Zinser consults student groups for input on fee increase

By VIVIANE GILBERT
News Editor

University of Idaho President Elisabeth Zinser and several administrators met with three campus groups in the last two days to gather student opinion about the proposed fee increase.

Zinser met with the ASUI Senate Wednesday evening and with the Graduate and Professional Students Association and campus living group representatives Thursday evening.

She was assisted by Hal Godwin, acting vice president of student affairs, Joseph Geiger, financial vice president of financial affairs, and George Simmons, assistant vice president of academic affairs.

The meetings were set up so that the administration could get the different perceptions of a variety of groups and allow the students to ask questions. About 20 people attended the GPSA meeting, and about 30 undergraduates represented living groups at the second meeting.

Zinser sent a notice of intent concerning student fee and tuition increases for 1990-91 to ASUI President David Pena and Argonaut Editor Matt Helmick earlier this week.

A copy of the notice of intent was sent to the Idaho State Board of Education.

The groups brought up many different concerns specific to their members and suggested various uses of the money. To all of the groups, Zinser explained why she felt the increase was necessary and asked what the students saw as needs that could be met with the money.

According to a memo attached to the notice of intent, Zinser said she intended to seek the regents' approval for an overall fee increase of 7 percent, or $38.50 per semester, for full-time undergraduate students.

The increase breaks down to a $5 increase in activity fees and a $33.50 increase in matriculation fees per semester. The increase will bring the total per semester fees to $587.50.

If the proposal is adopted, full-time non-resident tuition would be raised by $77 per semester, full-time graduate/professional fees would be raised by $12, and part-time fees, including the summer school fee, by $5 per credit hour.

Zinser called the increase a “modest increment” and said that fees needed to be raised to keep pace with the growth in state general funds.

“We’re trying to maintain a relative proportional balance between the resources,” Zinser said.

She said she felt student fees should be raised during good economic times and either remain the same or possibly be cut during difficult economic times.

“What we want to do is even out, as much as we can, the trajectory of fee increases,” Zinser said, “and to do that in a way that we feel is fair and not unreasonable to expect from students.”

The proposed hike would generate about $1.6 million next year in additional revenue for the university.

RHA asks for investigation of petitioners' tactics

By SHERRY DEAL
Managing Editor

Residence Hall Association leaders have questioned the right of ASUI senators to hold a petition drive in the Wallace Complex without receiving a vendor's permit.

On behalf of the RHA, RHA President Ray Horton sent a letter dated March 6 to several university officials, including Bruce Pitman, dean of student advisory services, and Hal Godwin, acting vice president of student affairs, asking for clarification of the vendor's permit regulations and requesting disciplinary action if necessary.

In his letter, Horton cites Section 5127, Clause A of the UI Faculty-Staff Handbook, which states, “Solicitation and canvassing by individuals or organizations on UI property without prior approval by the president or president's designee (normally the dean for student advisory services) is prohibited.”

However ASUI Sen. Bill Broadhead, one of the senators involved in the petition drive, said Horton neglected to mention the second part of the clause which he feels shows that the clause was intended to regulate off-campus vendors.

The clause reads, “United Way and Vandal Boosters have continuing approval, and the sales of tickets for events sponsored by local lodges, clubs and organizations are permitted if the sales are made by faculty, staff or students. In no case are outside solicitors to be allowed.”

According to Horton, RHA has been responsible for issuing vendor permits to groups soliciting the dorms this year. He said Pitman previously handled the permits, but felt RHA should regulate the residence halls since they were most affected by the solicitors. Pitman still issues permits for other campus areas.

In his letter, Horton said he felt ASUI officials may have violated guidelines previously set by RHA instructing solicitors to keep the traffic area clear and to avoid using “high pressure” tactics to gain participants.

The letter says RHA's concern centers on “the fact that these ASUI officials chose to locate themselves in a place that interferes with the flow of traffic to and from the cafeteria, and that the ASUI representatives went door to door in a few cases to find signers for their petition.”

The letter refers to a recent effort by ASUI senators to obtain signatures for a petition calling for a referendum to gauge student opinion about Marriott.

The petition expresses students' desire to have an opportunity to vote on Marriott, and does not call for an opinion one way or the other.

Horton said he sent the letter after hearing complaints from students who claimed they were pressured into signing the petition.

“They (complaining students) said they signed the petition to get the people off their back,” Horton said.

ASUI Sen. Bill Heffner said he and Broadhead stood outside the entrance to the cafeteria and asked students if they would like to sign a petition to put “the Marriott issue to a student vote.”

Heffner said that if anyone was asked to sign the petition more than once, it was because more than 1,500 students were asked to sign it, and he could not remember who had already been approached.

Heffner also said his intentions were not to block the entrance to the cafeteria.

“If there was any blocking, it was by people who were waiting to sign the petition,” he said. “We even had some people who asked us if they could sign it twice.”

Heffner said no students complained to him or Broadhead about the petition or about blocking the entrance.

Lorien Dickerson, Campbell Hall president, said she heard complaints from students saying they were pushed into signing the petition, and that they were not aware of its purpose.

However, she said she did not blame the ASUI senators for the students' lack of knowledge concerning the petition's purpose. “It was their (the students') responsibility to read it before they signed it,” she said.

Horton said the ASUI used the lobby during election time this fall without a vendor's permit, but he did not take action on the issue because he was not sure how the matter was handled in the past.

“I did not realize my failure to act at that time would be taken as a blanket approval for all future ASUI activities,” he wrote in the letter.

Heffner said that to his knowledge the senate has never been asked to obtain a vendor's permit

State of the ASUI

ASUI President David Pena will give the 1990 State of the ASUI Address Monday at noon in the Student Union Building Vandal Lobby.

Pena will be presenting his budget proposal and will explain his proposed budget changes. The proposal has not yet been presented to the ASUI Senate Finance Committee.

“I am presenting budget changes that will create a leaner organization with more potential to expand the constituency and will increase student services in a big way,” Pena said.

He said that in the last few years the ASUI has been tightening its belt and that now it is time to loosen up a little. “I think the students will definitely be enjoying a windfall,” he said.

Pena invites all interested individuals to attend. He will accept questions from the audience after his presentation.

Marriott tries to improve image, reassigns manager

By TRACY PEEL
Staff Writer

The on-campus director of University Dining Services by Marriott has been reassigned, a Marriott official announced at the Residence Hall Association food service committee meeting Thursday night.

"We made the decision in cooperation with the university to reassign Lynn Morrison," said Rick Waldt, regional director of Marriott Corporation.

Morrison, who has directed Marriott on campus since last year, was not at the meeting, but she will continue as campus director until a replacement has been found, probably during spring break.

"To accomplish the things we want to accomplish on this campus, we're going to need a fresh set of eyes and ears and an unbiased opinion," Waldt said.

"It's a definite victory for the students," RHA President Ray Horton said after the meeting. "What's been needed for a long time is a whole new attitude toward the way we run food service."

Morrison will most likely be replaced by Jerry Curtis, who oversees Marriott's dining services at Oral Roberts University in Tulsa, Okla.

Morrison will be reassigned to a marketing, training or directorial position within Marriott.

"Marketing is really her greatest strength," Waldt said.

Marriott has made another move to improve its image at the university. Bob Hart, a chef at a Marriott-run food service in Austin, Texas, has been called in to upgrade the food quality at the UI.

Hart will advise food preparers on how to make the food more palatable and more appealing.

"They're doing what they're supposed to do," Hart said, "and they will be doing it even better."

While Marriott employees are following recipes, other factors are influencing the food quality, Hart said. He said after the meeting that he has already made some changes.

"I ordered a high-gluten bread flour, which should improve the quality of the rolls," Hart said.

The high-gluten flour should make the dough more elastic and give the rolls better texture, he said. He has also changed the amount of time the vegetables are cooked, to make them less mushy.

Hart is only "on loan" from Southwestern University and will be replaced as soon as Marriott can find someone to fill the position permanently. Waldt said his company has narrowed the choice to two applicants and that a decision will be made by the end of March.

Hart's job is to "help the management team learn what a chef can do for them," he said.

Also at the food service committee meeting, Jerry Wallace, the university's liaison with Marriott, explained why the university takes 8 percent of Marriott's net profits on this campus.

"It's not unrestricted profit," Wallace said of the university's commission on Marriott's profits.

The university uses the money to pay for equipment maintenance, facilities, furniture and new equipment that Marriott uses, he said.

For example, the university has a full-time maintenance employee who works entirely in the Wallace Complex cafeteria. Wallace also said that the university's commission could pay for items like a new frozen yogurt machine.

"We could spend all the money we could get," Wallace said.

Also at the meeting, RHA presented a rough draft of its food service survey.

A soon-to-be-distributed RHA survey will determine student confidence in Marriott's role at the university. RHA drafted the survey as an alternative to the food service referendum the ASUI will hold Wednesday.

RHA has come under fire for not creating a survey sooner, but now that it has formulated one, Horton said he plans to have the

Attorney warns Greek leaders of risks, liabilities involved with alcohol parties

By PATRICK TRAPP
Contributing Writer

Before you throw that next party, you might want to consider the risks you are taking.

University of Idaho Student Advisory Services Dean Bruce Pitman and Moscow attorney Jim Westberg spoke to UI Greek leaders Tuesday night about legal liability and alcohol risks.

The session was part of the National Collegiate Drug Awareness program being held on campus.

According to Westberg, most major problems concerning alcohol risk involve vehicle use.

"You should not have a party where there is alcohol present, regardless of how legal it is, without pulling keys," Westberg told the Greek leaders. "If my daughter comes to your house, drinks two beers, then drives to the (Corner) Club and gets plowed and dies in an automobile accident, I'm going to sue you, regardless of whether you got her drunk or not."

Westberg said that people can sue not only the perpetrator but also the local fraternity and its officers and advisers, the national fraternity, the university and the Interfraternity Council.

"If the IFC knew that people were drinking and they didn't do anything about it, then yes, they could be liable," Westberg said.

Westberg said to avoid being sued, people should be careful about who they serve alcohol to.

"Simply do not serve an intoxicated person, a 'party animal' or a minor," Westberg said. "It's just not worth the risk. The judge has no sense of humor."

Pitman expressed concern about the chapter houses and those who enter them and spoke about several ways to reduce risk.

"As you're planning a function, essentially do an audit to determine what the risks are. Determine whether the high-risk element of the event needs to occur," Pitman said. "Ask yourself if you can soften the event to take out some of the risk. Ultimately you may have to say it's just not worth it."

Westberg said he is pleased with the alcohol policy IFC recently passed. He said he feels that a truly legal "bring your own beverage" party can greatly reduce liability.

According to Westberg, the biggest concern is whether IFC should enforce the new policy since ultimately drinking will still occur, and instead of drinking at home, people will probably drink in their cars, which is twice as dangerous.

"There is really only one safe way to play this game, and that is by the law. And if you can't make it right by the law, we (lawyers) can make it right for you, and I guarantee you won't like it," Westberg said.

survey printed and out over the weekend. The completed questionnaires should be returned before spring break.

The survey will be distributed by hall presidents. Horton said he hopes that presidents will go door-to-door to get as high a response as possible.

The rough draft of the survey asks students questions, including how many meal punches they use per week, if Marriott's contract should be renewed, and how they rate different aspects of Marriott food and service. The survey draft also includes open-ended questions about changes students would like to see and asks Marriott employees if they feel they are being treated fairly.

Marriott's food service contract with the university ends in June.

Little sister rush to begin

By PAULA KILMARTIN
Contributing Writer

Music, conversation and plenty of fun activities await those participating in University of Idaho little sister rush today and Saturday at six fraternities.

Women living in residence halls, sororities and off-campus housing can participate in rush. Little sisters take part in functions such as exchanges, dances and raft trips.

The Delta Chi, FarmHouse, Sigma Chi, Sigma Nu, Tau Kappa Epsilon and Theta Chi fraternities are participating in this year's rush.

The Delta Sigma Phi, Delta Tau Delta, Pi Kappa Alpha, Phi Kappa Tau and Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternities dropped their little sister programs this year.

According to Nathan Dallolio, rush chairman, some people have talked about eliminating the entire little sister program.

"I decided to set up little sister rush this year on my own free will," Dallolio said.

He said the program will probably continue if someone is willing to take the responsibility next year.

Currently little sister programs are not in good standing nationally. Several other schools have had problems with their programs, and fraternities nationwide have been eliminating their programs.

According to Dallolio, some fraternities at other schools have pending lawsuits from little sisters who want full membership rights. In addition, some national sororities do not favor this program because it takes away from the women's involvement in their own sororities.

"Little sister programs are really good, and I'm sorry to see them being abolished," Dallolio said.

All little sister rushees can visit the fraternities tonight and Saturday night. Activities include specialty dinners, casino games, a haunted house and strip shows.

Sunday the fraternities will issue invitations to all rushees they want as little sisters, and the rushees will choose one house and attend that preference function.

For late registration, contact Dallolio at Theta Chi by noon today.

RHA president endangers student suffrage

Recklessly endangering democratic process, Residence Hall Association President Ray Horton has asked a University of Idaho administrator to investigate the actions of a group of ASUI senators and take "appropriate disciplinary (action) if a violation has occurred."

Horton asserts that the ASUI senators possibly violated section 5127 of the Faculty-Staff Handbook when they sought signatures outside the Wallace Complex cafeteria for a petition requesting a referendum regarding Marriott's food service contract.

In the letter addressed to Bruce Pitman, Student Advisory Services dean, Horton cites part of clause A of section 5127, which states that "solicitation and canvassing by individuals or organizations on UI property without prior approval by the president or president's designee (normally the dean for student services) is prohibited." Horton states that approval for "such activities" must be obtained in the form of a vendor's permit.

However, Horton neglects to cite the rest of the clause which states:

"United Way and Vandal Boosters have continuing approval, and the sales of tickets for events sponsored by local lodges, clubs and organizations are permitted if the sales are made by faculty, staff or students. In no case are outside solicitors going to be allowed."

Since "sales of tickets for events sponsored by local lodges, clubs and organizations are permitted if the sales are made by faculty, staff or students," it would appear any student organization, including the ASUI Senate, can canvass outside the Wallace Complex cafeteria.

Also, the UI Student Code of Conduct states that "nothing in this section shall be construed to prevent lawful assembly and peaceful and orderly petition for the redress of grievances, including any labor dispute between the institution of higher education and its employees."

But the crucial point is that the senators who were petitioning outside the Wallace cafeteria were only garnering signatures so that the UI students themselves would have an opportunity to vote on whether Marriott's contract should be renewed. This student referendum also presents other questions such as: "Should the UI run the food service on campus without a private vendor?" and "Should the food service contract contain a 'monopoly' clause giving a single company control of all the food service on campus?"

These are questions that need to be addressed, and it is only appropriate that these questions be approached democratically, by a direct vote from the students themselves.

The senators outside the Wallace cafeteria were only petitioning for the students' right to vote on the Marriott questions. Horton implies that this is considered "soliciting" or perhaps even "selling." Does he then also imply that student suffrage is a "product" or a "commodity" that is "bought" and "sold?"

And if so, just whom is Horton selling this student right to?

Horton's letter, remember, was addressed to a UI administrator.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Asbestos removal in buildings a 'costly mistake'

Editor:

The editorial in the March 2 Argonaut on asbestos has the noble intention of educating students, faculty and staff about the dangers of asbestos and the hazards it is creating on our campus. The author rather demonstrates that a little knowledge is a dangerous thing.

Whereas it is well established that workers having prolonged contact with asbestos dusts develop disabling lung diseases, especially those who are heavy smokers, residents of buildings containing asbestos materials are not similarly at risk. Some forms of asbestos are much more damaging than others. The asbestos commonly used in building construction does not fit the profile of that which causes disease. Moreover, the asbestos-containing insulation, roofing or floor tiles that are not subject to dust formation clearly are not threatening to our health.

The editorial contributes to the cancerphobia that has prompted regulatory agencies to require costly asbestos removal projects in public buildings, particularly schools. These projects actually have produced objectionable airborne asbestos particles, have decreased the energy efficiency and fire resistance of the buildings, and have not made them safer.

Surely your readers must wonder why there have been no epidemics of asbestosis, mesothelioma and such afflicting our students, staff and faculty over the years before asbestos removal became the rage. Happily there is a growing awareness that the campaign for asbestos removal has been a costly mistake. We can only hope that truth prevails before all the money has been spent.

ASUI supports graduate students

Editor:

The ASUI supports the Graduate and Professional Student Association. We fully recognize that GPSA, like other clubs on this campus, has common interests and goals that can be served by forming an organization. Several ASUI senators and ASUI President David Pena have voiced their support for GPSA, and the ASUI Activities Board recently gave GPSA $150 to help them form the group.

GPSA says they formed to "discuss issues of importance to them," and to address these issues they need 75 percent of the fees they pay to the ASUI refunded directly to them. At a recent senate meeting, Student Bar Association President Kirby Nelson said the underlying rationale in asking for $45,000 was that GPSA could provide services at lower costs. But at a later meeting between GPSA and ASUI representatives, GPSA said they plan to continue using ASUI personnel to administer their programs. They don't want to contribute to the salaries of the ASUI business manager, cashier or Outdoor Programs coordinator but expect these people to run the programs GPSA wants.

Just what are 'professional students?'

Phony baloney editor's warning: The following "commentary" is another transparent attempt to portray our elected public servants in a less than complimentary light. Your phony baloney editor wants you to know that although the "commentator" will once again practically equate the U.S. Congress with colonies of myxomycota (that's "plasmoidal slime mold" to you scientists), we feel that state legislatures should not escape without mention and in fact are probably worse. The problem is, we don't know for sure because, as with sausage factories, nobody really wants to go in there and see how they work.

What with the recent formation of the Graduate and Professional Student Association (GPSA), I'm sure the reading audience urgently wants to know: Why are we encouraging "professional students?" We should be helping them to break this vicious cycle of higher education, not perpetuating the myth that healthy human beings can make a career out of being students. Think how our, uh, I mean

BILL GRIGSBY

Commentary

their parents must feel.

Ha ha! Just kidding there. Of course we all know that the term "professional students" actually refers to varsity athletes. Sorry for any misunderstandings.

Ha ha again! Another little funny there, because we all know that "professional students" are merely students who want to be professionals — like King Kong Bundy — someday.

Whereas "graduate students" are merely students who pretend that they would one day like to graduate, but are also keenly aware of the scientific research linking graduation to that plague of modern society that has been known to whip paranoia into individuals otherwise driven to mere neurosis — THE JOB HUNT. Which brings us full circle and back to the "professional student" joke (Ha ha! Injecting a little levity into a tense situation can be fun, RIGHT????!!), which we will quit milking because: 1) There are several witnesses who can place me at the scene of a graduate program; 2) You may not be aware of it, but some of your ASUI senators, elected to serve you to the best of their abilities, are fighting for their right to take a whopping three-hour credit load and carry a D average. (Can you relate, graduate students?) WHICH only serves to highlight the need for a more efficient, responsive bureaucracy for ALL university students.

Referendum raises good questions

Wednesday's referendum on Marriott raises some good questions, and every University of Idaho student who eats food on campus should vote.

Obviously the first question is: Should Marriott's contract be renewed? My vote will be no because Idaho tax dollars and student money should not leave the state in the form of Marriott profits. If the students want private food service, the university should contract with Idaho business people, not a multinational corporation.

The second question is: Should the UI run the food service on campus without a private vendor? Again I will vote no. There should be a choice of food contracts.

Some students simply do not have the money to pay for the profit margin on private vending. Marriott prices have increased, and the types of foods have edged into the more expensive range. For example, I enjoy the deli sandwiches at the SUB, but I, like most students, cannot afford them on

On the other hand, students who have the money for more expensive food should not be forced to leave campus to eat. If a food vendor were allowed to set up a diner on campus that would provide better service than the dormitory cafeteria and the SUB, I am sure it would get business.

This brings us to the third question: Should the food service at the UI contain a "monopoly" clause giving a single company control of all the food service on campus?

Again I will vote no. The idea of monopoly capitalism was discredited many years ago. Teddy Roosevelt and his trust busters are needed here at the UI to end Marriott's monopoly on food service and food service jobs.

I have talked to many people who work for Marriott, and the majority feel mistreated and tell stories of other people who have had bad experiences with Marriott as a bureaucracy. These students were not willing to have their names in print because of fear of retribution from Marriott.

All bureaucracies have problems, but when there is no local control over that bureaucracy even more serious problems appear.

We students have a chance to control this situation only if we vote Wednesday. With a vote we have control, but if we do not vote, an out-of-state, multinational and monopolistic corporation will have control over a major part of every student's life.

Now if you're like me, the first thing that pops into your head is, "Are you sure?" And the second thing, when you hear "efficient" and "bureaucracy" in the same sentence, is, "Ha ha! I get it! Kind of like military intelligence, right?" But the THIRD thing is, "Surely he's not going to suggest we pattern a university-wide student organization after the U.S. Congress. ..."

...AND WHY NOT?? Students, raised on cafeteria-style nutrition ("I get it! Kind of like 'efficient bureaucracy,' right?"), are maybe a billion in debt; TOPS, while 535 congresspeople and one president racked up $2 trillion in debt in nine years and are making six-figure salaries! It's easy to see who writes the laws around here.

So anyway, I've come up with a few ideas Congress can't object to without looking like — you guessed it — myxomycota (These suggestions will also serve as handy field guides for fledgling Eastern European governments.)

- 1) A trained research staff will be supplied to each student. This addresses the awesome burden of note-taking, as well as those pesky literature searches;
- 2) Since most students have little need for speech writers, each may hire one special report-writing assistant. This should minimize the late-semester "bottleneck effect;"
- 3) Students will have spokespersons.

("Professor, my client was obviously under great stress during the test. He MEANT to express the sum in whole-number form, but was egregiously distracted by the liberal tactics of the French class in the adjacent room.")

These simple changes will ease the pressure on students to perform and allow them to devote their energies to the very bowels of the educational system — GRADES (I expect the full backing of the ASUI Senate). AND, I might add, they will create JOBS! For PROFESSIONAL STUDENTS!

Well, that's it! Three simple suggestions. Oh sure, a few other ideas come to mind. For instance, university officials should be allowed to "lobby" on behalf of varsity athlete recruits. Students also deserve franking privileges of, oh, let's say about 100 postage-paid envelopes per month. AND cost-of-living allowances, which House Speaker Tom Foley admits are "a given." And last, we deserve, in fact DEMAND, a fully subsidized four-star cafeteria with classroom delivery.

But if we go to the state legislature with this admittedly airtight proposal, they're gonna want in on the action. ... Maybe we should send a fact-finding delegation to a sausage factory first so we'll have an idea of what to expect. Any volunteers? Any questions? Talk to my spokesperson, Harry.

The few concrete needs GPSA has made known to us are largely easily solved within the ASUI. GPSA says they want more funding made available to their group for various academic purposes. We propose creating an Academics Activities Board with roughly $10,000 to distribute to groups like GPSA. GPSA says they want more input on ASUI decisions. We propose making certain seats on ASUI boards specifically for graduate students. GPSA says they want a "critical analysis" of the ASUI budget. The ASUI Senate will be holding budget hearings this month that are open to the public and offer all students the opportunity to testify on any portion of the ASUI budget.

The ASUI is not disappointed that we could not negotiate on the formation of the GPSA. We are in support of the GPSA. We are disappointed and frustrated that GPSA is not willing to negotiate on issues that can be solved.

So before you sign a petition to put the GPSA's amendment asking for a 75 percent refund of their ASUI fees on the spring ballot, consider what GPSA has done to work with the ASUI before trying to pull out.

UI students urged to vote in Marriott referendum

Editor:

Wednesday there will be a referendum held to gather a student consensus regarding Marriott Food Services. In three days, more than 1,000 student signatures were obtained stating support of a referendum.

In my view, all students at the University of Idaho are affected by the food service system. Not only does Marriott service Wallace Cafeteria, but it controls all areas of food service on campus, including the Satellite SUB, the Vandal Cafe, the Vandal Corner and the concessions at the ASUI-Kibbie Dome.

A referendum is designed to gather student opinion; it is not an effective tool if students do not take the brief time required to cast a vote. Please vote to make student opinion heard.

State surplus can pay student fees for 30 years

Editor:

The state surplus could pay all the University of Idaho student fees (tuition) for 30 years. So where does the state go when it wants to add to its $125 million surplus? Students.

How can this be possible in a state that still guarantees a tuition-free education for all Idahoans? Maybe they are more interested in ignoring the state constitution for their immediate conveniences than in protecting the state constitution and providing a tuition-free education. I challenge the people of Idaho to find an Idaho official who has suggested the use of part of this state surplus to prevent an unnecessary student fee increase.

In the years of a record surplus, a tax increase for any one segment of our society is virtually criminal. Student fees are taxes. With such a surplus, it would seem to make more sense not to raise taxes.

Raising student fees for tuition in this state is criminal. Yet we have people arguing for tax rebates and saying it is OK to raise illegal taxes (tuition). These people should be replaced.

Now consider how much money is generated by a student fee increase and compare that to the size of our surplus. (It is our surplus because we put it there.) The UI administration is hoping to generate $500,000 by raising student fees next year. Could our $125 million we have lying around help prevent this fee increase? You bet it can, but that is not in the interest of our state leaders.

The state of Idaho can afford a tuition-free education for all its citizens today. It can afford it for 30 years on this surplus alone, and there will be more surpluses in the future as well.

Idaho officials don't seem to be interested in providing higher education for all Idahoans. They are helping only those who can afford it.

What about those who can't afford it? Do they count?

Logos thanks UI Greeks

Editor:

Thank you, University of Idaho sororities and fraternities!

Once again the UI sororities and fraternities, under the direction of Ruth Raspo of Sigma Alpha Epsilon, provided a delicious dinner for Logos School's Grandparents Day held Feb. 16. This dinner has become a tradition at the school and a day we honor grandparents. Our special thanks to all who participated in this generous act.

Along with the sororities and fraternities, we would like to extend our thanks to Rosauers on North Main for providing all the plates, silverware, drinks and rolls and for picking up the food and delivering it to the school. Thanks to Charlie Grassi and Mike Sweetland of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon house for all their help.

We would also like to thank Gambino's for the great pizza and Modern Way for the oranges, and Lee McCoy for getting tables delivered to the school with such short notice.

You are all sincerely appreciated. Thanks to everyone for your generosity.

New weight room brings mixed student reactions

By JADE SIDOWAY
Contributing Writer

More University of Idaho students are using the campus weight rooms than ever before.

"With the addition of the new weight room in the Memorial Gym in January came more people wanting to work out," said Chad Crume, weight room supervisor.

About 290 students use the Memorial Gym weight room facilities each day, and about 200 students, not including athletes, use the ASUI-Kibbie Dome weight room, Crume said.

Not only are more men using the weight rooms, but more women are also finding their way into the gyms.

"About 25 percent and sometimes up to 50 percent of the people lifting at Memorial are girls," Crume said. "About 10 percent of those who lift at the Dome are girls."

Because so many people want to use the weight room this semester, it is often difficult to find a time when both gyms are not full. The Memorial Gym weight room can hold up to 45 people, and the Dome weight room can hold up to 50 people.

"It's a zoo during the afternoon rush," Crume said. "And in the evening both gyms are all but filled to capacity."

Although the new weight room serves the needs and wants of most students, some are disappointed with what the gym has to offer.

"The equipment is better but there is not enough," Crume said.

The new weight room has two bench press benches and one squat rack, and one of the dumbbells only goes up to 75 pounds.

The size of the new weight room is the most common complaint, according to weight room supervisors. The Memorial Gym weight room is smaller and cannot house as much equipment as the Dome weight room. Many people often have to wait to get in to lift because the new weight room is full.

"I have had the room filled to capacity and had as many as 20 people on a waiting list to get in," Crume said.

Another complaint is that some of the equipment in the new weight room is of limited use.

"They bought a trips machine and that's all you can do on it. There are other machines that can be used to work trips," Crume said.

The universal machine is also unnecessary, Crume said.

"There are individual machines that work the same muscles as the universal does," he said.

The ASUI-Kibbie Dome weight room opens at 6 a.m. for those who prefer to work out before classes. The Memorial Gym weight room does not open for students until 10 a.m. because not enough students lift in the morning to justify opening both weight rooms.

"Memorial Gym should be opened earlier because of the bicycles," Crume said. "A lot of people would like to use the bicycles and the nautilus equipment that isn't in the Dome."

Crume says more bicycles are also needed.

"Sometimes I have 10 people backed up waiting to use the bicycles," he said.

"Overall I think most people are happy with the new weight room and are glad to have someplace different to lift," Crume said. "It is good for a starting weight room, but they left no room to expand. I'd like to see it made bigger and more useful."

Vandal men's tennis team off to good start at 3-1

By STEVE SMEDE
Staff Writer

The Washington State University men's tennis team had plenty of reasons to feel under the weather Wednesday.

In addition to the pouring rain, the Cougars fell victim to the Vandals' 5-2 foul weather victory in Pullman. The match was the first outdoor event of the season.

Before Wednesday's rain showers forced the players off the courts, the Vandals took control in singles play with four individual victories. The first doubles match turned out to be the last event due to impending rain. UI's Scott Andersen and Larry Gresham took the match 6-2, 6-2.

Prior to Wednesday's match-up, the men's team had played only one tournament, the Mark IV Invitational at the ASUI-Kibbie Dome in early February. The Vandals began the season with a bang by shutting out the University of Montana 8-0. UI finished the tournament at 2-1 with an 8-1 victory over the University of British Columbia and a 3-6 loss to Montana State University.

The Vandal arsenal is stocked with powerful players, most notably Andersen, a sophomore. Andersen made a clean 3-0 sweep in No. 1 singles play at the Mark IV tournament and defeated No. 1 WSU player Joe Gibbons 6-2, 6-2 Wednesday.

The highlight of singles competition was UI player John Bladholm's shutout of Maki Shinoda 6-0, 6-0. UI player Chris Kramer defeated Jeff Sariano 6-4, 6-3, and UI's Darren Lewis dominated his 6-3, 6-1 match over Thayne Drake. UI's Joe Palacios lost a hard-fought battle in a 6-2, 4-6, 6-4 match with Kenji Akaki.

According to Head Coach Dave Scott, both teams are confident that they will be top contenders this season.

"The season's just getting started, though, so we'll have to wait and see," he said. "I'd like to see both teams improve over last season. There's no reason both teams can't win the Big Sky championships."

Next on the men's calendar is a dual match with Lewis-Clark State College in Lewiston Monday. Later this season the team will travel to Orlando, Fla., for an open tournament. The season will be capped off with the Big Sky tournament in Moscow in early May.

Lady Vandals gear up for league championships

Face third seeded Boise State

By J.C. CARTER
Staff Writer

The University of Idaho Lady Vandals open the Big Sky Conference tournament tonight in Missoula, Mont., against third-seeded Boise State University.

The Vandals are seeded second in the tournament with an 11-5 conference record and a 19-8 overall mark, while BSU stands at 19-11.

In Friday's other game, regular-season conference champion University of Montana (25-2) plays fourth-place finisher Eastern Washington University (11-16) at 6 p.m. Pacific Standard Time.

The winners of Friday's games will play in the championship game Saturday at 6 p.m. in Dahlberg Arena. The winner of the title game will be the conference's representative in the NCAA tournament next week.

UI ended the regular season with a pair of victories over Weber State College (79-70) and Eastern Washington (72-62) last week and has momentum going into the tournament.

UI's Sabrina Dial scored 53 points and collected 19 rebounds in the two victories. She continues to lead UI with a 16.9 scoring average and nine rebounds per game.

An added plus for the Vandals is their newly developed bench strength. UI junior Jennifer Balenger came off the bench against WSC to score 15 points and dish out five assists.

The conference tournament is not unfamiliar to the Lady Vandals, who have made five appearances in Big Sky postseason play since it started in 1983. UI has a 5-4 tournament record and won the BSC championship in 1985 in Moscow.

Last year UI opened the Big Sky tournament by defeating BSU 56-52 before losing to Montana in the championship game.

The Lady Vandals split the regular-season series with BSU this year, as each team won on its home court. BSU won 59-58 on a last-second free throw by Niki Gamez early in the season, and UI came back to demolish the Broncos 89-46 in Moscow.

The Broncos are led by Gamez (12.1 points) and Becky Sievers (11.7 points).

With a victory against the Broncos, UI could post its first 20-win season in four years.

Defense and rebounding are the keys to a successful tournament for the Lady Vandals. They have held opponents to just 39 percent shooting from the field this year and are 16-3 when they outrebound their opponents.

While EWU is expected to exit early, Montana is again the odds-on favorite to win the tournament with a 16-0 conference record, including a current 36-game conference winning streak.

Montana has the Big Sky's two leading scorers in Jean McNulty (20.3 points) and Shannon Cate (19.7 points). Cate led the Grizzlies with a combined 43 points in their two victories over UI this year.

Tip-off for the UI-BSU game is 8 p.m. PST.

Williams, Ross represent track teams at NCAA championships

By TOM BITHELL
Staff Writer

Two University of Idaho athletes will represent the UI at the NCAA Track and Field Indoor Championships today and Saturday at Indianapolis, Ind.

Patrick Williams and Jackie Ross will compete against the best in the nation in their individual events to determine a national champion.

Williams will run in the 55-meter race and Ross will compete in the triple jump. Williams and Ross placed first in their events last weekend at the Big Sky Conference Indoor Championships.

Williams, a senior, set a school record Feb. 16 with his NCAA qualifying time of 6.19 seconds, currently the ninth-best in the NCAA. Williams, who ran a 6.25 to win the conference title, will compete in a field of 18 at the NAAs.

Men's Head Coach Mike Keller said he thinks Williams can place at the NAAs if he runs a good race.

"He'll make the finals if he makes the mark he qualified at," Keller said. "His chances of placing in the top six are as good as anyone, but if he makes one error in six seconds, it will all go out the window."

The NCAA championships will not be Williams' first. In 1987, he qualified for the NCAA Outdoor Championships in the 100 and 200-meter

UI prof invited to ultra marathon

By RUSS BIAGGNE
Sports Editor

While most of us will spend spring break relaxing in the sun or enjoying a last chance on the ski slopes, Bob Surles, a University of Idaho foreign language professor, will be preparing for an ultra marathon.

What is an ultra marathon, you may ask? Simply put, it is a marathon ranging from 50 to more than 100 miles or lasting from 24 to 48 hours.

Surles has participated in ultra marathons such as the Western States Endurance Run, which consisted of a 100-mile run in Squaw Valley. He has been approved to take part in the Santa Rosa Invitational which begins at 9 a.m. March 24 and ends 24 hours later. In those 24 hours, the runners' objectives are to run as many laps as possible around a track. All runners are asked to solicit pledges per mile, and all proceeds are donated to the American Cancer Society.

Although it is a benefit run, many prestigious runners will participate, according to Surles.

"The invitational is a rather prestigious race because it is a limited field, and it provides any runner the possibility to set a U.S. record in his age group," Surles said.

"My goal is over 100 miles, unless I throw a 'rod'."

— Bob Surles
UI professor

Surles, who has taught at UI since 1972, said he feels he is ready for the challenge. He runs an average of 125 miles or 15 hours a week. In the past, he has run the old Lewiston grade as training, twice when preparing for the Western States Endurance Run.

Surles said that this type of sport interests him because of the commitment involved and the satisfaction he feels.

"It's an identity thing, and it takes real commitment. I get a certain satisfaction here that I can't get anywhere else," he said. Surles, who is now in his 50s, has not always been an ultra marathon runner. He was successful in the normal marathons and long distance races but said that as he got older, his outlook changed.

"As I got older, I started losing and didn't like it, so I changed the name of the game," Surles said.

Surles said that he has set a personal goal of running more than 100 miles during the 24-hour invitational, and he feels he can accomplish it.

"My goal is over 100 miles, unless I throw a 'rod'," he joked.

Because the Santa Rosa Invitational is based upon pledges for the American Cancer Society, Surles is asking anyone interested to donate to his goal. He has already distributed a pledge sheet to Pat Clark's office in Memorial Gym, and the foreign language department also has a sign-up sheet. Private corporations in the Bay Area will match any donation that he or any other runner receives.

Surles said he would like to express his gratitude to all those who have already pledged to his cause or plan to pledge.

Collette play 'well-done, thought provoking'

REVIEW By BETH BARCLAY
Staff Writer

In her introduction to Orgasmo Adulto Escapes from the Zoo, director Kim Bouchard describes theater as a medium designed to be relatively free from censorship, and she warns that this play will make one think.

Despite its Italian origin, this depiction of women as thinking, intelligent beings is designed to be universal. Certainly the emotions it projects are such in their intensity. The talent of those involved, a unique set design and original music combine to form disturbing images.

While the play centers around a seemingly erotic theme, it goes deeper than this and pulls emotion from its very depths. It centers around women who react to their environment in ways that are perhaps less than realistic. For example, in her monologue "A Woman Alone," Emily Petkewich plays a hysterical housewife who is driven insane by her monotonous life. In the end she is driven to murder, and the lights dim as she waits, with the gun in her hand pointed at the door, for her husband to come home.

This exaggeration of the truth only serves to make one dwell on the play after the house lights come on, however. And its residue is a strange mixture of barely controlled hate, passion, tenderness, vengeance and insanity.

"The play is humanity unbound."

— Beth Barclay
Staff Writer

The play is humanity unbound, disturbing in its emotional strength and frequent violent displays, yet compelling in its grace. Its smooth, flowing movements slowly increase in intensity until one is thrown into a tumultuous tumble of emotions that come from all directions.

Lisa Lechner's monologue, "Dialogue for a Single Voice," is an example of this grace in motion. She is a young woman who is seemingly innocent, but her innocence is deceptive. She invites her young lover up to her room, entices him with sweet words and frightens him with tales of her terrifying father. In the end we see this innocence as a farce and cheer as her game reveals itself as an enormous victory.

From the beginning, the audience is completely manipulated emotionally by this play and by the small nucleus of energy surrounded by the thin, white gauze and slender pillars that make up the stage.

Each woman hits home, the actress as well as the character, in her irrepressible spirit and will to find herself.

The play is disturbing in one of its many messages. It seems almost to seek to blame someone for the repression of women, and often this someone is the entire male population. Never do we see evidence of sensitivity in any male portrayed in the monologues. This is the only down point in the play.

Orgasmo Adulto Escapes from the Zoo was well-done, aesthetically pleasing as far as set and choreography, and thought-provoking. Each actress held her own in the series of difficult scenes, and Bouchard's sensitivity as seen in her introduction is evident throughout the play.

Orgasmo Adulto Escapes from the Zoo will be performed at the Collette Theater tonight and Saturday at 8 p.m. and Sunday at 2 p.m. Tickets are $3 at the door or at Ticket Express.

Many movies in Moscow to see over the weekend

By SALLY GILPIN
Staff Writer

It's Friday. Do you know what you are going to do tonight? If you don't want to stay home or go to a party, how about a movie? Moscow and Pullman area theaters are brimming with great films, everything from light comedies to heavy drama to cartoons. So why not take in a flick? But which one?

The following films are currently playing in the Palouse area:

■ Always stars Richard Dreyfuss, Holly Hunter and John Goodman. Dreyfuss and Goodman play hot-shot tanker bomber pilots fighting large forest fires, and Hunter plays Dreyfuss' air traffic controller girlfriend in this heartwarming film about love and letting go. Always is playing at the Nuart Theater in downtown Moscow.

■ Bad Influence stars Rob Lowe. Reviewers have said that this thriller is reminiscent of Lowe's headline-making home video. Bad Influence is playing at the University 4 Theater in Moscow.

■ Born on the Fourth of July stars Tom Cruise. This Oscar-nominated film is based on the true story of a young man who loses faith in America, society and his family after his experiences in the Vietnam War. This is an excellent but disturbing movie. Born on the Fourth of July is playing at the Cordova in downtown Pullman.

■ Crimes and Misdemeanors stars Woody Allen, Alan Alda, Mia Farrow and Angelica Houston. The latest film by writer/director Woody Allen looks at moral responsibilities and good vs. evil. Viewers should be Woody Allen fans for this feature. Crimes and Misdemeanors is playing at the Micro Movie House.

■ Driving Miss Daisy stars Jessica Tandy and Morgan Freeman. She's a crabby, persnickety widow, and he's her kindhearted and patient chauffeur. It is easy to see why this touching movie was nominated for several Oscars. Driving Miss Daisy is playing at the University 4 in Moscow.

■ Hard to Kill stars Steven Segal and Kelly LeBrock. Segal plays a Los Angeles detective skilled in martial arts and bent on revenge. Surprisingly, Segal can act as well as he can kick-box. Hard to Kill is playing at the University 4 in Moscow.

■ Hunt For Red October stars Sean Connery, James Earl Jones

Adam Ant album lacks 'authentic Antness'

REVIEW By WILL SCHMECKPEPER
Staff Writer

While listening to the radio Saturday afternoon, I heard the new song by Adam Ant, "Room at the Top." My interest piqued, I began to reflect upon the nature of the song and came to a drastic conclusion: Although "Room" is a decent song and will probably be a dance club fave for a short time, it isn't quite what I expect when I think of Adam Ant. Ergo, I bought Mr. Ant's new album, Manners & Physique, to see what was amiss.

For starters, Manners & Physique is a relatively boring excuse for an album and quite poor as far as Adam Ant is concerned. Sure, there is a nice flow to the music at times (which the album package touts as "pure 'Ant' Pop built upon the Minneapolis R & B sound"), but sheesh! This album is a dog! "Room at the Top" is the first and best song on the album. From there the songs begin to sound the same and get slightly worse with each new track.

Ant tries nothing "new" as far as music is concerned, despite what the package insinuates. He only manages to make a fool of himself for trying to do a base imitation of artists like The Time, Janet Jackson and Sheila E, all the while meaning to retain the "Antness" of his earlier and far better albums.

Seven of the 10 songs from Manners & Physique were written in 1986, and were probably meant for an album Ant never released because they were so bad and because he wanted to become an actor anyway. (He is briefly remembered in such movies as Nomad with Pierce Brosnan and Slam Dance with Tom Hulce.)

The three songs written in 1989 aren't much better. The music is predictable and the lyrics suck. Adam Ant should go back to making off-beat movies with decent actors.

If you are thinking about buying this album, restrain yourself. For new Ant fans, go back and dig through the archives when it was "Adam and the Ants" for authentic Antness. For old fans, just keep listening to what you have been and forget Adam Ant is making a comeback. I took my copy of Manners & Physique back to the store to find some real Minneapolis rhythm and blues such as Prince's Purple Rain and Around the World in a Day. They aren't cheap fakes trying to leech off the successes of others.

■ FACULTY DUO RECITAL

Jay and Sandy Mauchley will perform a faculty duo piano recital Sunday at 4 p.m. in the Lionel Hampton School of Music recital hall.

According to the Mauchleys, "the program will feature two works utilizing unusual combinations of instruments."

The first selection, Schumann's Andante and Variations, features cellists Marilyn Billups and Linda Wharton, and Robert Dickow on the French horn.

Poulenc's lighthearted Capriccio rounds out the program.

The recital is free and open to the public.

■ OUT WEST PERFORMANCE

Out West: Stories from the Big Sky will be performed by the Montana Repertory Theater Monday at 8 p.m. at the University of Idaho Hartung Theater. Tickets are available through Ticket Express.

■ PERFORMANCE AT WSU

New York-based conceptual and performance artist Jerri Allyn will present "American Dining: A Working Woman's Moment" today at 8 p.m. at Washington State University's Bryan Auditorium. The performance is free.

The program reflects both Allyn's artistic eclecticism and her ability to create humorous works that integrate political insights and aesthetic integrity. It was created as an interactive art work which, after its opening at the New Museum of Contemporary Art, was displayed/performed in restaurants from New York to Seattle.

Allyn will conduct a day-long workshop for interested students and area artists Saturday and will perform Sunday at 2 p.m. in the Little Theater at WSU's Daggy Hall. For more information, contact Marty Mullen of Activities/Recreational Sports or the WSU Women's Studies Program.

Marriott Referendum

March 14, 1990

THE FOLLOWING QUESTIONS WILL BE ON THE REFERENDUM:

- ▶ Should Marriott's foodservice contract at the Univ. of Idaho be renewed?
- ▶ Should the Univ. of Idaho run the foodservice on campus without a private vendor?
- ▶ Should the foodservice contract at the Univ. of Idaho contain a "monopoly" clause giving a single company control of all the foodservice on campus?

■ DEAN TO RETURN TO TEACHING

A member of the University of Idaho faculty who has served 12 years as associate dean in the College of Letters and Science is returning to full-time teaching and research.

Professor William B. McCroskey, a tenured professor of architecture, became associate dean in 1978 and served in that capacity under deans Elmer Raunio and Galen Rowe and acting Dean Kurt Olsson.

McCroskey cited health reasons for the move and says he "welcomes the opportunity to return to teaching and research activities in the College of Art and Architecture."

In announcing the change of assignments, Olsson said the college is "grateful for Dr. McCroskey's many years of dedicated service."

The college is conducting a national search for a new dean. McCroskey's responsibilities will be absorbed by current administrative staff so that the incoming dean can fully assess the college's administrative staffing and make appropriate adjustments.

■ UI ANNOUNCES ENGINEERING DEAN SEARCH

The University of Idaho will conduct a national search for a new College of Engineering dean during the 1990-91 academic year.

William Saul, dean of the college since 1984, has announced his resignation, effective July 1, 1990. He has accepted a position as chairman of the Department of Civil and Environmental Engineering at Michigan State University. The national search for Saul's replacement will begin this spring.

Interested UI faculty members with the required experience and credentials will be encouraged to apply for the position.

An interim dean who will serve during the search period will be named at a later date.

■ UI EDUCATIONAL EFFECTIVENESS ASSESSED

The University of Idaho, under the direction of the Board of Regents, is developing a comprehensive program to assess the effectiveness of its educational programs.

Judith Doerann, director of the Division of Teacher Education in the UI's College of Education, is working on the project's initial stages this semester in the office of the vice president for academic affairs and research.

Doerann has "unique qualifications and background in planning and assessment, and that is a tremendous resource in structuring the outcomes of our assessment program," said Thomas O. Bell, vice president for academic affairs and research.

Doerann's interim assignment continues through June 30, 1990.

In her absence from the Division of Teacher Education, Jack Dawson, associate professor and director of the UI's Coeur d'Alene Center, has assumed Doerann's position and will serve as acting director.

during past elections, and candidates have always campaigned in the residence halls.

The RHA disapproved of the referendum when it was first being considered in the ASUI Senate.

Dickerson said she felt the referendum was not aimed at forming a better working relationship with Marriott and was not the best solution to the problems occurring in the residence halls.

"If there is a low turnout of voters (on the referendum), it will only make us look bad," she said.

Heffner said students clearly support the referendum, and he does not understand why RHA does not encourage students to come out and vote on the issue one way or the other.

"They are worried about poor voting participation on the referendum making them look bad, but their negative slamming of the referendum just discourages students to vote," Heffner said.

"We have over 1,000 signatures," he said. "RHA is supposed to be representing the students, but most of our signatures were from students in the dorms."

Horton said the letter did not oppose the referendum itself but rather the tactics used to gather signatures.

RHA is currently working on a survey that will be distributed Saturday by hall presidents. RHA leaders said they feel it will be a better way of gaining student input.

The primary emphasis will be on the physical needs of the campus, Zinser said, but building up underdeveloped student services will also be a major focus.

The matriculation fees will be used for the following purposes: support of the Physical Plant, Student Services enhancements and institutional support. None of the matriculation fees will go toward educational purposes, as according to Idaho Code and State Board policy.

"The matriculation fees cannot and must not and will not be used for educational purposes," Zinser told the students.

Zinser reminded the students that the cost of an education at UI is still reasonable.

"It's still a real bargain to go to school here," Zinser said. "I feel it is appropriate to ask students to help, as long as it is still a reasonable fee."

Zinser stressed that the increase was not final, and said there may well be some adjustments before it goes to the board.

In reference to the hearings and meetings she was holding in an attempt to gather student input, she said, "It is not a charade. It will have an influence on me when I begin to wrestle with my decision."

The individual meetings with campus groups were "well beyond anything that's required by the board," she said.

Consultations with students will continue. An open hearing will be held Monday at 3 p.m. in the Student Union Building Silver and Gold Room. The administration invites interested individuals to attend the hearing and express their opinions.

"I'm very optimistic about what she's going to do for this university," Pena said. "She has my trust and I think she has the trust of the student body, and that's what we're operating on."

Pena encouraged students to attend the hearing and state their views.

"If we truly want to be included in the process by her administration, I think she will listen and respond," Pena said.

After the last meeting Thursday night, Zinser expressed dismay that the evening was over.

"I have so much fun doing this, meeting students!" Zinser said. "I'm on a real high. I haven't even been aware of the time."

Williams did not make it past the preliminaries in 1987, he said the experience should help him in this meet.

"I know what to expect, and I've worked very hard," Williams said. "I get excited. I know there are a lot of possibilities to do well."

Williams also qualified for the NCAA meet in the 200 but decided to set his first goal on the 55.

"My first goal is to make it to the finals. After that, anything can happen," Williams said.

Ross, who set a Big Sky Conference record at last week's indoor championships with a leap of 42 feet in the triple jump, will be competing in her first NCAA championship meet.

Ross is no stranger to big-time meets, however. She competed in the 1988 Olympics for St. Vincent and the Grenadines.

"I know what to expect in a big competition, so it should help," Ross said. "I'm trying not to get too anxious or I'll mess up. I'm trying to be cool and calm so I can do my best."

According to women's Head Coach Scott Lorek, Ross should be one of the top contenders after last week's conference meet, where she was voted field athlete of the meet.

"I would say she is definitely in the top five in the nation," Lorek said. "She also got a school record in the long jump and missed qualifying for the NCAAs by an inch last weekend."

Williams and Ross will return to Moscow Sunday to begin training for the outdoor season which begins March 24 for the women and March 31 for the men.
