UI student injured, charges may follow

By SHERRY DEAL
Associate Editor

An incident at the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity resulted in several injuries to a University of Idaho student Friday night.

Michael Perry, 22, was treated and released from the hospital after the fight.

According to Perry, he was attacked by a member of the house while speaking with a female acquaintance on the outside steps.

Perry, an off-campus student, said the attack was unprovoked and other members of the house joined in and began beating him up. He said he was choked by one man while two others hit him.

"About 15 or 20 guys stood around chanting," Perry said. "Some of them got their punches in."

According to Robert Alexander, SAE president, who witnessed the incident, there was only one person fighting with Perry.

"This was one individual versus one individual, not the SAEs versus an individual," Alexander said. "I want to remove the name of Sigma Alpha Epsilon from all of this."

Alexander said Perry provoked the fight by insisting the SAE member hit him.

"Our member refused and tried to escort him (Perry) from the property," Alexander said.

He said the fighting started when Perry threw a punch as the SAE member was trying to escort him off of the property.

"I broke up the fight personally at one point when he (Perry) proceeded to throw a girl down," Alexander said.

Alexander said the fight continued after the house member "saw him (Perry) off of SAE property."

Perry said he suffered a broken nose and possibly a broken jaw among other injuries.

He is talking with his attorney today and is considering filing civil suits and possibly criminal charges.

The Moscow Police Department is still investigating the incident. Confirmation and further information was not available at press time.

ASUI candidates voice viewpoints in forum

By MAREEN BARTLETT
Staff Writer

Twelve candidates, two for president, two for vice president, and eight for the six open senate positions gathered in the SUB Borah Theatre Monday evening to discuss various issues relating to student government.

Issues discussed included the Idaho Student Lobby, condoms in residence halls, parking, Gem inclusion of Gault streaking pictures, increased fees and programs or facilities that each would like maintained, changed or implemented.

In response to the question of whether or not North Idaho College should be included in the newly formed Idaho Student Lobby, an organization in which they helped to found, most of the candidates were strongly in support of their inclusion.

ASUI Presidential candidate Mike Gotch said, "Abolutely! The lobby will be stronger with them in it."

Funds for mines building received

By JIM VOLLBRECHT
Staff Writer

University of Idaho President Elisabeth Zinser recently announced the receipt of $5.8 million of federal funds for the construction of a new building to house the College of Mines and Earth Resources.

The funds are the second and final installment from the federal government for the project. Total funding for the project is $11.8 million, $8.8 of which is federal, $2 million is state and $1 million comes from private contributions.

According to Eve Magyar, UI Planner/Architect, construction for the project should start before the end of next summer.

"Originally we had hoped to break ground in the spring, but that just isn't realistic," Magyar said.

At this point the project is still in the planning stages. The College of Mines made some changes and updated some of the original plans so the plans will have to be reapproved by the state Department of Public Works. The Department of Public Works oversees projects such as this at Idaho colleges.

"Preliminary recommendation on a site has been sent to public works for approval," Magyar said.

The site proposed is at Seventh and Urquhart Streets. The site does encroach on Seventh Street and will result in its closure for vehicular traffic.

"Pedestrian access will be maintained," Magyar said, adding, "this opens up the possibility of a pedestrian mall."

The architectural firm of Anderson DeBartolo Par Inc. of San Francisco is doing the bulk of the program and schematic work according to Magyar.

While the San Francisco firm is handling the planning, much of the oversight of the construction will be done by the Boise firm of Zabala Giltzow Albanese Chartered.

According to Dr. Robert Bartlett, dean of the mines college, the current College of Mines facilities have undergone little change since they were completed in 1961.

"We've needed to expand and improve our facilities, especially our laboratory facilities, for the modern era of professional education in geology, mining, metallurgy and geography," Bartlett said.

Major contributors from the private sector include Coeur d'Alene Mines, ASARCO, Cyprus Minerals, Hecla Mining Company and Monsanto.

Targhee resident dies

Targhee hall resident Timothy R. Hodge, a University of Idaho sophomore business major, died Friday morning at 11 a.m. The death was ruled as accidental.

Hodge, 21, was unconscious when he was found hanging from a noose early Thursday morning. Targhee hall hosts a Halloween haunted house each year and the noose was apparently left over from the event. According to police, Hodge had been drinking prior to the incident.

He was taken to Gritman Memorial at approximately 1 a.m. on Thursday and was transferred to the Neuro Intensive Care unit at St. Joe's Medical Center in Lewiston about 12 hours later. Hodge never regained consciousness.

Funeral services will be held today at 11 a.m. at the Seventh Day Adventist Church in Coeur D'Alene. The university will hold a memorial service later this week.

"The entire university campus mourns this tragic loss," UI Dean of Students Bruce Pitman said. "We grieve with family and friends over the loss and we will continue working with them."

Career Service Center offers benefits

By Lesley Kuchenrifer
Staff Writer

The Career Services Center, located downstairs in Brink Hall, offers numerous services besides career placement.

Although the center successfully placed approximately 250 students last year, they are also working to provide a wider variety of services.

"One of the concerns I have is getting students to come in before they're eligible for placement to look at career options. They're not getting this information soon enough," Alice Barbut, acting director, said.

Barbut hopes to have the center work more closely with the colleges and with other units on campus to provide a broader base of career information. The other units Barbut hopes the center can work closer with are the Counseling Center and Cooperative Education. The Counseling Center has both counselors and a computer program to help students assess their career interests, while Cooperative Education works to help students get internships in their areas of interest.

The Career Services Library can also be very helpful to students seeking information. It contains information about career options and even on specific companies. Lori Krasselt, Recruiting Coordinator for the center gives orientation tours in the Career Library for individuals and for groups.

"The orientation tours I feel are very important," Krasselt said. "It's good if students can come in groups with the same interests because then I can show them the things that are pertinent to them."

She added that a nice thing about this library is that students can come in anytime and use it.

"I teach them how to use it on their own. It's fairly easy to use,"

Krasselt said.

Another thing Barbut would like to do is offer programs to help students prepare themselves more for the job search and interview process. One way she would like to do this is by giving informational seminars.

"I am available to talk to living groups, student groups and classes," Barbut said.

An example of a possible seminar is "What do employers look for in applicants regardless of a major?" If you are interested, contact Barbut at the Career Center.

Other benefits the center offers are listings of summer positions, part-time positions, overseas positions and positions for students who haven't attained a degree.

One of the purposes of the center is assisting students in finding full-time employment once they have graduated. To be eligible for

NASA official visits UI research center

The NASA Space Engineering Research Center at the University of Idaho is providing new technologies for space programs but, according to a NASA official, an equally important mission for the center is to recruit and train future scientists and engineers.

While attending the 2nd NASA Space Engineering Symposium on the UI campus this week, Gordon Johnston, manager of the NASA Space Technology University Programs, predicted great opportunities for students who pursue careers in space engineering and research. Johnston said providing unique learning opportunities for graduate and undergraduate students is one of the agencies best recruiting tools.

"It's important to get the word out to students that there are these centers and there are opportunities," Johnston said.

NASA has always depended on research at universities to provide answers to problems and develop new technologies. But now, according to Johnston, NASA is concentrating their work at their nine university research centers. He said they have become a "focal point for attracting students and industry and getting more people involved in solving these problems."

Johnston sees a growing need for engineers and scientists at the agency, but the forecast is for a shortage of people trained in those areas.

"It may not happen soon," Johnston said, "but the census data indicates there will be fewer high school graduates available, while at the same time we anticipate there being more and more demand for scientists and engineers just to look at all this information coming down from NASA missions."

The inundation of raw bits of information will come from several ambitious NASA projects. The space agency has plans for a return to the moon where lunar stations will be built. Those stations will be used as bases for missions to Mars. NASA is also involved in the Mission to Earth, an intensive international cooperative effort to study Earth from space.

"All that information coming back from these projects will create a lot of opportunities in our efforts to access it, process it and understand it," Johnston said.

As part of his visit, Johnston met with students working with researchers at the center. Graduate students indicated they came here because of the research facility and the work being done here. "What that tells me is that we really want to have these centers in order to get the graduate students involved and provide them with opportunities," Johnston said.

According to Gary Maki, director of the NASA Space Engineering Research Center, 20 undergraduate students and 30 graduate students participate in the research work at the center.

"All the graduate students and some of the undergraduates are actively involved in the development of new technologies for NASA," Maki said. "It's quite an accomplishment for a 19-year-old student to say he or she has been a part of a team that's developed a new technology being used in space by NASA."

The center has been responsible for the development of error correcting computer chips for NASA.

Wet labs planned for UI

The University of Idaho College of Agriculture will use $590,000 in federal matching funds for architect's fees and other planning expenses connected with eventual construction of an aquaculture wet lab, a new wing to the Agriculture Science Building and a southern Idaho aquaculture facility.

According to Gary Lee, associate dean of the College of Agriculture and director of experiment stations, the money was included in the recently approved federal budget.

"We have the matching funds committed for the first phase, so we can spend the money in February to hire an architect to design and engineer a new wing for the Agricultural Science Building and the southern Idaho aquaculture facility," Lee said.

Lee said the new space would include laboratory facility for much of the biotechnology and aquaculture research being done by the agriculture faculty.

"The new wing will allow

NFL Commissioner Tagliabue made the right move

Thumbs up to Paul Tagliabue, commissioner of the National Football League.

Last week Arizona voters rejected by a 51-49 margin a referendum which would have created a paid state holiday honoring the late Martin Luther King Jr. Tagliabue has warned that the 1993 Superbowl, which is to be held in Phoenix, might be moved. The NFL awarded the 1993 Superbowl to Phoenix suburb Tempe earlier this year, but now the city is in jeopardy of losing the game.

This is not to imply that the people of Arizona do not recognize how great a man King was, but it appears that economic pressures, of all things, swayed the voting.

Major area businesses pressed for a formal recognition of King's work in the civil rights movement with a paid holiday, and the Arizona state legislature agreed.

But, with this movement, Arizona would have to drop a paid Columbus Day in a move to limit costs in the state's employee wages. This led to two proposals to decide upon: a King Day with a Columbus Day, or a King Day without a paid Columbus Day. King Day lost.

What is sad is that Martin Luther King Jr. will not receive the recognition he deserves simply because the state is not willing to pay state employees an extra day's wages.

Great men, such as George Washington and Abraham Lincoln, deserve recognition and honor by naming holidays after them. Martin Luther King Jr. was such a man.

But why is this move by the NFL so critical? In Tagliabue's words, it is not something (the voting down of the holiday) that the NFL wants or needs to be associated with. And college teams seem to be following its lead.

The Fiesta Bowl is in jeopardy as well. The chairman of the bowl's selection committee has announced that the Fiesta Bowl will be moved out of Arizona as well if eighth-ranked Virginia or other highly ranked teams refuse to play in the state. Virginia was extended a bid to the Jan. 1 Fiesta Bowl after it defeated North Carolina on Saturday. Virginia officials stated they didn't know if they would accept the bid.

It seems that Arizona should re-evaluate its morals. Should economics out-rank the great principles our country has been based upon? It appears that Arizona believes it should.

Congress' 'compromise' just their latest blunder

Just when you thought they would never leave...the 101st United States Congress has packed their kit bags and headed home. As the door slams behind the last three-piece suit, let's take a look at some of the highlights dished out by our 535 "representatives" the past two years.

Chuck Brockway

Commentary

Early on, the Democratic senate refused to confirm John Tower as secretary of defense, citing drinking and womanizing problems and consistently parking in red zones. Meanwhile, House Speaker Jim Wright and majority Whip Tony Coelho, both Democrats, resigned amidst allegations of shoddy ethics.

Ted Kennedy, et al, managed to bulldoze through Congress a hefty increase in the federal minimum wage. The wage, now at $4.25 and heading for the $5 mark within five years, was designed to boost the standards of living of the nation's minimum wage earners, which it did, but only for those who weren't laid off once the hike took effect. Of course, the increase in unemployment could then be conveniently blamed on the president.

About midway through its session, the Congress decided it would be nice to rob American citizens of about $500 billion to pay for a disaster it helped create. Apparently they had forgotten that the very idea of deregulation was to allow the Savings and Loans to fend for themselves in the marketplace against bigger, more powerful banking institutions in order to weed out the weaklings. It shakes the very underpinnings of capitalism when the government intervenes to rescue failing institutions that crumble under the pressure of the market. Congress is more than willing to deregulate, but refuses to pay the political price later on. As it is, an outrageous amount of tax money is propping up institutions that should have been dissolved long ago.

Thankfully, President Bush vetoed a sweeping civil rights bill that would have set up a de facto hiring quota system in this country. Sadly, the wide-ranging, absurdly restrictive clean air bill sailed through, as Bush struggled to make good his "environmental president" rhetoric of the 1988 campaign.

In their most recent blunder, Congress passed a pathetic, one-sided "deficit reduction package," and then praised itself for finally working out a "compromise." The package, laden with tax hikes and inconsequential spending cuts, is irresponsible at best. With tax increases to curb spending, and no counteractive measures to boost supply, the budget is destined to push the teetering economy off the recessionary cliff.

The 101st Congress, rated better than most by its members, is a symbol of the lows to which United States government, particularly the liberal establishment in Washington, has sunk. These people are sent, supposedly by a mandate from the people, to do everything in their power for the betterment of American society. What do we get? A minimum wage bill that does little but create unemployment, a $500 billion flush down the toilet, and a myopic budget that continues to destroy the economy with wasteful, useless programs. Is this the best they can do?

Some UI frats stopped hazing long ago

Editor:

I am writing in response to Steve Hood's article on fraternity hazing at UI that was published in the Nov. 7 issue of the Evergreen.

As a member of a fraternity at the UI, I would like to assure Mr. Alexander that his chapter is not the first one on campus to cease hazing. My chapter, for one, has been proud of its no hazing policy for years. Many chapters took the proper actions to stop hazing before they got caught. Taking the proper actions on your own is an honorable accomplishment; being forced to take action is surely nothing to be "proud" of.

Mr. Alexander pointed out that UI is behind the national view on hazing and alcohol. Although our alcohol policy may be developing slower than policies at comparable institutions, our student code of conduct prohibited hazing years before Alexander and his cronies handed out bids to the pledge class of 1990.

Alexander said the problems found by the Northwest Chapter president's investigation were only minor. I ask, how can any hazing incident be considered minor when the greek system struggles everyday to improve its image in the public's eye? If these allegations prove to be true, the rest of the Greeks can only stand by and watch in disgust as another nail is driven in the coffin of Greek life.

Hippies vs. Holt

Editor:

Hippies vs. Car accepts criticism on its advertising, but will make every effort to understand it. Let's look at the facts: 1) KUOI has never contributed towards the manufacturing of any of the promotional material of HVC, with all efforts behind the promotion and production of the program coming from contributors on an individual basis. 2) HVC can never be blamed for any accusations regarding the use of Native Americans (female or male) in any promotional image because there haven't been any used. The image in question is a photograph of Fakir Musafar (b. 1930), an artist exhibiting his form in modern primitivism by hanging himself from flesh hooks. We leave the image and its correlation to the Hippies vs. Car related projects up to the individual. 3) Bob Holt confused the flier. The one that Holt refers to as "a bare-chested woman with something attached to her breast (Was it a beer bong? I couldn't tell)," with one created to promote a Young Brians concert. That is his problem. 4) As far as the exploitation of women, HVC's united position is to exploit those that exploit us, and you, and whoever, but if you insist we are ignorant, we suppose it works on that level too...but make no mistake, please, we work way too hard on this project to have it confused with the Young Brians.

UJC member obviously biased

Editor:
The University Judicial Council is a necessary but unfortunate part of this university. It is necessary because, occasionally, Idaho students do bad things, and, like the real world, the university calls students to be accountable for their misdeeds. The UJC is unfortunate because it is necessary. Misconceptions about the whole administrative disciplinary process have grown with some vigor of late, due to the large amounts of fertilizer applied to those misconceptions.

The process is simple; if you are caught breaking a rule covered in the Student Code of Conduct, chances are high that you will find yourself speaking to one of the Student Advisory Services prosecutors about a fit punishment for you. Once decided, your proposed punishment is reviewed by UJC. This body is made up of three professors, two undergraduates and two graduate students. The UJC has the power to add to or subtract from the punishment recommended for you by the SAS prosecutors.

The ASUI Attorney General, Dennis Charney, is the attorney for the defendant, i.e., you, the accused student. If you are accused and you are brought before the UJC, you have the right to be represented.

So, if such a thing happened to you, and you were scheduled for punishment by the university, what type of administrative board would you hope would hear your case? Unbiased, reasonable, open-minded and fair?

Mr. Charney has accused one member of the UJC of being biased, close-minded and unfair. Mr. Charney bases his belief on his experience as a UJC member serving allegedly with the unfair member, Ms. Cupid Hart. Mr. Charney believes that the interests of his clients, that is, the accused students, are not being served as fairly as should be expected, because of Ms. Hart's presence on the UJC.

In September of this year, I attended my first UJC meeting. It was so apparent to me that Ms. Hart was unfair and biased against students that I mentioned it to two of the SAS prosecutors and to Mr. Charney. It was then that I became aware of Mr. Charney's desire to remove Ms. Hart from the council. Interestingly, UJC's Nov. 9th meeting was attended by a markedly changed Cupid Hart. Her attitude was much more accepting of proposed settlements, and she even voted a more lenient punishment on two cases. Perhaps the front page article in that morning's Argonaut had something to do with Ms. Hart's appa-

Vice President

His freedom from personal bias, his willingness to take on projects, and his base of knowledge in the ASUI's operations and processes are the attributes that John Noh feels qualify him for the vice presidential office.

His active participation in state and local politics for the last 10 years, his leadership within his living group, and his involvement with the ASUI on issues such as parking, campus lighting and fee increases have given Noh the experience he feels is necessary for this office.

Noh feels that a cooperative, supportive and honest relationship with the administration, in which concerns are dealt with in a professional manner, would promote the betterment of this institution. With the Student Bar Association's proposed withdrawal from the ASUI, there will be two student governments on campus, a fact that Noh hopes to use to the advantage of the students.

By working cooperatively, Noh believes that the two governments can increase the quality of student sponsored activities as well as providing a better representation to the administration.

Noh's proposed projects for the next year include increasing safety on campus by installing an escort service to and from study areas, improving financial aid advising, promoting quality academic advising and possibly installing more accelerated classes.

Noh has also proposed the creation of a newsletter that would be sent to all living groups, informing them of various ASUI projects and promoting involvement.

A junior majoring in psychology, Charles D'Alessio plans to use his experience to strive for the expansion of services that directly benefit students, focusing primarily on internal issues such as allocating money to student programs and involvement on a student financial aid committee.

D'Alessio's experience includes a recent appointment as an ASUI senator, Idaho Student Lobby delegate and presidential assistant at the University of Idaho and Adams State College.

D'Alessio believes that the ASUI should be self-controlling; however, ASUI officials could benefit from input from administrators. He feels that the administrators shouldn't be the enemies, but rather ex-officio members to the whole student government. This way the ASUI retains their control and will have the ultimate say in the issues. D'Alessio emphasizes that there is no reason why the administration can't be a resource.

D'Alessio supports the current Student Bar Association and Graduate and Professional Student Association positions and their movements for control of their monies on the basis that their needs are quite different from those of undergraduates.

D'Alessio believes student education about ASUI benefits, as well as active recruitment of students by ASUI officials, is what is needed to increase direct interaction between the ASUI and students. D'Alessio believes that this direct interaction will promote a positive image of the student government as well as increasing student involvement on boards and in activities.

Concerning the General Reserve account, D'Alessio questions how much of the money should be saved in case the ASUI levies a fee increase. Ultimately, students lose money that they entrusted to the ASUI and this leads to a poor rapport between students and the government. Thus, he feels the money should go to benefit the students and their government.

D'Alessio maintains that with student concerns and issues as his top priority, his main focus will be to wholly benefit student interests at the university.

Four years of experience in the ASUI have given Mike Gotch the broad base of experience and knowledge that he believes is required to effectively address problems and make an impact on issues.

Gotch, a senior majoring in advertising and psychology, plans to graduate in December of 1991. His prior experience includes serving as ASUI vice president, three years as a senator, a member of the Academics Board, Government Operations and Appointment chairman, Finance Committee chairman and as the chairman of the Ad-hoc Committee on parking.

Gotch plans to continue fighting to keep on-street parking free. He also plans to help keep higher education affordable by fighting unnecessary fee increases and working to increase student financial aid.

Other issues he plans to address include improving campus lighting, protecting the college of engineering from erosion by BSU and further promoting the ASUI and their programs by involving student input.

Gotch believes that the ASUI's autonomous relationship with the administration, one that was achieved through competence, maturity in dealing with issues, and sound financial policy, is what separates our student government from most others. This has resulted in a relationship of mutual respect, one that Gotch believes must be protected.

Addressing the needs of non-traditional as well as traditional students is one aspect of student government that Gotch intends to improve upon. Gotch believes the Student Bar Association and Graduate and Professional Student Association disputes are indicators of these needs, and by working to meet these needs, he will ensure that the student government does not splinter into special interest groups.

As the ASUI successfully addresses the problems of all students and as its profile in programming and services increases, Gotch believes that the ASUI will gain respect from all of its students.

Elwood Rennison, a senior majoring in history and political science, believes his experience in various leadership positions, as well as his working knowledge of the ASUI, its operations and dealings with the administration, will make him a great contribution to the senate, representative of the students.

Rennison's experience includes work as an ASUI senator since May, membership on the UI Committee on Committees, ASUI Academics Board and the ASUI Political Concerns Board. Rennison has also held

One policy that Rennison plans to institute is orientation for new senators, including new senator packets that would facilitate the effectiveness of each individual senator.

Rennison has proposed an aggressive plan to attract students and counter the apathy of UI students. This plan includes publicizing and describing open positions, as well as examining student body governments of other universities and how they counter and remedy apathy.

leadership positions in his living groups and has had an intern position with Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus.

Rennison regards the proposed withdrawal of the Student Bar Association from the ASUI as a positive move, one that will aid them in the pursuit of their distinct goals. He also feels that the Graduate and Professional Student Association should maintain their identity within the ASUI, their position as board status strengthening the student body's unity while Since each student pays $31.25 to ASUI each semester, I believe they should get their money's worth. I would also like to establish a campus-wide program to provide an escort service for people who do not wish to walk home alone in the evenings. Social and educational programs should be adopted that have been successfully implemented at other sister universities.

Vandals strive for third straight hoop title

SENIOR. Ricardo Boyd will be expected to lead Idaho this season. (BRIAN JOHNSON PHOTO)

By MATT LAWSON AND
CHRISTOPHER GATEWOOD

The 1990-91 college basketball season is upon us as the Vandals play their first game tomorrow against Simon Fraser University from Canada. Going into the season there are a lot of question marks for the Vandals and their new head coach Larry Eustachy.

Gone are Big Sky Players of the year Riley Smith, who averaged over 22 points a game last season, and point guard Otis Livingston who was a First Team All Big Sky performer. Livingston was fourth in the nation in assists with 8.5. Eustachy will be hard pressed to match the winning percentage of former coach Kermit Davis, who has moved on to Texas A&M. In his two seasons at Idaho, Davis was 52-10 with two straight appearances in the NCAA tournament. Eustachy doesn't seem worried about living up to Davis.

"I don't think a coach should always be measured by his record," Eustachy said. "I'll be happy with this team if they play to their potential and my expectations. If that means we win only eight games, fine. If we make the post-season tournament that will be great too."

Making the tournament won't be easy in a conference that on the whole should be improved over last year. Boise State has regrouped and Montana, Nevada and Weber State will all help bring parody to the Big Sky.

The strength of the Vandals will definitely be in the front court where seniors Ricardo Boyd (6-4, 200), Cliff Martin (6-8, 220) and Sam Freeman (6-7, 240) all return.

Leading the way will be Boyd who is going to be in his fourth year as a starter. Boyd, who is from Ellisville, Miss., is the leading returning scorer in the Big Sky with a 13.9 average. Street and Smith's and Dick Vitale's basketball previews picked Boyd as the pre-season player of the year.

"Ricardo is in a position that everybody envies," Eustachy said. "He's finally our team leader. There's always been a Riley Smith and a Raymond Brown but now it's Ricardo's turn."

The loss of Smith means that Boyd is going to have to score a lot more this year. Boyd who is primarily a jump shooter, is going to have to drive more this year.

Defense leads Idaho to victory over Grizzlies

By MATT LAWSON
Sports Editor

After scoring 203 points in their last four games, the Idaho offense let the defense take control as the Vandals manhandled the Montana Grizzlies.

Statistics don't always tell the story when looking at a football game, and Idaho's 35-14 victory in Missoula was no exception. The Grizzlies had 455 yards to Idaho's 289, but turnovers again made the difference as the Vandals won their fifth game straight. Montana had five turnovers while the Vandals refused to give the Grizzlies any gifts.

Vandal head coach John L. Smith was pleased with the performance of the Idaho defense.

"Our defense came to play," Smith said. "They just made big play after big play."

Jeff Robinson played his best game as a Vandal to lead the defensive surge.

Robinson had four sacks to move into the all-time lead at Idaho along with two interceptions. The defensive end now has 16 sacks on the season and 24 for his career to erase Marvin Washington (14.5) and Kord Smith (20.5) from the Vandal record books.

Robinson's second interception was the key play for the Vandals with less than a minute to play in the first half.

The sophomore from Spokane tipped Montana quarterback Grady Bennett's pass and ran 60 yards before throwing a lateral pass to Billy Sims who carried the ball 15 more yards to give Idaho its first lead at 14-7.

"I was dead tired," Robinson said. "By the time I ran 60 yards I was done running and I had to give it (the ball) to someone else."

The Montana defense controlled Idaho most of the game and running back Devon Pearce had to work for his 110 yards on 31 carries.

Idaho was less generous when the Grizzlies tried to run the ball. The Vandals dominated Montana, allowing them just 15 yards on 30 carries.

The Vandals had a season-high eight sacks to help limit their opponent to less than 30 yards for the second straight week.

John Simon and Jimmy Lee Jacobs had two sacks each to go with Robinson's four, while freshman Matt Groshong dropped Bennett once.

Jacobs also had 10 tackles to go with a fumble recovery late in the third quarter which lead to an Idaho score making it 21-7 after three quarters.

Senior linebacker Mark Matthews had 13 tackles to lead the Vandals.

Idaho tight end Scott Dahlquist continued his amazing streak of touchdowns to hurt Montana. The senior from Enumclaw, Wash., had two touchdowns which extended his streak to four touchdowns on four consecutive catches.

Quarterback Steve Nolan completed 15 passes on 28 attempts without an interception and three

Idaho and Boise State: More than just a game

Once again it is rivalry weekend throughout the nation in college football.

The list of big games goes on and on: USC-UCLA, Washington-Washington State, Notre Dame-Penn State, Oregon-Oregon State. But let's not forget the battle in Boise, Saturday, when the Idaho Vandals and the Boise State Broncos renew their much-heated rivalry.

The game has been built to such large proportions that both teams feel their season's are missing something unless they win this game. If this is true, Boise State hasn't been happy for eight years now.

After winning five straight games against the Vandals from 1977 to 1981, Boise State hasn't tasted victory since.

Most of the games have been close, especially in the last four years, with Idaho not winning by more than seven points in any victory. The overall series record stands at 10-8-1 with the Vandals holding a slight edge.

The rivalry has intensified so much that it has become more than just a game.

In my case, it has gone as far as to separate family members on choosing between the two schools. My father is actually a Boise State season ticket holder and my uncle is a self-proclaimed "Idaho-hater" as he sports a t-shirt that says 'My Two Favorite Teams are Boise State and Anyone Playing the Idaho Vandals.'

The rivalry is intensified in the Boise area as several Idaho graduates hold jobs in the capital city and continue to root for the Vandals. A great deal of these alumni also have tickets to see the Broncos take the field every week, but when Idaho comes to town they leave their Bronco blue and orange at home in favor of their Vandal silver and gold.

The students definitely have not lost any love for each other over the years.

Lawson
Opinion

With "Hate Boise State Week," several t-shirts degrading the Broncos and a "Why I Hate Boise State Contest" last year, the rivalry flame continues to burn.

This is no exception with the Boise State students. They caught on quickly to the situation and now have similar events and t-shirts.

When John Friesz graduated last year, Bronco fans saw a slight glimmer of hope and they had expectations that their 1990 team would be the best since 1980 when they won the national championship.

After Montana State beat Idaho in the first game of the season, Bronco boosters were on the phone to their favorite Vandal fans willing to place more than just a conservative bet on the game.

That was nine weeks ago and several things have happened since September and both teams now look like the top teams in the conference.

Of course, this is a rivalry, and the redundant cliché of throwing out all the statistics and records is once again appropriate.

On paper, Boise State might be the better team with an impressive defense and an offense that came of age in their 30-14 victory over Nevada.

But Idaho is on their own roll after winning their last five games after a tough loss to Nevada.

After eight frustrating years Bronco players might be wondering if they really can beat Idaho, or if this nightmarish streak will continue for another year.

The player's feelings about the game may tell the real story, though. Senior tight end Scott Dahlquist best described the feelings of the Vandals.

"I would rather lay down on the field and die than lose to Boise State," Dahlquist said.

Don't worry Scott, you won't have to die, and you won't have to lose, because Idaho is going to win for the ninth year straight.

Idaho season and Thompson's career come to an end

By JOE MALLET
Staff Writer

The UI Women's volleyball team ended their season last weekend with two home matches. Friday night, Idaho lost to Idaho State University, the first place BSC team, scoring 14-16, 9-15, 15-12 and 11-15. Saturday, the Vandals dropped their final match of the season, losing to Boise State University in three games, 15-17, 9-15 and 4-15.

Against ISU, Karen Thompson led the Vandal effort with team high numbers in kills (28), hitting percentage (.358) and digs with 15. Stacey Asplund led the team in digs with eight.

Saturday, against BSU, Thompson again led the Vandals with team high kills (10), service aces (one), digs (10) and shared the blocking honors with Asplund (three).

With the two losses, Idaho finished their season with a 14-15 overall record. Their BSC record rests at 6-10 which gives them sixth place in the conference.

Only the top four teams in the conference go to the post-season conference championship tournament which will be at Pocatello in three weeks. Idaho State University, the University of Montana, Boise State University and Eastern Washington University will compete for the BSC title.

Karen Thompson, Stacey Asplund and Leslie Bischoff, all seniors, ended their careers Saturday, against BSU.

Asplund led the team at the end of the season with her hitting percentage of .279. She provided excellent blocking and accurate hitting for the Vandals which will definitely be missed.

Thompson, a Moscow native, is one of the best volleyball players that this university has ever seen. Thompson ended her season with 524 kills. That is a single season school record. She also made Idaho history by becoming the first player ever to score 1,000 kills and 1,000 digs in a career.

Thompson set national marks when she reached double figure kills against the Broncos which gave her 68 career double figure kill matches. This places her 10th in all-time NCAA Division I volleyball standings.

After her illustrious career here at Idaho, Thompson is ranked in the top 10 in Idaho's career and single season record books in 12 different categories and holds five school records.

Thompson is up for All-Big Sky, All-Northwest Region and All-American honors. Also being considered for honors are Asplund, for all-conference and Academic All-American, and Dee Porter and Nancy Wicks for Big Sky Conference Freshman of the Year.

This was truly a rebuilding season for the Vandals. Even after losing their three seniors, Idaho will retain four freshman who started for most of the season. The youth and inexperience that plagued the Vandals this year will be a priceless asset in seasons to come.

Next year, when Idaho has to produce under pressure, their team will be seasoned with experience. They played tough and showed character this year, winning nine of 11 matches late in the season to make them serious contenders for a post-season berth.

Even though their efforts fell short, they will know what it is like to produce under pressure and win big when it counts. Idaho beat Gonzaga, Eastern Washington and Washington State this year after a slow start. These matches will stand as reminders of success next year. Freshman Nancy Wicks should be well recovered from her knee injury by next season, and return to continue her brilliant play which made her team leader in block assists and average blocks per game this season.

Wicks ducked in and out of the NCAA Division top 20 this season with blocks per game. She also set a new Idaho single season record for block assists with 125, which broke the previous record of 117 set by Kristy Frady last year. Wicks also tied the Idaho record for block assists in a match with 11.

Wicks, and the rest of the talented youth that will return next year, will be the cornerstone of the team for three seasons to come.

Vandal head coach Tom Hilbert will have ample time to do more of his strong recruiting that produced this year's bumper crop of freshmen, and that should more than fill out Idaho's squad if he even approaches his recruiting success of last year. His two-year 29-29 record establishes his team as no longer a doormat for the BSC, and that should make it easier to draw talent to the university.

In three years Idaho will have at least six seniors. Then will be a time to speculate about the Vandals future. Now, with nothing but time on their hands, Idaho can look forward to strong improvement, post-season play and possibly the conference championship itself.

He's always been a great catch and shoot player but he needs to be more assertive," Eustachy said. "We need Ricardo to take it to the basket and draw fouls."

The other returning starter on the front line is Martin who averaged 10 points and five rebounds as a junior last year. Martin is an outstanding leaper and needs to improve his rebounding for the Vandals to be successful.

"Cliff has a great work ethic and by far he's been our best leader," Eustachy said. "With his ability, Cliff should be right near the conference leaders in rebounding. We won't accept anything less."

The other forward back is Freeman who, with his size, looks more like a defensive end than a power forward.

"Sammie's not the quickest guy in the world but for a guy his size he can do some amazing things," Eustachy said. "What we need most from Sammie is more consistency than he showed last year. He needs to rebound and play good defense."

Freeman may be big, but not without a soft touch. For a big guy he has an excellent outside shot.

"Sammie can do a lot of things for us," Eustachy said.

Once again the Vandals have gone to the junior colleges and this year they present forwards Terrell Malone (6-4, 200) from Saddleback College and Otis Mixon (6-5, 190) from San Jacinto College, both in California.

Malone averaged 17 points and nearly seven rebounds at Saddleback. Not bad for a guy that was only 5-9 and 165 pounds in high school and was too small to make the team.

"Terrell is by far our best athlete," Eustachy said. "He's incredibly strong and quick. This guy can really explode. He'll play three positions for us, he has the ability to play three positions."

Mixon could also be an outstanding player for the Vandals. In junior college he posted some big numbers averaging over 24 points and 9.2 rebounds a game. He is very athletic, much like Malone.

"Otis needs to learn to channel his energy," Eustachy said. "He tends to go one on five too often. He needs to learn to use his teammates. Once he does that he'll be a good player for us."

The Vandals also got something they haven't had in a few years: a true freshman. He's 6-foot-7-inch, 208-pound Deon Watson from Greenville, Miss. In 1988 he led his high school team to a 32-4 record and the state championship. He was recruited by Davis, but Eustachy is glad to have him.

"Deon reminds me a lot of Raymond Brown when he was a freshman, Eustachy said. "He has a lot of the same techniques, only I think Deon does some things better. He will get a lot of playing time this year."

With the loss of Livingston, the Vandals are looking for a point guard to replace before anything else.

The front court is stable, but the guards have a lot of progress to make.

Leonard Perry is the only player returning with significant experience and Eustachy has high expectations for the senior from Dallas.

"I really like Leonard," Eustachy said. "He's probably one of the most competitive players on our team."

The second-year transfer from McLennan Junior College in Texas may have to take somewhat of a leadership role this season and may be asked to play both guard positions.

Sophomore Mike Gustavel will play the shooting guard position for the Vandals this season. The junior from Borah High School; in Boise came to Idaho as a defensive minded player but will be asked to shoot the ball this season.

"I am really pleased with Mike," Eustachy said. "He's competitive and very accountable. You know he's always going to be there for you."

Gustavel will still be asked to play defense on the perimeter and Eustachy considers him the second-best shooter on the team behind Boyd.

Junior college transfer Calvin Ward is expected to battle Perry for the point guard position and may even play at the shooting guard.

Ward is still trying to learn the Idaho system after transferring from Hiwassee Junior College in Tenn.

"Calvin's just like any newcomer," Eustachy said. "He's going through an adjustment period where in his mind he can't do anything right. But he is doing things right."

Lance Irvin is fighting knee problems to try to help the Vandals as a reserve at guard this season. Irvin transferred from Triton Community College in Chicago to Idaho this season.

"Hopefully Lance will be able help us out for five minutes a game when we need him in a crunch," Eustachy said.

Red shirt freshman Swede Trenkle will play the shooting guard position for the Vandals this season. The Twin Falls High School graduate will challenge Gustavel for playing time.

Ronnie Simpson walked on with the Vandals this season but is currently not practicing due to a lack of credits from transferring. Simpson played at Mount Jacinto Junior College in California with current Vandal Otis Mixon.

The Vandals are definitely not blessed with any outstanding players at guard this season, but Eustachy is still optimistic.

"I just want each of them as individuals to play within themselves and not go outside the

Delta Tau Delta became the 1990 intramural soccer champions Thursday night after a 4-1 shootout victory over the Pijudos, an off-campus team.

Defense was the prevalent theme in this game as the teams fought to a 1-1 tie at the end of 45 minutes. The match was then decided in a shootout, a one on one confrontation between kicker and goalie.

"I hate to see it decided like this," Marcio Paz, Pijudo captain, said. "But they won it fair and square."

The Pijudos took early momentum keeping the ball in the Delt's territory using some fancy footwork. They finally scored on the stingy Delt defense when Hugo Flores kicked one in after 10 minutes of play. However, their lead didn't last long as Delt team member J.P. Schell kicked in a tough corner shot just before halftime.

"There was great defense on both sides," Scott Livingston, Delt captain said. "We tried to keep a high intensity level throughout the game."

And that they did, keeping the ball in Pijudo territory most of the second half. But the beleaguered Pijudo defense held strong to complete the tie.

"We are out of shape," Paz said. "We never practice, so we got tired fast."

The hero of the game was Delt goalie Derek Hamilton. He was almost invincible in the shootout, keeping three out of four shots from entering the net.

"Being in a shootout the night before against the Delta Sigs helped prepare me for this," Hamilton said.

Hamilton is no stranger to the position of goalie.

"I've played goalie my whole life," Hamilton said. "This kind of pressure is nothing."

Juan De La Graza, the Pijudo goalie, on the other hand was ineffective in stopping the Delt shooters, letting four of them score in the best out of five shootout.

"Along with Sigma Chi, Delta Tau Delta is the best team we have played yet," Paz added.

circle of their capabilities," Eustachy said.

Boyd may eventually play shooting guard if the other players have problems producing, which would leave more playing time for the excess of talent in the front court.

"We can always play Ricardo at the shooting guard," Eustachy said. "There is not much difference from the small forward to the shooting guard."

Idaho is picked by a lot of people to win their third straight title but Eustachy has tried to ignore the predictions.

"We can't get caught up in expectations," Eustachy said. "I'll be happy as can be with my team if they meet their potential."

Eustachy has different expectations for all of his players, but dislikes giving players specific roles on the team.

"We haven't talked about roles on this team," Eustachy said. "It is from my experience as you coach players they fall into their roles."

Westhead needs to change coaching strategy

Nugget coach may get fired at any time

By CHRISTOPHER GATEWOOD
Staff Writer

A little advice to Denver Nuggets head coach Paul Westhead — find a new offense or new defense; one of the two.

It's still very early in the season but it's already apparent that the Nuggets and their Heltzer-Skelter offense are in a heap of trouble.

For those of you who aren't familiar with Paul Westhead, he's the former coach of the NCAA's version of the circus. I'm talking about Loyola Marymount, where Westhead coached the highest scoring team in NCAA history. LMU once scored 190 points in a game and Westhead claimed they could have scored 200. Westhead built a wildly successful basketball program at Loyola, taking his team to the NCAA tournament four straight years. He also produced two outstanding players; the Los Angeles Clippers' Bo Kimble and the late Hank Gathers.

But that was then and this is now. Westhead should have stayed in college where it was safe. But instead he's brought his big top to the NBA where they play for real money. Westhead bragged before the season that his system would work in the NBA and that he could easily score 200 points.

Things came to an all-time low last Saturday night when the Phoenix Suns scored nearly 200 themselves. The Suns broke the NBA scoring record tallying 107 first half points and tying the regulation record by getting 173 in all. Right now Westhead's Nuggets are 0-6 and are getting a lesson in Humility 101.

The Nuggets system will not work in the NBA for two reasons. First, the Nuggets simply don't have the talent. Oh sure, Westhead went out and picked up

Corey Gaines who ran the offense for him at LMU, but Gaines is not an NBA caliber player. He was cut by two teams and is lucky to be in the league. They picked up All-American Chris Jackson in the draft but at only 6-1 he can't cover the leagues bigger guards. Walter Davis can still bury a jumper but his aging knees are nearing 35. Orlando Woolridge, who the Nuggets acquired from the Lakers is averaging over 31 points a game, but who couldn't in the Nugget's crazy system. Face it, these are not marquee players.

Secondly, you can't win in the NBA without playing defense. Just ask the Pistons. They play the toughest defense in the league and it has brought them two straight NBA titles. And even the Lakers, whose fastbreak used to be the best in the league, played some great defense during all those title years.

Suns' forward Tom Chambers told the Oregonian that you have to have a different mind set to play these guys. No kidding! You have to learn to comprehend that you're going to get a wide open lay-up every time down the court.

If Westhead thinks he can outscore everybody, he's nuts. This isn't college where you can intimidate other teams. Every night you play a tough team. In the NBA anybody can score or they wouldn't be there. The NBA is about playing defense and getting the right match-ups and exploiting other teams weaknesses. When you face players like Michael Jordan, Magic Johnson, Karl Malone and Patrick Ewing night after night you can't realistically expect to outscore them.

The Nuggets organization, on the whole, is headed in the wrong direction. When they came into new ownership last year, they fired popular coach Doug Moe who had a winning record in every year. Then they traded their best player in Fat Lever and veteran Alex English to Dallas. (This all makes sense to me. Fire a good coach for personal reasons and then trade your two best players to Dallas. Sounds like a formula for success.)

When the Nuggets hired Westhead they hired a coach that had been fired by the Lakers earlier in his coaching career for running an offense exactly the opposite than he has run at LMU and Denver. At Los Angeles, Westhead tried the slow down approach and it cost him his job. Westhead must have known he was wrong because at LMU he went wild. Obviously he didn't want to make the same mistakes twice. Unfortunately, Westhead has overcompensated and has gone off the deep end.

Under Moe the Nuggets were always a high scoring team but it was controlled and they still played defense. This is something Westhead will have to learn when he's standing in the unemployment line.

Group to give concert tonight

Vandaleers to visit the Big Apple

By PATRICK J. TRAPP
Staff Writer

Start spreadin' the news! The University of Idaho Vandaleers formal concert choir is planning a trip to New York in May to participate in a celebration honoring the 100th anniversary of Carnegie Hall. Choir member Mike Otto said the Vandaleers will perform concerts for various alumni groups in New York City and Washington D.C. from May 7-13.

At the Carnegie celebration, the Vandaleers will join with several other collegiate choirs in renditions of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony and Berlioz Te Deum.

"All the big names have gone to Carnegie, and now we're going too," Otto said. In honor of the anniversary, the SUB Vandal Gallery is displaying pictures of some of the historic moments at Carnegie Hall. The pictures were produced due to the cooperative efforts of Carnegie Hall and the International Center of Photography in New York. The pictures feature everything from Carnegies' fabul-

Cosby, Bruce Springsteen, and that's just to name a few.

"Carnegie Hall has always stood for excellence," Otto said. "The pictures in the SUB are excellent, and we're an excellent choir that will be playing there."

The Vandaleers will be performing a concert tonight at the Lionel Hampton School of Music Recital Hall.

The group, which is conducted by Tim King, will be performing pieces by American composer Aaron Copland, W.A. Mozart, Michael Hadyn and James McCray. Italian madrigals will also be performed. The Vandaleer choir, currently made up of 43 UI students, is in its 60th year of production and continues to entertain.

"The goal of the Vandaleers has always been to provide high quality choral music," Otto said. "I think we have done this."

The concert will begin at 8 p.m. and is free of charge.

'Tis the season to rent videos

By TRENT YOUNG
Staff Writer

With the holidays rushing down like magpies for a road kill feast, the video season is reaching its annual frenzy.

Scores of new releases are glutting the shelves at our local video stores — bringing the summer blockbusters down for a cameo appearance on your television screen. Here are just a few of the new, and waited, November releases that look interesting:

■ Dick Tracy. Compared to by many as a rip-off of that other superhero movie last year, this film stands out because of its great costumes and scenery. Although Warren Beatty is a dull, dull little man, and Al Pacino reminds me of a part I had removed, I actually enjoyed this film. Look for fine acting by Dustin Hoffman and William Forsythe, and nasty (but stupid) acting by Madonna.

■ Total Recall. Arnie takes a good story and makes it sooo stupid that thousands of kids out there actually believe that a guy with muscles can survive in a vacuum undamaged. (For more information on this movie, watch HE-MAN, or just imagine you're a script-writer trying to make a story that your comatose gerbil will be able to visualize.)

■ The Rocky Horror Picture Show. Transvestites, lost honeymooners, space aliens, elbow sex, the Time Warp, a dull narrator and a man-made boy-toy all rolled into one odd, and very 70's burrito. Susan Sarrandon, Tim Curry and Barry Bostwick star in this cheesy classic noted for night showings and water-pistol rainshowers.

■ The Cook, The Thief, His Wife and Her Lover. The name alone is deadly. A movie in the tradition of all art films that seek to shock by way of moral depravity. I had heard that this movie was the Caligula of our time. It's not. This film is good and interesting and all, but it just isn't nasty enough for its own benefit. The producers went for an "X" rating when they should've just told the ratings board to take a flying flick and then made the film much nastier.

■ Prancer. A stupid girl finds one of Santa's little slave-team and gets all attached, knowing that she'll have to let Prancer go or else Christmas will never come. Recommended use for this movie: Torture. If someone has wronged you, play them this video and force-feed them olives, thus gaining revenge. (Also great for removing lime deposits from bathroom tiles, and killing unwanted insect pests.)

■ Pretty Woman. "Does she love me, or does she just like to shop?" "Does he love me at all, or is he just being nice because I'm a naughty hooker with big lips and nobody to cuddle?" The questions just keep rolling on... "Did I want to see this, or did my girlfriend force me?"

Choose healthy foods

By PATRICK J. TRAPP
Staff Writer

The holiday season is once again upon us. It is that time of the year when we give thanks by giving of ourselves to others.

But, let's face it, when everyone else is giving to us, it tends to show — especially along the waistline. It's hard to stay in shape when we are surrounded by hot turkey, plump ham, pumpkin pie, mashed potatoes, and, not to mention, sub-freezing weather. At least in the summer we could work off all those wonderful calories. But this is winter, and winter means laziness.

Well it doesn't have to be that way. There are ways to enjoy the holiday season without gaining weight. That is why I did some research at the Health Fair last week and came up with these questions to test your knowledge of food, nutrition, and diet. Here goes:

Q. You have to kiss 389 times to lose one, single pound. True or false?

A. True. According to one dietician, a kiss of average intensity (this can be interpreted many different ways) uses up about nine calories.

Q. How much sugar in our diet comes from processed foods: 25, 50 or 70 percent?

A. Close to 70 percent. Sugar is the leading additive in foods, and most of the 67 pounds of sugar consumed by the typical American each year is hidden in processed foods.

Q. Do most people eat too much, too little or an adequate amount of protein?

A. Most Americans, adults and children, eat far more protein than they need. A diet too high in protein may increase calcium loss.

Q. Which has more calories — butter or margarine?

A. They have the same amount. They are both fat, and all fats have approximately 255 calories per ounce. But most margarines are made from vegetable fats and contain no cholesterol.

Q. Do adults need as much calcium as do children?

A. Yes. Most of us erroneously believe that once our teeth and bones are fully developed we no longer need calcium-rich foods. But calcium serves other functions, including the replenishment of bones.

Q. Vitamins are a good source of energy. True or false?

A. False. Vitamins, per se, do not give you energy, though they do help your body convert the food that you eat into energy.

Q. Eating apples, salads cereals and other high fiber foods reduces the risk of which of these cancers — stomach, colon or cancer?

A. Colon cancer according to the National Cancer Institute.

Q. You get more nutrients out of your food if you chew it thoroughly. True or false?

A. False. Chewing your food thoroughly makes little difference in the food you absorb. However, the slower you chew your food, the more time you take and the less you will eat.

Q. The sandwich was invented for 18th century church picnics. True or false?

A. False. It was created to accommodate a gambler. In the 18th century, the Earl of Sandwich gambled 24 hours a day and ordered bread-and-meat combinations so he could eat while playing cards.

Q. Where is the best place to defrost food, on the counter or in the fridge?

A. The fridge. Counters are full of gross amounts of bacteria.

Heart, Cheap Trick to give concerts at Beasley

Looking for something to do that involves classic rock, an action packed show, and some famous names?

Look no further, two of rock's best-loved bands are on their way to a coliseum near you.

Rock 'n' roll sisters Ann and Nancy Wilson bring their band Heart to Washington State University's Beasley Performing Arts Coliseum Dec. 7 for an 8 p.m. concert.

The rock group is on its current world tour with special guest Cheap Trick, who recently released their new album Busted.

Brigade, the new album by the Seattle's own Heart, follows the group's 1987 nearly triple-platinum Bad Animals album, which spawned three hit singles and music videos, and its biggest hit single thus far, "Alone."

The news release, called aggressive, elegant, brutal and tender, takes the band back to their more rock oriented and acoustic roots, and brings Heart into the 1990s in a powerful way. Every member of the band is a crucial part of the sound and vision, says the group.

The five-piece unit features Ann Wilson, vocals; Nancy Wilson, vocals and guitars; Howard Leese, guitars, vocals and keyboards; Mark Andes, bass guitar and vocals; and Denny Carmassi, drums.

The Brigade tour will take Heart throughout Europe, the U.S., Japan and Australia, and they have high hopes of playing in the Soviet Union.

Cheap Trick's new album, Busted is a follow-up to its 1988 platinum-plus Lap of Luxury album, which produced the No. 1 single "The Flame." After a solid year of touring which took the band throughout the world, they returned to the studio to begin a new album.

Now, they have emerged with Busted which includes collaborations with Chrissie Hynde and Foreigner's Mick Jones. The four-piece group features Robin Zander, lead vocal; Rick Nielsen with his trademark beanie, guitar; Tom Peterson, bass guitar; and Bun E. Carlos, drums. The band members wrote or co-wrote seven of the eleven tracks included on Busted and say they are back with a bang.

Tickets are currently on sale at the Coliseum Box Office

Seats still available for upcoming concerts

By SALLY GILPIN
Arts/Leisure Editor

Concertgoers will be excited to know that there are still tickets available for four big-name concerts coming up.

Tickets for the December M.C. Hammer concert are still available, however, the seats are located behind the stage. People who are seated in that area will be able to see a small portion of the stage, but will probably not be able to see Hammer at all, according to officials from G & B Select-a-Seat.

Friday night's ZZ Top concert also has a few behind the stage seats available. But attendees won't be able to see much of anything from these seats either.

"The guys in ZZ Top are so ugly, I wouldn't want to see them anyway," Moscow resident Andrea Pierce said. "I don't mind sitting behind the stage, I'll still be able to hear."

The Dec. 7 Heart and Cheap Trick concert has lots of good seats still available according to G & B Select-a-Seat officials. They also added that people should not wait too much longer to purchase tickets because sales are picking up.

Blockheads, alias New Kids on the Block fans, have not bought out the coliseum either. Good seats are still available for that February event.

If you are interested in attending one of these upcoming concerts call G & B Select-a-Seat for ticket information.

Three music choices to choose from

Review By MARK MILAM
Staff Writer

We have hit that time of year when we are flooded with new music, with every musician trying to cash in on the lucrative Christmas market. I find this to fit my needs perfectly, I am the type of music listener that grows bored with the same music over and over again that is why I do not listen to top-forty radio, and why I buy many compact discs every month.

This month is beginning to look very good. First, there is the new Cure album, Mixed Up. Wait a minute! You thought there was going to be no more Cure, well so did I. I was just going to listen to the old albums, that is what I always do when I hate the new music that is being pumped out.

Surprisingly, this album accomplishes the goal of old album tracking by presenting the hit songs in a re-mixed format. You may have heard these cuts before in this format at your favorite dance club, some have never trespassed your ears.

Hard core Cure fans will find this album quite refreshing, and new listeners will find themselves enjoying the songs, and perhaps they will also be lured into the web of the Cure.

So you are not the New-Wave, dancing type. You like your rock 'n' roll simple and good, then the Traveling Wilburys pulled one off for you. In the second effort by this unique and extremely talented collection of musicians, rock is made simple, but tragically beautiful once again.

In Volume 3 the Traveling Wilburys cut across the familiar path of rock guitar and melodic harmonies. The songs are well crafted by the talents of Tom Petty, George Harrison, Bob Dylan and Jeff Lynn, or as they like to call themselves Muddy Wilbury, Spike Wilbury, Boo Wilbury and Clayton Wilbury. Too bad the great musician Roy Orbison was not around to lend his talents as Lefty Wilbury.

The songs are not as good as the last Wilbury album, but where the substance is missing, power was added. Simply put, this album rocks. With the first cut, "She's My Baby," flashing all across MTV and out of my radio I can safely predict that this will be a big hit for the collective brothers of music. One downer note to the Wilbury tune is that this group will not tour because of Spike and Clayton Wilbury (Harrison, Lynn). Past touring has made these two brothers shy away from the road. Too bad!

Scorpions put out another quality album

Review By JAY FORMAN
Staff Writer

The Scorpions have been around for twenty years. Two decades of rock and roll.

The Scorpions are back, and they still rock as well as they ever have during their two decade stay atop the rock 'n' roll mountain. The new album is called Crazy World, and its got some new twists to the usual Scorpions' sting.

In 1987, the Scorpions released Savage Amusement, which was a typical Scorpions record with four or five great songs, and the rest just kind of, well, the rest.

They went on the Monsters of Rock tour with Van Halen, and if you listen, you might hear a time or two that the Scorpions blew old Van Halen off of the stage.

They released a greatest hits package last year with a new song that was good.

Their three year break between music was due partly because of producer problems and an extended vacation which was well deserved. Now, they've got a new producer and one of the great albums of 1990.

Keith Olsen is the new man at the boards. Olsen has worked with the likes of Whitesnake, Journey, Night Ranger and numerous other rock bands, both past and present. He adds a radio accessible sound to the Scorpions' music. This is one reason the new album is a step above anything the Scorpions have done since they hit it big with their Love at First Sting album in 1984.

The first song and first single is called "Tease Me, Please Me," it's a song that grabs you, but only after you've heard it four or five times. It should get rock radio play and the hot video should help matters as well. It's your average rock anthem, and though it's not the best on the record by any means, it works for the most part. This song should go over well live.

The Scorpions are at their best with the next song. It's called "Don't Believe Her," a perfect example of what makes up a great song. It's got a classic Scorpions riff, not too fast, not too slow, just right. The song is about someone telling you that you're the only one. Lead singer Klaus Meine makes it clear that this isn't the one for you. This song has an extra bonus that Olsen has brought to the Scorpions' sound, back-ground vocals. They add what this song needs to bring it over the top into the classic arena.

"To Be With You In Heaven," the third song, is unusually cool because it talks about a man whose love is too strong to lose, and suggests that sooner or later the lover is going to kill his girlfriend. It's subtle and strange. Meine sings that there's "no cure for a love that kills." Interesting stuff.

In the summer of 1989, there was a concert in Russia that involved the Scorpions, Bon Jovi, Motley Crue and other hard rock heavyweights. The next song

Quilt's from 44 Idaho counties displayed

Centennial quilts from Idaho's 44 counties will be on display at the Boise Convention Center on Nov. 16-17 as part of "Visualizing the Future: Idaho's Second Century Symposium" this coming Friday.

The multi-track symposium will explore issues that will impact Idaho's future in terms of the environment, culture, governance, economics and human capabilities. Issues such as water, waste management, arts planning for small communities and new economic development will be discussed by speakers and panelists. Other developments will be presented by professionals from a variety of fields. A final report and proceedings of the conference will be prepared by the Idaho Department of Commerce, using information gathered at the conference to develop a long-range plan for Idaho's future.

The quilts are a special feature of the symposium. A wide variety of themes are depicted in the quilts, such as aspects of county histories and collages of county geography, commerce, industry and other colorful features. Some quilts will reflect the Centennial celebration through a statewide focus encompassing significant aspects of Idaho's geographic diversity. A few will truly be Centennial quilts, since they are 100 or more years old.

In addition to county quilts, two outstanding statewide quilts funded in part by the Idaho Centennial Commission will be on display. A large quilt called "Forty-Four Reasons to Celebrate," comprised of quilt blocks from each of Idaho's 44 counties, and a three-panel "Idaho Human Rights Quilt", developed by the Boise Peace Quilt Project, depicting Idaho's ethnic diversity, will hang prominently at the Convention Center during the symposium. The Idaho Human Rights Quilt also will be officially presented to the State of Idaho during the symposium.

Caringly hand-stitched, the quilts symbolize the unifying spirit of Idaho's Centennial Celebration. The public may view the quilts at the Convention Center from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

"Wind of Change," is about the night, and it's nice to hear an actual Scorpions' song that is socially conscious. There's another extra here; Meine whistles during this song, and though that might sound mundane, it's really touching, and it reaffirms the song's message that there is a change on the horizon for all of us.

"Restless Nights" is one of those Scorpions' songs that's okay. It's nothing special, that's okay because it's hard to be great all of the time, even if you're the Scorpions. It's the type of song that you take note of, but just don't remember when it's over.

The next song makes up for the last in a big way. "Lust or Love," the next song, purely kicks ass. It's the Scorpions at the top of what they do. The guitars provided by Matthias Jabs and Rudolf Schenker are earth shattering, and Meine singing about what it is he has before him is pure rock and roll greatness.

The next song continues the trend. "Kicks After Six" is a great song, with the lyrics concerning what a classy girl by day becomes in the night. Great song, man.

The lull returns for the next two songs; however, with "Hit Between the Eyes" and "Money and Fame" missing the mark, though not by much. The Scorpions are best when they turn it up, and they just don't quite do that with these two songs.

They come up big with the title track, "Crazy World." This song typifies the new sound of the Scorpions; back up vocals helping, not hindering, and more great music.

Meine has to be loving life. He has one of the best back up bands around, Herman Rarebell on drums and Francis Buchholz playing the bass, are two players that should not be looked over by any means. These guys have what it takes to continue what they started in the 80s and take it into the 90s.

What can I say? There are seven great songs here, and four that are good enough to make the record. The seven songs are worth the money, and I suggest picking this one up. For a band that's known for their live shows, the Scorpions used the studio pretty well here.

Finally, last but certainly as important as any release, the Elton John box set. The four CD collection traces the career of this very dynamic and influential musician. I have yet to pick up the set because I spent all my cash on the other releases, but the tracks I heard sounded excellent and I hope Santa drops this one off for me. Hopefully, before December would be nice.

ty committee, will be holding an informal hearing in the education conference room. The committee is looking for input from students about the micro computer labs on campus.

As students, we have an opportunity to help shape the directions campus computing and the micro computer labs, in particular, will head toward in the future.

The administration is in the process of finding and hiring a new director of computing services. Computer Services Advisory Committee will be presenting the information gathered in the form of recommendations to the new director, the faculty council, University of Idaho President Elisabeth Zinser and Vice President for Academic Affairs and Research Thomas Bell.

As a student I feel that student computing needs are as important as those of other computing groups on campus. Perhaps even more so since the university is here to provide us with an education, and computing is a significant part of that education. The committee can not make recommendations about student computing needs without student input.

The committee is looking for comments and suggestions concerning student computing in general and the following in particular:

What kinds of hardware and software would you like to see in the labs?

Would you like to have the lab monitors trained in the use of the hardware and software?

Would you be willing to help pay for some of the cost of running and/or updating the labs?

If you would like to answer these questions or perhaps suggest other ways to improve the labs come and tell us, we would like to hear them.

Perhaps Mr. Charney has accomplished that which he seeks; to have a fair UJC hear the cases before it, now that Ms. Hart has reassessed her approach to the UJC. However, given the three or four more semesters that Ms. Hart has spent on the UJC, perhaps now would be an appropriate time for her to resign.

State Board policy questioned, lawsuits discussed

Legislative leaders along with a representative of the governor's office will meet with the State Board of Education, the State Superintendent of Public Instruction and their attorneys next week to discuss two lawsuits challenging the way public schools are funded.

Board President Gary Fay organized the meeting to explore possible responses to the litigation.

"The public schools litigation is one of the most critical issues facing the state," Fay said. "It's imperative that we bring state leaders together to find the best solution for Idaho."

The discussion will take place during an executive session on the second day of the Nov. 15-16 board meeting in the Idaho State University Student Union in Pocatello. Idaho's open meeting law allows the board to meet in executive session to discuss litigation.

Two groups of Idaho school districts have filed separate lawsuits challenging the constitutionality of the state's current method of funding the public schools.

first suit are the board, Superintendent of Public Instruction Jerry Evans, the Governor, and legislative leaders. The board, Evans, and the State of Idaho are named as defendants in the second suit.

The board will also hear final reading of a policy on the salaries of deans and other high level administrators at the state's four-year college and universities.

UI researcher continues study of Rapeseed oil as fuel

Day after day Charles Peterson watches chip trucks roar through the Palouse and wishes he could provide some of their fuel.

Peterson, an agriculture engineer at the University of Idaho, would like to replace some of the diesel the trucks are burning with the rapeseed oil fuel he has been studying for about 11 years.

A 1,000-hour test of rapeseed oil fuel in a small engine was recently completed at the UI Agricultural Engineering Lab, but Peterson says a diesel engine in a typical farm tractor might run for 5,000 hours before an overhaul.

To discover the actual potential of the alternative fuel, it would be necessary to put it to use on a major scale. Peterson believes the truck going up and down the Lewiston grade, sometimes loaded and sometimes empty, "would be the perfect test for vegetable oil fuel."

In the aftermath of the oil crisis of the 1970s, university researchers from across the country began experimenting with methods of producing alternative fuels. Fuel programs began in 1979, and the university is one of the few continuing to evaluate vegetable oil as a substitute or an extender for diesel fuel.

The process of transesterification has already significantly enhanced the potential of rapeseed oil as fuel. This process, which breaks off the glycerol molecule from the oil and produces straight-chain hydrocarbons, drastically reduces the viscosity of the oil. Fuel viscosity is a major concern because it can lead to problems like engine deposits and ring sticking. Reducing viscosity greatly reduces engine problems, Peterson said.

The major barrier to the widespread use of vegetable oil as a fuel is land. Experts say there just isn't enough of it available to grow the rapeseed needed to provide a major portion of our fuel.

According to Peterson, an average of 100 gallons of vegetable oil fuel can be produced from an acre of rapeseed. At that rate, if a truck line used 5 million gallons of diesel a year, it would use 50,000 acres of rapeseed. To produce just a tenth of the fuel requirements would require 5,000 acres a year — approximately the historical annual acreage of rapeseed in the entire Pacific Northwest, he said.

As the memories of gas lines and high fuel price costs faded during the 1980s, widespread interest in developing alternative fuels evaporated as well. But when fuel prices began rising sharply once more after the Aug. 2 Iraqi invasion in Kuwait, interest in alternative fuels was revived. Unfortunately, Peterson says, most people know about as much about fuel consumption in the U.S. as they do about the federal deficit — both are far larger issues than they can imagine. In 1989, for example, oil imported from Arab countries alone amounted to 89 million gallons a day, he said.

That means to replace noticeable amounts of imported oil "you're talking very, very big numbers."

Peterson says producing enough rapeseed fuel to replace the diesel used in the U.S. domestic transportation — estimated in 1988 at 69.3 million gallons a day — would demand the processing of 700,000 acres of rapeseed daily. To take the illustration to extremes, he estimates that if every single acre of the U.S. agricultural land were put into oil-seed production to create fuel, only 85 percent of the annual diesel used in the U.S. could be replaced.

Peterson clearly has no illusions about vegetable oil entirely replacing fuel. But, he says, while rapeseed oil is not a viable alternative to diesel on a broad basis, its use by such specific groups such as farmers, could make a significant dent in oil imports. He estimates that agriculture accounts for about 3-5 percent of U.S. diesel use.

Given its limitations, Peterson predicts that vegetable oil — like gasohol — will ultimately be used as a fuel extender, mixed 10 percent with diesel fuel. As an on-farm fuel he believes it has a lot of potential.

"Any rapeseed fuel that we use is some reduction in our petroleum usage," Peterson said. "Anything we do to reduce dependence on foreign oil is worthwhile."

us to improve our capability to do both plant and animal research in biotechnology," Lee said.

He said work is underway now to enhance plant resistance to diseases and insects. The new facility will offer improved laboratories for that work and will allow researchers to apply biotechnology techniques to animals. Such research will provide a better understanding of animal growth and immune systems.

"The southern Idaho facility will be dedicated to applied aquaculture research and will be located in the heart of Idaho's aquaculture industry, the Hagerman Valley area," Larry Brannen, dean of the College of Agriculture, said.

"We need modern laboratories. Up-to-date facilities are critical in competing for national grant funds for research. We don't have the facilities to be competitive for new grants," Lee said.

He noted that new facilities in the Life Sciences Building used by bacteriology and biochemistry faculty members point to what can be done when modern laboratories are available.

"We are at a critical time to be a research institution and serve the people of the state," Lee said.

Lee added he expects federal matching funds for construction to be made available next year.

Idaho now faces their toughest game of the year and their biggest rivalry when they play the Boise State Broncos on Saturday.

Idaho (7-3, 5-2), takes on a Bronco team that defeated previously unbeaten and second-ranked Nevada 30-14 Saturday in Boise.

"It's the biggest game of my life," Dahlquist said. "I'm happy that BSU beat Reno. It just adds that much more to the excitement."

His opponent, Charles D'Alessio, stated that they should be included, but only to a certain degree, one that he would have to research.

In response to the question of whether or not condom vending machines should be available in residence halls, senate candidate Marty Ross voiced his opinion that they should not, because of the poor quality of condoms available from these machines. The general consensus of the candidates was that they should be available to living groups that wanted them installed.

Parking was a heated topic, one that prompted new suggestions from a few of the candidates, as well as raising the questions of changing colored lots and maintaining free on-street parking. Senate candidate Amtul-Mannan Sheikh suggested a bus transit service, while senate candidate Amy Anderson advocated diagonal parking on Nez Perce Drive.

On the issue of including Gault Hall streaking photographs in the Gem, most candidates felt that there should be some sort of editorial criteria defined, one that would dictate what would be acceptable to print and what would not be acceptable. Vice presidential candidate John Noh stated that this set of guidelines should be interpreted situationally, according to the opinions of those involved.

The increasing of student fees and benefitting and improving our educational system was an issue that the candidates were split on. D'Alessio stated that he would agree to fee increases, but that he was not sure what that exact increase would be. His opponent for the presidential seat, Mike Gotch, stated that he would definitely not support increases that would maintain the status quo, but only those that would genuinely improve the campus. Senate candidate Jeff McClain suggested that the university should be required to publish their budget report so that the students would be able to see exactly where their money was going. If the students received benefits, then he would agree with the increases.

When asked what specific projects they would implement if given the chance, there was a wide and varied response by the candidates. Brian Oswald, senate candidate and GPSA President, stated that he would continue working for the GPSA. Amtul suggested programs that incorporated foreign students and provided for an inter-mixing of cultures. Senate candidates Seth Platts and Allison Lindholm advocated increased campus security in the form of escort services. Vice presidential candidate Elwood Rennison maintained that he would work within the ASUI to stabilize, including aiding the engineering and law colleges. McClain indicated that he would pursue allocating money to undergraduate scholarships, and also revitalizing the proposed roving voting booths.

When asked what quality made them stand out as the best candidate for the position, three candidates for the Senate - Brad Moeller, Amtul-Mannan Sheikh, Allison Lindholm - were all quick to establish the fact that as freshmen they would bring fresh ideas and a four to five year potential.

Gotch maintained that his experience and service in all aspects of the ASUI set him apart from his opponent, while D'Alessio stated that he was dedicated to the students as a whole.

Marty Ross believes his ability to "separate the BS from the good ideas," as well as his good business sense will be an asset to him.

Noh stated his unclouded, non-biased attitude would be beneficial, as well as his experience in both on and off campus living.

McClain said he hopes to be the voice for the greek system, a student population that he feels is greatly underrepresented.

Exchange program presented

By KIM COOPER
Staff Writer

A presentation of the International Student Exchange programs offered through the University of Idaho will be held Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at the SUB in the Galena Room. Events for the evening will include a slide show of foreign countries, foreign music, various speakers, displays and refreshments.

Interns for the International Programs Office will be speaking at the presentation, as well as students from the University of Idaho who have been on these exchange programs and students who are presently on exchanges here at the university.

Topics to be discussed by the interns include information about the different exchange programs available. The students will be speaking about their experiences as exchange students.

Programs offered vary in duration, students can study for one semester or a year. Other programs offered include an international exchange from the university to a foreign country for the cost of UI tuition and exchanges that allow the student to study in a foreign country and be taught in English while gradually learning the foreign language.

Exchange programs are available to college sophomores through seniors and some are available for graduate students.

The interns do presentations for campus living groups throughout the year. For more information, contact the International Programs Office located in Morrill Hall.
