there are 15-degree differences between one floor and the other," Force said. "The electrical system is also near capacity because of the computers that have been added."

Force said that the renovation and addition has been divided into two phases.

"Phase one of the renovation involved remodeling the basement and was completed last year. Phase two will add 59,000 square feet of space and should be adequate till the year 2005," Force said.

Currently the library is used heavily, according to Force.

For example, the library circulated 294,000 books and journals last year, and 1,270,000 photocopies were made in the library during the same period. This was the result of 494,000 visits, Force said.

According to Force, the library would be used even more if it were more comfortable and less crowded. He said an open and more flexible building is needed.

One of the main complaints about the library is the whistling windows on the north side. These windows were installed to be easily removed for library expansion and will be eliminated if the expansion is funded.

"If funds are granted this year, construction will start in 1991, and will take 18 to 36 months for completion," Force said.

The UI library currently contains 1,500,000 items, including journals, microfiche items and government documents, as well as books. With such a large number and variety of items, research materials are often difficult to find.

"We are limited by lack of money, but we do all we can to get the material to the patron," said Linda Fitch, circulation department supervisor. "We have a responsibility to sell the library and increase circulation."

Many students have complained about the new computer system that replaced the card catalog, but library employees say the card catalog was becoming too large and expensive.

The new system is less expensive to operate than the card catalog system.

"People don't have time to spend wandering around the library, so we need an effective automated system that will give a person with a personal computer complete access to all the information in the library," Fitch said. "This computer system is a step in that direction, but we need to find a system that will work in the year 2000."

Fitch also said it is important for UI's library to be up-to-date.

"This is a land-grant institution, and one of our roles is to provide information to the whole state," Fitch said. "We need to be able to provide complete service to even the smallest library in the state."

"One result of low funding is a lack of new books in the library. As a result, interlibrary loans have tripled every year for the last several years," Fitch said.

Last year the library borrowed 5,882 items from other libraries and loaned 13,924 items to other libraries.

"Faculty and graduate students use our service the most, but undergraduate students are a significant portion of our service," said Jeanne Wagner, interlibrary loan supervisor.

Wagner said that the library's biggest problem is lack of space.

"Our room is too small to deal with the number of people we have to deal with," Wagner said.

Library employee Robert Nelson said he did not feel the overcrowding was a big problem for library workers.

"It's awkward, but not so much a really big problem," Nelson said.

This is Nelson's second year working at the library.

Library employee Stephanie Kuck said the shelves are overcrowded, but that the library staff is trying to alleviate the problem by moving books into storage.

Kuck said the library recently began moving an old series of journals to the basement.

"We're trying to make as efficient use of space as possible," she said.

Kuck said that there are usually overcrowding problems in the Reserve Room, especially at night, and in the Browsing Room between classes.

"They're always packed," Kuck said.

This is Kuck's second semester working at the library. Both she and Nelson are irregular help employees and UI students.

Nelson said the overcrowding creates problems for everyone.

"It's tough for both us (the workers) and them (the library patrons) to work around each other," Nelson said. "It's something everyone has to deal with."

Columnist warns of "the silent infection"

By MONA MILES KOEHLER, R.N., F.N.P.
Guest Columnist

If asked to name three of the most prevalent sexually transmitted infections, would chlamydia be on the list? Chlamydia has not received the media coverage AIDS and herpes have, so many people are not aware of this serious sexually transmitted infection. Called the silent infection, chlamydia often has no symptoms. However, unlike AIDS or herpes, chlamydia can be eliminated by treatment with antibiotics.

Chlamydia is an epidemic among reproductive-age adults in the United States. More than three million cases occur yearly. The highest rate of incidence is among 19- to 25-year-olds.

In the Moscow-Lewiston-Clarkston area, the incidence of chlamydia is estimated at 10 to 20 percent. The University of Idaho Student Health Center reports that one in 10 students tested for chlamydia has the infection, often without symptoms.

Chlamydia affects both men and women, regardless of sexual orientation, and is easily spread through sexual contact. Though rarely fatal among adults, complications are serious. Complications include sterility or infertility in women and men, an arthritis syndrome in men and ectopic or tubal pregnancy. One in seven American women between 20 and 40 years of age suffers from pelvic inflammatory disease (PID), often the result of chlamydia. A pregnant woman may pass chlamydia to her infant during childbirth. This can cause serious eye infections or pneumonia in the infant.

If symptoms of chlamydia do occur, they can range from mild to serious, requiring hospitalization. Men infected with chlamydia may experience painful urination, a watery discharge from the penis or a dull aching or swelling of the testicles. The symptoms in women may include vaginal discharge, more painful or heavier menstruation, bleeding between periods, lower abdominal pain or painful urination. The rectal area of men or women may become irritated and bleed.

Without symptoms, chlamydia may go undetected for 10 to 15 years. Lab tests are needed to identify chlamydia. Nurse practitioners and physicians are not always able to detect an infection during an exam. Since chlamydia testing is not routine, one must request a chlamydia test. An infection can be detected seven to Those interested must interview with UI ROTC personnel.

21 days after exposure.

A negative test means a person does not have chlamydia. If a lab test is positive for chlamydia, tests for other sexually transmitted diseases are recommended. One study showed that more than 30 percent of men infected with chlamydia also had a gonorrhea infection.

Chlamydia is an obligatory intracellular parasite. In the body, it acts like bacteria and can be treated and eliminated with common antibiotics. Because natural immunity does not develop after a chlamydia infection, one can become infected repeatedly with each new exposure. When one member of a couple is infected, both partners should be treated. Many practitioners recommend a repeat chlamydia test after antibiotic treatment to be sure the treatment was successful.

Tests and treatment for chlamydia are available at the Student Health Center and at public and private clinics and can help reduce the risk of this silent infection. Like most sexually transmitted infections, condoms and other barrier methods of contraception prevent the transmission and reduce the spread of chlamydia.

Stabilize education with federal funding

As almost everyone knows, the University of Idaho has a core curriculum. The general catalog says that the core's purpose is to help students "gain the intellectual curiosity that makes education a life-long enterprise."

Having been enrolled in several of these core classes, I did become curious about why these classes are so crowded if they are so important.

I had heard that the core classes were originally supposed to be taught by using the Socratic method, which emphasizes the interchange between student and teacher through questions and answers. Current crowded conditions in core classes make this difficult.

I asked philosophy department Chairman Marvin Henberg about the history of the core program and how this crowded situation developed.

"There had been a strong feeling among the faculty that there were no general education goals before the core requirement was added in 1983," Henberg said. "There was a general humanities requirement, but 256 courses qualified."

"This allowed some students to repeat work that they had done in other classes. For example, I had students in my logic class, which technically is a humanities class, who were merely repeating work that they had done in boolean algebra."

"I think that the ideals of the core were to have a lot of writing in the humanities classes and discussion as well as just lecture," Henberg said. "However, the average enrollment has been so high that this has been very difficult to achieve. The classes were originally supposed to have no more than 35 people, but usually they have 50 or more, and this makes debate and dialogue very difficult."

"There are no bad guys in this scenario because the resources are stretched thin in every part of this university," Henberg said. "The current enrollment is too high for the level of funding at this time, but acting Letters and Science Dean Kurt Olsson has identified the main pressure points in the core, and the administration is pushing for adequate funding."

Both Gov. Cecil Andrus and President George Bush have said that education should be a high priority in state and federal budgets. These are fine sentiments, but they should be backed by hard cash and firm commitments that will not fail in the future.

Our up and down Idaho economy has made planning for future budgets difficult for any state institution. The UI has been in bad budget situations for so long that the funding crisis at this institution has become the status quo.

Perhaps it is time for federal funding for core requirements at all land-grant schools. This would provide the stability needed for proper education and allow our state and federal politicians to make some political points if they were to support this policy.

Farrar's cartoon reveals LDS stereotypes

Editor:

The political cartoon in the Feb. 6 Argonaut illustrates more than hypocrisy. It shows the danger of stereotyping and how even the most enlightened individuals suffer from the disease.

Whether it's the stereotyping of a race, a religion, or a sex on the basis of the behavior of a handful of individuals, the damage is the same. If some percentage of the members of a specific group claim, preach or appear one way but behave in some way we define as opposite to the claims, preaching or appearance of the group, it does not negate the ideals of the group as a whole.

If there are members of the LDS Church who are purchasing lottery tickets, it is only themselves they hurt. The values of the church remain unchanged. If, on the other hand, non-members of the LDS Church both from Utah and southern Idaho are responsible for the high ticket sales in southern Idaho, then the cartoonist has only shot himself in the foot.

Keeping 2.0 GPA 'minimal burden' for ASUI officers

Editor:

The ASUI is once again embroiled in a fighting match, with the academically proficient senators vs. the academically deficient senators. The issue is whether the ASUI president, vice president and senate should be expected to maintain a 2.0 grade point average while holding their paid positions in office.

One must ask if those opposed to the idea have a conflict of interests. Are they advocates for the students, or are they fighting for their jobs? While the student body would like to see their elected representatives at least pass classes, some senators want to take their $100 a month and stay in their positions of power without penalty as they fall behind in their studies. In effect, the students are subsidizing poor academic performance.

Second, keeping a 2.0 GPA is a minimal burden. Remember that elected ASUI officials may take fewer than 12 credits and still maintain full-time student status. With this option, a senator may make more time for the ASUI by taking fewer credits. Even those senators who take 12 credits for financial aid reasons must realize that a "C" average is not asking anyone for outstanding academic performance on their part. Therefore, the effect of this bill would not be for senators to worry about grades but merely to show up for class.

Third, are the opposing senators putting their positions ahead of school? They should not. Instead, the elected officials should be models to their constituents. The ASUI recognizes this by requiring candidates not to be on academic probation when they run for office. Once elected, it is not unreasonable to require them to maintain that average. If these senators cannot manage

Condoms are necessary to avoid STDs

What a party! That is what the guys say all night. The beer flows steadily and the women are pretty. Most of us are single and eye potential dance partners across the room. We laugh at the courageous fools who try their luck with the gorgeous women and fail. The humor continues until we see Eric and Tina swinging on the dance floor.

Eric is one of the few lucky guys who has a steady girlfriend. Soon after we notice them, they adjourn to his room on private business, and I start to imagine a possible conversation Eric and Tina could have while alone.

Eric says, "If you really love me, you will have sex with me." Tina could respond, "I really do love you, but do you have a condom?" If Eric says, "I get no feeling from a condom," Tina might respond, "All the guys I know get plenty of feeling from a condom. What is the matter with you?" Eric and Tina could be just like

hoans, the number of AIDS victims in Idaho is small. But the Washington state border is just a few miles away, and if you think you can't get AIDS, you're dead wrong.

Since the AIDS discovery in 1981, AIDS has been a major issue concerning the United States and even the world. Yet many people who have multiple sex partners fail to use condoms. The cost of 50 cents to buy a condom from a vending machine must outweigh the risk of dying or killing someone from unprotected sex.

My point is not to condone premarital or extramarital sex or to imply that using a condom will guarantee safety from the AIDS virus. But for those who choose to have sex, the use of a condom can reduce the exchange of body fluids, which is the only way the deadly virus can be spread.

According to Fran Martin, a registered nurse and the AIDS coordinator and educator for the Whitman County Department of Public Health, "Washington ranks 14th among the states in the number of AIDS patients, with a cumulative total of 1,466. There are 52 AIDS patients in Spokane County alone."

What about the Palouse? According to Barbara Kirschner, a registered nurse for Idaho Public Health District 2, which includes Latah, Nez Perce, Idaho, Clearwater and Lewis counties, "There are 49 cases of AIDS in Idaho, and currently eight per-this minimal burden, what does this say about the quality of our student leadership?

Additionally, critics of this bill are not realistically representing the student body. In most cases, showing up for class will get a person a "C." If so, these senators on probation must not be showing up, which means they must have different priorities than the majority of the students. The senators must be students first so that their decisions will reflect the concerns of their constituents.

Maintaining a 2.0 GPA would also bring the ASUI online with the rest of the university. Most majors require more than a 2.0 GPA to enroll in upper-level classes. Athletes at this school must maintain a 2.0 GPA as well as spend more time at their activities than the ASUI. The Residence Hall Association and the Panhellenic officers are expected to keep up their grades without the advantages the ASUI enjoys. Therefore, we in the senate have little to complain about.

The academic qualifications bill should be supported because: the burden is minimal; academic proficiency is a measure of responsibility/quality so that the ASUI will reflect the concerns of the students; a position of privilege should not come before school; and the ASUI would be online with university policy.

Grigsby 'fails to see' real junk bond results

Editor:

This letter is in response to Bill Grigsby's pathetic commentary on Wall Street (in the Feb. 6 Argonaut). Mr. Grigsby has a lot of nerve talking about the previous decade so unrealistically. Like most doomsayers, Grigsby fails to see the real results of the '80s, especially the junk bond industry.

Contrary to popular belief, the junk bond industry did not provide a vehicle for investment bankers to reap huge commissions, with the spinoff being dear old grandma losing her retirement money by investing in poorly structured, leveraged buy-out deals. What the junk bond industry did is revitalize an otherwise sluggish economy. Leverage buy-outs have enabled overdiversified companies to sell off mismanaged assets and concentrate on the products that made them successful in the first place.

Junk bonds also spawned an incredible burst of entrepreneurship. For example, it was junk bonds that enabled visionary Craig McCaw to create one of the largest cellular phone companies in the country and in the process spark a thriving industry that has created thousands of jobs nationwide.

In respect to Grigsby's comment on greedy brokers who invest in bogus junk bond deals "to sell asbestos scraps to the Mexican government," this absurd comment tries to imply that a broker's sole purpose is to rip people off. Isn't Mr. Grigsby aware that a broker's reputation is built on his or her ability to find value in the market? Even if an investor bought stock in 1987 at the top of the market, had he or she kept his or her securities through the crash and the following months, the investor would still have made a profit, since the market rallied to an all-time high roughly a month ago.

In short, as a finance student at the University of Idaho, I resent the implications of Bill Grigsby's commentary. It is biased, false and simply ignorant of the world and its changing yet thriving economy. Next time Mr. Grigsby wants to insult the financial industry and the executives who are working diligently to give America a competitive edge worldwide, he had better get his facts straight.

AIDS has raised such a concern that it seems to overshadow concerns of other sexually transmitted diseases (STDs) such as chlamydia, herpes and gonorrhea. According to Humanist magazine, "Three million Americans annually, with 15 to 25 percent being women, are infected with chlamydia. Each year chlamydia causes more than 250,000 deaths in the United States."

"Chlamydia is by far the most commonly spread STD," says Dr. Robert R. Leonard of the UI Student Health Service.

As for herpes and gonorrhea, according to Kirschner, "From July 1988 to July 1989, there were 13 reported cases of herpes and nine cases of gonorrhea in District 2." Chlamydia, gonorrhea and herpes are the only STDs besides AIDS that must be reported to the state health department.

If AIDS and STDs are not enough reasons to promote the use of condoms, perhaps unwanted pregnancies will. Condoms have been tested to be 70 to 90 percent effective in preventing pregnancy. Unwanted pregnancy may lead to abortions or to premature marriages, which may lead to divorce and other social problems.

The problems our society faces from lack of condom use can possibly be explained by both of the following causes. First, people are not adequately informed as to the dangers they encounter by having unprotected sex. Second, the American culture has not learned the sense of responsibility that goes with sex.

The solutions to these problems are simple. If the media would lift its ban against the use of the word "condom" on television programs, we could promote the use of condoms for preventing AIDS, STDs and unwanted pregnancies, thus showing responsibility.

Our society is in grave danger from the AIDS epidemic unless we do something. According to Humanist magazine, "It is expected in the 1990s for AIDS to leap ahead of cancer and heart disease to become the number one cause of death."

Vandals defeat Grizzlies 75 - 60

Riley Smith breaks 1,000 point mark

By RUSS BIAGNE
Sports Editor

Saturday the University of Idaho men's basketball team used tenacious defense to record a 75-60 victory over the University of Montana.

In addition to the Vandals' 15th straight Big Sky Conference victory in the ASUI-Kibbie Dome, center Riley Smith scored 24 points and became the first player in UI history to score more than 1,000 points in just two seasons when he hit an eight-footer with 5:33 remaining in the first half. He has scored 1,017 points in his UI career.

Although obviously ecstatic about his achievement after the game, Smith made it seem like a job.

"I just do what they ask of me," he said.

Smith said that he felt great about the scoring record.

"I'm just glad I was the first to do it," he said.

It was a tough game from the start for the Vandals, who struggled early against a surprisingly tough Montana zone defense. UI dominated early, however, largely due to the inside play of Smith, who scored UI's first six points.

Forward Ricardo Boyd (10 points) scored the next two, but UM answered with a seven-point run and led the Vandals 11-10 with 12:23 remaining. UI regained the lead 20-16 with 8:54 remaining on a three-pointer by Ron Shields (five points). But UM came back to tie the game at 24 and trailed by three, 30-27, with four minutes remaining.

UI then came alive again and outscored the Grizzlies 12-8 for the remaining four minutes. The Vandals were sparked by Clifford Martin's two commanding dunks, with assists from Otis Livingston.

Martin came off the bench to score 12 points in the game while Livingston kept his eyes on the Big Sky assist record by tallying 12. He also had five steals and six points.

In the second half, the Vandals relied on their tenacious defense, but the game stayed close as neither team had runs larger than four points until UI's five-point run in the final two minutes. The tide turned, however, when the Grizzlies abandoned their effective zone defense with about six minutes remaining. This opened up the middle for Smith, who then scored the next seven Vandal points, including a three-point play when he was fouled by UM's Daren Engellant. All assists went to Livingston.

Although UI defeated Montana by 15, Vandal Head Coach Kermit Davis had different feelings.

"The game was not a 15-point game. It was a seven- to a nine-point game," he said.

Davis said he felt that the Grizzlies played well and made UI earn every basket, but he cited the Vandals' defensive play as

Career Opportunities In The Northwest

Wang Laboratories, Inc., a major vendor in the computer industry, with over $3 billion in sales annually, is looking for motivated individuals to join its Associate Marketing Representative Sales Training Program.

Since you will probably want to stay in the Northwest, these training opportunities are located in Seattle, Portland and Boise.

This is a 12-month training program that includes both formal classroom training on product knowledge and selling techniques as well as actual on-the-job training through the guidance of a mentor.

This provides a smooth transition from college to the working world as evidenced by the program's 90% success rate after the training is completed. The compensation package includes one of the best benefits packages in the industry, and a $26,000 first-year salary.

If you are a recent graduate or are planning to graduate this spring, please visit your Placement Center within the next week to inquire about getting on our interviewing schedule. WANG will be on campus Wednesday, March 14, 1990. We are an Equal Opportunity Employer.

Lady Vandals sweep

By TOM BITHELL
Staff Writer

The University of Idaho women's basketball team swept in-state rivals Idaho State University and Boise State University over the weekend to gain second place in the Big Sky Conference standings.

Friday night the Vandals beat ISU 61-45 and Saturday they crushed BSU 89-46.

Against ISU, the Vandals out-shot the Bengals 51.2 percent to 25 percent and out-rebounded them 39 to 35. The Lady Vandals were led by Hettie DeJong and Krista Smith with 12 points each. Kelly Moeller came off the bench to score 11.

Amanda Green, the only Bengal to score in double figures, led ISU with 10 points.

Saturday night the Vandals thoroughly beat BSU. The UI defense held all Broncos to below 10 points each while five Vandals scored in double digits.

Sabrina Dial, who was held to eight points against ISU, led all scorers with 18. Starters Krista Smith and Hettie DeJong scored 15 and 12 points respectively, while Kelly Moeller and Kortnie Edwards came off the bench to add 11 and 10 points.

The Vandals shot 50.8 percent to BSU's 29.8 percent and dominated the boards by a 57-26 margin.

UI is now 7-3 in the Big Sky and 15-6 overall.

The women will be on the road this week at Northern Arizona University and the University of Nevada-Reno, the two teams at the bottom of the conference standings. The women defeated NAU 52-33 and UNR 57-43 earlier this year in Moscow.

Tennis teams dominate tournament

By J.C. CARTER
Staff Writer

The University of Idaho tennis teams made an impressive debut in the ASUI-Kibbie Dome last weekend, with the women's team finishing at 3-0 in tournament play and the men finishing at 2-1.

The tournament, sponsored by the Mark IV Motor Inn, included 12 men's and women's teams from the University of Montana, Montana State University, the University of British Columbia, UI, Lewis-Clark State College and Washington State University.

The men's team throttled the University of British Columbia 9-0 Saturday and followed up on Sunday with an 8-1 victory over the University of Montana. The only loss was a default to UM because of disciplinary action.

UI's No. 1 player, Scott Anderson, went undefeated in tournament play and was named the tournament's Most Valuable Player.

Another bright spot for UI was the play of John Moskowitz, who went undefeated (3-0) in his first collegiate matches.

UI Head Coach Dave Scott said many positions on the team are up for grabs.

"John's play showed us that we have some good depth on this team, and guys are going to have to play hard to earn their spots," he said.

In women's play, UI defeated Montana 6-3 and went on to beat British Columbia 7-2. The team is now 3-1 overall.

The women's No. 1 player, junior Patricia Shanander, went undefeated in the tournament and was also named the tournament MVP.

Scott said he feels Shanander's success was based on determination.

"Patricia is on a roll," he said. "She's an extremely good player and has great motivation to win."

Shanander and her older sister Cathy won all their doubles matches and have their sights set on a Big Sky Conference championship this year. They have now taken second in the BSC for two years straight and are favored to return to the finals.

Scott said he feels the tournament was great preparation for Big Sky Conference play.

Both teams play their next matches against LCSC in Lewiston, the women on Feb. 23 and the men on March 12.

"I was pleased, really, for the 40 minutes for the way we played defensively," he said.

Davis said the Vandals' defense caused 20 Montana turnovers (UI only had eight), which was the other key to the game.

Montana Head Coach Stew Morrill highly commended the Vandals for their victory.

"They've only lost four games this season for a reason," he said. "They're a good basketball team."

Morrill said that a team has to play perfectly to beat the Vandals.

"As good as they are right now, you have to play near perfect to beat them," he said.

With the win, UI improves to 10-2 in the BSC, while UM falls to 5-6.

Wednesday night in the ASUI-Kibbie Dome the Vandals face a Boise State University team that Davis says "has a lot of confidence right now." The Broncos are 5-5 in the conference and are riding a two-game winning streak over Weber State College and Eastern Washington University. The game is UI's final home game of the year and begins at 7:30 p.m.

Lots to do on Valentine's Day

Commentary By SALLY GILPIN and BETH BARCLAY
Staff Writers

Do you have any idea how you will spend Valentine's Day? Will you have dinner with your hon- ey? Or perhaps take in a movie with friends? Or maybe you are not sure what you will do.

Don't worry. The Argonaut entertainment staff has been busy spanning the globe (or at least Moscow) looking for perfect ways to celebrate Valentine's Day. Here are some suggestions: Moscow and Pullman are filled with restaurants that plan to serve special Valentine's Day dinners. Most packages include dinner, dessert and beverages, all for one price.

If dinner is a little too ordinary for you, how about breakfast? A romantic breakfast for two would be a nice way to begin your day.

A long drive in the country can be a romantic break from the ordinary. You can just sit in silence and admire nature's beauty, or you can turn up your stereo and sing mushy love songs as loudly as you want, or have a heart-to-heart chat about nothing in particular with your Pookie Bear.

Enjoy some of the cultural events that Moscow has to offer. There is an abundance of musi- cal, theatrical and artistic ways to spend your Wednesday evening. Look in this section of the Argo- naut and in other newspaper entertainment sections.

If you are currently in between sweethearts, why not take care of number one? Make yourself feel romantic with a bit of pampering.

"I'd like to spend it getting an 'A' on my accounting test and enjoying the game."

— Chuck Spencer
UI student

Put away the homework, forget about the dirty dishes, put on your favorite tape, make your favorite snack, and hop in the tub with the novel of your choice.

University of Idaho students have these suggestions for Valen- tine's Day:

"Spend the day with someone special." Lisa Holloway

"I'd like to go to a ski lodge and sit in front of the fire drinking hot buttered rums with my girl (who- ever she may be), just enjoying a week of skiing." Rod Falkenberg

"I'd throw a gihugent party in my dorm. It would be an all-cam- pus party with Coors trucks, not just kegs. Live entertainment from Bon Jovi, and I'd ask God for no snow." Chris Allen

"Sitting at home watching the snow." Dan Brown

"I would like to go somewhere warm and lie on the beach." Diane Deters

"Cliff-diving in Acapulco with the short blonde with the black leather jacket that's in Miller's 151 econ class at 10:30." Mike Fitzgerald

"I'd like to spend it getting an 'A' on my accounting test and enjoying the game." Chuck Spencer

"I'd like to go to Greece for a fun-filled, romantic vacation." Julie Benton

Finally, we thought we would share our own plans for Valen- tine's Day fun. Beth says she will concentrate on her new-found independence by ordering tons of fashion accessories from the home shopping channel and set- ting the record for exceeding her credit limit. Sally says she will go bowling with a man who has his own shoes.

Whatever you do, make sure it is out of the ordinary. Anything new and different can be inter- preted as romantic.

Ward album deserves a listen

REVIEW By JAMES ROBERTSON
Staff Writer

Bill Ward, the original drum- mer for Black Sabbath, has just released his first solo album after a 10-year absence from the music industry. The album, Ward One: Along The Way, features 26 guest musicians, including Ozzy Osbourne, Zakk Wylde, Jack Bruce and Lanny Cordola.

If the mere mention of Ozzy

Osbourne makes you want to run out and buy this album right away, stop. You most likely will be disappointed with it.

Along The Way sounds nothing like old Black Sabbath and bears little relation to the music Ozzy is currently producing. If anything, this album reminds me of old Ummagumma-era Pink Floyd with a heavy metal flavor. Also evident is a bit of a Sgt. Pep- per's-style Beatles influence.

Production-wise, Along The Way is more complex than most of today's rock. Many of the songs segue directly into others. Overall, the album has a rich, lay- ered sound.

Ward's lyrics are introspective and at times are so enigmatic that it is hard to relate to what he is singing about. But this album manages to overcome this prob- lem and succeeds in taking the listener on an interesting tour through Ward's private past.

The material on Ward One: Along The Way is not the type that will get air play on mainstream radio stations, so it is not often that a record label will make and release this kind of album. This is too bad, because Ward One: Along The Way is well-deserving of a couple of listens.

If you like progressive rock/ metal and have not heard a good cohesive theme album lately, you might want to pick this one up.
