Students question need for proposed fee increase

By TRACY PEEL
Staff Writer

While most of the students who attended a fee increase hearing agreed that students should help pay for their education, they disagreed with the administration about the rationale behind the increase, the level of the increase and the areas in which the revenues would be used.

University of Idaho President Elisabeth Zinser, Academic Vice President Thomas Bell, Financial Vice President Joe Geiger and acting Vice President for Student Affairs Hal Godwin met with students Monday afternoon. The administrators listened to testimony from students and answered questions.

"We do need to carry our own weight, but I'd like to reiterate that I'd like you to be financially responsible," said Roberto Garcia Jr., a chemistry graduate student who spoke at the meeting.

"I can always find reasons to spend more money," ASUI Sen. Kris Torgerson said.

Torgerson said he wanted more of an explanation of what the money would be used for.

Other students said they cannot afford an increase.

"I cannot afford seventy-seven dollars," said Carl Brenner, a forest resources student.

Brenner said that $77, the amount fees would be raised per year if the increase is approved, is a large portion of his student budget.

"What about our children?"

electrical engineering student Joseph Berchtold asked.

Berchtold said that if the current fee increase trend continues, in the future middle-class students who cannot get financial aid will not be able to attend college.

Several students questioned the reasoning that a booming Idaho economy means students can afford to pay more.

ASUI Sen. Doug Korn said that while his parents may be earning more money now, he, as an independent student with a minimum-wage job, is not making any more now than he was four years ago.

History student Charles Rice said that while people from Boise may be able to pay more for school, people in his hometown of New Meadows are not experiencing an economic boom.

Tax revenues from the Boise area are largely responsible for the current state surplus.

ASUI Sen. Charlene Johnson asked how the university is using the money raised during the centennial campaign.

The approximately $45 million raised will come in during the next five years, Geiger said. Of the money expected for this year, "something in excess of one hundred thousand dollars" is earmarked for scholarships, he said.

Some students asked about the university's other financial sources, such as the present state budget.

Volunteers offer help with tax forms

By SALLY GILPIN
Staff Writer

Short form, long form, deductions, subtract line four from line 12. Income tax season can prove to be a confusing and frustrating time for anyone who has to file tax returns.

Fortunately, there is help. The local Volunteer Income Tax Assistance group helps students and low-income, disabled and elderly persons fill out their tax forms at no cost.

The VITA program was started in the mid-1970s by the Internal Revenue Service. The program trains and sponsors volunteer groups like the American Association of Retired Persons and other civic groups to assist people with their taxes.

The local VITA program is a joint effort of business students and the University of Idaho student division of the American Bar Association. Glen Utzman, associate professor of accounting, advises the group, but Dru Guthrie is the student coordinator and group leader.

"I'm just here to answer questions," Utzman said. "Dru is the one running the show."

The group consists of 20 to 25 accounting students and about five to 10 law students. Volunteers are solicited in the fall and trained at an IRS-sponsored workshop, according to Guthrie.

The volunteers begin offering assistance about mid-February. The group works Saturday afternoons at the Moscow Mall and Wednesday evenings at the University of Idaho Student Union Building.

VITA members answer questions about tax forms and help people fill out the forms. Once a VITA volunteer has helped someone complete a return, the form is stamped at the bottom and sent to Boise to be double-checked. The stamp lets the IRS know how many people are using the VITA program.

VITA can also help with small business returns. The group has not had as many requests for small business help this season, however, according to Guthrie. But VITA has already helped 60 people with their individual tax forms.

"We've done as many people so far as we usually do all season," Guthrie said.

Although the VITA program is open to anyone, most of the volunteers are accounting and law students. The accounting students receive one credit for their work, but Guthrie says the volunteers get more than that.

"It gives you a warm feeling inside, and it's good public relations," Guthrie said. "I like meeting people from other parts of the university."

Other VITA volunteers echoed those sentiments.

VITA workers will continue to offer help Saturday afternoons at the Moscow Mall and Wednesday evenings at the SUB until April 14.

Guthrie said everyone is encouraged to use the service.

"Sometimes the volunteers don't have anything to do, especially Wednesday nights," Guthrie said. "More people should take advantage of the program."

Proposed budget may expand ASUI services

By SHERRY DEAL
& VIVIANE GILBERT

The ASUI is in the black, and its president says it is time for the ASUI to cater to students.

According to ASUI President David Pena, the outlook for the ASUI is good, but problems such as serious deficiencies in student services and a lack of minority representation need to be dealt with.

Pena gave the 1990 State of the ASUI Address and presented his budget proposal for next year at the Student Union Building Monday. The proposal leaves the ASUI with a $52,000 surplus.

The Senate Finance Committee has not held hearings on the proposal yet. Pena said he plans to work closely with the senate to determine the final budget.

According to Pena, staff cuts are responsible for the surplus. He also made minor cuts in travel expenses and telephone costs, which he said freed up a great deal of money.

Some of the most significant changes are in the Organizational Funding section of Pena's proposal. He tripled the ASUI Activities Board funding and budgeted $5,000 for the Student Bar Association and $3,000 for the Graduate and Professional Student Association.

Pena, a second-year law student, said he knows the ASUI is not currently meeting the needs of some campus groups and students, such as the graduate and professional students.

In his proposal, Pena allocated $20,000 to the Activities Board, which allocates money to campus groups and organizations.

Pena also proposed $39,000 in staff cuts. The salaries of

Columnist suggests cancer avoidance diet

By MARY A. SCHWANTES, M.S., R.D.
Guest Columnist

Can you really lower your chances of getting cancer by eating smarter each day? Yes, you can, according to leading scientific experts who have carefully studied what causes cancer. They believe that many of the hundreds of thousands of deaths caused by this disease each year could be prevented if Americans would make sensible changes in what they eat. The experts suggest that at least 35 percent of cancer deaths are dietarily preventable.

The scientific evidence that the food we eat can affect whether we develop cancer is growing steadily. The National Academy of Sciences (NAS), an organization of the leading scientists in the nation, found this evidence so persuasive that in their landmark 1982 report Diet, Nutrition and Cancer, they urged Americans to begin changing their diets to increase their chances of avoiding cancer. These changes in diet were supported by later reports from NAS, the U.S. surgeon general, the U.S. Department of Agriculture, the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services and the National Institutes of Health.

Based on the 1982 NAS report, in 1983 the American Institute for Cancer Research devised four simple dietary guidelines that would help people lower their risk of developing cancer. These guidelines have now been updated to reflect the most recent scientific research on diet and cancer as set forth in the later reports.

The American Institute for Cancer Research dietary guidelines to lower cancer risk are:

1. Reduce the intake of total dietary fat from the current average of approximately 37 percent to a level of no more than 30 percent of total calories and, in particular, reduce the intake of saturated fat.

You can reduce the fat in your meals if you follow some simple, general guidelines to reduce the amount of visible fats: Use less cooking oil and fats than called for in recipes; limit the use of butter, cream, salad dressing, margarine, shortening, gravy and oils; and bake, broil or boil rather than fry in fat.

To reduce the amount of the less visible fats you eat, use low-fat or non-fat dairy products; trim the excess fat from meats and the skin from poultry; eat smaller portions of meat and dairy products; and eat fewer high-fat baked goods and snacks such as cookies, pastries, doughnuts and potato chips.

Eat many foods that are naturally low in fat such as fruits, vegetables, whole grains and legumes.

2. Eat five half-cup servings of fruits and vegetables and four servings of whole grains daily.

Some of the substances found in fruits, vegetables, whole grains and legumes that are thought to help prevent cancer are beta-carotene, vitamin C, vitamin E, selenium and dietary fiber. Although these can also be purchased as supplements, taking them as pills is not a substitute for getting them by eating certain foods. We do not know yet if it is these substances alone or as they occur in foods as a whole that help protect people against cancer.

ASUI Print Composition Specialist Jaimie Dahl and University Program Coordinator James Rennie were cut from Pena's budget.

Dahl's position will be terminated completely, effective July 1, 1990. As a result, an additional $1,000 will be saved in the Equipment Replacement Reserve, since depreciation costs on the typesetter equipment will no longer be necessary. The typesetter will be sold.

In the past, the ASUI funded 60 percent of Rennie's salary, which was about $17,000. Pena recommended that the entire salary be paid by the Student Union Building Budget.

Pena said the staff changes were difficult to make, but "these are the kinds of decisions you have to make in order to be an effective leader."

Pena also increased the funding for the ASUI speaker series. Pena said he feels the series is academically important, and he plans to expand it. He said he also plans to stop charging admission to the speeches so that the programs are more accessible to students.

Pena also said he is committed to recruiting minorities to the university. He said that although Hispanics make up 5 percent of the total Idaho population, they account for less than 1 percent of the UI population.

Pena said he wants to be careful about spending the extra $52,000.

"I've always been fundamentally opposed to a surplus, but I can't justify putting the money where it is not needed," Pena said. "The best place to place the money is in the hands of the students."

Pena said the ASUI senators have some good ideas about how to spend the money. Two ideas are a financial aid consulting team and a dance club for students who are not of legal drinking age or who do not wish to take advantage of the clubs currently available.

"I want the students to challenge me and the senate to find the best way to spend the money," Pena said. "I just can't tolerate wasting student money."

Abortion bill ignores Idahoans' wishes

CNN and other networks across the country announced Friday that the Idaho House of Representatives has passed the most restrictive abortion bill in the nation.

The bill would prevent access to safe and legal abortions except if the mother's life is in danger, if imminent serious injury and severe deformity might result, or if rape or incest has occurred.

Despite polls showing that most Idahoans oppose a constitutional amendment restricting abortion, 85 Idaho lawmakers (most of whom are male) decided for all of us that we would "lead the nation" in the fight to restrict an individual's choice.

Of course, the Idaho legislators did not actually make the decision; the National Right to Life Committee drafted the bill. The Idaho House of Representatives proved to be a suitable and gullible guinea pig for such manipulation.

The representatives' responsibility for the bill's passage cannot be overlooked, however. The representatives should be above manipulation by lobby groups. Instead of cocking an ear to the National Right to Life Committee, they should have considered the wishes of Idaho citizens.

The bill allows anyone to seek an injunction against any doctor or woman "pondering" an abortion. It prohibits all abortions except if the mother's life is in danger and a doctor determines that the fetus is viable. The bill would require a woman to report a rape to law enforcement agencies within seven days of the incident to qualify for a legal abortion.

The Roe decision was established to protect the privacy of women, to allow them to make a personal decision without government intervention and to give them the discretion to control their own bodies. The Webster decision allows states to limit public employees who perform abortions and to prohibit tax money to be used for "encouraging or counseling" women to have abortions, but it is not nearly as restrictive as the Idaho bill.

Apparently Idaho lawmakers think they are better able to make such a personal and private decision about abortion than the individuals involved themselves.

Thank you, Idaho lawmakers, for making such an important decision for us. Thanks for ignoring what the majority of Idahoans think and listening to the vocal minority.

Thank you for taking it upon yourselves to legislate morality and to force women in Idaho to seek illegal, unsafe abortions.

Thank you for taking us back to "the back-alley days."

Utah decided not to pass the bill after prominent legal opinion stated it would not stand up to Supreme Court scrutiny.

Apparently Idaho, the state that cannot come up with more money for higher education, social programs or (heaven forbid) sex education funding, is prepared to spend an estimated $1 million in legal fees to defend this wonderful law.

Thank you, Idaho lawmakers, for your willingness to "go all the way" with our tax money in your fight.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Referendum author explains questions

Editor:

As the author of the referendum, I would like to explain the questions and their meanings.

The first question, "Should Marriott's food service contract at the University of Idaho be renewed," is asking whether or not you want Marriott to continue food service on this campus after this semester. A yes vote means you want them to stay. A no vote means you want them to leave.

The second question, "Should the University of Idaho run the food service on campus without a private vendor," is asking how you feel about having the university run the food service without a company like Marriott. If you vote yes, then it will mean that you do not feel that a company like Marriott should be running the food service on campus. A no vote would mean that you want a private vendor to run the food service on campus.

The third question, "Should the food service contract at the University of Idaho contain a 'monopoly' clause giving a single company control of all the food service on campus," is directed primarily at the food service locations such as the SUB and the Satellite SUB. A yes vote means that you feel that these facilities should be run by the company which gets the contract for the entire food service operation on campus. A no vote would mean that the operation of these facilities would still be open to other companies, even though the Wallace cafeteria contract has been filled. A no vote will allow companies like Karmelkorn or Burger King to get a contract to serve food on this campus in some location.

Please vote in this referendum, and vote your conscience, not with the opinions of any special interest group. Thank you.

Marriott treats employees well

Editor:

I feel that it is time for an employee of Marriott to let the students know how I feel. I was an employee of the University of Idaho for five years before Marriott came to the university. I joined Marriott in June 1989, by my own choice. I felt that going with Marriott was to my benefit, and I have not been disappointed. Marriott treats all their employees very well, and with respect. I am tired of hearing that the students think the employees are not being treated fairly. We are not just employees of Marriott. WE ARE MARRIOTT.

I have worked very closely with Lynn Morrison since she has been here. I feel it will be a great loss to all of us when she leaves. She is going on to bigger and better things, and we are very happy for her, but we will miss her.

Symms attempts to stop free speech

A state university's purpose is to provide information to the state's people. This seems like an obvious statement, but apparently it is not obvious to Idaho Sen. Steve Symms. Symms reacted to a letter he received from Joni Fields, a member of the pro-logging lobbying group Idaho Women in Timber. Fields was upset about the University of Idaho allowing the Idaho Conservation League (ICL) to use state property for public meetings.

Symms apparently tried to halt ICL's spreading of environmental information on university property, which in this case was the UI College of Forestry, Wildlife and Range Sciences building. This is not surprising considering Symms' record of seemingly mindless attacks on environmental groups and causes.

The odd part about this situation is that UI President Elisabeth Zinser and Financial Vice President Joseph Geiger initially went along with Symms' attempt to censor ideas.

Zinser and Geiger are supposed to defend intellectual freedom, and the university should be a place where ideas can be freely discussed. Zinser and Geiger initially gave in to political pressure on this issue without a public protest, which causes me to question their commitment to intellectual freedom.

CHARLES RICE

I personally question many of the ideas ICL has proposed in the past, but I feel that the group has the right to publicly debate those ideas and that the UI College of Forestry is one place where these ideas should be debated.

In the Idahonian's weekend edition, Geiger is quoted as saying that he was at first too aggressive in interpreting university policy, and that allowing a discussion of controversial topics is a reasonable use of university property.

This came only after a protest by ICL member Dennis Baird, which suggests that Geiger is like a political windsock that goes whichever way the wind blows. Apparently Geiger was willing to go along with Symms unless it caused problems, which it did.

If this scenario has a bad guy, it is probably Symms. Symms has made his career on anti-communism, pro-democracy and free speech. In this case it appears Symms used his political power in an attempt to halt the process of free speech.

Fields was doing her job when she successfully tried to influence Symms. The ICL has raised the cost of logging in Idaho because it insists on environmental protection during logging operations, but this is the type of thing the ICL was formed to do.

Symms' job is to represent the people of a democracy, and there is no democracy without free speech.

Doughnut shop allows all-night studying

By DENISE BUNCH
Staff Writer

The new owners of a local business seem to be sympathetic to the needs of Moscow's late-night studiers.

Daylight Donuts is now open from 8 p.m. to noon and has specials for students.

Jim and Debbie Stevenson, the new owners of the doughnut shop at 428 W. Third St., are attempting to make the shop a place for students to study during the evening and early morning hours. They encourage students to stop by the shop for a snack or to study.

"We want students to know we're here and we're open if they want to study," Debbie Stevenson said.

The owners are new to this area and have brought some new ideas with them.

Students who show their student identification cards will be eligible for Daylight Donuts' student specials, which include all the coffee you can drink for $3, day-old doughnuts for 10 cents each and doughnut holes for 1 cent each.

The Stevensons also have a

"Vandal" doughnut, which is a V-shaped maple bar, and an eight-inch doughnut called the "Idaho Giant."

The Stevensons are also experimenting with huge glazed, raised birthday doughnuts and in the fall are planning to purchase a convection oven to bake muffins, brownies and cinnamon rolls.

The Stevensons are not only expanding the Daylight Donuts' menu but are also improving the shop cosmetically. They plan to add more counter space and put a current events board near the entrance.

The new owners said they are enthusiastic about their new business and the Moscow area. They moved to Moscow from Seattle and enjoy the peace and quiet of a smaller city.

The Stevensons also said they are excited about the room they have built in the shop for their two young children. According to Debbie Stevenson, it is not possible to have children at a job in Seattle.

The Stevensons said they especially look forward to working with students, and they plan to keep the shop's atmosphere quiet for studying.

UI heads to the "Big Dance," faces Cardinals

CELEBRATION TIME. The University of Idaho Vandal basketball team and coaching staff celebrate their Big Sky Championship victory over Eastern Washington University. The 25-5 Vandals will face the University of Louisville Cardinals in the first round of the NCAA tournament on Thursday. (TIM DAHLQUIST PHOTO)

By RUSS BIAGGNE
Sports Editor

After defeating Montana State University 80-71 and coming from behind to beat Eastern Washington University 65-62 for the Big Sky Championship and an automatic berth to the NCAA's "Big Dance," the University of Idaho Vandals face their biggest challenge of the year: the University of Louisville Cardinals.

But I'll get to that later.

First, those of us stranded at UI and glued to our television sets Saturday night anticipating a great game on national TV (via ESPN) were let down. For some reason, ESPN officials felt the game between Houston and Texas was more important, and UI fans missed the Vandals' rally that brought them back from a 12-point deficit and on to an eventual victory.

For the fans who were victims of that decision, here's what happened: The Vandals' well-known full-court press sparked a 12-0 run in which Ricardo Boyd, who entered the tournament at 0-for-15 shooting from the previous week, scored six. These points included an alley-oop dunk on a pass from Otis Livingston and a jumper from the corner. Boyd also made a steal and fed it to Riley Smith for an easy lay-in.

By the time ESPN decided to return to the game, the Eagles, who led 34-24 at half-time and 38-26 at the 18:55 mark in the second half, seemed to have lost their momentum and led by only one, 47-46, with less than 10 minutes to play. The Vandals took over completely from that point and led 62-57 with 2:33 remaining.

The Eagles were not ready to give up, however. With 11 seconds remaining, EWU's Sean Newman connected on one of two free throws and tied the game at 62-62. Boyd rebounded the missed second shot, and UI quickly called a timeout with four seconds left.

Head Coach Kermit Davis then drew up a play designed for Smith, involving a screen by Boyd. With Livingston inbounding the ball and Boyd setting the designed screen, Smith was unable to get open, and Livingston inbounded the ball to Boyd, who turned and sank a 21-foot trey at the buzzer to clinch the win.

After the victory, Davis commended the Eagles.

"I want to give a lot of credit to Eastern Washington. They played magnificently," he said.

Davis also said that he hopes UI can return to the championship next year and play well.

Smith was named the tournament's most valuable player, and Smith and Boyd were selected to the all-tournament team. Smith scored 22 points and grabbed 10 rebounds, and Boyd tallied 18 points and six rebounds against the Eagles. They were joined on the all-tournament team by EWU's Brian Sullivan and David Peed, Weber State College's Jason Joe and Montana State University's Johnny Mack.

Livingston set a tournament record of 13 assists and broke Billy Allen's single-season Big Sky Conference assist record.

The Vandals meet the Louisville Cardinals, often referred to as the "Doctors of Dunk," Thursday in Salt Lake

City. Louisville, which has tallied 189 dunks on the season (an average of nearly six per game), is ranked 16th in the nation and fourth in the West Regional, while UI is the West's 13th seed.

The 26-7 Cardinals are led by five players averaging more than 11 points per game: center Felton Spencer who averages 14.9 points and 8.9 rebounds a game, Jerome Harmon at 14.8 points per game, forward Everick Sullivan with 12.9, point guard LaBradford Smith with 11.3 and forward Cornelius Holden at 11.1.

In their only previous meeting, Louisville defeated UI 101-54 in Freedom Hall Dec. 9, 1978.

The game will be televised on ESPN at 1:30 p.m. Pacific Standard Time.

Lady Vandals take second in Big Sky Championships

By J.C. CARTER
Staff Writer

Tournament Most Valuable Player Shannon Cate scored 20 points as the University of Montana Grizzlies defeated the University of Idaho Lady Vandals 64-49 Saturday in the Big Sky Conference championship game.

Montana has now won three straight conference championships and will advance to the NCAA tournament which begins

Wednesday.

UI finished the season with a 20-9 record and its second straight runner-up finish to the Grizzlies. UI did not receive a WNIT or NCAA bid.

In UI's first tournament game Friday, senior Sabrina Dial scored 19 points. She led three UI players in double figures as the Lady Vandals came from behind to defeat Boise State University 91-72. Hettie DeJong added 18 points and eight rebounds, and Krista Smith had 17 points and five rebounds.

After Friday's victory, the Vandals prepared to compete for the BSC championship Saturday night in Dahlberg Arena.

UI jumped on Montana 7-0 in the game's early moments as Sherry Peterson (nine points, nine rebounds and seven assists Friday) hit a jumper and converted a steal into a layup. Dial, UI's only senior, increased the lead to 13-4 with back-to-back inside hoops.

Tournament MVP Cate then sparked the Grizzlies on an 18-2 run with a three-pointer as Montana took the lead 23-15 with 5:17 remaining in the first half.

Dial picked up three quick fouls and was forced to sit most of the first half. She left the game with UI leading 15-13, and her absence was noticeable against the powerful Grizzlies.

Montana, 27-2, exploded out of the locker room on a 12-0 second-half run that clinched the championship.

The Grizzlies, playing before a conference tournament record home crowd of 4,319, out-rebounded UI 50-32 to coast to the victory.

Despite the loss to Montana, Dial, Peterson and DeJong were named to the all-tournament team.

Dial is also a candidate for University of Idaho female athlete of the year.

Tough breaks haunt Williams, Ross at NCAA finals

By TOM BITHELL
Staff Writer

It was a weekend of tough breaks and stiff competition for two Vandals participating in the NCAA Track and Field Indoor Championships.

Jackie Ross and Patrick Williams went to Indianapolis, Ind., and saw their hopes of NCAA glory dashed by inconsistency and bad luck.

Ross, whom women's Head attempt, she barely crossed the foul line, which resulted in a scratch. According to Lorek, that jump could have landed her in the finals.

"It was just that close," Lorek said. "She scratched on a good jump."

"She's a little disappointed, but I'm real happy with her," Lorek said. "She competed well. She wasn't freaked out with the competition."

Ross finished 12th overall. Her teammate, Williams, did not fare much better.

According to men's Head Coach Mike Keller, Williams needed to run about a 6.20 consistently to make the finals, but his best time was 6.29 in the semifinals, which was not good enough to make the finals.

"If he would have been consistent, he would have been in the finals," Keller said. "He didn't run very well in the semifinals.

I'm hoping it will make him work a little harder in outdoors."

Williams finished 14th overall out of 24.

In team scoring, the University of Arkansas won the men's NCAA title, and the University of Texas won the women's championship.

"She's a little disappointed, but I'm real happy with her."

— Scott Lorek
Women's track coach

Coach Scott Lorek tabbed as a top-five triple jump contender, jumped 40-5, which was not enough to get her past the preliminary round. The 40-5 mark was a foot and seven inches short of the Big Sky Conference record she set only a week before.

Announcing an offer designed to save money for people who are, well, a bit long-winded when it comes to, you know, talking on the phone, and who, quite understandably, don't want to have to wait till after 11 pm to get a deal on long distance prices.

If you spend a lot of time on the phone, the AT&T Reach Out® America Plan could save you a lot on your long distance bill. And you don't have to stay up late to do it. Starting at 5 pm, the AT&T Reach Out® America Plan takes an additional 25% off our already reduced evening prices.

To find out more, call us at 1 800 REACH OUT, ext. 4093. And don't worry, we'll keep it brief.

Discount applies to out-of-state calls direct dialed 5-10 pm, Sunday-Friday. This service may not be available in all residence halls.

Midwest band to play John's Alley tomorrow

By BETH BARCLAY
Staff Writer

with their music.

Band members include Petkovic on vocals and guitar, Dave Swanson on bass guitar, Doug Gillard on lead guitar and Steve-O on drums.

The group is promoting its fourth album, Come All Ye Faithless. Having previously impressed images of early '70s Stones on fans, this album promises to be no less mature in subject matter and possibly even more well-polished. The group has been around the block a couple times in their last five years together. DoS will perform on the upcoming Rolling Stones tribute LP album compiled by Alan Duffy and Imaginary Records.

The cover charge for Wednesday's performance is $3 at the door, which will keep drinks at happy-hour prices all night.

Moscow will get a taste of the Midwest this week as KUOI Productions brings Death of Samantha to the Palouse. The band will play, along with Ignatius, at John's Alley Wednesday at 9 p.m.

Death of Samantha, a four-man underground band, is billed as an act that is as fun to see as to listen to. The group has been hailed by Cleveland rock reviews as "weird" and "pushy," with lead singer John Petkovic calling up images of guilt, sex and survival. The group may bring to mind the better parts of Neil Young and The Doors, but it is known for having its own sound with an act to match. The band's four members are obviously as much in love with performing as they are

Red October, warmth in the Cold War

REVIEW By BETH BARCLAY
Staff Writer

A new perception of Soviet-American relations during the pre-Gorbachev Cold War is thrust forth with feverish intensity in the screen adaptation of Tom Clancy's novel The Hunt for Red October.

In this spy-thriller, Sean Connery is excellent as Soviet Captain Ramius of the frighteningly powerful, sonar-proof submarine Red October, a machine the Soviets will do anything to recapture after Ramius announces his intentions to defect.

This adventure is further intensified when Soviet diplomats explain to American military leaders that Ramius is actually a brilliant military officer gone mad, intent on focusing the Red October's destructive powers on the United States.

U.S. military leaders then gear up for a full-scale attack on Ramius and his crew.

In the midst of this is a young CIA agent whose naive appearance does nothing to help him in his quest to convince others of the captain's true intentions. Ramius is the object of a lifelong study, his military strategy as well as his personal life, and the agent, played by Alec Baldwin, is convinced of his sanity.

Baldwin is excellent as the courageous agent who manages to overcome his superiors' prior images of Ramius and win a chance to prove his theory.

The chance is only a slim one, however, and Baldwin's character must put his life and career on the line in a series of cliff-hanging, suspenseful scenes.

The movie's underwater submarine fight scenes are superb, frightening in their graphic realism and overshadowed only by a talented cast and intricate plot.

The Hunt for Red October is a splendid example of John McTiernan's directing efforts and will satisfy anyone's craving for good, spine-tingling thrills.

Fox music not contrived

REVIEW By WILL SCHMECKPEPER
Staff Writer

In the race between glam-bands with goofy lead singers who sound like Janis Joplin, Britny Fox closes the gap on perennial leader Cinderella with its latest album, Boys In Heat.

While listening to this album, I felt like this was the music I would be listening to on the ideal spring break: cruising south into Florida in my red Mazda Miata, with a cooler of assorted liquid consumptibles in the back seat, that blonde chick from my English 112 class, and the speakers turned up to 10. Why, we would ... oops, forgot the review.

Anyway, Boys In Heat is a quality album from a band that I never really liked in the first place. It caused me to do a 180-degree spin in my attitude toward Britny Fox. Granted, "Dizzy" Dean Davidson's vocals at times have that uncanny ability to re-create the sound of fingernails scratching across the chalkboard, but this only occurs sparingly, and the album's other aspects more than make up for this problem.

The music is not contrived or complicated, just good clean rock 'n' roll. Lead guitarist Michael Kelly Smith provides satisfactory playing that does not certify him as one of the best guitarists in the world but does at least show he knows his restrictions and takes advantage of what he can do — in aces.

Particularly enjoyable is the group's cover version of Nazareth's 1975 song "Hair of the Dog." It remains true to the original without becoming a tacky imitation (as in the case of Joan Jett's album The Hit List).

Boys In Heat doesn't much go in for the slower bluesy songs like Cinderella did with Long Cold Winter. This attests to Britny Fox's willingness to pursue its own way of making music instead of skating on what other groups do.

Predictably a "sleeper" album, Boys In Heat deserves more than a cursory glance as another glitter-blitz by 24-year-old men with overactive hormones. Enjoyable, hopping with energy and just plain fun, Britny Fox wins over a formerly reserved skeptic.

Besides, who could resist a group that thanks Ace Frehley and Gene Simmons in the same liner notes as Nintendo Games and Debbie Gibson?

Social workers needed despite public expectations

By BECKY JONES
Staff Writer

March is National Social Work Month.

"This month is to recognize that social workers are a valuable asset to our society," said Keith Ekness, a University of Idaho sociology senior who plans to graduate in May with an emphasis in social work.

The UI does not offer a social work degree but has a program for those interested in that area. Most people in the program study sociology with an emphasis in social work. Students who take the appropriate classes can receive a license.

Hilary Weaver, the UI social work adviser, will speak about social work on KUOI-FM Tuesday from 9 p.m. - 10 p.m. She will take calls, answer questions and discuss the various aspects of social work.

According to general opinion, all social workers are employed at public health and welfare departments and provide child protective services.

Professional social workers are involved in all aspects of the community, however, including hospitals, business and industry, schools, community health and mental health centers, family service agencies, nursing homes and a range of public agencies from the unemployment office to the human services department. Some social workers are self-employed psychotherapists.

In all these areas, social workers help everyone from children to the elderly. As professionals who must have a license to work, social workers do not just concentrate on the individual but on the whole environment, and they observe everything that could be causing the problem, according to Ekness.

Another myth is that not many jobs are available in social work, but social work positions are actually increasing at the same rate as other job markets.

3. Consume salt-cured, salt-pickled and smoked foods only in moderation.

Unfortunately, in some countries, the eating large amounts of these foods has been linked to cancer of the stomach and esophagus. The heat from smoking appears to create carcinogens, cancer-causing compounds, in the food, while salt-cured and salt-pickled foods contain nitrites that can be transformed into carcinogens in the foods or in the stomach.

Grilling and broiling food over open flames can also create cancer-causing substances on the surface of foods. Charred foods in particular contain a high concentration of carcinogens, so it is best to cook with less intense heat or at a greater distance from the flame to avoid charring.

4. Drink alcoholic beverages in moderation, if at all.

Drinking alcoholic beverages appears to increase the chances of developing certain forms of cancer. In moderate amounts, alcohol consumption appears to be linked to greater risks for developing cancer of the breast, rectum and pancreas. In excessive amounts, especially combined with cigarette smoking, alcohol may increase the chances of developing cancers of the mouth, esophagus and larynx. In longtime abusers who have developed cirrhosis of the liver, alcohol increases the risk of developing cancer of the liver.

In addition to the harmful effects that alcohol itself can have on the body, drinking large amounts can also interfere with eating a healthy diet. Alcohol contains calories but few if any nutrients and can displace from the diet more nutritious foods containing nutrients important for preventing certain types of cancer.

You can reduce your chances of developing cancer by following a few simple rules of good eating that may also help prevent heart disease, obesity and other chronic diseases such as diabetes.

To learn how to implement this eating program, call the University of Idaho Student Health Center to make an appointment to visit the nutritional counselor.
