Petition forces Marriott referendum

By TRACY PEEL
Staff Writer

A petition calling for a referendum on food services at the University of Idaho has received enough signatures to send the issue to a vote by the entire student body.

"Currently we have 906 signatures," ASUI Sen. Bill Heffner said late Monday night.

According to the ASUI Constitution, only 840 signatures are needed to force a referendum vote.

ASUI Sen. John Goetsché estimated that they would have 1,000 signatures by today. The two senators are getting more than the required number of signatures to make up for illegible signatures, double signatures and joke names.

Heffner, Goetsché and ASUI Sen. Bill Broadhead have been gathering signatures to force the referendum because the ASUI Senate failed to pass a bill calling for a referendum on the future of University Dining Services.

The senators collected signatures outside the Wallace Complex Cafeteria and sent petitions to Greek houses. They said they were surprised by the response they received. According to Heffner, people were standing in line at the Wallace Complex to sign the petition.

"We never touched the clipboard," Heffner said.

At the Delta Delta Delta sorority, 37 out of about 40 residents signed the petition, and at the Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity, 31 out of 40 members present signed the petition.

According to the senators, people for and against Marriott signed the petition, with about one out of 10 supporting Marriott.

"The students are understanding the petition as something is being done, but I don't think they

Asbestos rampant at UI, removal process slow

By RICH WRIGHT
Staff Writer

Thousands of feet of asbestos blanket the University of Idaho campus, and although UI Physical Plant employees are working daily to remove it, the asbestos probably will not be completely gone for many years.

"I would say it will be 20 years before all of the asbestos is completely removed from campus," said Jim Peterson, foreman of the UI Asbestos Abatement Shop, a department of the physical plant. "We're just working a section at a time, depending on which areas need immediate help."

Asbestos removal on campus is time consuming partly because of a lack of workers in the asbestos abatement shop. The asbestos removal crew consists of four workers, including Peterson, who do most of the removal on campus.

In the past, as many as eight workers have been employed at one time. Peterson said he believes that the asbestos removal would be much faster and more effective if more workers were employed.

"In the past we've had double the workers we do now, and the smaller crew limits the amount of work we can do at one time," Peterson said. "In larger jobs we are forced to go to independent companies, and have to bid for a contract. This takes much more time."

An example of this was the asbestos removal that was necessary during the recent Vandal Cafe renovation.

When the renovation began, University Dining Services employees did not expect such a large-scale removal to be necessary. Because time was a factor, contractors from an independent Spokane firm were called in to help.

While workers from the Spokane firm concentrated on removing floor tiles that contained asbestos, physical plant employees worked underneath the cafe, cleaning and repairing the utility tunnels and the electrical steam tie-ins.

One of the biggest concerns was removing the tiles without stirring the asbestos fibers. If the fibers had been disturbed, the Vandal Cafe opening may have been delayed again. Fortunately, the tiles were removed without any major problems.

The asbestos abatement shop is currently removing asbestos in the Memorial Gym sub-basement, in the Gauss Engineering Building and in the Sixth Street greenhouse. The asbestos removal crew will begin working at the Continuing Education Building next week.

Asbestos can come in many different sizes and forms, ranging from a white fluffy material to a material with a thick, cardboard-like appearance.

Asbestos consists of very small, light individual fibers that remain in the air for long periods of time. If these fibers are inhaled, they can get trapped inside the lung. Because these fibers are so small, it is nearly impossible to surgically remove them. Since the lung cannot dispel the fibers, it attacks them.

College bowl championships in Moscow

Late winter in Moscow isn't all that bad. First there's Mardi Gras, then the Jazz Festival, and then the Region 14 College Bowl Championship Tournament Saturday.

If you don't think a college bowl championship sounds like a normal Moscow activity, you're right.

"This will be the first time the University of Idaho has hosted the regional tournament," said Judy Wallins, Region 14 College Bowl coordinator. "Until this year the regionals have coincided with the Jazz Festival."

Not to be confused with the game played in a bowling alley, College Bowl is a quick-recall knowledge game played between two four-member teams.

This year teams from the UI, University of Washington, University of Puget Sound, Whitman College, Montana State University, Idaho State University, University of Oregon, Pacific Lutheran University, Lewis-Clark State College, University of Alaska-Fairbanks, Linfield College and the College of Idaho will compete for the region championship and a berth at the national tournament held at the University of Minnesota in Minneapolis in late April.

The double-elimination tournament begins Saturday at 9 a.m. in the SUB, and the final matches will be held in the mid-to-late afternoon with an awards banquet to follow. Spectators are encouraged to attend.

UI won last year's regionals and has won four out of the last six regionals. Historically, UI's biggest rival is UW.

Luckily for UI's all-undergraduate team, rules allow only two graduate students per team. Plus, the UI has two returning members from last year's championship team.

"Even though our team doesn't have any grad students, this fact doesn't necessarily hinder us, as grad students aren't any more intelligent than the average undergraduate in general knowledge areas," said Kevin Freeman, a member of the UI

Places to study on the Palouse

On-campus locations compared

By PATRICK J. TRAPP
Contributing Writer

Although there are a variety of places to study on the University of Idaho campus, not all study facilities are appealing to everyone. So where do students like to study? The biggest competitors so to speak, seem to be the Student Union Building and the library.

Most of the students asked said they preferred to study at the library.

"The library is definitely the best place to study," said Junior Political Science major Courtney Nottingham. "It is close to all of my classes and there is a good, quiet study atmosphere."

Reasons for studying at the library ranged from having so many resources right at your disposal to it having a good social atmosphere.

Sophomore Finance student John Hamilton had this to say:

"The library is the best place to go, not just to study, but to meet people as well. I have met more girls at the library than at most parties I have been to. Let's face it, the library is the singles bar of the 90's."

Junior Accounting student Robert Pickering has a different opinion.

"You can't get anything done at the library. There is far too much noise. If you go to the basement, you have those damn computers to contend with," he said. "If you go anywhere else, you have to deal with people constantly walking around all

Students drawn to receptive restaurants

By JANET MOWREADER

There it is ... homework mountain. Nine hours of homework and only four hours to do it. You can't concentrate. Precious seconds are ticking away, and you can't think about anything but your closet full of dirty laundry.

You need to put yourself in a new environment, far away from your living quarters and far away from anything remotely related to college life. The library is out of the question. So what are you going to do?

Fortunately, several Moscow restaurants welcome students and provide a calm setting where it is easy to re-focus on school. Some of the most popular places to study are The Main Street Deli, The Beanery, Mikey's Gyros, The Pantry in the University Inn and fast-food places with a relaxed atmosphere like Arby's, Zip's and Taco Time.

Most restaurants do not have a specific study policy, but they are generally receptive to students and welcome them if they are not especially busy. Most places in Moscow are willing to let students be students as long as the restaurants can be restaurants.

Sophomores Mike Hunter and Aaron Schoenfeld say they prefer the Deli over all other study environments because it has the best atmosphere.

"They have these comfortable couches, and no one bothers you," Hunter said. "The lighting is really good, and the fact that you have to get up to get your own coffee provides a mini study break that's kind of nice."

Schoenfeld said that Hunter introduced him to the off-campus study atmosphere.

"We like it so much we waste time and gas to go there," Schoenfeld said.

Cheap coffee is an added bonus for Schoenfeld. At the Deli, coffee is 50 cents for the first cup with one refill and 15 cents a cup after that.

Dennis Lindberg, manager of The Beanery, said students are not a problem.

around you. There is just too many things to divert your attention."

"I prefer to study at my apartment," he added, "but if I have to go somewhere, I go to the 2nd floor of the SUB. It is usually fairly quiet up there."

Many students were upset last semester when the Vandal Cafe was remodeled and the blue buckets were done away with. However, the cafe's new look seems to please most students.

According to the cafe's Retail Dining Director, Mike Thomsen, business at the cafe was slow at first because students were un-ware of the new facility and its benefits, but now that the word has spread, students are flocking to the cafe now more than ever.

"Doing away with the blue buckets does not mean that we did away with studying at the Vandal Cafe," Thomsen said. "In fact, there are about 50 more seats than there used to be and the tables are much bigger."

Thomsen also said it is much easier and less confusing to order food from the cafe because of its new cafeteria-style set-up.

COUPLES WORKSHOP

The University of Idaho Conferences and Enrichment Program is offering a couples workshop for relationship enhancement. Greg Wilson, a Washington State University psychology professor, will run the workshop.

The workshops will be held March 3 and March 31 at the UI Administration Building in Room 332. The sessions will last from 9 a.m. - 4 p.m. with a break for lunch.

Wilson said he has achieved good results from this class when it has been offered at WSU.

"The workshop is interesting because this type of program has been shown to cut the separation rate in half for couples who spend six to 10 hours in class. No other program shows this type of result," Wilson said.

According to Wilson, 97 percent of all people get married at some point in their lives, and 50 percent of first marriages and 60 percent of second marriages end in divorce, usually within the first five to seven years.

"If we can intervene in this situation, we can make a big difference," Wilson said.

Wilson said he tries to teach two things: specific communications skills and conflict resolution. Conflict resolution involves successful resolution of problems and feeling good about the process of resolution.

The course is designed for couples and is geared for both partners to attend.

GPSA PETITION DRIVE

The newly organized Graduate and Professional Student Association (GPSA) at the University of Idaho will kick off a petition drive Wednesday at 5 p.m. at the College of Forestry in Room 10.

A number of former graduate students who were active in associations at their universities or who benefited from graduate organization activities will present short testimonies about their experiences.

The GPSA hopes to gather 1,000 student signatures by March 16 to place an amendment to the ASUI Constitution on the April general election ballot.

The proposed amendment would allocate 75 percent of the ASUI activity fees graduate students pay each semester to the GPSA for programs geared toward graduate student interests and concerns.

The 75 percent rebate would amount to approximately $45,000 per year. That figure represents about 10 percent of the ASUI budget.

About 1,400 of the approximately 10,000 students enrolled on the main UI campus are graduate students. An additional 400 graduate students are enrolled in UI programs in Boise, Coeur d'Alene and Idaho Falls.

understand the reasoning of the senators backing it," ASUI Sen. Doug Korn said.

Korn voted against the referendum when it came up in the senate.

"I see a vote as being more detrimental than helpful," Korn said.

He said that the student government will lose its bargaining power if there is not a high voter turnout at the election. Now that an election will be held, however, Korn said he plans to support it.

"It will be harder to get students to vote on this than on the fee increase," Korn said, because it does not directly affect all students.

ASUI Elections Chairperson

Kristin Goodman is already preparing for the referendum election that should occur within the next two weeks.

"I hope the students really come out and vote," Goettsche said.

Residence Hall Association President Ray Horton plans to inform students of the upcoming election by word-of-mouth and through hall governments.

Goettsche, Heffner and Broadhead plan to put posters up on the University Classroom Center to encourage students to vote.

"Last year Lynn Morrison (director of University Dining Services) said that students would be begging for Marriott to stay. This referendum will show if they are," Goettsche said.

THE PRIZE

Residence Halls
The WINNING Residence Hall floor or section wins a FREE PIZZA PARTY for their group, including guests. So make a real party of it!!
Greeks
The WINNING Greek House wins a FREE PIZZA PARTY for their house. The PARTY includes pizza for guests, so make a function of it!!

THE CONTEST

Order as much Domino's Pizza as you can from Feb. 26, 1990 to April 6, 1990.
The Residence Hall floor or section, and Greek Week Team that orders the highest dollar amount of pizza per capita wins a FREE PIZZA PARTY.

THE RULES

- Domino's Pizza will keep a record of exactly how much pizza is ordered and delivered to your floor, section, or living group by dollar amounts per capita. Any pizza ordered at lunch and any pizza over $14 will count double. Lunch hours are from 11:00am to 4pm daily. Any Group Orders for Lunch, Dinner, or anytime will be counted at the regular price of the pizzas ordered, even though we will give you a group discount on group orders.
- The dollar amount per capita will be used to determine the contest winner. This way every floor, section, or living group, no matter what size will have a chance to win.
- The FREE pizza party will include a large 2-topping Domino's Pizza for every 3 people of your group and a Coke for every person. You may have the Party anytime after April 6, 1990, but before Spring semester is over, at the convenience of the group and Domino's.

4. Each floor, section, or living group team is automatically entered into the contest. Be sure to identify your floor or section when ordering your Domino's Pizza.
5. Call the Domino's Pizza store manager at anytime during the contest for information on contest standings.

Student officials have wrong concerns

A petition with almost a thousand signatures is a good indication that University of Idaho students are unhappy with the present food service. Unfortunately, some student representatives do not seem to care about their constituents' wishes.

Although faced with a deluge of complaints about Marriott's practices, Residence Hall Association officials have other concerns.

When the petition calling for the referendum began circulating, RHA President Ray Horton said using a petition was "like saying we don't trust the administration."

Horton said the following week that "if we destroy the working relationship with Marriott, what recourse do we have?"

Horton's position is peculiar, particularly because he has been privy to a good deal of negative information regarding Marriott, both here and abroad.

Horton said he spoke to a representative from Marriott's flagship university, Northern Arizona University. According to Horton, the representative said Marriott is undependable.

At a Feb. 15 RHA Food Service Committee meeting, Joe Moran, Targhee Hall's food service representative, said Marriott wasn't providing enough food and supplies for the Targhee residents.

According to Moran, Targhee Hall's cook had to purchase some coffee filters. Moran said that lack of food is also a problem.

"They (Marriott) lock our refrigerator, and I'm not sure why. The stuff they send us from the cafeteria wouldn't feed an Ethiopian," Moran said.

Despite these and other complaints, Horton is opposed to the petition. Stranger still, other RHA representatives join Horton in his opposition to the petition.

RHA Vice President Elizabeth Kniep said she "didn't support this petition because they (the ASUI Senate) didn't approach us about it first. It's not our own writing."

Later, Kniep said that "it seems like we are declaring war on them (Marriott)."

Horton and Kniep's statements have similar characteristics and voice similar concerns about "the administration" and the "working relationship" with Marriott.

Kniep also has a big problem with the authorship of the petition. Perhaps she would approve a petition that was the RHA's "own writing."

Instead of perking their ears to the concerns of Marriott and the UI administration, Horton and Kniep should have alerted themselves to the students standing in line to sign the petition outside the Wallace Complex Cafeteria.

Some ASUI senators have said that a survey would be a more accurate representation of student wishes regarding university food service. To cut costs, they are willing to sacrifice student suffrage.

Also, if a survey is the best alternative, why haven't these student leaders created one, and why did they wait until now to suggest one? Time is running out.

Are these student leaders truly concerned about cutting costs and getting an accurate representation of student sentiment, or are they only concerned with pleasing corporations and administrations?

A Letter from

President Zinser

We are turning our attention now to decisions concerning increases in student tuition and fees. This article alerts students and the general campus community to our intentions to consult and to progress to a decision in an orderly fashion. The announcement of an open hearing will be forthcoming. Consultation with several campus organizations will occur as well. Here is some general information that may be of interest at this stage.

Like most other states, institutions of public higher education in the state of Idaho are funded from a variety of sources, including the state general fund (tax revenues), tuition and fees (direct collections from students), private funds, auxiliary service charges and other sources. At the University of Idaho, non-resident students pay tuition and resident students pay matriculation fees. The fee structure is complex. I shall commission soon a comprehensive study to help us better understand the student fee structure as a source of revenue for the University of Idaho. I expect this study to be completed during the fall semester 1990.

While we expect to have the benefit of the fee study in our deliberations about increases in 1991-92, decisions this year will be made on the basis of existing knowledge, reasoned judgment and appropriate, timely consultation. We know that costs are going up and that all sources of revenue must be increased if the quality of the institution is to be maintained. We expect new dollars from the general fund for base budget increases, as well as one-time funds from the surplus available (the latter having no effect on ongoing base needs). We aim to increase revenues from private donations. And we need also to increase student fees modestly such that these revenues keep pace with needs for services supported by them while avoiding harmful impacts on access to higher education.

Several principles must be stated as we prepare to evaluate the current level of student fees:

The university does not advocate sudden changes in student fees. Proposed increases will be consistent with Board of Regents/State Board of Education policy, which encourages modest, regular increases in fees as opposed to large increases every three to five years. The latter practice impacts student constituencies differentially.

Students are not expected to assume an unreasonable share of the cost. In the absence of a comprehensive study, it may be appropriate to maintain approximate proportionate costs.

We will consult with the appropriate campus groups before drawing conclusions about the level of the fee increase for 1990-91. We shall share some historical and comparative fee information, along with general information regarding our fee structure, along with the initial proposal for an increase for 1990-91. This process is intended to inform a variety of campus groups and to allow for advice concerning fee changes. It will include an open hearing on campus.

We intend to issue formal notice of a fee increase recommendation by March 5, which will include the date, time and place of an open hearing on campus. Interested individuals are encouraged to express their views about the preliminary proposal in writing or in oral testimony at the hearing.

Please feel free to call the office of acting Vice President W. Hal Godwin if you have any questions or comments at this stage (885-5886).

— Elisabeth A. Zinser

A middle-class, white male thing

One might ask if women in general would look good sporting crew cuts or shaved heads. One may well ask if an Armed Forces haircut looks appealing on anyone. The ponderer might still question whether men look good with ponytails. There seems to be a rash of ropy hairdos growing right this moment under many of our furrowing eyebrows. Ponytails are for women; look it up in the Oxford American Dictionary. Crew cuts are for men; look it up in the same dictionary. Maybe my source book is a little on the conservative side, but maybe it fits my views. U2's Bono seems to have pointed the way for long hair on men — heavy metal groups have always had long hair, but they perm theirs, which makes all of them look worse than Tina Turner — but have you noticed how many pop musicians have started growing their hair out? Is this a cultural thing or what? Gee. Wow.

The key to the acceptance of this phenomenon is to dress in somewhat conservative attire.

BRANDON

Commentary

Wearing Patagonia clothing helps; then everyone thinks you're "environmental" because the company donates 10 percent of its revenue to ecological issues. I guess maybe I'm irritated because everyone expresses their "individuality" these days by wearing neon colors, sporting cool sunglasses and a new ponytail. (The cutest ponytails are the ones where the guy has worked for months to get it to stick out at least an inch, held tight by a rubber band. Is this a phallic gesture, guys?)

It also strikes me as a middle-class, white male thing. Either someone's a "rad-skier" type (snowboarders included) or they just stepped off an Italia-Air 737 after two months "doing Europe," or maybe they're fresh from what one writer calls the Lycra Archipelago — all the cool places out West like Aspen, Sun Valley, Bend and Hood River, Jackson Hole, Park City ... all places where the young-and-the-restless-crowd hang out bartending or pounding nails for the summer. These are mainly, ski towns or mountain bike havens or windsurf eddies for "techno-weenies" recreating in the sunshine. A good life maybe for some, but I didn't come to Moscow to be surrounded by "dudes" in Banana Republic leather jackets, aviator scarves, Ray Bans and lengthy hair under neon baseball caps with the extra-long bills. I found all that in Sun

Graduate students clarify points about meeting

Editor:

There are several points we would like to clarify regarding the Feb. 20 Argonaut story about the meeting between a group of graduate students and ASUI senators Lisa Krepel and Bill Broadhead. First, the story mentioned a seven-point plan presented by Broadhead. He did not present the plan to the group at the Friday meeting. He told us he was not prepared to make any proposals at that time, though that ostensibly was the reason for the meeting. We could not negotiate proposals that were not put before us.

The second clarification is that Broadhead was appointed by the ASUI to be the graduate student "representative." ASUI senators are elected at large, and as Broadhead pointed out to us at the meeting Friday, his constituency is all 10,000 UI students. On ASUI matters of interest to graduate students, Broadhead said he would have to vote his conscience and as his entire constituency requests. We must emphasize that neither Broadhead nor any other ASUI senator "represents" graduate students, or any other constituent group's positions. We consider him to be a liaison between the graduate students and the ASUI as a consequence of his appointment.

The ASUI senators apparently were disappointed that we would not negotiate about the formation of a Graduate and Professional Student Association. UI graduate students who have begun to discuss issues of importance to them and who have come to organizational meetings are not willing to negotiate the formation of an association. It has happened. The entire student body will have the opportunity to vote this semester on whether the GPSA will receive a portion of student activity fees that graduate students pay.

We urge the Argonaut to continue its coverage of the graduate student organization. It gives UI students an excellent opportunity to examine critically student governance and services. The same level of concern that students raised over how student fees are being used by the administration should be raised over how student fees are being used by the student government.

Donations requested for naval officer

Editor:

Remember Tracy Phillips? He is the Navy petty officer who while traveling home on leave through Idaho pleaded guilty to having a concealed weapon, believing it was illegal to have a firearm in his zippered pack in his car trunk.

The case is being reheard, and the court has given permission to raise funds for Tracy's defense. I would like to thank the law firm of Loveless and Neilsen for giving of their time without charge to get the case reopened and trying to settle it in a hearing. The state police have dug in their heels, as occasionally is their thankless job.

By adding a line to the Idaho weapons code in 1988, a firearm has become illegal on highways if carried concealed on or about a person, including cased hunting rifles and shotguns. Cover a weapon while you are sleeping in a rest area in your car or camper and you can get charged with concealing a weapon; leave it out and you could be charged with endangering a child! Absurd! There were already a multitude of laws against criminal possession and use of firearms which should be enforced. Sometimes, though, law-abiding people need protection in Idaho's wide open spaces. Police are not a phone call and minutes away.

I understand the undisputed circumstances in Tracy's case are that after being pulled over, as he was wearing sweats, he asked to retrieve his billfold and driver's license from a pack in the trunk. Nervous with the officer at his side, after grasping the zipper he hesitated and told the officer the pistol was also in the pack and passed the pack to the officer, who then unzipped it. Retrieving the firearm and license, the officer called for reinforcements and arrested Tracy for a concealed weapon carried on or about his person.

It seems if it was lawful to have the pistol in the pack in his trunk — which the prosecutor's office assured me it is — that we are splitting hairs to make it illegal to put it in or take it out, and such interpretation is certainly widely afield of legislative intent.

Concerned about what such a conviction will do to his naval career and security clearance, Tracy is now faced with a trip down from Bremerton, Wash. and with defense expenses. He doesn't feel it is right to continue to ask counsel to donate any more time. We ask anyone caring to help even with a few dollars to call their law office, as expenses are estimated at $1,000. Any excess will be used to help Tracy with his trip expenses or will be returned to the giver.

As we celebrate the 200th anniversary of our U.S. Constitution, may we remember the states then were leery of unbridled legislative and police powers and insisted on the Bill of Rights. It guarantees that the "right of the people to keep and bear arms will not be infringed." I can but wonder if our Constitution is being destroyed piecemeal with public consent.

I hope many around our state will clip this and send it to their legislators to remove this 1988 line out of the Idaho Code.

Editor:

Although this letter is addressed to the editor, it is really for Jeff Calene (Feb. 23 Argonaut). Dearest Jeff: I never said "men have no right to speak on the issue of abortion." What I said was that men (or women) have no right to JUDGE someone else who is faced with the decision to abort or not. We do have freedom of speech, you know. Your letter just strengthens my point: How can YOU understand the abortion issue when it is obvious that you don't even understand the difference between having an opinion and setting yourself up as jury, judge and executioner?

P.S. Chris is not just a nickname for Christopher; it is also a nickname for Christine. There you go appointing yourself judge again. You were judging me on the basis of my being a "he." Wrong again.

COMMENTARY

Andrus loses instincts, doesn't sense public outcry

By CHARLES RICE
Commentary

Gov. Cecil Andrus has been in power too long. This is obvious from the fact that he did not see any problem with his wife, Carol Andrus, going to work on Morrison Knudsen Corporation's board of directors.

Morrison Knudsen is a long-term resident of Idaho and has made major contributions to the Idaho economy, but that does not change the fact that the company does bid on Idaho contracts. This could leave Cecil open to charges of favoritism and corruption if a contract is awarded to Morrison Knudsen while he is governor and while Carol is on MK's board.

Cecil and Carol have tried to label this a partisan issue and a feminist issue, but it is merely an ethical issue. Carol and Cecil should have known that this would bring an outcry from citizens all over Idaho.

Carol is an intelligent, capable woman, and I am sure she can find a good job that does not allow people to accuse her husband of having a conflict of interest.

If Cecil did not see this one coming, he has lost his political instincts and should not run for re-election. He was accused of abusing his power before when he acquired a cabin site on Lake Cascade. Maybe he just needs to be reminded now and then that being an elected official includes responsibility as well as power.

Valley; that's why I left.

Of course, no one wants to look like George Bush (who would?), but an epidemic of Sting and Don Henley and Bono impersonators seems to have descended upon the American scene. This isn't the recurrence of the hippie movement, since typically the collective conscience and consciousness of the whole lot is not embattled in social ideology to any purpose. (I call myself a conservative liberal. I don't wear Patagonia because it's cool, however.) No, in fact, if polled, most couldn't tell you where their beliefs and value systems stand.

Maybe I'm just ranting about something inconsequential, but if you want to look like a girl, wear a dress, or if you want to look like a hippie, wear beads, but please don't grow your hair out, pull it back tight over your scalp and slip on your Ralph Lauren Polo non-prescription glasses. It doesn't fit.

Or maybe I'm just jealous that all you guys got the jump on me, and it will take two years of avoiding the barber to look like you. At any rate, I sure hope my girlfriend doesn't shave her head. Not until my hair grows out, that is. We'll make a swell couple, no?

Campus Crusade for Christ members enjoy Prime Time

By JEFF STUCKER
Staff Writer

Every week on the University of Idaho campus, about 200 students gather to laugh at comedy sketches, watch skits, sing along with a live band and listen to a short message about the Christian life.

Prime Time is a weekly presentation of Campus Crusade for Christ, a growing group that meets in the Janssen Engineering Building auditorium at 9 p.m. on Thursday nights.

"It's time to dispel those myths about Christianity being a kill-joy," said Nick Haight, emcee of Prime Time. "It's the most fun you'll have at the JEB."

With spotlights, 400-watt speakers and a five-piece band featuring a guitar, drums, a keyboard, a bass and a saxophone, Prime Time has become quite a show. But it is only the surface of Campus Crusade for Christ, CCC staff member Ralph Cooley said.

Leadership training classes, small discussion groups and international summer mission projects are among the many activities of CCC students.

"Our purpose is to build a movement of Christian students that will have a positive impact on the campus," Cooley said. "We want to help develop the spiritual dimension of students' lives."

Cooley, the UI campus director, began his ministry at UI in 1977, when about 20 students were involved with CCC.

This semester 170 - 240 people have attended Prime Time. More than 200 students are involved in small group Bible studies, many of which are led by students.

But spiritual training is primary in the CCC.

CCC began at the University of California-Los Angeles in 1951 and has grown into Campus Crusade for Christ, International, with headquarters in San Bernardino, Calif., and 16,000 staff members worldwide. About 4,000 CCC staff members work in the United States, mostly on university and college campuses.

Twelve CCC staff members at the UI and Washington State University meet with students individually, speak at living groups, conduct spiritual interest questionnaires and, of course, help plan Prime Time.

Through CCC, 100 UI and WSU students attended a fall conference at Camp Sanders. Forty students went to Portland for a Christmas conference to hear special speakers, receive leadership and evangelism training and celebrate New Year's Eve with 600 students from the Northwest.

"It was a great time to get away," Haight said, "to get some awesome teaching."

"There's no time to think," said Dave Meyer, a junior in social science. "You're having too much fun all of the time."

Eleven students and four staff members plan to go to Manila, in the Philippines, this summer on an international summer missions project. Thousands of students from Asia, Africa and the United States will join them to share the Christian message at university and college campuses.

"We will be working on one of 180 campuses in Manila," said Brenda Rinaldi, a graduate student. "I'm looking forward to experiencing the Filipino culture."

Several others will attend U.S. summer projects in places like Honolulu, Daytona Beach, Fla., or Yellowstone National Park.

U.S. project members work during the day for school money, participate in small group Bible studies and meetings in the evenings and receive evangelism training on weekends.

This defense creates a situation known as an "iron lung," where iron surrounds the small fibers and eventually kills the lung. The only treatment for this condition is removal of the lung.

Lung diseases such as asbestosis, lung cancer and mesothelioma are attributed to asbestos.

Asbestos is frequently found surrounding hot-water heaters or pipes, but can also be found insulating ceilings and floors. Most current asbestos removal occurs around public areas, such as churches and schools.

Asbestos is not man-made, but mined, and although most countries prohibit asbestos mining, it is still legal in some Canadian provinces.

Those who have questions about asbestos removal or the possibility of asbestos in buildings should contact the UI Physical Plant.

"The students are really thoughtful," he said. "It would be difficult for us to have a whole bunch of people in here during the lunch rush from 11 a.m. - 2 p.m., spread out on a bunch of tables with one cup of coffee each, but when the students start to see it fill up, they either put their books in their bags and take off, or stop and have lunch."

Bert Harvey, manager of Mikey's Gyros, and Joan Swenson of the Main Street Deli agree with Lindberg.

"Ordinarily it doesn't bother me to have people come in and study unless it's our lunch hour," Harvey said. "I've never had to say anything."

Swenson said most students are understanding.

"There are times when studying would be obviously inappropriate," she said, "like during the champagne brunch."

The Pantry has a specific room set up for studying from 9 p.m. - 3 or 4 a.m. Sunday through Thursday.

For $3, students can use the room and drink two pops or all the coffee or tea they want. The surcharge is waived for each person who orders at least $3 worth of food.

Studying off campus can be a problem for students who like to study during quiet, late-night hours. While The Pantry is open later, most fast-food places close at 11 p.m. Mikey's Gyros closes at 8 p.m., and the Deli closes at 5 p.m. and becomes an extension of the Garden Lounge.

adjusted well to the new cafe. "I was really upset when they first took out the blue buckets," said Sophomore Forestry student John Roberts, "but now that I've started studying at the new place I haven't been disappointed."

Many students said they felt the university needed more on-campus study space.

"You basically have the SUB and the library and that's it," commented Junior Psychology student Greg Bergin. "I think they should set up different areas for each major for people to study."

'Bad' Weather hampers ASUI Outdoor Program

By JADE SIDDOWNAY
Contributing Writer

The ASUI Outdoor Program has faced some hard times this winter due to uncooperative weather.

Already this year, the Outdoor Program has had to cancel three ski outings and one winter camping trip because of the weather or lack of interest directly related to poor weather conditions.

Dan Kurtz, who works with the Outdoor Program, says he is disappointed about the way things have gone so far this winter, but he says he still hopes things will pick up before the season is over.

"The weather in Moscow hasn't been good, so people aren't psyched about getting out and doing things this winter," Kurtz said. "Weather in town is poor, but there is good snow in the mountains."

This semester is an unusual one for the Outdoor Program. Last fall all but one trip filled to capacity, and 90 percent of the filled trips had waiting lists.

Not all trips planned by the Outdoor Program this winter have been canceled, however. Many cross country ski trips and telemarking trips went as planned. A few winter trips are still scheduled for this season, including a spring break cross country skiing trek into the Wallowa backcountry area in Oregon.

Kurtz said the Outdoor Program looks forward to a busy spring.

"When the weather gets warmer, things will definitely pick up right away," Kurtz said.

The Outdoor Rental Center has already begun taking reservations for rafts.

The program has added a new dimension to its spring events with a mountain bike workshop and several mountain bike trips. The mountain bike workshop will show people how to get and keep their bikes in shape. The workshop will be held April 5 at 7:30 p.m. in the SUB Russett

Room.

Old favorites such as rock climbing, rafting and backpacking are still being offered as well. The North Idaho Winter Festival, to be held April 21-22, offers events for everyone as well as prize drawings.

Those who are unfamiliar with UI's Outdoor Program or who have questions concerning trips or events can call or stop by the Outdoor Program Office located in the SUB basement.

Ladies fair well in Montana

Clinch spot in Big Sky Tournament

By STEVE SMEDE
Staff Writer

The University of Idaho Lady Vandals played some top-notch hoops last weekend in their 67-54 victory over Montana State University Friday night, despite a 65-54 loss to the University of Montana Saturday.

Friday's win at UI's Memorial Gym clinched a spot for UI in the Big Sky Conference Tournament March 9-10 in Missoula.

UI's standout Sabrina Dial led the Vandal attack against the MSU Bobcats with 21 points, eight rebounds and seven steals. Dial was supported by performances from Hettie DeJong and Krista Smith, who both contributed 12 points. The team's 57 percent shooting from the floor was reflected in the 13-point final spread.

After boosting their Big Sky Conference record to 9-4, the Lady Vandals set out to break Montana's perfect season record but fell 11 points short in a hard-fought game. Dial continued her excellent play with 15 points and 13 rebounds. DeJong added another 15 points.

UI only trailed by six with 3:43 left in the half but was outscored 8-2 in the remainder, giving Montana a 32-20 lead at the intermission.

According to Head Coach Laurie Turner, the real poison pill of their earlier match-up with Montana was a "lacking defensive strategy." The Lady Vandals turned that around Saturday as they held the Grizzlies to 39 percent shooting from the floor.

In the second half, UI shot 45 percent and outscored first place Montana 34-33, but due to a few Vandal offensive and free-throw errors, the Grizzlies recorded their 35th straight win to clinch first place in the Big Sky.

With their give-and-take weekend, the Lady Vandals have tallied a 17-8 season record and a 9-5 conference record. Montana State's 48-62 loss to Eastern Washington University Saturday puts the Vandals in second place in the conference with two regular season games left.

The team will travel to Ogden, Utah, Thursday for a match-up with Weber State College, followed by their final game against EWU Friday.

Vandals fail to clinch regular season title

Face season finale against EWU Eagles

By RUSS BIAGGNE
Sports Editor

Needing two wins to clinch the Big Sky regular-season title or an Eastern Washington University loss, the University of Idaho Vandals ran into the old Wolfpack jinx and went one-and-one this weekend.

The defending Big Sky Champion Vandals appeared to be rolling toward sole possession of first place when they defeated the Northern Arizona University Lumberjacks 64-52 Thursday in Flagstaff. With the win, the Vandals assured themselves of at least a tie with EWU.

Surprisingly, however, the Lumberjacks played unlike the 3-10 team they are and found themselves in a 47-47 tie with UI with six minutes remaining in the game. The Lumberjacks led by one, 28-27, at halftime as well. NAU was elevated emotionally and was not about to let the Vandals cruise to an easy victory resembling their 84-59 humiliation suffered at UI earlier this season.

An emotionally elevated NAU team was not all the Vandals faced. Altitude was

"I thought the altitude got to us early."

— Kermit Davis
Vandal head coach

another problem.

"I thought the altitude got to us early," Vandal Head Coach Kermit Davis said.

Davis said that players were running around with their tongues hanging out early in the game.

NAU's performance was spiced by the recent naming of Harold Merritt, a popular NAU coach, as the team's head coach. Merritt introduced a zone defense that shut down the Vandals' inside game (Riley Smith was below his scoring average and had only 19 points), and the UI perimeter shooters were unable to compensate.

Despite all this, UI broke the 47-47 tie and the close game with nine straight points and 10-for-12 shooting at the foul line in the final minutes.

The Vandals were led by the inspired play of forward Clifford Martin, who had 14 points and nine rebounds. Davis cited his play as his strongest performance of the season.

"Clifford Martin responded the best that he ever did," Davis said.

Things did not go as well for the Vandals Saturday,

Please see VANDALS page 8>

however. Remember UNR forward Matt Williams? He was the player who sank the three-pointer at the buzzer last year to defeat UI in Reno. Once again Williams pulled through for the Wolf-pack and sank two free throws with no time remaining in overtime to hand UI a 73-71 defeat. The Vandals have not defeated UNR in Reno since 1982.

The Vandals, who were led by Smith's 31-point performance, rallied in the second half from a 15-point deficit and led by four late in the game but were not able to hold on as UNR's Jarrod Sigsby scored two inside baskets, one with eight seconds remaining in regulation, to force overtime.

Reno led 47-32 with just over 14 minutes remaining in the game when UI guard Leonard Perry came off the bench to score five points in two minutes to spark the Vandal comeback. The Wolf-pack led 36-26 at halftime.

In overtime, UI again led by four, but UNR came right back to tie the score at 71 with 18 seconds remaining. With the clock running, UI ran a play designed for Smith that entailed a screen which left guard Ron Shields open momentarily, but Otis Livingston's pass was deflected and Williams made the steal and drove down court for an apparently easy lay-up. A foul was called on a player pursuing Shields just before the buzzer ended overtime, and

"The guys showed a lot of character and played like a championship team...."

— Kermit Davis
Vandal head coach

Williams sank both free throws to win the game.

An obviously downtrodden Davis explained what happened.

"We ran a play that we have run 100 times in two years that we've been here, and we have never had a pass stolen (referring to Livingston's pass)," Davis said.

Although UI lost, Davis commended them highly.

"The guys showed a lot of character and played like a championship team in the last 15 minutes," Davis said.

Because EWU won both games this weekend and sits at 11-4 in the league, an EWU victory over UI Thursday could mean that the Eagles could clinch the conference title. But if UI (12-3) defeats EWU, the Vandals will have the title outright. According to league tie-breaking criteria, however, an EWU victory could favor EWU in deciding which team is the regular-season champion, especially if Montana State University stays ahead of Boise State University in the final standings.

MSU defeated BSU 69-62 Thursday and defeated Weber State College 67-63 Saturday. The University of Montana defeated the Broncos 61-43 Saturday as well. MSU is 8-7 in the conference and BSU is 6-8.

The season finale, pitting the Vandals against the EWU Eagles, is Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in Cheney, Wash.

Jazz show largest ever

4500 jazz fans attend Saturday's performance

By JOE MCMICHAEL
Staff Writer

The 23rd annual Lionel Hampton/Chevron Jazz Festival ended Saturday night with the largest show in the history of the event, with more than 4,500 people attending. Jazz greats such as Lionel Hampton, Al Grey, Branford Marsalis and special guest Miss America, Debbye Turner, who turned heads with her ability to play the marimba, jammed in the final event held in the ASUI-Kibbie Dome.

The festival, one of the largest events at the university, brought people from all over the country to hear these giants of jazz play. About 11,000 tickets were sold for the four nights of concerts, which included International Jazz Night, All-Star Night and The Giants of Jazz concert Saturday night.

The event also brought more than 9,000 high school students (though at times the number seemed closer to 90,000) to the University of Idaho to compete and attend any of the 22 music clinics administered by many of the featured jazz musicians like Grey, Jeff Watts and Lew Soloff.

— Joe McMichael
Staff Writer

Friday night Moscow High School student Bea Wallins received the "Cinderella" award for her vocal rendition of "Round Midnight." Hampton gave Wallins a $1,000 scholarship to attend UI's Lionel Hampton School of Music. Sponsors awarded a total of $100,000 to students who won competitions during the week.

Saturday night visiting Soviet jazz musician Michael Karetnikov received a bass guitar, and Soviet musician Arkadi Schilkloper received a French horn. Schilkloper and Karetnikov, who made an impressive opening at the Wednesday night show, thanked the organizers not only for the instruments but also for giving them the chance to come to America and play with their heroes. Both were awed by playing for such a large, receptive crowd, they told the audience.

This year's festival has just ended, but people are already talking about next year's gala. Hampton is expecting an even bigger and better festival next year, he said during the Saturday night concert. With the festival's growth in the last few years, one can only wait and see what Hampton and Lynn Skinner, jazz festival director, have up their sleeves to top this year's show.

Crue concert rocks Pullman

REVIEW By BETH BARCLAY
Staff Writer

When Vince Neil turned on an entire coliseum Sunday night in Pullman with a few obscene words and some fancy fireworks, ("you guys are a bunch of f---ing party animals!"), I thought I might be in for a long night. Fortunately even only moderate Crue fans like myself enjoyed Sunday's two-hour noisefest.

Crue fans who have not heard any but the released singles off the latest album, Dr. Feelgood, may have entered with a little skepticism, but the band's rehashing of such hits as "Smokin' in the Boy's Room" and "Looks that Kill" put some of us oldies at ease.

Despite or perhaps because of the group's reported abstinence from alcohol and drugs, the show was a wild one. Tommy Lee outdid last year's spinning drums routine with something new and different (no, it was not his derriere, although fans got a good view of that). While Lee hung from the ceiling with his drum set that traveled the length of the room, fans on the floor were not only stunned by the blasting music and exhilarated by the event itself, but also probably afraid for their lives.

Of particular interest was Crue guitarist Mick Mars, whose solo brought the crowd of nearly 10,000 to its feet. Although I found it hard to believe that when amps blow they send up quite as many sparks as that, let's just say it all made for a good show.

And I'm sure at least one or two people in the audience enjoyed the appearance of The Crue's two buxom blondes (whom one witty radio personality referred to as "Crue-tions"), who did little more than strut around in cute nurse outfits. What fun. All

Ozzy album for die-hard fans only

REVIEW By JAMES ROBERTSON
Staff Writer

Ozzy Osbourne has a new album out called Just Say Ozzy. This six-song live EP that was recorded on Ozzy's last tour features Zakk Wylde on guitar, Geezer Butler on bass and Randy Castillo on drums.

The liner notes contain a short message from Ozzy saying that this EP was an idea that came from the record company. Ozzy's first thought was, "Oh no, not another version of old (Black) Sabbath songs with a couple of mine thrown in." He then writes that this EP marks the last time he will record the old Sabbath songs and that "it's a chapter of my musical career I can now close."

Just Say Ozzy contains "Miracle

Man," "Bloodbath in Paradise" and "Tattooed Dancer" from No Rest for the Wicked, "Shot in the Dark" from the 1986 Ultimate Sin album, and two old Black Sabbath songs, "War Pigs" and "Sweet Leaf."

Ozzy says he likes this version of "Shot in the Dark" better than the original. In fact, I didn't care much for any of the songs on this slab, with the notable exception of "War Pigs."

This is mostly due to the mixing of the album. Ozzy's vocals and the drums take up so much of the mix that the bass and the guitar are left fighting just to be heard. In "Miracle Man" I could barely hear the guitar.

The album's high point is "War Pigs." On this one Zakk Wylde burns, and Geezer Butler shows other bass players how to do it right. This is the best live recording of "War Pigs" to date, and that is quite an accomplishment, because I scrounged up no less than three other live versions of the song!

The big question is, "Why did he do it?" The first thing that comes to mind is that Ozzy's record company knows the Oz has more members of old Black Sabbath in his band now than Black Sabbath. The record company also wants to make gobs of cash off Ozzy while he's still a market success.

The bottom line: Just Say Ozzy is for diehard Ozzy Osbourne and Black Sabbath fans only. Everyone else should stay away.

Kiss album may 'mark huge comeback'

REVIEW By WILL SCHMECKPEPER
Staff Writer

With all due respect, one really has a hard time saying anything about the rock group KISS without the inevitable, "Yeah, they were really good. What happened?" It seems that every time KISS comes out with a new album, most people end up digging that old, dusty Double Platinum cassette out of the glove compartment and listening to it instead.

KISS's latest release, Hot In The Shade, marks a point in the band's history for the better — sort of. KISS has always had two faces — the days of their superpower rock when the makeup was on, Gene Simmons spit blood and Ace Frehley played a guitar that went up in flames, and the days after half the original group was gone, the makeup was gone and, essentially, the magic was gone.

KISS was replaced by "The Gene Simmons/Paul Stanley Show!" and the show was not all that great.

With this new album, KISS seems to be once again acting like a band going places, without Simmons' or Stanley's ego getting in the way. Guitarist Bruce Kulick finally gets a real chance to show how well he can play. Eric Carr's percussions have more of a real power-punch to them (something that's been missing for a long time), and Simmons' and Stanley's writing has improved greatly, especially with the help of songwriters Vini Poncia and Desmond Child.

The music is sound (with the possible exception of "Read My Body," where Stanley seems to be trying to rap during the song's introduction) and professionally done. "Hot In The Shade" may mark a huge comeback for this group, much the same way Aerosmith finally did — provided KISS doesn't let up when they release their next album.

As for hard-core KISS fans, Hot In The Shade isn't what you're used to. A friend said to me, "Does the term 'bend like a reed in the wind' mean anything to you?" to describe this album, and I must admit it is different from most KISS I've heard. But, and I say this very liberally, can KISS ever be seen in the same light as they used to?

When they were great, KISS was the best, but when they went down, they hit the cellar and kept going. At least now the group has what seems to be a new beginning and wants to put the past — successes and failures — behind to be judged by what they are doing now. I recommend Hot In The Shade as good metal rock 'n' roll and give it a B+.

But keep Double Platinum around, just to be safe.

STUDYBREAK

FACULTY RECITAL

Faculty member Alan Eggleston will present a bass recital today at 8 p.m. at the Lionel Hampton School of Music recital hall.

SEXUALITY IN THE '90s

UI counseling psychologists Marilyn and Ted Murray will discuss aspects of individual and relationship sexuality today and Wednesday at 12:30 p.m. at the Women's Center. Highlighted topics include responsibility, ownership, growth, communication, play and lifelong commitment. Questions and answers are encouraged. Those who have questions but do not want to ask them in a group setting can send them to the Murrays at the counseling center or give them to the Women's Center staff.

ITALIAN NIGHT FUND RAISER

The Festival Dance and Performing Arts Association will hold its fourth annual fund raiser Friday at 6:30 p.m. at the Latah County Fairgrounds. La Dolce Vita, "the good life," will be the theme for the evening. An Italian dinner, a 40-item silent auction and live music with the Senders will be featured. Tickets are $12.50 per person.

MOVIES AT THE SUB

The SUB film series continues Saturday with Skin Deep and The Magnificent Seven. Show times are 7 p.m. and 9 p.m. in the Borah Theater. Admission is $1.

DANCE FRIDAY

KUOI and World Beat Dance Fund will present an African, Caribbean and reggae dance Friday at the Moscow Community Center from 8 p.m. - midnight. A $2 donation is requested.

RANCH ROMANCE

The country swing quartet Ranch Romance from Seattle will bring their mixed repertoire of songs from the Golden West to the Palouse Thursday. Admission will be $8 for members and $9 for non-members.

The group sings the music of Patsy Montana and Patsy Cline, classics from Roy Rogers, the Sons of Pioneers and Bob Wills and the Texas Playboys, plus more recent music, including their own compositions.

Ranch Romance, the cowboy-clad group at last year's Renaissance Fair, has been popular at folk and art festivals throughout the Northwest.

RESERVE OFFICERS' TRAINING CORPS

CASH IN ON GOOD GRADES.

If you're a freshman or sophomore with good grades, apply now for a three-year or two-year scholarship. From Army ROTC.

Army ROTC scholarships pay tuition, most books and fees, plus $100 per school month. They also pay off with leadership experience and officer credentials impressive to future employers.

For more information, contact MAJ Poillard at 885-6528 or stop by Memorial Gym (West end, lower level).

that singing talent and legs too.

Crue's opening band, Faster Pussycat, was somewhat less exciting, with fewer lights and fireworks, but the performance was satisfyingly loud, if not very long. The group's latest single, "House of Pain," was a good warm-up for an audience that needed a great deal of adrenalin to get through Crue.

Overall, the show was wild enough that when Neil promised to visit the crazy town of Pullman again real soon, it wasn't too much of a disappointment.

H ardcore Co-op

The timeless question, "How do you get a good job without experience, and how do you get that experience without a good job?"

The answer could be Microsoft's Co-op Program. At Microsoft, anything can happen. As a Technical Associate Co-op, you'll provide technical phone support to a variety of users of Microsoft software all across the U.S. On an average day, you may talk to a Midwestern housewife or an East Coast executive one minute, and Julia Child or an owner of a small software development company the next. If you are comfortable with word processors, spreadsheets, windows, BASIC, C, Pascal or MASM, this is a great opportunity for you to get real-world experience before graduation.

We're looking for students who want to prove something to themselves — that they've got the enthusiasm and motivation needed to make it with the world's leader in microcomputer software. Excellent command of the English language and great problem-solving skills are a must. Experience as a computer tutor or programmer is a definite plus.

Our paid co-op positions are full-time and last for a duration of nine months. Relocation assistance is available for non-local participants. Additional benefits include a competitive salary, membership in our local health club and software discounts. In fact, after you complete the nine month program, you'll get the ultimate discount on an IBM compatible or Macintosh computer (depending on group assignment) — it will be yours to keep!

Act now —
We're hiring for Summer and Fall.

We have a limited number of co-op positions, so contact your Cooperative Education Office by March 5th for more information about the program, including eligibility and the upcoming visit to your campus on April 17th and 18th. Microsoft is an equal opportunity employer.
