

Zinser proposes $77 fee increase for next year

By SHERRY DEAL
Managing Editor

University of Idaho President Elisabeth Zinser has suggested a $77 per year fee increase for resident students next year.

In a letter addressed to ASUI President David Peña, Zinser said her goal is to "raise fees enough to support quality while not eroding access to the University of Idaho."

The letter was accompanied by a copy of a notice of intent submitted to the Idaho State Board of Education Monday morning.

The $38.50 per semester raise amounts to a 7 percent increase. That figure breaks down to a $5 increase in activity fees and a $33.50 increase in matriculation fees per semester. The increase will bring the total per semester fees to $587.50.

Non-resident student fees will also be increased by 7 percent, or $154 per year, and part-time fees by $5 per credit hour.

Peña said the fee increase was higher than he expected, and he plans to push for a lower figure.

"I want to proceed to negotiate on behalf of the students," Peña said.

A public hearing has been scheduled for Monday at 3 p.m. in the Student Union Building Silver and Gold Room. Peña encourages students to attend the hearing and express their ideas and concerns. However, he said he is unsure about how much the administration plans to let student opinion influence the amount of the increase.

"I don't recall ever hearing the administrators use the word negotiations," Peña said. "The proof will be in the pudding."

Hal Godwin, acting vice president of student affairs, said Zinser wanted to stay in the moderate range with the fee increase. He said the proposed $77 was on the upper end of moderate and slightly higher than the inflation rate.

Godwin said costs are rising, and since administrators do not have research on which to base their proposals, they are attempting to keep student fee increases proportionate to state funding increases.

However, according to Zinser's letter, to keep student fee revenues in line with the growth in state funds, fees would have to be increased by $55 per semester. Zinser said she felt this amount was unacceptable.

"We really don't know and we don't pretend to know what the proper proportion is (of total costs) for students to consume," Godwin said. "We are very nervous about reaching a point where

Former UI athlete faces drug charges

Lorenzo A. Nash, a former University of Idaho basketball player, was arraigned on a charge of delivery of a controlled substance, cocaine, in Latah County Magistrate's Court Wednesday, according to an Idahonian article.

A preliminary hearing will be held today at 10 a.m.

The charge carries a maximum life sentence and a $25,000 fine.

Nash is accused of selling 1.8 grams of cocaine to undercover Idaho Narcotics Bureau officer Vicki Smith for $215 Jan. 24. The alleged transaction is said to have occurred in an alley behind 527 S. Main St. in Moscow.

Bond was set at $10,000 by Latah County Magistrate William Hamlett, and Nash remains in custody in the Latah County Jail.

At his arraignment, Nash told Hamlett he plans to hire his own attorney, but Hamlett, noting the seriousness of the charge Nash faces, appointed the public defender to represent him in the meantime.

Nash was the starting point guard for the UI Big Sky Conference champion basketball team during the 1988-89 season and played for the Vandals for two seasons. Nash, of Chicago, set a UI record for the most assists in a single season last year.

Nash remains a full-time UI student and was an assistant football coach for Moscow Junior High School last fall.

Nash was convicted of shoplifting from Moscow's Bon Marche in November 1987.

Grad student group unhappy with Activities Board funding

By VIVIANE GILBERT
News Editor

A representative of the University of Idaho's Graduate and Professional Student Association and the chair of the ASUI Activities Board have exchanged letters about funding the GPSA received from the board last month.

On behalf of the GPSA, Beth Kersey sent a letter last week to Julie Lyons to "state our dismay and appall at the low level of funding your board chose to give us."

The Activities Board appropriated $150 to the newly formed organization Feb. 23. The group had submitted a budget request of $500 Feb. 15.

In a letter dated March 5,

Lyons stated that the GPSA "was treated no differently than any other organization which has come before the Activities Board this year."

The board appropriates ASUI funds to campus clubs and organizations that request money.

The GPSA requested $300 for office supplies and photocopying meeting announcements, agendas and minutes; $150 for postage; and $50 for national membership fees to a nationwide graduate student association.

The Funding Report that the Activities Board returned to the GPSA listed the funding breakdown as follows: $100 for photocopying meeting announcements, agendas and minutes and $50 for national membership dues.

The only comment listed on the report was, "ASUI Activities Board Policy is generally to not fund for postage."

Kersey's letter asked for a more detailed explanation of the funding breakdown.

"They may have made a real good decision, but based on what they showed us, we couldn't understand the reasonings behind that decision," Kersey said.

Lyons stated in her letter that the same night the GPSA presented its budget to the board, three other groups also asked for funding. According to Lyons, the board only had $566.08 left to allocate to the four groups, all with budget requests of more than $100 each.

"We treated them like any other organization, and for her to come back this hard, I just don't understand," Lyons said.

Lyons' letter also explained that she had examined all allocations for the past three years and found no record of postage ever being funded.

Lyons said the board was "discouraged by the negative tone of the letter." She said she was disappointed that Kersey had not approached her personally about the issues and questions in the letter.

"I would rather have handled this personally rather than the rigmarole of a nasty letter," Lyons said.

One section of Kersey's letter called the funding decision "another example of what appears to be biased decision-making by your board. It is exactly the kind of response (or lack of responsiveness) that has led to the formation of the GPSA."

The letter went on to state: "It would have been politically astute on your part to have worked with us, having the common goal of wanting to find out what graduate students' priorities are and how some of these concerns can be addressed. What you have done is reaffirm our resolve that (the) ASUI will not be allowed to control any of our money without our consent."

Kersey said she did not feel the letter was inflammatory.

"I think the thing we're trying to do is make them understand we're serious," Kersey said. "I don't want this to be a vindictive thing, but we were disappointed at the low level of communication."

Kersey said that she appreciated Lyons' timely response.

Law students vote to reinstate paper's funding

By SALLY GILPIN
Staff Writer

University of Idaho law students voted to reinstate funding for the student publication Obiter Dictum Monday.

Ninety-eight students voted for the funding, 90 opposed it and one abstained.

In February, Student Bar Association President Kirby Nelson vetoed the $50 allotted to the Obiter Dictum in the 1989-90 Student Bar Association budget.

In a memo to law students, Nelson stated that "many students object to their funds being spent on the OD."

Obiter Dictum editors Rob Kautz and Joel Ryan said they decided to call for a referendum from which the students' will could be ascertained.

"It was a healthy experience for the law school," Ryan said.

Although the referendum decision was only an advisory statement to the SBA Student Council, Nelson said that he would recommend that funding be reinstated since the majority of the students want the reinstatement.

The SBA Student Council will meet next week and will probably vote to reinstate Obiter Dictum funding. The law school administration may not reinstate its financial support of the publication, however.

"I'll keep an open mind," law Dean Sheldon Vincenti said, "but it (support) won't follow automatically."

The Obiter Dictum editors will publish at least one more issue this semester.

"We'll have an issue out within a week," Kautz said.

Kautz said that he is glad funding will be restored for this year.

"It's a ten-year tradition," he said. "Some people may not like it, but we put out two hundred copies, and they disappear within hours."

During Monday's voting, some students were unsure about the poll hours. In most law school elections, polls are open from 8:30 a.m. - 5 p.m.

Polls for the referendum were scheduled to close at 1 p.m., but after some argument were kept open until 3 p.m.

"Some people don't get to school until 12:30. That didn't give them much opportunity to vote," Kautz said. "I was told that the polls were closing early because the secretary had a prior engagement."

Campus asbestos elimination continued

By RICH WRIGHT
Staff Writer

Asbestos removal on campus may be gradual, but it is proving to be effective. Loose asbestos discovered on the third floor of the University of Idaho Student Union Building was removed immediately after it was reported Friday.

Russ Biaggne's editorial in Friday's Argonaut discussed the probability of loose asbestos in the third-floor men's bathroom. Apparently, the insulation covering some of the water pipe elbows had been stripped off, leaving exposed flaking asbestos.

Laura Fisher, the industrial hygiene specialist at the UI Safety Office, explored the situation after reading Biaggne's editorial. When the substance was determined to be asbestos, Asbestos Abatement Program employees immediately removed the material, re-covered the pipe with a protective solvent and cleaned the floors.

The AAP workers did not find any asbestos problems in the women's bathroom.

Following the removal Friday, Fisher also set up an air sampling pump to check the air quality outside the restroom.

According to Fisher, the pump essentially acts as a vacuum and draws outside air through small tubes. A small filter inside the pump traps microscopic particles floating in the air. The filter is then sent to a lab, where the particles are separated and identified.

"The filter lets us know what the asbestos content in the air is," Fisher said. "We received the lab results, and the asbestos content in the air was lower than Environmental Protection Agency standards for 'clean air.' The filters were completely clear."

The third-floor men's bathroom, the first asbestos removal project the AAP undertook, was cleaned six years ago, when asbestos removal standards were different than they are now.

When AAP employees initially worked in the bathroom, they removed a good portion of the asbestos, Fisher said, but not all of it. The remaining asbestos on the pipe elbows was covered with a protective capsulent, but this capsulent was recently torn, and the asbestos flakes were exposed.

Today, the AAP removes all the asbestos and re-covers the pipes with a protective capsulent.

"At the time, they covered the pipes to meet with EPA standards," Fisher said, "but today the AAP removes all of the asbestos and then reinforces it. This is what we currently did at the SUB, and now it's 100 percent safe."

Fisher encourages those who suspect an asbestos problem or have any questions about asbestos to contact the UI Safety Office.

Fisher will conduct an asbestos awareness seminar Thursday. For more information, call the Safety Office.

RHA supports food service survey

By TRACY PEEL
Staff Writer

The Residence Hall Association discussed plans for a food service survey, and RHA President Ray Horton explained his position on the Marriott Corporation at Monday night's RHA meeting.

RHA Vice President Elizabeth Kniep has organized a committee to write a food service survey. The survey will ask hall residents about the specific problems they have with the current food service, according to Kniep.

"I'd like to get it out before spring break," Kniep said.

She said she would like every hall resident to have a written survey. Marriott surveys distributed in a similar manner in November yielded about 400 replies, Horton said. Survey plans will be formalized at a meeting tonight.

"A survey will make more of a difference with (UI) President Zinser than the referendum will," Kniep said.

Kniep was referring to a referendum asking whether Marriott's food service contract should be renewed. The referendum, which will be held March 14, is spearheaded by ASUI senators Bill Broadhead, John Goettche, Bill Heffner and Tony Lingner, who held a petition drive to force the referendum election.

Horton said after the meeting that he still wants students to participate in the referendum.

"If twenty percent go out and vote, Marriott will take that as eighty percent acceptance," Horton said.

Kniep and Horton will prepare a written report of problems with Marriott to present to Zinser.

Kniep and Horton met with Zinser two weeks ago to discuss Marriott's future at the university. According to Horton, Zinser said about five times that the university cannot afford to go back to a university-subsidized food service, although it may not stay with Marriott.

"She mad her point very clear," Horton said.

He said he was surprised that some ASUI senators would pursue a referendum, considering Zinser's position.

"I personally cannot believe the ASUI has not been told the same thing," Horton said.

Horton also said he objects to the senators soliciting signatures for the petition without first applying for a vendor's permit. He said that university rules and regulations require a permit.

Campus drug awareness programs offered

University of Idaho students, faculty and staff will have opportunities during the next few weeks to attend a series of programs in recognition of National Collegiate Drug Awareness Week.

The program is co-sponsored by the UI Student Advisory Services and the student chapters of BACCHUS and SADD.

The National Collegiate Drug Awareness Week is March 4-11, but activities will be extended throughout the month on the UI campus.

According to Dianne Milhollin, coordinator of the UI Disabled Student Services and of Substance Abuse Programs, the activity schedule was set with students in mind.

"We're spacing them (the sessions) out so students have time to study in between," Milhollin said.

The program will cover various aspects of drugs and will focus on the process of drug addiction, from prevention through recovery.

The next session, "Legal Liabilities for Greek Leaders," will be held today from 7 p.m. - 10 p.m. in the Student Union Building Galena Gold Room. UI Dean of Student Services Bruce Pitman and local attorney Jim Westberg will address the legal liabilities of issues specific to Greek living groups.

Thursday's program, "Drug Identification," features Pete Comstock and Bob Naughton of the Moscow Police Department. Comstock and Naughton will bring various drug samples for exhibition and explain the effects the specific drugs have on the body and behavior of those who take them. The session will be held in the SUB Appaloosa Room from 7 p.m. - 9 p.m.

A sign-up sheet for Latah County Jail tours and information about court arraignment dates that are open to the public will also be available.

For more information on these or upcoming sessions, contact Milhollin at Student Advisory Services or watch the Argonaut for further details.

Milhollin said she hopes the program will raise the campus awareness level and help those who are suffering from addiction or watching a loved one suffer.

"Hopefully it will help a lot of people," Milhollin said. "But even if it just helps one or two, it will have been worth it."

All the sessions are free and open to the public.

Police chief makes the correct decision

George Bush and William Bennett's "war on drugs" encountered an uncomfortable dilemma in Moscow Feb. 24. Before the astonished eyes of seven police officers, Moscow Police Chief David Cameron escorted his 19-year-old son Ryan from a Moscow home where police officers were just about to conduct a drug raid.

The police chief was aware that marijuana would be purchased by an undercover agent from one of Ryan Cameron's roommates that Saturday morning. However, Cameron was not aware that the undercover drug buy had already taken place, or that officers waiting for a search warrant were soon to begin the raid.

On the pretense of taking his son to breakfast, Cameron and his wife drove their son away from the home with the intent of avoiding the drug raid.

"I wanted to have him away from the house when the buy was made," Cameron said in a written statement dated March 2. "I was unaware the buy had already occurred when I arrived to take him to breakfast."

Confusion on the part of the police officers followed Cameron's departure from the house. However, police finally acted on Latah County Prosecutor Craig Mosman's suggestion that officers pull over Cameron's car and take in Ryan Cameron to be searched and questioned.

When the home was subsequently searched, police found a marijuana pipe they believe belonged to Cameron's son. Ryan Cameron has now received a misdemeanor summons for possession of the pipe. Cameron said that he himself had encountered no information that implicated his son in the distribution of drugs.

Although Cameron still remains in charge of the Moscow police, The Idaho Bureau of Investigation is currently conducting an investigation of Cameron's actions.

Cameron said by removing his son from the scene of the drug buy, he had "made a decision as a parent rather than as a law enforcement officer, a decision made with my heart rather than my head."

His heart rather than his head. It is unfortunate that Police Chief Cameron was forced to make such a decision in the midst of a society full of contradictions and hypocrisy. The letter, rather than the spirit of the law, is held in prominence.

And yet the war on drugs is a lie even in the face of such legal positivism. The drug problem does not emanate from middle-class college freshmen selling marijuana, nor is it caused by Colombian drug czars. Rather, as Jefferson Morley explains in his Oct. 2 Nation article, the drug industry is sustained by American bankers, by white business executives sitting in air-conditioned offices.

"This class ranges from friends of Pete Rose (three of whom are doing time for coke deals) to friends of Oliver North (one of whom played a leading role in a scheme to import $10 million worth of cocaine into Florida)," Morley writes. "They are, in the words of one Treasury Department official, the 'members of a wealthy, highly skilled, professional class, many of whom are highly respected members of the community. They are attorneys, accountants, bankers and money brokers.'"

They are the pillars of the capitalist community that Bush and Bennett cherish and admire. Drugs are big business.

Police Chief Cameron did the correct thing by acting with his heart rather than his head. It would be a challenge to Bush and Bennett to act with either. — Matt Helmick

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Asbestos policies reflect management, not paranoia

Editor:

I submit the following letter in response to Russ Biaggne's editorial, "Asbestos More of a Hazard Than Supposed," that appeared in Friday's Argonaut. This letter documents my findings from the third floor men's restroom in the Student Union Building (SUB) and also addresses asbestos-related diseases, the university's Asbestos Abatement Program (AAP) and asbestos awareness education available on campus.

After learning about Mr. Biaggne's concern about the pipe insulation in the third floor men's restroom, I headed down to the SUB expecting the worst. I found a small amount of a white substance on one of the pipe elbows. Since asbestos must be identified by examination under a microscope, I collected a bulk sample of the residual insulation left on the pipe elbow and collected tape samples from the floor to determine if any asbestos fibers had fallen to the floor. I also set up two air sample pumps (one inside the restroom and one in the reception area) and closed down the restroom.

Rather than wait for the sample results from the analytical laboratory, I consulted the Safety Office's asbestos sample data base and determined that the material was asbestos. I immediately called Jim Petersen, foreman of the AAP. Mr. Petersen told me that his crew had removed the asbestos-containing insulation in the third floor men's restroom approximately six years ago, just after the AAP was initiated. He also said that any remaining insulation had been thoroughly encapsulated (i.e., coated with a latex-based coating designed to bind and seal fibers, thereby rendering them harmless). After my call, the AAP crew immediately recleaned and re-encapsulated the exposed steam pipe in the restroom, cleaned the area underneath the pipe and also inspected the pipes in the women's restroom.

Both air samples came back as less than .005 fibers per cubic centimeter of air (f/cc). The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) considers air with .01 or less f/cc to be "clean air." I reopened the restroom Monday morning.

As for health concerns, it is important to remember that the three most serious asbestos-related diseases are caused by inhaled asbestos fibers. Asbestos only becomes a health risk if the fibers become airborne where they can be inhaled.

Asbestosis is caused by heavy, long-term inhalation of asbestos fibers, resulting in fibrotic scarring of the lung and reduced lung capacity. The latency period for asbestosis ranges from 15 to 35 years, and victims usually die from heart failure due to the extra stress put on the cardiovascular system.

Lung cancer is responsible for more than half of the asbestos worker deaths related to asbestos. Smokers who work with asbestos have a 50 to 90 times greater chance of contracting lung cancer than people who do not smoke and who are not exposed to asbestos. Lung cancer related

Mandela to make a difference

Picture a country where each culture is permitted to live its own way, with its own government. Where each race is given the freedom to continue its native customs without the pressure of political change.

Now think of South Africa. This was the political philosophy behind the apartheid system created in the 1940s to serve a multi-racial and multi-cultural population within South Africa.

This ideology was not as candid as it professed to be, however. The bottom line is, the evil underbelly of apartheid is the propagation of one race's superiority over another.

Gradually people realized that the political system of South Africa must change, and over time pressure for reform came from all sides of the globe.

In recent years, our television screens have shown scenes of violent and often bloody confrontations between South African police and the people of black townships. Our newspapers have printed stories of the carnage and destruction, wrought in a country in the grip of a crumbling and decaying political system. We have seen communities broken and servitude strewn through the streets, rampant as the protestors who have died for their cause.

But in the midst of this horror is a hope. During the last year South Africa has seen events that at one time seemed impossible. It now appears the uphill struggle against apartheid is actually making a difference.

History is being made. As an outsider, my views and opinions are little more than reflections of media reports. But what is the "real" picture of South Africa? How does it feel to be part of a country alienated from the rest of the world? What do those closest to the situation believe the future holds?

I recently put some of these questions to Larry Gresham, a native South African currently studying at the University of Idaho on a tennis scholarship. His answers were interesting and uniquely revealing, as he gave an insight into life behind the curtain of apartheid:

Countries around the world have made it clear, through political embargoes, that they do not support your country's policies. What is the general feeling among the white South African population toward these imposing countries?

The majority would tend toward annoyance. There is a common attitude, I think, that runs along the "mind your own business" vein. However, at the same time, they feel isolated, detached from the rest of the world. Not so much in the economic sense, but certainly in the sports and the arts.

You say that the whites do not feel the economic strain. Does this mean that sanctions have not worked?

That is a difficult question to answer. Sanctions have helped to change things, to get things moving, but largely I think they have been hurting the wrong people.

Really it's been the low-paid workers, the black employees, that have borne the brunt of the blow. These are the very people whom they are intended to help. Sanctions are more useful as a statement of discontent than as an economic restraint. The big industries weren't even grazed. South Africa's largest export is gold. Over 95 percent of all the world's gold is mined in the country, but the industry hasn't been hit. It would be difficult, if not impossible, to halt this market without incurring worldwide financial chaos.

Do you think that there are other ways in which the world can show its vexation at the situation?

No, I don't think so. I can't see any alternatives to sanctions. Perhaps sanctions can be more effectively applied, possibly stricter. But really the pressure needs to come from within. The changes will come when the government really begins to feel the strain from the inside. This is happening now in a very real sense.

How soon do you think it will be before we will be able to see true democracy in South Africa?

Well, right now the country is going through a critical period, but definitely within two years.

What changes can we expect to see after this time?

The open ballot is a certainty; voting rights will be universal. Also, there will be an expansion of political freedom. This is dependent of course on the assumption that a Nazi-type organization like the AWB does not come into power beforehand. However, I think that is extremely unlikely.

Moving on to the media now. We see horrific scenes on our television screens and read of the brutal killings occurring throughout the country. How well do you think the media portrays the reality of the situation?

This is another difficult question to answer. The Western press shows only the negative aspects, but then again that's "news" the world over. The truth is shown. The stories haven't given apartheid an unfair press or anything like that; it is shown to be evil, and it is. Often, however, the violence was exaggerated. Police action was frequently shown to be more violent than it actually was. However, I do not condone their exploits, and I do not feel that the reporting was in the least bit unfair.

As far as the South African media is concerned, it has been blocked out of the scene for two reasons.

First, television, which is the biggest media force, is owned by the government, and therefore only pro-government ideas and stories are broadcast. Second, although the press is probably split evenly between the liberals and the conservatives, for the last two years heavy restrictions have limited the material that is available for publication. However, recently the restrictions have been lifted, which can only be seen as a step in the right direction.

What with Nelson Mandela's release and the recent unbanning of the ANC (African National Congress), an organization renowned for its strong stand against the political system and justification of the use of violence, do you think this "loosening" of the bonds of apartheid is indicative of things to come?

Absolutely. There have been some remarkable things happening over the last year and especially in the last month. A dynamic chapter is being written in the annals of South Africa. Apartheid is collapsing and the barriers to democracy are falling away. Reform is inevitable.

Now that Nelson Mandela is free, will he make a difference?

Yes, definitely. He could be the key between the ANC and the South African government. At the present time, the two have never met. But now, after Mandela's release, they are to meet for talks. His role, I think, could be as a mediator between the two, and he could play a crucial part in the establishment of a peaceful multi-racial South Africa.

What, then, needs to happen in order that the country should have a peaceful resolution to its present plight?

First, there must be productive talks between the ANC and the South African government. Agreements must be made and inhibitions shed; then the doors will be ready to be opened.

Second, any reforms need to be made quickly. People want freedom NOW, not the promise of a brighter future. I could see South Africa going through an almost instantaneous change, not unlike East Germany, if only the conservative party did not continue to veto the reforms in government. Indeed, I think without the obstinate presence of the conservative party, South Africa would have begun these changes many years ago.

With the freeing of Nelson Mandela, the unbanning of the ANC and the countless restrictions that have been lifted during the last year, it appears South Africa at long last is ready for the talks that could begin the reconstruction that the world longs for. Let us hope so.

to asbestos usually takes 20 to 30 years to develop.

Mesothelioma is cancer of the lung lining or abdominal cavity lining. The latency period is variable but generally takes 30 to 40 years to develop after initial exposure. It is linked almost exclusively to asbestos exposure and is usually fatal within a year of diagnosis.

The university has had an in-house abatement crew since October 1983. The AAP has spent millions of dollars on asbestos abatement, repair and decontamination. The university is not attempting to remove all the asbestos on campus; rather, asbestos is only abated when it poses a health threat or when it must be removed for maintenance or remodeling considerations. This philosophy of "asbestos management" rather than "asbestos paranoia" is consistent with both the EPA's regulations and the findings of the August 1989 International Symposium on the Health Aspects of Exposure in Buildings held at Harvard University. In other words, asbestos-containing materials (ACM) in good condition do not pose a health threat, so it is not necessary to abate them. Furthermore, abating these materials has the potential of releasing fibers into the air if it is not done properly. The EPA only requires friable (easily crumbled) or potentially friable asbestos to be abated prior to demolition of a building.

The AAP crew is trained to manage asbestos safely. All four crew members are certified asbestos workers, and the foreman and leadman are also certified asbestos supervisors. I am an EPA certified inspector and management plan writer and have attended a seminar on asbestos control procedures. All AAP projects are carefully monitored by the Safety Office, and they are periodically inspected by the EPA and the state Department of Labor and Industrial Services.

It is true that the crew was larger in the past, but the current, more streamlined AAP crew is perfectly suited to handle smaller projects and emergencies on campus. Larger projects are contracted out to off-campus asbestos abatement firms that are held to the same strict standards to protect the health of building occupants.

Asbestos awareness education is readily available on campus. For instance, I am presenting an asbestos awareness seminar Thursday. (To register, call Conferences and Enrichment at 885-6486.) For the past two years, interested people from the Physical Plant, Housing, the SUB and the Animal Science Farm Shop have attended. Each year the Safety Office includes an asbestos awareness insert in the Idaho Register and follows this up with a semi-annual reminder.

The Safety Office, in conjunction with the EPA, has also established the Asbestos Information Hotline for Homeowners (800-541-4406 or 208-885-7175). The hotline is open during university business hours and serves the residents of Idaho, Oregon and Washington.

Finally, concerned individuals may contact me at the Safety Office (885-6524). Incidentally, I usually learn of asbestos problems on campus during inspections, via telephone calls or from people stopping by my office, rather than by reading about them in the Argonaut.

Foreign Language week celebrated on UI campus

By MARY HEUETT
Staff Writer

Welcome to National Foreign Language Week.

The University of Idaho Department of Foreign Languages and Literatures and the Foreign Language Association are showing many items connected with teaching foreign languages in display cases in the Administration Building lobby.

Wednesday at 7:30 p.m., UI English instructor Buddy Levy and his wife Cami will show slides of their 1989 summer bike tour through such countries as Germany, the Netherlands, Portugal, Spain and France. The presentation will be held in the Administration Building, Room 316, and is open to the public.

Thursday at 7 p.m., The Red and The Black will be shown in the Administration Building, Room 316. Written by Stendhal and directed by Claude Autant-Lara, the 1954 film is in French with English subtitles. The showing is open to the public.

March 31, a Spanish immersion day will be held for students with a competency level equivalent to three college semesters. Those interested should register with the Foreign Languages and Literatures office by March 26. The cost is $10.

Films featured at Women's Center during history month

March is women's history month, and the University of Idaho Women's Center will celebrate with a month-long film festival. Programs will feature films about women's history, famous women, women earning the right to vote, and changes in society, styles and sports for women. All films begin at 12:30 p.m. at the center and are open to the public.

Today's film is Willmar Eight, the story of eight unassuming, apolitical women in America's heartland who took action against sex discrimination at work and found themselves in the forefront of the struggle for women's rights. The women began the longest bank strike in American history in an attempt to win equity and dignity at work.

Wednesday's films are A Woman's Place, a historical look at successful women in America in the '70s, and We The Women, a film that traces the history of the women's movement from colonial times through the '70s.

Sunday the Campus Christian Center will co-sponsor a program featuring the film The Women's Full Moon Worship, described as "a women-only celebration of the divine feminine, incorporating Christian and goddess symbols and using female images exclusively."

America At Risk - A History of Consumer Protest will be shown March 13. This film provides a perspective on the early decades of consumer action and today's consumer policy issues.

Sports that Set the Styles and Styles that Made a Splash are scheduled for March 14.

Long March of the Suffragists will be shown March 27.

Three films, Quilts in Women's Lives, Women and Society and Token Gesture will be shown March 28.

Collette play looks at sexual stereotypes

By BETH BARCLAY
Staff Writer

UI students will get a look at contemporary Italian theater this week as Collette Productions brings Franca Rame and Dario Fo's shocking investigation of sexual stereotypes to the stage in Orgasmo Adulto Escapes from the Zoo.

The play resembles last year's Talking With. It connects a series of monologues dealing with a woman's approach to the bonds between sexuality and personal identity.

According to director Kim Bouchard, this bond is the unifying theme between each discourse. From the innocent naivete of Emily L. Petkewich's portrayal of a new bride to Kathryn Anne Redmond's role in "Monologue of a Whore in a Lunatic Asylum," each woman brings a new perspective to the role sexuality plays in identity.

But the play is more than this, according to Bouchard.

"It's outside of the normal, and this abstraction of reality allows the actresses to talk with the audience in a way that won't offend them," she said.

Bouchard says that some abstract comedy has been incorporated into the play in a way she hopes will bring the audience even closer to the actresses.

While the play's structure resembles Talking With, Bouchard says that the play is much more Italian. Its warping of time and disintegration of the imaginary "fourth wall" that theatergoers may be accustomed to might present a challenge to the audience as well as to the cast.

Fortunately, the cast list boasts a great deal of experience with such actresses as Rozlyn Simmons, Lisa Lechner and Virginia Belt, along with Petkewich and Redmond.

Simmons is already a familiar face on the theater front with her work in the Shade Of Difference production Talking With and with her violent portrayal of a victim's revenge in Extremities this year. Lechner was the cool-headed roommate in Extremities. Both actresses also performed in Cabaret.

A relative newcomer to acting is Virginia Belt, who has worked with the American Festival Ballet and the Duluth Ballet. Belt also choreographed UI's production of Cabaret.

Orgasmo Adulto Escapes From the Zoo will be performed at the Collette Theater Thursday, Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. and Sunday at 2 p.m. Tickets are $3 at Ticket Express or at the door.

Out West tour brings revue to Idaho

By MARY HEUETT
Staff Writer

The Montana Repertory Theater brings Out West: Stories From The Big Sky to the Hartung Theater Monday at 8 p.m.

Sponsored by the University of Idaho theater arts department, the play chronicles the West's literary and musical heritage.

The multi-talented cast combines singing, dancing, musical talent and storytelling in this lively revue.

Inspired by Montana's centennial anthology, the play sparkles with vivacious stories, journals, yarns and poetry spanning 180 years of Montana and its people, according to Carolyn Redington, public relations director.

John Bartruff brought the anthology, The Last Best Place, to the stage.

Described as "the culmination of an idea and a wish: to find the very best writing about Mont-na," the anthology has won rave reviews since November 1988, according to Redington.

Bartruff first met with the anthology's editors, Bill Kirtledge and Annick Smith, in October 1988. With their praise and support for the project, Bartruff then sought and received permission to use the works of 12 authors and 11 songwriters from across the country.

Previews of the musical during its developmental stages were received with enthusiasm.

The cast selected for the Out West tour consists of student interns and professional actors hailing from Montana, Washington and Georgia.

The tour runs for three months and shows 42 times in six states.

The production includes works by Jim Welch, Charlie Russell, A.B. Guthrie Jr. and Dorothy Johnson. Of special interest is the poetry of Richard Hugo, who named Montana "the last best place."

Songs by John Denver, Cole Porter, Mark Staples, Jack Gladstone and Burt Bacharach and Hal David are featured in the play.

From Indian coyote tales to Porter's "Don't Fence Me In," Out West is an evening of enchantment for the whole family, Redington said.

Out West, which opened in Missoula, Mont., Jan. 31, 1990, is the Montana Repertory Theater's 1990 tour show.

Bruce Brockman, UI theater arts department chairman, is the guest designer for Out West.

Created in 1967, the Montana Repertory Theater focuses on presenting quality theater to small and medium-sized towns in the West that do not have ready access to professional theater.

Tickets can be purchased at Ticket Express in the Student Union Building.

Vandals crush Eagles to become No. 1 seed

By J.C. CARTER
Staff Writer

The University of Idaho Vandals won their second straight Big Sky Conference championship by defeating the Eastern Washington Eagles Thursday in front of a Reese Court record crowd of 5,621.

The Vandals were led by senior Riley Smith's 29 points and 12 rebounds, including 13-of-16 shooting from the field. Smith, who scored 31 points in the University of Nevada-Reno game earlier last week, was named Big Sky Conference Player of the Week for the fourth time this year and the seventh time in his two-year UI career.

It was a typical nip-and-tuck Big Sky Conference championship thriller until midway through the second half, when UI exploded on a 13-2 run and later scored 11 straight points to throttle the Eagles 72-54.

UI, 13-3 in conference play and 23-5 overall, will be the No. 1 seed in the Coors Light tournament this weekend in Boise.

The single-elimination tournament will open Thursday night with third-seeded University of Montana (10-6, 18-10) playing sixth-seeded Montana State University (8-8, 16-11) at 5:30 p.m.

SMITH

Pacific Standard Time. The nightcap will involve fourth-seeded UNR (9-7, 15-12) against fifth-place finisher Weber State College (8-8, 12-14).

Both UI and EWU (11-5, 17-10) received byes for the opening night of play. UI will play the lowest remaining seed Friday at 5:30 p.m., while the Eagles close out the day at 8 p.m. against the higher-seeded team.

The winners of Friday's games will meet at 7 p.m. PST Saturday for the Big Sky title, to be televised by ESPN.

The winner of the BSC tournament will receive an automatic bid to the NCAA 64-team tournament that starts March 15, while the runner-up will hope for an at-large bid. Thirty-one conference winners receive automatic bids to the NCAA tournament, while 33 receive at-large bids.

Last year Big Sky runner-up Boise State University failed to receive a bid from the NCAA, despite an impressive 23-6 record.

The Vandals have been nearly assured of a spot in the 32-team National Invitational Tournament, according to NIT Executive Director Jack Powers. The Vandals may host an NIT game if they fail to receive a bid to the NCAA tournament.

Although UI is happy with the recognition, Vandal Head Coach

Kermit Davis said the NIT is not on the Vandals' minds. He said they want the conference title and a bid to the NCAA tournament.

"Our goals are directed toward going to the NCAAs," Davis said.

UI enters the Big Sky tournament with a 7-7 record in its 14-year history, including a 3-0 mark for the 1981, 1982 and 1989 championship games. Last year UI trounced Montana 77-56 and BSU 59-52 to win the title and advance to the NCAA tournament. Smith, who was named the Big Sky tournament's Most Valuable Player, scored 41 points and grabbed 17 rebounds in the two games.

UI will play Weber State, Montana State or Nevada-Reno Friday. All three teams have defeated the Vandals once this year.

UI faces the difficult task of preparing for no one in particular. "We're just going to practice hard and do the things we do best," Davis said of the team's strategies for Friday's game.

Davis said he has no preference regarding which team he would like the Vandals to play. "We aren't hoping to play anyone in particular," he said. "Everyone's playing well right now, and all three teams have beaten us before."

UI will again be led by Smith, who now has three Vandal season records. He is on pace to set three more Vandal records and a field-goal percentage conference record.

Smith continues to take charge down the stretch for UI. He has averaged 26 points and has shot 70 percent from the field during the last six games.

Teammate (Sweet) Otis Livingston moved up to second on the BSC assist list with 231 in a season. He needs just 10 more to break Billy Allen's record set in 1981-82. Livingston, a University of Kansas transfer, also needs just

Men take second, women fourth at indoor track championships

The University of Idaho knows how to make a lot out of a little, at least in track and field.

Last weekend at the Big Sky Indoor Championships in Flagstaff, Ariz., the Vandal men's and women's track teams had only small teams present. Because of the traveling distance, the men took only 10 competitors and the women only eight.

Both teams performed well, however. The men finished second and the women took fourth.

"It just goes to show that ten Vandals are as good as nineteen Broncos," men's Head Coach Mike Keller said, referring to Boise State University's 19-member team that was favored to take second.

Nine of the 10 UI men who went to the meet scored. The Vandals placed first in the 55, 200 and 800-meter races and first in the 400, 800 and 1,600-meter relays.

The 1,600-meter relay was the climax of the championships and was the deciding factor in the men's second-place finish. To place second, the UI team of Justin Havens, Rob Demick, Eversley Linley and Lenford O'Garro had to finish ahead of BSU. The team not only beat BSU but won the event with a time of 3:10.79, two seconds ahead of second-place Northern Arizona University. The Broncos took third in the relay.

Patrick Williams and teammate Eric Haynes combined for first and second-place finishes in both the 55 and 200-meter races, with Williams edging Haynes by .05 of a second. Linley won the 800-meter race, and Bernardo Barrios took second in the 3,000 and 5,000-meter races.

"The guys who really had to do the work were the sprinters and the long runners," Keller said. "It was really a three-team race going into it, but BSU just didn't perform up to their capabilities."

Women's Head Coach Scott Lorek said he was equally pleased with his team's performance.

"We were about the smallest team there," Lorek said. "We got the most out of eight people."

Jackie Ross, who broke conference and school records in the triple jump, was voted outstanding field event athlete of the meet by the coaches. Ross, a freshman, led the conference in the triple jump all season and placed first at the conference meet. She placed second in the long jump at the meet.

"We got personal records out of everyone, and the mile relay was a school record," Lorek said. "That's as well as we could have done with eight people. It's a tremendous achievement for the girls."

The Northern Arizona University women placed first, followed by BSU, Weber State College, UI, Eastern Washington University, Montana State University, Idaho State University, the University of Montana and the University of Nevada-Reno.

The NAU men finished first, followed by UI, BSU, MSU, WSC, ISU, UNR, UM and EWU.

Women defeat EWU to end regular season

Face Broncos in first round

By MATT LAWSON
Staff Writer

The Lady Vandals raced to a 43-29 halftime lead and never looked back in their 72-62 victory over Eastern Washington University Saturday in their final regular-season Big Sky Conference game.

The win helped UI clinch a second-place finish in the Big Sky going into the tournament later this week.

Sabrina Dial finished her career with a game-high 23 points in her final home game as a Vandal.

After trailing 20-19 midway through the first half, the Lady Vandals went on a 14-0 run to take a 33-20 lead.

The spurt was keyed by Hettie DeJong, who scored 10 of the 14 points, including eight straight.

UI never trailed after halftime in a rugged second half that saw neither team score a field goal during a five-minute stretch.

DeJong finished the game with

Kelly Moeller came off the bench to contribute 10 points, and Krista Smith added eight.

Keys in the Vandal victory were steady defensive play and improved foul shooting. UI shot 72 percent (18-25) from the foul line.

The Lady Vandals finished 19-8 overall and 11-5 in the conference. They will take on Boise State University Friday night in the first round of the Big Sky Tournament in Missoula, Mont.

THE FOLLOWING QUESTIONS WILL BE ON THE REFERENDUM:

- ▶ Should Marriott's foodservice contract at the Univ. of Idaho be renewed?
- ▶ Should the Univ. of Idaho run the foodservice on campus without a private vendor?

five steals to break Don Newman's UI record of 64.

UI's No. 1 seeding is somewhat bittersweet, since BSU did not qualify for the tournament this year but remains the host team. The decision to hold the tournament in Boise, regardless of the regular-season outcome, was made during the off-season by an 8-1 vote of the conference's university presidents. The presidents believed BSU could draw more fans in the tournament and earn more money for the conference.

In past years, the regular-season champion was rewarded by hosting the postseason tournament. UI President Elisabeth Zinser cast the sole ballot that determined that the format would remain the same.

If a Big Sky Conference team advances to the NCAA tournament and wins just one game, the conference will earn $300,000.

Davis said he feels the tournament should be held in Moscow, and that since Boise State did not make the tournament, perhaps "justice is served." He said the conference should go back to allowing the regular-season champion to host the tournament.

On the "sweet" side, UI, the only in-state representative in Boise, will be considered the home team. The Vandals have won five of the seven contests they have played in the BSU Pavilion in the past two years. An average of nearly 10,000 fans has turned out to watch the Vandals in Boise.

The deadline to purchase tickets at the UI office is today at 5 p.m. Tournament passes are $19.50, compared to $37.50 in Boise. Tickets for individual games will go on sale Wednesday in Boise.

MSAC announces assistance schedule

The University of Idaho Mathematics and Statistics Assistance Center has been expanded to provide more assistance to mathematics and statistics students. The MSAC is now located in the Life Sciences Building basement, Room 41. The basement entrance is off Idaho Street, in the parking lot area.

Mathematics assistance is available for Math 50, 101, 111, 140, 160, 176, 179 and 180 and Statistics 105, 251 and 301.

Homework Assistance:

Students in the courses listed above are encouraged to do their homework in the MSAC as often as they wish. For all the hours listed below, at least two undergraduate assistants and often three graduate assistants will be available. The assistants will be ready to answer questions and offer other help as needed.

Homework help is available as follows:

Monday — Thursday: 12:30 p.m. - 5 p.m.; 7 p.m. - 9 p.m.
Friday: 12:30 p.m. - 3:30 p.m.
Sunday: 2 p.m. - 4 p.m.

Tutorial Group Review Sessions: (for Math 50, 111, 140, 160 and 180). Graduate students will give special tutorial review sessions of material covered in the various classes. They will review concepts and prepare problems that illustrate the topics covered or difficulties students may have with the material.

Since most of the graduate tutors are teaching both the classes and the accompanying review sessions, they will be familiar with the material covered in the various classes and can perhaps anticipate the questions students might have.

Two-part review sessions will be offered during two different afternoons and repeated during two different evenings.

The schedule for the tutorial group sessions is:

Math 50:

Part I — Monday, 3:30 p.m. - 4:30 p.m.; Tuesday, 8 p.m. - 9 p.m.

Part II — Wednesday, 3:30 p.m. - 4:30 p.m.; Thursday, 8 p.m. - 9 p.m.

p.m. - 8 p.m.

Math 140:

Part II — Wednesday, 7 p.m. - 8 p.m.; Thursday, 3:30 p.m. - 4:30 p.m.

Math 160:

Part II — Wednesday 7 p.m. - 8 p.m.; Tuesday, 2:30 p.m. - 3:30 p.m.

Statistics Assistance Lab: The statistics assistants are graduate students in statistics who are attending or have attended the classes for which they assist, and they work closely with the course instructors. Statistics assistance is on a drop-in basis. Call the MSAC for information about the hours specific course assistants will be available.

For more information, contact Voxman or Shea at the center at 885-5717.

National honor society seeks new membership

By DENISE BUNCH
Staff Writer

The Golden Key National Honor Society is holding a membership drive for a charter at the University of Idaho.

Golden Key is a non-profit academic honors organization founded to recognize and encourage scholastic achievement among students from all academic fields.

A group of undergraduate students at Georgia State University founded the student-run honor society 12 years ago.

Membership in Golden Key is by invitation, and only the top 15 percent of UI juniors and seniors are qualified. Terry Armstrong, UI chapter adviser, sent letters of invitation last week, and several students have responded.

The one-time $45 membership fee provides many benefits for Golden Key members. Each year local chapters award two scholarships to the outstanding junior and senior initiates. Members also receive a lifetime subscription to Golden Key's annual publication, Concepts, which features articles written by Golden Key members nationwide.

Golden Key also has a career assistance program that uses networking to help members find employment after graduation.

Although the chartering reception is the primary activity for this year, members will plan many activities in the future.

Shelly Fay, Golden Key western regional director, says that Golden Key is an exciting chapter with a great deal of diversity. Because Golden Key is an interdisciplinary honor society that accepts both full and part-time students, Fay expects 150-250 UI students to join.

Fay says that even graduating seniors can handle Golden Key responsibilities, since participating in the chapter's activities is voluntary.

Fay and UI Golden Key Charter President Don Acree said Golden Key includes scholastic interests as well as social aspects.

Fay and Acree said they are enthusiastic about the membership drive.

"We do acknowledge that there are other honor societies on campus," Fay said. "We aren't competing. In fact, we encourage students to join both."

A reception recognizing the accomplishments of Golden Key's new members will be held in the Student Union Building East Ballroom April 24 at 7:30 p.m.

Godwin said increased student financial aid might offset part of the burden of the increase.

Dan Davenport, student financial aid director, said he plans to study this possibility and submit the results to Godwin later this week. He said a $38.50 per semester increase might qualify students for additional aid, since the increase would cause the cost of attending the university to rise, which in turn could increase students' financial need and eligibility.
