

Partying leaves litter, property damage at Boyer

By SHERRY DEAL
Managing Editor

The dunes at the Lower Granite Dam near Boyer Park have become a favorite party spot for area college students, and the partying has gotten out of hand, according to a fisheries biologist.

Garth Griffin, the biologist in charge of the Lower Granite Dam project, said during the weekend of April 6, 7 and 8, $500-$1,000 worth of property damage was incurred to the area as a result of the record number of students at the dunes.

"The mess that was left was incredible," Griffin said. "That's the only way I can explain it."

Friday, April 6, Griffin said most of the students at the dunes were University of Idaho students. Students were dismissed from their afternoon classes because of UI President Elisabeth Zinser's inauguration ceremony.

Saturday, April 7, Griffin said the dunes drew a record crowd. He said between 800 and 1,000 vehicles were parked along a 1 1/2-mile stretch of road. Some cars were parked in the middle of the road and, according to Griffin, there was a time when the roadway was completely blocked.

Griffin said unbelievable amounts of litter were left on the beach area, a large sign explaining the significance of the dunes as a wildlife habitat was vandalized, and the restroom was dismantled and burned on the beach.

After the weekend, 60-70 burlap sacks of aluminum cans were picked up from the dune area.

According to Griffin, dunes maintenance is handled by a private contractor. It usually takes two people about an hour to walk the dunes, retrieve the trash and change the trash-can liners.

Sunday, April 8, a four-person crew gave up after nine hours, when only about two-thirds of the garbage had been picked up.

Griffin said the partying at the dunes also makes it difficult for the Garfield County police. There were more officers patrolling the dune area than in all the rest of Garfield County, and more than 90 citations were written in the three-day period, Griffin said.

According to Griffin, before the dunes area became a party spot, it was intended as a habitat management unit where the public could view wildlife species in their natural habitats.

"It's a different type of wildlife now," Griffin said. "It's completely out of hand."

Griffin said he plans to meet next week with representatives from the Garfield County police and local student newspapers, and with his supervisors from Clarkston, to further discuss the problem and some possible solutions.

Impeachment process begun for ASUI pres

By VIVIANE GILBERT
News Editor

An ASUI senator is currently in the process of drafting an article of impeachment against ASUI President David Pena.

"Basically, he's not doing his job," ASUI Sen. John Goettsche said.

Goettsche criticized Pena for several administrative actions concerning the proposed student fee increase, and claimed that a memo Pena sent to the State Board of Education about the increase was a direct violation of the ASUI Constitution.

Pena denied the charges, saying they were all groundless and politically motivated.

"The intentions that are motivating these allegations have nothing to do with the allegations," Pena said.

At Wednesday night's senate meeting, Goettsche presented a resolution reprimanding Pena for several actions that Goettsche claims violate the ASUI Constitution.

Thursday afternoon, after Goettsche learned of Pena's memo to the board, he distributed copies of a memo to the senators that stated the reprimand would be changed to charges of impeachment.

"You have no right to determine ASUI policy. You do not have the right to say the ASUI supports the fee increase," Goettsche wrote to Pena.

The board's Finance Committee invited Pena to speak at the meeting in Lewiston, where he stated his and students' opinions about the increase.

The state board was hearing testimony in consideration of University of Idaho President Elisabeth Zinser's proposal of a 6.2 percent student fee increase for the university.

The main charge Goettsche brought against Pena is that he violated the constitution by stating policy on behalf of the students that was not set by the senate. Accord-

Computer preregistration to begin next week

By TAMARA SHIDLANSKI
Contributing Writer

Mission: Test the new preregistration equipment to see how easy it is to use. I thought preregistration might be difficult, but after talking with Associate Registrar Jo Baldrige, I have decided to give the system two thumbs up.

First, students should pick up a blue preregistration instruction book at their college dean's office. This booklet will lessen confusion while preregistering and provide important information about financial obligations.

To begin the preregistration process at the computer cluster site, if the University of Idaho logo is on the screen, students need to press ENTER, type DIAL PREREG and press ENTER again.

This will get the students to the preregistration identification screen. The UI logo will probably only appear on the screen the first time the computer is used each day.

Next, students must enter two identification numbers: their student ID number and the month and day they were born. Then students can enter courses using certain codes, such as A to add, D to drop or E to exit the data screen.

By pressing ENTER after each entry, students can receive on-the-spot confirmation and make any necessary adjustments.

The preregistration process should go smoothly even for those who are not especially comfortable using a computer. The entire process should only take about 10 minutes. If the blue instruction booklet does not address all the questions students may have, monitors will be available at each cluster site to help.

Tradition is finally meeting the future at the University of Idaho.

TOMORROW'S NEWS

LEARN SOME BIRD SONGS. "Identifying Birds by Songs and Calls" will be presented by Brian Janosik Tuesday at 7 p.m. at the Moscow Community Center. Janosik, a University of Idaho graduate student in wildlife sciences, is an experienced teacher of bird identification. He will present useful techniques for distinguishing the songs of birds of the Palouse and methods for transcribing them into memorable phrases. Admission is free and open to the public. The presentation is sponsored by the Palouse Audubon Society.

GO SHOOT A TURKEY. A turkey shoot will mark the grand opening of the remodeled indoor target range in the Memorial Gym. The event, sponsored by the University of Idaho Army and Navy ROTC departments, will be held Tuesday from 1 p.m. - 4 p.m. It is open to all UI students and faculty. The ROTC departments will provide rifles and ammunition. The top finishers will receive prizes. The new facility has 10 firing stations, a workbench and a new ventilation system that filters harmful gases and lead from the air. For information or to enter, contact Master Sgt. John Tester at the UI Army ROTC department in Memorial Gym.

SPECIAL MAMMOGRAPHY RATES IN MAY. Gritman Memorial Hospital will offer a special reduced-rate mammography exam during the month of May. To arrange for the special rate, appointments must be scheduled by April 30. Mammography is the preferred diagnostic method for the early detection of breast cancer. The American Cancer Society recommends that all women over age 35 have a baseline exam and routine exams thereafter, depending on age and risk factors. The special mammography screening exam costs $50 and includes the professional reading fee. For more information or to schedule an appointment, call Gritman Memorial Hospital's Medical Imaging Center.

LIFE IN CHINA DISCUSSION. A discussion of life in China since the clash last June between demonstrators and the army will be held Wednesday from 12:30 p.m. - 1:20 p.m. at the Campus Christian Center. "Since Tiananmen" will feature Amos Yoder, Borah distinguished professor of political science; Tom Kennedy, professor of history at Washington State University; and Ben Li, president of the University of Idaho Chinese Students Association. The program, sponsored by the Martin Peace Institute, is free and open to the public.

SUMMER YOUTH COACHES NEEDED. The Moscow Parks and Recreation Department needs volunteer youth baseball and softball coaches for its summer program that begins in late May. Games will begin in mid-June and continue through July. The time commitment is three to five hours each week. For additional information, call the Parks and Recreation office.

ALL-NIGHT STUDY CENTER. A meeting to discuss establishing an area for all-night studying this semester will be held today at 2 p.m. For more information about the meeting time and place, contact ASUI Sen. Amy Anderson or the Senate office.

IFC alcohol proposal may set standard

By PAULA KILMARTIN
Contributing Writer

A new University of Idaho risk management and alcohol policy will be proposed at the next Interfraternity Council meeting Tuesday.

"We are implementing a policy which will finally be enforced," IFC President Fred LeClair said.

LeClair said he has received some positive feedback from university officials about the simple policy.

With all the liability problems facing campuses today, UI recognizes the need to adapt to the laws. With alcohol policies, it is difficult to go from complete freedom to strict standards, but students are slowly changing with the times, LeClair said.

IFC wants this alcohol policy to serve as a common standard and as a set of expectations for all the houses, according to LeClair.

To enforce the new policy, an alcohol board has been formed to regulate functions in accordance with the IFC judiciary board.

LeClair said that he would like the IFC executive board to be seen as a policy informant and not as an enforcement agent since the judicial board will deal with the major problems.

"We present ourselves as mature, responsible people, so we should prove it," LeClair said.

Those who possess or consume alcoholic beverages while on chapter premises during an official fraternity-endorsed event must comply with:

- Local, state and federal laws
- FIGP, a national Greek insurance company, and individual chapter insurance policies
- International and national policies
- IFC and Panhellenic policies

The proposed policy states that only Greek students 21 and older may bring alcohol to fraternity or sorority functions. Those who want to drink must "bring their own beer" because chapters cannot use their funds to purchase alcohol.

According to the proposed policy, at least two men and two women from the chapters participating in a social function must monitor entrances from 9 p.m. until the doors close. Two of the four monitors, one man and one woman, must be chapter executive officers.

All UI Greek students and guests 21 and older who consume alcohol must show picture identification and be clearly identified by a stamp.

In addition, the proposal states that only the members and guests of the chapter sponsoring the function will be allowed to attend the event. The door monitors are responsible for identifying their own chapter members and chapter guests.

Each chapter will be allowed to have 10 guests at each event. Chapters must submit a list of names to the host social chairman by 5 p.m. on the day of the function.

The proposed policy stipulates that food and alternate non-alcoholic beverages must be provided at functions where alcohol is present.

Senate, president disagree over bills

By TRACY PEEL
Staff Writer

Disagreements erupted between some ASUI senators and the ASUI president at the senate meeting Wednesday night.

ASUI President David Pena objected to a bill that would have limited his ability to speak before the senate. Currently, Pena is allowed to address the senate during the Presidential Communications period at the beginning of each senate meeting, plus speak as an ex-officio senate member during debate. The bill would have prevented Pena from speaking without the unanimous consent of the senate at any time other than Presidential Communications.

"This bill effectively denies the president's constitutional right to speak in senate," Pena said.

Sen. Lisa Krepel, author of the bill, said the bill was constitutional and actually preserved the separation of powers.

Sen. Brent King said he saw no problem with having someone talk at senate meetings.

"(With the president) As a non-voting member, there is no problem with separation of powers," King said.

The bill failed to receive the two-thirds majority it needed to pass the senate. Sens. Amy Anderson, Steve Dunn, Charlene Johnson, Doug Korn and King voted against it.

Pena and some senators also disagreed about appointments for next year's KUOI-FM station manager, Gem of the Mountains editor and Argonaut editor. Pena said he had heard that some ex-officio Communications Board members, who could have provided extra opinions, were not informed of the meeting.

Pena said he would not author any of the appointment bills yet.

"I'd like to look into this first, because my name is on the appointment bills," Pena later said.

Pena said that he had not been informed of the meeting. If there was a problem, he said he would like to reconvene the Communications Board meeting.

Normally, the Communications Board interviews candidates for these positions and makes recommendations. The president authors a bill to appoint those recommended, and the bill is sent to the appointments committee for a final look before the bills are sent back to the senate for approval.

Pena said he doubts the constitutionality of an appointment bill authored by anyone other than himself.

"According to the constitution, the president authors all appointments," Pena said Thursday night.

"The constitution says the president appoints executive officials. I'm not sure that these people are executive officials like board chairs are," Krepel said Thursday night.

Krepel said the senate's appointments committee would interview the people the board recommended Tuesday at 4:15 p.m. in the Student Union Building Pow-Wow Room. If the committee approves the Communications Board's recommendations, a senator from the committee could write a bill to appoint them.

Program to help students find environmental job

By STEPHANIE BAILEY
Entertainment Editor

Students interested in environmental careers will have an opportunity to explore current available employment options Wednesday and Thursday, according to Ben Packard, program associate from the Center for Environmental Intern Program (CEIP).

The CEIP Fund Inc. is a non-profit organization designed to help college students and recent college graduates in any major find careers in the environmental field.

Packard will be on campus Wednesday and will speak in University Classroom Center Room 202 from 3:30 p.m. - 4:30 p.m. On Thursday, he will give two presentations in UCC 202 at 1:30 p.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Packard said the national organization was founded by law student John Cook as a reaction to the first Earth Day in 1970.

Students apply to CEIP, which matches the most interested and qualified candidates to a job with a company sponsor, such as a corporation, a consulting firm or a government agency.

Packard said he believes that after graduation, students need a paid job that gives them experience in their field.

He said students from any major can get environmental jobs. CEIP jobs are varied and include everything from hazardous and solid waste management to transportation and urban planning.

Packard's talk will focus on job hunting techniques and strategies for environmental jobs. He will stress ways to increase the chance of getting unadvertised jobs and discuss the resources available for achieving a career focus.

Packard said there are no other programs like this in the country.

"We fill a small niche with quality students," he said.

Positions with CEIP range from three months to two years. The salary can vary between $300-$700 a week. The average salary is $400 per week. About one in five job seekers is placed.

The program creates only temporary positions, but about 25 percent of the people are hired permanently at the company they worked for. The other 75 percent, after completing just one project through CEIP, have the contacts and experience they need to find employment on their own, according to Packard.

CEIP subscribers include the National Park Service, the Washington State Department of Ecology, the Boeing Corporation, Metro and Tri-Met in Portland and BP Exploration in Alaska.

In a recent poll of CEIP alumni, 97 percent are still in the environmental field, Packard said.

Last year, CEIP's Pacific Northwest office matched a record number of 64 students and recent graduates to projects. CEIP's goal this year is to match 90 applicants with regional projects.

Targhee given meager rations

By PAM KUEHNE
Staff Writer

The men of Targhee are hungry and not very happy about it, according to Targhee Hall's president, who spoke at the Residence Hall Food Committee meeting Thursday night.

This is not a problem that just started, President Brian Moyer said. The Marriott Corporation has been short-changing Targhee Hall in food all year.

The problem came to the breaking point this week when Targhee's cook asked for some time off, Moyer said. Their cook notified Marriott a week ahead of time that the corporation's services would be needed at Targhee, he said.

For Tuesday's lunch, Marriott gave each of the 44 Targhee members one, and only one, triangle pastry sandwich, Moyer said. For lunch Wednesday, they were again served sandwiches. Initially 20 sandwiches were sent for the 44 members. Targhee members called Marriott, and Marriott sent 20 more sandwiches, but four people were still without a sandwich, Moyer said.

This situation is not new, however. According to Targhee kitchen manager Chris Hasselberg, Targhee's cook is usually short of food in her orders from Marriott, but she just tries to work with it. Hasselberg said Marriott employees gives the cook what they think is enough, and she has no control over the amount of food Targhee receives.

from the committee come and try the food there.

Elizabeth Kniep, Food Service Committee chairperson and Residence Hall Association vice president, said that she would like to taste the food. Kniep also said that she would like to take some of the Targhee members with her to meet with Jerry Wallace, University of Idaho assistant vice president of budgeting and planning, to discuss the situation.

Other business at the meeting included discussion of half of a metal ring and metal shavings found in a hamburger. The person who ate the hamburger was not injured.

"We do not know if Marriott is to blame."

— Elizabeth Kniep
Food Service Committee Chair

Under Targhee's food system, the residents cannot go back for seconds. This becomes a problem, however, when the first and only serving the residents receive is so small.

"One serving should legitimately feed someone," Hasselberg said.

So this weekend, the men of Targhee will continue to go hungry because they did not get enough food throughout the week, Moyer said. Under Targhee's system, the members are served leftovers on weekends, but this week there are no leftovers, so people will be without meals, Moyer said.

Joe Moran, Targhee's Food Service Committee representative, asked that someone

"We do not know if Marriott is to blame," Kniep said.

Kniep said she would raise the issue with Marriott, however.

UI President Elisabeth Zinser has also asked the committee to submit a report analyzing Marriott's food service. Each member will complete a report on subjects ranging from food variety to soups to the trouble at Targhee. When all the reports are submitted, probably by Tuesday, they will be forwarded to Zinser, Kniep said.

Krepel's presence spoils editor decision

ASUI President David Pena has refused to author the bill appointing the new Argonaut editor, and for good reason.

ASUI Communications Board members met Tuesday evening to interview Argonaut editor applicants and decide which applicant they would recommend for appointment.

There were only two applicants, Gem of the Mountains yearbook editor Jill Beck and Sherry Deal, the managing editor of this prestigious publication.

Both Beck and Deal are highly qualified for the Argonaut editor position. So when the board members finished interviewing the two applicants and reached the decision to recommend Beck for the position, they did not make a bad choice.

The decision was reached unfairly, however.

The decision was an unfair one because ASUI Sen. Lisa Krepel sat on the board as a non-voting member. Under normal circumstances, there would be nothing wrong with Krepel's inclusion among the Communications Board members. However, Krepel is Beck's roommate, and Deal recently wrote an editorial criticizing Krepel and other ASUI senators.

Given these facts, the decision made at that meeting was prone to bias. Even though Krepel is a non-voting member, her presence was probably influential. Also, Deal could have understandably felt uncomfortable because of Krepel's presence.

Communications Board member Tom Bithell, who works for the Argonaut, was supposed to be a voting member of the board, but as Krepel said, people should not be voting on their future bosses. This may be so, but neither should Krepel be present to help decide whether her roommate should be the new Argonaut editor.

Bithell said he thought there was a definite conflict of interest because of Krepel's presence at the meeting.

"This was the first Communications

Board meeting she has attended this semester," Bithell said. "It was clear that there was a conflict of interest."

Bithell said Krepel actively participated in the discussion and deliberation that followed the interviews and told the board members that she was Beck's roommate. Bithell said that because of Krepel's participation in the meeting, it is possible that she affected the outcome.

It is also unfortunate that the ASUI Communications department heads (the current Argonaut editor, the KUOI station manager, etc.) were not asked to attend the Communications Board interviews. Although the board members are probably very capable people, they might have benefited from getting input from those who know how the Argonaut operates.

Like the Argonaut editor for instance. Sniff!

— Matt Helmick

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

English department explains scholarships, requirements

Editor:

The English department has been blessed with two large bequests for scholarships. One of these generates over $20,000 each year for the Earle and Ada Burke David scholarship. Each scholarship is for $1,000 and is renewable. This year (last week, in fact) the English Department Scholarships Committee, which consists of the advisers and myself, awarded 22 of these scholarships to undergraduate English majors: 11 renewals, eight new scholarships to current students, and four to incoming students.

Only English majors in the College of Letters and Science are eligible for the David scholarship. General requirements include a 3.0 overall GPA and a 3.5 in English courses. Students do not apply for the David scholarship. The Scholarships Committee, using printouts supplied by the Office of Student Financial Aid, examines the record of any L & S English major with an overall GPA of 3.0 or higher. We then ask our English faculty for informal comments on these students, and their advisers supply information on their academic work.

The David scholarship is not based on need. Although we are often aware of students' financial need, we are not allowed, under the conditions of the scholarship, to make need a factor. The scholarship is an award for excellence.

The other major scholarship with which the English department is blessed is the Grace V. Nixon scholarship, which generates almost $100,000 each year. Of this amount, we allot 60 percent to undergraduate scholarships, 23 percent to graduate scholarships and 17 percent to our summer program for practicing teachers of English.

Grace Nixon was a high school teacher in Lewiston, and her gift to the department was designed specifically to advance the teaching of English. All Nixon scholarships are intended to achieve that aim. Only L & S English majors or Secondary Education English majors in the College of Education are eligible, and these students must affirm that they "intend to teach English." Like the David, the Nixon scholarship is not based on need but is an award for excellence; it is also an incentive for teachers.

This year we awarded 23 Nixon undergraduate scholarships; of these, 18 were renewals and five were new. (As of this year, only currently enrolled students may apply for the Nixon undergraduate scholarship. For high school seniors, we offer several one-year grants for $600.)

The Nixon undergraduate scholarship currently awards $2,000 to sophomores and juniors and $3,000 to seniors. Like the David, it is renewable; unlike the David, students have to apply for it, submit a writing sample and provide two letters of recommendation. Generally a 3.5 GPA, both overall and in English courses, is required, although we are not totally bound by these numbers: We also consider writing ability and demonstrated aptitude for teach-

How to help the environment

The environment. Everybody talks about it, but who does anything about it? Is the human race a cancer on the body of the earth, or can we continue to exist as a species without causing the collapse of an ecosystem that has taken billions of years to evolve?

These questions are coming up more often because each year, with another Exxon Valdez or Bhopal, India incident, we rub our noses in the mess we are making of this globe.

Some people are directly involved in correcting the problems. For example, some here at the University of Idaho are finding natural bacteria that break down toxic wastes into harmless components.

Others are creating new problems, however. For example, the United States Air Force is proposing to expand the Saylor Creek bombing range near Mountain Home, Idaho.

This area is used by local

CHARLES RICE

Commentary

cattlemen and recreationists and is part of the Birds of Prey Natural Area. It produces food and provides recreation opportunities and is largely undisturbed by man.

Despite the thaw in world relations and the fact that the range is only used by nearly obsolete planes, the U.S. Air Force still wants to expand the huge existing range to cover what is now an undeveloped natural area.

Here on the Palouse one can drive around and see many problems, such as erosion from poor farming practices and roadside ditches full of topsoil that will be cleaned at the taxpayers' expense.

The farming techniques to prevent erosion are older than any living farmer, but erosion will continue as long as the taxpayers subsidize the necessary cleanup because of farmers' poor practices.

What can individuals do to end these many problems? Write congressmen or county commissioners and complain. Complain in public and in private, and when meeting a government official, elected or appointed, complain again.

This is a democracy, and citizens' voices are heard if they are loud enough. The people in power will ultimately respond to pressure, but they are a little slow sometimes.

LETTERS POLICY

The Argonaut will accept letters to the editor until noon on the day prior to publication. They must be limited to 500 words in length, typed and double-spaced. For subjects requiring greater exposition, arrangements may be made with the editor.

Letters must be signed in ink and include the name, address, student identification number or driver's license number, and phone number of the writer. For multiple authored letters, the above information will be required for each writer. Proof of identity will be needed at time of submission. Letters received by mail will not be run unless confirmation of authorship is made. Names of writers will not be withheld.

Letters may be edited for length, mechanical errors and spelling errors. The Argonaut reserves the right to refuse to publish any letter.

No one would claim that such a complex system can achieve total fairness. We try our best, however, to do just that. We in the English department are profoundly grateful for the opportunity to aid students that the David and Nixon bequests have provided. We know there are many deserving English and English Education majors who do not receive scholarships, and we know that most other departments on campus are not as fortunate as we are in our ability to aid students.

For Trent and others who have not received scholarships: Please remember that there are 160 English majors and 75 in Secondary Education English. That's a lot of talent and competition.

I'd be happy to discuss anything relating to English scholarships with anyone. My office is in Brink 221.

Grigsby 'shoots off' but misses mark about NRA policies

Editor:
Having read Bill Grigsby's commentary on the National Rifle Association, it is only obvious that Mr. Grigsby likes to shoot off about issues he knows nothing about. C'mon Grigsby, if you can find an American-made fully automatic assault rifle on the public market, let me know. I've never wandered into a sporting goods store and asked the clerk, "Sir, do you have any automatic weapons? Oh, can I have a couple boxes of armor-piercing bullets too?" Fact is Mr. Grigsby, armor-piercing bullets and fully automatic rifles are not available to the general public.

Mr. Grigsby has the impression that the NRA supports the use of illegal automatic firearms and the so-called "armor-piercing" bullets. These are available only to the military, and those with the means of obtaining armor-piercing bullets are going to be able to obtain them regardless of what the laws state. I haven't read in the paper lately that an NRA member went to a local schoolyard and let the bullets fly with a so-called "assault rifle." The NRA is an organization that supports gun ownership, promotes nationally held sport shooting events and is an advocate of hunter education courses that emphasize firearm safety and must be taken before a hunting license can be purchased.

C'mon Grigsby, this is Moscow, U.S.A., not the other Moscow. This nation was founded on individual rights, yet you are arguing to take away one of the most fundamental rights of the Constitution. This very right allowed our forefathers to win independence from Great Britain. We are not in the Soviet Union, Mr. Grigsby, where the fear of weapons overwhelms the government and thus forbids citizens from owning firearms.

'Real mark' of school in success of students, not in profs' works

Editor:
There is a foul new wind blowing from the East that threatens to overturn and debase the bond of learning between professors and their students. Recently a professor was denied tenure because of a failure to publish enough. So I'm sure that the astute student is aware of what will become of his/her chances of a decent education now that professors are going to be judged more by how much (not necessarily how well) they publish. Not only does the actual research and writing take away time that might better be used to teach students, but the more insidious effect is to change the focus of the academic mind from nurturing young people inside and outside of respective disciplines. The result is that sooner or later the student, especially the undergraduate, is reduced to a nonentity found in the dictionary between (expletive deleted) and syphilis.

Admittedly, judging professors by the numbers and sizes of their published works is a more readily quantifiable method of deciding who stays and who looks for work elsewhere. But like many objective criteria, what is quantifiable most easily may not be what is most useful, especially with regard to education. The publish-or-perish doctrine fits very well with the game of "my university can lick your university." But it does little to answer a much more important question.

What is the purpose of a university? Is it to attract research grants? Is it to see how many professors can become big names on the New York Times book review section, hurling levin bolt after levin bolt from Ivory Tower A at Ivory Tower B? Arcane musings on the modern version of "how many angels can dance on the head of a pin," read only by those few in the discipline, do not contribute much to the education of students. Private institutions have more leeway in deciding to produce papers or educated and competent leaders in the world, because they provide their own funding. But the University of Idaho is a state-funded school, paid for by taxes of citizens within Idaho.

How many of these taxpayers, whose children, like my own son, are students at UI, are worried about how many papers a professor has published? How many dues-paying alums are as interested in the number of papers published as in how well their sons and daughters can compete in the world outside of academia? Perhaps they might be more concerned as to why there are so many instructors at the lower level for whom English is obviously not a first language, rendering them between obtuse and unintelligible. At least one good topic for a research grant concerns the damage done to the career potential of students who are taught by people who speak a different language from their students.

I would suggest in closing that the real mark of a university is the number of its students who succeed in their chosen fields, who become recognized as being better-prepared both academically and psychologically than those hired from other universities. No amount of research and publishing is worth one letter from a former student who writes: "Dear Professor So-and-So, I graduated five years ago, and what you taught me in your course, as well as what you taught me about being a worthy human being, has enabled me to become a success in my career and my life." A great university is the people it produces.

Krepel's presence spoils editor decision

ASUI President David Pena has refused to author the bill appointing the new Argonaut editor, and for good reason.

ASUI Communications Board members met Tuesday evening to interview Argonaut editor applicants and decide which applicant they would recommend for appointment.

There were only two applicants, Gem of the Mountains yearbook editor Jill Beck and Sherry Deal, the managing editor of this prestigious publication.

Both Beck and Deal are highly qualified for the Argonaut editor position. So when the board members finished interviewing the two applicants and reached the decision to recommend Beck for the position, they did not make a bad choice.

The decision was reached unfairly, however.

The decision was an unfair one because ASUI Sen. Lisa Krepel sat on the board as a non-voting member. Under normal circumstances, there would be nothing wrong with Krepel's inclusion among the Communications Board members. However, Krepel is Beck's roommate, and Deal recently wrote an editorial criticizing Krepel and other ASUI senators.

Given these facts, the decision made at that meeting was prone to bias. Even though Krepel is a non-voting member, her presence was probably influential. Also, Deal could have understandably felt uncomfortable because of Krepel's presence.

Communications Board member Tom Bithell, who works for the Argonaut, was supposed to be a voting member of the board, but as Krepel said, people should not be voting on their future bosses. This may be so, but neither should Krepel be present to help decide whether her roommate should be the new Argonaut editor.

Bithell said he thought there was a definite conflict of interest because of Krepel's presence at the meeting.

"This was the first Communications

Board meeting she has attended this semester," Bithell said. "It was clear that there was a conflict of interest."

Bithell said Krepel actively participated in the discussion and deliberation that followed the interviews and told the board members that she was Beck's roommate. Bithell said that because of Krepel's participation in the meeting, it is possible that she affected the outcome.

It is also unfortunate that the ASUI Communications department heads (the current Argonaut editor, the KUOI station manager, etc.) were not asked to attend the Communications Board interviews. Although the board members are probably very capable people, they might have benefited from getting input from those who know how the Argonaut operates.

Like the Argonaut editor for instance. Sniff!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

English department explains scholarships, requirements

Editor:

The English department has been blessed with two large bequests for scholarships. One of these generates over $20,000 each year for the Earle and Ada Burke David scholarship. Each scholarship is for $1,000 and is renewable. This year (last week, in fact) the English Department Scholarships Committee, which consists of the advisers and myself, awarded 22 of these scholarships to undergraduate English majors: 11 renewals, eight new scholarships to current students, and four to incoming students.

Only English majors in the College of Letters and Science are eligible for the David scholarship. General requirements include a 3.0 overall GPA and a 3.5 in English courses. Students do not apply for the David scholarship. The Scholarships Committee, using printouts supplied by the Office of Student Financial Aid, examines the record of any L & S English major with an overall GPA of 3.0 or higher. We then ask our English faculty for informal comments on these students, and their advisers supply information on their academic work.

The David scholarship is not based on need. Although we are often aware of students' financial need, we are not allowed, under the conditions of the scholarship, to make need a factor. The scholarship is an award for excellence.

The other major scholarship with which the English department is blessed is the Grace V. Nixon scholarship, which generates almost $100,000 each year. Of this amount, we allot 60 percent to undergraduate scholarships, 23 percent to graduate scholarships and 17 percent to our summer program for practicing teachers of English.

Grace Nixon was a high school teacher in Lewiston, and her gift to the department was designed specifically to advance the teaching of English. All Nixon scholarships are intended to achieve that aim. Only L & S English majors or Secondary Education English majors in the College of Education are eligible, and these students must affirm that they "intend to teach English." Like the David, the Nixon scholarship is not based on need but is an award for excellence; it is also an incentive for teachers.

This year we awarded 23 Nixon undergraduate scholarships; of those, 18 were renewals and five were new. (As of this year, only currently enrolled students may apply for the Nixon undergraduate scholarship. For high school seniors, we offer several one-year grants for $600.)

The Nixon undergraduate scholarship currently awards $2,000 to sophomores and juniors and $3,000 to seniors. Like the David, it is renewable; unlike the David, students have to apply for it, submit a writing sample and provide two letters of recommendation. Generally a 3.5 GPA, both overall and in English courses, is required, although we are not totally bound by these numbers: We also consider writing ability and demonstrated aptitude for teach-

How to help the environment

The environment. Everybody talks about it, but who does anything about it? Is the human race a cancer on the body of the earth, or can we continue to exist as a species without causing the collapse of an ecosystem that has taken billions of years to evolve?

These questions are coming up more often because each year, with another Exxon Valdez or Bhopal, India incident, we rub our noses in the mess we are making of this globe.

Some people are directly involved in correcting the problems. For example, some here at the University of Idaho are finding natural bacteria that break down toxic wastes into harmless components.

Others are creating new problems, however. For example, the United States Air Force is proposing to expand the Saylor Creek bombing range near Mountain Home, Idaho.

This area is used by local

CHARLES RICE

Commentary

cattlemen and recreationists and is part of the Birds of Prey Natural Area. It produces food and provides recreation opportunities and is largely undisturbed by man.

Despite the thaw in world relations and the fact that the range is only used by nearly obsolete planes, the U.S. Air Force still wants to expand the huge existing range to cover what is now an undeveloped natural area.

Here on the Palouse one can drive around and see many problems, such as erosion from poor farming practices and roadside ditches full of topsoil that will be cleaned at the taxpayers' expense.

The farming techniques to prevent erosion are older than any living farmer, but erosion will continue as long as the taxpayers subsidize the necessary cleanup because of farmers' poor practices.

What can individuals do to end these many problems? Write congressmen or county commissioners and complain. Complain in public and in private, and when meeting a government official, elected or appointed, complain again.

This is a democracy, and citizens' voices are heard if they are loud enough. The people in power will ultimately respond to pressure, but they are a little slow sometimes.

LETTERS POLICY

The Argonaut will accept letters to the editor until noon on the day prior to publication. They must be limited to 500 words in length, typed and double-spaced. For subjects requiring greater exposition, arrangements may be made with the editor.

Letters must be signed in ink and include the name, address, student identification number or driver's license number, and phone number of the writer. For multiple authored letters, the above information will be required for each writer. Proof of identity will be needed at time of submission. Letters received by mail will not be run unless confirmation of authorship is made. Names of writers will not be withheld.

Letters may be edited for length, mechanical errors and spelling errors. The Argonaut reserves the right to refuse to publish any letter.

ing. No one would claim that such a complex system can achieve total fairness. We try our best, however, to do just that. We in the English department are profoundly grateful for the opportunity to aid students that the David and Nixon bequests have provided. We know there are many deserving English and English Education majors who do not receive scholarships, and we know that most other departments on campus are not as fortunate as we are in our ability to aid students.

For Trent and others who have not received scholarships: Please remember that there are 160 English majors and 75 in Secondary Education English. That's a lot of talent and competition.

I'd be happy to discuss anything relating to English scholarships with anyone. My office is in Brink 221.

Grigsby 'shoots off' but misses mark about NRA policies

Editor: Having read Bill Grigsby's commentary on the National Rifle Association, it is only obvious that Mr. Grigsby likes to shoot off about issues he knows nothing about. C'mon Grigsby, if you can find an American-made fully automatic assault rifle on the public market, let me know. I've never wandered into a sporting goods store and asked the clerk, "Sir, do you have any automatic weapons? Oh, can I have a couple boxes of armor-piercing bullets too?" Fact is Mr. Grigsby, armor-piercing bullets and fully automatic rifles are not available to the general public.

Mr. Grigsby has the impression that the NRA supports the use of illegal automatic firearms and the so-called "armor-piercing" bullets. These are available only to the military, and those with the means of obtaining armor-piercing bullets are going to be able to obtain them regardless of what the laws state. I haven't read in the paper lately that an NRA member went to a local schoolyard and let the bullets fly with a so-called "assault rifle." The NRA is an organization that supports gun ownership, promotes nationally held sport shooting events and is an advocate of hunter education courses that emphasize firearm safety and must be taken before a hunting license can be purchased.

C'mon Grigsby, this is Moscow, U.S.A., not the other Moscow. This nation was founded on individual rights, yet you are arguing to take away one of the most fundamental rights of the Constitution. This very right allowed our forefathers to win independence from Great Britain. We are not in the Soviet Union, Mr. Grigsby, where the fear of weapons overwhelms the government and thus forbids citizens from owning firearms.

—Andrew J. Whipple

'Real mark' of school in success of students, not in profs' works

Editor: There is a foul new wind blowing from the East that threatens to overturn and debase the bond of learning between professors and their students. Recently a professor was denied tenure because of a failure to publish enough. So I'm sure that the astute student is aware of what will become of his/her chances of a decent education now that professors are going to be judged more by how much (not necessarily how well) they publish. Not only does the actual research and writing take away time that might better be used to teach students, but the more insidious effect is to change the focus of the academic mind from nurturing young people inside and outside of respective disciplines. The result is that sooner or later the student, especially the undergraduate, is reduced to a nonentity found in the dictionary between (expletive deleted) and syphilis.

Admittedly, judging professors by the numbers and sizes of their published works is a more readily quantifiable method of deciding who stays and who looks for work elsewhere. But like many objective criteria, what is quantifiable most easily may not be what is most useful, especially with regard to education. The publish-or-perish doctrine fits very well with the game of "my university can lick your university." But it does little to answer a much more important question.

What is the purpose of a university? Is it to attract research grants? Is it to see how many professors can become big names on the New York Times book review section, hurling levin bolt after levin bolt from Ivory Tower A at Ivory Tower B? Arcane musings on the modern version of "how many angels can dance on the head of a pin," read only by those few in the discipline, do not contribute much to the education of students. Private institutions have more leeway in deciding to produce papers or educated and competent leaders in the world, because they provide their own funding. But the University of Idaho is a state-funded school, paid for by taxes of citizens within Idaho.

How many of these taxpayers, whose children, like my own son, are students at UI, are worried about how many papers a professor has published? How many dues-paying alums are as interested in the number of papers published as in how well their sons and daughters can compete in the world outside of academia? Perhaps they might be more concerned as to why there are so many instructors at the lower level for whom English is obviously not a first language, rendering them between obtuse and unintelligible. At least one good topic for a research grant concerns the damage done to the career potential of students who are taught by people who speak a different language from their students.

I would suggest in closing that the real mark of a university is the number of its students who succeed in their chosen fields, who become recognized as being better-prepared both academically and psychologically than

By SALLY GILPIN
Staff Writer

Delegations from the United States, the Soviet Union, South Yemen, Nicaragua and other countries have been visiting the University of Idaho for United Nations Security Council meetings at the Student Union Building.

Students have been conducting mock U.N. Security Council meetings as part of an assignment for UI Distinguished Professor Amos Yoder's International Organizations and International Law class, Political Science 440.

The class assignment is to represent countries as authentically as possible in a U.N. Security Council meeting. This involves activities such as writing resolutions, making speeches and following U.N. meeting procedures.

The meetings follow actual Security Council meeting procedures as closely as possible. Students try to follow protocol and practices used in the United Nations. Yoder said that this is difficult for students at first, but once they get the feel for it, they seem to enjoy the exercise.

To prepare for the assignment, students had to review real U.N. resolutions and speeches and familiarize themselves with the foreign policies of the country they were representing. Accurate representation of delegations' positions was one of the main goals of the assignment.

"I don't want them to come up with something that their delegation would not actually support," Yoder said.

Yoder said he hopes to give his students a taste of what it is like to be involved in these decision-making groups.

"It gives them a realistic view of the difficulties of getting agreements accepted," he said. "It also gives them a view of the potential these groups have for peacemaking agreements."

Topics covered in the mock U.N. Security Council meetings include resolutions calling for U.N. support of peacekeeping in Nicaragua, resolutions regarding the territorial integrity of Lebanon and the tense situation between Arab nations and Israel.

In addition to the mock U.N. Security Council assignment for the International Organizations and International Law class, Yoder's Conditions of American Foreign Policy course, Political Science 438, also participated in an exercise.

Students portrayed members of the National Security Council in mock meetings. The students have been discussing issues such as getting Israel to a U.N. conference with Palestinians, negotiating START talks and reducing U.S. troops in Europe.

Both of these exercises give students a chance to see the complexities involved in forming foreign policies.

"I didn't realize how much work is involved in being an ambassador to the U.N.," one student said. "You really have to have a lot of patience."

ing to the constitution, the senate is empowered to establish the official ASUI positions on all matters of student concern.

"He struck a deal with Zinser, and came out in favor of that deal to the state board, and really didn't give the senate the opportunity to establish their own opinion," Goettsche said.

Pena called the policy charges a "smoke screen," and said the issue was one of representation rather than policy.

"I'm representing the students because there was no other representation," Pena said. "The senate had taken no formal action, and the students needed to be represented."

Pena defended his actions at the board meeting by saying he represented the opinions of all UI students.

"I conveyed the different opinions across campus that the students voiced," Pena said. "I did what I had to do: I voiced both extremes, and everything in between."

Goettsche also claimed Pena did not provide the senate with details about the state board meeting until Wednesday night, which did not give the senators sufficient time to prepare for the meeting.

Pena said the state board meetings are a matter of public record, and that anybody who was interested in attending had the ability to look up information about it.

At Wednesday's meeting, Pena offered transportation to anyone interested in attending the meeting with him.

Another charge Goettsche brought up in the reprimanding resolution was that Pena told a senator that if the senate failed to fund the Student Bar Association in the ASUI budget, he would have the UI administration alter the budget to include SBA funding.

When asked about the charge, Pena said, "It's groundless. I didn't do that."

The senate approved $8,000 of funding for graduate and law student organizations to be distributed through the Activities Board. "Personally, I think he really screwed over the students big time," Goettsche said.

Pena said the charges were the result of dissatisfaction on the part of a small group of senators who are on their way out of office.

"They're trying to make their final childish act before a newly elected senate comes into office," Pena said.

At Wednesday night's meeting, the senate passed an amendment to the Senate Bylaws with the stated intent of clearing up impeachment proceedings. The main change involved a time change that would allow Pena to be impeached and removed by the current senate. Another change was the deletion of a requirement that the senate notify the Argonaut and KUOI-FM of impeachment proceedings.

The bill was authored by Sen. Lisa Krepel.

ASUI Attorney General Cliff Brown, who was consulted late Thursday night, said in a preliminary opinion that the bill had some potential conflicts that might warrant a presidential veto.

According to Pena, Brown said the bill appeared to have some problems with due process, and he questioned the constitutionality of eliminating the media.

The amended bill was under consideration at press time. Pena will have to decide by tonight whether to veto the bill.

Hartung production debuts this weekend

By MARY HEUETT
Staff Writer

The year's final Hartung Theater production, Arthur Miller's A View from the Bridge, debuts Thursday at 8 p.m.

The performance runs April 26, 27 and 28 and May 3, 4 and 5 at 8 p.m., and April 29 and May 6 at 2 p.m.

Miller won the Pulitzer Prize for A View from the Bridge in 1955. He has written several critically acclaimed works, including The Crucible and Death of a Salesman. He also wrote the screenplay The Misfits for his one-time wife, Marilyn Monroe.

Miller writes about how people relate with each other and the outside world.

Set in the 1950s, A View from the Bridge takes place in Miller's hometown, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Carolyn Redington, who helps with public relations for university theater, said of the play's action: "Longshoreman Eddie Carbone helps his wife's Italian cousins out when they are smuggled into the United States. The two young men move in with Eddie, his wife, his children and his teen-age niece, a girl whom he has raised and loved as his daughter. But when one of the young men falls in love with the niece, a monstrous change takes over the kind and loving uncle. The stage is set for tragedy."

Chapman of the N.Y. News said, "This play makes no false moves, wastes no time and has the beauty that comes from directness and simplicity."

Redington said Miller's mythic drama of sexual passion is as fresh today as it was in the 1950s.

The adult nature of the play makes it unsuitable for younger children.

Directed by Forrest Sears, the play stars University of Idaho drama students Mike Behrens as Rodolpho, Anne Mires as Catherine and Shane Nilsson as Marco. Josiah Fisher, a professional juggler and local actor, plays Eddie Carbone. Eddie's wife Beatrice is played by another community actor, Georganne Slifer.

David Banner, assistant professor in the UI theater arts department, makes a cameo appearance as Alfieri, a lawyer and friend to Eddie.

Performance full of surprises

REVIEW By SALLY GILPIN
Staff Writer

Puns, slapstick, subtle innuendoes and corpses abound in The Butler Did It.

Tim Kelly's The Butler Did It is the latest Moscow Community Theater production. The three-act mystery and comedy is the first non-musical the Moscow Community Theater has performed in the Moscow High School auditorium.

The plot centers around a weekend party given by socialite Miss Maple, played by Mickey Adams. All the guests are mystery writers disguised as the heroes and heroines of their books.

"Each guest will spend the weekend as his or her alter ego. ... They will not use their real name or personality," Miss Maple says.

Miss Maple is famous for her mystery-solving parties and has planned some interesting tricks and events for the game, but the game goes awry when a real murder takes place.

The plot makes several surprising twists and turns that leave the audience confused but smiling.

Even after the play is over, one is left wondering. Do murders happen, or don't they? The case is solved once, twice, three times.

What does this all mean?

"It means murder on Turkey Island," Chandler Marlowe says.

And for the audience it means an evening of fun.

The play begins with a guest list discussion between Miss Maple and her housemaid Haversham, played by Andrea Chavez, and her social secretary Rita, played by Sara J. Hansen. This scene sets the tone for the rest of the play.

Chavez shows her comedic skill as the jill-mannered maid.

Hansen's character Rita asks some puzzling questions. Hansen is excellent as the social secretary and shows her wide vocal range.

One by one the guests arrive: Father White played by Joseph V. Tassinari; Chandler Marlowe played by Bill Smith; Rick and Laura Carlyle played Tom Garfield and Elizabeth Davidson; and Peter Flimsey played by Steve Mahaffy. Then the fun begins.

Lyrisa Gunderson plays late-arriving guest Charity Haze, a bold and sexy heroine along the lines of Modesty Blaze, a famous detective from mystery novels. Gunderson appears to enjoy portraying the vampy Haze.

Bill Smith, Bruce Lerner and Steve Mahaffy are all able to portray the quirks and traits of their characters with ease and provide several of the play's comedic highlights.

The play is set in Ravenswood Manor, an isolated estate on Turkey Island, somewhere in the San Francisco Bay. Of course it's a dark and stormy night, and of course the island is completely cut off from civilization until dawn. What else would you expect from a group of mystery writers?

The set doesn't change, but it is well-designed for this play.

Ballet honors Earth Day

By BETH BARCLAY
Staff Writer

A blend of sound and movement will greet the audience on Earth Day this Sunday, when Festival Dance Junior Company dancers join pianists Sandy and Jay Mauchley, organist Darrel Bozett and vocalist Dorothy Barnes to present "Celebration," a program of music and dance, at the University Auditorium.

The performance will mark the first public program for the Festival Dance Junior Company, which has previously performed with the University of Idaho Dance Theater and for local organizations and benefits.

The company's eight dancers are advanced ballet students in the Festival Dance Academy. Company members include Jodie Thomas, Marya George and Katherine Olsson of Moscow; Cora Hansel of Pullman; Kate McLaughlin and AnnAlia Barnard of Lewiston; Amy Green of Twin Falls; and Shari Brown of Boise.

Sunday's program will also be the first ballet performance presented in the auditorium since 1974, before the auditorium was remodeled.

According to Festival Dance Executive Director Joann Muneta, the term "Celebration" has several connotations.

"The term seemed appropriate for this day (Earth Day)," she said.

The dance is also a celebration of beginnings and promises, she said. The beginning of a new consciousness toward the earth and the promise of a bright future are the focuses of this performance.

■ DREAMS AND IMAGERY

University of Idaho psychologists Beth Waddel and Ted Murray will discuss aspects of internal imagery and suggest some methods of interpretation Tuesday and Wednesday when they present "Dreams and Imagery: Hidden Words, Hidden Meanings." The presentation will be held at the UI Women's Center at 12:30 p.m. The public is welcome to the free speech.

■ SWING DANCE

The Palouse-Clearwater Environmental Institute will sponsor a swing dance at the Moscow Community Center Saturday to celebrate Earth Day and raise funds for the institute.

The highly acclaimed Planet Lounge Orchestra from Spokane will play from 7 p.m. to midnight. The first hour will be devoted to swing dance lessons from professional dance instructor Cathy Dark. Her easy style and warm personality, combined with the great music of Alan MacGill and the Planet Lounge Orchestra, will make the dance enjoyable for all.

Tickets for this benefit dance are $6 at the door. Refreshments will be available.

■ ART AT DOGWOOD FESTIVAL

Sixty-four of Idaho's finest artists will be featured in a spectacular centennial art exhibit, Spirit of the West, which makes its northern Idaho debut April 27 and 29 during the ALL ARTS weekend of the Lewis-Clark Valley Dogwood Festival.

The 64 artists selected for this exhibit were chosen from 1,120 entries. A variety of media will be featured, including watercolor paintings, fabric works, sculptures, woods and glass.

The exhibition is open and free to the public.

Church album rich with emotion

REVIEW By BETH BARCLAY
Staff Writer

Bands are always open to interpretation, or at least to criticism for false values, hollow meaning and little thought. Often a talented group can stand up to these tests and build on its talent, never minding what critics or pop fans set forth as the current music formula. As an original band, The Church built a reputation with its last album, Starfish, which gave it a foothold in the music world with such hits as "Under the Milky Way" and "Destination." What's more, it has come forth with a unique dreamlike style that is unmistakable in its latest album, Gold Afternoon Fix.

While the band may have been searching for a more direct method of expression with this album, the surrealistic quality of Starfish is still there, with any statement woven between enigmatic lyrics and visionary music.

This is not to say that the entire album lacks a directness, but in a personal way it is rich with emotion sometimes shoved out of the way in the wake of the Starfish surrealism.

Nor is the album entirely dreamlike either. Some songs contain an explicit message, such as in "You're Still Beautiful," where lead singer Steve Kilbey's satirical tone grinds through a song that is anything but dreamlike anymore.

Church fans doubtlessly will be pleased with the singing talents of other band members. On this album guitarists Peter Koppes and Marty Willson-Piper demonstrate some vocal skill in "Russian Autumn Heart" and "Transient."

As always, The Church is still a sit-down-and-listen type of band, with its latest work bound to leave very few disappointed.

Muneta said that this performance is dedicated to recently inaugurated UI President Elisabeth Zinser, whose love of the arts also holds promise for UI's future.

Muneta said that the celebration is "upbeat and joyful," and is the realization of a dream that is nearly 20 years old.

The idea of a dance company began with the opening of the Festival Dance Company in Moscow, but this is the company's first public performance.

Ballets will be performed to music by Debussy, Stravinsky, Schubert and Dvorak. According to Muneta, the moods will vary from impressionistic and contemporary to humorous and spiritual. The program will include piano and organ music.

The ballets are the works of Jeanette Petrick, director of the Junior Company, who founded Ballet Folk of Moscow, now known as American Festival Ballet; Craig Williams, formerly with the Joffrey Ballet and the American Ballet Theater; and Kaylene Nielsen, a former teacher, choreographer and dancer with the Brigham Young University Theater Ballet. All are Festival Dance Academy faculty members.

Sunday's program begins at 4 p.m.

Tickets are $4 for adults and $2 for students and children. After expenses are paid, the remaining proceeds will benefit the Festival Dance Scholarship Fund.

Tickets are available at University Pharmacy and at the door.

Banner said he sees the play as "one man's struggle against his own destiny."

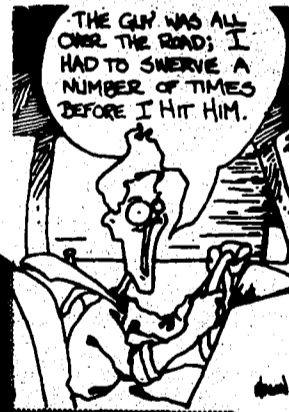

Banner, a recent addition to the UI theater arts department, has acted in off-off-Broadway productions, taught at the New American Theater in Chicago, and directed Brigadoon at the University of Minnesota. Banner earned his master's degree in fine arts at Rutgers University in New Brunswick, N.J.

Tickets are $6 for students and are available at Ticket Express in the UI Student Union Building.

UI downs LCSC 7-2

By STEVE SMEDE
Staff Writer

After an 8-0 shutout over Stanislaus State University April 12, the University of Idaho men's tennis team went on to crush Lewis-Clark State College Wednesday.

According to UI sports information, the team, now 7-4, was motivated by a 2-7 loss to LCSC in mid-March. Ironically, the Vandals turned the tables by producing their own 7-2 victory in Wednesday's match.

The Vandals opened the dual match with three straight wins in singles. Sophomore Scott Andersen generated a 6-3, 7-6 victory over Ashley Grant to improve his season record to 7-4 in No. 1 singles. The No. 2 player, John Bladholm, defeated Lewis-Clark's Bob Uhlenkott 7-6, 6-4, and No. 3 Jose Palacios dominated his 6-3, 6-4 match over Rod Moreira.

Chris Kramer fell victim to a 6-3, 6-4, 7-5 heartbreaker after a rally by LCSC's Clay Crema, and Vandal freshman Larry Gresham lost to Alex Tibbets 7-5, 6-3.

No. 6 Darren Lewis controlled his match in a 6-3, 6-3 win over Jose English to give the Vandals a 4-2 advantage going into doubles play.

Andersen and Bladholm led the doubles competition with a comparatively easy 7-6, 6-4 victory over Grant and Uhlenkott. Gresham and Lewis teamed up to edge out Tibbets and English in a heated 6-4, 3-6, 7-5 battle. Finally, Kramer and Palacios came back from a 4-6 first-set deficit to demolish Crema and Moreira 4-6, 6-1, 6-0.

Today the men will be in Cheney, Wash., for the Northwest Divisional Playoffs, which will last through Sunday. To begin the playoffs, UI meets the University of Montana at 8 a.m. today, followed by Montana State University at 2 p.m. The Vandals take on the Boise State University Broncos Saturday at 2 p.m. and conclude playoff action Sunday at 8 a.m. against Eastern Washington University.

The top three men's and women's teams from the tournament go on to the Big Sky Conference Championships May 4-6.

The women's team still has four regular-season matches to play before the Big Sky Championships April 27-29 in Boise. The team has compiled a 12-4 season record, aided by a clean 3-0 sweep last weekend in divisionals.

Teams competing in the conference final include UI, Montana and Montana State from the northern division, and Weber State College, Idaho State University and the University of Nevada-Reno from the southern division.

Raft trip planned for May

By JADE SIDDOWAY
Contributing Writer

The ASUI Outdoor Program will conduct a paddle raft trip down the lower Salmon River April 28-29.

Participants will leave Saturday morning and spend the day rafting down the scenic Salmon River near Riggins. At the end of the day, a shuttle will meet the rafters at a designated pull-out point, and everyone will spend the night on the beach.

Sunday the rafters will float further down the river until about 3 p.m., and then they will prepare to return to campus.

During the past few years, this trip has become a favorite of the Outdoor Program, according to Shane Brydges, an Outdoor Program intern.

"The stretch of river we go on is very nice," he said. "It is very scenic with the sandy beaches and rugged canyon walls along the river."

Brydges also said that along this river stretch there would be plenty of good rapids and some class-three whitewater.

Brydges said that during an Outdoor Program kayaking trip last weekend, the water levels were about normal for this time of year.

"The water levels will rise slowly, but there will be no problem going on this trip in a raft," he said.

The trip is open to all ability levels but is limited to 10 people. The trip will cost each participant $24, which includes transportation, group equipment and the raft.

Participants must bring their own wet suit, life jacket, dry bag for storing gear on the raft, camping gear and food.

To sign up for the paddle raft trip or to get more information, call or come to the Outdoor Program office in the Student Union Building basement.

ing a fetus is not destroying the handiwork of a non-existent God and is therefore acceptable. Post-1973 medical technology and science, however, confirm that a fetus is both alive and human. At eight weeks, the heart and brain of a fetus are fully formed and functioning. Homicide is defined legally as the killing of a live human.

Therefore, a true scientific evolutionist either believes that destroying a fetus is not a religious hunch but homicide, or that human development is best left to ignorant personal hunches rather than science. This logic is irreconcilable.

Herein lies the evolutionist-abortionist's scientific and legal dilemma: Either continue to abandon science in favor of ignorant hunches about what a fetus is, or believe in science and continue to advocate homicide. Make a "choice."

Blood drive proves 'caring individuals' attend UI

Editor:

April is National Volunteer's Month, and the blood drive Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday proved that there are many caring individuals attending the University of Idaho. The blood drive was a success thanks to their efforts.

Thanks to:

• Jo Kleffner and all of the local Red Cross volunteers

• Intercollegiate Knights, Circle K International and previous donors for volunteering service

• Navy ROTC students for loading and unloading the bloodmobile

• Sherry Deal of the Argonaut; the Lewiston Tribune; the Idaho-Idem; and area radio stations for public service announcements

A special thanks to Marriott Food Services for providing refreshments free of charge.

The American Red Cross depends on volunteers, and although I'm not able to write the names of all the volunteers and blood donors, they are the ones who deserve the most thanks.

Rennison thanks supporters, senate candidates

Editor:

I would like to take just a minute to thank those people who supported me during my campaign for ASUI Senate. I will accomplish the goals that I have set for myself and which I outlined in my campaign platform, as well as many others. I was elected to represent all students, and that is what I will do. Thank you for electing me.

I would also like to thank all the candidates for their professionalism during the campaign. Being involved in more than four semesters of elections, this is the first one that did not involve "mud slinging" or campaign-poster destruction. Even though candidates did not see eye-to-eye on certain issues, it was good to see respect between us. I hope this respect and professionalism can carry on into the senate.

I look forward to working for the students' best interests with those in next year's ASUI Senate. I hope together we can restore respectability to the senate, not only here on campus but also toward the Idaho Legislature, the State Board of Education and state government.

—Elwood "Woody" Rennison

Christianity 'stands or falls' on resurrection evidence

Editor:

Christianity stands or falls on the validity of the resurrection.

If Jesus did not rise from the dead, then He wasn't who He claimed to be — God in the flesh.

The problem is that many people today refuse to examine the evidence, or don't believe there is any credible evidence surrounding the event that has changed millions of lives, altered the course of human history, and is a focal point of the Bible.

Therefore, take a trip back in time with me, and let's honestly look at the evidence for the resurrection of Christ.

Some claim Jesus didn't really die. However, it is recorded that a guard pierced His side, which emitted water and blood, a sign of death.

Joseph of Arimathea and Nicodemus took Jesus' body and, according to their custom, wrapped it in 100 pounds of linen, spices and a gummy substance that hardened into a mummy-like encasement. If He was still barely alive after the agony of brutal beatings and the cross, He would have suffocated in these grave clothes, not to mention being unable to get out of them.

A one- to two-ton stone on an incline just above the cave's opening was rolled down via levers to secure the entrance.

The Pharisees immediately came to Pilate and asked for a Roman guard, consisting of 12 trained men, under the penalty of death if they should fail in their assignment. The Pharisees were fearful that the disciples would steal the body and then claim that He'd risen from the dead. ... "And the last deception would be worse than the first." Pilate gave them the guards, and the tomb was sealed with the Roman seal.

On the third day the guards had fled. Something had terrified them. And the one- to two-ton stone was found up the incline that led to the tomb and far from the entrance — as if it had been effortlessly thrown.

The grave clothes were curiously empty, not torn probably, since upon Peter's looking in the tomb, he immediately believed. And the headpiece was neatly folded — hardly the way someone in a hurry would have done.

Immediately the Pharisees

bribed the guards to say that they had fallen asleep and that the disciples had stolen the body. No way! Upon Jesus' arrest, the disciples, terrified, fled and hid. Peter even cursed and denied he even knew Jesus when questioned by a peasant girl. So how incredulous the idea that these fearful men could have tiptoed through 12 guards sleeping and quietly rolled the huge stone up the incline and far away from the tomb.

What happened that morning changed the fearful disciples into bold preachers of the resurrection of Christ, and eventually many of them died horrible martyrs' deaths. Who would do that if they knew it was a lie?

The disciples preached this fact in Jerusalem where these events had taken place, so if it all were false, Christ's enemies would have produced the body and ended it all right there. But no one could find the body!

It is recorded that over 500 witnesses saw Jesus after the resurrection.

But, you may say, these arguments you're using are from the Bible, which isn't a reliable source. Well, here are a few evidences for the validity of the Bible:

There is more evidence for the reliability of the New Testament than for almost any 10 pieces of classical literature. For example, for Aristotle's writings in 343 B.C., the earliest copy we have is dated at 1100 A.D., a 1,400-year gap, and we have only five copies. For the New Testament we have over 20,000 manuscripts, with the earliest dated at 130 A.D., only a 100-year gap. We have further evidence from William Albright, one of the world's foremost biblical archaeologists, who says, "We can now say there is no solid basis for dating any book of the New Testament after 80 A.D."

Also, these very early manuscripts of Jesus' life and resurrection were written by eyewitnesses only 30 years after the event. With so many eyewitnesses still around, the enemies of Christianity could have quickly invalidated them if there were errors.

The discovery of the Dead Sea Scrolls, dated at 200 B.C., contain portions of Isaiah 53, which gives detailed descriptions of Christ's death and burial. Only God can tell the future! And interestingly, crucifixion of animals had not even been invented yet!

Finally, consider this: The Bible consists of 66 different books written by 40 different authors of varied backgrounds and occupations, on three different continents, in three languages, over a span of 1,400 years, and on many controversial subjects. These books all have one central theme: God's plan of bringing sinful man back into a relationship with Himself through Jesus. Unified in purpose, masterfully written, the book that has been the No. 1 best seller of all time speaks clearly of a Divine Hand guiding its content through men.

Take this test: Could you even get 10 people of similar backgrounds in Moscow to write their opinion on one controversial subject and get them to all agree? Thus, the complete harmony of the Bible cannot be explained! Wise men still seek Him, and so should we. Examining the evidence and conclude that Jesus is God and desires to have a personal relationship with us after we receive forgiveness of our sins through Jesus' sacrifice on the cross.

I hope I have been able to stimulate your thinking, and you will see that this is evidence that demands a verdict.

—Heidi Scheibe

■ WWP GIVES $100,000 TO UI ENGINEERING COLLEGE

The University of Idaho College of Engineering has received a $100,000 pledge from Washington Water Power (WWP).

The announcement was made recently on the UI campus by WWP Chairman of the Board and Chief Executive Officer Paul Redmond, accompanied by David Damiano, vice president for engineering; and Jon Eliassen, vice president for finance and chief financial officer.

UI President Elisabeth Zinser and Bill Saul, dean of the College of Engineering, represented the university.

According to Joe Feeley, head of the electrical engineering department, the contribution will be used in the Electric Power Systems Program. Electrical engineering students may choose to specialize in this program, and after completing their degree they often work for utility companies such as WWP and Idaho Power and Light.

"Washington is pleased to make this contribution to the University of Idaho College of Engineering as part of WWP's commitment to enhance the quality of education in the Inland Northwest," Redmond said.

"The challenges of today's global economy will require the talents of a well-educated, highly motivated work force. WWP, through its support of education, is helping to provide the leadership to meet these challenges," he said.

The contribution, to be given over a five-year period, will be used for undergraduate and graduate scholarships and to update equipment and machinery in the laboratories.

Men's track team faces Cougars, Eagles tomorrow

By TOM BITHELL
Staff Writer

The men's track team will be in Pullman Saturday for a triangular meet with Washington State University and Eastern Washington University, but the injury-hampered Vandals will take it easy to prepare for the final weeks of the season.

The men, who have not had a week off since the season began March 24, will forfeit several events at the meet and will not be concerned about team scoring, according to Head Coach Mike Keller.

"We need some rest somewhere along the line to get repaired," Keller said. "Without dropping out of the meet, this is a good alternative."

Last weekend at the Bob Gibb Invitational in Boise, Patrick Williams, Stephen Lewis and Eric Haynes took first, second and third, respectively, in the 100- and 200-meter races. Williams was named Big Sky Cenex/Land O'Lakes track athlete of the week for his performance.

According to Keller, Williams will run only the 100-meters

Saturday, and Haynes probably rest. Lewis, who has recently returned from an injury, will run both races.

Keller also said the 4x100-meter relay team will not run, and the 4x400-meter relay is questionable since anchor Eversley Linley was red-shirted this week with a pulled hamstring. Other question marks are Mark Olden, Bernardo Barrios and Rob Demick, who have been out with injuries.

"Next week is a big meet for us with University of Washington and Washington State University, so I want to rest our sprinters," Keller said.

The Vandals will face UW and WSU in Pullman April 28. The following weekend the men will take their best seven sprinters to Modesto, Calif., for the Modesto Invitational Relays, which feature some of the top sprinters in the country.

Watch for a trick bookcase. Special lighting and sound effects add to the play's mystery and comedy aspects.

The Butler Did It is an enjoyable production. The cast does a wonderful job portraying their characters, which, judging from the dialogue and characterizations called for, is not an easy task. The acting, combined with the sound effects and lighting, makes the play look professional.

If you are looking for something to do this weekend, think about going to The Butler Did It. Once again, the Moscow Community Theater showcases the talent that Moscow and Pullman possess.

The play will be performed today and Saturday at 7:30 p.m. and Sunday at 2 p.m. Tickets are available at Moscow area banks and at the door. Prices are $6 for general admission and $5 for students and senior citizens.
