New plan seeks to increase parking space

By JILL CHRISTINE BECK
Editor

University officials unveiled a new parking proposal which will add 819 new parking spaces to the university permit system.

Acting Vice President of Financial Affairs Jerry Wallace explained the new system to university faculty, staff and students through a letter sent out July 31.

The plan includes a variety of changes including the addition of silver permits and doubling the cost of all other permits.

Gold permits are now $120, red are $60, blue are $30 and the new silver permits are $20.

Prices for permits are based on proximity to campus. Gold lots, which are available only to faculty and staff are the most expensive and silver lots, which are meant as storage areas and are available only to residence hall members, are the least expensive.

Wallace expects the plan to take three years to fully implement. When complete there will be a 30 percent increase in green spaces, 144 percent increase in gold spaces, a six percent decrease in blue spaces and a nine percent decrease in red. Silver lots, which account for some of the decrease in blue and red numbers, will consist of 1,306 spaces.

Five new lots will be completed as part of the new plan including two blue lots on the property purchased by the university from Murdoc's, two more blue lots located across the street from there and a silver lot behind the residence halls. Also, the handball courts behind the physical education building have been torn down and replaced with gold parking.

Gold parking has increased the most with five red lots being converted into gold parking plus the removal of the handball courts behind the physical education building which will now serve as gold parking. Three blue lots were converted to red lots in addition to a large portion of the blue lot north of the SUB which will accommodate red permits.

With the changes in parking, officials are expecting an average oversell percentage of 30 percent. Before, there was an 80 percent oversell on parking permits. Permits for the approximately 500 silver spaces will not oversold.

Parking behind the Kibbie Dome still does not require a permit. A walkway is expected to be constructed this fall to improve access to the lot.

Lot designation will occur Sept. 1, but according to Tom Lapointe, coordinator for parking, ticketing will not begin in the red and blue lots until Sept. 10.

UI enrollment reaches 10,000

Competition for housing gets tough, families hit hardest

By RUSS BIAGGNE
Managing Editor

University of Idaho enrollment is up this year and many students living in the residence halls could experience a few changes.

According to Matt Telfin, director of admissions, enrollment at the university will be over 10,000 students, while last year it topped out at 8,888. Because of this, rumors were flying that it was impossible to find a place to live, especially in apartments and at the residence halls.

But, according to Jim Bauer, director of housing and residence life, the residence halls are "not at the panic stage."

"We are not worried in the residence halls, we are going to be full, but there will be room," Bauer said.

He admitted that housing is tight, but many people who said they were coming have decided not to show up, leaving room for others.

"We are up at least 50 students from this time last year, but students, including latecomers, should have a good chance to find housing," he said.

The residence halls also made a few changes in order to make room for the increase in student enrollment. These included changing single rooms into double rooms and switching Willis

Sweet and McConnell Hall in order to make more room for more men.

"We traditionally have more men than women, and this year is no different, so we switched the two living halls around," Bauer said.

Bauer cited that a few problems could arise from making more double rooms.

Community makes room

By MICHAEL MURPHY

Community members are helping to make room for international students and students from other countries.

Students from other countries are coming to the university and many are having trouble finding a place to live.

According to Lucha Mlynarik, a spokesperson for the International Students Association, there are about 450 international students, more than in past years at the university.

Due to the great distances traveled by these students, it is difficult to arrive in Moscow early enough to ensure a place to stay.

The International Student Association, along with the university, has been helping these students find places to stay, only temporary, until the students can find permanent arrangements.

In July, Goodwin set up a "make room" project which was designed to encourage residents of the Palouse to rent out any extra rooms or apartments to

Zinser presents budget for over one hundred million

By SHERRY DEAL
Associate Editor

University of Idaho President Elisabeth Zinser presented a $101.8 million operating budget for the fiscal year 1992, which begins July 1, 1991, to the university's Board of Regents in Moscow Thursday.

The proposed budget is a $9.4 million increase over this year's budget and includes increases in funding for faculty and staff salaries and critical equipment needs in laboratories and classrooms.

Zinser said the budget requests are intended to help the university "Keep up, catch up, do better and do more."

She said UI faculty salaries remain a serious problem and requested $3.2 million in salary equity monies.

She said noncompetitive salaries make it hard to recruit and keep faculty and administrators.

UI dean salaries are $12,591 less than dean salaries at similar schools and faculty salaries are about $3,848 less.

Of the total request, $73.5 million is for the university's general education budget.

Beer-drinking DJ s create havoc for KUOI

Summer shutdown causes controversy at student radio

By VIVIANE GILBERT
Senior Staff Writer

Allegations of possible alcohol use at the University of Idaho student radio station brought about a one week hiatus from the normal 24-hour broadcast during the summer.

As a result of the charges, five disc jockeys were discharged from KUOI-FM, broadcast hours were cut 70 percent for eight days, and preventive regulations were adopted. However, the incident brought positive repercussions to the station, according to Station Manager Brent Anyan.

"All in all, this incident has made the security what we've asked for all along," Anyan said.

Security changes involved changing the locks of an entrance leading to the third floor of the Student Union Building, where the station is located, and the repair of a videophone, used to view people wishing to enter the SUB after hours. Anyan said station personnel had been asking for the improvements, which were paid for by the SUB, for the past two years.

A janitor reported seeing alcohol on the third floor on July 7. Although no alcohol was confiscated, Anyan asked the disc jockey who was doing a show at the time to leave the station.

On the evening of July 26, a six-pack of beer was found in a janitor's sink near the station by a janitor who reported the infraction to SUB Manager Dean Vetrus the next day. Vetrus and Stephanie Curry, ASUI communications operations manager, discussed the situation and decided that KUOI airtime would be cut from 130 to 42 1/2 hours a week. At 4:30 that Friday KUOI was shut down and did not start again until 7:30 a.m. Monday.

The two disc jockeys who were on the air when the alcohol was found as well as two visiting disc jockeys were asked to leave the station by Anyan, and their airtime was reassigned.

KUOI returned to its original 24-hour a day broadcasting schedule Aug. 3 after several policy changes were agreed upon. New regulations included: signed parental consent of any disc jockeys under the age of 18 years and direct supervision during their broadcast, a maximum of two authorized KUOI personnel in the studio after 1 a.m., and individuals charged with student code infractions will be discharged from the station and prosecuted through Student Advisory Services.

Curry said it was a difficult decision to make because there was no one to consult about it. The ASUI Communication Board, which would normally handle an issue such as this, was not in session over the summer months.

"We had to do something, and that was the most immediate," Curry said.

Although Anyan agreed at the time with Vetrus and Curry that shutting down was the only

Memorial fund considered for scholarship

By M.L. GARLAND
Senior Staff Writer

The University of Idaho is exploring the possibility of using the Bruce Tate Schafer memorial fund for an architecture student scholarship, according to Robert Baron, acting architecture department chairman.

"If the scholarship is in his name it has to go toward someone as well-rounded as Bruce was," John Hallett, Schafer's college roommate and friend said. "He had equal learning in-and-out of the classroom."

Schafer, a UI May graduate, was fatally shot by a random drive-by shooter June 22 in Ketchum. He was working at an architecture firm in the area before attending the University of Illinois for graduate studies this fall.

Over $1,000 from 37 contributors has been raised since July and they anticipate more donations after the fund has been finalized, according to Sue Eschen, UI Trust and Gift Administration officer.

"We are hoping that the fund will be endowed," Eschen said. This would allow the interest from the principle to be awarded as a scholarship.

"My husband (Derald) and I have talked," Charlotte Schafer, Bruce's mother said. "We had decided it should go to a 5th year architect."

Architecture advisor and friend Wendy McClure presented several proposals to the architecture faculty Friday.

"The faculty favored the idea of an architecture student, perhaps graduate, scholarship," McClure said.

However, in order for the possible scholarship to be ongoing, there needs to be a $5,000 investment base.

The 23-year-old from Burley and Gerald "Shenandoah" Wright, 46, of Ketchum were slain within three minutes of each other. Boisian Mitchel John Odiaga, 35, has been charged with two counts of first-degree murder and is undergoing a mental evaluation.

"He (Bruce) had a tremendous career ahead," McClure said. "He did alot for the university - contributing academically while he was here."

After attending Idaho State University for two years, Schafer transferred to the University of Idaho to complete a bachelor's degree in architecture.

"He was one of those students that was rewarding to teach," McClure said. "He looked at work and learned from what he did. That was his goal."

Schafer had chosen to study historical preservation at the University of Illinois this fall. College roommate and classmate Mark Gier said Schafer's emphasis perhaps was influenced by his love to fix up his red 1964 Ford Falcon.

"His first love was his architecture," Charlotte Schafer said. "It was a toss up between that and his car."

Schafer produced a renovation project on the Idaho Albion campus for his thesis last year. McClure and Schafer's friends Steve Yarbrough, junior, and Tawnya Clayville, senior, visited the campus after the funeral "to see Bruce's vision."

The Idaho Parks and Recreation is considering implementing many of his ideas on the campus.

The city of Ketchum is planning to use a memorial fund in Schafer's and Wright's names to build a bicycle trail in their memory. Schafer's mother said city officials have expressed an interest in forwarding any money left over to the UI fund.

Friends remember Bruce

By M.L. GARLAND

"Who knows how long this will last. Now we've come so far, so fast. But, somewhere back there in the dust that same small town in each of us I need to remember."

"This is the end of the innocence."
—Don Henley

Well-liked and fondly remembered, Bruce Tate Schafer lost his life in June during a random drive-by shooting spree just as the 23-year-old

May University of Idaho architect graduate was preparing to begin a master's program in Illinois.

SCHAFER

Bruce had a great sense of humor. He was well-liked and will be missed by students for a number of years to come, college roommate and friend John Hallett said. "It puts a personal aspect on it and how futile it all is."

Friends describe Schafer as people-oriented. It was not uncommon to see him riding around campus on his mountain bike clad in shorts and an inside-out gray sweatshirt wearing round sunglasses.

"One thing sums him up — his search for fun," Mark Gier, another roommate and classmate said. "He was a people person and welcome in all groups."

Schafer had a love of practical jokes, and always made time for his friends.

"He would drop anything for a friend," senior Tawnya Clayville said. "The night before his thesis was due, we went for a walk and talked."

According to his mother, Charlotte Schafer, he loved the university.

Bruce loved college and the people," Charlotte Schafer said. "He spoke highly of his professors and about being able to talk to them about anything. They were inspirational to him."

Advisor and friend Wendy McClure said he was the perfect student and did not stumble over his ego like many architects do.

Although he was a self-described procrastinator and night owl, he always produced excellent work.

"He produced his best work at night," Hallett said. "Bruce was very interested in good grades but also interested in getting an education beyond the university — social and extracurricular."

Approximately one-third of last year's architect graduates attended Schafer's funeral in Burley.

"His parents made a special effort to reach out to everyone there," McClure said. "It was obvious he came from a very loving and caring family."

Junior Steve Yarbrough had also worked with Schafer during the summer of 1989 for the Bureau of Land Management. Yarbrough designed a floral

State tests Odiaga's mental state today

Psychologists' reports, finding the man accused of June's random drive-by slayings of two people in Ketchum unfit to stand trial, are being tested by the prosecution today.

Boisian Mitchel John Odiaga, 35, is charged with two counts of first-degree murder, one count of attempted first-degree murder and three counts of aggravated assault in connection with the random Ketchum shooting-deaths June 22.

Bruce Tate Schafer, 23, of Burley and Gerald "Shenandoah" Wright, 46, of Ketchum were slain within three minutes of each other by a drive-by shooter with a .30-06 pump-action rifle.

Schafer, a University of Idaho 1990 architecture graduate, was walking to a restaurant to celebrate a softball team victory when he was shot in the head with a rifle.

"I kept wondering how useless it seemed," John Hallett, Schafer's classmate and roommate said. "What an unprovoked, useless reason for his death."

New parking plan furthers 'parking apartheid'

Well there you have it. The parking plan you've all been waiting for.

And is it any surprise that people are already complaining?

Gold parking, still available only to members of the faculty and staff, has more than doubled—taking over five previously red lots. And blue parking can only be found on the perimeters of campus. Not very convenient for students who kept screaming that parking was a nightmare.

But the fact is that parking is not a problem at this university. It seems like a problem because on a lucky day you can park next to the building you want to be in—and that's nice. But most of the time those prime spaces are occupied by someone who got there bright and early. That means you might have to park a five or ten-minute walk from campus.

This new parking plan is only in response to continued outcries from the students that there is a parking problem.

Unfortunately we are probably all guilty of being overly optimistic. We retain the hope that the perfect parking spot will open up just as we drive by. So we spend 10 minutes driving around campus looking for the closest space available instead of just accepting fate and parking on the perimeter of campus.

This is a residence campus. About half of the student body lives on campus, and a large portion of the students (and faculty and staff) live within walking distance of campus.

If students utilize the newly developed storage lots behind the dorms, if Greeks park only in the blue lots and if off-campus residents who live reasonably close to campus would leave their cars at home and walk, parking would ease up considerably for those commuters who really need it, and for those times when you need to drop by campus for a quick errand. It is unfortunate the planners of this parking system took this as an opportunity to further "parking apartheid" by increasing gold parking by 144 percent.

Faculty and staff generally occupy parking spaces all day long. Students, on the other hand, don't usually get onto campus as early and don't block parking spaces all day.

Gold permits should be made available to students as well as faculty and staff, if they are willing to pay the $120.

If the administration would be willing to correct that parking discrimination, students (and staff) should get used to the fact that they might have to actually walk five or ten minutes to get to a class. And think twice before you complain again... you might end up parking behind Ernst.

Saddam Hussein dashes hopes for world peace

Remember the good old days when gas didn't cost $1.50 a gallon. Remember last month when the triumph of democracy seemed inevitable, and America's position as leader of nations seemed secure.

Still euphoric after the collapse of communism in Eastern Europe, many in Washington were prepared to slash our defenses and declare a new era of peace and enlightenment.

Frank Lockwood
Commentary

Saddam Hussein has rudely interrupted our idyllic summer. America now faces its first real crisis of the nineties and one of its greatest tests since World War II.

In 1979, Iranian students held America hostage by capturing 52 U.S. embassy employees. Today, Iraq holds thousands of Americans against their will.

During the Carter years, rapidly escalating oil prices helped wreak havoc on the economy, fueling inflation and causing instability in the markets.

As the Ayatollah Khomeini seized power, analysts worried about a united fundamentalist movement sweeping across the Middle East. Saddam's calls for one Arab nation in which wealth is more freely distributed is equally troubling.

Some observers dismiss Saddam as a madman. Far from it. He's a ruthless tyrant who—like millions of others in the region—despises the West. A leader with a one-million man army, and an arsenal of chemical weapons who will use any means necessary to triumph. And Saddam is not content with the oil wells of Kuwait. He wants a nuclear bomb for Baghdad, and a missile to deliver it to Jerusalem. This is the threat that we face.

Bush, in between trips to the golf course, has handled the crisis with some skill. Europe is with us, the United Nations is on our side. Even a number of Arab nations have (hesitantly) given us their support.

The united effort against Iraq is reminiscent of the World Wars when the allies fought side by side. But this time, we're not fighting to make the world safe for democracy; we're battling for oil, and for economic survival.

We're sending tens of thousands of troops to Saudi Arabia to protect our allies there and to guard their oil fields. We're sending our armada to enforce the U.N. embargo. But we can't leave our "peacekeepers" in the 130 degree desert heat forever.

As long as Saddam holds power, the risk of a Middle East disaster will remain high. With Iraq seeking a nuclear arsenal, world stability will be jeopardized.

Bush is in the unenviable position of trying to drive Saddam from power without war. He's hoping the Iraqis will embrace western values, give Saddam the boot, and end their aggression, an unlikely proposition.

We've spent the last 50 years nervously eyeing Eastern Europe, worrying about nations with at least some historical ties to western culture, history and religion. Now living in the post-Cold War era, our attention and our military might may be focused indefinitely on the oil rich desert, on a region where western values are widely denigrated and despised.

INEL: no threat to public health

Editor:

I note Dr. Rickards is continuing his anti-INEL crusade by trying to twist congressman Larry Craig to the questionable views which Craig previously recognized as a "well organized fear campaign."

State politics are intertwined also as Governor Andrus fired the first shot, essentially crippling the nation's ability to modernize and sustain our nuclear deterrent and has led other governors to stonewall more than 1000 million-dollar programs for waste disposal. The about half-a-cubic-foot of plutonium that has been buried at the site dispersed in millions-of-cubic-feet of clothing, trash and fill is no credible threat to the aquifer, being separated by about five-hundred-feet of clay, sand, and multiple lava flows. There is no sense disturbing it until the intense propaganda generated by these activists and governors dies down and new technology allows permanent disposal.

As Dr. Rickards is fully aware of this, I feel he and the EPA and now the GAO continue ignoring the facts and keep shouting wolf to protect their political patrons. Having spent many hours on the EPA data and now the GAO material I've just received, I've found nothing which constitutes a real threat to the public health. It's mostly nitpicking on minor industrial-type problems which were already written-up at the INEL and had been or were being addressed. It's amazing that the site has been able to operate at all when stubbing your toe becomes a major incident. There will be some problems, as there is in any human endeavor — this is why the site was so isolated in the first place.

Years ago it was interesting to see our fifth-column pro-Viet Cong Communist "Vietniks" across the country simultaneously jump on the ecology wagon (on Earth Day, 1970, celebrated world-wide as Lenin's 100th Anniversary). Funds raised were channeled through sympathetic liberal senators to entrench would-be-ecologist politicians in the State. In his frank and revealing book, Andrus' fellow closet liberal in the Guru of President Carter's inner circle, Zbigniew Brzezinski (President, Trilateralists and National Security Chief), summarized the blueprint on the merging of freedom with communism "emphasizing ecology rather than ideology ... replacing the institutionalized religious, ideological, and intensely national perspectives that have dominated modern history." (final pages, Between Two Ages).

While the Soviets have our attention with their own shake-ups and concessions in the captive states they deceptively continue to out-flank us strategically with their nuclear firepower advantage and their crash program to deploy mobile ICBM's, the SS-24 and 25, while we tread water.

The silence of most national and our state administration ecologists at the attempt by the activists to stampede a boycott of grapes, apples, and potatoes on phony issues shows the loyalty within these circles. If either Dr. Brzezinski's blueprint or political party is the reason, we'd better wake up before they further damage our economy.

Increased parking space misleading

Editor:

The recent letter from Jerry Wallace, acting financial vice president of the University of Idaho, detailed the plans for parking area construction on campus.

Expecting 200 new spaces by the beginning of the fall semester was momentarily encouraging. Then a glance at the 1990-91 parking lot designation map showed that the three red permit lots I formerly used had been changed. Their new designation is gold permits only!

Please ask Mr. Wallace to subtract the number of parking spaces lost to students from his anticipated increase and to then tell us what parking benefits students may really expect this fall.

If students get few or no benefits this fall, could we also not pay higher permit prices? But if the permit prices are to remain at the increased rate, it would be only fair to change those recently converted gold lots back to red. Faculty and staff could still park there and student commuters would not be forced to the campus perimeter.

Having the student pay more but get less should not be a precedent attributed to the U of I.

SFAC can solve financial dilemmas

Q: "I am an incoming freshman who applied for financial aid last spring. After I graduated from high school, I moved to Moscow and listed this address as my permanent one with the University of Idaho since I am from Spokane and am interested in becoming a resident so I will not have to pay out-of-state tuition. Unfortunately, I didn't have anyone forward my mail from my new address and didn't get my financial aid information from the university until it was too late. Now I don't have any way to pay my fees."

A: First of all, don't panic. The whole process of registration is just a big headache for most students, especially those who arrive at the Kibbie Dome only to find that their financial aid check is not waiting for them and they have no way to pay their fees.

The university has a 10 day grace period during which you can pay your fees. Students have several possibilities for handling financial aid problems, most of which are offered through the Student Financial Aid Center, located next door to the Student Union Building and across the street from the bookstore.

Advisers are available to handle individual cases, and the SFAC can put you in contact with Health and Welfare, Housing Assistance and various other agencies that can aid in lessening the burdens of paying for school.

the university has a permanent address from which mail can be forwarded promptly should you be working someplace like Alaska or fighting fires. Meet every deadline, and if you should take a semester off from school, be sure to make your financial aid arrangements well in advance. Students who enroll in the university at the last minute always run into problems.

Also, remember that financial aid is assessed yearly and distributed by the university on a semester by semester basis.

Questions should be directed to the SFAC at 885-6312.

Editors note: The above was a scenario created to give readers a sample of Julie Young's column. This will appear every Tuesday. Please address any questions or problems to Julie Young, c/o Argonaut, Suite 301 Student Union Building, Moscow, ID. 83843. The receptionist will also accept any hand delivered questions.

Julie Young

The university also has a short term loan program that draws money from a donated fund. The loans have to be repaid within 90 days, but by then you should have received your financial aid check. It is also possible to defer payment of your fees. This is done through the Controller's Office, located in the Administration Building Annex.

To avoid future problems with your financial aid, make sure that

Geiger resigns, returns to teaching

Joe Geiger resigned from his position as vice president for financial affairs this summer, saying his relationship with President Elisabeth Zinser was not evolving comfortably enough to stay in the position.

Geiger was hired in 1988 by former UI president Richard Gibb, who had already announced his plans for retirement. Geiger worked one year under Gibb as vice president and one year under Zinser.

Geiger's resignation took effect July 22, at which time Jerry Wallace, assistant vice president of budget and planning, took over as acting vice president for financial affairs.

Zinser has not yet started the search for the vice president's position. She expects to form a search committee early this fall. Gibb's hunt for a new vice president took approximately six months and two national searches.

When hired by Gibb, Geiger negotiated a nine month faculty appointment with the College of Business and Economics into his contract should he decide to resign from the position. He will drop from his $79,995 per year vice president's salary to approximately $50,000 a year.

Geiger came to the university from the University of Colorado in June of 1988.

Student Union Building business manager dies

University of Idaho Student Union Building Business Manager George Dafoe died of lung cancer in June at his Moscow home.

Dafoe, who was hired by former ASUI President Gino White in the fall of 1986, received his accounting degree from the University of Idaho and was a CPA.

"I would attribute 90 percent of the ASUI's financial turnaround to him," former ASUI President Brad Cuddy said. "He gave students the information they needed to make good decisions."

Cuddy said he was impressed by Dafoe's honesty and willingness to work with the students and let the students make decisions.

Prior to his death, he received a

UI searches for deans

Five colleges at the University of Idaho are currently lacking permanent deans.

Early this summer, University of Idaho President Elisabeth Zinser said in order to recruit and retain quality deans on the national level, the university would have to consider offering more competitive salaries.

Zinser said after two, two-year searches for deans for the College of Art and Architecture and the College of Letters and Science the positions were not filled because the University of Idaho's salaries lagged behind those offered at peer institutions across the nation. She said six-digit salaries may be necessary in some cases to attract quality deans.

In a letter to Board of Education President Gary Fay, Idaho Governor Cecil Andrus said he was more concerned with faculty salaries.

"It is my opinion that our faculty salaries are very low but that our administrative salaries are not," he said. "If we have money available for salary increases, I think we should rectify some of the inequities that exist in faculty compensation before raising salaries of administrative personnel."

Zinser said lagging faculty salaries at the university remain her biggest concern, and she has made them top

State approves house manager

University of Idaho President Elisabeth Zinser's proposed Assistant to the President for Community Relations position was approved at the June Idaho Board of Education meeting.

The president first proposed the position, originally titled house manager, last fall.

Several opposed the near $30,000 position at that time, and Zinser said she thought this was because the house manager title was misleading.

"I think people translate it to housekeeper," she said in a December interview.

The employee's duties include arranging house parties, meeting with local organizations and providing general support for the president.

option, he now considers it a setback that wasn't really necessary.

A clause in the statement of student rights in the UI Student Code of Conduct reads, "In the event that UI regulations are violated, disciplinary action will be taken only against individual students and not against the association."

Anyan said that students make certain agreements when they enroll as students here and therefore the university has the responsibility to enforce those on the individuals, not a group as a whole. Individuals should be caught and punished through the university security, not the whole group, he said.

"I thought that he (Vettrus) was making his administrative power more important than university rules," Anyan said.

Vettrus didn't believe the clause applied to the situation, saying that it was concerned students groups and organizations, while KUOI is a department.

"It's a student facility, but it's a university building," Vettrus said. "The rules apply just as anywhere else."

Curry said she and Vettrus were unaware of the clause at the time they made the decision to limit air hours.

ASUI President David Pena said that he didn't think Vettrus overstepped his authority, but did the best that he could under the circumstances.

"He doesn't have direct authority over the station, but he does over the building," Pena said.

HERE'S WHY THE SMART MONEY AT THE UNIVERSITY OF IDAHO IS GOING WITH TIAA-CREF AS IF THE FUTURE DEPENDDED ON IT.

Because it does. Smart investors know that your future depends on how well your retirement system performs. At the University of Idaho, you can now become part of the largest private retirement system in the world.

For over seventy years, TIAA-CREF has been building a sound financial future for people in education and research. Today, over 1,000,000 people are participating in the TIAA-CREF system, and more than 200,000 retirees are now enjoying the benefits of their TIAA-CREF annuities.

SECURITY, GROWTH, AND DIVERSITY: THE KEYS TO A GOOD RETIREMENT SYSTEM

Security—so the resources are there when it's time to retire. Growth—so you'll have enough income for the kind of retirement you want. And diversity—to help protect you against market volatility and to let you benefit from several types of investments.

THAT'S EXACTLY WHAT YOU GET WITH TIAA-CREF.

TIAA's traditional annuity offers you the safety of guaranteed principal plus a specified rate of interest, and provides the opportunity for additional growth through dividends. CREF's variable annuity gives you opportunities for growth through four different investment accounts, each managed with the long-term perspective that is essential to sound retirement planning: the CREF Stock Account, the CREF Money Market Account, the CREF Bond Market Account, and the CREF Social Choice Account.

HERE ARE SOME GOOD REASONS TO CHOOSE TIAA-CREF:

1. Performance. The CREF Stock Account has outperformed the S&P 500 Index and mutual fund industry averages for the last 5- and 10-year periods.* The CREF Money Market Account has shown excellent returns, outperforming the industry average virtually since its inception. TIAA has declared dividends every year for over 40 years, and its net earned rate has beaten the industry average for every one of those years. TIAA is ranked A+ (Superior) by A.M. Best Company.

2. Strength. We have done so well, for so many, for so long that we currently manage some $85 billion in assets.

3. Low Expenses. We are a nonprofit organization dedicated solely to the education and research communities, so our expenses are among the lowest in the insurance and mutual fund industries. We deduct no sales or expense charges from your premiums, so more of your retirement dollars are working for you.

4. Service. Our counselors are experienced, full-time retirement planning specialists, not commissioned salespeople. And our Participant Counselors and network of toll-free telephone numbers put information about your annuities at your fingertips.

LET US SHOW YOU THE DIFFERENCE.

If you are a member of the Public Employees Retirement System of Idaho (PERSI), and eligible for the ORP, you have until September 28, 1990 to choose the Optional Retirement Plan, through which TIAA-CREF is offered. We can give you the information you need to make a good decision, and we'll prepare illustrations that compare your benefits under PERSI and under the ORP, based on your personal situation.

UI student detained in Kuwait finally released

By ANDREA VOGT
Staff Writer

Ravi Chandran, a University of Idaho graduate student who was detained in Kuwait earlier this month, has finally been allowed to return to his family in Madras, India.

On August 2 Chandran boarded a British Airways flight bound for Madras, India, his hometown. The flight made a scheduled stop in Kuwait to refuel and was met on the runway by Iraqi tanks.

The unexpected death of Chandran's father allowed him to return home on an emergency basis. As the eldest son in the family, he was needed to perform the ceremonial rites for the funeral within ten days of the death. It was July 28 when Chandran first called Jack Cooper, international student advisor, to make arrangements for passage in and out of the United States.

"When Ravi came in to say goodbye I said, 'I'll see you next semester,' and he said, 'Most assuredly,' and off he went," said Cooper. "It was at this same time that Brother Hussein decided to gobble up Kuwait the same way Hitler gobbled up Czechoslovakia."

At this point there are some 120,000 Indian nationals in Kuwait. About 115 of them were on the detained British Airways flight. There have been many conflicting reports on the whereabouts of all the passengers. However, some brighter news was heard about Chandran.

Rick Fletcher, Chandran's chemistry professor, has been working desperately for three weeks to contact him. On August 24 Fletcher received a phone call from Chandran's uncle who reported that Chandran was indeed on his way to India via Amman, Jordan, whose borders were recently reopened.

According to Chandran's uncle, Chandran said he was

Greeks conform to alcohol policy

By RUSS BIAGNE
Managing Editor

Beginning this semester, the University of Idaho Greek System will conform to the newly passed risk management/alcohol policy.

The policy, which was drawn up and proposed by IFC President Fred LeClair, attempts to allow the fraternities to govern themselves, in compliance with the law, when serving alcohol at Greek functions.

"What we really tried to do was to allow the fraternities to follow their nationals' guidelines as well as local laws," LeClair explained.

Although this may seem fair enough, LeClair, with the help of a selected committee, did not have an easy time developing the policy last year. A previous policy was met with severe criticism from various fraternities.

According to committee member and Phi Kappa Tau President Mike Smole, the first policy just would not have worked.

"We received many complaints over the first policy concerning the number of loopholes it contained," Smole said.

He agrees, though, that the adopted policy should work.

"We didn't open so many cans of worms this time. I think it is a good policy, it gives the chapters a chance to monitor themselves," he explained.

The policy, which will be enforced by IFC and the university, essentially sets up guidelines for a fraternity to follow when having an exchange or party. It states that a fraternity event must be in compliance with local state and federal laws, fraternity insurance policies, university policies, international/national policies, and IFC/Panhellenic policies. This means that the fraternity is limited and obligated to comply with its nationals' policy concerning alcohol, as well as the state drinking age and the laws which go along with it.

There is a stipulation that may cause confusion among the fraternities. According to LeClair, if a fraternity's nationals allow its chapters to have kegs, that fraternity can have kegs at its parties. LeClair added that fraternities, such as Delta Tau Delta, have every right to have kegs as long as they comply with the policy.

"We can't tell a fraternity it cannot have kegs if its nationals allow it," LeClair said.

Despite this stipulation, LeClair feels the policy is very positive and should last.

Smole agrees, "We have not received any complaints yet."

Risk Management/Alcohol Policy University of Idaho

■ The possession, use, and/or consumption of alcoholic beverages, while on chapter premises, during an official fraternity event, or situation sponsored or endorsed by the chapter, must be in compliance with:

- local, state and federal laws of Idaho
- FIPG or other specifically related, fraternity insurance policies
- international/national policies
- university policies
- Interfraternity Council/Panhellenic policies

■ Greek students who are 21 years of age or older may bring alcohol to fraternity and sorority functions (i.e. BYOB functions).

■ At least two men and two women (one male and one female of executive standing) from chapters participating in a social function will monitor entrances from 9 p.m. until the doors are locked. Greek students and guests who are 21 and will be consuming alcohol must show picture identification and will be clearly identified by a stamp process.

■ Only the members whose chapter are sponsoring the function, and their guests, will be allowed into the function. Those monitoring the door are responsible for identifying their own chapter members and chapter guests.

■ Guest lists will consist of 15 names from each chapter. The lists must be submitted by 5 p.m. to the host social chair on the day of the social function.

■ Food and alternate (non-alcoholic) beverages must be provided at functions where alcohol is present.

911 emergency system to arrive soon

By AMTUL-MANNAN SHEIKH
Staff Writer

The 911 system, a nationwide emergency system, is expected to be available in Latah County pending a city-wide vote in November.

Latah County Sheriff Ken Buxton said that city and county officials have been talking about the 911 system for about five years. With the approval of Moscow's voters in November, the 911 system should be in effect by the latter part of 1991. Voters within the city limits as well as voters outside the city will cast their ballots.

It could take up to 18 months to install the enhanced 911 computer, said Moscow Police Chief Dave Cameron. That computer would sort emergency calls, determining whether the caller is in the Moscow Police or the Latah County Sheriff's department's jurisdiction.

Until the enhanced computer is installed, the Moscow police dispatcher has to pass on information to the sheriff's dispatcher or put the emergency caller on hold to transfer the call to the sheriff.

The system will cost customers $1 or less per month and will be added to their phone bills.

The University of Idaho purchases police services for $300,000 and will pay an additional $15,000 each year for the 911 service.

According to Cameron 8,900 calls of service are requested through the year and 3,000 to 3,200 are requests for an officer to respond on or around campus.

"We think that the $15,000 reflects the value and recognizes that it is a fair contribution for the extra dispatcher services," Carol Grupp, director of Human Resources and Risk Management at the University, said.

"The university brings in new people every year who don't know emergency phone numbers and the 911 system makes it easier as well as safer," Grupp said.

'Suspicious' fire destroys shed

A tennis shed and the equipment in it were completely destroyed and two trees scorched in what John Royce, campus liaison officer corporal, called a "suspicious" fire at the edge of the University arboretum late Saturday night.

The estimated damage of the possible arson is $5,000 including clean up costs. Director for Human Resources and Risk Management, Carol Grupp, said an estimate of the building's contents was difficult to obtain because it contained equipment from three different departments.

Grupp said the wood shed, located near the tennis courts behind the Physical Education Building was built only last year and was not wired for electricity.

Phil Waite, landscape architect for Facility Planning, said they will not be able to determine the full extent of the tree damage until spring. "The trees were only burned on one side," Waite said. "If the buds don't grow after next spring, we'll have to cut off the branches."

Greek houses near capacity

By RUSS BIAGGNE
Managing Editor

With most fraternities and sororities pledged to capacity 1990 rush was a success for the Greek system.

According to University of Idaho Greek Advisor Linda Wilson, 203 women registered for sorority rush. Of those women, 188 were pledged. But, despite the high pledging percentage (97 percent) four sororities did not make the quota of 29.

Wilson said quota was set much earlier this year than in previous years causing the four houses to not make quota.

"Quota was set after the first night of invitations, and when you set quota that early, many will not meet it," Wilson said.

Wilson explained that this situation opens up new areas for snap pledging.

"Those girls who were not pledged have been referred to Kappa Alpha Theta which will begin colonizing this January," Wilson said.

A rush staff officer helped those women who did not pledge a sorority find housing at the residence halls.

The fraternities faced an onslaught of 315 registered rushees this year and 295 were pledged. Wilson said this number will go over 300 when all fraternities have finished snap rushing.

Despite this high number of rushees, many fraternities experienced difficulties during rush week because rushees were not moving around. Instead, they seemed to find a house they liked and stayed there. Wilson attributed this problem to exhaustion.

"I think that in the first two days of rush, the rushees were running around trying to see all 17 fraternities, and by the third day they were exhausted and stayed at one house," she said.

Beta Theta Pi Rush Chairman Sam Johnson agreed that many rushees were not moving around, but did not think it had a substantial negative effect.

"We filled real quick, as did most of the fraternities around us, I think this was due to the large number of guys going through," Johnson said.

Despite this, a few fraternities failed to pledge as many rushees as they had anticipated but have said they are not in dire need.

Snap rush will continue throughout the semester for the Greek system. Those interested should contact Linda Wilson at the Student Advisory Services Office.

Panhellenic house reopens

By MICHAEL MARKLEY
Associate News Editor

The Panhellenic House on Nez Perce Drive will be used once again this fall as an overflow for sororities to house members they are unable to accommodate.

According to the Assistant Greek Adviser Todd Wiggen there will be approximately 50 residents from four sororities living in the university-owned building.

The house was opened for the fall semester last year; but due to a decrease in residents at the end of the semester it was closed. According to Greek Adviser Linda Wilson the primary reason for the closure was a lack of numbers to make it profitable for either the university or for the women.

"We're setting it up on a semester basis only," Wilson said, "but hopefully we will be using it both semesters."

A house director has been hired to ease the transition for the residents and enhance the "sorority experience" according to Wilson.

A liaison is appointed by each sorority involved. She will represent the residents from her sorority on a board with the Panhellenic Council and the greek adviser. This board will meet regularly to ensure that operations run smoothly within the house and that relations between the sorority members are acceptable.

The residents will eat breakfast at the Panhellenic House and their respective sororities will provide the other two meals each day.

"A big problem we had with the program last time was the dissatisfaction of the residents with the food service," Wilson said, "and having only one meal in the residence seemed to be a good alternative."

The University Dining Services by Marriott was responsible for providing the food service at the residence last fall, but the Panhellenic Council began to investigate alternative ways to provide food service after an inspector found the kitchen was unsanitary under UDS's control.

Financial aid office moves to Deakin Street

Almost 7,000 students file through the financial aid office each semester. Filling out long forms and anxiously waiting for scholarships, work-study and news about needed money can be frustrating; but moving the financial aid office from the University Classroom Center to the old bookstore location on Deakin Street should alleviate some of the headaches caused by the former cramped quarters.

Facility Planning Director Joanne Reece said the new office is twice the size of the previous office. The office occupies the entire first floor of the old bookstore and some of the archive files are located downstairs.

"Files take up an enormous amount of space; there is finally enough room to secure and regulate the active and archive files properly," Reece said.

Planning and design work for the $300,000 construction project began last fall but construction was delayed due to asbestos removal in the floor tiles. "They compressed construction so it was finished prior to students arrival on campus," Reece said.

"I was very pleased," Reece said. "We finished within the budget and I've heard nothing but positive comments."

Dan Davenport, director of Student Financial Aid, was equally pleased with the outcome. "It's nice to have room to function better. It improves efficiency and things are more positive, there's even a lobby."

Davenport said the three financial advisers each handle about 2,000 cases each. With the added space they will now be able to start a scholarship search center where students can sit down and look through options and a graduate assistance program that will help answer questions for perspective students as well as others.

This is the first year the staff can make full use of the computer system. In addition to writing checks, the computer will cut down paperwork by recording information, recalculating assistance, handling requests and selecting awards. "It's been real successful," Davenport said. "Anytime you try anything that brand new there are going to be things to work out, but it's more efficient now."

SUB business manager sought

By STEPHANIE BAILEY
News Editor

The search is on for a new Student Union Building Manager. General SUB Manager Dean Vettrus said the position will be similar to the one formally held by recently deceased George Dafoe but will also include more involvement with the ASUI senate.

The part-time position must go through a formal request process but $14,000 to $15,000 has already been budgeted for salary, according to Vettrus. The position must also be advertised for thirty days.

Vettrus said it was his understanding that the senate wanted more advising, particularly with financial aspects.

ASUI President David Pena said he would welcome someone qualified to provide financial advice. "It certainly doesn't hurt to listen to advice from someone that can provide some continuity for the organization," Pena said.

Pena said it has been his goal to have better long-term financial planning because there has been a definite need for it in the past.

"We added to the duties by making the business advisor attend all meetings and report financial information to the senate," Pena said.

Senator Bill Heffner wanted to make it clear that the senate was willing to listen to financial advice but would not tolerate any further intervention with the senate's affairs.

"It sounds like this is another attempt by the administration to infringe upon ASUI and that's not going to happen here," Heffner said.

Heffner said finding a replacement is a top priority. The process takes about two months.

The applicant must be interviewed by Vettrus, ASUI President David Pena, one senator, and the finance chairman. One half of the SUB Business Manager's salary comes from the ASUI budget and the other half is from the general SUB budget.

Move 10 years ahead of the class.

The new HP 48SX and a free 'library card' can get you there.

With over 2100 built-in functions, our new HP 48SX Scientific Expandable calculator takes a quantum leap into the 21st century. Buy an HP 48SX between August 15 and October 15, 1990, and HP will send you a free HP Solve Equation Library card (a $99.95 retail value).

The plug-in application card alone contains more than 300 science and engineering equations, as well as the periodic table, a constants' library, and a multi-equation solver. It's like having a stack of reference books right at your fingertips.

The HP 48SX calculator is so advanced, it will change the way you solve problems forever. It integrates graphics with calculus, lets you enter equations the way you write them, and does automatic unit management.

Check your campus bookstore or HP retailer for HP's range of calculators and special back-to-school offers. Then check out the calculators that are years ahead of their class.

There is a better way.

arrangement on a t-square, an architectural tool, which was buried with Schafer.

Schafer's parents gave Yarbrough their son's architecture equipment.

"I keep hoping that there'll be some magic (when I unroll the green mat that goes on top of the drafting table) and Bruce will be a part of me and my work," he said. "His parents asked me to design for Bruce."

Clayville said the following quote taken from a card explained how Schafer impacted her life: "How you helped me find happiness, truths and opened doors for me."

"He always made me happy," she said. "And he cared about me enough to tell me the truth ... and showed me I had potential."

Many of his friends have expressed bitterness at Schafer's violent death, but his mother and father feel he touched more people in his short life than most do in a lifetime.

"He'd rather we remembered the fun times, not the bad," Yarbrough said. "That's what Bruce would've wanted us to do."

"I need to remember this
So baby give me just one kiss
And let me take a long last look
Before we say good-bye ...
This is the end of the innocence"

A third victim, Jerry Johnson, 40, of Ketchum sustained minor injuries when a gun blast shattered glass in his car. He ducked when he saw a rifle aimed at him.

Odiaga was arrested June 23, north of Ketchum, walking with a loaded rifle in his hand. He surrendered after leading Blaine County officials on a 25-mile car chase and wrecking his own car.

"I don't want his head," Mark Gier, Schafer's other roommate and classmate said. "Other people may be bitter about it, but I don't blame him - he needs medical help."

After undergoing a month of psychiatric testing ordered by 5th District Judge James May, Boise psychiatrist Michael Estess determined Odiaga could not stand trial until his mental condition stabilized, according to a report revealed at a August 13 hearing. Another psychiatrist also substantiated Estess report.

Fritz Haemmerle, Blaine County Chief Deputy Prosecuting Attorney, said the county prosecutor Ned Williamson will test these findings today. If Odiga is found unfit to proceed and stand trial, he will be committed for 180 days at an Idaho maximum security institution near Boise.

Mental evaluations will be conducted every 90 days and Haemmerle says Odiaga could be found fit to stand trial at any point. After the initial 190 days, the court will reevaluate the situation.

Court records show Odiaga was diagnosed in 1984 as manic depressive and has a history of alcohol abuse. Characteristics of the illness include drastic mood swings, delusions and hallucinations. He has also been arrested several times since 1973 for driving while intoxicated.

Odiaga worked for the U.S. Postal Service from 1982-1988 as a mail handler at the Boise Main Post Office. He left on disability retirement.

A 16-member Grand Jury is impaneled in Hailey to consider the murder charges against Odiaga. Blaine County Public Defender Brian Elkins, representing Odiaga, was unavailable for comment. The Grand Jury proceedings are closed to the public.

UI outgrows power system

By MIKE MARKLEY
Associate News Editor

Hot temperatures and extensive air conditioning overloaded the University of Idaho substation this summer and left workers sweltering when power conservation required turning air conditioning off despite temperatures in the upper 90s. Due to an extended period of overload, the power system on the UI campus is being replaced.

Three additional transformers have been provided to the university by Washington Water Power on a temporary basis. These transformers have been combined with the existing three which were installed in 1952.

The new system is being planned and work could start as early as next summer according to Facility Planning Director Joanne Reece.

"The temporary system should be operable for 12-18 months while we work on a permanent replacement system," Joanne Reece said last week.

The new system will cost the university $4 million. Last week Reece said the university has already been allocated half the money from the state and they expect to receive the remainder after the next legislative session in 1991.

"We are very optimistic about this," Reece said. "It will be very important with growth and expansion on campus."

According to Tom Sawyer, facility engineer, the new system will eliminate the need for transformers and will make repairs easier.

"The new system will be a lot more reliable," Sawyer said, "and in the event of an outage, the down-time will be much shorter."

This system will especially benefit the areas on campus where electricity is an essential part of operations.

"Those departments performing research can't live without electricity," Sawyer explained. Workers will be able to isolate the problem and repair it without interfering with such activities.

Since the installation of the original transformers in 1952, the university has seen many changes which have resulted in higher consumption of electricity. This summer the substation finally overloaded.

"The substation did not actually fail," said Sawyer, "however, the campus has grown beyond the capacity of this system."

According to Reece, the new system which is referred to as the "loop power grid system" will have the capacity to serve the campus for the next several decades.

Dafoe served 20 years in the United States Navy as a communications radioman prior to being hired as an accounting technician in the SUB.

Dafoe is survived by his wife, Nancy, who is an office coordinator in the UI history department; three daughters, Melissa, 22, Rebecca, 20, and Kathryn, 14; his 90-year-old mother in Sheyenne, N.D., and a sister in Wisconsin.

Also outlined in the budget are about $2.4 million for facilities maintenance.

Budget highlights include:

- $23.87 million for the university's work in agricultural research and extension.

- $36 million for capital projects funding from the State of Idaho Permanent Building Fund.

This funding would be used for several projects on campus including completion of the library expansion and remodeling, new facilities for engineering and agricultural biotechnology, completion of the primary power distribution project and an upgrade of Renfrew Hall in the College of Letters and Science.

- Nearly $200,000 to improve the University of Idaho's core curriculum, reducing the class size in many core courses.

- About $270,000 for improved computer capacity for students, faculty and staff.

The proposed budget will be reviewed by the Idaho Board of Education at the September meeting, and presented to the board for approval in January.

ASUI assists in housing crunch

By STEPHANIE BAILEY
and MIKE MARKLEY

Several ASUI officers are trying to ease the job of house-hunting by providing a daily update of what is available in Moscow. The assistance provided by the volunteers expands the current weekly housing list provided by ASUI Communications.

The group begins every morning by calling people with listings in the weekly-published housing list to see if they still have space available. They also check with apartment landlords and realtors to make sure there have not been any changes in rental availability.

"The students who are having the most trouble are those who are unfamiliar with the Moscow area," ASUI vice-president, Mike Gotch said. "We're making it easier by making calls to the right people."

According to Gotch they are working closely with housing director Jim Bauer and also with the Greek system.

"The University has been very cooperative," Gotch said. "Students can come to one place and see what their options are with the dorms, greek houses and apartments in town."

Gotch said the people he was most concerned for were the growing number of non-traditional students and families. "Freshman have more options because there is still on-campus housing."

If students go through the ASUI service they can get temporary motel discounts at two local motels.

The option of having one of the local motels develop more permanent accommodations in cooperation with the housing office was discussed last week, according to Gotch. However family facilities would not be available.

"I doubt this will leave the talking stage," Gotch said, "due to the fact that family housing is the most needed."

The senators are running the service from their main office in the SUB. The service began Wednesday and will continue until there is no longer a need for daily check-ins.

one system, having single rooms, but now, some may have to move into double rooms," he said. "It will work if everyone is willing."

Bauer is considering different plans for future housing shortages. These include: building more family housing, converting more graduate student traditional housing, and building a new dormitory. Bauer said these long-term plans depend upon how many non-traditional (transfer students, or older students returning to school) enroll at the university.

The new dormitory, which could solve many housing problems, is years away because of its cost. Bauer said the dormitory would cost three to five million dollars.

"If we were to do this, the residents would have to pay a bigger than normal raise in rates," Bauer said.

Bauer likes the idea of a new dormitory, but said it's not a practical thing to do yet. He doesn't want to down play the shortage but he thinks this trend of high enrollment will level out and any possible problems will be alleviated.

priority in her budget proposal for next year. However, she said the university's ability to attract and retain quality faculty depends partly on its ability to attract quality deans.

She said deans are academic leaders among their colleges and are needed to garner the strongest faculty.

"A dean is to the college what I am to the university," Zinser said. "They are the chief executive officer for the college."

She said good deans would be able to attract more private money to the university; and she is considering using the private funds to supplement salaries.

Zinser said she does not want to conduct national searches for the five deanships until the university can be competitive, and has decided to stagger the searches over the next three years.

She said she does not feel Idaho is in a position to offer higher salaries at this time, and the staggering process will give the university and the state time to assess the problem.

Acting deans have been given term appointments to fill the vacant positions.

The College of Business and Economics has announced that Byron Dangerfield, head of the college's department of business and associate professor of business management, will be the acting dean for the college. Dangerfield will serve until June 30, 1991.

The College of Engineering named professor Richard T. Jacobsen as acting dean in July. Jacobsen has been with the UI faculty since 1963 and was associate dean for administration and research in the college and director for the Center for Applied Thermodynamic Studies. He will serve through June 1993.

Jacobsen is a professor of mechanical engineering. He received his bachelor's and master's degrees at the University of Idaho.

George Simmons, associate vice president for academic affairs, was named half-time acting dean of the College of Art and Architecture last spring. He has been appointed for a two-year term.

Kurt Olsson, professor of English, continues as acting dean of the College of Letters and Science through June 1992.

The library services department is also without a permanent dean.

students having difficulty finding living accommodations.

According to Stephanie Curry, off-campus housing coordinator, approximately 45 people have opened up their homes for the "make room" project over a period of eight weeks.

The project proved to be a positive move for relations between students and community members.

"The program provides an excellent opportunity for members of the community who are not otherwise connected to the university learn more about it through having students stay with them," Curry said.

Although the "make room" project is a great service to single students, student families are still in need of accommodations. The space which has been made available through the program consists of mostly single bedrooms and rates often include some of the student's meals.

The ASUI has supported the program from the beginning and is currently coordinating a housing hotline which includes not only the "make room" spaces, but also on-campus housing availability.

treated well and stayed in nice hotels. However he spoke no English while he was there. He used his local language and was cautious not to disclose any information to the Iraqis about his ties to the United States.

"The tragic part of the story is not so much that Ravi had to stay in Kuwait, but rather that he had to miss his father's funeral," said Cooper.

Chandran will most likely remain in India for a few more weeks to recuperate and be with his family. Friends of Chandran, though unsure, are optimistic about his return.

"Things are looking so much brighter now," said close friend Subra Manyan. "I think he will come back soon, and when he does we are going to have a big party, with a lot of champagne."

Chandran hopes to return to Moscow in about two weeks... only not through Kuwait this time.

Vandals search for fourth straight title

By CHRISTOPHER GATEWOOD
Staff Writer

The mid to late eighties was a great era for University of Idaho football. They won four Big Sky Conference titles, and made the NCAA Division I-AA Playoffs four times, advancing as far as the semi-finals in 1988. Some great players went through the Idaho program in the eighties including Scott Linehan, Erick Yarber, Jerry Medved, Steve Unger, Lee Allen, and of the irreplaceable John Friesz.

NUSSMEIER

But the eighties are over, and as we head into the nineties people may wonder what to expect from a young team that is not battle tested. True, the defense does return nine starters, but the offense has a freshman quarterback and a crop of new receivers. Idaho fans are curious as what to expect in the first season of the nineties. Can Idaho win a fourth straight Big Sky championship? Here is a position by position breakdown:

Offensive Line: At first glance the offensive line looks like a unit that has been decimated. Two time All-Americans Steve Unger and Todd Neu and All Big Sky pick Troy Wright are gone. At second glance, though, the line looks like a group that could be solid. Returning is All

Vandal linebacker Rust shockingly quits team

By CHRISTOPHER GATEWOOD
Staff Writer

John Rust, the senior middle-linebacker for the Vandals who was Second Team All-Big Sky Conference in 1989, has quit the football team.

Rust walked out of practice Friday after an incident with a coach and was a no show at the scrimmage on Saturday. Rust, who hails from Sandpoint, Idaho, came to the University of Idaho in 1988 after transferring from Washington State University. Last year as the Vandals won their third straight Big Sky Conference championship, Rust finished second on the team with 78 tackles and was an integral part of the Vandal defense. It's somewhat of a mystery that Rust would walk off the team right before the start of his senior year.

Apparently this wasn't something that came on suddenly, but something that started in the summer when the Spokesman-Review reported that Rust might not retain his starting position in 1990.

The article didn't bother me in the fact that competition doesn't bother me. In fact I enjoy the competition," Rust said. "You see something like this in the paper and you start to wonder what spring ball meant. If this is how they felt they should have discussed it with me first."

Rust came into the 1990 camp with a good mental outlook and in great shape. He lost 10 pounds over the summer and came back quicker and slimmer.

"I came with a fresh mental attitude," said Rust. "I was really ready to get after it, but it just didn't work out for me."

Idaho football fans spoiled by Vandal's success

Idaho shoots for record-breaking year in football

By MATT LAWSON
Sports Editor

When football fans think of what is most appealing to their actual needs as a fan, or what they search for in looking for a team to follow, one word comes to mind. Winning. No human being on the face of this earth can actually admit to striving for, or enjoying failure. One thing that University of Idaho football fans have not been deprived of is watching winning teams.

When people, whether fans or rivals, think of Vandal football, they cannot deny the winning tradition the team has achieved over the past five years. With six Big Sky Conference Football Championships to their credit, including four out of the last five, Idaho has become accustomed to winning.

When entering the University as a freshman in 1987 I really had no idea what I was about to witness on Saturdays in the UI Kibbie Dome.

In high school I reluctantly cheered for a losing team and eventually accepted it for what it was worth. Little did I know I would soon become accustomed to accepting nothing less than victory.

"I knew what I wanted. Another Big Sky Championship!"

The first game I watched as a student became a significant game in my quest to follow a successful football team. Idaho lost that game to Central Michigan which didn't seem to matter much except for my record standing at 0-1 as a Vandal fan. The game became significant because not only was it the last regular season game the Vandals lost at home, but the start of great things to come.

Matt Lawson

Idaho went on to win the rest of their games at home that year and win the Big Sky Championship before falling to Weber State in the I-AA playoffs.

The next season was even more impressive than the first as Idaho went undefeated at home, including two I-AA playoff games, before losing to eventual I-AA champion Furman in the semi-final game. My record as a Vandal fan now stood at 20-5, including an impressive 12-2 home record.

After witnessing two great years and two Big Sky championships in my first two years as a Vandal fan it seemed that there was nothing more that I could ask for from our great team.

I knew what I wanted. Another Big Sky Championship! This title seemed like it would come easier than the first with a great amount of talent returning.

After the Vandals lost their first two games I began to get a little nervous, but deep down inside I knew the Vandals would come through in the end.

They did more than come through as they won their next nine games in a row to clinch the title.

It is amazing to think that after attending the University of Idaho for three years that I can honestly say I have only watched Idaho lose one regular season game at home.

The 1990 team has a great deal of pressure to live up to as three-time defending Big Sky Conference champions going into the season. The players and coaches are optimistic about the 1990 campaign, but they face difficult odds: 1) No team has ever won the Big Sky Conference championship four consecutive times, 2) Big Sky Most Valuable Player John Friesz is now a San Diego Charger and the Vandals will tackle the Big Sky with talented, but untested, Doug Nussmeier at quarterback, 3) The Vandals schedule is their toughest in years with Big Sky powers Boise State, Montana, and Nevada all on the road and an away game against a strong University of Oregon team.

Although the Vandals were only picked as high as fourth in the conference by all the pre-season polls, I have faith that Idaho will surprise a lot of people and possibly keep the Big Sky Conference title in its most familiar home, Moscow, Idaho.

Lady Vandal netters anxious for season

Thompson, Asplund look to lead Idaho

By CHRISTOPHER GATEWOOD
Staff Writer

The University of Idaho's Women's volleyball team, led by first year head coach Tom Hilbert, finished with a 15-14 record to notch their first winning season since 1985.

The Lady Vandals finished fifth in the Big Sky Conference, their highest finish in five years.

Seniors Karen Thompson and Stacey Asplund, both 6 feet tall, are the only two returning starters. Thompson, who is from Moscow, played first team AVCA All-Northwest Region as well as first team All Big Sky Conference last season. She led the Vandals with 4.8 kills and 3.3 digs per game in 1989.

"I need to become more of a team player, last year I kind of did my own thing," Thompson said. "I need to become more of a team leader."

"Karen wasn't much of a player her first two years, but last year we specialized her on the left side and she became the premier outside hitter in the conference," says Hilbert.

Asplund, who is from Vancouver, Washington, was an honorable mention All Big Sky as well as Academic All Conference in 1989. She averaged 2.4 kills and 1.1 blocks per game last year.

"I think if I improve in all areas of my game, especially defense, I can be first team All-Conference," Asplund said.

"Stacey is a very dynamic hitter and a fine athlete," Hilbert said. "We're going to use her mainly in the middle where she is most effective."

Rounding out the starting lineup will be red-shirt freshman Nancy Wicks playing in the middle. Battling for one outside hitter position will be 5-foot-10-inch senior Leslie Bischoff and 6-foot true freshman Jessica Puckett from Gresham, Oregon. The other outside hitter position will be filled by either sophomore Heather McEwen, who at 6 feet 2 inches is the tallest woman on the Lady Vandals or 6-foot true freshmen Dee Porter from Weiser, Idaho.

"I need to become more of a team player, last year I kind of did my own thing."

—Karen Thompson
Senior

"McEwen is a better blocker and Porter is a better ball control player, so there is a trade-off there," Hilbert said.

Battling for the setter position will be 5-foot-11-inch red-shirt freshman Kris Little and Junior College transfer Christie Roes, at 5 feet 4 inches, from Mount Hood Community College in Portland, Oregon.

"Both these girls are excellent players," Hilbert said. "Roes is a better defensive player and Little is a better blocker."

Leah Smith, at 5 feet 9 inches, a true freshman from Deary, Idaho, and 5-foot-7-inch sophomore Jodi Boggs will play in specialty situations.

What are the Vandals going to have to do to finish higher than fifth place and make it to the conference playoffs? First, all the newcomers will have to make a big impact.

"Our freshmen are going to have play over their heads," Hilbert said. "Most freshmen can't come in and contribute right away, but ours have the ability to do so."

The Lady Vandals also have to learn how to win the close matches. Too many times in 1989 the Lady Vandals lost matches in the fifth game, Hilbert said.

"We have the talent to be a top flight team but we have to learn to prove it every time we step onto the floor," Hilbert said.

The Lady Vandals must overcome their psychological barriers. They haven't beat Boise State in a match in five years.

"The kids have to learn to take advantage of their opportunities and swing hard and see what happens," Hilbert said.

Depth was also a big problem for the Lady Vandals last year as substitutes saw limited action. That shouldn't be a problem this year with the infusion of all the young talent.

"If one person was having an off game we had no one to pick up the slack," Asplund said.

"To be honest, our bench last year was not good," Thompson said. "This year is a different story, if the starters are not playing well we now have girls with the ability to come in and do the job."

ALL BIG SKY. Returning for her senior season, Karen Thompson wants to become more of a team player. (JIM VOLLRBRECHT PHOTO)

Hiring a new assistant coach, Laurie Wetzel, will help the Lady Vandals this season. Wetzel is the a former volleyball star from the University of Washington. Wetzel is from Puyallup, Washington, and played one season of professional volleyball with the New York Liberties.

Wetzel replaces three year assistant coach and Washington

State University graduate Sue Geppert, who resigned after the completion of last season. Wetzel will serve as recruiting coordinator and will also be in charge of academic supervision.

"Wetzel has worked with one of the best recruiters in the country, which will help us tremendously in recruiting the northwest," Hilbert said.

Friesz battles to make NFL

By MATT LAWSON
Sports Editor

After becoming a surprisingly low sixth round draft choice of the San Diego Chargers last May, former Idaho Vandal standout John Friesz has found out how rocky the road to success in the National Football League really is.

Friesz entered the Charger camp as one of five quarterbacks, four of whom have starting experience in the N.F.L., including former Chicago Bear Jim McMahon.

Friesz

The Chargers announced that they would only keep three quarterbacks which makes the future look difficult for the former Big Sky Conference Most Valuable Player.

McMahon, surprisingly, became the first casualty of the San Diego quarterback battle when he was released by the Chargers in late spring before Friesz had even reported to camp.

The other two quarterbacks in camp were veteran Mark Vlasic and former Atlanta Falcon starter and Soda Springs, Idaho native David Archer.

In the Chargers' first scrimmage against the Los Angeles Rams on July 26 Friesz began to show early signs of what made him an All-American at the University of Idaho.

Friesz completed 8 of 13 passes for 114 yards and two touchdowns and seemed to begin gaining confidence with San Diego's complex offense.

In the second scrimmage against the Phoenix Cardinals, Friesz completed 5 of 8 passes for 56 yards in limited action.

Archer became the second quarterback to be released by the Chargers earlier this month and Friesz's future suddenly became brighter.

In San Diego's first preseason game against the Dallas Cowboys Friesz saw limited action and appeared to be destined for the third spot on the quarterback depth chart. Then Friesz was announced as the potential starter for the Chargers in their second game against the Los Angeles Rams before head coach Dan Henning decided to start Tolliver and give Vlasic much needed playing time after he has missed the past two seasons with a knee injury.

Friesz's chances of making the Chargers stands solid with the exception of talk that Henning may decide to only keep two quarterbacks.

Friesz has received positive press from the local papers with the exception of one paper calling him "Bobby's Boy," referring to San Diego General Manager Bobby Beathard who has a great deal of confidence in Friesz. He was also mistakenly called a native of Montana in one newspaper.

Friesz's brief career in the N.F.L. has been an intensified roller coaster ride with Friesz himself not knowing really how long his ride will last or when he will be asked to find a ride elsewhere. He does know that he has survived an intense battle at quarterback to this point and stands an excellent chance at making the Chargers' team.

If Friesz makes the Chargers he may be over the rockiest part of the road to success and onto much smoother ground for the future.

Bails selected to coach golf team

By MATT LAWSON
Sports Editor

University of Idaho Golf Coach Kim Kirkland resigned from his position this summer after 13 years of service.

Don Bails has already been named as Kirkland's replacement by UI Athletic Director Gary Hunter.

Kirkland, a 1974 graduate from the University of Idaho, served as the Vandals coach from 1978-1990. His teams finished third in 1979, 1981, and 1986 before the sport was no longer recognized by the Big Sky Conference in 1987.

Bails will maintain his current position as Golf Pro at the UI Golf Course in addition to his new coaching duties.

Bails is an experienced coach. He has coached at Oregon State University and last year he worked as a consultant for the Washington State University Women's team.

The team has a great deal of potential entering the fall season as Bails expects six to eight players to return from last year's team.

The only loss the Vandals suffered from last season was Matt Gustavel who was a steady performer all year for Idaho.

Bails also expects 10 to 12 freshman and newcomers to try out for the team this fall.

Bails suggests that anyone interested in trying out for the Vandal golf team attend the first meeting at the UI Golf Course pro shop on August 30 at 7:00 p.m.

The Vandals will carry twelve players on the actual team and five players will compete in each individual tournament.

The Vandals' first tournament is in Vancouver, British Columbia, on September 17, 18 and 19.

Vandals win 1990 all sports title over Boise State

By MATT LAWSON
Sports Editor

Led by Big Sky Championships in football and Men's basketball, the Idaho Vandals held off Boise State to win the 1989-1990 Big Sky Conference All-Sports trophy.

The Vandals also captured the trophy for men's sports only by outdistancing second-place Montana by a 70-56 margin.

The final margin of victory in the combined sports competition was just three points as Idaho totaled 127 points to Boise State's 124.

Points for the trophy are awarded for each sport depending on the size of the sports with football and men's basketball worth 24 points to the Big Sky Champion.

A big surprise in helping Idaho capture the title was the women's track team as they finished third at the Big Sky Championships, their highest finish since taking third in 1984.

This is the third time the Vandal men have won the trophy, having won previously in the 1965-66 and 1971-72 seasons.

Smith continues riding rocky road to the NBA

By MATT LAWSON
Sports Editor

Riley Smith became known as one of the best players to come through the University of Idaho Basketball program after finishing his senior year last season.

After gaining most valuable player honors for the Big Sky Conference last season and top-newcomer the year before, Smith's star was shining bright going into the draft last summer.

It's more difficult to make a team in the NBA than in other professional sports due to limited roster sizes and the large amount of talent coming out of the college ranks.

When several underclassman decided to skip their senior year of college and make themselves eligible for the draft, Smith's chances of being drafted decreased.

With the NBA draft consisting of only two rounds and 54 total players, good players like Smith can easily be overlooked. In Smith's case, that is exactly what happened during the draft.

Smith was disappointed at being passed up since several scouts had shown an interest in him prior to the draft.

The Minnesota Timberwolves, a recent expansion team, revived his hopes by inviting him to a two-team camp they were holding in Dallas with the Dallas Mavericks.

After the first part of the camp was completed, Smith made the initial cut and was invited to Minnesota to continue his tryout with the team. Unfortunately a few weeks ago he was cut. He was immediately picked up by the Cleveland Cavaliers and is currently trying out for their team.

Smith may end up taking the long route to the NBA through the Continental Basketball League, pro basketball's version of baseball's minor leagues.

Smith was selected by Columbus in the second round and was the 21st pick overall.

One of Smith's options, like many other player's, is to play in Europe.

Vandal fans that watched Smith dominate the Big Sky during the past two seasons may wonder why he is having so much difficulty in getting on a NBA team.

Many critics say the Smith is too small for the NBA position he would play. At 6 feet 8 inches, Smith is not a prime candidate to battle against the David Robinson's and Patrick Ewing's of the league.

He is projected by most scouts as a power forward in the NBA; but he still may be considered a little small for that position and his foot speed is not one of his strong points.

Many people say that he never played against any quality competition in the Big Sky. This may be true, but his post season performances have silenced a many of those critics.

In the 1989 NCAA tournament Smith held his own in the middle while playing against UNLV's

David Butler and Moses Scurry.

Last season against Louisville, Smith faced one of the top big men in the nation in 7-foot-1-inch Felton Spencer. Spencer was a top-ten pick in this year's draft. Smith had no problem competing with Spencer and even outscored and outrebounded him.

NBA scouts still seemed doubtful as Smith's phone failed to ring on draft day.

The future could look brighter for Smith, but there is still hope that he will find his spot in pro basketball, whether it is in Cleveland, Columbus, or Rome.

In other basketball news, former Vandal standout Raymond Brown has signed a guaranteed $275,000 contract to play in Spain. Brown spent last season seeing limited action with the Utah Jazz. Brown hopes to improve his game and eventually return to the NBA.

O'Brien shines at Goodwill

By MATT LAWSON
Sports Editor

Although the 1990 Goodwill Games became one of the biggest flops in sports competition history, former University of Idaho standout Dan O'Brien was far from a failure as he captured a silver medal in the decathlon.

After finishing the first day of the decathlon with a sizable 313 point lead over eventual gold medalist Dave Johnson, O'Brien watched his lead slowly slip away on the final day.

O'Brien compiled a 4,490 point total after the first five events which was impressive considering the difficult weather conditions the athletes were competing in. O'Brien recorded a strong 10.99 seconds in the 100 meters while running against a five-mile-per-hour wind.

O'Brien's other first-day marks included 25-11.5 in the long jump, a shot put of 49-9, a 6-9.75 mark in the high jump and a 48.38 time in the 400 meters.

O'Brien is known as a strong first day competitor and it began to show during the final day of competition.

His lead began to slowly disappear despite personal bests of 152 in the discus and a leap of 14-11 in the pole vault.

After nine events O'Brien led Johnson by only 32 points going into the grueling 1,500 meters. Johnson had to beat O'Brien by 3.5 seconds to overtake him for the gold medal.

O'Brien ran strong for the first half of the race before tiring and finishing 10.44 seconds behind Johnson.

O'Brien competed for the Vandals in the spring of 1989 and went on to capture the Big Sky record for the decathlon with 7,988 points.

O'Brien's achievements at the Goodwill Games were given impressive coverage in the August 6 issue of Sports Illustrated.

ship with his coaching staff also could have played a large role in his decision.

"It just wasn't a positive situation for me to be part of the team anymore," Rust said. "I don't feel I would have been able to reach my goals under the present coaching staff."

The emergence of JC transfer Robert Monk also might have played a large factor. Monk, who is from Sacramento Community College, has played well and pushed Rust hard.

"I don't mind not starting if the guy in front of me is playing better," Rust said. "I don't know if I was playing my best, but I thought I was doing the job."

Rust also said he didn't care who was starting, he just wanted what was best for the team and to have fun.

"I thought the fun aspect of football was lost," Rust said. "I was no longer in a situation where it was possible to excell."

Rust also felt the situation was best for the team because it relieved building on-field tensions.

Vandal head coach John L. Smith refused to speculate on why Rust quit.

"I'm not going to speculate why John quit, you'll have to ask him for the answer," Smith said.

How is Rust's absence going to affect the team?

"It won't have any affect at all," Smith said. "People come and go all the time, it's just one of those things you overcome."

Smith said he hated to see Rust go, but wished him all the best.

Big Sky and senior Chuck Yarbro, the strongest Vandal at 6-foot-2-inches and 275 pounds. He has a 400 pound bench press and a 700 pound squat. The other tackle will be David Spellman, a sophomore who is a converted defensive end. He is taking over for the injured 6-foot-4-inch 272 pound Shawen Smith who started for half the season in 1989. The guard tandem should be solid with 6-foot-2-inch 290 pound senior Chris Hoff and 6-foot-3-inch 270 pound sophomore Floyd Dorry.

"Chris is underrated and has to have a big year for us as does Dorry," says first year offensive line coach Art Velero.

Rounding out the starting five is 6-foot-2-inch 265 pound senior center Mike Rice, who has spent his whole career backing up Unger.

Depth could be a problem for the Vandals as most of their reserves are young. The Vandals have 6-foot-4-inch 260 pound red-shirt freshman Jody Schnug, 6-foot-3-inch 265 pound Chris Schneider, and 6-foot-4-inch 280 pound junior college transfer Erick Wiker. Another player to watch for in the future is 6-foot-5-inch 285 pound freshman Erick Koss from Seattle.

"This kid is tough and real smart", said Velero.

Running Backs: You would think 5-foot-9-inch 195 pound Devon Pearce who is the leading returning rusher with 492 yards in 1989 would be a sure thing at running back. That isn't entirely true at this time.

"The position is wide open right now," said running back coach Charlie Hall. "We're looking for a complete back, one who can get us 1,000 yards this year."

Challenging Pearce will be 5-foot-7-inch 170 pound senior Roman Carter who led the rushers in spring drills with 133 yards. Carter saw limited action last season, but could challenge this year.

A surprise is 6-foot-1-inch 190 pound freshman newcomer Wind Henderson who looked impressive in camp.

"Wind has great vision and amazing feet," Hall said.

Battling for playing time with the rest of the backs is seemingly forgotten 5-foot-10-inch 185 pound senior running back Bruce Harris. Harris has overcome an injury plagued career to become Idaho's 10th all time leading rusher with 1,494 yards. Red-shirt freshman Eric Thomas at 5-feet-10 inches and 190 pounds could also compete.

Receivers: The Vandals will have a talented group of wide receivers. Leading the way will be 6-foot-2-inch 200 pound junior Kasey Dunn who had 75 receptions last year for over 1,100 yards on route to earning third team All-American honors.

"Kasey is as good as there is," Vandal Head Coach John L. Smith said. "He knows how to get open and catches everything."

Teaming with Dunn will be 5-foot-10-inch 165 pound sophomore Yo Murphy a former USA Today High School All-American.

"Yo is a steady performer and we're counting on him for a lot this year," Smith said.

Rounding out the starting trio will be 5-foot-6-inch 155 pound senior Brandy Harris who saw limited action as a junior. The Vandals often use as many as six receivers and have junior college transfers Chris Taylor at 5-feet-6-inches and 150 pounds, Troy Strange 5-feet-10-inches and 165 pounds, and Everett Wilson 5-feet-10-inches and 170 pounds, to add depth to a strong receiving group.

Quarterback: With All-World Quarterback John Friesz gone to the NFL it's time for the Vandals to unveil their new quarterback Doug Nussmeier. He is 6-foot-4-inch 200 pound red shirt freshman from Lake Oswego, Oregon. Nussmeier earned the job in the spring by completing 65 percent of his passes for 401 yards including four touchdowns and no interceptions.

"Doug is so much more mature than his age," Smith said. "He stayed in Moscow this summer and worked hard and that gives him an edge. He's such a student of the game and we expect him to be an exceptional player."

Backing up Nussmeier will be 6-foot 190 pound senior Steve Nolan, and 6-foot-5-inch 211 pound junior Pat West.

Nolan had an outstanding spring game where he completed 17 of 20 passes for 145 yards and two touchdowns. He has also looked good in fall practice. West, who backed up Friesz last year, is a capable fill-in.

Tight End: At tight end the Vandals return 6-foot-3-inch 230 pound senior starter Scott Dahlquist, who caught 24 passes for 249 yards last year. Dahlquist is also an excellent blocker.

One of Dahlquist's back-ups is 6-foot-3-inch 215 pound junior Andy Betia, who moved over from quarterback. Betia caught one pass last year in limited action. Junior transfer Matt Bona at 6-feet-4-inches and 230 pounds, will also see action in short yardage situations. Having an outstanding camp is 6-foot-2-inch 207 pound, junior college transfer Elia Ala'Ililima Daley. He will be used as a receiver and tight end in the Vandal passing scheme.

"Daley catches everything and is an exceptional player," Smith said.

UI buys Murdoc's

By Sally Gilpin
Arts/Leisure Editor

The building housing Murdoc's, the popular Moscow nightclub, was purchased at the end of last semester by the University of Idaho.

Negotiations between the University and Murdoc's owner John Burns had been going on since early last spring. The deal was finally closed on May 17, and on May 18 Murdoc's served its final drink.

"Two of my partners were ready to retire and did not want to be involved in the business any more," Burns said.

Since then, Burns has purchased The Billiard Den on South Main Street, and along with his new partner, Fred Stackpole, has turned it into "the new and improved Doc's".

Burns sold 20 percent of the business to Stackpole, manager of Murdoc's for two years.

The former pool hall has undergone extensive remodeling over the summer to become Doc's. The black and white modern-styled club has space to seat 300 people, the same amount the old Murdoc's seated, according to Burns. It features a large dance floor, 1000 sq. ft. of mirrors and current top-40 dance music Burns said.

Doc's, unlike Murdoc's can accommodate both 18 to 20 year-olds and those 21 and over. There are two control points: two different stamps are given at the door, one for minors and one for those of legal age; then the stamps are checked at a second control point near the bar. In addition, alcohol will only be allowed in the upper section of the club.

Doc's opened last Friday and will remain open seven days a week until mid-September. At that point the bar will begin its regular hours of 4 p.m. to 2 a.m. Tuesday through Saturday, and start featuring favorite specials like Wild Wednesday and Beer

Smorgasbord, along with a few new ones.

"It's the neatest club I've ever seen," Burns said.

The old Murdoc's property will be used by the University for an additional 60 to 80 blue sticker-access parking spaces, and to house one or more occupants.

Currently there is a large parking lot in front of the building and more spaces will be developed behind the structure, according to Director of Facility Planning Joanne Reese.

There are three potential occupants of the building, Human Resources, Purchasing and the Safety Office. Currently Human Resources and Purchasing share a small wood-structure building next to the College of Mines and Earth Resources. The college is scheduled to expand next summer so space for the two services will need to be found, Reese said.

The Safety Office is now being housed in the Sweet Avenue or Kappa Alpha Theta house. That facility will have to be relocated when the Thetas recolonize.

Reese stated that the project is in the beginning of the programming phase.

"We're working with an architecture firm, Hickman and Associates from Coeur D'Alene, defining how much space we will need and the cost," she said.

The University is pleased with the property.

"It's a good location for public service," Reese said. She added that it also has high visibility and is at a major entrance to the University.

Facility Planning should know within six weeks which services can be accommodated in the Sixth Street Office Building, the unofficial name for the old Murdoc's.

"The building will be occupied after the first of the year," Reese said.

Xenon to open this winter

By SALLY GILPIN
Arts/Leisure Editor

For the past few years the number of nightclubs in Moscow has been dwindling, but the situation may be reversing. A new night club is coming to downtown.

The Xenon club is scheduled to open at the beginning of next semester, according to owner Barry Tassler. The club was originally scheduled to open this semester but construction will take longer than expected because of structural changes needed in order to conform to building codes.

Construction at the David Center location at the corner of Third and Main has been going on since early this summer.

When opened, the club will be one of the largest of its kind in the Northwest, holding an estimated 900 to 1,000 people, Tassler said.

Xenon will accommodate both 18 to 20 year olds and those 21 and over. The club will be two stories, with 18 and over on the bottom floor and 21 and over on the top floor. It will feature a large dance floor and over fifty video screens offering the latest in dance music and videos.

"Once it gets done it will be fairly incredible," said Tassler.

Tassler hopes to bring national talent such as Seduction, Sweet Sensation and The Covergirls to the club to perform. Performing artists Micheal Damian, The Covergirls and Gorgio have performed to sold-out crowds at Tassler's Boise Xenon club. With two clubs Tassler feels he will be able to attract bigger name performers to Idaho.

Construction and building codes are not the only obstacles Tassler has had to face in opening the new club. The Moscow City Council took over three months to approve his request for a beer and wine license. It usually takes about one month to issue a beer and wine license to establishments that are already constructed Moscow City Attorney Will Herrington said. Herrington also said the license had not been issued yet, and will not be issued officially until construction is completed and all building permits have been satisfied.

Genesee has talent for game

By DENA NISHEK and SALLY GILPIN

The stars are out in Genesee. Location scouts for the film A Talent for the Game selected the Palouse town as a setting for its new film because of its baseball field.

Bruce Lawhead, a location scout for Paramount, formerly of Coeur d'Alene, brought film executives to northern Idaho to look at sites around his home town. On a whim they drove through Genesee and fell in love with the ball field.

The construction crew made some alterations and additions in some of the filming sites to achieve the perfect look. A barn had to be built to suit the script and the stands at the field were repainted by Jim Ondrejko and his construction crew. Ondrejko's crew makes landscapes mesh with scripts.

The town of Genesee seems to be thoroughly enjoying their 15 minutes of fame. Townspeople turn out daily to observe the movie-making process and to sometimes provide distractions for crew members waiting for something to happen.

A Talent for the Game stars Lorraine Bracco, Edward James Olmos and Jeff Corbett.

Olmos is known for his roles in Miami Vice and Stand and Deliver. He has worked with director Bob Young on four previous films.

Olmos plays a scout for a major-league baseball team whose career depends on finding a new phenomenal talent for the team. The scout's car breaks down in Genesee where he notices a baseball game at the town ballfield dominated by a country boy with a powerful pitch.

"The story is about the relationship between the scout and the pitcher," according to Unit Publicist Bob Hoffman. The two wrestle with the moral decision to bring the young country innocent into the ruthless team owner's control, Hoffman said.

The film marks the big screen debut of Jeff Corbett, who stars as Sammy, the pitching whiz. Corbett was cast at a New York audition.

Although he had acted in television before, at the time of the audition Corbett was working in a restaurant in Greenwich Village. According to Hoffman, his personal story is very close to the movie's.

Lorraine Bracco plays the female lead in the film. Bracco stars in the soon to be released Good Fellows, a Warner Brothers film, starring Robert DeNiro.

The movie is not based on a true story, but loosely around the biographies of several major league scouts. One book in particular, "Dollar Sign on the Muscle," by Kevin Kerrane, discusses the life of a San Francisco scout and served in part as inspiration for the film.

"The players that he scouted would have made the greatest all-star team in history," Hoffman said. "He mainly scouted on the west coast."

Robert Young directs the film. His previous works include Dominick and Eugene, Extremities and Short Eyes.

The cast and crew will shoot less than one-third of the movie here on the Palouse and in Coeur d'Alene. They spent one week shooting around Coeur d'Alene and will spend two weeks filming in Genesee, Garfield, Pullman and the roads around Moscow. The rest of the film will be shot in southern California.

Several Palouse area residents have been cast as extras in the film. Some small speaking roles were also cast in Coeur d'Alene, Spokane and Seattle. Hoffman was not surprised by the number of people who showed up for the casting calls.

"People are really interested in this movie," Hoffman said. "It's a lot of fun and there is a really a nice crew to work with."

The film will be released in late winter or early spring of 1991, "hopefully around the start of baseball season," Hoffman said.

Jon Bon Jovi's solo fizzles

Review By CHRIS GATEWOOD
Staff Writer

Jon Bon Jovi, the mega-star from New Jersey, has decided to try it on his own with the release of his first solo album Blaze of Glory, the soundtrack to the new movie Young Guns II.

His band's two albums New Jersey and Slippery When Wet have sold more than 23 million albums world-wide.

Bon Jovi's first solo album, produced by Danny Kortchmar, misses the mark by a long shot. Expecting to hear something new and brash, the listener gets to hear the same popish, Top 40 rock that made the group famous with teens.

One thing that tries to save the album is the all-star lineup which accompanies Bon Jovi. Jeff Beck is great on lead guitar, Elton John on piano and back up vocals, John Cougar Mellencamp's band member Kenny Aronoff is on drums and Tom Petty's Heartbreaker

Benmant Tench is on keyboards. Even this line-up isn't enough to save a boring album lacking creativity.

There are three good songs on this album. The lead-off track, "Billy Get Your Gun," has decent lyrics, good rhythm and great piano by Elton John.

"Never Say Die" is also a good basic rock and roll tune with a strong guitar solo from Beck.

"Dyin' Ain't Much of a Livin'" is a pretty ballad with good back up vocals and piano from Elton John.

The rest of the album leaves much to be desired. The tracks "Miracle," "Blaze of Glory," "Blood Money," "Santa Fe" and "Justice in the Barrel of a Gun" all sound as if they came from the same cookie cutter.

The remainder of the album sounds as if it was put together in five minutes over a bottle of Jack Daniel's.

All in all a superstar band can't save bad material. Bon Jovi's attempts at slow melodic tunes are a failure. He should stick to what he knows best: straight forward rock and roll.

SUB Underground offers games, bowling plus more

By JENIFER KOOIMAN
Staff Writer

If you're one of those people who say that there's nothing to do around Moscow, then you haven't been to the SUB Underground.

Around every corner is something different. Among the activities offered in the SUB basement are: bowling lanes, video games, concessions, and a TV and stereo lounge. According to Dean Vetrus, the SUB general manager, there are not only open bowling lanes, but also recreational bowling classes that can be taken on a semester basis. Leagues or clinics can be set up at students' requests.

"The SUB Underground provides services for students who want recreational opportunities," Vetrus said. "Students use it for a break and for relaxation. It is a useful space and students should take advantage of it."

The Stereo Lounge is another area where students can go to relax. The lounge offers a place to sit and study while listening to music. There is a huge collection of records, a smaller collection of cassette tapes, and a limited selection of CDs. The lounge opens on August 27 to students, said Leo Stephens, the game room manager.

The Campus Copy Center is also located in the SUB Underground where students can buy lecture notes, supplementary class materials and copy services.

In the past few years a study area and computer cluster site were also added. The lab and study area have increased the use of the Underground. Stephens said that approximately 100 students per day use the computer lab.

The UI Outdoor Program is also a big part of the SUB Underground. Michael Beiser, assistant coordinator of the Outdoor Program, said that approximately 7,000 students, staff, and faculty use the Outdoor Rental Center every year. The Outdoor Program also offers academic classes and workshops, but the Rental Center is used the most and is financially self-sufficient.

The Outdoor Program is for those who want to learn a skill, join an adventure, challenge themselves, or just relax. The most popular activities offered are rafting and rock climbing trips, but there is something for everyone.

Raft and backpack trips are tentatively set for Labor Day weekend. An annual ski trip in the Canadian Rockies is planned for Thanksgiving vacation, and a possible backpacking trip to Mexico over Christmas break.

Trips are very affordable. Beiser estimated that a one-day rock climbing trip would be $100 in the private sector, while the UI Outdoor Rental Center can offer it for only $6. The Center also just acquired new alpine skis for beginning skiers.

"We should teach safe and responsible outdoor activities in the college setting," Beiser stated. "The students have paid for this service and they should take advantage of it."

Schedules for trips and price lists should be available soon from the Rental Center.

The Underground is open until 1 a.m., two hours later than the rest of the SUB.

So, if you're bored on one of these so-called "lame" Moscow nights, make a trip to the Sub Underground.

Red October hunts for depth

Review by SALLY GILPIN
Arts/Leisure Editor

The United States is faced with a dilemma: either the Soviets may be planning a first strike nuclear attack or a Soviet submarine captain may have turned renegade.

This is the premise of The Hunt for Red October, one of the latest movies from John McTiernan, director of Die Hard.

The question is, does this premise work? The answer, almost.

McTiernan picked a complex book to put on the screen. Tom Clancy's best seller by the same name is a technology-choked, yet gripping thriller. The film's action scenes live up to a Clancy fan's expectations. The scene where CIA analyst Jack Ryan, played nicely by handsome newcomer Alec Baldwin, boards a submarine in the middle of the ocean during a storm is heart-accelerating.

The cast is definitely first-rate. Sean Connery epitomizes Ramius, the Russian captain in charge of the state-of-the-art Red October sub. He even speaks Russian with an authentic-sounding accent.

Supporting cast includes James Earl Jones, Tim Curry, Sam Neil and Scott Glenn. Each actor seems perfectly cast for his role. Neil is especially likable as Ramius' second-in-command who dreams about moving to Montana.

The Hunt for Red October is a professional and glossy adaptation of Clancy's novel; however it does have its shortcomings. One is the characters lack of depth. Ramius and Ryan build a buddy-buddy relationship in a matter of seconds. Are we really supposed to believe that two total strangers from opposite ends of the globe can trust each other completely after just meeting? Also, we want and need to know more about Ramius; the sketchy background given in the movie doesn't allow us to understand his motives.

Although the movie is set in pre-Gorbachev, Cold War 1984, it fails to tap into the viewer's fears of a Soviet first-strike. Perhaps it fails because those fears no longer exist since of Gorbachev and the recent opening of Eastern Europe, but maybe simply because the film was not able to adequately bring those scary thoughts back to the viewer's conscious.

The Hunt for Red October is playing nightly at the Micro Movie House in Moscow.

Networks air new shows

By SALLY GILPIN
Arts/Leisure Editor

The 1990 Fall television season is here, and the networks have filled their schedules with a potpourri of new shows for your viewing pleasure.

This season, shows based on movies seem to be the favorite of the networks. Many of the shows are based on hit comedy films like Uncle Buck and Ferris Bueller.

Law enforcement is another popular subject. Detectives move out of the spotlight and prosecuting attorneys and drug enforcement officers move in.

In addition, shows centered around the family are also a focus of the networks new programming. The typical family this season is not a typical family. In several of the shows it is a single parent family, or older children moving back in with parents.

The Argonaut has put together a guide to some of these new programs. Take a peek and see what looks interesting.

"Baby Talk", Tuesdays on ABC 8:30. Based on the hit movie Look Who's Talking, this half-hour comedy stars Connie Sellecca as Maggie Campbell, a young, single mother trying to raise her baby son, Mickey, while searching for the perfect father. Just like in the movie, the audience gets to share the baby's thoughts. Among Mickey's thoughts -

One More Time relocates in Seattle

By LISA KREPEL
Contributing Writer

After eleven years in Moscow, One More Time-Charlotte's Glamorama moved to Seattle.

Charlotte Buchanan opened the store in 1979 after moving from Boise, where she ran an interior design/plant store.

"I moved to Moscow because I was trying to get smaller after living in the big city," Buchanan said. Buchanan lived in Dallas before her year in Boise.

One More Time was a local favorite because of its unique products including clothing, jewelry, cards and various fun gifts. Funky sunglasses were hot selling items, as well as Far Side t-shirts and mugs. The store also featured the only color photo booth in Moscow.

One More Time provided a gathering place for the more artistically-minded clique of students. Theater participants Robert Morgan and Shelley Watson have both worked at the store in past years.

Holidays sparked the already festive store to become even more vibrant. Costumes and wigs of all sorts were available not only for Halloween, but St. Patrick's Day and other holidays as well.

Mardi Gras was an especially busy time for One More Time. Buchanan, one of the original planners of the event, resigned from the Mardi Gras committee this year and is uncertain about the future of the annual festival.

"I really don't know what will happen to Mardi Gras. Dave (Giese) and I have both resigned, because he's on sabbatical and I'm moving," Buchanan said.

One More Time closed after Moscow Crazy Days, which ended July 20. Buchanan and partner Shanna Nilsson, formerly of Troy, have opened The Glamorama at 3414 Fremont North in Seattle. Like its Moscow predecessor, The Glamorama fea-

"The two things I love the most, grownups try to hide, crying and going to the bathroom."

"Parenthood", Saturdays on NBC 8:00. This slice-of-life half-hour comedy is based on the movie of the same name. The Buckman family goes through the trials and tribulations of raising a child or being one. Ed Begley Jr. (St. Elsewhere), Jayne Atkinson (A Year in the Life), William Windom (Murder She Wrote) and Ken Ober (Remote Control) star in this new show. Ron Howard director of Parenthood, Splash and Night Shift is one of the show's executive producers.

"D.E.A.", Fridays on Fox 9:00. An hour-long drama from writer/producer Richard Diello.

It chronicles the battles waged between the men and women of the Drug Enforcement Agency and the major drug cartels with first-person interviews and documentary footage combined with fiction. The show stars Chris Stanley, Tom Mason, Jenny Gago and David Wohl.

"Four Alarm Family Man", Saturdays on CBS 8:00. Gregory Harrison stars in this half-hour comedy as a widower and fire captain who tries to balance a career and four children.

"Fresh Prince of Bel Air", Mondays on NBC 8:00. A half-hour comedy starring Grammy award winner Will Smith ("Parents Just Don't Understand") as a kid from a tough West Philadelphia neighborhood sent to live with his rich relatives in Bel Air, California. Problems arise when he must learn to adjust to his new environment. Smith, who makes his television debut in the series, performs under the name Fresh Prince. He won a Grammy Award in 1988 and was nominated for another Grammy in 1989.

Also standing in the way of the license is a pending decision on Tassler's appeal of the recommendation for suspension of his beer and wine license for one of his Boise area establishments, The Shark Club. The Idaho Law Enforcement Agency recommended his license be revoked on a charge of allowing lewd dancing. The recommendation is being appealed in the Fourth District Court. If Tassler wins the appeal then the license for the Moscow Xenon's will be one step closer to being official, if he loses the appeal then a decision on the Moscow Xenon's license will have to be made by the city council and Herrington.

"It is possible that it (the license) will not be issued," Herrington stated.

At the time of press, a hearing on the Shark Club license had taken place but a decision has not been made by the judge.

When asked about the Moscow Xenon's license problems Tassler said, "It's secure, it's been taken care of."

The fact that Tassler plans one of the largest nightclubs in the Pacific Northwest worries not only city officials but some downtown residents as well.

Many people are concerned about the parking problems and noise that such a large club could cause.

"I'm concerned about the parking situation but I don't think the noise will be a problem," Jan Cooper, a downtown resident said.

"Parking is probably going to be a problem," Tassler said, but he feels the large number of lots and on-street parking places in the downtown area and the club's proximity to campus will help alleviate the problem.

Arts groups get grants

Eleven arts organizations, schools and community groups recieved a total of $30,778 in grants from the Idaho Commission on the Arts this summer.

The Commission announced its 1991 grants in Nampa early in June. Commission members then traveled to several communities throughout the state to congratulate the grantees and thank Governor Cecil Andrus, Idaho's congressional representatives and state legislators for their support of the arts in Idaho.

"The increased funds from the state legislature and the National Endowment for the Arts have helped us meet essential needs this year," Sylvia Hunt, Chair of the Idaho Commission on the Arts said.

At one of the Commission's regional ceremonies held this summer, Governor Andrus spoke about the importance of art in the state.

"The arts and Idaho artists have a special and distinct role to play in increasing the quality of life of all our citizens. I am committed to making the arts truly available to Idahoans in every corner of our state. These grants greatly further that goal," he said.

The grants are used for various purposes including helping communities upgrade and renovate their arts space.

A total of $447,219 was granted for 179 projects in 59 towns. All funds are matched by local communities.

The groups in Moscow receiving grants were:

- The Prichard Gallery - $10,000 for general support.
- The City of Moscow - $1,200 for Rendezvous in Moscow.
- University of Idaho - $3,000 for the McCall Field Camp.
- Moscow Arts Commission - $2,000 for the Young People's Arts Festival and the Fresh Aire Concerts.
- Washington Idaho Symphony - $5,900 for general support.
- The Palouse Journal - $1,000 to initiate an artist's bulletin board.

■ Festival Dance and Performing Arts - $3,500 and $778 for artists' fees.

■ Latah County Arts and Cultural Committee - $400 for technical assistance in identifying traditional artists for educational activities.

■ Moscow School District's Elementary Arts Committee - $1,000 for the presentation of an in-service class.

■ Moscow High School - $2,000 for an interdisciplinary visual arts program.

The Idaho Commission on the Arts is a state agency dedicated to making the arts available to all citizens in Idaho. The Commission is governed by thirteen private citizens, appointed by the Governor to serve four year terms.

The Commission offers a series of grants, programs and services for individual artists, arts organizations and schools throughout the state. Funds administered by the agency are obtained primarily from the State of Idaho, supplemented by grants from the National Endowment for the Arts and the private sector.

PARKING IN THE WRONG PLACES?

Here are a few tips:

1. Read the regulations! They're available at the Information Center; our telephone number is 885-6424
2. Please DO NOT PARK IN HANDICAPPED SPACES. Not only will you be towed away, but you're putting someone out who may be in need of that space. Park only in designated spaces. Permits will not be required for Red, Blue, Silver, or Green parking lots until September 10th. Ticketing will begin at 7:30 am September 10th. All other regulations remain in effect.
3. Save time and money: plan to park and walk a short (3 block) distance.
4. Use all metered parking only for short trips and if you're unsure about the time, use another lot.
5. Keep permits on the vehicles to which they're registered.
6. Read all signs and regulatory markings.
7. If your car is disabled in a lot, notify the Parking office immediately at 885-6424.
8. You may appeal any UI citation: the time limit is 14 calendar days.
9. If you forget your pool permit you can get a one day permit on an occasional basis, if you know your permit type and bring ID.
10. Motorcycles must park where designated, as shown on the UI Parking Map.
