GPSA, ASUI work on compromise

By ANDREA VOGT
Staff Writer

The ASUI Senate and the Graduate and Professional Students Association met Wednesday night to negotiate the GPSA's request for special status within the ASUI.

GPSA proposes to pull a portion of their money out of the ASUI funds. This controversial movement to branch away from the ASUI began last fall and was officially introduced to the student body in the form of a referendum during last year's ASUI elections.

In the referendum, the GPSA wanted to pull 75 percent of the ASUI fees they pay out of the ASUI. The referendum did not pass at that time.

Since then GPSA and ASUI officers have revised the plan and are negotiating toward an agreement to satisfy both groups.

The proposed plan calls to give GPSE a budget of $25,000 which would come from monies they are currently paying to the ASUI and used by the GPSA. Based on last year's enrollment figures, GPSA members contribute more than $60,000 to the ASUI budget.

The money not used in the GPSA budget will remain in the hands of the ASUI to help pay for selected items such as the Argonaut, Outdoor Programs, and certain administrative costs. GPSA members would no longer help fund some items such as Programs Board and Activities Board, and would therefore be ineligible for benefits from them.

The GPSA's three main budget items are: 1) travel, 2) graduate student enrichment, and 3) executive committee.

A breakdown of where the $25,000 will be used is as follows: $1,000 will be used for attending the National GPSA convention and $14,000 will be used for travel and research grants for UI GPSA members; graduate student enrichment plans $4,000 to be used for department grants, and $2,000 to be used for speakers and seminars; Graduate Student Handbook Development and GPSA Newsletter Production will use $3,000; and the GPSA budgeted $1,000 under executive committees to be available for unexpected needs.

The GPSA would have a board-like status through this compromise, meaning they would have a budget number, access to the ASUI office, and use of the ASUI secretary.

The proposal, however, has some concerned about a possible chain reaction of student groups wanting to do the same.

Brian Oswald, GPSA president, does not feel that would

Kappa Alpha Theta begins recolonization

By MIKE MARKLEY
Associate News Editor

After two years of planning and organization, Alpha Theta sorority is now colonizing on the University of Idaho campus.

At an informational meeting last night over 40 girls signed an interest list to participate in a special rush which will be held in January.

Those interested represent all class levels, most of whom live in the residence halls.

"Kappa Alpha Theta will be looking for a good mix of women from freshman through seniors," Greek Adviser Linda Wilson said, "This will open a lot of doors for women who are a little older and interested in living in a sorority."

The Theta national headquarters has based two chapter consultants in Moscow to oversee the colonization of the Beta Theta Chapter.

According to Kathy Linenberger, a consultant from Kansas State University, the colonization has received strong support from the campus.

"We are very impressed with the high level of spirit of the Panhellenic Council here," Linenberger said. "Such strong support is not common on other campuses."

The consultants arrived on campus in mid-August to participate in women's rush this fall, and get an idea of how rush was coordinated on the UI campus.

"Rush is different on every campus and we wanted to get a feel for what was necessary for our rush efforts in the next year," Linenberger said.

Theta members from the Washington State University campus as well as national officers and members from other chapters from across the nation are expected to participate in the late-January rush.

Once the rush is complete in January, Linenberger will assist the colony to develop its various programs including scholastics, finance systems, community service, and sorority education.

Installation of the chapter is planned for this coming April and the women will be initiated at this time also.

The new members will then move into the Theta house on Sweet Avenue next August to prepare for their first formal rush.

The addition of an eighth sorority on campus will relieve some of the pressure on other sororities.

"The sororities have a lot of pressure now to recruit large pledge classes," said Kirstin Walsh, Panhellenic Rush Chairman.

Having the Theta house participating in formal rush next fall may raise the pledge rate even higher, according to Wilson. This year 97 percent of the women going through rush pledged which is much higher than other campuses.

"Some of the women going through rush this year chose not to pledge," Wilson said. "Having another option could have made the difference for these women."

Bike path to connect UI, mall

By KARA THOMAS
Staff Writer

Plans were started in the fall of 1989 for a bicycle path from Wallace Complex to the Palouse Empire Mall and it was expected to be done by the time students arrived on campus this fall.

However the plans were interrupted by the Department of Public Works who is putting in a water line in the general area of the bike path Phillip Waite from facility planning said. It is unknown how long the project will take.

Instead of both organizations working independently, the DPW and the Department of Facility Planning are now working together to conserve money and benefit more people.

The DPW is doing the ground work and DFP will put the 12-foot wide bike path over the gravel base.

Defunct student group leaves debt with UI

By JILL CHRISTINE BECK
Editor

Two years after the fact, university officials are still in pursuit of a $459.38 debt from a now defunct student group.

Idaho Student Intercollegiate Legislature left behind a $459.38 bill with the University Dining Services from a 1988 spring luncheon. Then spring session coordinator Lisa Krepel arranged the luncheon and is now fighting to remove the bill from her transcript.

According to Krepel, she neither signed anything, nor presented herself as anything more than an agent of ISIL when she set up the luncheon.

The bill was originally sent to her as a contact person for ISIL. According to Krepel she presented the bill to Michael L. Kerner, who was ISIL's governor at the time. Kerner indicated the bill would be taken care of. Krepel received a second and a third notice which she said were also given to Kerner.

Each time she says Kerner indicated that the bill had been taken care of.

Krepel said the bill was transferred onto her transcript in the spring of 1989, at which point she was told she could not register for summer school until it had been taken care of.

"I put (Controller Gerry Reynolds) in touch with Kerner and Lon Jackman (former Lewis Clark State College student body president), whom I thought were in charge of (ISIL)," Krepel said.

At that point, the bill was removed from her transcript and did not return until August of 1990 when she received a letter at her home in Boise from the Controller's office stating since they had not recovered the money from Jackman, they were once again billing her account.

Krepel, who is attending Boise State University this year, does not feel that it is legal to do so, but cannot afford a lawyer to fight the decision.

According to Krepel, Reynolds has refused to release any tran-

Students, faculty unhappy with new parking policy

Analysis by JEFF BEVER

Parking. Upon hearing the word pens drop, heads turn, and people tune in.

Why? Because there isn't any.

According to some people the changes in the parking policy seem to be for the better; however, most students, as well as faculty and staff members are having a hard time seeing the benefits. Above all, it is the students who are the most affected by the new parking restrictions.

The biggest complaint thus far isn't new—it centers around lack of parking available on campus.

"You have to drive around in a circle, and just hope that a spot opens up," said one student.

In addition, students in the Wallace Complex are upset with the changes in parking.

"Look across the street (at the parking lot by the Agriculture Science building, and in front of the Law building). See all of those empty parking spots? We get to look at all those spaces all day because they belong to the faculty. The only parking we get is out in butt—f---g Egypt," said Vic of the Wallace Complex.

The lot was less than half full at 12:30 p.m.

"Dorm people should be able to park their cars here, especially when their home is here for nine months out of the year," a student said.

Also affected by the changes in parking is the commuter student who has no means of securing a parking spot and as a result must rely on luck or getting to campus early.

"If I want a spot to park I have to come an hour before school even starts," said a student from Pullman.

Red parking permits are intended as commuter parking permits, but on-campus students also may purchase them.

Furthermore, university workers are unhappy with the new parking arrangements.

"We were prepared to pay double, (for the permit) but not four times the price," a staff member in the Agriculture Science Building said.

The lot by the Agriculture Science building has been changed from red permit parking, which was $30 last year, to gold permit parking, which costs $120 this year.

This isn't the only problem facing faculty and staff.

According to one staff member, "they're asking people who

Student group to present parking concerns effectively

By JILL CHRISTINE BECK
Editor

In response to the new parking policy, ASUI officials announced the formation of a parking committee and a parking forum to help students express their concerns to the administration.

Formation of a student counter-proposal to the administration's new parking policy is the goal of an ad-hoc committee on parking being formed by the ASUI.

ASUI Vice President Mike Gotch will chair the committee which intends to look at students' concerns over the parking policy, and come up with recommendations for improvements.

According to ASUI President David Pena, the students will be more effectively heard if they present their opinions on the matter collectively instead of individually.

The committee is open to interested students, the first meeting will be announced at a later date.

Also planned is a parking forum which will be held Sept. 18 at 7 p.m. in the Borah Theater of the SUB.

The forum was arranged by Gotch to provide students with a chance to voice their concerns directly to the administrators responsible for forming parking policy.

Financial Vice President Jerry Wallace and others involved with parking policy will be present at the forum to present the reasoning behind the current parking system and explain plans for the future. After the presentation, students will be able to ask questions or make statements.

Gotch feels that the role the parking committee will eventually have is contingent upon the administration's reaction to the parking forum.

For more information on either the committee or the forum students should contact Gotch at the ASUI office.

Other action being taken to voice student concern about parking will come in the form of a letter written jointly by the leaders of the Residence Hall Association, Interfraternity Council, Panhellenic Council and Vice President Gotch. The letter will be sent to the administration asking for certain changes to be made in the parking plan, including the return of some gold lots to red permit areas.

Ticketing for permit violation begins Monday morning according to Tom Lapointe, coordinator for parking.

Ticketing in red and blue permit lots had been suspended while officials made changes in lot designations, but according to Lapointe all university parking rules will be enforced beginning Monday morning at 7:30 a.m. Several changes have been made to the parking system on campus including the redesignation of several red permit lots to gold and the addition of silver permits for the residence halls.

Permit violations receive a $10 ticket.

UI students parked free before '77

By RACHEL MILLER

Remember bell-bottom pants? How about the Bee Gees and Star Wars? Remember when parking on campus was free? The year was 1977, the year free parking ended.

On one cold New Years Day in 1977 the new Campus Traffic and Parking Regulations went into effect to raise revenue for the maintenance of lots and academic programs.

For the spring semester only faculty and Greek residents were required to purchase permits for their vehicles. Dormitory residents had one more semester of free parking in accordance with the free parking clause in the housing agreements.

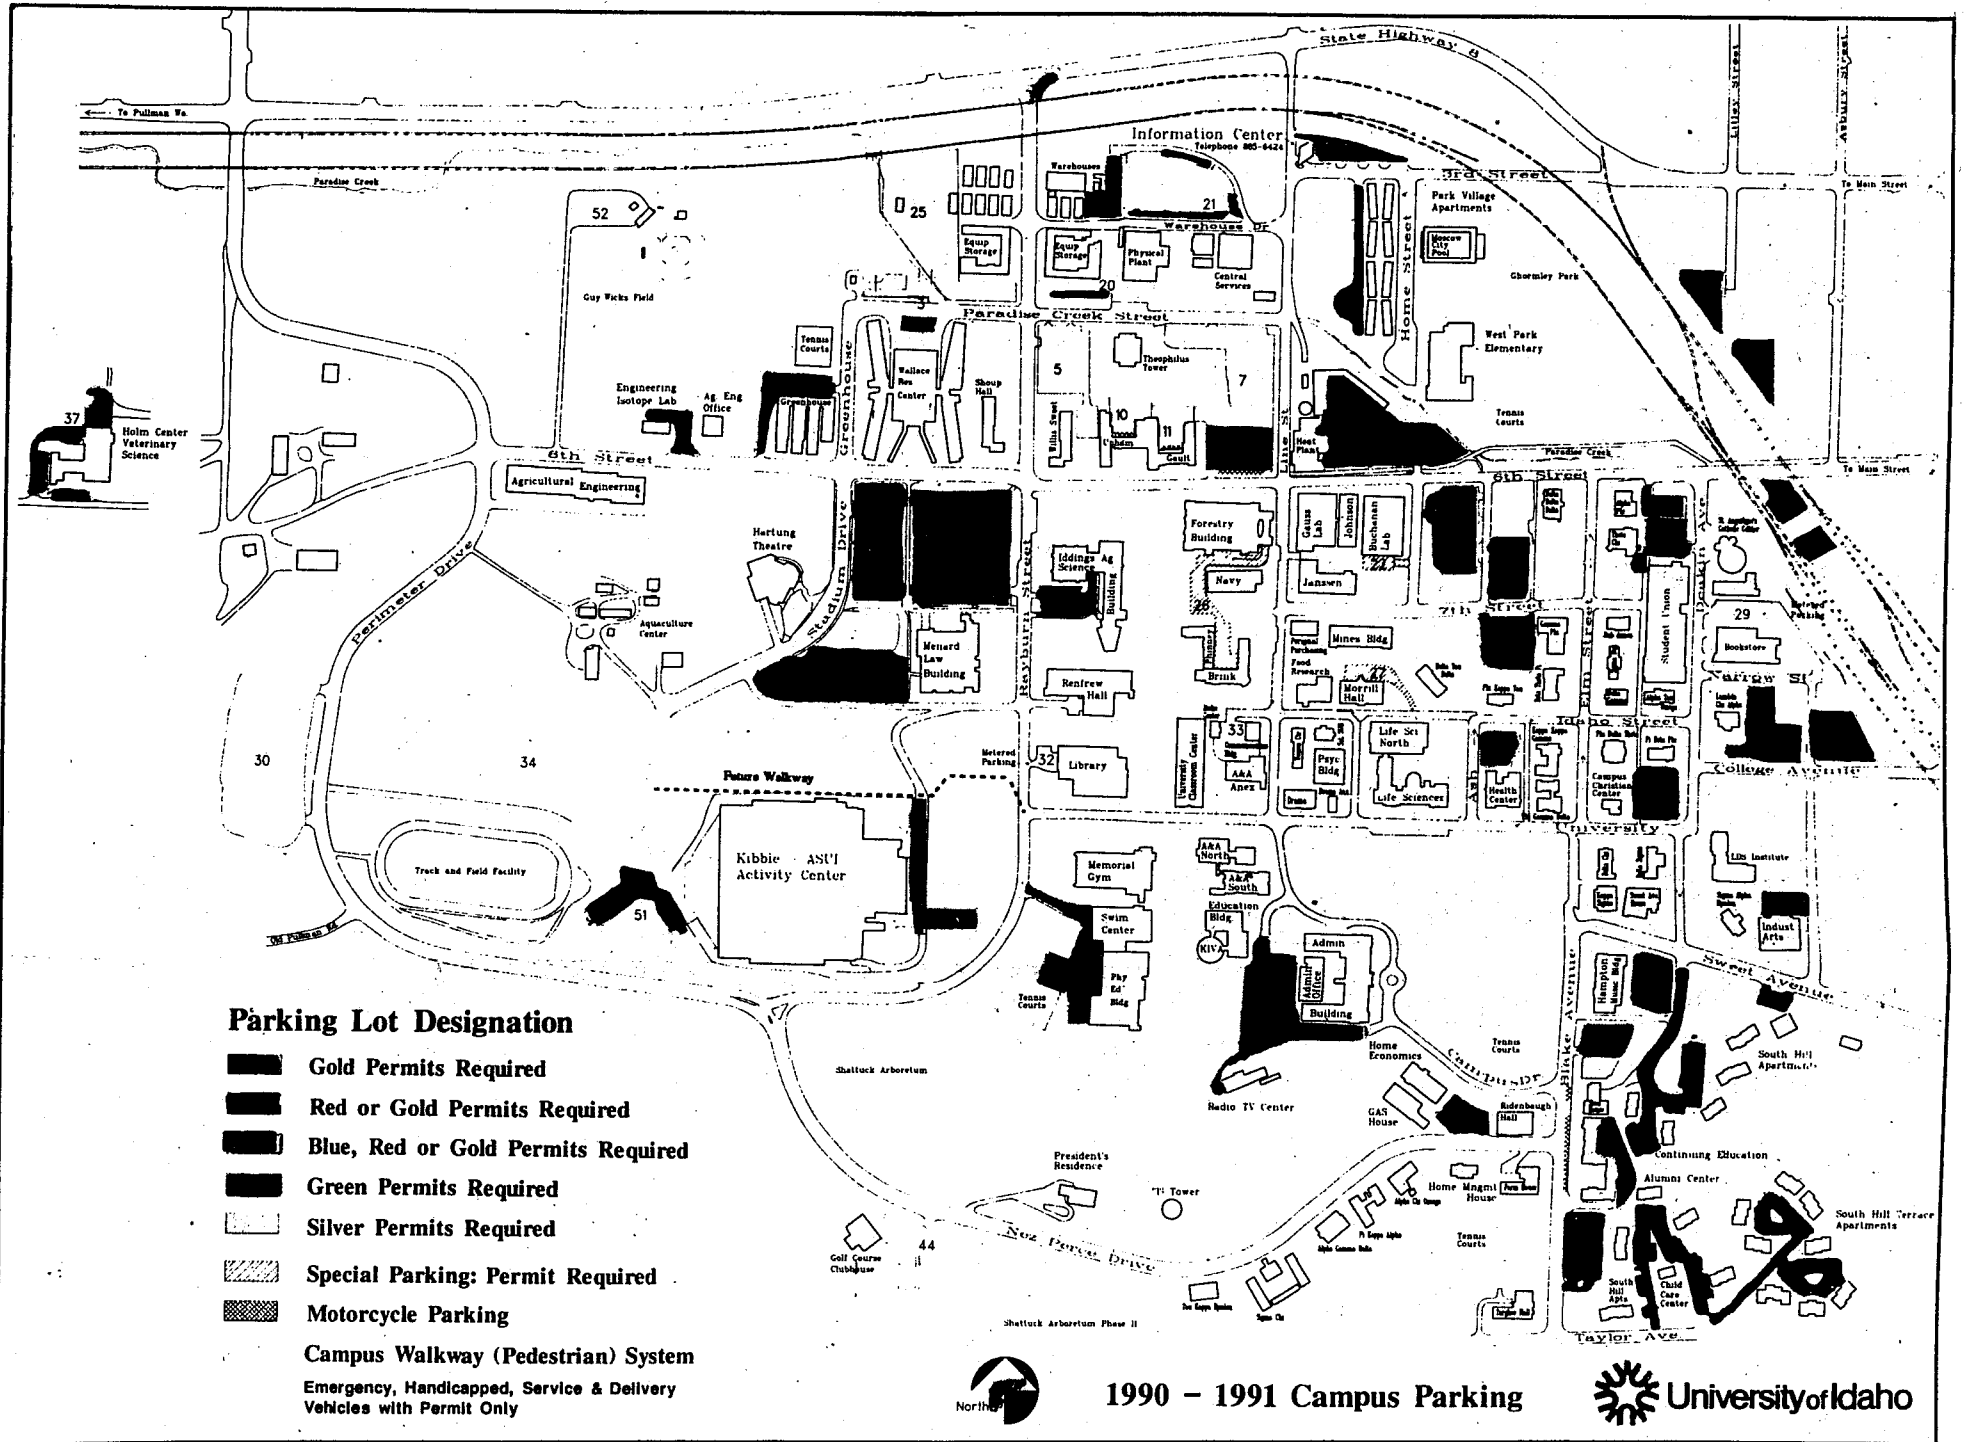

When students registered for spring in of 1977 they and the faculty members had the options of buying the yellow or blue permits. Yellow lots were located in core areas of campus and were $30. In addition holders could also park in designated blue areas. Blue lots were located by the dorms and cost $10.

In the fall of 1985 faculty and staff members were given exclusive parking rights to eight gold permit lots at the price of $60.

Remaining yellow lots were changed to red lots. Parking in the red lots totaled about 700 spaces and were available to stu-

Senate uninformed in decision making

Senate is in session and it's worse than anyone expected.

With the resignation of two senators over the summer, and the continued absenteeism of Sen. Doug Korn who can't decide if he's really ready to resign or not, we are left with a group of rookies in office.

Seven of the 10 senators present at Wednesday night's meeting are new to the office. Only one had any experience in dealing with the ASUI prior to his election; he is also the only one that is an undergraduate student.

Unfortunately the results of this inexperienced group will be felt for a long time to come.

Their decision to add two "media professionals" to the Communications Board was uninformed, hasty and obviously not well thought out or researched.

These senators chose to ignore a do-not-pass recommendation from the Ways and Means committee and despite their ignorance of the most basic concepts in the ASUI, passed the bill without ever having spoken to a member of the Communications Board or any of the communications department heads.

Without any prior investigation into the matter they debated the bill based on whatever happened to pop into their heads.

Even Pena, the author of the bill, failed to consult anyone on the matter—except maybe his all-too-often bowed to administration.

And while the official intent of the bill is to provide advice to the Comm Board, one cannot ignore the fact that the senate voted for the proposal to push an advisory group onto the ASUI media.

Apparently Sen. Brent King voted for the bill because he wants to see something done about the music being played on KUOI. If Mr. King doesn't like what he sees in the Argonaut, will he want the Comm Board to take care of that too?

And what of the fact that a lot of the "media professionals" in this area just happen to work for the Argonaut's competition? Does the senate think that if Idahoian editor Jay Shelly were a part of the Comm Board he would be concerned with student well-fare?

The fact is that David Pena is slowly handing away students' rights and the new senate is either too clueless to know it or they just don't care.

The senate should reconsider this bill. And this time, and on future bills, they need to put forth an effort to gather more information or at least be willing to listen to those who have.

ISP, Boise MADD chapter tramples motorists rights

I have to extend a royal sneer to the Ada County chapter of MADD. For they have achieved the honor of being the latest group of self-righteous people to trample on our liberties...and while I am handing out honors I shall not forget the Idaho State Police, for they are involved in the most practical applications of trampling rights.

My honors ceremony results from the donation of 36 video surveillance cameras to the ISP, which the Mothers Against Drunk Driving program received in Boise. The Aetna Insurance on the fringe.

It was always the standard test of get out of the car, standing on one foot tricks, and your memory of the alphabet backwards...Oh, yeah, and once I was asked to walk a straight line, and I did! Who invented the unreliable tests as a measure for drunk driving? Probably the same person pushing the record button on the big camera scheme, but who knows?

So from now on when ever I get pulled over I probably will get to do all those tricks again, only this time I get to see the replay later in court. I wonder if you win your case if they give you a copy of your routine...maybe. Also, be careful what you say because ISP is allowing the officers to secretly record your conversation to see if you were casting any subliminal messages to the officer. Mine would be "Go away, leave me alone."

I think that one possible solution to this invasion would be for citizens to carry hidden cameras and microphones of their own. Idaho does have the neatly packaged one party consent law...so it would be legal. Just ask MADD or the ISP, they know it is, as Betty Stadler, MADD chapter president was saying, "We've seen guilty pleas increase dramatically in cases where video evidence is available."

Sixty-five people died in Idaho last year, nine in North Idaho. Is such a figure really a base to start an operation that stretches the liberties of freedoms of individuals who may have committed no such crime? Even if the person is not cited on a drinking offense, it is a violation for a person to be recorded or taped without their approval...given the state of Idaho's one-party law or not. Just keep your eyes open is my only sound advice, and remember what can help you always can turn against you...By the way where is my MADD fundraising ball tickets, I was really looking forward to it...

Mark Milam
Commentary

Company is the supplier of all these wonderful toys, so there was one award forgotten, but they will probably get their rewards with some increased insurance premiums.

The cameras, five of which are to be roaming North Idaho, were turned over to the ISP under the "Eye on DUI" program in order to increase the guilty verdict. Someone must have gotten upset that so much tax time and money was being wasted on prosecuting alleged drunks, with very few standing convictions. They needed a way to lock in a quick, effortless guilty plea. It saves money, it earns money, and it puts that horrible, wretched driver off the street.

Who cares about the notion of innocent until proven guilty? I cannot recall the number of times that I have been pulled over on the highway, late at night, tired and frustrated, and asked if I had been drinking. Most of the times the simple answer of "No, I have not," just did not satisfy the ISP officer with a big flashlight in my eyes and a turbo-charged squad car blinking like a carnival ride

Dome viewing inadequate for fans in wheelchairs

Editor:

The time has come to make viewing of football games in the Kibbie Dome possible by disabled persons using wheelchairs. While I am not a disabled person, and do not propose to speak for them, I often accompany my friend, who is a disabled person, to football and basketball games. My observations and suggestions arise from the experiences we have had in attending games at the dome.

Access to the dome is somewhat hampered by lack of sufficient disabled designated parking spaces close to the dome. Officials are apparently temporarily increasing the number of such spaces at game time, but there needs to be even more. Beyond that, actually getting in the dome and freely moving about does not seem to be much of a problem.

Kibbie Dome officials should be applauded for providing a good viewing area during basketball games. This area is behind the team benches with access through the east end. Viewing is somewhat impeded when the teams stand up, but this does not appear to be a big problem.

At the top of the seating on the north and south sides of the dome, are alcove-like platforms where disabled persons using wheelchairs can wheel themselves in and view football games.

Unfortunately, when people in the top three rows stand up, the disabled people can no longer see what is happening on the field. Asking these people to not stand up doesn't do any good. I do not believe these people wish to be rude; people simply stand up at football games, if for no other reason than to see over the top of those standing up in front of them.

One solution is to remove the top three rows of benches in front of one of the disabled designated areas. Unfortunately, this would remove a large amount of prime seating. A better solution is to build a platform in the disabled designated area that would allow disabled persons and their friends and attendants to see over those people standing up in the top three rows. Only one such platform, if sufficiently large, would be needed for the entire dome.

The ASUI could provide some of the materials, and the UI Physical Plant could provide additional materials and the design work. The labor could be provided by a service organization, Greek organization or residence hall looking for a public service project. Interested parties could coordinate their efforts with the local Stepping Stones organization.

Do we, the patrons of the Pullman School District, want to pay for a 20-year bond issue to purchase Meadows property with several active springs on it? The water from these springs, with additional cost of tilling it out, could eventually cause any building foundation to become unstable.

If the administration and the board insist upon building a new school, shouldn't we utilize the are making $20,000 a year to pay the same as people who are making close to $60,000."

Another parking problem concerns research assistants who often start work early and get off late.

"What about their security?" said Jan, a staff member. "They are going to have to walk late at night to their cars, which are who knows where."

Like the students, faculty and staff members feel their views were not taken into consideration when the plan was created.

"It (the parking plan) was a very poor design," said Tim Johnson, "But the worst part is that there is no response to student input."

Perhaps it is this lack of response that frustrated students experience the most.

"There were six meetings held on the parking issue with the county, police, et cetera, yet in those six meetings only one was held for the staff," a staff member commented.

"I just won't pay for the parking spots. I'd rather walk than pay the outrageous price," said a secretary in the Agriculture Science building.

The Greeks are far from exempt to the problem of parking. Just walking down Elm Street and Nez Perce Drive gives an idea of the huge problem. Cars are lined end to end all along the roads. Parking lots on the west side of campus are limited.

"It's really sad when you have to plan where you're going to take your car on the basis of that parking spot not being there when you get back," said Mindy, a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma. "I won't take my car out unless I have to because that parking spot won't be there when I get back."

The members of Alpha Phi are discouraged by the division of the parking at the SUB which contains some red spaces and some blue spaces.

"I have a red parking permit, yet the parking behind the SUB is divided. So I either park in the first two rows or I park further out," said Alpha Phi member Marnae.

Parking affects other aspects of the Greek system as well.

"Security has been a possible problem," said Kristal. "Some of the girls may be put in the position of walking long distances alone."

"I just took my car home," said one student, "because even if I spend the money on a parking spot it's still not guaranteed."

"It just doesn't make sense," a student said.

It's not difficult to start recycling

By STEPHANIE BAILEY
News Editor

Ninety-three percent of college-educated Americans under age 35 believe that the environment is one of the top three or four issues facing the country today, according to a recent Environment Opinion Study. Although the majority of students are concerned about the environment, the number of people that are actually doing anything about it is considerably less.

The study listed steps such as recycling, cutting back on air conditioning and driving, buying less-toxic cleaning materials and buying from companies with good environmental records. Recycling was the most popular with those surveyed. Fifty-three percent of the people surveyed were already recycling cans and bottles and 33 percent more were willing to recycle if they had more information.

The easiest way to start a recycling program is to begin where you live. Many on-campus living groups already have recycling programs and more are starting this semester. Many apartment managers in the Moscow area were contacted this summer by volunteers from the Palouse Clearwater Environmental Institute (PCEI) and asked to place bins for glass and aluminum by their garbage dumpsters. Some apartment managers were willing to donate bins but are looking for volunteers to take the recyclables to the Recycling Center. If you are interested or want more information talk to your landlord or call the PCEI.

ENVIRONMENTAL IMPACT

If your living group does not have a recycling program it's easiest to ask for a volunteer to coordinate efforts. The volunteer needs to find an out-of-the-way space to store quantities of recyclables and get some sturdy boxes for the different items (aluminum, glass, newspapers, cardboard) you want to recycle. You'll also need a volunteer with a vehicle to help haul all the stuff you collect to the Recycling Center.

Freshman Dean Sylvester of the Lambda Chi fraternity has the "High Granola" office, as they call it. He started their recycling program by painting nine boxes he got from the liquor store black, labeling them, lining them with plastic and placing them throughout the house. The fraternity's national organization encouraged them to start recycling and they plan on using the money they make in a "constructive" way.

The Moscow Recycling Center, located at 245 Jackson, started accepting PET plastic this week. Two liter pop bottles, Gatorade bottles, some peanut-butter jars and liquor bottles are all made with PET plastic. Americans throw away 2.5 million plastic bottles every hour.

Whether the path will be lit right away or not is questionable because the outdoor lighting budget is gone. If funds can be found elsewhere the path will be lit at the time it is put in.

Since less money will be spent for preparatory work, the path will probably be lengthened to connect with the Ghormley Park bike path.

Non-students allowed on comm-board

By ANDREA VOGT

The ASUI Senate passed a bill last Wednesday allowing the appointment of two media professionals to the ASUI Communications Board.

According to the bill, written by ASUI President David Pena, the intent is to provide a resource of professional opinion to assist the Communications Board in the administration of its duties.

The Communications Board appoints the ASUI media editors and managers and is the deciding body when controversy arises. The bill was submitted in response to the drinking incident at KUOI over the summer.

"My guess is that the administration took some heat over the KUOI issue, and put the pressure on Pena to allow paid advisers to come into the organization," said Sen. Bill Heffner, who voted against the bill, "This is a student organization, and should remain that way. We have communications students with the expertise necessary, why not use them instead of paid professionals who are not students?"

The two members of the professional community, (one from radio broadcasting and one from journalism,) will be non-voting members of the board.

According to Pena, the professionals are to be used as resources, for advice only, and will not have any editorial control.

"There is no way they could censor, they are non-voting members, and the appointment limit of one year kills any chance of editorial control," Pena said.

KUOI station Manager Brent Anyan believes that even though the professionals will have no direct editorial control, their influence on the other members could affect decisions reached by the Communications Board.

"It is a Communications Board for students, not for professionals who want to push their opinions on students," Anyan said. "I just don't see any positive things coming from it."

These professionals are also intended to help administer, and give suggestions about how certain situations should be handled. However, according to the ASUI Rules and Regulations; "All official student communications media shall have the right to establish and maintain internal control of operation and content, free from prior censorship or prior restraint."

Sen. Brent King, who voted for the bill, has faith that this move will benefit the students.

"I think it's naive of students who are not professionals to completely run the organization," King said. "It can't hurt anyone to have more resources."

The bill was given a do-not-pass recommendation by the Ways and Means committee. The three members of that committee, Sens. Heffner, Julie McCoy and Amy Anderson, were the only three to vote against the bill in full session.

script so that she would be able to register at BSU for this semester, but Reynolds had refused.

Reynolds was unavailable to comment on the situation.

In addition to the UDS bill, the Crystal Ballroom in Boise also has an outstanding bill in ISIL's name. ISIL held a luncheon at the Crystal Ballroom and left a $525 bill, which has now accumulated $118.18 worth of interest charges.

The Crystal Ballroom originally tried to collect the money from Kerner, who has graduated and no longer lives in Moscow.

According to Kerner he had been in touch with Pitman who assured him that the situation had been taken care of.

"Bruce Pitman called me and personally assured me that this whole thing was over," Kerner said.

Pitman, however, said he has not been in contact with Kerner since his graduation in May 1989 except for a letter he sent to the former ISIL governor about the Crystal Ballroom bill.

"I gave up on Mike (Kerner)," Pitman said.

"My roll (in the ISIL bill's) has simply been to find out who is responsible and encourage those parties to take responsibility," Pitman said.

Pitman has brought the bills to the attention of the ASUI, however it is not clear what relationship ISIL had with the ASUI.

ASUI President David Pena referred the Crystal Ballroom bill to Senate Pro Tempore Bill Heffner, asking for the senate's position on the situation. Heffner said that unless a relationship between the ASUI and ISIL can be shown, he personally would not support paying for the bills.

According to Kerner, at the time he was contacted by the Crystal Ballroom, he got in touch with LCSC student officials whom he thought had the records. They indicated to him the records had been left in the ASUI office of the SUB.

But ASUI officials have not seen the records. Among the records were bank statements, bills and the group's checkbook.

Kerner said that if he had access to the records he could work on clearing up the bills.

"GPSA is not like any other group," Sen. Brent King said Wednesday night. King, as a law student, is considered a professional student and is therefore a member of the GPSA.

"Greeks get together for one reason, you live in the dorms for another reason," King said. "The reason for our organization is career development, and our approach to education and needs are different from the undergraduate program."

The GPSA represents approximately 13.75 percent of the total university enrollment.

Despite the obvious problems arising from this desire for partial separation, Oswald feels things are going fairly well.

The UI Student Leadership Program

Applications are being accepted for students interested in an eight week interdisciplinary program designed to help them be more effective in their academic career and personal lives.

The fall semester program begins with an hour and half orientation on September 12. An outdoor teambuilding retreat will be held on September 15 followed by weekly hour and a half sessions for seven additional weeks.

Participants will be challenged in setting goals for personal leadership development and creating an action plan to meet these goals.

Course topics include conflict management, leadership styles, communication skills, ethic issues, and risk-taking. Class activity will involve taking personal assessments designed to help each student learn about themselves and interact more effectively with others.

Enrollment is limited. For further information and application materials, contact the University Program Coordinator in the SUB. Call 885-6952.

ATHLETE AND STUDENT After walking-on in 1986, Roger Cecil has proven that a player can be a great athlete and a great student at the same time. Cecil has 210 career tackles to go along with his 3.0 grade point average in engineering. (BRIAN JOHNSON PHOTO)

Cecil leads Idaho

Linebacker finds abundant success after walking-on

By TOM BITHELL
Staff Writer

He came to the University of Idaho as a walk-on. Like others, he too had a dream to make it, but unlike most, he did make it, and in a big way.

Roger Cecil proved that, going from a walk-on to an All-conference linebacker, you can accomplish your dreams.

"He's proved that the recruiting process is imperfect," Idaho head coach John L. Smith said.

Cecil came to Idaho in 1986 from Fife High School in Tacoma, WA., where he lettered in football, track, and basketball. As a senior he was an All-League linebacker and running back, averaging 10.1 yards per carry. But, even more outstanding, he carried a 3.5 grade point average through the graduation line.

Despite his athletic achievements and exceptional academic standing, Cecil did not have many college scouts come calling. After having problems with a scholarship from Colorado State University, Cecil decided to walk-on at the UI. At the time, Idaho had a good football program, but just as importantly, it had a good engineering program.

Cecil paid his tuition that fall and was redshirted for the season under then head-coach Keith Gilbertson. He sat on the sidelines at the home games, watching the Vandals finish 8-3 and second place in the Big Sky, waiting his turn for a chance to play.

The next year, in 1987, Cecil earned a scholarship and a starting spot for the last eight games of his freshman season. He finished the year with 53 tackles, including a career high performance against Montana State University where he made 15 tackles.

In his following sophomore and junior seasons Cecil was a full-time starter as a Vandal linebacker. In 1988 he finished the season as the team's fifth leading tackler with 75 tackles. In 1989, Cecil led the team in tackles with 82. In his season high, against the University of Montana on an ESPN nationally broadcast game, Cecil had two sacks, one tackle for a loss, and 11 total tackles. The performance earned him the Big Sky Defensive Player of the Week.

Following the '89 season, Cecil was chosen by the league's coaches as a first-team All-Big Sky defensive player.

Idaho tries for success in Texas

By CHRISTOPHER GATEWOOD
Staff Writer

A funny thing happened in the Kibbie Dome last Saturday. The Vandals lost a home game to a Big Sky opponent. The Vandals' 27-24 loss snapped their 15-game conference winning streak which started on October 1, 1988 in a 31-20 win over Northern Arizona.

The Vandals travel to San Marcos, Texas this week where they will take on the Southwest Texas State Bobcats at 5:00 pm Pacific time. The Bobcats, who play in the Southland Conference, won their opener with a 15-7 win over Division II Texas A&I. This will be the first ever meeting between the Bobcats and the Vandals.

If the Vandals expect to win this week they are going to have to improve in many areas, starting with the offensive line, which was absolutely manhandled by the Montana State defensive line. The line gave up eight sacks as

Vandal quarterback will continue tradition

By MATT LAWSON
Sports Editor

The Idaho Vandal football team takes pride in the fact that they are considered by many as the team of the 1980s in the Big Sky Conference. With a 46-13 conference record since 1982, Idaho has no problem defending their claim to fame.

What was the Vandal's secret to success? Most people would look at coaching, like in any other sport, before anything else. Idaho definitely had excellent coaches throughout the eighties including Dennis Erickson and Keith Gilbertson. Erickson had a 32-15 record at Idaho which helped in his quick road to a national title at the University of Miami. Gilbertson led the Vandals to two Big Sky titles in three years while compiling a 28-9 record. He moved on to the University of Washington as the offensive line coach and handed current coach John L. Smith the reigns. Smith took his chance and ran with it while going undefeated in the conference last year to win a third-straight title for Idaho.

The great coaches were here in the eighties, but yet another question comes to mind. Can a great coach win without great players? He may win his share of games, but he won't win 69 games and four Big Sky Conference titles. The Idaho football program was blessed with a lot of great players throughout the eighties, but none were more recognized and left more of an impression than the quarterbacks.

Everyone on this campus remembers John Friesz, but let's dig further into the Vandal record books.

At the beginning of the decade an unknown from Kamiah came to the University of Idaho. At that time no one knew that Ken Hobart would lead the Vandals into a decade that will not soon be forgotten.

Idaho did not win a Big Sky title under Hobart, but his accomplishments were outstanding. If it were not for a guy named Friesz, Hobart would still hold numerous Vandal records.

Hobart still holds records for most touchdown passes (79), touchdown passes in a game (6), along with attempts, completions and yards in a game.

Hobart's most memorable game was during his senior year against Southern Colorado in 1983. On that day he completed 37 passes for 527 yards and six touchdowns.

After leaving Idaho, Hobart journeyed through the USFL and the CFL before finally returning to his home of Kamiah.

After Hobart left, Vandals fans thought that the team could never replace him. Scott Linehan stepped in to let Idaho boosters breathe a little easier.

Linehan had joined the team in 1982, but redshirted during the 1983 season in Hobart's senior year.

Linehan came back in 1984 to lead the Vandals to an average 6-5 record before things really started to role for Idaho football.

In 1985, Linehan led Idaho to 9-3 record and their first of four conference titles in the decade. That season ended on a freak scoring play by Eastern Washington in a Vandal loss in the I-AA playoffs.

Dennis Erickson then left for Wyoming in 1986 and Idaho went 8-4, finishing third in the conference.

Linehan ranks third behind Friesz and Hobart in career attempts (947), completions (549) and yards (7,018). The highlight of his career was in a 46-7 win over Mankato State during the 1985 season. Linehan completed 24 of 29 passes for 403 yards and four touchdowns.

Linehan signed a 1987 free-agent contract with the Dallas

Cowboys, but failed to make the team and has coached the receivers at Idaho for the last two years.

John Friesz had no problem filling Linehan's shoes as he began his quest to rewrite the Idaho record books when he started his sophomore year in 1987.

Friesz didn't face as many question marks as Linehan had in replacing Hobart. He had an excellent arm and his offensive lines would go down as some of the best in Idaho history.

Friesz stepped right into the high powered offense developed by Erickson and Idaho statisticians knew they would have to start digging out the old record books that were closed when Hobart left in 1983.

In Friesz's first year Idaho won their second Big Sky title in three years and it was just the start of things to come.

During Friesz's junior year the Vandal team could honestly be considered the best team to step on the field for the University of Idaho.

Idaho went 11-2 and won their second consecutive Big Sky Crown. Idaho also collected two I-AA playoff victories before finally falling in the semi-finals to eventual champion Furman. This was Idaho's best finish ever in the playoffs and if not for a Friesz injury Idaho could possibly have gone all the way to capture their first national title.

During Friesz's senior year last season the Vandals again dominated the Big Sky in going undefeated in the conference for the first time in Idaho history.

Friesz took his three championship rings to San Diego after the Chargers drafted him last spring but left a lot of records behind.

Friesz not only stuffed the Vandal trophy case with championship plaques, but put the record book people back to work.

Friesz left Idaho leading in career completions (801), attempts (1,350) and yards (10,697). He won the Walter Payton Player of the Year award for all of college football to go along with his I-AA player of the year award.

But like Hobart and Linehan before him, Friesz is now gone, leaving the cold winters of Moscow for the beaches of San Diego.

Let's put John Friesz in the back of our minds, not to forget about him, but to think about the new kid in the Vandal backfield wearing number 13.

His name is Doug Nussmeier and if you didn't see his Vandal debut then I should tell you this guy is for real.

Avoiding tremendous pressure all day from the Bobcat defense, Nussmeier threw for 313 yards on 20 of 32 passing along with three touchdowns.

After scrambling for his first first down as a Vandal and showing emotion that "that quarterback from last year" never showed, I knew then that he was a definite leader.

He could be criticized for his inability to get rid of the ball before the pressure got to him but that will come with experience. Last time I checked the roster it still said freshman next to his name and that should not be forgotten.

By the end of the year opposing defenses will soon forget Doug Nussmeier is a freshman and will begin wishing he is a senior.

The Vandals don't look like favorites to win the Big Sky after their difficult loss to Montana State, but before Doug Nussmeier is through playing at the University of Idaho that once taken-for-granted Big Sky Championship trophy will find its way back to the Kibbie Dome.

Volleyball team on the road

By JOE MALLET
Staff Writer

The University of Idaho Women's volleyball team continues their eight game string of away matches as they travel south this weekend to take on three Texas schools. Friday, September 7, the Vandals compete in their fourth match of the year against the University of Texas at Arlington. Saturday they continue with a match against Texas A&M, and Sunday they finish off their road trip against the University of North Texas.

The Vandals make this trip in the wake of a shutout at their season opener Gonzaga tournament that leaves their record at 0-3. A lot is expected of true freshman Jessica Puckett who missed the first three matches due to a shoulder injury. Puckett is expected to play this weekend and may possibly start. Head coach Tom Hilbert hopes this will lend some power and control to the verdant, yet talented Vandal team.

Next weekend the Vandals have away matches at Montana State and Montana on Sept. 14 and 15. These will be the first matches in Big Sky play for the Vandals and the last away games before they return to Memorial Gym for their first home game on Sept. 18, against Lewis Clark State.

Idaho has announced that Taco Time will sponsor a drawing at every home game for a semester's tuition. All full-time students will be included in the drawing.

Heading into the 1990 season, Cecil has been tabbed again as an All-Conference player by a variety of football publications, including Street and Smith's and The Sporting News. Smith agrees with their choice.

"I would think Roger would be our production leader again this year," Smith said. "He's one of those guys you try to get on the field everywhere you can."

That's a lot of pressure, everyone expecting big things out of you, but Cecil doesn't seem too affected by it.

"It's a pretty small town and nobody really knows about that (being All-Conference)," Cecil said. "The pressure is just that there's more urgency to win this year than there has been. I feel pressured to play because obviously there's a guy behind me that wants to play too."

Still, Cecil admits there is a little pressure to play because of his reputation, but not too much.

Mostly it's for the team.

"A lot of times you play for yourself and your teammates," he said. "We have a real close bunch."

And the team has to be close. They practice, travel and eat together a big part of the school year. There isn't much time to be alone, especially before a game.

"The only time really you have to yourself is maybe the Friday night before, and a few minutes before the game. That's when I spend most of my time praying and maybe talking to my other teammates about the game," Cecil said.

This season Cecil was chosen by his teammates as one of the team-captains. This places great leadership responsibility on Cecil.

"I think we expect him to do more because he is a senior and a captain," Smith said.

Cecil sees it the same way.

"Those other guys aren't going to take charge, you kind of have to do it yourself," Cecil said.

With all his achievements on the field, it's easy to overlook some great ones he has made off the field, like his 3.0 g.p.a. in civil engineering. In college athletics performance on the field almost always outshines performance in the classroom.

"One of the first things is he's a great student," Smith said. "And, he's not in what you'd call a mickey mouse major. Because he is this smart we're able to do a lot of things with him"

Cecil plans on finishing his degree regardless of how his football fortunes turnout. He figures on graduating in May of '92.

"Next year if I get a chance to play after college, I'll jump on that. But, if I don't get any contracts or anything I'm thinking about maybe going to Navy flight-school and going into the Navy. They have a pretty good program for engineers," Cecil said.

No matter what happens after school, Roger Cecil has shown that dreams can come true.

Keller decides to stay at UI

By TOM BITHELL
Staff Writer

Mike Keller, University of Idaho mens track coach, announced yesterday that he was withdrawing his name from consideration for the job at the University of Miami.

Keller, who has been at Idaho for 17-years, said the Miami offer was about $10,000 short of what he wanted. In addition, the Miami program has even fewer scholarships than UI and is no more fully-funded.

Keller had been talking with Miami officials for several weeks trying to work out a deal. Apparently, though, Keller wanted a very lucrative deal in order to leave UI, where he can retire in about five years.

Keller's teams have won two outdoor and one indoor Big Sky Conference titles during his reign.

quarterback Doug Nussmeier was running for his life all day.

"As far as pressure goes we didn't pick up the things we should have," said Vandal head coach John L. Smith. "We weren't getting the calls on the line communicated."

The run blocking wasn't exactly dominating either. Running back Bruce Harris had only 23 yards rushing on 13 carries, for an average per carry of less than 2 yards. Because of the lack of run production the Vandals are going to start junior Devon Pearce at running back against the bobcats.

"We weren't hitting people and sustaining blocks," Smith said. "We have to start coming off the ball and driving people."

To help the cause the Vandals are going to jumble the offensive line. Starting in place of weak tackle David Spellman will be sophomore Jody Schnug (6-4.260)

"We're pretty sure we're going to do this," Smith said. "We need one more day of hard practice to find out."

The game also marked the debut of Nussmeier who played well in his first start as a freshman. He passed for 313 yards and three touchdowns with no interceptions.

"Overall I was pleased with Doug," Smith said. "He did some things well."

Nussmeier was the toughest critic on his own performance.

"We didn't win the ballgame so that means I didn't do my job," Nussmeier said. "I've got to stand in the pocket more and make quicker decisions."

Junior wide receiver Kasey Dunn was spectacular as he caught 12 passes for 241 yards breaking the all-time Idaho record.

"They were covering the outside and leaving the middle wide open," Nussmeier said. "Kasey was the one that kept getting open."

On defense the Vandals played well considering they had poor field position most of the day. Senior safety Kris McCall had 10 tackles and two near interceptions and both Charlie Oliver and Jeff Jordan provided outstanding coverage at the corner spots.

"Oliver and McCall had outstanding games," Smith said. "McCall was real active and is getting to be a better football player all the time."

In Southwest Texas State the Vandals play a team that isn't as big as some of the teams they'll play, but they have some outstanding athletes and can run real well.

"Man for man they'll be better than Montana State, but I don't know if they'll be as disciplined," Smith said.

On offense the Bobcats run the ball 90% of the time in an offense called the "Hambone" which is much like the option. Leading the offense will be junior quarterback Gilbert Price (5-11, 175) and senior fullback Reggie Rivers (6-1, 200). Price didn't play at all in 1989 and Rivers was the teams leading rusher with 659 yards on 136 carries for nearly a five yard average.

"For us to be succesful, Reggie is going to have to have a 1000 yard season," said Bobcat head coach Doug Franchione.

On defense the Bobcats will be led by two outstanding linebackers. Sophomore Chad Coleman (6-0, 230) led the Bobcats with 107 tackles in 1989 and senior Cleve Tyrone was fifth with 50 tackles. "Their linebackers are outstanding," Smith said. "They run well and are extremely active."

Overall, the Vandals are a better team than Southwest Texas

State. They are bigger, stronger and more experienced. If the Vandals can cut down on the turnovers and get strong play from the offensive line they should come home with a 1-1 record.

In other Big Sky Conference action Boise State will host Weber State, Eastern Washington will host Lenoir Rhyne, Idaho State Battles Southern Utah State, Montana State visits Colorado State, and Northern Arizona will travel to the University of Nevada.

So far the best teams in the Big Sky appear to be Montana and Boise State who had impressive wins over Oregon State and Stephen F. Austin respectively.

Montana jumped out to a 22-0 lead after three quarters and held off a late Beaver charge to hold on for a 22-15 win.

Boise State's defense dominated Stephen F. Austin in the second half and rallied from a 10-0 deficit to win 14-10.

Crazy 8's to play at the UI SUB ballroom next weekend

By GEORGE PARISOT
Staff Writer

Lock your doors and hide your daughter, because the Northwest's premier dance band is coming to Moscow.

No, it's not The Village People, it's the Crazy 8's.

The Crazy 8's are a diverse band that have shared the stage with such notables as The Clash, Shriekback, The Violent Femmes, Sonic Youth, Fishbone, and The Neville Brothers.

The Crazy 8's are on tour after the release of their latest album entitled Doggapotamus World. It's full of move-your-body beats, blaring horns and squealing guitars that will not let you sit still.

Their music is a blend of ska, reggae, soul, R&B, funk and the kitchen sink. This educated dance music incorporates world beat and latin rhythm into a dynamic rock sound. This hodge-podge of sounds translates into a piercing live performance.

Writing lyrics with a social conscience is what separates the Crazy 8's from other dance bands. Songs like "Courage and Conviction," "Law and Order" and "Rubber Bullets" reveal the band's true feelings.

"This is happy music with serious lyrics, not advocating a way to think, just, 'Here's how I feel—let's dance,'" says 8's manager Marc Baker.

Dancing is exactly what the Crazy 8's are all about. The band started eight years ago in Corvallis, Oregon. Ever since, they have been playing dance clubs throughout the Northwest and colleges across the country.

Unable to find a major record company to sign them on, the 8's

■ POSTER EXHIBIT

An exhibit of contemporary Chicano posters entitled "Hablamos: We Speak" will inaugurate Compton Union Gallery's 1990-91 season. It features boldly colored serigraphs that use wit and humor to testify about issues in Chicano culture. The exhibit opened Tuesday and will continue through Sept. 22. Gallery hours are Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

■ VISITING POET TO CONDUCT WORKSHOP

Poet William Matthews, writer-in-residence at Columbia University, will conduct the first in the UI English Department's 1990-91 Visiting Writer Workshops. The one-week Advanced Poetry Workshop, English 404/504, one credit, runs from Oct. 8 through 12, evenings 7 to 9:30 p.m. The workshop enrollment is limited to 15 and selection is based on quality of writing. Those interested should submit three to five poems with name, address, and phone number by Sept. 28 at 5 p.m. to the English department. In addition, Williams will read his poetry on Oct. 10 at 7:30 p.m. at the UI Law Building. For more information contact Tina Foriyes, Director of Creative Writing in the English Department.

Dance season full of fun

By DENA NISHEK
Senior Staff Writer

Festival Dance and Performing Arts Association presents a dance season full of excitement featuring the Royal New Zealand Ballet, Kravat Entertainment, Eugene Ballet of Oregon and the Repertory Dance Theatre.

The season opens Oct. 19 with a performance by the Royal New Zealand Ballet at the Beasley Coliseum in Pullman at 8 p.m. The ballet company of over 40 dancers is touring the U.S. this year in celebration of the 150th anniversary of the founding of New Zealand. Their performance will include Strauss' Blue Danube.

"Hello Dolly" will be performed at the Beasley on Nov. 11 at 7:30 p.m. The Broadway hit musical is on tour from New York City and will be produced by Kravat Entertainment.

What December would be complete without "The Nutcracker"? The Eugene Ballet of Oregon will perform this classic at 7:30 p.m. on Dec. 1 in Lewiston and Dec. 2 at the Beasley Coliseum.

The season ends in February with two performances by the Repertory Dance Theatre of Salt Lake City. This modern dance company will perform at the Hartung Theater Feb. 9 at 8 p.m. and Feb. 10 at 3 p.m.

Season tickets for the productions range in cost from $12 for children under 12, to $42 for students and $52 for adults.

Festival Dance and Performing Arts Association also conducts a variety of dance classes that are open to both students and community members. Kinderdance, an introduction to dance including creative dance, rhythmic, exercises and dance basics, is available for children aged four and five. Creative dance, pre-ballet, ballet, jazz, tap and drama classes are available for older children and adults.

Advanced students of ballet and jazz are eligible to participate in the Festival Dancers Performing Company which includes Festival Concert Ballet and All That Jazz.

For registration or ticket subscription information contact manager Joann Muneta at 883-DANS.

19th Hole serves snacks

By PATRICK J. TRAPP

Staff Writer

The University of Idaho Golf Course is now offering another reason to enjoy the sport right here on campus — the 19th Hole.

A new diner, the 19th Hole Snack Bar, recently opened at the golf course club house. In the past, several vending machines were the only sources of refreshment for hungry golfers.

The 19th Hole, run by Marriott, offers soups, salads, sausages, beverages, snacks and made to order deli sandwiches. Manager Mike Thomsen said the bar has other attributes beside food selection and location.

"Our best feature is in the decor and the atmosphere," Thomsen said. "The interior of the place was really well done. It feels very homey."

Overlooking the 1st and 9th holes, the snack bar capacity is 70 people. The 19th Hole is open every day from 6:30 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. The UI Golf Course also offers the cheapest green fees in Idaho at $7.50 for 18 holes.

The 19th Hole opened in mid-July and since then there hasn't been a great increase in golfers.

"We did not expect to attract more golfers by putting in a snack bar," said course owner Don Bails. "Golfers come to the course to play golf. The idea of the 19th Hole was simply to give the players a place to relax and make them happy."

According to Jim Goss, a junior in pre-law, the 19th Hole is appreciated.

"I love to golf when it is time to golf," Goss said, "but I also know when it is time to take it easy and this is a great place to wind down after the game. Now if they could just put in a real bar, it would really help my game," Goss said.

Bails says that the snack bar will stay open until early November.

Second City to perform

By GEORGE PARISOT
Staff Writer

The Second City National Touring Company, the traveling arm of the oldest comedy ensemble in North America, will perform in the University of Idaho's administration auditorium at 7:30 p.m. on Wednesday, September 15.

Second City has helped to launch the careers of many of its members. Some of the graduates include stars like: Alan Alda, Dan Aykroyd, John Belushi, Shelly Long, Bill Murray, Gilda Radner and Martin Short.

The original company was founded in Chicago in 1959, and its success was almost instantaneous. Since then, Second City has added a second home company in Toronto, two touring companies in the U.S. and another in Canada.

Second City is six or seven actors who enliven an empty stage with topical comedy sketches. Using few props and costumes, the ensemble satires today's politics and pop culture.

Their performances also include improvisational sequences, building sketches on the spur of the moment around audience suggestions. All of the material is developed during impromptu sets held nightly in Chicago and Toronto after the regular shows.

Soviet comic to perform in Pullman

By SALLY GILPIN
Arts/Leisure Editor

"What a country!"

Palouse area fans of Soviet-imported comic Yakov Smirnoff will soon be able to hear that famous line in person. Smirnoff will be in concert at the Beasley Performing Arts Center in Pullman on Sept. 22, for WSU's Dad's Weekend.

SMIRNOFF

Smirnoff arrived in America from the Soviet Union in 1977 with just $100 to his name and no knowledge of English. Since then, he has proven the viability of the American dream, doing sold-out concerts, motion pictures and television commercials.

A Showtime Network special tentatively entitled "Glasnost 101" is now in the works. Filmed on location in the Soviet Union and on U.S. college campuses, the Moscow-to-Moscow tour might conclude with a performance here in Moscow near Thanksgiving.

During the tour, Smirnoff performed in all sorts of situations and locations, including the Berlin wall in Germany and Taj Mahal casino in Atlantic City, New Jersey.

Smirnoff was born in Odessa, a large city on the edge of the Black Sea, in the Soviet Union. His father was a construction engineer and his mother was a teacher. The proverbial class clown, Smirnoff remembers spending more time in the principle's office than in the classroom. After studying art at the local university, Smirnoff decided to pursue comedy after completing his teaching internship.

His comedic talents earned him steady work performing on Black Sea cruise ships and at concerts. His public performances were scrutinized and sometimes shaped by the Communist Party; Smirnoff longed for creative freedom.

Upon arriving in the U.S., Smirnoff was determined to learn English. He watched lots of television and enrolled in bartending school. Many of his routines are based on experiences Smirnoff had while tending bar in the Catskills.

In 1979, he moved to Los Angeles and started performing at "open mike" night at the Comedy Store. Smirnoff sharpened his comedic skills at the club, and by 1984, he was performing in comedy clubs throughout the country and landed a commercial for Miller Lite beer.

"In America, you can always find a party. In Russia, the Party always finds you," Smirnoff said in the commercial.

That commercial led to an appearance on the "Tonight Show" and several movie appearances including, Moscow on the Hudson and Brewster's Millions.

By focusing his humor on the contrasts between Russia and America, Smirnoff has found that the American dream can come true.

Tickets for the 7:30 p.m. concert go on sale today at G and B Select-a-Seat outlets. All seats are reserved at $13.
