'Prowler' alarms Elm St. sororities

By ANDREA VOGT Staff Writer

S ecurity has been increased at some of the soror-ities on Elm Street due to recent prowler scares and phone threats.

A few weeks ago two members of Delta Gamma sorority were followed home and then chased through their yard and into their house by an unknown older male subject.

The lock on their door was broken at the time of the occurrence, allowing the man to enter after the two girls. Members of a nearby fraternity heard screams and chased the man out of the house. When the police arrived the subject had fled the

One week ago police picked up a suspicious subject who had been sitting in the infirmary parking lot "watching" the Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority. The intent of the individual is unknown according to campus liaison officer, Cpl. John Roys.

Three nights later obscene and threatening phone calls were made to the house.

These recent occurrences, among others, have caused significant alarm in the sororities. Roys, however, believes there is no reason for panic, just heightened awareness.

For occurrences like these to happen in a few short days is not unusual-just unnerving for those who are targets," Roys said. "I don't think we have a nightstalker on our hands."

Kirsti Maddy, president of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority, said security there has been increased.

"We recently had new lighting and windows put in the back of our house, and we are encouraging everyone to walk in groups at night," Maddy said. Roys commented on the problems that particular sorority has had in the past.

The Kappa house is a notorious target with its easy access to the sleeping porch on the Elm Street side, and the dark alley between it and the infirmary is a thoroughfare for all kinds of things to happen," Roys said.

I think people are just more sensitive to personal privacy now," Roys said. "Elm Street used to be a
'Y'all come over,' Wild West type atmosphere where everyone just did what they wanted to do on

According to Roys, people's tolerance has decreased for this type of harassment. Police patrol has been heavy on Elm Street in the last few days. Roys said the best precaution to take is to be aware of your environment.

wareness is not as heightened in the as it is in the residence halls," Roys said. "It's just the nature of the beast, people feel safer in large numbers and tend to let their guard down."

It is important for everyone to be a little more security conscious, Roys added, especially in the communal atmospheres.

Funding hung-up for new mines building

By JIM VOLLBRECHT Staff Writer

The proposed construction for a I new mines building at the University of Idaho is facing the same budget ax that all other federal projects are subject to in this troubled budget year.

The chances are very good except for this difficult financial year," said Dr. Robert W. Bartlett, dean of the College of Mines and Earth Resources. "Sen. McClure has been a big supporter of this project, it wouldn't be successful without him."

The original concept for the building was for an Advanced Technolgy Complex. This complex would house not only the mines department, but also the engineering department and labs for the physics department.

When Bartlett took over as dean three years ago, the mines department defined their needs and decided their costs. The department then set out to find their own funding sources to meet these needs.

The federal government was the first to come up with funds for the project. The original agreement was for $7 million over two years, $3 million the first and $4 million the next. The second installment is providing the stumbling block now.

With the federal funds in hand and he agreement of then UI President Richard Gibb, $2 million in state funding was obtained from the legislature.

'We've also have $1 million in pledges from the private sector," Bart-it through congress this session even though the amount requested has been upped to $5.8 million due to inflation.

When the mines department got the funding we split the project into two phases. Phase one will take care of the mines building," Eve Magyar, UI architect/planner, said.

The new building will most likely be placed east of the present mines building and may cut across 7th St.

If it does cut across 7th we will maintain pedestrian access," Magyar

The physics department has come up with some funding as well, and the building will accommodate some new physics labs as a result.

Diverse schedule of activities offered for 1990 Homecoming Weekend

By DAVID JOHANSON Staff Writer

T daho alumni will have a chance to attend or participate in a variety of events during the 'Hi-Tech Idaho' Homecoming weekend.

In addition to the annual parade and football game, the 1990 ASUI Homecoming Committee has arranged a number of activities for alumni, one of which is a special halftime performance of alumni cheerleaders from as far back as 1932.

Joanne McCroskey, reunion coordinator at the university's alumni office, said this is the first time a cheerleader reunion has been held for Homecoming.

Forty alumni cheerleaders will be returning for the Homecoming weekend and will include cheerleader members from the 1930s up to the 1980s.

At halftime the cheerleaders will perform the Idaho Fight Song which was written by one of the cheerleaders' fathers in 1933.

Morey O'Donnell, who graduated from the university's law school in 1936, wrote the fight song for songfest in 1933. His daughter, Dr. JoAnne O'Donnell, who is currently Associate Dean of Students at Arizona State, was a cheerleader at Idaho in 1959 and will be returning this weekend.

The cheerleaders will also appear on the Alpha Phi Omega float during Saturday's parade. For more recent alumni, there will be a Young Alumni Gathering' at the Moscow Hotel lounge Friday at 8 p.m. Idaho alumni from the past 15 years are welcome.

Each year the university hosts a 25 year class reunion for Idaho alumni. The class of 1965 can participate in a Reunion Campus Bus Tour beginning at the University Inn on Friday at 3 p.m. The tour is followed by a social hour at 5:30 p.m. and a dinner at 7 p.m. Both the dinner and the social hour will be held at the University Inn.

Everyone is invited to a Homecoming warm-up breakfast which will take place on Saturday from 7:30 to 9 a.m. at the Student Union Building. Tickets for the breakfast can be purchased at the Alumni Office.

This year's Homecoming Parade has been classified as a 'must see' event by the 1990 Homecoming Committee. Floats and marching bands will highlight the parade, as will this year's grand marshals: Malcolm, Edgar and Carol Renfrew.

Dave Burns, homecoming parade chairman, said there will be around 62 parade entries this year. Gov. Cecil Andrus and Carol Andrus will appear early on in the parade as special dignitaries. University of Idaho President Elizabeth Zinser and Paul Agidius, the mayor of Moscow will also ride in the parade.

Other entries include area high school marching bands, the UI Homecoming Royalty, living group floats, the SArb Clydsdales and an all service color

A pre-game 'Vandal Huddle-Outdoor Barbecue' is open to alumni, Vandal Boosters and students during the noon hour at the ASUI-Kibbie Dome Track.

Hal Logan and the Senders will. highlight the traditional Homecoming dance with music from the 50s and 60s at the University Inn from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. Saturday. The dance is open to the public.

Donations for Madge fund reach $4000

By KALISTA BARCLAY Staff Writer

When Madge Brown needed help last November after having intestinal surgery she was overwhelmed by the response.

Madge, owner of the Perch, was hospitalized at Gritman Memorial Hospital for two weeks and then went to the home of her daughter in Kirkland, Wash. to recover. The Perch was closed in her absence; but Madge was, not forgotten.

Betsy Peterson found out that Madge had no medical insurance to cover her hospital bills. Peterson started the Madge Fund to help. She made the Campus Christian Center, where she works, headquarters for the fund. Jars for change and bills were placed in the athletic department and at the Perch. People also came by the center and dropped off checks or gave cash. Peterson added this to the money collected in the jars and wrote a check to Gritman Hospital.

The Lionel Hampton School of Music helped by dedicating the last two Christmas concerts to Madge. Included in the programs were inserts telling the audience about Madge, her illness and her "People at the School of Music as much as anyone let the public know about Madge and her need," Peterson said.

Stephen Lyons, editor of Idaho The University magazine included an article about the Madge Fund in the winter 1989 issue. The article included the address of the Campus Christian Center for alumni to send their donations. Peterson said she received letters and checks from alumni from around the world including one from a reserve naval officer and former student of the university who was stationed on a ship in the Persian Gulf. He had heard Madge needed help through the magazine.

The fund raised $4,000 through the Campus Christian Center and several checks were received directly by Gritman.

"There are a lot of really caring people out there," Peterson said. Madge was overwhelmed by the help of the students and the entire campus according to Jo Kleffner, a personal friend of Madge. "She wants to thank all of you for your help and your care and your money," Kleffner said. Madge now lives with her Madge now lives with her daughter in Kirland and has decided to sell the Perch. According to Kleffner, it was too much work for her and she did not want to do it anymore. The Perch property, including the beauty parlor, town houses and the apartment upstairs is for sale by Harden Realty.

Greeks show pride by 'adopting' highways

By STEPHANIE BAILEY

University of Idaho greek houses are helping clean up the Palouse highways and having fun at the same time.

Governor Andrus has called the six month old "Adopt-A-Highway" program a great success. The program provides trash bags, orange vests and cones and a permanent recognition sign for groups or individuals willing to "adopt" a mile or two.

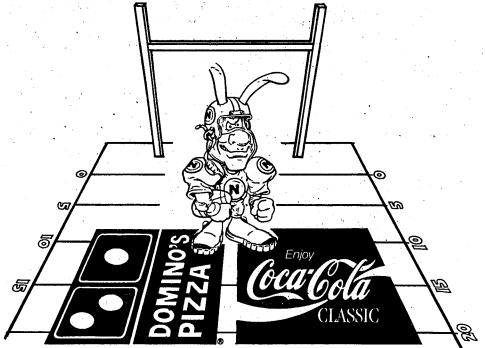

Lambda Chi Alpha and Phi Gamma Delta fraternities and Delta Gamma sorority are currently involved in the program. Each house has adopted two miles which they clean four times a year.

Lambda Chi project chairman Dwayne Bershaw said they decided on the philanthropy project "because it sounded like something good to do for the environment."

"It's a good program," Bershaw said. "It isn't as bad as it sounds and we always seem to

School of Communication hopes to start grad program

By LARRY OLSEN Staff Writer

The University of Idaho School of Communication hopes to have a graduate program installed by 1992.

With the Faculty Staff approval for a master's degree to be offered in mass communication, the department now needs approve from UI President Elisabeth Zinser and the board of regents.

"After that (approval) we will still need funding for the program and if things go well it will be implemented by 1992," said Peter Haggart, communication department chairman.

The new graduate program would emphasize research, advanced study and creative work in communication that are associated with mass media.

Graduate students in the program will be able to study any of the communication fields including advertising, broadcasting, film, journalism, photography, public relations and telecommunication.

According to Haggart, when the program was designed, the communication faculty intended for it to be compatible with similar programs at Boise State University and Idaho State University.

This would provide the three universities with the ability to publish a joint publication on mass communication, set up a professional in-residence program and coordinate a faculty exchange.

According to Haggart, 15-20 students each year have expressed interest in a graduate program for communication, which led to the design of this program.

Student Advisory Services helps students

By KARA THOMAS: Staff Writer

Student Advisory Services encompasses more than most students would think. The office that is located in the UCC has at least 10 separate offices working out of it.

Bruce Pitman is the dean of SAS and residence living. Linda Wilson and Todd Wiggen handle greek affairs. They deal with the greek houses and their national offices and are involved in sorority and fraternity rush.

Any problems that arise with the student code of conduct are handled by Nancy Atkinson, Brian Long and Steve Mahaffey.

Dianne Milhollin is in charge of substance abuse and disabled students. Things such as a new telecommunications device for the deaf and programs for alcohol awareness week come from this department.

John Cooper coordinates the international program and Louisa Walker is the international student, adviser.

According to Dee Rupe, administrative assistant, the SAS office has the highest confidentiality of any office on campus. As an entire office they handle such things as crisis intervention and students withdrawing from the university.

"We are a student-oriented office that falls between academic advisers and the counseling center," Rupe said.

Other offices that are associated with the SAS are the Women's Center, Veterans' telecommunications device for Employment and the Earlythe deaf and programs for alco-Childhood Learning Center.

The Women's Center performs a variety of functions for all students at the university. They are a support for women and men and have two students counselors. They are a resource for students and have files on many subjects.

This office provides rape education and a nontraditional student program. The center houses a lounge and a library for breaks between classes. A newsletter is published six times a year and a childcare directory is updated twice a year.

The center also hosts programs several times a month. Betsy Thomas is the director.

Mary Spilva is the acting director of the Early Childhood Learning Center.

SBA wants out of ASUI

By MAREEN BARTLETT
Staff Writer

ASUI senate heard discussion Wednesday concerning a resolution that would allow for the withdrawal of the Student Bar Association from the ASUI, creating an independent and parallel student association. This withdrawal would also include a loss of $18,000 in fees to the ASUI, to be received instead by the SBA.

The main reason for the separation, according to SBA President Steve Mahaffy, would be to increase allocation of monies to law school subgroups that are currently ASUI funded. Instead of law students paying an ASUI fee of $31.50 each semester, this resolution would allow a mandatory SBA fee. Law students would still retain the option of paying the ASUI fee to become members of both organizations.

Sen. Steve Brooks raised the question of which services the resolution would deny law school students. Responses from Mahaffy included speaker series, film series and KUOI radio.

Conscious of the present alienation of UI law school students, ASUI Attorney General Dennis Charney is wary of any policy that would give them "special treatment,"

"It would be the disintegration of the ASUI...the first step in its crumbling," Chaney said, asking that living groups urge their senators not to adopt this resolution.

In other senate business, the following appointments were approved: Susan Paider to the Recreation Advisory Board, Randi Arnold to the Communications Board and Kristin Goodman to the Activities Board.

The senate also passed two amendments concerning an increase in voter polling booths and times in which they will be operated. The intent is to promote awareness and to increase voting involvement. Senate established Friday, Oct. 12, 1990 as official ASUI Voter Registration Day.

Media Services offered

By KIM COOPER Staff Writer

Located in room 215 of the University Classroom Center, is the somewhat unnoticed services of the campus Media Center.

The center is under the direction of Harvey Hughett, who is also the director of Instructional Graphics, Instructional Television and Photo Services.

The center provides three major areas of service. These include Audio Visual Support Services, Printing and Design Services, and Instructional Television Services.

Some of the services provided by Audio Visual Support include classroom-AV equipment loans, slide projectors, overhead projectors, VCRs and camcorders. Their Film and Video Library contains over 12,000 titles which is available to faculty at no cost.

Other divisions of the Audio

Visual Support are the University Photographic Services, located in UCC 105, custom presentation graphics, computer graphics, slide imaging, AV equipment and maintenance and Instructional Research and Development.

Printing and Design Services provide printing services, quality printing of books, flyers, graphs, cards, charts, envelopes, letterheads and much more. Publication Copier Services centers are located in the Media Center Annex, the SUB and in the Alumni Building.

The Instructional Television Services provide instructional TV production, program distribution, individual program review and videotape copy and film chain services.

These services are available to students, faculty and staff. Nominal charges depend on the type of service provided.

Student senators should make a committment

Welcome back for Homecoming. We hope everything is like you remember it. The chill of fall is in the air and just recently the leaves began to turn.

To make you feel at home, we would like you to know that things here at the Argonaut haven't changed much. The paper may look different, but keep reading and we think you'll find the issues are still the same.

Let's start with a quiz:

Which of the following is true (pick one): A. Due to busy class schedules the Argonaut will not be published next week.

B. Due to too much homework for the student employees the Wallace cafeteria will no longer have snack bar.

C. Due to lack of time your ASUI Senator doesn't feel it is necessary to visit his or her living groups any more.

The correct answer is C.

Wednesday the ASUI Senate failed to pass a reprimand against Sen. Steve Brooks for failing to visit his living groups.

Brooks himself voted for the reprimand, although he told Vice President Mike Gotch that the only reason he was going to the meeting was because the reprimand would be up for a vote. Also voting for the reprimand were Sens. Bill Heffner and Julie McCoy. Two senators chose to abstain from the vote altogether.

One of the main reasons the other senators didn't support the reprimand was because they didn't want to be hypocritical. You see, they don't have time to visit living groups either—they're just lucky enough that their living groups excused their absences.

"There but for the grace of God go I," one senator

The group spent a seemingly endless amount of time whining about their other commitments. They just don't have time to go to their living groups.

Neither do they have time to become informed about the departments they govern. They are required to visit the ASUI departments, including the Argonaut, KUOI, Outdoor Programs, etc., early in the

One senator went so far as to call these rules "silly." "I wish I had the time to do a better job about it...," one senator mentioned.

Well here's an idea—if you don't have the time step down and let someone in who does. Senators should be committed enough to fulfill the duties set forth in the ASUI Rules and Regulations. If not there are plenty of students willing to do so.

Linda Britton and Doug Korn realized that and resigned. However, none of those who admitted Wednesday to not having enough time to fulfill their duties indicated that they were soon to resign.

To add insult to injury the group is now considering changing the Rules and Regulations so they won't receive public reprimands for not fulfilling their duties. Whatever happened to accountability?

Elections are coming up—let's not let this happen again. Ask the candidates what their commitments will be for the upcoming year. Just because they take the time to visit you during the election does not mean they ever intend on visiting again.

'War on drugs' causes more problems than good

For the past two years the may have been watching you. United States has been at war, wasting millions of tax dollars and manpower hours. This so called war is known to you and I as the war on drugs. Yet like any huge government undertaking there is the average bag of failures, falsehoods and inefficiency.

Mark Milam

Commentary

After two years many people are frustrated and the restless campaign continues on. We have angered our southern neighbors continuously. Just recently DEA agents ventured into Mexico and kidnapped a doctor who agents believed assisted in the torture of an agent in Guadalajara. Was that justified? What about international law? Out of Mexico City angry protest was heard; until recently Mexico was one of our biggest allies in the war. With recent, and may I say, constant embarrassment it is apparent that Mexico is sliding back into its policy of turning their backs.

Even in this country the war on drugs is striking out at innocent people. A recent mastermind operation by the DEA targeted businesses and individuals who sold indoor growing material and lighting equipment. The operation, coded Agent Green Merchant, was intended to take a bite out of the indoor marijuana growing market in the United States. Some smart guy in Washington figured this was the way to cut the number of pot, smokers, since they are such evil, sadistic individuals.

Yet what this pencil pusher overlooked is that a large number of Americans also grow vegetables, fruits, and flowers indoors as well, and they use the same material as the dope growers. So along the way a number of rights were violated. So if you ever sent your name in for some type of greenhouse material or indoor lighting then your name was on one of those lists that were seized in the raids, and who knows, they tion you usually try desperate measures, hoping those actions will accomplish your goal, and quite often those acts are rational and well thought out. This does not hold true with our friends in sheep clothing in Washington. Speaking of Washington that is were they let admitted cocaine addict Marion Barry walk clean, like an angel with dirty wings. Columbia had some harsh reactions to the Barry trial. I mean why should they chase after drug barons who are ripping their country apart, when we more or less encourage drug addiction.

The craziest idea of the drug war was recently laid out by Republican Lawrence Coughlin. The Pennsylvania Republic has the twisted idea to recruit the Coast Guard into an operation that would shoot down planes that were suspected of carrying drugs. Two harsh words there, 'shoot down' and 'suspected.' According to Coughlin, the Coast Guard would outfit a plane with a large arsenal that would track any 'suspicious' planes. Then after making a drop off, a crew would swarm down in a helicopter and test the material and determine if it is drugs. Then the plane would be ordered to land, and if that fails then just blast them out of the sky.

I have a couple of questions for Mr. Coughlin, first of all what happens when you shoot down a plane in international waters? Often smugglers make their, drops off shore and then boat back in. The Coast Guard would back me on that one. Secondly, what happens when you send a crew of men down to check the cargo, and they are ambushed by a large group of traffickers. These guys always carry weapons, and are not afraid to use them, especially during a nighttime delivery. I am sure the Coast Guard would agree on that statement as well. Another question is what makes Coughlin think the threat of force and tighter legislation will stop the smuggling, specifically air smuggling, of illegal

Student leaders should uphold students' rights

Editor:

I've read with dismay and disgust of the attempts to censor the 1990 Gem of the Mountains yearbook. The administration can be expected to try to take away student rights and censor the student press. But the student government? Student government's main purpose is to protect the rights of students, not take them away. Even through the various problems the ASUI had in the past few years, we always vigorously supported the rights of the student press.

Until now. Now the very people who should be fighting tooth and nail to support the yearbook's First Amendment rights are doing the opposite. Paula Kilmartin, ASUI Communications Board chairperson, is not supporting the student press. Instead, she is attempting to censor the yearbook. Kilmartin claims that the approval of the board is necessary for pictures of the Gault Hall streak to be printed. This kind of action would be appropriate if Kilmartin was working for Hitler or Stalin, but it is absolutely heinous coming from a so-called student advocate.

Although Hitler and Stalin didn't hire Kilmartin, ASUI President David Pena did. Pena, instead of taking Kilmartin to task for her pathetic performance, has supported and encouraged her censorship attempts.

What happened to the student government that supported students' rights? What are these people thinking? As a former Communications Board member and chairperson, I'm at a loss.

The yearbook's purpose is to reflect student life. Anything pertaining to student life is acceptable for the yearbook. The Gault Hall streak has been happening for decades and is always promoted in advance to assure an audience. It is a public event that happens on campus, and is therefore a proper subject for news

But any decent press attorney could make that clear. The real issue is who has control over what gets printed. In the past, abuse of the student press by the ASUI was prevented by a communication board that fought for the editors' right to complete editorial control. That didn't mean the Communication Board always agreed with what the editor was saying, it just meant that board supported the editor's right to say it. Past ASUI presidents have known that the Argonaut, Gem. and KUOI must be free to print or broadcast what they deem appropriate, or they become nothing more than mouthpieces for the ASUI.

Abuse was prevented by ASUI officers who thought a free press was more important than their own popularity. People like Brad Cuddy, former ASUI president. Cuddy was often attacked in Argonaut editorials, but nevertheless always fought for the editor's right to print those editor-

Environmentalist groups should not be stereotyped

Editor:

As a student in a natural resource field, as well as somewhat of an "environmentalist" I felt compelled to write a response to Chuck Brockway's commentary on radical environmentalism. Referring to Earth Day in the same sentence as Earth First! (EF!) as being "environmental extremism" underlines the need for educating the general public on environmentalism, environmental groups and their causes.

It seems Brockway's commentary heaps all environmental groups and advocates in the same category as EF! One must realize that there is a whole spectrum of environmental groups and causes in the United States and the world. Their causes range from funding environmental publications, conventions and scholarships, as the United Nations Environmental Program does, to direct action and "no compromise in defense of mother earth," as EF! advocates. Within this spectrum there are numerous organizations such as the Sierra Club and the Wilderness Society that express their means of communication through the "proper political channels," and do very well in the bureaucratic maze, thank you very much. But if political environmental groups aren't your cup of tea, there are many other groups to choose from. The Nature Conservancy concentrates on stewardship of land to protect biological diversity. Ducks Unlimited chooses to preserve wetland habitat. Within this spectrum, each group chooses to express their view individually. This, I feel, helps keep their autonomy and helps them from all being lumped into one category, such as "radical environmental groups."

To suggest that environmental groups use free speech to express their views in a non-visible way instead of "resorting to juvenile protest marches" is asinine. Would one suggest the same for the ERA, civil rights movement or suffrage? The rights of free speech and peaceful assembly are guaranteed to each American citizen and to suggest otherwise would infringe on our Constitutional rights.

I also find it difficult to call environmentalists "warped" for believing that all species have a right to live in their own habitat. I have a feeling that many scientists, scholars and others believe this too. Contrary to popular belief, environmentalists don't think that all development on Earth is bad. There is a concept called sustainable development that means increasing prosperity without the destruction of the environment. It is being practiced by more and more forest resource companies as well as groups such as the rubber tappers in the Amazon Basin. In fact William D. Ruckelshaus, former head of Weyerhauser, stated that he, as a member of the World Commission on Environment and Development, "proposes sustainable development as a new model for economic growth." This would help curb the "mindless continuation of current practices leading to a descending spiral of environmental degradation, increased poverty, desperate remedies inflicting further destruction of irreplaceable environmental assets." Also, David Rockefeller suggests that "environmental concerns be made integral-not add-on-priorities wherever economic decisions are made. If even so-called "industrialists" such as-Rockefeller and Ruckelshaus advocate such environmental concepts, where does that leave

Suggesting that environmental groups may lose their credibility may be a result of the environmental movement in itself. However, more and more industries and countries are changing their ways in favor of some environmental concern. The environmental movement and groups are getting somewhere, and they are here to stay.

UI Black Lit. course open to all

Editor

In the Oct. 5 Issue of the Argonaut, Tim Cook raves about a rap album "Let There Be Harmony," noting the particular value of this music at a university "without an Afro-American literature course." Just to set the record straight, Black Lit (Eng. 483) is an established course in the English Department. This spring my focus in Eng. 483 will be on black U.S. women writers. I welcome students from departments other than English. If anyone is interested in the course but wishes more information before preregistering, feel free to come speak with me about it.

Andrus concerned about students

Editor:

This is a big week for the University of Idaho. We are all blessed with the presence of family, friends, alumni and dignitaries from around the state. This year Idaho Governor Cecil D. Andrus and his wife Carol will be joining the university in its celebration.

During the Homecoming game, Gov. Andrus will be sitting with the students on our side of the dome. It's refreshing to see the governor of Idaho taking the time to sit and talk with students. Once again it demonstrates his strong commitment to education and his concerns for students.

Throughout his political career Cecil D. Andrus has been the leader of leaders when it comes to fighting for the rights of students whether it be through increased funding for education or advocating adequate financial aid for students.

THUMBS UP for Idaho's Governor Cecil D. Andrus.

Reward offered for Bible stories

Edito

The letter of F.E. Northam (Oct. 5) demonstrates that there is indeed a strong relationship between humans and apes. His mis-statements and misquotations amply demonstrate this.

Mr. Northam claims that I said that "Bible faith does not withstand scholarly scrutiny." What I actually said, in reply to a claim that "Christianity stands or falls on resurrection evidence," was that "the evidence that she (Heidi Scheibe) gives cannot withstand scholarly scrutiny." I then proceeded to state in detail why Ms. Scheibe's claims cannot be true. I based my reply entirely on what the Bible actually says. Northam addresses none of the issues; he only calls my remarks "jeering denunciations."

Mr. Northam then gives us a private redefinition of science as mere observation of "facts" in the present, and dismisses extrapolation of known laws of nature into both the past and the future as "non-scientific conjecture!" Yet he speculates that ancient Babylonian/Hebrew creation myths (there are three different ones in the Christian Bible) are "science" and dismisses the entire edifice of modern science as mere "faith!"

But what Mr. Northam does not mention is that last spring I offered to pay $25 to anyone who can put the alleged "eyewitness" resurrection stories in the Gospels into one consistent account. Since no one has yet claimed the prize, I have raised the offer to $1,000! I am also offering $1,000 for a Nativity story, and $1,000 for a Creation story. I am not anti-Bible, Mr. Northam; I am pro-Bible. And I will even pay people to read it. "Then you will know the truth, and the truth will make you free." (John 8:32) has become incredible. Thanks to people like Lawrence Coughlin, George Bush and William Bennett we all have to suffer the ill effects of a self-righteous government that does more harm than good.

One final note, right now there is a problem with balancing the budget. I would rather see marijuana legalized than watch people lose their jobs, their MediCare benefits and their sense of life. It has been estimated that the tax on marijuana would eleviate some of our great national debt. Hey, think about that, if nothing else:

It has not worked in the past. With every tighter effort those who control the drug markets become increasingly smarter, and this is shown in the tremendous amount of drugs being seized. While the number of smugglers may have decreased because of the law, the quantity pathetic. Since these officials cannot handle the responsibility, the system must be changed to protect itself.

The Argonaut, Gem and KUOI should receive direct funding from student fees rather than being included in ASUI monies. Communications Board could consist of the current editors, managers, and associate editors, as well as former editors. An advisor from the Communication department, the ASUI president, vice president of Student Affairs and the ASUI Operations and Business managers could serve as ex-officio (non-voting) members.

While this solution may not solve all problems, it at least will keep the student media free from ASUI officials greed for uncriticizing, self-serving publicity.

The break up of the ASUI is a sad prospect for those of us who have spent years building and protecting student rights. But better that a part of the ASUI be allowed to continue fulfilling its duty, rather than all the ASUI fall with the current administration.

I'm sure I speak for all former ASUI officials who had the best interest of the students at heart when I say good luck and best wishes to sincere student servants.

Show popular on campus By PATRICK J. TRAPP nd number three on the Top A Ten list of 1990's most intriguing questions— Should Bart Simpson have received an Emmy nomination for Best Actress in a comedy series rather than Best Actor, because a female does his voice in 'The Simpsons?' Number two- Are the News Kids On The Block the next coming of the Beatles (ha, ha, ha, ha oh stop, it's just to funny!)? And the number one answer on the Top Ten list of the most intriguing questions of 1990 is...Just who did kill Laura Palmer?

Laura Palmer is the rigor mortis-laden star of 1990's biggest television hit Twin Peaks. She is also probably the only person besides Elvis to be more alive after her death then she was before. Palmer and the rest of the weird and mysterious characters of Peaks have created a fad not seen since Star Trek left prime time. Yes, the 'Trekkies' may be gone, but the 'Peakies' have arrived

Laura Palmer died so that America could become detectives each week for one hour on national television. College students across the nation have been holding 'Peakie' parties every Sunday night in an attempt to collectively solve the puzzle. On the UI campus, Peaks parties were a common practice among students. Sophomore communications student Heather Murray is one of a dozen students who meet every week to watch the

"Twin Peaks is a great challenge," said Murray. "The setting is elegant and I love the music. The show has a quality I have never seen before. It's hard to put a finger on."

Each of the people in the 'Peakie' group has a different opinion on the identity of the killer, but all of them agree that with each episode there opinion changes several times.

"I think that the killer was the ditzy blonde secretary (Lucy Moran)," said Kevin Ross, a sophomore home economics student and avid 'Peakie'. "And she probably doesn't even know she did it."

"I'd have to go with suicide," said junior 'Peakie' Jim Goss. "Laura Palmer is probably up there having a big laugh on all of

It is not just the mystery that makes Peaks the show of the year, which received 14 Emmy nominations. David Lynch, the man who brought us the mali-groundbreaking show which is a cross between Andy Griffith and Altered States. Peaks most endearing quality is that there is no obvious reasons why we should like it, but we gobble it up anyway. So what exactly is it that makes Peaks so popular?

Is it the uncanny resemblance the female leads have to one another? Oh, what lips!

Is it the magestic aura of the wooden town? I think I did see Elvis sipping a cup of coffee in the local diner.

Is it the devious way the characters do a 180 just as we think we know them?

Is it the haunting visual effects which zap us from one consciousness to another.

I think that it is the secrets of each character and their profoundly unique dispositions that hold the show together. There are the women! Television hasn't seen three sexier lead women since Charlies' Angels. Perhaps the Peaks women are even more appealing because our definition of 'sexy' has changed quite drastically since the hit show of the late 70s. I mean, could Farrah Fawcett knot a cherry stem inside of her mouth using her tongue and teeth? The Peaks women can.

Homecoming concert features wind ensemble, jazz choir

By PATRICK J. TRAPP Staff Writer

S o your parents are coming up on Friday, and the football game and Homecoming festivities don't start until Saturday. Like me, I'm sure most everyone has experienced it. You take the 'P's out to dinner, go home, then spend the rest of the night sitting around talking about your academic progress. There just isn't much to do with your parents in Moscow. Well, tonight there is something to do, the UI Jazz Choir and Wind Ensemble will perform at the Administration Auditorium.

A group of 120 of the University of Idaho's most talented musicians will perform for students, alumni and parents to kick off the Homecoming festivities. The Jazz Choir consists of 70 of the campus' best voices.

"Our Jazz Choir sounds very professional," School of Music Professor Bob Spevacek said. "They have performed all over the Northwest. They really combine their voices for a great melody."

The Jazz Choir will kick off the concert at 8 p.m., followed by an intermission and then the Wind Ensemble will take?

The Ensemble is a small concert band arranged by Professor William Billingsley. They will perform famous classics as well as several Vandal fight songs.

"I think that the music program, has improved over last year so it should be a great show," J.J. Terrel, a senior music student, said.

The concert concludes with a combination of the Jazz Choir and the Wind Ensemble. Several alumni bands from years ago will join in

Jazz in Spokane

Jazz enthusiasts will be pleased to know that the Dukes of Dixieland are coming to a town near you, Spokane.

The Spokane Symphony will open its 1990-91 six-concert Superpops Series on Oct. 13 at 8 p.m. in the Spokane Opera House.

"New Orleans Jazz Night" will feature the Dukes of Dixieland. Spokane Symphony Associate Conductor Stefan Kozinski will conduct.

The Dukes of Dixieland hail from New Orleans' famed French Quarter. Their distinctive blend of traditional dixieland, pop and innovative jazz rhythms has made them a favorite with audiences around the world. They have appeared with such renowned jazz artists as The Four Freshmen, Stan Kenton, Woody Herman and Sarah Vaughan. In addition, they have performed on the pops circuit with numerous orchestras including those of Los Angeles, Cincinnati, Cleveland and the National Symphony.

They were the first group to record in stereo in the early 1950s and the first dixieland band to record a digital compact disc in the early 1980s.

Their performance with the Spokane Symphony will include such standards as "Basin Street Blues," "The Entertainer," "Sweet Georgia Brown," "Clarinet Marmalade" and "When the Saints Go Marching In."

Kozinksi will conduct the Orchestra in highlights from "Show Boat" and "Hello, Dolly" which will open each half of the concert.

Tickets for the concert range between $10 and $23 and are available from the Spokane Symphony Ticket Office or at G & B Select-A-Seat outlets, including Cavanaugh's Value Inn in Mos-

Theater group features plays by local writers

By JENIFER KOOIMAN Staff Writer

A Shade of Difference kicks off its fall theater season with two world premiere performances tonight, Saturday and Sunday.

'À Thousand Rainy Days," written by Alan Page of the University of Idaho, and "Charades," by Roger Jones of Rupert, will be performed at the Moscow Moose Lodge at 8 p.m. all three days.

Angel Katen, executive producer of A Shade of Difference, said the idea for the group was sort of an accident. An all-male and an all-female group came together in 1988 to do a production. The play they did was offcenter and unusual for Moscow. Thus the name, A Shade of Difference.

'Everything we do is just a little different from the norm. There is a wide variety of performers in the group—it's not just a bunch of theater majors. There are all sorts of people of different ages and lifestyles. There are students from University of Idaho and Washington State University, high school teachers, university faculty members, even a construction worker and a janitor," Katen said.

Katen said the community has really gotten behind the group. Businesses have donated lumber for the sets and printed tickets and programs for free, among other things.

"If it weren't for the community effort, there wouldn't be A Shade of Difference. We held auditions in Moscow, Lewiston and Pullman, and the talent was just tremendous. The auditions were very successful," Katen

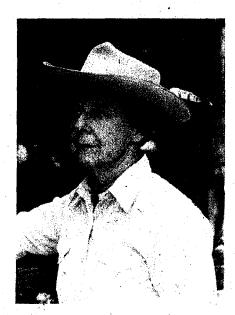

The main purposes of A Shade of Difference were to provide a profitable outlet for area artists' talents, to involve Moscow and surrounding communities in artcentered projects and to benefit other non-profit groups with labor and financial support.

"A Thousand Rainy Days" is directed by John Hurley, and "Charades" is directed by Brent Nice, a WSU graduate student. The other fall production will be "Play It Again, Sam" by Woody Allen, which will be performed in mid-November. The spring season will feature some one-act plays and the final production of the year will be "Burn This" by Landford Wilson.

Tickets, which are $5 for adults and $3 for students with valid identification, can purchased at the door or at Myklebust's in

Jello comes back with Lard

Review By TIM COOK Staff Writer

Do You remember where you were the evening of Nov. 15,

If you were inside the UI Administration auditorium you probably heard Jello Biafra talking about the destruction of his band, the Dead Kennedy's, and the near destruction of his independent record label, Alternative Tentacles, due to an exhaustive censorship trial.

Despite the financial problems resulting from his defense, Biafra has resumed Alternative Tentacles, and resurrected his singing career, which has now produced its most successful product, The Last Temptation of Reid, by Biafra's newest outfit Lard.

Lard is backed musically by Alain Jourgensen, Jeff Ward, William Rieflin and Paul Barker, the same folks responsible for the Revolting Locks and Ministry. These guys provide hypnotic thrash cadences that have the force of an electric staple gun.

This is the framework in which Biafra tells stories of the antiprivacy craze sweeping the country. Perhaps the most effective example is the update of the Napoleon XVIII's "They're Coming to Take Me Away," that features a terrific nomad laugh straight from the animated style exhibited on his speaking tour that he brought to Moscow in "Drug Raid at 4 a.m." is a hilarious send-up of a violent police action that ends cold with a postscripted, "Sorry, wrong house."

Moscow's top video rentals identified

By KARA GARTEN Staff Writer

What do college students like almost as much as sex, drugs and rock 'n'roll? Comedy, action and horror.

And they go pretty much in that order, according to area video rental shop managers.

In an informal survey of four Moscow-Pullman area video stores, the Argonaut found that the most frequently rented tapes are found in the comedy section. Action and horror also go over big with college students. But combine a couple of those elements (as in Lethal Weapon 2 which features comedy, action and a hunky star) and you've really got a top rental.

Area college students seem to like their comedy in the slap-stick variety, said TR Video manager Lisa Vines. One of TR's top rentals in the past month has been the comic Ski Patrol and Vines said Woody Allen flicks are always in demand.

"Slap-stick seems to be really hot in this town for some reason,' Vines said. "College students don't go for heavy dramas."

Other hard-to-find videos of the past month include Internal Affairs, Blue Steel, Firebirds, Stella, Sea of Love, Driving Miss Daisy, Born on the Fourth of July, Revenge, Hard to Kill, Bad Influence, Madhouse and Flashback.

"Everyone is really waiting for Pretty Woman which will be out on Oct. 19." Vines said. "It's the talk in town right now."

Other "coming soon" videos that are sure to be big rentals are The Hunt for Red October and Total Recall. Both are due out within the next few weeks.

Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles, which was released last week, is another of the top rentals, although mostly among the under-15 age group.

In the horror department, The Guardian by the director of The Exorcist has been in demand this month as well as Child's Play.

But mainstream new releases aren't the only videos making money for area video stores. For stores that carry them, the behind-the-counter pornos are always easy to get rid of.

"We don't ever have to worry about renting them," Vines said. And although men are the main porno customers, women rent them too, Vines said. Tim Berg, owner of Video Village in Moscow said that although he doesn't carry pornos, he gets lots of requests for them from both

With so many titles to choose from, it usually takes a customer between 15 minutes and half an hour to decide on a movie to rent, most of the video store employ-men and women.

"I think the longest I've ever seen anyone take to decide was an hour and a half," said Corey Campbell who works at the Old Post Office in Pullman.

Though sex is never directly apparent on screen, these women generate more sexual connotations than Fredericks of Hollywood. Now all that is missing is Madonna.

There is wacky FBI agent Dale Cooper, played by Emmy award winning Kyle MacLachlan. In this show full of off the wall personalities, Cooper is the most offbeat because, as an FBI agent, we expect him to be a straight arrow. Instead, Cooper overindulges in the beauty of the town. We first met Cooper as he was driving into Twin Peaks where he would spend the next eight episodes, and the next five years (MacLachlans' Peaks contract is for five years), investigating Laura Palmers' murder.

"Diane, you have to see these trees," Cooper speaks into his tape recorder. "They're like nothing I have ever seen before."

Diane is a woman, or thing for all we know, who Cooper speaks to through a tape recorder. We never see or hear Diane, but it is through this device that we hear most of Coopers feelings, and learn clues to the puzzle. In a show that is hard to steal, Coopers' humble love of life takes the cake, or should I say cherry pie. Coopers greatest attribute is that in the midst of all the evil of Twin Peaks he can still appreciate 'a great cup of coffee.'

Then there are the cast of bizarre others; Andy, the bumbling cop sidekick who brings back memories of Barney Fife without the attitude; Leyland Palmer, Laura's father, who went to bed, crazy with dark brown hair, and woke up, even crazier with bright gray hair; the general, a man whose list of adjectives is neverending; the log-lady...well nobody really understands the log lady, and the giant who only appears in Coopers' dreams but still manages to make us pull our

According to David Meyer, there are three types of used book stores: the exotic, the funky and the mainstream community book store

David Meyer and his wife Karen are partners in the soon to be opened "Meyer & Meyer Bookseller," a book store he would classify under the mainstream community heading.

Meyer said his store will have "general appeal not just to the people in the community who happen to be full-time residents, but to the students who are part-time residents as well."

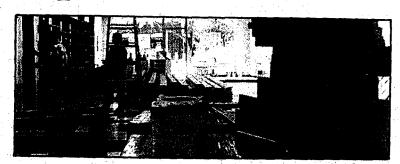

The new store will stock used and rare paperbacks as well as hardcover books. In general textbooks will not be included in Meyer's inventory, but some hard to find "suggested reading" books will be. The selection at Meyer and Meyer will bridge the gap between the University Bookstore and new mainstream book stores in Moscow. Meyer & Meyer will order books for students that are out of print and therefore not stocked in most new book stores.

"I don't want to get into the business of competing with the University Bookstore," Meyer said. "But if students are interested in recommended reading list books, but not something that the University Bookstore would have, I would be glad to order them for them."

To make searching for a book a more enjoyable experience the emphasis at Meyer & Meyer will be bright lights, wide aisles, and organization. Meyer said the store will be organized so that his patrons can quickly and easily find any volume in stock.

Although Meyer and Meyer

isn't scheduled to open until the end of October, David Meyer is already buying books to add to his inventory.

"The big problem with used book stores is stock," said Meyer.
To build his inventors Meyer.

To build his inventory Meyer has already begun examining and buying books brought in by local patrons. Although he can't buy every book that is brought to him, Meyer examines each volume carefully. If a patron decides they don't want to keep a book that Meyer can't buy, Meyer will make sure the book is donated to a charitable organization.

Meyer and Meyer Bookseller is located at 402 South Main Street and should be open by the end of the month.

Band from Seattle well worth a listen

By MARK MILAM Staff Writer

At last it is nice to see something from Seattle that is not "The Seattle Sound." Which for the most part conjures up images of scruffy, big amp, grunge rock.

Bands such as SoundGarden, Mudhoney and Tad have come to represent that sound and image all across the country. Seattle, like Athens, Ga. and Austin, Texas, before has found itself in the national spotlight, with every record company flocking in to sign the next "Seattle" band.

Just when it seemed that the Seattle scene's musical creativity was going to dry up, with every band growing long hair and turning up the amps, along comes a refreshing change. That change is Alice in Chains, a hard driving band that learned its way around in the Seattle club scene for a few years. Wisely someone from Columbia Records signed this band before it could be snatched away or simply overlooked.

or simply overlooked.

At first Alice in Chains comes across as another hard rock band that attempts to catch its audience with wailing, power chords and the hard rock image. Decked out in leather, loose fitting shirts, long hair and dangling jewelry, they appear to be cut out of any great heavy metal scenario. Yet the band writes beautiful songs with a depth that is rarely found in present metal music.

The band is made up of Layne Staley, vocals; Jerry Cantrell, guitar/vocals; Michael Starr, bass; and Sean Kinney, drums. Remember these names, because you are going to hear a lot about these guys. Seeing MTV's recent trend to play more rock/heavy metal videos, we will probably be seeing Alice in Chains' videos often.

Like I said earlier, it's a nice change for all music listeners.

Even if you do not normally listen to metal or hard rock I would suggest you take a listen to a few of the inner tracks; this is where you could gain an appreciation for this band's dark, somewhat spooky view of life. "I Can't Remember" makes beauty out of a horrible view of life survival. It is clear that the members of this band have been through life in a

Anyone who missed out on the Alice in Chains performance last spring in Pullman, missed out on a fine show that gave the band a chance to blast away with its haunting beauty. I do not know if many others enjoyed the musical efforts of the band quite as I did, but they sure did get into the stage diving and slam dancing. In my opinion, the best way to see this band is live. They rock hard. But until you can see them the album is a gem of their work together.

Smith stresses working hard

By CHRISTOPHER GATEWOOD Staff Writer

What does a hard working guy, with old fashion values, who was raised on a farm do for a career? He coaches football of course.

The man I'm talking about is Vandal Head Coach John L. Smith, and if what he's done so far is any indication of his talents, he should be a Vandal for a long time to come.

"I definitely try to work as hard as possible," Smith said. "If we don't win it was because my staff and I didn't work hard enough."

Smith picked up his values and work ethic from growing up on a farm in Idaho Falls.

"Growing up on a farm you can't help but learn commitment because everybody has to do their part of the work load," Smith said.

Smith is part of a large family. He has three brothers and one sister. Smith played strong safety and quarterback at Bonneville High School, where he graduated in 1965. Then he went on to play five years at Weber State College.

"My high school coach left after my junior year and went to Weber State, so it felt like the best place for me to go," Smith said.

At Weber State, where Smith played with his younger brother Doug, he was an All-Academic Big Sky selection and was considered for academic All-American. At Weber State, Smith played quarterback, but spent most of his career playing linebacker. Smith wasn't exactly known as an incredible athlete, but as a person who persevered with hard here's nothing worse than winning a game and having a dark cloud hanging over it. The dark cloud comes in the form of a broken ankle. The ankle belongs to starting quarterback Doug Nussmeier and it will cause him to miss the remainder of the season.

"It's a tragedy. You hate to see something like that happen," Vandal Head Coach John L. Smith said. "You probably see a thousand quarterback sneaks on a given Saturday and one of our guys is hurt running it."
"You work hard all spring and summer and something like this happens. I'm very disappointed," Nussmeier said. "My attitude is good right now. I just need to get bigger and stronger."

Taking Nussmeier's place will be Steve Nolan, Nolan, a senior from Seattle, is finally getting his

"You're going to have adversity on any football team. I think Steve is going to do a great job," Smith said.

The offense shouldn't change all that much even though Nolan isn't quite as mobile as Nussmeier. This will put even more emphasis on the running game. Tailback Devon Pearce is having an outstanding year. So far Pear-ce has rushed for 611 yards on 122 carries. Pearce is on pace to get 1,000 yards, something nobody at Idaho has done since Russel Davis had 1,117 in 1981.

"Devon has to become an even bigger focal point in our offense," Smith said. "Right now the way Devon is running I feel he may be the best in the league."

This week is Idaho's Homecoming and they will be playing the hard luck team of the Big Sky; The Idaho State Bengals. The Bengals are 0-3 in the conference and could have easily won them all. They lost to Weber State 45-38 in double overtime and blew a 24-7 lead to Northern Arizona only to lose 35-32. Last week they lost a heartbreaker to first place Nevada 17-10. After the Bengals tied the score at 10, Nevada took the ensuing kick-off 98 yards to win the game.

"They are a much better football team than last year," Smith said. "They could have easily won all the games they've played

The Bengals will be led into battle by a fine quarterback. Jason Whitmer (6-1, 200), a three-year starter, holds every passing record in school history. He is also the seventh all-time leading passer in Big Sky Conference history with 7,509 yards. So far this year Whitmer has completed 88 out of 162 passes for 1,266 yards.

"Whitmer might be the best kept secret in the conference," Smith said. "He's as good as it gets in this league."

Leading the receiving corps is senior Joe Funk (6-0, 170). So far this season he's caught 30 passes for 462 yards. Last year Funk was Honorable Mention All-Conference, catching 43 passes for 552 yards.

Idaho State's defense is much improved over last year. They are only sixth in the conference in total defense, but they haven't been burned by the big play like they were consistently last year. Leading the defense is senior inside linebacker Mark Campbell who has 50 tackles.

"It's not that they have great players, it's just that their scheme is better," Smith said. "They were giving up huge chunks of yardage last year."

The game starts at 2:00 p.m. instead of the normal time of 1:00

The future is now for Puckett

By JOE MALLET Staff Writer...

Vinds of change are blow-ing through University of Idaho, and the sun is rising on a new era for the volleyball program. Last year, new head coach Tom Hilbert led the Vandals to their first winning season since 1985 and promptly began rebuilding the team with his sights on a Big Sky

Championship. An immediate result of Hilbert's efforts, is a téam with some of the best raw athletic potential in the Big Sky Confer-ence. Riding the crest of the youthful and talented Vandal team that will dominate the Big Sky Conference in the near future is true freshman and auspicious recruit, Jessica Puckett.

Puckett, a 6-foot-1-inch Gresham, Ore., native, started her college career on the bench with a shoulder injury. She missed the first couple of matches, and then was slowly eased into the lineup.

Now, despite such a slow start, she is second only to Karen Thompson in total kills for the team and Hilbert praises her progress. "She has been plagued by injury and illness early on, "Hilbert said, "Now she is just reaching the level of experience she needs. Whether she starts or comes off the bench, she gets the job done. She comes of the bench and hits .300. That is big."

Rugby has a lot to offer

By DARREN TABER Staff Writer

Most Americans know little about the game of rugby, mostly because rugby is primarily thought of as a European game and because of every American's addiction to Monday Night football.

Actually, rugby has been very popular in the United States. It originated in schools for rich kids like Rutgers, Princeton, Columbia and the like. The Ivy League schools maintained rugby football as an exclusive "club" sport versus a varsity sport, a condition that still exists today

According to the rules, the object of the game is two teams of fifteen players each, observing fair play and with a sporting spirit should, by carrying, passing and kicking the ball, score as many points as possible. The team with the most points wins the match.

This is only the legal description and leaves people grasping for details. Play consists of two 40-minute halves with just a five minute break for halftime. Thirty players bang heads and whip an oversized looking football around on a field 100 meters long by 69 meters wide with no substitutions or time outs. The players attempt to advance the ball over the try line (goal line) by running with it, kicking it, or by passing either laterally or backwards but never forward. Only the ball carrier can be tackled and there is no blocking. There are no shoulder pads or helmets.

Rugby is a mental game as well as a physical game. It's not "three yards and a cloud of dust," players must know what they are going to do, where they are going

In rugby, lineman are called forwards. They consist of eight players and are called "the pack." The backfield, properly called the backline, holds the remaining seven players.

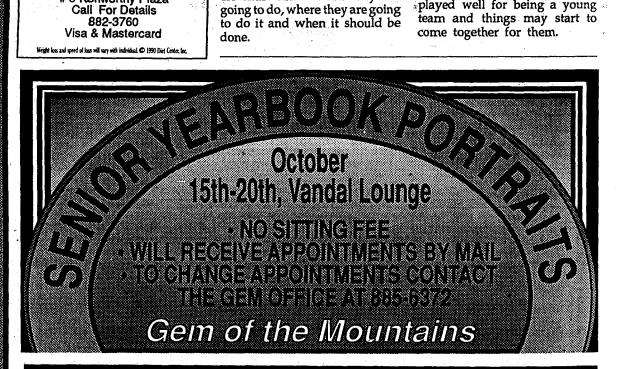

Play can be started in two ways. After the ball has been whistled dead by the single referee, either a "scrum" or a "lineout" is used. The scrum is used when action on the field has stopped and must be started again, such as after a try. A lineout is used when the ball is out of play, but still between the two try

A kick off starts a game and is also made after a try. The team that scores receives the ball. Finally, there are the ruck and the maul. These describe action with the ball on the field of play. A ruck occurs when the ball is loose on the ground and players from both sides try to gain possession of it by using their feet. A maul, however, occurs when the player with the ball is stopped, but not tackled, and cannot advance forward. In this situation, hands are

This is just the bare surface of the game of rugby. To dig deeper go to the library and check out a book. Most of the information here is from the book "Rugby: A Guide for Players, Coaches, and Spectators," by Jon Prusmack.

Now that you have all of this information, use it! Come out to Guy Wicks field on Nov. 3 and watch the UI club play. It really is an exciting and interesting game. The UI team now stands 0-4, but has played only one league game. Iam looking for the team to pull it together and beat everybody in their next few games. They have played well for being a young team and things may start to

New flag football rule change gets mixed reviews

By JOHN CARTER Contributing Writer

There has been a radical change in intramural football this year with the new rule of screen blocking.

Contact by players on the line of scrimmage is illegal, according to the new rule. This brings an entire new concept to the game and, as a result, new strategies have to be developed.

offensive lineman cannot use their hands or arms in any way to block the defensive opponent. Their arms must be at their side or behind their backs. On the other side, the defensive player must go around the opponent and cannot instigate contact.

This all makes for a much faster, and as of now, confusing game. In the fourth week of the season, teams are starting to but not nearly as many as we had Screen blocking means that the adjust to the changes and coming up with some new strategies.

"It's been pretty difficult for a lot of teams to adjust," Intramural Supervisor Hugh Hawthorne said. "Some teams have definitely adjusted better."

Idaho was one of the last schools in the nation to adopt the new rule. So far, it seems to have worked well for the most part.

"We've had a few complaints, anticipated," Hawthorne said. "Most of the complaints are from the big men that are too slow to play now."

The new rule means that a team wants its seven fastest and most athletic players possible on the field. There just isn't a place for the big man anymore.

"It's really frustrating," 230-pound Mike Sutton said. "I've played my whole life and now there's no place for me to play. There's hardly any sports left here (at the UI) for a big guy to play," he continued.

The rule is the biggest change in intramurals in recent years. A major reason for the change is the number of injuries that have occurred in the past.

This year there has been absolutely no major injuries," Hawthorne said.

Idaho basketball looks for madness

By CHRISTOPHER GATEWOOD Staff Writer

Some of you may not realize it but basketball season is fast approaching.

The basketball season will get under way Sunday, Oct. 14 at 11 p.m. for the third annual "Midnight with the Vandals." This years competition should be bigger and better than ever.

The festivities which last until 12:45 a.m. should be fast and furious. This year the Vandal coaching staff has made an effort to get the students even more involved this year.

The action will feature four competitions. The first competition will be an actual count of the living group members. Each living group member should wear a shirt identifying where they live. A count will be taken and points will be awarded, 50 points for first place down to 10 points for fifth.

The second competition will be a banner contest. Each group is encouraged to make a banner with the theme 'midnight madness.' They will be hung along the guard rails of the balcony in Memorial Gym. The banners may not be larger than three and a half by six feet. The banners should be posted no later than 8:00 p.m. on Sunday, Oct.

14. The living groups with the best banners will win points, 50 for first down to 10 for fifth.

The third competition will be the rapid shooting contest. Each group is to provide two members who will take turns shooting. The first group to make seven baskets wins. First place will be awarded 50 points and second place will get 30 points.

The last competition will be the dunk contest. Each living group is to provide one guy who can dunk. The dunks will be judged by the cheerleaders and the winner will compete against the Vandals later in the evening. Don't worry girls, we haven't forgot10 about you. The girls will have a chance to dunk on a rim seven feet or higher. Points will be awarded the same as the living group participation competition.

New Head Coach Larry Eustachy has added a new wrinkle for the start of the season. Because of the lack of eligible players Eustachy has decided to hold open tryouts for anybody who thinks they can help the Vandals.

"This no joke, this is serious," Eustachy said. "We want players who are willing to work and understand the commitment."

The Vandals will keep five players and they will take turns dressing out for home games, one each game. Eustachy will also take one player on each road trip.

"We are doing this for two reasons," Eustachy said. "Number one, we are trying to help our team and number two, we are trying to build some tradition at this school using student interest."

Eustachy is hoping for size but all are welcome.

"It's always nice to have size but I'll take any good players I can get," Eustachy said. "I'll be real pleased if I see 50 or 60 guys.

doubt, traveled back to Spokane in awe of Idaho's Dr. Jeckle/Mr. Hyde transformation.

Idaho's second year head coach, Tom Hilbert, was very satisfied with his team's performance, and sees this as a major turning point in Vandal volleyball.

"This shows our team as the athletes they are," Hilbert said. "This will show them what we can do, and give them that feeling of being on top."

"I hope our players learned composure and can stay this focused. That is what happened, but it will be hard to play that good consistently," Hilbert said. "That was the best match we have played since I have been coach at Idaho."

Senior Karen Thompson agreed with Hilbert that this was a pivotal match for the Vandals in the long run.

"I'm really excited," Thompson said. "We never play well against Gonzaga. Now the young players won't be intimidated in the future. They will know we can beat them."

Giving due credit to Gonzaga, Hilbert acknowledges that this was every bit an upset.

"I have great respect for Gonzaga," Hilbert said. "They are excellent athletes and they have beaten some great teams this year."

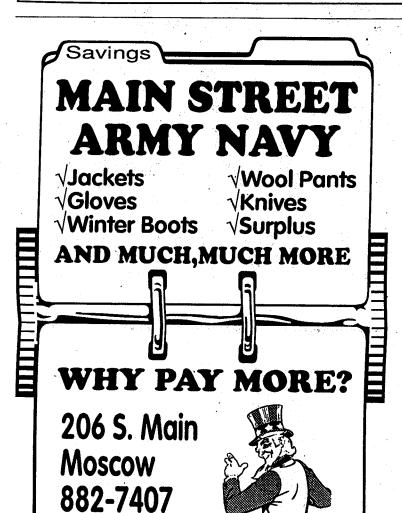

In the victory effort, Karen Thompson led the team with her 19 kills, two service aces, and eight digs. She also contributed six blocks. Thompson is Big Sky player of the week, this week, due to her accomplishments in Idaho's last three matches.

Nancy Wicks led Idaho with seven blocks, three of them solos, while adding four digs and five kills. Dee Porter was second in kills with 12.

Tonight, the Vandals return home from LCSC to play Eastern Washington University at 7:30 p.m. in Memorial gym. Idaho has a formidable 6-2 home record and Hilbert hopes to improve it and their 2-5 conference record this evening.

"If we play our game, we can beat any team in the conference," Hilbert said.

"We need to be prepared to play from here on out," Thompson said. "Every one counts."

Realizing that Puckett is just a budding freshman, Hilbert is already looking forward to the day when she will be a seasoned veteran.

"She is extremely raw right now," Hilbert said. "Once she masters the finer points, she is really going to be dangerous. Teams will fear her. She has the speed, size, and cannon armstrength already. She will hurt her opponents."

After having such a fearful picture of her painted, it is surprising to meet her in person, because her soft-spoken, quiet nature defies all expectations.

Puckett seems extremely unaware of her success on the court. She had no idea that she was second on the team in total kills, a position she has held for a while, and will not admit to standing out from her peers.

"It doesn't seem to me that I hit any harder than anyone else," Puckett said. "I'm learning tons. I'm just thankful to be playing as a freshman at all.'

Puckett's meekness is no surprise since her role model is Jesus Christ, and she is a self proclaimed Christian.

"I give God all the glory. He gave me all my abilities. They're His gifts," Puckett said. "I'm just doing the best with what He gave

Puckett also admires senior, and Idaho volleyball star, Karen Thompson.

"I look up to Karen," Puckett said. "She is an excellent athlete and person. She has been a great influence on my life."

While on the bench, Puckett is one of the biggest fans in the gym. She loves volleyball, whether she is watching or playing.

"It is so exciting to watch," Puckett said. "It is different every time. It's never the same twice. I'd be content to just watch it from the bench."

"She's one of the best bench players on the team just because of her enthusiasm," Hilbert said. "She's a pleasure to work with."

to be a great player, she seems ence," Hilbert said.

destined to be a star, because she has the tools to do whatever it takes. With a 4.0 grade point average in high school, she is plenty capable of picking up the technical aspects of the game, and her work ethic makes it a matter of time before she masters the physical aspects.

She plays hard all the time," Hilbert said of Puckett. "That is her quality that I like the most."

As the Vandal volleyball team rises to prominence in the next few seasons, Jessica Puckett will, no doubt, be in the center of things.

"I expect Jessica, in her junior and senior years, to be the pre-If polishing is all Puckett needs mier outside hitter in the confer-

She will have carry the load when Karen Thompson leaves, but Hilbert thinks she will be a capable replacement.

This will put a lot of pressure on her, but not too much, because she will have six other teammates supporting her whom she will have played with from her rookie year.

Her current setter Kris Little, and middle blockers Nancy Wicks, Dee Porter, and Leah Smith will be here as long as she is, and they are developing into a solid team already.

If Idaho's volleyball future could be seen, it would be as bright as the sun, and right in the heat of things stands Jessica Puckett.

work and intelligence.
"Being an academic choice was

"Being an academic choice was the only way I was going to get any recognition," Smith said. "I guess I was the classic case of someone who was an over achiever. I had to spend four hours a day in the weightroom just to stay on the team," Smith laughed.

After he graduated from Weber State in 1972, Smith went on to the University of Montana as a graduate assistant, and was hired almost immediately on a full time basis. Smith coached the line-backers at Montana until 1977. Then he went to Nevada to become the defensive coordinator. He coached at Nevada until 1983. At Nevada, Smith coached some great players including former Miami Dolphin Doug Betters and current Washington Redskin star Charles Mann.

Smith came to Idaho for the first time in 1984 while the Vandals were under the direction of Dennis Erickson, the current Miami Head Coach. Smith would coach under Erickson for five years at Idaho, Wyoming and Washington State. Erickson left WSU after the 1988 season, but Smith who had a chance to coach on a national power, surprisingly didn't go with Erickson.

"I had already accepted the job at Idaho before I knew Erickson was going to Miami. Besides, I wouldn't have gone with him any way," Smith said. "My goal was to be a head coach and Idaho gave me that chance. I couldn't live in Miami. I don't want my kids growing up in that type of environment."

When Smith came to Idaho at the beginning of the 1989 season he was replacing Keith Gilbertson, who was extremely popular and coached a team that made it all the way to the 1-AA semifinals the year before. On the surface, Smith appeared to have the tailor made situation. He had All-World John Friesz returning and an experienced defense.

"Actually, coaching that first year was pretty tough on me because we had some problems with the coaching staff," Smith said. "Some of the staff was mine and some remained from Gilbertson. The problems stemmed from a difference in philosophy."

That is definitely an understatement. One of the differences of opinion was in the area of discipline. Gilbertson wasn't known as a strict disciplinarian. He was one for easing things up and shortening practice.

Smith is an easygoing, friendly person that loves to ski, claiming that in his second life he hopes to come back as a ski bum. But when it comes to practice he's as serious as it comes.

"John L. has definitely given this team some real toughness," Charlie Hall, Vandal running back coach, said. "When Gilbertson was here we were known as basically a finesse team but with John L. being defensive minded we've changed our look. I'm just glad he retained me on his staff."

A football team is often a reflection of its coaches' character. With Smith it's been no different. Before his return to Idaho, the Vandals were marred with various behavior problems. Since his return nary a peep has been heard.

"When I came here some of the players didn't accept me and didn't fit into our system," Smith said. "We've gotten rid of those people and we have things headed in the right direction. I expect certain things from our players. I expect them to act like men. There are just certain things I won't be lenient on."

The players that do like Smith have good things to say about their coach.

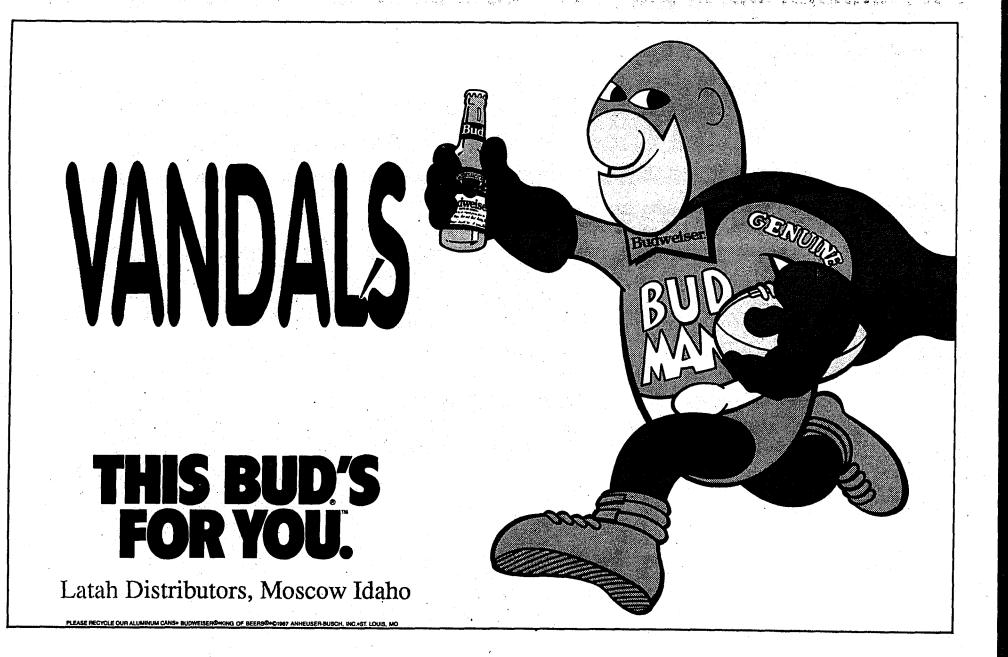

"I like playing for coach Smith," Vandal quarterback Doug Nussmeier said. "He's the big reason I came to Idaho. He's honest and straight forward. His door is always open if you need to talk."

So far in 1990 things haven't been easy for the second year coach. The Vandals are going through a transition and it shows. They have struggled to a 3-3 record and have had their share of bad breaks. Now that Nussmeier has gone down for the season with a broken ankle things look bleak. Smith, however, doesn't seem worried.

"Actually coaching this year has gone pretty smooth," Smith said. "Everybody is getting used to the system and working together as a unit. The new players here only use my system, so it's been easy in that respect."

Speaking of new players, recruiting has to be considered the most important thing to a football program. To build a strong and good program you need a constant influx of young talent.

"I don't care how good of a coach I am, without good players we don't win," Smith said. "I think this years class is one of the strongest we've ever had at the University of Idaho. We want to continue to emphasize recruiting. We're so young right now, I really feel like in the near future we could be awesome."

Small college football gives a different look

By CHRISTOPHER GATEWOOD Staff Writer

As Idaho's Homecoming approaches on Saturday I'd like to talk about a different kind of homecoming. It was the kind of homecoming I've never seen, and for that matter I'm sure many of you never have either.

You see, this wasn't your typical homecoming. No ticker tape parades, no television or radio, and for sure, no big crowds. Last Saturday I saw the smallest homecoming I've ever seen. The game itself (which was between Whitworth College and Pacific University) hardly matters. Why was I there? You might be asking yourself this question. I was there because it was my last chance to see a good friend. It was not the game that mattered, it was the experience. I saw something I never thought I would see.

As I drove to Spokane for the game, I knew it was going to be football on a smaller scale, but what I saw I never thought I'd see in a million years. There might have been, if you count everybody twice, 1,000 people. There were no players over 6'3". You didn't have to worry about steroids either. These guys looked like high school players with razor stubble.

This was football in it's purest form. It was 22 guys out on the field playing simply for the love of the game. How many Division I players do you think would do Granted, this game wasn't as exciting as seeing Miami vs. Notre Dame, but the change of pace was refreshing. The whole game had an old fashioned feel to it. The game was outside and on grass, which I love, and the visitor stands were nothing more than wooden bleachers with the paint half chipped and the metal base badly rusted. The Pacific faithful, however, didn't seem to care. They made the six hour drive from Portland to watch their team play. To most, the game meant nothing, but to the Pacific fans nothing else mattered during those three hours.

The home stands weren't much bigger. They looked like your typical high school fans that you'd see on any Friday night.

Chris Gatewood Opinion

Whitworth probably had the worst public address announcer that I've ever heard. But nobody, including me, really cared. A good announcer wouldn't have fit with the event. It didn't matter because everyone was smiling and having a good time. The Whitworth fans were really involved in the game and cheered bloody murder.

The halftime show was a real eye opener. What do you normally witness at a homecoming? A bunch of boosters? Some fancy cars? A bunch of alumni? The answer is D; none of the above. Groups of students got together on their own and made some of the most primitive floats I've ever seen. They didn't use corvettes for the floats either. Their parade consisted of a couple of beat up pick-ups and a very old mustang. None of this mattered either because the students were enjoying themselves.

Now for the game itself. For what it's worth Whitworth won the game 24-19. Yes, this game was very different from the big boys and no, I wouldn't want to go to a game like this every week, but there were some similarities to the big show. The intensity level was just as high as any other game. Both teams wanted to win badly. Both teams showed all the love and the heart for each other that you'd expect from any team. There were also big plays, hard hits and crucial turning points. The game may have been a step slower and the guys a little smaller, but I never questioned their will to win.

There were some good athletes on the field as well. Mark Linden, Whitworth's running back, was probably the best player on the field and their quarterback, John Moomaw, was outstanding as well. Players such as these have the wrong physical size conducive to Division I.

You could tell by the amount of alumni at the game that it really wasn't all that important to them. I tell you why. Whitworth is a college where education comes first. Winning games doesn't mean that much. Football, to players like these, is something they do because they love it. It also breaks up the monotony of studying. They don't have boosters that give kick-backs and faculty members that let the athletes cut corners. Players like these, including my friend who is a graduating senior, redefine the term student athlete. They know they won't make the NFL, but maybe in the long run that's what really mat-

Barrios strives to make UI decision pay off

By TOM BITHELL Staff Writer

The University of Idaho has never been known as a big time track school. For years the program has had to make due with a tighter budget and fewer scholarships than other Big Sky Conference schools. In all of Coach Mike Keller's 17 years at Idaho the track program has never been fully funded.

Keller still manages to get some exceptional athletes. A case in point is Bernardo Barrios. Barrios, a 24-year-old senior, is the UI's leading distance runner and a Big Sky champion hopeful, while contributing to a large part of the cross country team's success this year.

Keller first discovered and recruited Barrios through the help of his older brother Arturo Barrios, who came to the U.S. from Mexico City, Mexico, to run.

"I tried to originally recruit his brother out of junior college," Keller said. "It finally came down to us and Texas A&M, and I think that he got a lot of pressure from the coaches to stay down there. He called me and told me he was going to Texas A&M. He said it was a hard decision to make."

Later, though, Keller ran into Arturo again at an NCAA meet. It was then that Keller first heard of "He (Arturo) said, 'hey my brother Bernardo is going to go to South Plains (Junior College), the same place I did. Keep an eye on him,' He said. 'I'm gonna see that he comes to Idaho because I made a mistake by going to A&M,'" Keller said. "It was too humid for him and he didn't think he got out of A&M what he should have."

At that time Keller put the conversation in the back of his mind. But a couple of years later, ironically, he ran into Bernardo in Twin Falls at the NJCAA championships. He was impressed with Bernardo and offered him a scholarship right there. With the help of his brother, Bernardo decided on the UI and arrived in Moscow in January of 1989.

"My brother encouraged me to come here. He told me it was what I was looking for," Barrios said.

Since his arrival, he has been one of the Big Sky's best. Last year he finished second in the conference cross country meet, a distance of 8,000-meters, and second in the indoor 5,000 and 3,000-meters. He also placed third in the outdoor 10,000-meters and in the NCAA District Seven Championships, which includes the Big Sky and Western Athletic Conference schools. No other UI runner has even placed in districts top ten since its formation in 1977.

Keller said Barrios is easy to coach but sometimes he is too quiet.

"He'd limp on a busted leg before he'd tell you he had a busted leg," Keller said.

In last week's meet in Spokane, Barrios ran one of the worst races of his life. Keller discovered afterward that he had worked out with weights a couple of days before and his legs were sore, which caused him to run poorly.

But if Bernardo is anything like his brother Arturo, his timidness won't matter. Arturo is the world record holder in the 10,000-meters with a time of 27:08.23. However, Arturo didn't set his record until 1990, after he was out of school.

"His brother wasn't anything special in college," Keller said.

It was Arturo who first got Bernardo into running. The schools in Mexico didn't have track teams so most of Benardo's running came with playing soccer. Arturo, though, got Benardo to join a running club.

"My brother encouraged me because I was a lazy guy," Barrios said.

Later, after Arturo had went to junior college in the U.S., he helped Benardo get his start.

Bernardo is obviously close to his brother but said he feels some pressure with his brother's success and wants to keep improving his running.

"My main goal is to be in the NCAA and win the Big Sky," Barrios said.

After he finishes his degree in sports science in the summer of 1991, Bernardo said he hopes to eventually earn his masters degree in physical therapy. That may have to wait, though, for awhile until his running career slows down.

"My plan is to stay in the U.S. in Boulder, Colo., with my brother," Barrios said.

brother," Barrios said.

There he plans to continue running and training to prepare for tryouts for the 1992 Mexican Olympic Team in the 5,000-meters.

Running has been good to the Barrios family, which consists of five girls and three boys. It has enabled Arturo to help his family by buying them a house in Mexico City. And it has helped both Arturo and Bernardo get educations.

"Road racing has helped his brother break that (poverty) cycle, helped the family and helped him go to college. Without a junior college system for him to come to the United States and learn English real well and do well in school he has two strikes against him," Keller said.

Idaho tennis drops WSU

The University of Idaho tennis teams opened the fall schedule against Washington State University last week with the men beating the Cougars 6-2, and the women losing 6-3.

The men enter the season with loads of optimism and even some talk of a Big Sky title but Coach Dave Scott is cautious.

"I'm not gonna say how we're gonna do, because I know there's a couple two or three Big Sky teams that will be as tough or tougher," Scott said.

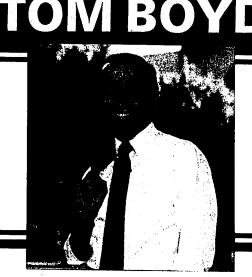

In singles the men beat WSU in the first, second, fifth, and sixth brackets, with Scott Anersen, Jose Palacios, Chris Kramer and Dan Streeby all winning their matches. In team doubles UI beat the Cougars in both matches played.

The women won both the first and third brackets in individuals with Patricia Shanander and Merlene Forde winning their individual duals. Later Shanander and Forde teamed up to net the Vandal women's only win over the WSU in team doubles.

Proven Leadership HIS STAND ON EDUCATION

Continued support at all levels of education should be maintained to help attain parity with neighboring states. Agriculture and Forestry together with the University of Idaho are three of the major economic forces driving Latah County's economy. Helping to sustain a healthy state economy will help Latah county (Dist. 5).

Garden Lounge not your average meat market

By MARK MILAM Staff Writer

Are you tired of being lured to bars? Do you get frustrated with all the hooks and angles that grab you? Do you want to go to a place and sit down and drink? Yes? Then I found the bar for you, The Garden Lounge.

ret Garden Lounge, but instead would have figured it out soon stumbled upon it one late night. From the first second there I realized the Garden Lounge was a drinker's bar. No one had come there to dance on the electric dance floor, no ace stud had swooped down to shoot pool. No, instead everyone was here for some drinking.

If I had not clued in on the fact Actually I did not find the sec- that this was a drinking bar, I enough. I picked up the drink menu and the first thing I noticed were the nightly drink specials. Seven nights a week the Garden Lounge offers a special for us hardy drinkers, who do not like to disco or bump billiards. I scanned the list looking for my night. It was Wednesday and the card read: "Half-priced drinks between 8 and 10 p.m." Well, it was too late for that special so I ordered a Garden Delight.

The Garden Delight is a frothy mixture of fruit juices and Southern Comfort that made me feel delightful. The drink was fruity but not too sweet. Highly recommended. Next I tried a portion of my friend's Bloody Mary. It was their Original Bloody Mary (they offer three other types) and it was tasty, even though I never developed a taste for tomato juice and vodka. Yet, if you are the type likes that combination then Saturday is your day. The Bloody Mary special goes all day long.

I was told by the bartender that I had missed the rush. The rush he was talking about is the huge crowds that swarm the Garden on Monday and Wednesday nights. It gets real packed and becomes difficult to enjoy your drink, much less even order one. That is why I came stumbling around after the crowds were gone. I want good service and that's what the Garden Lounge gives you. From the initial inspection of your identification until last call, the bartenders and cocktail waitress are friendly and quick with their services. A good sized tip also helps one out.

For the truly daring drinker, I have compiled a list of drinks you should try while visiting the scenic Hotel Moscow and Garden Lounge. First start off with a Hale's Ale, an excellent ale. Then a Garden Delight is in order, if you're feeling brave ask for double the Southern Comfort. Next, clear those taste buds out with a Kool-Aid. I'm not sure exactly what goes in to a Kool-Aid but I do know that it's one of the clearest, most refreshing drinks I have ever had. Try one, trust me, you will like it. Then to top everything off, and shake it all around, order a round of Kamakazies.

So if you are tired of all the hype, the pool tables and the dancing, and you just want to hang out and drink, then drink where I do, at the Garden Lounge smack dab in the middle of main

Swilley's ideal for dates

By ANDREA VOGT Staff Writer

It's that typical first date. The waiter brings you a menu, you order, then there's always that long, awkward silence before your food arrives.

This is not the scene at Swilley's Restaurant in Pullman. White drawing paper serves as tablecloths and a dish of Crayola crayons is provided in your table setting. The silence is broken right away as you regress to your childhood, crayon in hand, doodling and sketching while waiting for your food to arrive. This is a great place to take art and architecture students.

Swilley's Italian Restaurant, located at 200 Kamiaken Street in Pullman has a modern, artsy and romantic atmosphere. It is the perfect setting to lighten the mood, stir creativity and satisfy the palate simultaneously.

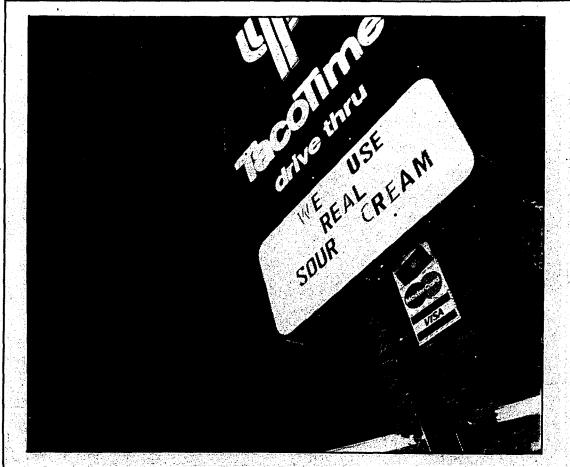

The menu offers a variety of Italian foods and a few other foreign dishes. But Swilley's specializes in fettucini and calizones, with combinations ranging from the norm to the bizarre goat cheese, spinach and pine nut? The food is well worth the drive to Pullman and the generous portions leave you with enough for lunch the next day.

Prices are reasonable for a good meal. Two decent dinners and a half liter of wine costs about $20. Various wines and import beers are available, and also many flavors of expresso and Italian soda.

The atmosphere is casual and low key. Oil paintings and a variety of artwork line the walls. Customer tablecloth art done by talented customers while waiting for their meals, hangs near the kitchen.

For those with an ear for music, there is live Jazz on Friday nights and if the night is warm enough (though unlikely after October) there is an outdoor patio for those fresh-air diners.

The parking area is easily accessable and close to Pullman's two movie theaters. Overall, Swilley's is one of the best places to eat out for a casual date dinner on the Palouse.

IT'S TIME FOR TACO TIME. Featuring Taco Tuesday and Nacho Saturday. (BRIAN JOHNSON

Skipper's always consistent

By MARK MILAM Staff Writer

In a hurry to get something to eat? Want fast food that tastes good? Tired of hamburgers and roast beef sandwiches? Then Skippers might be the answer to your eating questions.

Skippers remains one of the most popular and inexpensive places to dine in Moscow. Offering fried seafood that is excellent in both taste and nutrition. Unlike most fried food places that soak their food in heavy batter and deep fry, leaving the food tasting greasy and quite unhealthy, Skippers' seafood tastes authenic and light.

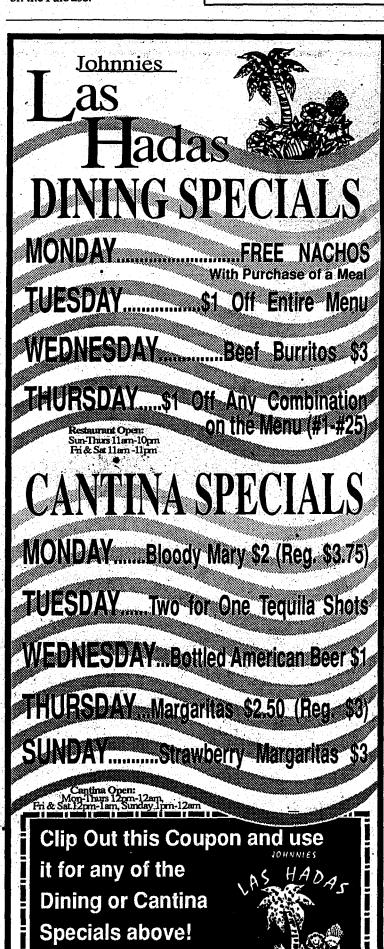

Over the summer, the interior of the restaurant was perked up. Gone are the black and white photos and the dusty sailing relics; instead one finds a vast array of nautical flags and a new color scheme that gives the restaurant a more up scale appearance. I have heard a few complaints about the new decor, some miss the photos, but Skippers keeps on going.

It goes on serving tons of people, primarily hungry college students, like myself, who can not pass up the all-you-can-eat specials, which are offered daily. With a pleasant staff and quick, satisfying food it is no wonder this place continues to grow in popularity. The atmosphere is relaxing, the restaurant clean and the clam chowder outstanding.

By offering a selection of several different platters, Skippers is sure to fill any appetite, no matter how large or small. Whether you want chicken and shrimp, or fish and shrimp, or clams, or oysters, at Skippers you can get it. Even all of it if you want. As far as I am concerned I will continue to eat at Skippers as often as I can, no matter what the restaurant looks like, no matter how far I have to travel, or whatever circumstances may

LONG—TIME FAVORITE. Gambino's Italian Restaurant has been a Moscow institution for years.(TRAVIS GADSBY PHOTO)

Why is Gambino's Italian Restaurant so popular with both students and community members? We posed that question to several Bino's regulars. This is what they had to say:

Rosa Garcia's new and neat

By SALLY GILPIN Arts/Leisure Editor

Frosty, fruity, smooth, but with a kick. That's how one Rosa Garcia's customer described their margaritas.

Although it has only been open a few months, Rosa Garcia's has become a popular spot with dinners seeking authentic Mexican food.

Rosa Garcia's is located in Cavanaugh's Value Inn, the former home of the Jolly Roger. The nautical/Carribean decor is gone, including the twenty-plus foot model of a pirate ship. In it's place is a soft and warm southwestern-style decor.

Although the restaurant is large, intimacy is achieved by the use of spacing and the large lighted umbrellas which hover over several tables.

The restaurant specializes in authentic Mexican cuisine. The menu includes everything from traditional favorites like enchiladas to special seafood dishes. In addition to the regular menu, there is also a nightly varied entree.

The restaurant is open for breakfast, lunch, dinner and brunch on Sunday. Average meal price ranges from $6 to $8.

Rosa Garcia's Catina, which is located above the main restaurant, features drink specials from 6 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Monday night is football night with $2 pitchers of Budwiser and Coors Light, $3 pitchers of Full Sail Ale and $7 pitchers of margaritas.

Tuesday's special is Hops and Schnops. Any flavor of Schnopps and a draft beer for $1.50. Wednesday's feature is called,

Oh Well. All well drinks are $1. Thursday is Ladies Night, margaritas and daiquiris are $1.50 for both ladies and gentlemen.

Friday is Iced Tea and Kool-aid night. Two drinks by the same name are the features at $2 each.

Saturday's special is 50 cent cans of Keystone beer.

And Sunday, the Catina does the Week in Review. Monday's special is featured from 4 p.m. to 5, Tuesday's special is featured from 5 p.m. to 6, and so on until 10 p.m.

In addition to these daily specials, the Cantina features a free taco bar from 4:30 p.m. to 6 Monday through Friday. And during any of the baseball play-off games pitchers of beer are $2 for Coor Light and Budwiser and $3 for Full Sail Ale and $2 for margaritas.

This weekend, Rosa Garcia's Cantina will host to Party Train a duo that plays a variety of musical favorites from the 50s and 60s, contemporary and western selections, according to bar manager Brad Irvine.

If you're in the mood for some spicy food and a cold drink, Rosa Garcia's should be on your list of must-visit places.

intervene, so long as the service and quality of food remains the same.

If you can judge a restaurant by the customers, then take a glance at the parking lot out front of the restaurant any night. Quite often it is filled and from what I know about Skippers customers, most are in regular attendance. In fact, a few of my friends have a small competition over who can eat the most shrimp in one sitting.

Searching for a good Bloody Mary

By TRACY PEEL Staff Writer

I didn't want a foo-foo drink, one of those mai tais, pina coladas or wine spritzers. wanted a drink that could hold up more than a paper parasol. I wanted something with some dash, some pep, some vodka and lots of thick, pulpy tomato juice. I wanted a Bloody Mary, of course, and nothing but the best would do. It had to be gelatinous and chilled, with enough vodka to cut through the layers of tobasco, pepper and assorted hot spices. It had to have at least one large vegetable garn-

My quest for the perfect Bloody Mary took me from Moscow to Pullman and back again, through quiet restaurant bars frequented by men with pinky rings and dimly lit lounges with really dirty carpet. (I want any of my professors who happen to read this article to know that, despite the awesome scope of my undertaking, I always put school first and those times I was absent I was undoubtedly typing and laser printing notes from class.)

Following, the results of three nights of intensive scientific research involving double blinds, control groups and a non-drinking designated driver who got stopped and tested by bored Moscow police officers who noticed his suspicious driving (he 'swerved' into the turn lane):

STRONGEST: A Bloody Mary is always a good drink selection. The Nobby Inn Bloody Mary is the perfect choice for someone who has just completed three tests and/or term papers and can walk home from the bar afterwards. Ask for extra worcestershire sauce to smooth out the highly alcoholic flavor.

BEST VEGETABLES: Mingles has wonderfully textured

Bloody Marys, with heavy tomato juice from the bottom of the can. The best part of the drink is the accompanying green olive on a sword and a top-quality pickled bonus bean—salty, snappy and sour. Even better, you're at Mingles, so no one will care if you dip your fingers into the drink to pull out the olive-bean garnish. In fact, they probably expect you to expect you to.

BEST TO DRINK WITH HIGHLY SPICED AND
EXTREMELY TOMATO—Y
FOODS: A Rosa Garcia's
Bloody Mary is a little too thin and peppery to drink by itself, but would be an excellent topper for some chimichangas. It definitely would taste better than some sugary margarita or pina colada.

MOST UNUSUAL: The Three Forks Inn Bloody Mary looked like an average Bloody Mary of average thickness, with typical olive-lime adornment. One quick sip revealed it contained horseradish. It gave the Bloody Mary a piquant flavor without an overwhelming aftertaste.

MOST OBVIOUSLY PRE-MIXED: The Hilltop Restaurant Bar served me a watery, wimpy, premixed Bloody Mary in a foo-foo glass with a very unhealthy looking asparagus spear swirler. The bartender was so friendly, however, that I drank half the drink before I left so that her feelings wouldn't be hurt.

VERY BEST: The spiciness of a Garden Lounge Bloody Mary varies with the bartender, but it is always very tasty. The tomato juice is extremely thick and always very cold. The worcestershire is more noticeable than the tobasco. The deluxe Bloody Mary comes with an extremely large pickled bean, but I prefer the regular with its leafy stalk of freezing cold celery.

Three Forks elegant

By TRACY PEEL Staff Writer

I looked out from the secondstory window above the corner of Grand Avenue and Paradise Street. Traffic rushed by below, but I couldn't hear it. I was with a date in the quiet, intimate atmosphere of Three Forks Inn. Soothing background music and strategically placed tables prevented us from having to listen to the conversation of neighboring tables. We were in our own world.

Our waitress was friendly and attentive without being overbearing, and knowledgeably answered all of our questions about the menu—or at least adlibbed with confidence. The busser did not make the mistake of filling our glasses every two minutes, but our glasses were never empty.

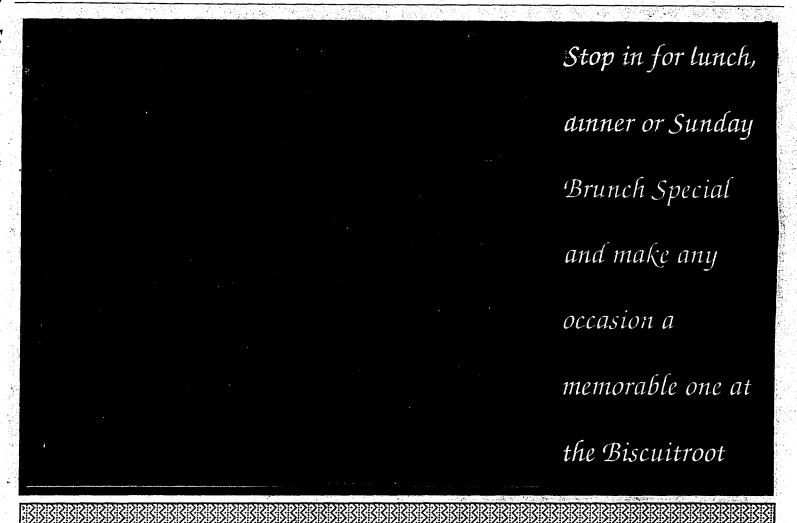

The menu included chicken, seafood and steaks and all dinner entrees came with choice of soup or salad, rice, parsleyed potatoes, or pasta. We ordered escargot appetizers— a good order for a date because they're easy to eat gracefully.

The salad was fresh and crunchy; the soup was flavorful and warm. The sourdough and whole wheat rolls that came with our meal were warm, and did not have a microwaved texture. The quality of our main orders was equally good. The potatoes were delicious new potatoes which didn't even need butter. My prime rib was done to perfection— light pink in the middle, just as I ordered. The shrimp in the shrimp scampi was fresh.

My biggest disappointment in eating at Three Forks Inn was that I couldn't sample every single dessert— they all looked delicious. I looked longingly on the two types of cheesecake, fruit tart and white cake which were offered, but settled on a perfectly-textured custard with caramel sauce.

The cooks were as attentive to Sella's features food and fun

By JOE MALLET Staff Writer

Sella's Calzone Pizza in Pullman is a long standing tradition with Washington State University students and yet it somehow has remained relatively unknown to University of Idaho students.

Sella's is owned by Kim Stewart and brothers Ken and Kevin Carosella, hence the moniker Sella's. It is located on East 1115 Main Street, on the left, in plain view as you enter Pullman from Moscow.

The three started their restaurant after seeing the success of calzone restaurants in Spokane and noticing the lack of one in the Moscow-Pullman

"We seem to have a mostly college clientele," owner Kim Stewart said. "It is crazy here after games. We wish we were twice as big at times. We really don't advertise, just word of mouth and people keep coming back."

Sella's is the classic college hangout. It has a big screen television and stays open until midnight, nightly. It nicely sums up college life with a fun atmosphere, affordable food that is both delicious and filling and ice cold beer.

The specialty of the house is calzone pizza. For those unfamiliar with the dish, it is basically a dough turnover, stuffed with all of the traditional, and some nontraditional, toppings. Even if you do not care for pizza, you should try a calzone, because there are pleasant differences between it and pizza.

Some of the unusual toppings on Sella's menu include chicken, spinach, broccoli, cottage cheese and hard boiled eggs. Although I did not venture into this realm, Stewart said they are a big hit with the students.

"People love our toppings," Stewart said. "They pick some unusual combinations, throw in some shrimp, and come up with some great results. All of our toppings are fresh and we make our dough form scratch daily."

The warm smell of tresh homemade bread that drifts from the doors of Sella's confirms Stewart's claims.

One wall of the restaurant sports customer artwork. While you wait for your meal, you have the opportunity to test your artistic skills with the crayons and large paper place mats on all of the tables.

If your creation is deemed worthy, it will hang on the "wall of fame" with the other memorable pieces of artwork that add to Sella's informal and relaxed atmosphere.

An unconscious Mike Tyson and a dieting Opra Winfry lament life without Sella's pizza, while Janet Jackson, Arsenio Hall and a host of other customer creations pitch calzone as the food for the 90s.

Sella's serves pizza, sandwiches, spaghetti, soup and salad in addition to their calzone.

the food's visual appeal as they were to its taste. Each dish was presented on elegant, understated china with colorful garnishes.

The whole restaurant exuded simple, understated elegance. An exposed brick wall, beautiful original oil paintings, soft wallpaper and comfortable chairs put me at ease.

I would definitely recommend Three Forks Inn for a romantic dinner for two. My only warning: take your visa with you. Entree prices range from $13 to $35 dollars. Special 'sunset dinners' in the early evening are offered at lower prices.
