KUOI-FM continues remodeling

By MAT HALVERSON
Contributing Writer

Extensive remodeling of KUOI-FM's main production room should begin when the station's second and smaller production room is completed this week.

According to engineer Matt Kitterman, remodeling will begin with the gutting of the main production room which will then be out of use for at least two months.

However, according to Kitterman, it should be worth the wait.

"If we have the availability of money, this could end up being the nicest production studio in town," Kitterman said.

That money will have to come through the ASUI senate, according to station manager Brent Anyan. The production room is used for a variety of things including making public service announcements, recording phone conversations for news shows and to putting together shows.

Anyan said he will attempt to convince the senate that people other than KUOI personnel, such as those involved in theater production, will benefit from the remodeled production room.

Telecommunication majors will benefit from the remodeling Anyan said.

"It would be incredible if we could have the equipment telecommunication students need here so they could put together better resume tapes," Anyan said.

The remodeled production room would help KUOI's efforts to nationally syndicate some of its locally produced features including "Amateur Astronomer" Anyan said.

The remodeled production room will be sound-proofed, and will contain new equipment and cabinetry Kitterman said.

According to Kitterman, since the new cabinetry would involve the University of Idaho Physical Plant the project may be slowed down due to the backup of Physical Plant projects.

"Their schedule can be iffy," Kitterman said.

Meanwhile, the new smaller production room will serve the same needs as the main production room does now but with older equipment.

Last year KUOI spent about $8,000 on studio renovations and a board with special features.

Although it's an inconvenience, Anyan said he is willing to wait for the project to be completed.

"If we're going to remodel it, we might as well do it the best we can," Anyan said.

Dorms paint local houses

By LARRY OLSEN
Staff Writer

After two years of painting houses for those who could not afford it, Campbell, Carter, Snow and Graham halls should be proud of themselves.

Norm Varin, area coordinator for Ballard and Willey wings in the Wallace Complex, organized the Paint the Palouse project for the six halls after hearing about a group in Boise that was doing a similar project.

"I'm really excited that we (the dorms) have a community service project that the Greeks can be envious of," Varin said.

Paint the Palouse is designed to assist people who cannot afford to paint their houses and who are restricted from doing so by a disability. Invitations to participate in the event and thank you letters were distributed by Campbell hall while donations for Paint the Palouse were collected primarily by Houston and Carter halls. Contributions were made by several members of the community as well as businesses.

Paint the Palouse started at 1 p.m. on Saturday. The two houses chosen for the painting project were Mike Carnell's at 520 North Lincoln and Harold Mertsching's at 219 North Washington, both in Moscow. The Mertsching's house had not been painted in 35 years.

UI professor tells of declining communism Trip through Eastern European countries proves insightful

By BETH HOWARD
Contributing Writer

A recent trip to Eastern Europe convinced one University of Idaho professor that Eastern European communist systems are dead.

With just nine months to go before his May retirement, UI political science professor Amos Yoder spent part of his summer touring Europe's infamous "Eastern Block," and what he found confirmed his ideas about communism.

In a book published last spring, Communist Systems and Challenges, Yoder examined the present state of communism. His tour served as a follow up for that analysis.

"It was an exciting time to go,"

Yoder said.

He said the trip confirmed his ideas about the future of communism in Eastern Europe, in

"If we'd have been talking to them a year ago they would have been afraid. Today they are more than willing to give their opinions."

UI Professor

particular that communist systems are finished there.

Yoder said he was surprised throughout the tour by the frankness of his guides.

"If we'd have been talking to them a year ago they would have been afraid," Yoder said. "Today they are more than willing to give their opinions."

Yoder said evidence of anti-communism exists throughout the eastern block. One instance in particular occurred in Moldavia, one of the 15 republics of the Soviet Union, where the Moldavian flag was flying without the mandatory hammer and sickle.

He said he was impressed with the substantial progress Czechoslovakia has made toward a market economy; but said he may have been over optimistic about the progress of East Germany.

On the first leg of his trip, a three week bus tour of Eastern European countries, Yoder traveled through Yugoslavia, Romania, the Soviet Union and Hungary. He traveled by rental car for the second leg of the trip, visiting Austria, Czechoslovakia, East Germany and Brussels.

Yoder, a Borah Distinguished Professor of Political Science, has been with the university for 16 years. He has not decided what to be with the university for 16 years. He has not decided what to do after his May retirement; but he does have many ideas—such as teaching in Eastern Europe. Currently Yoder is writing his seventh book on international relations.

Gibb served as president from 1977 to 1989. He has now returned to teaching, what he terms "my first love." He has no desire to return to administration.

Sigma Chi sponsors annual event

By JILL CASTLE
Contributing Writer

What do stupid human tricks, chugging beer, singing songs, carving Spam and having to smile to receive a signature all have in common?

These events and many more were the criteria for Sigma Chi fraternity Derby Days this past week. Derby Days began early last Thursday morning at 4 a.m. with Sig Smiles. The challenge is to get as many Sigma Chi signatures as possible, but they had to smile before they would sign.

That evening sororities competed in Songfest, during which many songs were sung. Some were about Sigma Chi, some about other houses and some were about lust and drinking beer. Friday night's activities included a "Sig n' Dale" strip night.

Derby Days is a string of events where sororities and some off-campus women compete against each other in various games and competitions. The profits from this event go toward the Sigma Chi philanthropy, helping the mentally and physically disabled. Those involved get the chance to meet other people from different living groups as well as the members of Sigma Chi.

Pi Beta Phi and the Alpha Gamma Delta sororities tied for first place.

Queen candidates honored

By DAVID JOHANSON
Staff Writer

The University of Idaho's 22 Homecoming Queen candidates were honored with roses and gifts at the first Queen's Tea while cellos played in the background.

The semi-formal tea, was held at the SUB's Silver and Gold room last Thursday, was the idea of Toni Neslen, the 1989 Homecoming Queen.

"Last year I only got to meet eight of the 15 candidates. With 22 Homecoming Queen candidates chosen from around 4,000 University of Idaho women, I think it's a big honor and they all deserve to be recognized," Neslen said.

During the opening speech by Neslen, she told the candidates, that as a single 33 year old parent, she can do anything she sets her mind to. She challenged each candidate to believe in themselves and to strive towards achieving their goals in life. She concluded her speech by giving special thanks to her nine-year-old son, Erin, whom she calls her strongest supporter and critic.

Members of the Navy ROTC escorted each of the candidates as they went forward to receive gifts and roses that were given on behalf of the alumni.

"I think this is a good idea for the University of Idaho. It's a great honor considering how few are selected overall," Amy Bettinger, one of the 22 candidates, said.

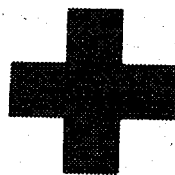

"I'm glad Toni took the initiative to do something like this. It's a lot of fun and it's good to honor the nominees," Jeanie Schneiderman, this year's Homecoming committee chairman, said.

The candidates for Homecoming Queen are drawn from a pool of three finalists who are nominated by each living group. From there, the student body vote counts for 60 percent while the remaining 40 percent is based on an interview with six judges.

Traditionally, the Homecoming Queen presides over the Homecoming Parade, participates in the coronation at the football game and is involved in public relations activities at the university.

Neslen hopes this year's Homecoming Tea, which will be hosted by each new queen in subsequent years, will be an ongoing tradition at the university.

Show support for soldiers regardless of views

On your way to class today, stop by the SUB and take time to write your wishes to U.S. troops stationed in Saudi Arabia. Let them know you appreciate their commitment to our nation—no matter what you may think of the U.S.'s involvement overseas.

The giant greeting card, which will be in the SUB until Wednesday, is being sent by the University of Idaho Young Democrats and they should be commended for the thoughtful action.

While the card is not necessarily a declaration of the group's support of America's actions in the Middle East, it is a wonderful way to show soldiers stationed in the less-than-desirable conditions of Saudi Arabia that their loyalty and patriotism are appreciated.

And no matter what your personal opinions are about the situation, you should take time to sign the card and wish the American forces well.

After all, individual soldiers do not make foreign policy. They are in the military because of their commitment to the defense of the United States; and if those in power say that means they should go to Saudi Arabia it is not their job to ask why.

They deserve respect and consideration for their efforts overseas. They must deal with separation from family and friends and a familiar lifestyle as well as dealing with harsh environmental conditions and the threat of an outbreak of violence.

If you don't agree with U.S. actions in the Gulf situation take it up with those in power: write a letter to your senator, participate in demonstrations, write a letter to the editor. Do whatever you feel needs to be done to make your voice heard. But meanwhile don't turn a cold shoulder to those in the trenches.

The Young Democrats have demonstrated outstanding patriotism by making the card and they deserve a pat on the back.

Parking solution should be based on student need

By MARY HEUETT
Columnist

The current 'parking solution' burns parkers with low status and little money.

The people benefitting from the current system fit into one of two categories:

Mary Heuett
Opinion

1) Those most likely to bring wealth and glory to the university i.e. faculty and staff.

2) Those with an abundance of funds i.e. young healthy students with rich parents.

Yes, the university's parking system is based on the great American ideal—money. But why doesn't it do something unusual, even radical? Base the parking system on need. Use economics to create a fair parking situation.

Begin by abolishing the color-code parking system. All stickers should be gold lettering on black—to reduce printing costs. Then abolish the divisions between faculty, staff, and student parking. But continue to encourage car pooling and public transportation.

Now take a map of the University of Idaho and the surrounding area. Create a core zone by connecting the buildings used for classes (and toss in the SUB for good measure). Color the area inside these borders fuchsia (or any other color you prefer).

Then take a pencil and a ruler, and measure out from the edges of the core zone in all directions and place a dot at one mile from the core area and another at four miles (these numbers are negotiable). Connect the dots so you

Football officiating questionable at Nevada-Reno game

Editor:

I only listened to the fourth quarter of the Idaho-Nevada game. But what I heard bugged me all night. Now I am not one to dwell on a loss, and I am not a sore loser, but this particular loss did not set well with me.

Let's re-enact the last three minutes of the game, and you can judge for yourself. There are basically three plays that set suspicion in my mind.

1) Idaho is ahead by one touchdown and has the ball on about the Nevada 45-yard line, it's third down. Nussmeier throws a touchdown strike to Dalquist, which would "ice" the game. Wait, there is a late flag for a clip, that no one saw. Hence, Idaho is forced to punt.

2) Nevada has the ball, it's fourth down and ten yards to go. The quarterback drops back and throws a long bomb. Quickly the referee throws out his flag. The call is holding against Idaho, just in case the pass was not completed (it was). Take in mind that defensive holding calls are rare at best.

3) Nevada has the ball, it's fourth down and about eight yards to go. The quarterback drops back, he passes, but it's dropped and a sigh of relief echoes through Vandal land. Wait, the referee says he actually caught it. It just looked like he dropped it. It must be that desert air.

Well, after these three "precious" interludes, the Vandal dream became a nightmare with the inevitable loss in overtime.

Now Reno is a gambling city, and I am sure a lot of money was acquired from this game. But the question remains, were there corrupt outside forces influencing the outcome, to ensure the gains. I think maybe. But you have to decide for yourselves. And the NCAA also has to make decisions. If the game was Notre Dame vs. USC maybe they would raise an eyebrow. On the other hand, maybe they made a little side cash on the game themselves.

Project well represented by article

Editor:

In your Sept. 18 issue you ran a story by Kara Thomas on my internship project in mediation. Ms. Thomas wrote an excellent story which well represented my project.

I have been spreading the word concerning my project by a variety of methods. The story in the Argonaut has been the most successful way that I have gotten the word out so far. After the article was printed I had a very large number of students express interest in the project.

The Argonaut is certainly well read by students of all ages and backgrounds on the campus. The great response I have had confirms this. Keep up the good work you are doing covering events on campus. We students appreciate it.

Just say no to war, egging

Editor:

Let's talk about Sept. 21's little protest against United States policy on the Iraq situation.

There were very few protesters. Yet it almost drew a better audience than the "Brother Jed Show." There were more press and hecklers than any of those "hippies" causing problems. Rumor has it that there were even two paid federal informants. And Military Science was well represented, even though they were out of uniform.

If this kind of thing produces such an immature, egging, kill-crazy response in the American educational public, no wonder

'Make Room'
project successful

Editor:

This is to express our gratitude to all those in our local communities who have responded so nicely to the "Make Room" project organized and conducted by the office of the Vice President for the Student Affairs and the Associated Students of the University of Idaho.

As of this date, over 60 students have successfully found housing as a result of the program. More than 50 listings have come and gone since July 26, 1990. Currently, the list contains 14 offerings, which reflects well on our community's ability to "make room!"

Opening our doors to students shows the kind of good will that will be remembered always as an important part of these students' experiences in Moscow. A special thank you to Michael Gotch, ASUI vice president; Benita Hart, SUB Information Desk receptionist; Patsy Edgar, ASUI secretary; and Stephanie Curry, ASUI Student Productions operations manager, all of whom worked very hard to keep the list current.

the U.S. has paid assassins massed on the Saudi frontier. Americans just love the smell of blood and circus. They would probably be following Saddam Hussain if they didn't have a better show in the rhetoric of George Bush.

People make wars, and people can stop them, but they can also be led like sheep to the slaughter. I heard someone say that soldiers don't like to kill anymore than anyone else. Well then, why do they choose a profession that delights in it? The best soldiers I've ever seen in my life didn't join, they just were screwed by circumstances and had to fight. Some survived, some didn't, and those who did won't talk about it. They hate war.

Not only does the military delight in its ability to kill, it seems to pound out the individuals' ability to just say no. Or maybe just the ability to think about the actions the individual soldier has to take to stay alive. Soldiers can stop wars also, they have the somewhat dubious distinction of being people too. Just say no makes a lot of sense when you're talking about somebody else's stupid, manufactured problems and saving your own butt.

Let's face it folks: Americans, like the good little primates they are, would be more than willing to draw blood over a warm planet to s--- on. Watching those jerks throwing eggs just makes me believe it more.

have a pseudo-topographic map with the university core area masquerading as the peak.

Name everything outside the four mile mark Priority 1. The people (faculty, staff, and students) living beyond this line have no option but to commute, particularly those trying to raise families in some of the outlying communities like Genesee, Potlatch and Troy. These people also face the price of buying enough gas to get them to school and back on a daily basis. Therefore, they should pay no more than $20 for their parking permit.

Now name everything between the four mile and one mile marks Priority 2. Although these people are not within a decent walking distance of the core area, they are within bike, motorcycle, scooter, etc. distance. By charging these people a rate of $60 the university will encourage them to use alternate forms of transportation.

Finally, anyone living within a one mile radius of the core zone (the Priority 3 area) should be heavily encouraged to walk or bike. These people should not pay less than $120 for a parking permit.

This plan would reduce unnecessary traffic both on campus and in Moscow and would ensure that the people who need parking most get it. But a few special circumstances must be addressed, so don't start complaining yet.

First, living group students must have adequate parking; but the university should discourage living group students from bringing cars to the university in the first place. (Contrary to popular opinion, dormitory and Greek students can survive school without a car. Moscow is not THAT big.) So the median fee of $60 best applies here.

The following parking situation should be handled with temporary and free (or very low cost) special permits.

Faculty, staff or students who must bring bulky or delicate items onto campus need access to a special one day, four hour maximum delivery permit. This way people who opted to not purchase a parking sticker can deliver projects to class without fearing having them destroyed. It may be wise to limit the number of special permits a person can request to prevent abuses. For example, basing the number of requests on the classes a student is taking.

Unless the university intends to install extensive lighting both on campus and off, any woman, who doesn't have a parking sticker and has a legitimate and unavoidable reason for coming onto campus before 5 p.m. and staying until after dark, should be allowed to obtain a special permit. For frequent visits (3 or more per week) they should pay the Priority 1 fee. One-time or infrequent visitors should not be charged. The permit should list the hours during which it is valid, for example 4 p.m. to 8 p.m., to prevent abuses. The permit should only be valid on days when a portion off the designated time falls after sunset.

Fourth, all living group women should receive priority for parking areas within one or two well-lit blocks of their residence. The men may have to walk an extra block or three but they aren't subject to the fear every sane woman should have of bodily attack. At the beginning of each semester, each hall or sorority should tell the parking administration how many of its residents have cars that need to be parked. The administration should then allot the residence the required number of spaces. Anyone should be able to park in these spaces before 5 p.m. on weekdays. Only the living group women should be able to park in the spaces during evening and night hours. Since they must still pay the $60 fee to park in the first place, no additional fee should be assessed.

Finally, the university should create a special white on gold handicapped parking card, valid only in university lots. This card should be available to anyone with a documented (i.e. supported by a doctor) injury or illness that limits or inhibits their ability to walk or bike to campus. The card should expire at a time determined by the person's doctor and be based on the particular injury or illness. Permanently handicapped parkers should purchase a handicapped card or plates from the state.

Election bill veto appealed

ASUI President David Pena's veto of a bill providing for roving polling booths for ASUI elections was appealed by the Senate in last Wednesday's meeting.

The veto came under fire because Pena left a verbal veto on the ASUI answering machine sometime after office hours on the previous Friday. Pena had 48 hours from the time the bill was passed to veto the bill. The debate was focused on exactly when the bill was passed and whether or not Pena vetoed the bill within this 48-hour time limit.

ASUI Vice President Mike Gotch did not recognize the veto due to the question of the tape-recorded verbal veto. The senate appealed Gotch's decision, and will decide whether Pena's veto is valid during this week's meeting.

If the senate chooses to uphold Gotch's denial of the veto, the bill will stand.

The bill was intended to maximize voter convenience, therefore, increase voter turnout for ASUI elections. It provides for the addition of roving polling booths which would be placed in living groups recognized by the ASUI throughout campus. After amendment, the bill passed 8 to 3 during the Sept. 12 senate meeting.

Two senators resigned last week, leaving a total of three open seats. Doug Korn resigned Thursday and Linda Britton resigned earlier during the week.

Amtul-Mannan Sheikh has been appointed to one of the seats, and is yet to be approved. This appointment is currently in a committee and will be brought before the senate this week.

dent Elisabeth Zinser was one of the volunteers who assisted in painting. There were nearly 50 participants in all.

Zinser felt that the event was a very positive community service.

"It's (Paint the Palouse) wonderful. It is good to see the students helping out in the community. Some people think the of the university as a steel fortress, but it is actually very fragile."

The mood at the event was positive and everybody seemed to be having fun while helping the Moscow community. Amorena Roberts, vice president of Campbell hall, said it was a lot of fun and something to look forward to next year.

"Greeks are noted for community work and we (dorms) want to know for that too," said Janet Moyreyder, Resident Advisor for Campbell hall.

Petitions call for parking changes

By JILL CHRISTINE BECK
Editor

Organizers of a petition opposing certain aspects of the parking plan hope to receive more than 1,000 signatures by the end of next week.

The petitions call for an end to possible plans to charge and control on-street parking and ask that students be able to purchase gold parking permits.

Plans requiring permits for parking on Nez Perce Drive, Elm Street, Blake Avenue and other campus streets are currently under consideration by the administration, according to ASUI Vice President Mike Gotch.

The petitions also would place two referendums on the ASUI fall election ballot. The referendums allow students to vote on whether or not they support plans to charge for on-street parking and whether or not they support student access to gold permits.

Currently only faculty and staff members are able to buy the $120 gold permits. All of the campus' inner parking lots are gold.

According to Gotch, approximately 35 petitions are being circulated around campus at this time. More petitions are available in the ASUI office in the SUB and interested students are encouraged to pick them up. Gotch hopes to have collected at least 1,000 signatures by Oct. 12.

spend spring semester working on a project designed to improve the economic education of Idaho's public teachers.

"My greatest joy is working with the students. The direct student contact is just wonderful," Gibb said. "I really enjoy teaching my introduction class and education 595 is a different situation, a very rewarding one, but I think you have more impact on introductory classes."

As a professor of economics, Gibb tries to make it more interesting. He ties the subjects into everyday happenings and lives.

Comments reflect that students reciprocate Gibb's feelings.

"I can't believe how much he cares about his students," said senior Jennifer Boock. "The professor was listed as staff. I just didn't expect it to be him."

"He's totally interesting. We had to write about ourselves and by the next class he had read through them all. He's interested in us," Amy Bettinger, a Tri-Delt, said.

Gibb confirms that he's interested in students beyond the classroom. As a parent he feels professors should assume responsibility to their students.

"When students come here, I care about them as individuals," he said. "I think a lot of people here care. My sole reason for being here is for the students."

Bettinger added, "He practically begs us to come in and talk to him."

Gibb often jokes to his class that he has a list containing his students names. Students can get their names off the list by coming in to talk to Gibb during his office hours.

"Students can't graduate until their name is off the list," he laughs.

Gibb served as Commissioner of Higher Education for the University of Indiana and University of South Dakota before coming to Idaho. He also taught and did research for ten years at the University of Western Illinois.

Gibb and his wife Betty decided to stay in Idaho because, "We like this area and the university too much. We've lived in five or six states and two countries, and there is no place we'd rather live."

Gibb likes the campus and describes it as residential, where he can get to know the students. He tries to keep up with students after they graduate.

He emphasized that he's always willing to help his students and that time is no factor.

"I just hope all 115 students don't show up at once," Gibb said.

Remaining at Idaho also helps Gibb keep himself in focus. Two months after stepping down as president he was checking out a book at the UI Library but forgot his identification.

"The librarian asked me if I worked here," Gibb laughed. "I thought it was hilarious."

While in administration Gibb felt the pull back towards teaching. He believes most people in administration who ever taught ultimately want to go back. Richard Gibb has fulfilled his desire.

Soccer teams split games

University of Idaho Soccer Club dropped a 4-2 decision to Central Oregon Community College at Guy Wicks Field Saturday.

It started as a defensive struggle for UI, COCC's Todd Ruble struck hard in the opening minutes with a goal off of a through pass from Don James. This was the only goal in the first half of play.

The second half opened with a bang when UI's Jeremy Solomon countered Ruble's score with a goal off of a pass from Sean Monogue. UI Club then briefly took the advantage at the midway mark when Jeff Evans scored unassisted from the right side.

Central Oregon struck back with three unanswered goals in the last quarter of play, the first by James. Minutes later, Matt Wattier scored on a free kick and the final score was put in unassisted by Joris.

"This was a game that got away from us. We played a very good second half, but midway through the half, we got tired and we lost our intensity," Faculty Adviser Ron McFarland said. "The midfield broke down and the defense was too tired to pick it up. Basically, the UI Club lost this game because they lost their intensity."

UI Club drops their record to 0-2 on the season.

The UI International soccer team split a double-header in Sandpoint Sunday, losing a 6-2 decision against the host team before bouncing back to win 4-1 over Creston, British Columbia.

Hugo Flores played one of the best games, if not the best, of his career. Flores scored all six of the UI's goals from the striker position, two on assists from left midfielder Colleen Fagan, and one

Nevada drops Idaho

By MATT LAWSON
Sports Editor

The officiating on the road in the Big Sky has definitely favored the home teams this season.

Saturday's game in Reno was no exception as Idaho suffered a devastating overtime loss to the Wolfpack, 31-28.

With time running out in the game and the Vandals leading 28-21, Scott Dahlquist scored an apparent game-winning touchdown on a 35-yard pass from Doug Nussmeier.

The officials abruptly ended Idaho's celebration when they signaled a holding call against Elia Ala'ilima-Daley on the play.

John L. Smith felt the call was a mistake and that it cost Idaho the game.

"We end up making two stupid mistakes (a blocked punt by Reno and Wolfpack punt return for a touchdown)," Smith said. "But the third stupid mistake the official made and we end up losing the game."

The Vandals seemed to take control of the game after the Wolfpack took an early 7-0 lead on running back Ray Whalen's 21 yard touchdown run.

The touchdown was set up by a blocked punt that Nevada recovered at the Idaho 21 yard line.

Idaho shook off the special team's mistake and dominated the Wolfpack in the second quarter by outscoring Nevada, 20-0.

Devon Pearce, led by the inspired play of the offensive line, ran for 81 yards in the first half and played a major role in Idaho's 20-7 halftime lead.

Ala'ilima-Daley caught a 11 yard touchdown pass from Nussmeier capping an 80 yard drive in 10 plays.

Thayne Doyle missed the extra point to keep the score at 7-6, in favor of Nevada.

The Vandals controlled the Wolfpack the rest of the quarter as Pearce scored on a four yard run and a 23 yard pass from Nussmeier.

Idaho made a crucial mistake at the end of the first half that eventually came back to haunt them.

Nevada cornerback took the ball out of Kasey Dunn's hands for an interception at the Wolfpack's four yard line when Idaho was driving for another score.

Idaho probably wished the game ended at halftime as the game soon became a nightmare.

In the Vandal's first possession of the second half, momentum started to turn in the favor of Nevada. Nussmeier was intercepted by Kevin Sims who returned it to Idaho's four yard line.

The Wolfpack scored two plays later on a two yard run by Whalen to tighten the score at 20-14.

The next Vandal drive was deja-vu as Nussmeier threw another interception to Sims. The defense continued their stubborn attitude as they held the Wolfpack and forced punt.

Nevada held Idaho again and the unpredictable special teams walked onto the field.

Punter Joe Carrasco kicked an impressive 46 yard punt, but there was no stopping Treamelle Taylor as he dodged numerous Vandal defenders to romp 87 yards into the end-zone. Idaho trailed 21-20 and the outlook didn't look optimistic for the Vandals.

The Vandal defense rallied again to pull Idaho back into the game as Jimmy Jacobs forced a Nevada fumble and Terry Green picked up the loose ball.

Idaho gave the ball right back to the Wolfpack as Pearce fumbled four plays later.

However, generosity became abundant as Kris McCall recovered a Whalen fumble on the very next play.

Idaho failed to move the ball and after a punt Nevada's quarterback Chris Vargas was intercepted by Jerry Keating on an amazing play.

Idaho capitalized on this turnover as Yo Murphy scored on a seven yard pass from Nussmeier three plays later. Nussmeier ran for the two point conversion and the Vandals held a 28-21 lead

Vandals suffer tough losses to Big Sky opponents

By JOE MALLET
Staff Writer

The University of Idaho Women's volleyball team brought two conference losses home with them from a weekend road trip that pitted them against Idaho State University and Weber State College.

Friday night the Vandals powered past the Idaho State Bengals 15-9 in the first game of the evening, only to drop the next three games and the match 2-15, 9-15, 5-15.

In the first game of the match, the Vandals once again showed the Big Sky their athletic ability and potential by abusing the top ranked team in the conference, but then, true to their inconsistent nature, they rolled over and died shortly thereafter.

"The first game was our best all year," said Vandal Head Coach Tom Hilbert. "Nothing went wrong. We played great.

"After that we fell apart. We passed awfully and couldn't serve. Our serving and passing lost the match for us. We didn't generate any offense."

Outside hitter Karen Thompson led the Vandals in their losing effort with 16 kills, 10 digs and two blocks. True-freshman Jessica Puckett had 8 kills, Dee Porter added five kills and 11 digs and Nancy Wicks had five kills and four blocks.

The Vandals now have lost 11 straight matches to ISU. Idaho has not defeated the Bengals since 1985, but they proved they have the potential to this year. When the two teams meet again Nov. 9th, in Memorial gym, Idaho will have a chance to break that streak.

Saturday night, in Ogden, Utah, the Vandals lost a tough match to the Weber State College Wildcats, after five games and nearly three hours of vigorous play, scoring 7-15, 19-17, 15-17, 16-14 and 8-15.

Coming off of the loss to ISU, Idaho faced a fired up Weber State team who played excellently against the Vandals.

"That was a real high intensity match," Hilbert said. "Weber State played well, but I'm really disappointed in the way we played. We had several chances in game three to win, and we blew it. We should have won."

Idaho put together a fairly solid team effort in which five players scored double digits in kills and seven had service aces. Even though the Vandals provided a solid team effort, it was by no standard balanced. Thompson stood out while putting together an all-American caliber performance.

Officially, Karen Thompson night is not until Oct. 12, when the Vandals play Eastern Washington at home. Unofficially, Karen Thompson night was Saturday when she dominated play on the Wildcat's home court. Thompson tied her own school record with 33 kills, and also had two service aces, 13 digs, and three blocks. This is the third time in Thompson's career that she had exceeded 30 kills in a match.

Thompson now leads the Vandals in kills (218), kills per game (4.2), service aces (21), digs (182) and is tied for the team lead with 16 solo blocks.

Against the Wildcats, Stacy Asplund had 10 kills, with a kill percentage of .455, three digs and six blocks. Heather McEwen had 12 kills and three blocks, Porter and Wicks had 10 kills, and Puckett added nine.

This match was the first game all season in which Wicks failed to record at least one block. Her nationally ranked 1.7 blocks per games fell to 1.4, after the weekend's action; but she still leads the team with a .274 hitting percentage in conference matches.

Tonight at 7:30, the Vandals play Central Washington in Memorial gym. This non-conference match should be a good tone up for Friday's home rematch against Weber State.

Friday, at 7:30, the Vandals have another chance to beat the Wildcats. They meet in Memorial gym and should provide a good show for spectators while Idaho plays for revenge.

"We're going to be at home this time, and we should pick up the win," said Hilbert. "We need to slow up the tempo this time. We will outclass them athletically and will do much better if we play our own game."

Tonight Taco Time will hold their drawing for a semester's worth of free in-state student fees. They draw a full-time student's name at every home game, and all the winner has to do to collect the $583 prize is be present at the match.

College football gives fans a wild Saturday

By CHRISTOPHER GATEWOOD
Staff Writer

A few thoughts on the college football scene this weekend: The Big Sky Conference this year continues to amaze me.

Take Eastern Washington for example. Last week they lose to an average Northern Arizona team, and this week they come from 18 points down with eight minutes left to beat second ranked Montana, in Missoula, 36-35.

Montana head coach Don Read said in various newspapers it was the most devastating loss he's ever had as a coach. How could it not be? The Grizzlies hadn't lost a home game since 1987. That's 18 straight to you and me. What was even more incredible was that Eastern was using back-up quarterback Scott Stuart and receiver Tom Owens who had only caught six passes all year. Owens caught all three touchdown passes in the comeback.

This is going to make things interesting in the Big Sky. Montana, who appeared invincible, now has one loss and Nevada suddenly looks like the team to beat. Look for a wild and woolly finish for the conference championship.

Let's talk for a minute about Big Sky officiating, especially on the road. I don't mean to sound like a cry-baby but the Vandals got worked by the officials. Just ask Vandal Head Coach John L. Smith. The Vandals had the game won when tight end Scott Dahlquist scored in the fourth quarter. The touchdown would have clinched the game for the Vandals if not for a clipping penalty.

I hate to see a game decided like this for two reasons. Number one, Dahlquist is having an All-Big Sky type year and secondly a game should never be decided on a crucial penalty. Referees like to hear themselves blow the whistle much too often. Most of them are too fat and too slow to keep up with the play anyway. The Big Sky and all conferences need to upgrade their standards for officials. For starters they should have physical fitness requirements. And how about seeing an official who is under 100 years old once in a while.

Well I would imagine that everybody is about ready to hang Thayne Doyle. Before you do, consider a few things that might have been forgotten. Granted, Doyle did miss a couple of cheapies, but the game should have never been close enough for the field goals to matter. The Vandals had a crucial turnover at the end of the first half that could have put them up 27-7, virtually making a comeback impossible. The Vandals had five turnovers in all.

Chris Gatewood

Ladies and gentlemen that is an ugly statistic. I don't care what anybody says, you can't have five turnovers and expect to win. Unless you're lucky enough to be Nevada.

Vandals did get improved play from the defense, but they still gave up the big play. If you don't play 60 minutes of football put one in the L column. When you have a team down you have to smell blood and put them away.

Now let's talk special teams for a minute. The Vandals special teams are in a world of hurt. In five games the Vandals have given up two kick-offs for touch-downs and an 87 yard punt return for a touchdown. Some teams don't give up this much yardage in two seasons. The Vandals are lucky they haven't given up more because they have consistently given up big yardage on kick-offs all year.

John L. Smith said he's tried everything under the sun and nothing has worked. How about trying the old twelfth man that Texas A&M uses. Let anybody that wants to try out and pick 11 of the biggest psychos and put them on the kick-off team. Let them run down the field hell bent for leather. It couldn't hurt. Maybe it would pump some life into the special teams.

Tell UCLA fans not to get too excited yet. UCLA has evened their record at 2-2, but they haven't beaten anyone worthy of note. They barely beat a lousy Stanford team 32-31 and they struggled with an average WSU team. The two games they lost were to good teams. They were soundly beaten by Oklahoma 34-14, and were demolished by Michigan 41-15.

UCLA isn't even close to being where they were a couple of years ago. In their last 11 games they were 2-8-1. Not exactly impressive. They do, however, show signs of improvement. Their quarterback Tommy Maddox wears number eight, the same number Troy Aikmen used to wear. Could it be an omen? Their defense also showed improvement, providing WSU with a lesson called intimidation 101. I've never seen a defense dominate anyone the way UCLA dominated WSU in the second half. It was ugly. WSU quarterback Brad Gossen was running for his life and the receivers were scared to death. Wide receiver Augustin Olobia was knocked silly for the ten count in the second half.

And lets hear it for the Ducks. The Ty got clipped. I don't think there's any cockier quarterback in the nation. Remember, you're only as good as your last game.

with 9:00 left in the game.

Dahlquist's nullified touchdown came with less than three minutes left in the game and Nevada was primed to drive for the game-tying touchdown with 2:08 left on the Mackay Stadium clock.

The Wolfpack converted two fourth down plays during the drive, and the last one was questionable.

Vargas threw to Taylor and he apparently dropped the ball, which would have sealed the game for the Vandals. Luck was not on Idaho's sideline as the referee called it complete.

After two incompletions, Vargas found Scott Benning on a 15 yard scoring strike with no time left on the clock. The extra point was good and it was on to overtime.

In the Big Sky Conference both teams get a chance to score from the 25 yard-line and can make up to two first downs.

Idaho's attempt fell short as Dunn was apparently interfered with at the Nevada two yard-line on third down.

Thayne Doyle then missed the field goal attempt to win the game.

Nevada's kicker found the mark from 19 yards out and Nevada celebrated their first win over Idaho in three years.

Nussmeier won the much-heralded quarterback battle against Fred Gatlin, but was not pleased with the outcome of the game or his performance.

"I knew I had to play well today for us to have a chance to win and I didn't feel I played well," Nussmeier said. "I'll take the responsibility for the loss."

Nussmeier completed 21 of 38 passes for 249 yards, but was plagued by three interceptions.

Devon Pearce had his best overall game of the year as he moved his streak of 100-yard games to three with 118 yards on 33 carries. Pearce also caught five passes for 59 yards.

Scott Dahlquist continued his outstanding play as he caught five passes for 68 yards. His performance didn't change his discouragement after the game.

"I was as close as anybody to the block," Dahlquist said. "I saw it (the block). It was clean."

The Vandals gained 416 yards to Nevada's 295 yards and Idaho's defense played their best game of the year.

John L. Smith was very disappointed with the loss, but still found something positive to say for the future.

"We can't cry about this forever," Smith said. "We can still do a lot of good things. If we win the rest of the (games) we can be in the playoffs."

Idaho returns to the Kibbie Dome this week to host Cal-State Chico at 1 p.m. on Saturday.

each on assists from Marcio Paz, Guillermo Navarro and Chandool.

"The International team played exceptionally well. Especially after the two-and-a-half hour road trip, we were very tense," McFarland, who plays right fullback, said. "We got rattled in the first game and couldn't get ahead, but we experienced a defensive 'gelling' in the second game giving us the impetus to win. In my opinion, it was the International team's best game of the year. Our defense was strong and our offense played very well."

Team Captain Mark Robinson was the mainstay of the Idaho defense.

UI International improved their record to 1-3-1 overall for the fall season with this first win. UI International and UI Club plan a game for Sunday, Oct. 14, which will be the next home game for both teams.

The time of the joint game will be announced at a later date. The International team will travel to Creston, BC for the weekend of Oct. 20-21. Eastern Oregon will play at Guy Wicks against UI Club Oct. 27. This will probably be the last game of the season due to weather changes.

Loss to Wolfpack typical of Idaho's season

By MATT LAWSON
Sports Editor

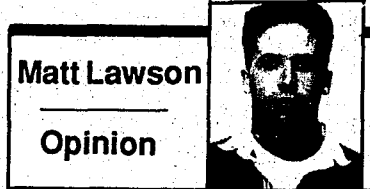

As the Idaho Vandal football season approaches the halfway point there has it is time to look back at what has happened so far.

Sept. 1: Idaho began their unbelievable quest to become the first team to win four Big Sky Conference titles consecutively. It was the moment of truth for a team that had quarterback Doug Nussmeier in the backfield to replace the amazing John Friesz. By halftime the fans had forgotten Friesz, but they couldn't help trying to forget about the upstart Montana State Bobcats. Kasey Dunn put on the most impressive receiving performance I have ever seen in my years at Idaho as he caught 12 passes for 241 yards. Turnovers killed the Vandals and they walked away with a stinging 27-24 defeat they would not soon forget. It put the Vandals against the wall after only one game, and Idaho fans knew it would be a long year.

Sept. 8: Idaho played typical Vandal football in winning a shootout in Texas against Southwest Texas State, 38-35. The irony behind the game was that Idaho almost had to forfeit the game because of Brandy Harris being declared ineligible by the NCAA for using up his eligibility. The game took a winning field goal in the last minutes to pull out the victory. Idaho received their only break of the season when the NCAA decided not to take the victory away from the Vandals. Nussmeier continued to improve and was beginning to look less and less like a freshman.

Sept. 5: Idaho faced their toughest game of the season when they faced the Ducks in Eugene, Oregon. Idaho realistically knew it would take a miracle to defeat Oregon, but they played inspired football the entire game with the exception of the second quarter. Idaho played Oregon even in the first half before being outscored 24-0 in the second quarter. In any other year Idaho may have had more of a chance against the Ducks, but after Oregon's recent win over Brigham Young University, it was obvious that they were in the midst of their best season in the school's history. This game was crucial for the confidence of the Idaho team and the emergence of Devon Pearce and the Idaho running game. Pearce had 111 yards and continually dragged Oregon players down the field.

Sept. 22: Idaho faced virtual elimination against Weber State in the Kibbie Dome. Pearce continued to run wild with 173 yards against the Wildcats and Idaho's much maligned defense played improved football in a 37-27 victory. Kasey Dunn continued his impressive season to up his season totals to 529 yards on 41 receptions. Weber continually tried to double-team Dunn with no success. The game gave the Vandals new life in the hunt for the Big Sky Crown heading into their huge game against Nevada last weekend.

Sept. 29: This game will be marked as the biggest nail in the Vandal's coffin this season. Idaho was a definite underdog and the team and a few loyal fans are the only people that expected the Silver and Gold to come home with a victory. I have never seen a game dominated more by the officials than in the Vandals 31-28 overtime loss. Idaho definitely earned the victory as they dominated the Wolfpack in total yardage with 416 yards to 295 for Nevada. Nevada only had one sustained drive, and it was the final drive of the game. This drive would have been irrelevant if the referees didn't hadn't taken the game right out of Idaho's hands.

With Idaho leading 28-21, Scott Dalquist caught what would have been a game-clinching touchdown. Stop celebrating. A yellow flag sat on the Makey Stadium field, and might as well been a stake in John L. Smith's heart. Don't blame Thane Doyle for the loss. Don't blame Doug Nussmeier. Don't blame the special teams. Blame the so-called men in the black and white stripes.

Idaho now has to look for answers as they take on Cal-State Chico in a non-conference game in the Kibbie Dome. Will Idaho play like they have all season and end up with tough luck and bad breaks? Or will they dominate the game and even their record at 3-3? Take door number two.

Idaho will not win the Big Sky title this year and there is no doubt in anyone's minds at this point in time. But Idaho will rally and they will make their name known and can easily break some hearts of the teams chasing the crown that made its home in Moscow for so long.

Idaho cross country improves

By TOM BITHELL
Staff Writer

The Vandal men's and women's cross-country teams are hoping to move up in the Big Sky Conference standings this season after finishing ninth and eighth last season respectively.

After two meets, the men's team appears to be better than the last place finish they suffered last year. In the season's first meet at Walla Walla, Wash., the men finished first, beating 11 other schools, including Washington State University.

In their second meet the Vandals finished fourth out of 14 teams. That meet was in Seattle, with the team running against the University of Oregon and the University of Washington. Oregon was last year's runner-up for the NCAA championship and they are favored to win it all this year.

Even though the men only have five runners on the squad, they have the exact amount needed to score points.

"We only have five guys on the team," Coach Mike Keller said.

"It's nice to have at least seven if you possibly can. We were picked to be dead last in the conference by the coaches. We've beat Eastern Washington University by over 135 points already, so obviously we won't be last. I think we have a good possibility of finishing in the middle of the conference this year," Keller said.

The leading Vandal man is Benardo Barrios followed by Mark Olden and Mark Esvelt. Keller said that Olden and Esvelt are both close to the second position on the team. Rounding out the five are Wayne Bunce and Mark Lynch.

The men will run this weekend in Spokane against EWU, WSU and some small, local colleges.

Women's coach Scott Lorek has more room for optimism than Keller. The women have 15 runners on a young squad that has only one senior.

"We've got a good group. I'm really pleased with them," Lorek said of his team that finished third out of ten teams at Walla Walla and seventh of 17 teams at Seattle.

"They (the coaches) picked us for seventh on the coaches poll," Lorek said. "I wouldn't have picked us for that," noting the team had three of the top seven conference runners in the 5,000-meters last year. "I think we are a pretty good team and I think next year we're going to be better."

The women are led by Diane Knudsen, who Lorek said has been very consistent. Robin Slate, Karie Kresbach, Anne Foreman and Laura Moore round out the teams first five runners.

Lorek is going to split the women's team up this weekend, taking the top seven to the University of Minnesota and sending the rest to Spokane.

The Minnesota meet will feature some big-time competition. The University of Oregon, University of Michigan and Auburn University are just some of the big name schools that will be there.

On Oct. 13, both the men and women will return home to host the Idaho invitational at the ASUI golf course.

FASTBREAK

BIKE RIDER

In the second annual Mountain Bike Rodeo, Kirk Kottkey and Carol Beale took the overall championships on a clear, sunny day at the University of Idaho Animal Science Farm.

Kottkey dominated as he won the titles in both the Trial and Endurance events. He also took third in the Hill Climb.

Beale finished first in the Endurance event and had enough points in the others to take the overall title.

David Thomas won the Hill event for the men and Paula Engle and Tammy Farmin won the women's Hill and Trial events respectively.

24 people entered the rodeo, an all-time high for the event's short history. Only four people failed to finish.

COURT RESULTS

Intramural tennis singles action has come to an end. In the men's competition, Bill Grigsby took first place, followed by Brent Steinberg of Theta Chi, and James Foster, in second and third respectively.

Kim Lehr of Campbell Hall, won first place in the women's competition, and second place went to Maria Pasti.

First place in overall intramural points for the men is Theta Chi with 90, and second place belongs to Pi Kappa Alpha, with 80. Delta Tau Delta, Tau Kappa Epsilon and Kappa Sigma are all tied for third place with 70 points.

The overall women's point leaders are Campbell Hall with 100, followed by Alpha Gamma Delta, and French Hall who are tied for second with 76.

Two comedies to be featured at Collette Theater

By TRACY PEEL
Staff Writer

Too much to think about? Is school getting you down? The Collette Theater wants you to have a nice day.

First, you can watch Nice People Dancing to Good Country Music. Immediately following, you can soak in the warmth of The Loveliest Afternoon of the Year.

"People can take their hats off, sit back and relax, because it's that kind of show," Nice People director Sara Hansen said of the double feature.

Nice People Dancing to Good Country Music is a short, light comedy which takes place in one day in Houston, Texas.

"It's situational humor," said Quimby Lombardozi, a sophomore theater arts student who plays the main role of Catherine Empanger.

Catherine is a novice who has been kicked out of a convent for saying dirty words. Catherine tries to pull her life together while visiting her aunt Eva June (Georganne Slifer) in Houston.

"In one afternoon, Catherine must discover how she fits into the world and deal with the other characters," Hansen explained. The world becomes more complicated—and funny—when serious Catherine runs into people like Roy Manuel (Brad Watson) at her aunt's boyfriend's bar. Other characters are Eva June's 15-year-old son Jay Bob, played by Josh Lifton and bar owner Jim Stools, played by Jim Peterson.

The play has been performed at other colleges and universities and won a top prize at the Actors' Theater of Louisville SHORTS Festival.

The second play, The Loveliest Afternoon of the Year was an off-Broadway production by its author, John Guare.

"People can take their hats off, sit back and relax."

— Sara Hansen
Director

Director Charles O'Neill first ran across the play in 1984 and "it's been in the back of my mind ever since," he said. He has enjoyed finally being able to direct it himself.

"There's so much packed into such a little script," he said. He called the play an absurd romantic comedy with a strange twist.

"It's not a black comedy like War of the Roses—of course, it's not as long, either," O'Neill said. Afternoon is a half-hour shorter than Nice People. In that time, the two actors in the play, known only as He (Tyson Stoianoff) and She (Beth Davidson), show a wide range of emotion as they fall in love and deal with the problems their love causes.

"It really lends itself to the actor," O'Neill said.

Simple scenery, designed by Tim Johnson, will focus even more attention on the actors. The costumes are designed so they look like they could come from any modern time period.

The plays have been a great learning experience for the two directors, who are both students.

"I had complete control, within the limits of the budget," O'Neill said. He and Hansen had only $300 budgeted between the two plays, and most of that went to pay for scripts and royalties.

Mentor Kim Brouchard, a graduate student in the theater arts department, helped the student directors iron out production problems, but other than that, O'Neill and Hansen were on their own.

The double feature runs Oct. 4 through 7 in the Collette Theater. Nice People Dancing to Good Country Music begins at 8 p.m. and The Loveliest Afternoon of the Year follows at 9:15. The Sunday matinee begins at 2 p.m.

Tickets can be purchased for $3 in advance at Ticket Express or at the door on performance nights.

Art a la Carte series "revs up"

Art a la Carte "revs up" its fall semester lunchtime series Thursday, Oct. 4 with the presentation "Treking to Usonia: Frank Wright and the Crosley Automobile" by Jim Hockenull. The program is at noon in the Gridiron Room of the CUB.

Frank Lloyd Wright was known for designing large, expensive buildings; he also had a penchant for large, expensive motorcars. But his theorizing about an ideal society, which he called "Usonia," led him to confront the problems of low-cost housing and transportation for the masses.

Powel Crosley, Jr., Cincinnati industrialist, brought inexpensive telecommunication to the people. He was often called "The Henry Ford of Radio" and made a good deal of money in the process. But he dreamed of manufacturing a small, economical car, a "car for the forgotten man." He introduced the first Crosley automobile in 1939. At the end of World War II he sold his lucrative radio and appliance business, directing all his energies toward being a car maker.

In the early 1950s the paths of these two men crossed when Wright purchased a fleet of Crosley cars, notably the sporty "Hot Shots" roadsters, for use by his apprentices. Some actually drove the little things on Wright's semi-annual trek between Spring Green, Wis., and Scottsdale, Ariz.

"Treking to Usonia" will document and detail these automotive adventures and explore connections between the successful architect and the failed car manufacturer. The talk is based on research Hockenull did for an article to be published in Automobile Quarterly, summer 1991; and the talk will be illustrated with previously unpublished material from the Wright archives and other sources.

Jim Hockenull is an author and artist living in Pullman. He is a member of the Society of Automotive Historians and a regular contributor to car-collectors' magazines. He and his wife Jo maintain a collection of offbeat, unusual autos.

Other Art a la Carte presentations during the fall semester include:

■ Jerry Turner, Artistic Director, Oregon Shakespeare Festival and VPLAC; Artist-in-Residence; "Planning the Chaos," Oct. 11.

■ Marilyn Lysohir, Artist; "The Dark Side of Dazzle," Oct. 18.

■ Film, "The Shadow Catcher: E.S. Curtis and North American Indians," Oct. 25.

■ Brenda Wong Aoki, Storyteller and VPLAC Artist-in-Residence, "Bringing Together Eastern and Western Theatre Arts," Nov. 2.

Art a la Carte is sponsored by the Museum of Art, Compton Union and Activities/Recreational Sports. Programs are generally Thursdays at noon in the Gridiron Room of the CUB. The Gridiron Room is accessible via a stairway located at the back of the Cafeteria. Those needing handicapped access should contact CUB 143.

Fall films full of fun

Analysis By JAY FORMAN
Staff Writer

As I told you in Loud and Clear, this year is going to be a hot one for the movies. An amazing amount of movies are coming out in the next few months, some blockbusters, some sleepers and some bombs.

Most of the blockbusters will be released at Christmas time.

Danny Glover stars in the sequel to Predator, which takes place in the streets of New York. Glover might carry this one, but without the big Arnold guy I just don't know if it'll work. The movie will make a sizable chunk of dough, but won't pack the punch of the first one.

Christmas also brings the third installment of the Godfather with Al Pacino giving the performance of his life. No more Marlon, yet this one will be a powerhouse. With Andy Garcia fresh off Internal Affairs starring as an aspiring mafia kingpin, the premise should come through in the clutch.

Family movies include John Hughes' Home Alone. When the large family leaves for vacation it forgets one son at home. The night the family leaves the house gets robbed by a couple of dopey thieves. One is played by Joe Pesci, Mel and Danny's sidekick in Lethal Weapon 2. This movie will fly because the lovable kid in Uncle Buck, who asked John Candy why he has more nose hair than his father, is the kid alone in his home, preparing to defend it at all costs.

You already know about the Schwarzenegger movie Kindergarten Cop and it's going to rake it in.

John LeCarre's Russia House stars Sean Connery and Michelle Pfeiffer. Though the story is good and you can't top Connery, I'm not sure if Christmas goes will pay to see this movie about spies and stuff.

There's Repossessed with Linda (The Exorcist) Blair doing her devilish role one more time in a comedy. The Naked Gun's Leslie Neilson plays the priest. I haven't seen any previews yet; but if the premise works it could be a sleeper hit. Neilson is hilarious.

Kevin Costner fans might check out his Civil War movie, Dances With Wolves, which he both stars in and directs. Costner plays a Civil War officer who becomes involved with the Sioux Indians. From what I hear it's supposed to be a movie of epic proportions; but at three hours running time I won't be there.

Halloween brings George Romero's remake of the cult classic Night of the Living Dead; and from what I saw of it it'll be great. Also we get Stephen King's Graveyard Shift, taken from his book Night Shift. This one's about some rodent killers dealing with some killer rodents.

If you can stomach it there's another Halloween sequel. You can count me out.

Hopefully, the one I've been waiting for, Misery, will be a great movie. It's got all the ingredients: a Stephen King novel, a great director in Rob Reiner who's making his first ever suspense movie after directing When Harry Met Sally... and James Caan playing the injured writer Paul Sheldon.

The story is about a writer who breaks both legs in a car crash and finds himself in the care of a huge, lovable and quite insane nurse named Annie Wilkes. Annie loves Sheldon's Misery titles and, luckily for her, she saved both Sheldon and his brand new, unpublished manuscript from the wreckage. When she reads the manuscript her love for the writer Sheldon becomes hatred because of what he had just done to her favorite character. The book was a nail biter; and if the movie is done the right way—I'm there, baby.

Those are the early reports. I'm sure there are tons I haven't mentioned; but those are the biggies. So when the snow starts to fall again and you want to catch a movie with a loved one—there'll be plenty of choices.

Following her remarks, she will answer questions and lead a discussion.

The presentation will be at 12:30 p.m. Wednesday at the Women's Center.

Recital features tenor

Songs by Duke Ellington, Jerome Kern and Arnold Schoenberg will be performed tonight by Charles Walton, professor of music at University of Idaho.

Walton will perform cabaret songs from the World War I era at 8 p.m. at the Lionel Hampton School of Music recital hall.

Walton, a tenor, will be accompanied by Jay Mauchley, also a UI music professor.

Schoenberg composed his songs in 1901 when he was hired by a cabaret nightclub in Berlin. At that time, cabarets took place in cafes where the young artists and musicians of the time gathered to exhibit their latest works.

These types of songs became popular during World War I. Some of Schoenberg and others' works were recorded recently by Michael Feinstein on an album called Over There. The album features songs from the early 20th century.

Walton will also perform songs by Harold Arlen, Francis Paulene, Ned Rowen, Samuel Barber and William Bolcom. The concert is free and open to the public.

Cello Choir performs

Classical music enthusiasts will appreciate Thursday evening's concert at the Lionel Hampton School of Music recital hall.

The University of Idaho Cello-Bass Choir will perform at 8 p.m. The group will perform works by Vivaldi, Berger, Joplin and Faure.

Among its repertoire are works by Handel, Debussy and Beethoven.

The Cello-Bass Choir is composed of students, faculty and community members. It includes Bruce Castleton of Preston; Mary Conitz of Deary; Alicia Haakenson of Coeur d'Alene; Jan Hallaq, John Mohan, Bill Roberts, Bill Wharton, Linda Wharton, and Brian Wharton, all of Moscow; Tanya Gilbert Peterson and Bryce Quarve, both of Spokane; and Dawn Hamilton of Nampa.

The concert is free and open to the public.

Students win awards for compositions

Nine young composers have won the 1989-90 BMI Student Composer Awards.

The winners range in age from 14-26. Frances W. Preston, BMI's President and CEO announced the decisions of the jury and presented awards to the winners at a reception on June 7 at the Plaza Hotel in New York City. Composer Milton Babbitt, chairman of the BMI Student Composer Awards and Ralph N. Jackson, director of the awards and head of BMI's Concert Music Relations, joined the presentations.

The BMI Student Composer Awards recognize superior creative talent. Winners receive scholarship grants to be applied toward their musical education. Cash awards totaled $15,000 and ranged from $600 to $1,800. The winners are: Riad Abdel-Gawad, Paul J. Dickinson, Pierre Jalbert, Stuart H. Jones, Jeffrey Louie, Robert Maggio, Gene Marshall, Erik Santos and Arlan N. Schultz.

Distinguished jury members were Leslie Bassett, George Crumb, Lukas Foss, Leon Kirchner and Otto Luening. The preliminary judging committee was Bruce Adolphe, Richard Danielpour, and Aaron Kernis. Ulysses Kay is BMI's permanent consultant for the awards.

"BMI is proud to have continued the tradition of the Student Composer Awards for 38 years," Preston said. "We have supported the growth of 363 musical careers and seven of our winners have gone on to win the coveted Pulitzer Prize in Music."

In addition, Preston announced that the Young Musicians Foundation in Los Angeles will again sponsor an orchestra performance at UCLA of a work by a student composer award winner.

"This is all made possible by a very good friend of the BMI composing family and President of the Young Musicians Foundation, Lalo Schifrin," she said.

Also during the ceremony, a special citation was presented to the New York Youth Symphony for excellence in performance and education.

"The orchestra is one of New York's most vital and innovative ensembles and very deserving of this recognition," BMI's Ralph Jackson explained.

The New York Youth Symphony, currently in its 27th season, presents six free concerts each season at Carnegie Hall and at Queens College. Also cited was the orchestra's innovative First Music program which has commissioned 18 young composers to write orchestra works since the program began. Thirteen of these composers are also Student Composer Award winners. Frances Preston presented the citation to Barry Goldberg, Executive Director of the orchestra.

The BMI Student Composer Awards, established in 1951, were co-sponsored by BMI and the BMI Foundation, which provided the prize money. This year more than 350 manuscripts and tapes were submitted from young composers throughout the Western Hemisphere. All works were judged under pseudonyms.

BMI Foundation, Inc. was established in 1984 to support individuals interested in furthering their musical education and to assist organizations involved with music performance and education.

Book offers fact-finding fun

By SALLY GILPIN
Arts/Leisure Editor

Having trouble finding some data for a paper? Do you need some information on receiving a student loan? If you are suffering from these or any other information problems, Matthew Lesko has the answers for you.

Lesko's latest book, Lesko's Info-Power is a four-pound roadmap leading you through the thousands of sources of information found at the state and federal government levels.

Lesko has compiled 30,000 information leads, telephone numbers for 8,000 experts in every imaginable field and countless tips on how to find the information you want.

When I first glanced at this book I did not think it could help me, but I was wrong. Within a few minutes I discovered I could travel free with the U.S. Coast Guard on an ice-breaking expedition in the North Atlantic, locate a neighbor who is now in prison, tag birds and other wildlife as a U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service volunteer or learn how to choose a financial investment.

The book opens with tips on how to start an information search, including listing some starting places, telephone interview tips and how to tell if you have received outdated or incorrect information.

The rest of the book is divided into topical sections such as education, careers, vacations and health and medicine. Each of these sections lists some general sources to begin with, then lists more specific sources.

Listings begin with a subject headline, i.e. "International Trade Commission Jobs," then gives the address and phone number of the source followed by a brief summary, including the cost of the information, if any.

The book can help students with term papers, job searches, travel, tax help and hobbies.

For example: you have to do a research paper and the library doesn't have the information you are looking for. Lesko's Info-power lists at least 100 sources for term paper information. One of those sources is the Congressional Research Service. This governmental agency puts out thousands of research reports each year. You can obtain them at no charge. Simply call the CRS office and ask for titles on a subject, then select the reports you would like to receive. Some titles include: Media Entertainment Sex and Violence;

Impact on Society, Especially Children, Endangered Species: Info Pack and Computers in Elementary and Secondary Schools: An Analysis of Recent Congressional Action.

If the name Lesko sounds familiar, you may have seen him on an evening talk show discussing the types of information, research, assistance and money that is available from the government. Lesko has appeared on "The Tonight Show," "Late Night With David Letterman" and "Donahue."

Lesko started his first information brokerage company in 1975 in his bedroom. Since then his business has expanded tenfold. His clients are some of the largest companies in America. In addition he has written more than 40 books on locating information.

This key to the door of opportunity costs $33.95 and is worth the price. It's a reference source you can use now while you are in college and after you graduate.

Three picks to take home

By Jay Forman
Staff Writer

So you say you like rock and roll. Your grandfather just sent you a 20; you have nothing better to do than head down to the record store to buy a new CD. Yeah, you've looked around and you're not sure what's good. You don't know what to buy!

Here are a few suggestions. In the past few weeks there have been a few good releases in the rock scene, some by newcomers and some by the ones who've been around for a while.

One band that's been around is AC/DC. Let's face the facts, AC/DC will never top Back in Black, but they still get it done, even today. Their new album, The Razor's Edge is surprisingly fresh. There are 12 tunes on this one and get this: They don't all sound the same! This album was produced by Bruce Fairbairn, who also produced the latest from Aerosmith, Poison and those Bon Jovi albums that sold so many copies.

People tell me a producer doesn't make much difference. Do me one favor. Grab all of your favorite albums, and line them up. If the same producer isn't there at least twice, I'll be surprised.

Fairbairn has breathed life into the AC/DC machine. Angus Young plays some good guitar and Brian Johnson doesn't scream at the top of his lungs. The new video is cool. Songs like "Thunderstruck" and "Rock Your Heart Out" are fresh additions to the AC/DC repertoire, and those should go over well in the arenas. I'm thinking this album just might sell a few copies.

Before you judge me on this one, I just wanna say I hate Warrant just as much as you do. Their last album was filled with so many rock cliches I couldn't listen to it all the way through. So when the new album was released, I thought, yeah right.

But they threw me a curve. The album is really good. They rock a lot harder this time out, and I still can't believe it's the same band. Their songwriting has improved. All I can say is it deserves a listen. Songs like "Sure Feels Good To Me" and "Love In Stereo" are simply great songs to party with or just rock whilst hitting the books. I'm the worst cynic if I don't like an album; but Warrant surprised me. Check out Cherry Pie because it might shock you.

The House of Lords' new album, Sahara, is just out. House of Lords is comprised of Greg Guffria (remember the name?); Chuck Wright, who played bass for a while in Quiet Riot; and this unbelievable singer named James Christian. (There's a drummer and another guitar player in there as well, but I can't remember their names.) These guys have it all. Their sound is unique for the rock scene and that itself is a statement. There are 10 songs on Sahara, including the cover of Steve Winwood's "Can't Find My Way Back Home" which has some acoustic guitar to take you away. Rockers like "Heart On The Line" and the title track made me sit back and wonder how they did it.

A bonus with this album is the guest stars. Singing back up vocals is Mike Tramp, lead singer for White Lion, two guys from Cheap Trick, Ron Keel from Keel, Gene Simmons and a few others. Playing guitar is Doug Aldridge from Hurricane on a few songs and this album has a lot going for it. Look for it. When new albums are released by big artists like Def Leppard or Guns 'N Roses everybody knows about it and that's why the album sells as much as it does. With House of Lords, there isn't going to be as much fanfare but it's as good as the big guys, if not better.

So there you have it. At least three choices from the music scene of rock and roll. Kiss that 20 good-bye.

decision not to hold Waterbust at Boyer Park. The Corps supported their decision but was concerned the event might take place informally at the "Dunes." Fearing the possibility of a large unruly crowd, several agencies (including Corps resources staff) dispatched a number of officers to patrol the area on Aug. 25. We are pleased to report that the majority of the 300-400 folks that visited the "Dunes" were responsible citizens who took the time to treat our public lands and their fellow visitors with respect. Each agency involved reported that only a few citations were issued and that vandalism was minimal. Again, we would like to thank those responsible folks that visited Illia Dunes for setting a good example. It is encouraging to see people leaving our public lands cleaner than when they arrived. If you were one of those people we thank you and encourage your continued stewardship and enjoyment of our public lands.
