Ceremonies initiate president

By VIVIANE GILBERT
News Editor

The strength of Idaho's higher education system will come from uniting around its diversity, University of Idaho President Elisabeth Zinser told the audience at her inauguration ceremony Friday.

"Only when we embrace our diversity, indeed celebrate it, will all our cultures and all our regions unite to make one Idaho as strong as it can be," Zinser said.

Zinser was inaugurated as the 14th president of the university before an ASUI-Kibbie Dome crowd of about 5,000 people.

The inauguration was followed by the annual UI Honors Convocation and started off Family Weekend activities on campus.

Zinser described her hopes for a course toward a "united Idaho" to be set during this centennial year. She said that Idaho's regionalism problem began with the formation of

ASUI Senatorial candidates discuss key issues

By RICH WRIGHT
Staff Writer

ASUI senatorial hopefuls gathered to discuss their individual platforms and answer questions at the candidates' forum Monday night.

Ten of the 11 candidates met in the Student Union Building Ballroom to answer questions ranging from past budget experience to qualifications to be a senator and abilities they could offer the ASUI senate.

The candidates present were: Linda Britton, Steve Brooks, Lyle Cunningham, Tony Lingner, Jeff McClain, Katherine Moriarty, Rick Noggles, Elwood Rennison, Kris Torgerson and Jane Windsor.

Bill Heffner, the only candidate not present at the forum, was out of town competing in a golf tournament.

Fewer than 15 people observed the forum at any one time.

Elections Board Chairperson Kristin Goodman, who moderated the forum, gave the candidates one minute to answer one random individual question. The questions ranged from opinions on graduate student fees to opinions on the 2.0 GPA requirement for senators.

After all the candidates had been asked their individual questions, they had three minutes to answer the following questions:

1) What experience do you have that would qualify you to be a good senator? 2) What could you contribute to the senate? 3) What specific projects will you undertake if elected?

Many candidates voiced concerns about the budget income deficit and senator representation at living groups.

Fresh faces and experience were popular responses to what candidates could contribute to the senate.

Windsor and Noggles voiced the need for recycling. Brooks and Cunningham stressed the need for more parking.

Noggles said his "fresh face, body and mind" would be a benefit to the students, and Brooks listed his past experience at Weber State College as an asset.

Cunningham and McClain said that their enthusiasm and willingness to work with students would be an advantage in the senate.

Responses varied concerning what experience the candidates might have that qualify them to be senators. Torgerson said his "public relations work and his ability to work with people" would help him, and Lingner said his previous experience as a senator and a member of the finance committee would qualify him. McClain said his work as scholarship chairman and his passion for parliamentary procedure work would be advantageous, and Moriarty said she interned with a Boise public television station and "is very involved in community programs." Britton listed her patience as an asset and said she hopes she can "combine the views of both graduate and undergraduate students."

Each candidate said that they would normally follow the opinions of their constituents if they differed from their own, and most vowed to get to know their living groups better.

"I will follow the beliefs of my constituents, because I am serving as their representative," Brooks said.

Following these questions, the forum was then opened to the audience for questions. ASUI Sen. Lisa Krepel asked the candidates to state their knowledge and ideas on the ASUI budget. The candidates agreed that the senate should strive for a balanced budget, but disagreed on how a surplus or the $250,000 in the General Reserve Fund should be handled. Rennison said he believes that the budget should "always strive for the black," and the GRF should only be used in emergencies, while Torgerson said, "GRF funding can be authorized when there is a need for expansion."

UI law students to vote on academic honor code this week

By TRACY PEEL
Staff Writer

University of Idaho law students will vote on a proposed law school academic honor code Thursday.

The Student Bar Association held an open forum Monday and last Wednesday to define student objections to the original honor code proposal that students defeated in an election in March.

Students who attended the forum objected to the code's lack of protection from self-incrimination, its statute of limitations, a clause on unauthorized assistance, and a portion of the code that would put an unresolved ethics charge on a graduating student's transcript.

A ballot responding to the law students' concerns has not yet been written, but SBA President Steve Mahaffy said he expected the ballot to give law students three choices. They will be able to vote for the honor code as it stands, or vote for a student version of the code that will allow students to choose between two "Fifth Amendment" proposals.

The "Fifth Amendment" proposals provide alternative ways to protect students accused of misconduct from incriminating themselves. One proposal would function like the Fifth Amendment of the U.S. Constitution, which protects people from self-incrimination. The other Fifth Amendment proposal would not force students to testify against themselves, but the honors court could make an inference of guilt from a student's refusal to testify. This inference could not be the sole basis of a conviction, however.

Former SBA President Kirby Nelson said he believes the second version of the Fifth Amendment proposal is the only one the faculty would approve. Faculty and students must reach an agreement on the code before it can be adopted.

Other probable changes to be included in both student versions of the honors code are: a laches provision in the statute of limitations that would prohibit conviction in a situation where a student's case has been unfairly prejudiced by an unreasonable delay; a definition of unauthorized assistance to allow students to use typists, commercially-prepared study aids and computer software to check spelling and grammar; and a change in the code so that graduating students who are being investigated for academic misconduct will not have the charge listed on their transcripts, although the state bars to which they are trying to gain entrance will be notified of the charge.

Mahaffy said another modification in the student code would allow a change in the student honor code if it is approved by a majority of the students and a majority of the faculty with at least 35 percent of the law students voting.

RHA representatives consider hall dues and food reviews

By BETH BARCLAY
Staff Writer

Hall dues and food reviews were among the hot topics discussed at Monday night's Residence Hall Association meeting.

By far the most explosive issue was RHA President Ray Horton's proposal to incorporate hall residence dues into the housing contracts required for each hall member.

In the past, such dues were collected apparently with no requirement that they be paid. Dues differ from hall to hall but average about $10, with the funds divided between different hall events.

Horton's reasons for suggesting such a motion stem from reports that not every member of some halls could be convinced to pay. Should such a requirement be put into the housing contract, the dues would be collected and handled free of charge by Student Advisory Services and distributed to the halls on request. Apparently, such a system has been used by Boise State University and Idaho State University in the past with little or no criticism, but RHA representatives were not short of breath in criticizing the motion.

Many representatives expressed concern about the paperwork involved in handing over control of the money to SAS. They were uncertain about whether they could have access to the money immediately if needed and were also hesitant to act without getting input from their halls.

Jim Bauer, SAS director of residential life, was unavailable to answer questions presented at the meeting. According to Horton, the issue could not be tabled until next week due to the expediency needed to get next semester's housing contract printed.

Horton recommended that required dues be set at $2 for RHA and $3 for resident advisers, along with the minimum $10 hall requirement, for a total of $15 for each hall member. RHA representatives objected further, however, questioning whether RAs should automatically receive funds without hall input.

At the end of the hour-long debate, hall dues were set at $14 per person, with $12 going to hall funds and $2 going to RHA, and none allocated to RAs. With only 11 of 18 members voting for the motion, RHA failed to achieve the two-thirds majority needed to make the dues requirement part of the housing contract.

In other business, RHA received the results of the Food Service Committee's survey on the food service Marriott provides at the Wallace Complex cafeteria.

"I don't see how the administration could justify keeping a five-year contract with Marriott after this," Horton said after explaining the results listed in the report.

The survey conveyed a great deal of dissatisfaction with snack bar since Marriott's takeover. According to the survey, students are most concerned about the high-priced snack bar items. Other survey questions dealt with changes the students would like to see made, whether the quality of the service and the food has improved, and what changes should not have been made.

Changes students want to see include: more variety, extended cafeteria hours, unlimited guest punches, an optional meal plan, more than one vegetarian entree for each meal, more seasoning in the food, healthy vegetarian dishes, higher values for snack bar punches, larger portions, less grease in the food, better meal rotation and a cleaner atmosphere.

According to the survey, most students feel that the food service "has been getting worse with little or no improvement. One student commented that University Dining Service is 'monotonously moderate.' That pretty much says it all."

The survey also asked Marriott employees whether they felt they were being treated well. A large majority responded positively, with only a few listing complaints.

The students were also asked 12 evaluation questions on the overall quality of UDS, the variety of food, the service, the portions, the hamburgers, the salad bar, the deli bar, the soups, etc. In this part of the survey, UDS could be rated as excellent, good, fair, poor or bad. Overall, with 35 percent of the residence hall students responding, Marriott received a rating of "fair."

In other business, the GDI committee reported that GDI week has been tentatively set for Sept. 17-23, 1990. Horton announced that the position of RHA treasurer is open. ASUI Sen. Doug Korn submitted a list of what would be included in UI President Elisabeth Zinser's proposed fee increase for next semester. Minority recruitment efforts were listed as the most important use for the funds.

Q What are some ways the ASUI could further serve student interests and fulfill campus needs?

Increased regular and emergency day care for students who also have families; increased student participation in the selection of new courses aimed at preparing UI graduates; and greater participation between local and intra-state business and the university.

1) Create an accessible "open door policy" that allows students to express their complaints and concerns; 2) Require more interaction between senators and their assigned constituents; 3) Encourage more group/family-type activities with discounts.

The ASUI has already embarked on a plan to increase student services. We can continue this plan, but it must be done in a practical manner. There is only so much money to go around; therefore, it must be carefully budgeted so the services can continue and expand.

For students with families, we should institute day care at university events. For all students I would like to create college newsletters giving profiles of professors, brief descriptions of classes and possible job opportunities in that major.

The ASUI could best further student needs and wishes on this campus by working together with both other student organizations and the administration.

To further serve the needs of minority students and those with families, I would be very happy to find out what they want done. I have some ideas of my own, such as new programs at minority services, graduate programs at games and family-oriented days.

The senate should work with the administration to expand the current child-care program, including a sliding fee scale for lower-income students. Minority student representation in the senate must be emphasized. Equitable funding for graduate student programs is a necessity.

1) by stopping the bickering and petty power struggles that are occurring between some of the senators now; 2) by listening to what the students have to say and incorporating what we want done in and around our university.

One area of student needs that has not been fulfilled is on-campus recreational facilities. This is why the University Center project must become a reality. If elected, I would also conduct a classroom survey to find out student interests and needs.

The possibility of offering an expanded day care for students with families should be considered. An expansion in the campus outreach and student services programs should be modified to better serve the needs of minority and foreign students.

I would like to see more funding for placement of non-technical Idaho graduates and more career counseling. I prefer to see the university handle its own services; contracting the services out reduces local control and dollars available in the community.

Q What changes, modifications or projects do you plan to initiate as a senator?

I do not think that it is wise or even proper for me to make claims as to the changes, modifications or projects I will initiate as a senator. Obviously, any changes not supported by the majority will not be carried forward.

1) Parking! New lots and/or better use of existing ones. Examine the possibility of a shuttle system; 2) Assure that future fee increases are needed and that the students receive the benefits; 3) Explore the possibility of senate representation of individual schools/groups.

We as a campus need to increase communication between the senate and the students. This could be done by increasing contact between the senators and their living groups. Also, if we must have a fee increase, why can't it be related to the rate of inflation.

I currently have a bill in the senate that eliminates pre-session and puts debate back in the senate. I would also like to take out a page every month in the Argonaut allowing senators to write columns about what projects they are working on.

One project that I would like to do a feasibility study on is an "escort/bodyguard" service for women on campus. A change that I would like to see is a place reserved in the Argonaut for a weekly summary of senate events written by a senator.

I think that we have no choice but to pay the upcoming fee increases, and we should try to work with Zinser in order to get the most out of those increases. One example of this is the upcoming legislation on the free ASUI Productions dances and movies.

A liaison program should be established with our Idaho legislative representatives to ensure increased state funding. A more structured system for lobbying our legislators, the creation of new programs and the enhancement of existing programs should be implemented.

I would like to see a change in how the senators are selected to represent the different colleges and living groups to actually being voted on by the individual colleges and living groups.

I would like to see a required training session for all academic advisers. I would like to restore respectability to the reputation of the senate. To many, the senate has become a mockery of the legislative body because of all the factions and political trivialities.

I feel that with the coming revamp of programs that there is going to be a lot of work. Some major budget modifications in next year's budget need to be made, i.e. under professional positions.

I believe that the golf course could be a significant source of revenue if alcohol were served. I would also like to see more on-campus study centers and lockers available for off-campus students.

Q If you were an animal, what kind of animal would you be? Why?

I would be a cat. Felines are agile, curious, and capable of great thought and learning. I respect cats; it would be a great honor to be part of the feline community. Plus, 15-18 hours of sleep a day looks very appealing to this law student!

Giraffe. Since eighth grade, I've always been one of the shortest in the class and the last guy picked for the basketball team (how sad), and I just thought it might be nice to stand 18 feet tall for once! Giraffes don't compete with others for food, and they are a "cute" animal.

If I were an animal, I think I would be something that somewhat signifies me, such as a porpoise, because porpoises are lovable, creative, protective and fun-loving.

I would be a slug. ASUI senators are often compared to slugs. But like senators, slugs have good points too. They both leave a clear path for others to follow.

If I were an animal, I would be an eagle. Whenever I feel the need to escape the daily routine, I could soar high in the sky to see new places and events.

I think that the lion is the most majestic and beautiful animal in the world. It has the most aggressive nature and is intensely focused on its goals. When it sees something that it wants, it will do everything possible to get it. It strikes with quickness and efficiency.

This question is a joke, right? Apparently the Argonaut is following the national political trend of emphasizing style over substance. Major issues need to be addressed by our university, such as increased state funding and the reduced student-faculty ratios.

I would be a moose in the Yukon of Canada. I would choose being a moose as they usually get left alone by others, but when they are pushed, they will stand up and push back just as hard if not harder. To top that, there would be little presence of man there.

A snake. A snake is adaptable to many environments, whether hostile or friendly. Snakes are strong and independent and stand on their own when required. Snakes protect their territory. My second animal choice would be a woodpecker!

Elephant — because they seem to be very diligent and hard-working. They are often used as most effective tools and typically are a great benefit to those who choose to use them. Besides, I like elephants, and it's a dumb question anyway.

I want to be a cat. They can survive without help and like you for yourself, not because they need something from you.

1) Create an accessible "open door policy" that allows students to express their complaints and concerns; 2) Require more interaction between senators and their assigned constituents; 3) Encourage more group/family-type activities with discounts.

The ASUI has already embarked on a plan to increase student services. We can continue this plan, but it must be done in a practical manner. There is only so much money to go around; therefore, it must be carefully budgeted so the services can continue and expand.

For students with families, we should institute day care at university events. For all students I would like to create college newsletters giving profiles of professors, brief descriptions of classes and possible job opportunities in that major.

The ASUI could best further student needs and wishes on this campus by working together with both other student organizations and the administration.

To further serve the needs of minority students and those with families, I would be very happy to find out what they want done. I have some ideas of my own, such as new programs at minority services, graduate programs at games and family-oriented days.

The senate should work with the administration to expand the current child-care program, including a sliding fee scale for lower-income students. Minority student representation in the senate must be emphasized. Equitable funding for graduate student programs is a necessity.

1) by stopping the bickering and petty power struggles that are occurring between some of the senators now; 2) by listening to what the students have to say and incorporating what we want done in and around our university.

One area of student needs that has not been fulfilled is on-campus recreational facilities. This is why the University Center project must become a reality. If elected, I would also conduct a classroom survey to find out student interests and needs.

The possibility of offering an expanded day care for students with families should be considered. An expansion in the campus outreach and student services programs should be modified to better serve the needs of minority and foreign students.

I would like to see more funding for placement of non-technical Idaho graduates and more career counseling. I prefer to see the university handle its own services; contracting the services out reduces local control and dollars available in the community.

Q What changes, modifications or projects do you plan to initiate as a senator?

I do not think that it is wise or even proper for me to make claims as to the changes, modifications or projects I will initiate as a senator. Obviously, any changes not supported by the majority will not be carried forward.

1) Parking! New lots and/or better use of existing ones. Examine the possibility of a shuttle system; 2) Assure that future fee increases are needed and that the students receive the benefits; 3) Explore the possibility of senate representation of individual schools/groups.

We as a campus need to increase communication between the senate and the students. This could be done by increasing contact between the senators and their living groups. Also, if we must have a fee increase, why can't it be related to the rate of inflation.

I currently have a bill in the senate that eliminates pre-session and puts debate back in the senate. I would also like to take out a page every month in the Argonaut allowing senators to write columns about what projects they are working on.

One project that I would like to do a feasibility study on is an "escort/bodyguard" service for women on campus. A change that I would like to see is a place reserved in the Argonaut for a weekly summary of senate events written by a senator.

I think that we have no choice but to pay the upcoming fee increases, and we should try to work with Zinser in order to get the most out of those increases. One example of this is the upcoming legislation on the free ASUI Productions dances and movies.

A liaison program should be established with our Idaho legislative representatives to ensure increased state funding. A more structured system for lobbying our legislators, the creation of new programs and the enhancement of existing programs should be implemented.

I would like to see a change in how the senators are selected to represent the different colleges and living groups to actually being voted on by the individual colleges and living groups.

I would like to see a required training session for all academic advisers. I would like to restore respectability to the reputation of the senate. To many, the senate has become a mockery of the legislative body because of all the factions and political trivialities.

I feel that with the coming revamp of programs that there is going to be a lot of work. Some major budget modifications in next year's budget need to be made, i.e. under professional positions.

I believe that the golf course could be a significant source of revenue if alcohol were served. I would also like to see more on-campus study centers and lockers available for off-campus students.

Q If you were an animal, what kind of animal would you be? Why?

I would be a cat. Felines are agile, curious, and capable of great thought and learning. I respect cats: it would be a great honor to be part of the feline community. Plus, 15-18 hours of sleep a day looks very appealing to this law student!

Giraffe. Since eighth grade, I've always been one of the shortest in the class and the last guy picked for the basketball team (how sad), and I just thought it might be nice to stand 18 feet tall for once! Giraffes don't compete with others for food, and they are a "cute" animal.

If I were an animal, I think I would be something that somewhat signifies me, such as a porpoise, because porpoises are lovable, creative, protective and fun-loving.

I would be a slug. ASUI senators are often compared to slugs. But like senators, slugs have good points too. They both leave a clear path for others to follow.

If I were an animal, I would be an eagle. Whenever I felt the need to escape the daily routine, I could soar high in the sky to see new places and events.

I think that the lion is the most majestic and beautiful animal in the world. It has the most aggressive nature and is intensely focused on its goals. When it sees something that it wants, it will do everything possible to get it. It strikes with quickness and efficiency.

This question is a joke, right? Apparently the Argonaut is following the national political trend of emphasizing style over substance. Major issues need to be addressed by our university, such as increased state funding and the reduced student-faculty ratios.

I would be a moose in the Yukon of Canada. I would choose being a moose as they usually get left alone by others, but when they are pushed, they will stand up and push back just as hard if not harder. To top that, there would be little presence of man there.

A snake. A snake is adaptable to many environments, whether hostile or friendly. Snakes are strong and independent and stand on their own when required. Snakes protect their territory. My second animal choice would be a woodpecker!

Elephant — because they seem to be very diligent and hard-working. They are often used as most effective tools and typically are a great benefit to those who choose to use them. Besides, I like elephants, and it's a dumb question anyway.

I want to be a cat. They can survive without help and like you for yourself, not because they need something from you.

Trent Talks:

Trent doles out advice, like it or not

There are those who believe that life here began out there; that wandering tribes of humans sent their offspring here to be punished for fleeing the Cylon tyranny at home. Others believe that various forms of insect life have overtaken the Registrar's office, Marriott and the liquor aisle at Rosauers to destroy the average college student. Yet, those with the strangest set of beliefs are those who could possibly believe that a person with the same name as the capital of New Jersey could tell a universe from a riding lawn mower, let alone answer questions and dole out advice.

Q: Why are there those chalkboards at knee-level in the UCC? Has someone built them for exceptionally short teachers, or are they reminders of a once-powerful civilization? —Gerald Ocker

A: Dear Sir: I opt for the idea that a family of deranged Satanists with an interest in slate broke into the UCC and put them there as a reminder that evil reigns on campus. A friend (let's call her VIVIANE) thought that they might be there for teachers to lean on during class. I asked a janitor who called himself "Pap" what the boards were for, and he replied, "Them, they hold tools." Well, this remains a puzzle, doesn't it? I wonder what "Pap" could gain by withholding information? If anyone has the answer, please come for-

There you have it, and right from the intellectual center of our omniverse Don't worry. Maybe someday you too can be as wise as the weatherman (slash) doughnut-fetcher at Z-FUN.

Correction:

It was wrongly reported in last issue's editorial by Matt Helmick that the Moscow Police Department employs two "gang, graffiti, and occult specialists." Moscow Police Chief David Cameron clarified that the MPD employs one officer that has experience in these areas, but that is not why the officer is employed by the police department, nor should the officer be considered a "specialist" in that field. The Argonaut apologizes for any confusion or false hopes this error may have caused.

Help prevent pregnancies to stop abortions

Editor:

I am not pro-abortion, but I am pro-choice. I do not think that abortion is good, or easy, or something that should be used in place of contraceptives. But I am pro-choice.

I have no place casting judgment or restrictions on another's personal freedom. If you are anti-abortion and anti-choice, you have crossed the bounds of freedom set out by our forefathers. Freedom of choice is the foundation of this country and this state, and those rights should never ever be threatened.

If you believe that abortion is a sin in the eyes of God, then let God decide the punishment. You are not God; therefore, you should not be acting in God's behalf.

If you are pro-life, please turn your anger into compassion, your frustration into forgiveness and your hatred into love. If you truly want to stop abortions, then help prevent pregnancy. Support the educational programs that teach children about the responsibilities of sexual intercourse. Encourage questions about family planning and contraception.

Let's work together to prevent women from having to make difficult choices they'd rather not have to make. For we are all on the same side, really. I hope that someday all the children of the world are born for the right reasons, because they were wanted, and because it was their parents' choice.

Moriarty 'dedicated, capable leader'

Editor:

Katherine Moriarty is running for the ASUI Senate, and I encourage you to support her candidacy.

I know Katherine to be a dedicated, hard-working community leader. Katherine has consistently supported increased funding for Idaho's education system at both the state and local levels. Working with public education officials and business leaders in the community, Katherine helped to establish a private foundation to provide increased funding for the Meridian School District in Boise. She understands that Idaho's schools need additional funding. As an ASUI senator, Katherine will use her demonstrated skills to seek more money from the state Legislature for the necessary academic programs and faculty at the University of Idaho.

The NRA has a great sense of humor

I've got nothing against my fellow citizen owning a gun, especially while it's pointed at my head. But does the Constitution compel us to sell guns — which have been known to KILL — on the spot, to people in the throes of homicidal rage? Couldn't we ask them to wait a few days and mull it over?

"That's unconstitutional," sez the National Rifle Association. Well, seein'z how the NRA has dropped in on this article unexpected-like, let's lob a few more questions its way.

Q: Sir, would you be in favor of requiring psychotic crack junkies to say "pretty please" before purchasing automatic American-made assault rifles?

NRA: (Click-click).

Hmm, let's try another approach. "Just what animals do you hunt with an Uzi submachine gun? Squirrels?"

NRA: Whatever's in season.

Q: Can you tell me the value of Saturday night specials, other than to shoot game-show hosts?

NRA: Ever heard of self-defense? And besides, poor people have constitutional rights, too.

Q: How 'bout armor-piercing bullets?

NRA: I'd sell 'em in vending machines.

Q: I see. How do you explain the fact that the U.S. is the world leader in violent crimes AND in sheer numbers of gun owners who have more respect for Cheetos than human life?

NRA: Sheer coincidence. Or drugs.
Q: So if we control the sale of drugs, people can't hurt themselves, and they won't buy guns and kill each other?
NRA: Listen, guns are only dangerous in the hands of fools.
Q: Should we prevent fools from owning them?
NRA: No.
Q: Should we prevent them from buying guns on demand?
NRA: No. That's unconstitutional.
Q: So what ARE you saying?
NRA: (Click-click).

Now I know, I know. The NRA, whose unofficial motto is "Guns 'R Us," advocates responsible gun ownership. Store them unloaded. Keep them locked up and away from children. With the safety on. Do not immerse them in soapy water. Shoulder-holster them in crowded supermarkets. Do not use them to turn off the oven from the living room. Never use the butt of a loaded gun as a hammer or a baseball bat. And use them only as a last resort in settling traffic disputes. Unless of course you're the 14th in a line of maybe 15 cars, and the jerk behind you in the sports car passes you and then whips back into your lane while he adjusts his hair in the rear-view mirror. In which case you must send up a warning flare to alert oncoming traffic of your intentions to launch a retaliatory missile strike.

Ha ha! The NRA has a great sense of humor. They'll like that last one. And as the last paragraph shows, they also have some commendable ethical standards. And being such staunch supporters of the Second Amendment of the Bill of Rights ("Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife's hunting rifle"), I think I can confidently say, with only the slightest hint of nervous laughter, that the NRA will respect my First Amendment rights. I think.

It's all hysteria anyway. A background check on prospec-

Katherine is a capable leader who knows how to get the job done. She wants to ensure that the students at the UI will receive improved educational opportunities. She wants to reduce the student/faculty ratio in upper-division courses. She wants to develop statewide programs to ensure that the UI addresses the educational needs of all Idahoans. Katherine believes these goals can be accomplished with creative, dedicated leadership.

Lyle Cunningham is more than just a name on a poster. Cunningham will do an excellent job as an ASUI senator.

His no-nonsense approach, honesty and sincerity will certainly prove to be a valuable asset to students.

While Cunningham is in support of expanding ASUI-funded student services, he believes the general reserve should not be used except in the case of emergency.

I encourage you to vote for Lyle Cunningham for ASUI Senate Wednesday. Remember, he is more than just a name on a poster.

Grigsby's commentary a nightmare

Editor:

We failed to grasp the focus of Mr. Grigsby's commentary printed in the March 27 Argonaut. Mr. Grigsby covered a lot of bases — from the armed forces to the CIA; from Jesse Helms to President Bush — without supporting or elaborating on any of his points.

Granted, the commentary was based on a dream; however, we failed to see the connection between patriotism and government spending. Perhaps Mr. Grigsby could have elaborated on his contempt of patriotism or the U.S. government in a direct manner instead of relying on the dream scenario. We realize there is a lot of anti-American sentiment around the world, as well as contempt for governmental bureaucracy. On the other hand, we are proud to live in a country where we are able to voice our opinions against the government without fear of retribution. Fortunately, there are still a few of us left who are patriotic, even if we disagree with certain decisions made by the governing body of our great nation.

Mr. Grigsby attempts to link patriotism with government spending; however, he does not present his argument in a coherent manner. He also refers to patriotism as an "addiction," much like a drug addict is addicted to cocaine or heroin. By this association, is Mr. Grigsby saying that patriotism should be viewed in the same light as drug abuse? If so, should the millions of Americans serving in the military, as well as the millions of veterans, be scorned by society because of their patriotism? Does Mr. Grigsby truly believe that we should desire individuals who are not patriotic to govern and defend our country?

By structuring his commentary in the form of a dream, Mr. Grigsby attempts to escape accountability for his writing; therefore, we hold Mr. Grigsby fully responsible for every word of his dream. Perhaps Mr. Grigsby should think twice before writing as if he is remembering a dream; thus his point would not appear to be so vague. We suggest Mr. Grigsby wake up and smell the fruited plain!

tive gun owners, or a cooling-off period, does not lead to the outlawing of guns. Nobody really wants to confiscate hunting rifles. That's what they like to claim, though.

But hunters aren't the problem (until they start seeing deer wearing bright orange vests). No, the problem is (and I think if you've ever been to a big-city bus station or an Herbalife convention you'll agree with me) that this country is full of loonies. Many of them armed loonies — who think the term "shooting spree" has a kind of festive ring to it.

And also "survivalists," who dress up in combat fatigues and play war games in the woods on the weekend. And like Charles Manson, wait for the day when all hell breaks loose and they can step in and take over. At which point they may begin to question the wisdom of allowing kooks to stockpile small arsenals at will.

The thing is, if you REALLY want a gun, you've probably given it some thought. You could probably even wait a WHOLE WEEK for it, maybe while somebody checks to make sure your permanent address isn't the town cuckoo clock.

"But nooooooo," say celebrity rednecks like Charlton Heston. "That's unconstitutional."

Easy for them to say. They don't have to live in parts of town where guns and violence are more culturally ingrained than breakfast. In fact, they make movies that glorify guns and violence.

But the argument lingers that we could be invaded tomorrow by hostile forces — renegade Communists, urban youth gangs, right-to-life groups, evangelical missions — who knows? Maybe even our OWN GOVERNMENT! And then what? Well, we could keep them at bay for a few days by erecting barricades out of bound shoppers' inserts from the newspaper. But then what? How do we hold them off for a whole week while our gun orders are processed?

Yes, in this country smite makes right, all right. Many of our cherished congresspersons speak out against pornography. It's a bad influence, they say. Some crusade against rock music. It's the work of the devil. Many wage wars (of words) on drugs. Drugs lower worker productivity. But just mention making guns — whose mere discharge often leads to the death of innocent people — less accessible than laundry detergent, and you'll find those same elected representatives hiding in one of the NRA's back pockets. The one with the wallet, of course.

Collette's Clouds has contemporary twist

A Greek classic gets a contemporary twist this week when the University of Idaho Theater Arts Department presents Aristophanes' The Clouds Thursday through Saturday at the Collette Theater.

Written in the fifth century B.C., during the Golden Age of Greece, The Clouds is the most well-known and traditional comedy of its time. Among the victims of this satire is Socrates and his scientific studies, which Aristophanes believed questioned and challenged the existence of Greek theology.

While director Tom Armitage has imposed his own interpretation on this play, he has only slightly changed its focus to the contemporary debate between old and new education.

He terms the play "an artistic comedy that lives on through this satire of modern education."

The play questions beliefs in new education, that an education is simply a path one takes to obtain a good job with a good paycheck. National and local educational issues will be represented in the play to provide a mix of traditional language and updated humor.

This theme may seem a bit out of touch with today's society, but Armitage implements modern language and refers to national celebrities and events, which enables the play to concentrate its satire on today's education system.

"It's hard to make the audience of today understand satire that is almost 2,500 years old," Armitage said.

Armitage, a theater arts graduate student, most recently directed The Marriage of Bette and Boo at UI's Hartung Theater last fall. The production was nominated for performance at the American College Theater Festival this year.

The Clouds contains mature themes and suggestive language that may be unsuitable for some.

Tickets for The Clouds are $3 and are available at Ticket Express in the Student Union Building. The performance starts at 8 p.m., with a matinee Saturday at 2 p.m.

David Giese: Fishing for Karp

By MARY HEUETT
Staff Writer

Editor's note: The following article is part four in a series of five on David Giese.

In the spring of 1987, Phyllis Tuchman, a writer and art critic, came to the University of Idaho on a lecture circuit. When she saw Giese's work, she asked him to send his portfolio to her in New York. She wanted to make sure certain people saw his work, but she didn't tell him who.

At the same time, Giese was working to create a situation where he would have Ivan Karp's full attention. People told him to see only Ivan and not to waste his time with someone in Karp's organization.

Fearing that Karp would just go through the motions of looking at the work if he simply went to Karp's gallery, Giese sought a situation with more focus, one that would produce a definite yes or no.

A month after Giese sent Tuchman the portfolio, she called. Ivan had seen the work and raved. Giese remembers her saying, "David, if your studio had been in Vermont, he was really seriously thinking of driving. He got out a map and was looking to see where Moscow was. He said, 'I can fly into Spokane and just drive down.' I said, 'It's a little more complicated than that, Ivan.'"

Although Giese had approached at least 35 galleries seriously and had received inquiries from several, he dropped all negotiations when Karp expressed a definite interest in his work.

"You don't play both ends, because it doesn't take long to find out. You can't be coy boy," Giese says.

"I called Karp before going to town that summer. He said he would be around. Unfortunately he was leaving for the summer, and I didn't realize it," Giese says.

When Karp returned to New York in the fall, Giese mailed him a letter and a more complete portfolio. A letter came back requesting a meeting. Karp, although excited by the portfolio, wanted to see some original pieces.

Giese arranged to meet with Karp during the university's spring break, in March 1988. At the same time, he shipped two pieces to a friend who owned an architectural firm in Manhattan. He flew out and with his friend, installed the two pieces in the Broadway office.

Giese and Karp sat down and looked through the portfolio. When Karp asked if he had any pieces in New York, Giese said yes. They went to the firm to see the works. Karp walked in, looked at the pieces, and asked Giese if he had plans for the day. "No," Giese said.

"Come with me," Karp said. They returned to the gallery to talk.

"You don't play both ends, because it doesn't take long to find out. You can't be a coy boy."

— David Giese
UI Professor and Artist

Based on what he had seen, Karp told Giese he had two possible dates, one in April 1989, and one in October 1990. He told Giese he wanted to show him, in October, the best month to be shown in New York.

But before he made a final decision, Karp wanted to see a whole body of work, not one or two pieces. Everything he had seen in the portfolio to date came from The Rise And Fall of Taste exhibit. The level of production and the consistency of quality concerned him. He told Giese he wanted to come to Moscow and see more work.

At the beginning of that same summer, after two years of touch-and-go negotiations, The Rise And Fall of Taste opened in Chicago, destined to travel to Corpus Christi, Texas, Charleston, W.Va., Milwaukee, Wis., Las Vegas, Nev., and other cities.

Back in Moscow, Giese attempted to orchestrate a mini-program for Karp in the fall of 1988, where Karp would speak at UI and Washington State University. Giese knew that Karp, like others in the market, could no longer rely solely on money from people coming into the gallery. Knowing that Karp gives lectures, Giese wanted to make the trip worthwhile for him. So he wrote to Karp, saying, "We don't have much money this year, but we can arrange some things for you here and there."

Karp wrote back. Giese pauses, drawing himself up to deliver the response, one filled with emphatic pauses. "Giese ... I will do one talk ... your place. Scrape up what you can, and I will come when you have 10 masterworks for me to see."

Giese realized then that Karp wasn't interested in talks or piddling programs. The work drew Karp to Moscow, and the work alone excited him. One talk — okay; a lecture tour — no.

Another letter sped from Moscow to New York suggesting a fall visit, when Giese would have 13 pieces ready for inspection and a short talk to give Karp some extra cash.

The return letter approved the plan, saying the sooner implemented the better. Karp wanted to come in the fall before the snowfall. September was out since it was a busy month for Karp and a critical month for the gallery. The UI's homecoming celebration and Karp's visit were to coincide in late October.

While working on the new pieces, Giese took some quick and cheesy snapshots to send to Karp.

"They were just," Giese waves three Polaroids as if they were only practice photos, not worth looking at twice, "to give him an indication of what the work was."

Over the phone Karp told Giese, "Beautiful photographs, beautiful portfolio."

Giese said Karp got hot about coming out and seeing the work. Hot enough to say he was saving October for Giese.

Frehley deserves a look

REVIEW By WILL SCHNECKPEPER
Staff Writer

Ace Frehley is back again with hopes of making big-time commercial success with his new album, Trouble Walkin'. He might just get it right this time. Frehley's previous solo albums have not lived up to his reputation as a founding member of the '70s rock group KISS. People who ascribed the downfall of KISS to Frehley's leaving the group were puzzled by the mediocre music he was making on his own.

The answer, it seems, is that Frehley just needed a little time and space — and maybe even a little help.

Not to say that Trouble Walkin' is the greatest metal album to come out in ages — far from it, actually. What Frehley and his group do is play some great music and show people that groups like Van Halen, Bon Jovi and Guns 'n Roses aren't the only ones bringing down the house.

Frehley wrote seven of the 10 tracks on the album, which shows a vast improvement over his other post-KISS work. His guitar playing also sounds ... not better, exactly, but sharper and crisper. If he were just starting out as a musician, I'd say that he's finally gained confidence in what he's doing, but since that's not the case, I don't know what the hell's going on.

Some curious notes about Trouble Walkin': Frehley does a cover of the recent KISS song "Hide Your Heart," which wins the award for the shortest grace period between releases of one song. The album's single is a cover of ELO's "Do Ya," which adds another notch to Jeff Lynne's (of Traveling Wilbury fame) dossier of musicians he's making money off of.

Also, longtime friend and co-founder of KISS, drummer/singer Peter Criss, is a guest on Following Tueller's talk, a panel discussion will relate Idaho's economy to the global economy. Panelists include: Dick Bennett, vice president of Bennett Lumber Company; Dennis Wheeler, president of Coeur d'Alene Mines; Dick Rush, former director of the Idaho Department of Agriculture; and Gary DeGrange, assistant vice president and manager of international banking at West One Bank in Boise.

the album. Unfortunately, the liner notes don't tell which songs Criss plays on, so I can't find him anywhere. Go figure.

Trouble Walkin' also has one instrumental and one live cut, both exceptionally well-done. Although neither will go down as timeless music, the cuts make for far above average rock and round out this well-produced album.

THE FINAL VERDICT: I don't know. On the one hand I like this album, but on the other hand I know Frehley is capable of better stuff. I guess what it comes down to is that Trouble Walkin' is far better than most of the crap other so-called metal bands (e.g. Poison) are producing today and deserves a look. Odds are, most people will not be disappointed.

Track teams take second in meet

By TOM BITHELL
Staff Writer

The University of Idaho men's and women's track teams both finished second in overall scoring, with each team grabbing five first-place individual finishes in outdoor action this weekend in Missoula, Mont.

The Vandal men won the 400 and 100-meter relays and the 100, 200 and 400-meter races.

Stephen Lewis, back from a hamstring injury, anchored the 100-meter relay team to victory and won the 100 and 200-meter races, earning conference qualifying marks in both.

Lewis' teammate, Patrick Williams, usually runs the 100 and 200 ahead of Lewis but instead ran the 400-meter race. Williams won the 400 and earned a conference qualifying mark in the event.

Men's Head Coach Mike Keller said he was pleased with his team's performance.

"The relay teams ran well, and all our sprinters ran well," Keller said. "I think it's nice to have Stephen Lewis back to anchor our 100 relay."

Keller, who week after week emphasizes individual achievements over team performance, said the Vandals did not take first place mainly because other teams stress quantity over quality.

"They beat you on numbers," Keller said, referring to teams entering more participants in an event even though they won't place well. "A quality team like us will do better in the Big Sky meet."

At the conference meet, only the top performers can enter and score team points. That even things out for smaller teams with good athletes, Keller said.

The men placed second overall behind Montana State University, the team the Vandals defeated at the Big Sky Indoor Championships. MSU and UI were followed by the University of Montana, Ricks College and Eastern Washington University.

Like Keller, women's Head Coach Scott Lorek said he is also concerned mostly with individual performances. Lorek said he only worries about the team score at the conference meet.

"If we were really going for team points, we could have won the meet," Lorek said. "We scratched a lot of events."

Lorek said he was happy with the competitiveness his team displayed in taking five first-place finishes.

Freshman Jackie Ross won the triple jump and the long jump, continuing her dominance of the conference in those events. Karen McCloskey won the 100-meter hurdles, Anne Scott took the 400 hurdles, and Kim Gillas won the 400-meter race.

Next weekend the Vandal men will travel to Boise for the Bob Gibb invitational. The women will split the team between Boise and Palo Alto, Calif., where they will compete with Stanford University.

Women's tennis team downs UPS

By STEVE SMEDE
Staff Writer

The University of Idaho women's tennis team improved its record to 9-4 Sunday with a 7-2 victory over the University of Puget Sound.

The women now have four wins behind them as they prepare for the Northwest Divisional Playoffs this weekend at the UI Physical Education Building tennis courts.

Sunday's dual match yielded five out of six individual match victories for the Vandals. In No. 1 singles, junior Patricia Shanander ousted Puget Sound's Leilame Magee in a tight 5-7, 6-4, 7-5 battle. Shanander's win upped her singles record to 11-2.

Senior Cathy Shanander-Law (9-4) won her match 6-4, 6-4 over Puget Sound's Kate Murphy. Junior Karina Heimburger (9-4) and senior Lynda Leroux (5-8) both blew away their UPS opponents 6-2, 6-1 in Nos. 3 and 4 singles, respectively. In the No. 5 spot, UI's Merlene Forde defeated Amy Bolander 7-6, 7-5.

In No. 1 doubles, the Shanander sisters once again proved their dominance. The Shananders nearly shut out Lisa Dick and Kate Murphy of UPS in a 6-1, 6-0 victory. The sisters still have a spotless 13-0 season record.

In No. 2 doubles, Heimburger and junior Karen Bladholm were outmatched by Puget Sound's Karen McDonald and Leilame Magee in a 6-4, 7-5 loss.

The women finished the day with Leroux's and Forde's 6-1, 7-6 win in No. 3 doubles.

The women's Northwest Divisional Playoffs will take place Friday and Saturday. The competition will include UI, the University of Montana, Eastern Washington University and Montana State University in a round-robin tournament at UI's PEB courts. The Vandal matches start at 2 p.m. Friday against MSU. Saturday the women play

Montana at 9 a.m. and EWU at 2 p.m.

The UI men's team will finish its regular season with a match against Stanislaus State University this weekend at UI's Memorial courts and one next week at Lewis-Clark State College in Lewiston. The team has a 5-4 season record after consecutive losses against Rutgers and Hartford universities in March.

The No. 5 player, Larry Gresham, is atop the Vandal roster with a 7-2 overall individual record, and No. 1 player Scott Andersen is 5-4 for the season.

Andersen and senior John Bladholm have tallied a 4-1 doubles record in No. 1 doubles. Gresham and senior Darren Lewis have a solitary 0-1 total in the No. 2 spot, while junior Chris Kramer and sophomore Jose Palacios have a season record of 3-1 in No. 3 doubles.

Rain halts baseball club's roll

By JOHN CARTER
Staff Writer

After the University of Idaho baseball club rolled its way to two impressive victories in Boise last weekend, only the rain could slow down the club. And it did.

UI traveled to Boise to play in a three-team round-robin tournament against Boise State University and the University of Montana.

The Vandals opened up with a 10-3 win over an obviously weaker UM team behind the consistent pitching of Bob Demontigny, who improved his record to 2-1 on the year.

UI's offense looked equally sharp and scored in every inning except the fifth.

"Offensively, things went well," Vandal Head Coach Wade Wilson said. "There were some really good hitting performances."

UI's Jim Davis and Dave Schwartz each had two hits, and Kevin Driskill collected three, including a double. Schwartz, the Vandals' assistant coach, belted a triple in the game.

In the second game, UI opened a few eyes by blasting the tough Boise State Broncos 12-4.

"It was kind of a shock to us," Wilson said. "BSU's a very good team and was well-prepared."

Not prepared enough for the Vandals, however.

Pitcher Craig Knott went the distance for UI, scattering just five hits throughout the game and striking out five Broncos, including the first four of the game. He improved to 2-1 on the year.

John Conrad led the Vandal offense with three hits, including one in the decisive seventh inning. Going into the final inning, UI led 7-4 in a close game before exploding for five

TURTLES & BUNNIES

Phi Delta Theta Turtle Derby attendees wondered why the Fiji rabbit never moved out of the starting gate at Saturday's annual Family Weekend Derby competition.

All will be surprised to know, certainly none more surprised than the men of Phi Gamma Delta, that the rabbit was pregnant. The un-named female rabbit gave birth to seven in the Fiji laundry room early Sunday morning. Mother and children are doing quite well, thank you.

The rabbit was imported for competition from the Coeur d' Alene Hippity-Hop Ranch. No one was aware that the rabbit was female, much less pregnant.

Announcement of the birth was originally being withheld pending notification of relatives, but you know, how it goes with rabbits.

The rabbit and her children were returned to the wilderness from which they came. We wish them the best of luck.

"That put it away for us," Wilson said.

The Vandals were clicking on all eight cylinders in the second game, and Wilson said he could not have been more pleased.

"That was our best game of the year both offensively and defensively," he said.

Unfortunately for Wilson and the team, rain stepped in Sunday, and the games scheduled for the final day of the tournament were canceled.

UI returns to action today against Lewis-Clark State College's junior varsity team in its first home game of the season. The game begins at 2:30 p.m. at Guy Wicks Field in Moscow.

Zinser said the colleges and universities contributed to the problem, and that it was time to "overcome the barriers."

She said that with differentiation comes distinction, and that by developing individual strengths rather than competing, the sister institutions can better advance Idaho.

"Rivalries can fade," Zinser said.

Representatives from more than 100 universities and colleges were present to help welcome Zinser to her new role in Idaho.

Samuel Smith, Washington State University president, spoke of continuing the friendship and cooperation that has developed across the border between the two campuses.

"We have distinct missions, but as we've said before, together we're unstoppable," Smith told Zinser.

In addition to the dignitaries and officials, some personal guests were also present, including Zinser's parents, several family members and two former teachers.

The convocation celebrated the academic achievements of UI students throughout the 1989-1990 academic year.

Those honored included students named to deans' lists, those elected to scholastic honor societies, recipients of Alumni Awards for Excellence, and those entering the University Honors Program.
