Sororities send gifts to troops at Desert Shield

By PATRICK J. TRAPP
Staff Writer

While we sit in the comforts of our homes, nestled from the cold outside, tens of thousands of American soldiers are burning up in the Saudi Arabian deserts.

The soldiers sleep in tents. There are no waterbeds. The food they eat makes the airlines look like five star restaurants. There are no McDonalds or Taco Times. Their home is the sweltering desert. There are no air-conditioners. Sadly enough, their situation could cloud their fond memories of home. They may even feel unappreciated.

University and Idaho student Heather Schroeder wants to help change that.

Through UI's Panhellenic Council, Schroeder has organized Operation Idaho Neighbor, a help-fund to aid the soldiers. Operation Idaho Neighbor consists of Schroeder and residents of the seven sororities on campus. Each sorority has already sent crates and boxes full of items to the soldiers in an effort to help ease their situation and they plan to send more. The Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority sent a box full of everything from batteries to hard candy and crossword puzzles.

"We wanted to send things they would enjoy," Liz Willis, a Kappa junior, said. "Most people don't realize that these people are living in a desert. They have absolutely nothing to do to relax and enjoy themselves. We hope the packages can help."

Delta Delta Delta sorority members got together last night to make cookies for the soldiers. Their package included candy, cards, homemade games, a crate of "Bubble Yum" and a box full of blow bubbles.

"I think that the group that receives our package will definitely remember us," said Tri-Delt sophomore Cathy Hamilton.

"I mean could you imagine a bunch of soldiers standing in the desert blowing bubbles through bubble wands."

Operation Idaho Neighbor hits a little closer to home to Tri-Delt freshman Meghan Hogan. Four years ago Hogan, herself, was a resident of Saudi Arabia. She is writing letters of optimism to a soldier to help him see the brighter side of Saudi Arabia.

"I really liked Saudi Arabia," Hogan said. "Contrary to popular belief, it's not just a desert. There are beautiful beaches and clear, star-filled skies. I hope the soldiers get the chance to appreciate some of the better sides of their situation."

The Delta Gamma sorority sent their package over a month ago and has already received a response. The soldiers sent thank you letters and pictures of their barracks. Delta Gamma junior Shanny Ackerman said the pictures made the situation seem a lot more real.

"The pictures hit close to home," Ackerman said. "Everybody is working harder on our next package now that we've got a response. It may seem minute in the whole picture, but it makes us feel good to help."

Four arrested at annual snow fight

By LARRY OLSEN
Staff Writer

The University of Idaho's annual snowball fight started Tuesday morning after the first heavy snowfall of the school year.

A group of greek members began throwing snowballs at Graham and Upham halls around 12:30 a.m., but the Moscow Police, as well as many school officials, were there to stop the confrontation.

"Myself, Bruce Pitman, Chief of Police Dave Cameron and residence hall staff members were out there trying to dissipate the fight," Jim Bauer, resident hall coordinator, said. "Anyone out there was in risk of being arrested."

During the confrontation, four UI students were arrested.

Robert C. Morse and Chad M. Clifford were arrested for obstructing and delaying an officer, Scott C. Berard was arrested for unlawful assembly along with obstructing and delaying an officer and Daniel Charles Roe was arrested for battery on a police officer and unlawful assembly.

In addition to the four windows broken on Tuesday and three the next night, a police vehicle's outside rear view mirror was shattered at the scene of the snowball fight.

A sliding glass door and two windows at Pi Kappa Alpha were broken and a large window was broken by a two-by-four at Delta Tau Delta.

"This should not be taken lightly. People are getting hurt and property is being damaged," Bauer said. "The money to replace the windows is coming out of student funds. We need to find a less destructive way of doing it (the snowball fight)."

Even with the large amount of damage, Moscow Police is optimistically looking at this year's snowball fight.

"Overall things are looking better, the group was not as large as last year and the students dispersed quickly," Campus Police Officer John Roys said.

"I am pleased with the improved level of cooperation that the students have shown over the years," Bruce Pitman, dean of students said.

SAS office expands, remodels

By ANDY CHRISTENSEN
Contributing Writer

The move is on at the University of Idaho Student Advisory Services Office.

SAS staff and students who use the office will soon be treated to a fully remodeled and expanded facility. The office will more than double in size to accommodate its many advisory services for campus students.

Administrative Assistant Dee Rupe said that she'd begun to think the expansion would never take place.

"I started to think they'd have us moved by the fall of 1999 — when I retire," Rupe said.

Improvements feature expansion into the vacant space below (the former office of Student Financial Aid) which enables the office to claim four additional offices, a 14-person conference room, and a staff workroom for storage and other office necessities. Waiting areas will also be split between upstairs and down to accommodate twice the number of students. The expansion will spread students out who were previously "bodies on top of bodies," Rupe said.

Beginning in January, the UCC 241 level will house offices of the International Programs coordinator, the dean of students, both greek adviser and assistant greek

Groups protest Middle East involvement

By JIM VOLLBRECHT
Staff Writer

Two groups, the Northwest Peace Coalition and the Citizens Against War in the Middle East, will stage anti-Middle East war demonstrations on the Palouse Saturday and Monday.

The first will be a vigil in front of the public library in Pullman Saturday. According to Don Bishop, a member of the Citizens group, the vigil will be an informal gathering.

"There is no formal speaker," Bishop said, "just people handing out information sheets and literature. It will just be a group of people talking and discussing the issue."

Monday the Northwest Peace Coalition will hold the second open forum on the University of Idaho campus this year dealing with the Middle East. The first forum was held in September.

The demonstration will begin at noon in front of the library on the UI campus.

Michael Waldrup, spokesman for the Coalition, said he hopes the demonstration will concentrate on human rights this time around.

"The real issue is not the protests, but the massive deployment of our troops from the mother run and gun president," Waldrup said.

"Our government's policy is outright hypocrisy. It's time that people woke up to their ability to direct the strongest, best country in the world," Waldrup said. "We are for America, against aggression."

The forum should last 60-90 minutes, and Waldrup expects a larger attendance than at the last forum. The format of the demonstration is to be open. Anyone will be allowed to state their opinion on the topic.

Monday at 7:30 p.m. a meeting will be held at the Moscow Community Center to discuss the Middle East issue further.

"We're planning for it to be like an old New England town meeting," Bishop said. "It will give people the chance to air their feelings."

Bishop believes there hasn't been enough public discussion of the issue.

"This is our way of getting the discussion started," Bishop said.

The meeting is being held by the Citizens Against War in the Middle East.

Faculty council says yes to longer break

By MATT LAWSON
Sports Editor

The dilemma that University of Idaho students face before Thanksgiving Break every year may soon come to an end.

Students annually have to decide whether to stay in Moscow and go to class on Monday and Tuesday, or leave early on the previous Friday. This has led to limited attendance on the days prior to break, which resulted in action taken by the university.

A committee was formed to adjust the UI calendar to overcome the problem facing the university with the low student turnout on these days.

The Ad-hoc committee, headed by Dennis Dolny, researched the university's current calendar and proposed an extension of the Thanksgiving Break from five days to nine days.

To make up the two days lost in the transition, school would start on a Monday instead of a Wednesday as in previous years.

The faculty council approved the calendar on Nov. 13, and now is in the process of presenting it to the faculty. Faculty Council Chairperson Karen Van Houten feels optimistic about the faculty agreeing with the new calendar.

"I am very optimistic," Van Houten said. "But anything can happen. There are parts of it that they (the faculty) don't like partly because they want the pre-registration time."

Pre-registration at the university is the main reason that classes can start on a Monday.

One defense of the new calendar would be the connection with Washington State's calendar. With UI students taking classes at WSU it would make it easier for them to handle scheduling.

The proposal will pass the faculty if less than five members of the entire faculty disagree with the new calendar. The passing of the proposal by the faculty is just the beginning of the calendar being finalized.

If the proposal passes the faculty then it has to go through President Elisabeth Zinser before finally being accepted by the Board of Regents.

Students played a major role in the decision to take actions in changing the calendar, but they tend to still disagree on the issue.

"It seems like the most obvious choice in the world," Tim Cook said. "I can't believe it took them so long to try to do it."

Most students seem to agree with Cook, but still others have their opinion on the situation.

"I think it is a stupid idea," Kevin Perry said. "People don't go to class on those days anyway."

The spring semester will also start on a Monday as in the fall. And students will get Martin Luther King's Birthday off on Jan. 20, as well as President's Day on Feb. 17 in 1992.

KUOI-FM gets new equipment

By ANDREA VOGT
Staff Writer

New equipment, totaling $7,000, will be poured into KUOI's new production facility scheduled to be completed by April 1991.

The new facility is a studio where students and DJs can record or create their own music. Though KUOI has a studio and some of the equipment, the new "Studio A" far surpasses the technological boundaries KUOI has been currently working under.

Not only does the new studio benefit the radio station's staff, UI students will also have full use of this facility. Aspiring musicians, wishing to make demo tapes or recordings of their performances, will finally have an acoustically sound, properly equipped modern facility in which to work.

"I would encourage musicians (students) to use the studio to make (demo tapes) up here. If they can make something good enough to sell, then I think they deserve to sell it," Brent Anyon, KUOI station manager, said.

The studio will be lined with Sonex, a soundproof foam material designed especially for acoustic production, and will have a slanted viewing window which will face the KUOI lobby, allowing DJs and those in the studio to have visual communication. The studio will also boast two new compact disc players, each $800, a telephone interface to create a more clear, distinct sound from the phone lines and a remote control device for production convenience. KUOI will also be replacing over $5,000 worth of existing equipment.

"When the facility is finished, it will be capable of doing anything any other facility in this area can do," Scott McLaughlin, one of the engineers of the project, said. "It's going to be professional quality."

The studio will allow bands to play live in the facility, enabling KUOI to air them directly onto the airwaves. The better quality sound will enable professional quality radio sound, which is good enough to be produced for possible national syndication.

"The sound is going to greatly improve," KUOI DJ Timothy Cook said.

The new equipment has been an inspiration to McLaughlin.

"This facility is going to be good," McLaughlin said. "This is the first time in a long time that any of us have been excited about KUOI, they never had the money before, and never tried to get it."

Actually, KUOI did have the money, but as McLaughlin said, they never tried to get it. Unknown to the station manager, KUOI had unintentionally saved up over $20,000 in an equipment reserve fund which the ASUI funds yearly.

adviser, International Student adviser, Judicial Advisory and an administrative assistant. The UCC 228 (library side) level will incorporate offices for Disabled Students/Substance Abuse, Minority Students Adviser, Veterans Adviser and a library storage facility for general usage of SAS departments. The lower level will also be the new location of Receptionist Jean Bohnee. Campus mail for residences and organizations will still be located in the upper level (UCC 241), but brochures and catalogs and bulletins will now be located in the lower level.

The expansion will also aid students to better use available services, according to SAS Dean Bruce M. Pitman.

"If it looks too frantic and crowded, people sometimes look around and think 'I'll come back later,' or 'my problem isn't big enough," said Pitman.

The expansion essentially relocates services affecting nearly 900 students to the other side of the building. The office is, however, attached by an interior stairway, so entrance from either the upper or lower level will be possible.

Pitman said that he had no idea how many people currently come into the crowded office on a daily basis. Pitman and Rupe estimated that there are between 50 and 80 scheduled appointments in the office each day, but that many more drop in for information and to pick up mail for living groups and organizations.

"Better reception abilities will make people more comfortable with drop-in (business)," Pitman said.

The move has prompted new paint in the office, new carpet and many hours of re-organization. Rupe noted that office staff have spent at least 80 hour shredding outdated confidential documents.

The Alpha Gamma Delta, Pi Beta Phi, Alpha Phi, and Gamma Phi Beta Sororities also sent their own unique packages.

"Each sorority has participated," Panhellenic President Shelly Cozakos said. "There was such a good turn-out that the dorms are now being asked to participate."

An Air-Force reserve herself, Schroeder said that she wanted to do her part, since she wasn't called to serve. She received hundreds of names from different military outfits and, in turn, she turned them over to the sororities.

"The soldiers really need to know they are important, especially during the holiday season," Schroeder said. "I know of one unfortunate soldier there who was neglected by his parents. He virtually has no one."

UNICEF sells cards for kids

By KIM COOPER
Staff Writer

Members of the UNICEF organization are continuing to sell Christmas and winter-related greeting cards as a fund-raiser outside the Vandal Cafe today.

The United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund is an organization that is devoted exclusively to the welfare of children.

"The sales are a very popular way of making money for UNICEF," Betty Watts, a salesperson for UNICEF, said. "And the sales have been going really well."

UNICEF began in 1946 as an organization helping in emergency situations, and then expanded in the 1950s to meet the pressing needs of children.

Today, UNICEF co-operates with the government and serves 125 countries in child health care, water supply and sanitation, child nutrition, community and family based services for children, formal and non-formal education and emergency relief.

Three-fourths of UNICEF's income comes from government subsidies, while the other one-fourth comes from sales of greeting cards, ornaments, wall calendars, coffee mugs, puzzles, date books and stationery.

UNICEF has sold these items in Moscow every year for the past 20 years. They will be selling in the university pharmacy through December 9.

The designs for the cards are contributed by artists from different countries. The messages inside the cards are written in several different languages in order to celebrate many different holidays.

Snowballers go home disappointed, fight squelched

My former dormie heart cried Monday night as a group of around 50 greeks hurled snowballs at Gault and Upham and received virtually no resistance.

"Come out you dorm faggots," they shouted.

"DORM DORKS!"

The insults were as cold as the snow, but no one did any thing about it.

It was time for the annual snowball fight, but this year the only real fight was with the police as greeks pelted cop cars with snowballs and four men were arrested.

At first I couldn't understand why those who came out of the dorms to observe weren't fighting back at the insults hurled on them by the greeks. Then I realized the small crowd which had gathered outside of the men's dorm was made up almost exclusively of Residence Hall Advisers.

You see, the dormies couldn't come out to play this year.

There were some small groups who ran out hoping to get in on the annual barrage — only to find their RA's and Night Watch keeping tabs on the crowd.

So the only real fight went on between the police and the greeks, who turned their attention to the flashing lights separating them from the unresponding dormies.

It's hard to tell who won that fight. Although several men were arrested, it may have been worth the laughter and all out thrill the greeks must have experienced in pelting the police with snow.

In the end, the greeks went home, partly because of the police and administrators chasing after them, and partly because there was no one to play with this year.

Maybe the police and university administration have finally succeeded in ending the annual snowball fight.

And I suppose it's for the best. Afterall, only a couple of windows were broken this year.

But I can't help but feel cheated — as an observer who didn't get to see the snow really fly.

And cheated as a former dormie, because the greeks got in the last hoorah as the dormies were forced to watch from their windows.

Media determines public perception of economy

The economy is faltering these days, and the threat of war is looming perceptibly near. The question turns up quite often during such times: How much power does the press wield over the opinion of those it informs, and can pessimistic publication by the media actually touch off worsened conditions? And if so, should we care?

Chuck Brockway
Commentary

The United States as a nation and the spirit of its news media have thankfully risen above the scandalous Hearst era; pro-war rhetoric, having little affect on those who make the decisions, is not likely to push the nation into a war or even closer to one. The media's impact on economic vitality, however, may be a radically different story.

One of the most significant determining factors of the health of an economy is an intangible quantity called consumer optimism. Economists have a nasty habit of calling this factor "insignificant" and ignoring it when they present their analysis, but the outlook of the consumer is hardly to be taken lightly. After all, it is ultimately the consumers who determine the potency of the economy.

Decisions to purchase are rarely made on the basis of the amount of cash on hand at any given time: I won't purchase that new car unless I know my income will be relatively stable over the next four years.

Enter the American news media. Visions of the future don't appear to most consumers in a blinding flash of light. The sole source, and thus the determining factor of public opinion is the press. What happens when the American public sees headlines like "Two-year recession near," or "Economy edges close to collapse"? Obviously, consumer optimism plummets. Whether it drops enough to have a noticeable effect on the economy depends on the severity of the news and how many consumers think they might someday be affected by it. Not that consumers are naive or gullible, but they assume the news to be a reliable base from which to make reasonable decisions.

It's a tight spot for media folks. Freedom of the press means telling the whole story clearly and accurately, without regard to any possible repercussions. Some say that newspapers and television should attempt to offset economic downswings by deliberately dishing up sweetened versions of the real news. It's a nice thought, but grounded in faulty logic. As cautious guardians of their precious funds, consumers are more willing to make conservative adjustments to their budget upon hearing bad news, and less willing to spend more during times of optimism.

But that's beside the point. A free press has a simple, single minded charter: report significant events and the opinions of significant people accurately. Whether those events and opinions are pessimistic is of no concern.

In short, the news media does make a difference; the economy unfortunately does make downturns, small or large, based on the large-scale reporting of the news. However, to hold the press accountable for economic bad times, or to imply that the news itself should be yellowed, is ludicrous. Doing so would be one step closer to a media driven by propaganda.

SAEs need to boot troublemakers

Editor:

I worked as the cook at Sigma Alpha Epsilon for over five years — 1985 to 1990. Believe me, there are many kind and caring men in that fraternity.

They need to throw out the troublemakers. I left because of the few disrespectful and stupid ones.

I wish the SAEs the very best. There is a saying:

Senate candidate thanks supporters

Editor:

Thanksgiving has come and gone, but I would like to express my gratitude to all who helped me on my campaign to run for senate. Although I lost, I consider the experience very rewarding. I learned much about the process involved in trying to become an ASUI senator. Individuals who earned my heartfelt thanks are Richard Wright, my campaign manager. He was always on my side, advising me and helping to direct my ideas. Also Julie McCoy, Charles D'Alessio, Elwood Rennison, David Pena, Mike Gotch and John Noh, you all answered my anxious questions with calm and honest answers. Special thanks go out to David Ceske, my good friend who braved inclement weather with me when we taped up posters. Thanks to my friends and sincere supporters from Upham Hall, you provided both inspiration and needed levity. Oh, I mustn't forget Beth, Libby and the fun girls.

I was amazed at all the support I received from fellow students. Positive comments and good wishes quelled my anxiety and made me feel that running was indeed a good decision. Congratulations to the winners! This election witnessed a better than average turnout which is a good sign for the ASUI.

As far as my comment on condom machines being allowed in university living groups, I expressed a negative response. Why? University liability. If quality products are dispensed with a statement omitting the university of responsibility, due to, shall we say mishaps, I fully endorse the measure. In my 30 seconds to answer that question posed in the candidate's forum I wasn't able to fully explain my answer. On that note, I believe we should consider a few less questions in future forums and allow more time for the candidates' answers.

In my pursuit of further academic funding from the ASUI I shall not waver. If we want our degrees to receive the proper respect they deserve upon and after graduation we must make sure academics receives its fair

'Tis the season to reduce holiday trash

By STEPHANIE BAILEY
News Editor

During the hustle and bustle of the holiday season students' thoughts turn toward decking the halls and buying gifts for friends and relatives. Many people forget about the huge amount of "holiday waste" that is also a part of the American Christmas season.

As fun and festive as the holidays are, they (birthdays, Halloween, weddings and other special occasions included) leave an estimated $300 million worth of trash behind, according to environmental author Diane MacEachern.

A look through the average trash can or dumpster during the week after Christmas reveals discarded Christmas trees, wrapping paper, bows and gift boxes — all ready to make the trip to the local landfill.

Students don't have to turn into Scrooges in order to reduce packaging and other wastes during the holiday season.

The first dilemma is buying the annual Christmas tree. Palouse-Clearwater Environmental Institute director Tom Lamar suggests buying live trees and replanting them after the holiday season, or buying long-lasting artificial trees. He also said that it is preferable to buy trees from Christmas tree farms because they are grown specifically for that purpose. "They help clean the air while they are growing at least," he said.

ENVIRONMENTAL IMPACTS

After the season is over, try to use the tree for mulch under other trees and shrubs, or for firewood for yourself or others.

Other suggestions for reducing trash include recycling used ribbons, bows and wrapping paper and buying recycled wrapping paper, stationery and cards. The Moscow Food Co-op and the Moscow Recycling Center sell 100 percent recycled cards and wrapping paper.

If you are sending packages to relatives and friends use newspaper, old wrapping paper or other filler material rather than foam "peanuts" and avoid polystyrene cups for parties.

Take one big bag with handles for your holiday shopping adventures. This way you don't end up with twenty different plastic bags at the end of the day.

Smirnoff films cable special at UI Auditorium

By JILL CHRISTINE BECK
Editor

Yakov Smirnoff is coming to town and 200 UI students will get in free to see him.

Smirnoff will be in town filming his Showtime special, "Yakov Smirnoff, from Moscow...Idaho," this weekend in the UI Administration Building Auditorium.

Two shows Saturday night will be taped for broadcast on Showtime in February. Tonight Smirnoff will present a 9 p.m. show, a "dress rehearsal" of sorts, to check camera operations and angles and other technicalities. Although tonight's performance will not be filmed, it will be the same as Saturday's shows.

According to UI Communications Director Terry Mauer, Smir-noff has offered to give tickets to 200 UI students for tonight's show.

The tickets will be distributed to the first 200 students who present their student identification card at the Ticket Express window in the SUB today beginning at 1:30 p.m. Only one ticket will be given to each student.

Portions of the money made from Smirnoff's performances will go to the Wishing Star Foundation and to the UI Auditorium Chamber Music Series.

Smirnoff is perhaps most well-known in America for his commercials for Miller Lite and Best Western in which he looks at America from a Soviets point of view.

"In America you can always find a party," he quips in his beer commercial. "In Russia, the Party always finds you."

Smirnoff's Showtime special will feature clips from his recent trip to Moscow, Soviet Union and his stand up performance in Moscow, Idaho. Smirnoff visited the Soviet Union in April for the first time since he left 12 years ago. According to Mauer, parts of that trip will be incorporated into his Idaho show.

There will be three performances all of which will be held in the UI Administration Auditorium: tonight at 9 p.m., and Saturday at 7:30 and 10 p.m.

Additional tickets for tonight's performance and for Saturday's shows are available for $17.50 from G&B Select-A-Seat outlets in Value Inns by Cavanaugh's.

ARTS/LEISURE

Edited by Sally Gilpin
Arts/Leisure Desk - 208/885-8924

FRIDAY • ARGONAUT 7
NOVEMBER 30, 1990

Three exhibits opening today at University galleries

Three new art exhibitions are opening today at the University Gallery in Ridenbaugh Hall and at the Prichard Gallery.

The Prichard exhibit is entitled "100 Years of Idaho Art: 1850-1950" and is comprised of 80 works of art documenting the state's cultural and historic heritage.

The pieces include lithographs, drawings and paintings done by the earliest missionaries, settlers and surveyors in the region.

Also included are works by itinerant artists traveling through the new, uncharted territories documenting the scenes for audiences in the east, as well as works by those who stayed and became Idaho's artistic and cultural pioneers.

The Boise Art museum is presenting this traveling exhibition, accompanied by a 140-page color illustrated catalog which describes the interesting history of art in Idaho. Many works have never been published and will be seen for the first time in this exhibition and catalog.

Well-known artists in the exhibition include Nicolas Point, Mary Hallock Foote, George Catlin, Thomas Moran, Joseph P.

McMeekin, Abby Williams Hill, Arm Hincelin, John Mix Stanley, Charles Ostner, Olaf Moller, Katherine Postle and Archie Teater. Among institutions lending works are the Smithsonian Institution, Library of Congress, National Gallery of Art, Thomas Gilcrease Institute of American History and Art, Buffalo Bill Historical Center and Harvard University.

The opening reception will be tonight from 5 to 8 p.m. Gallery hours are Monday through Thursday from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m., Friday from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., Saturday from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m., and Sunday from 2 to 5 p.m.

The other two exhibits are opening at the University Gallery at Ridenbaugh Hall. Sally Machlis is presenting "Geographies/Paintings and Works on Paper." Selene Santucci is presenting "Recent Work/Paintings."

The two are respected regional artists, who have each had their work shown at many galleries around the state and region.

"My work is inspired by my travels, real and imaginary," Sally Machlis said in her artist's statement. "My paintings include images from real life mixed with myths, dreams and memories." Machlis is from Moscow. She received her masters of fine arts in 1986 from the University of Idaho. She has been an instructor for "Visual Art for Boise Public Schools," on Idaho Public Television and an Artist-in-Residence for the Idaho Commission on the Arts.

Selene Santucci used an excerpt from A Sense of Where You

Are by John McPhee, a profile of former basketball player Bill Bradley, for her artist's statement.

"A basketball player needs to look at everything, focusing on nothing until the last moment of commitment," Bradley said.

Santucci is from Pullman. She received her bachelor of fine arts from the Massachusetts College of Art. She has shown her work at galleries throughout the United States and has received several awards.

The opening reception will be held tonight from 4 to 7 p.m. at the University Gallery. The gallery is open Monday from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m., Tuesday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Wednesday and Saturday from noon to 5 p.m., Thursday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., and Friday from 1 to 5 p.m.

at the Beanery in Moscow. Ninety-six artists submitted applications to the Fellowship and Apprenticeship program. Recommendations for the awards came from professional out-of-state artists who serve in Idaho on peer review panels associated with their own artistic field. Selection was based on excellence of the art and professional endeavor.

"They don't rate you on your personal appearance and charm," said Coates. "They simply judge your work."

Other recipients were folksinger Rosalie Sorrels, Grimes Creek; novelist J.D. Dolan, Atlanta; craftsman Don King, Challis; painter Mary Ann Goodman, Boise; writer Christina Adam, Victor; painter Andrea Merrell, Boise; and photographer Michael Cordell, Boise.

Chairwoman of the Idaho Commission on the Arts, Sylvia Hunt said that the awards were meant to enhance the future of the artists.

"This financial assistance is given so that each artist can further develop their talents for the eventual benefit of all Idahoans," Hunt said.

Folk singer to give concert

By TRACY PEEL
Staff Writer

Longtime Prairie Home Companion singer/guitarist Greg Brown will perform Dec. 2 at the Moscow Community Center.

Brown gained attention on A Prairie Home Companion for his raspy voice, acoustic guitar and songs like "Canned Goods." In his recent albums he has continued to celebrate small-town American life, but he has moved beyond the folksy confines of the Prairie Home Companion style.

"I liked the show and working for it, but you never really got to do all the stuff you could do. You had to narrow everything down to fit that show," Brown said in a 1988 interview with the Green Bay News-Chronicle.

Since leaving the show, Brown has done everything from setting the poems of William Blake to music in his 1986 album Songs of Innocence and Experience to rocking on electric guitar on last year's One Big Town. His latest release Down In There has more of a country sound, said Dan Maher, host of KRFA's Inland Folk.

"It's not twangy country," Maher said, "but the sound is more down home."

Brown's music does not fit comfortably into any label. He highlighted the 1985 Newport Folk Festival, but his music is not merely folk. It can be described as growling folk/blues/rock/calypso/jazz.

His lyrics also defy categories. They are alternately caustic or comforting. "The Monkey" from One Big Town discusses the buildup of troops in Europe. "I Can't Get Used to It" from One More Goodnight Kiss is a sensual look at the joy of everyday life.

Brown is almost always humorous. "Lotsa Kindsa Money" from One Big Town pokes fun not only at materialistic American society, but also at Brown himself for getting caught up in it: "I got lotsa kindsa money in my billfold and I got it all for a song/ Who say, who say this wouldn't pay?" His humor extends beyond his lyrics into his actual rapport with a crowd, Maher said.

"With his instinct for big-hearted sensuality, small-town atmosphere, wicked social commentary and succinct storytelling, he's closer to Mark Twain than Bob Dylan" Daniel Gerwertz of Boston's North Shore Magazine said.

Brown's unique combination should appeal to a wide range of people. The Palouse Folklore society, which is sponsoring the show, is expecting a large turnout for the event, with people from Spokane coming down for the show. Brown will not be performing in Spokane, said John Watkinson, president of the society. He said he didn't think Brown had ever performed in this area before and could draw a large crowd.

Tickets for the show are $9 for members and $10 general admission. They can be purchased at the Combine Mall in Pullman or at Bookpeople in Moscow.

Local artists win awards

By PATRICK J. TRAPP

The Idaho Commission on the Arts has awarded $3,000 fellowship awards to a dozen Idaho artists, writers, photographers and musicians. Among the recipients are three Moscow residents.

Sculptor Ross Coates, painter Geneva Sloan, and photographer Floyd Peterson, all of Moscow, were recognized by the Commission for their artistic distinction and exceptional talent.

Peterson, a former music professor at the University of Idaho, has spent the majority of his retirement doing what he loves best — taking pictures. And now the Arts Commission is giving him money to keep doing it.

"Photography equipment and materials are expensive," Peterson said. "It's nice to receive money so that I can continue what I am doing. I plan to travel and spend more time in landscape photography."

Peterson received the fellowship for 20 slides he sent to the Commission. He is represented by five different galleries and has photographs currently displayed

Idaho continues title quest at Georgia Southern

By CHRISTOPHER GATEWOOD
Staff Writer

It's bad enough that the Vandals have played four of their last five games on the road, but now they have to travel to Statesboro, Ga. to play what some people call the "Notre Dame" of 1-AA football.

The Vandals will play the third-ranked and defending national champion Georgia Southern Eagles in Saturday's quarterfinal match-up. Georgia Southern dismantled The Citadel 31-0 to advance. At Georgia Southern's "Paulson Stadium" the Eagles have an incredible all-time record of 46-2.

"We like playing on the road," Vandal Head Coach John L. Smith said. "We are getting used to it. I think our name Vandals has symbolized what we've done this year. The Vandals went from place to place destroying people, and that's what we've done."

"The kids are excited because they've never been to Georgia,"

Smith added. "It will be like going to Disneyland."

Playing Georgia Southern will not be any amusement park, it will be the Vandals toughest game of the year because Georgia Southern has the finest football program in 1-AA. The Eagles have the highest winning percentage of all time in 1-AA, winning nearly 80 percent of their games. Last year during their championship run, the Eagles went 15-0 posting the best record ever in modern college football.

Consider this: During WWII the Eagles dropped their football program and it wasn't resurrected until 1982 under legendary coach Erik Russell. During their 1982 and 1983 seasons, the Eagles played football as a club sport and then went full-fledged in 1984. Since then, the Eagles have been unstoppable winning three national championships in 1985, 1986 and again last year.

"Obviously this is going to be our toughest game of the year," Smith said. "But I think if we can somehow win this one you can put a national championship in the bank for Idaho."

To get to the bank the Vandals are going to first have to solve the combination of the flexbone offense. The Vandals have faced it twice this year against Southwest Texas State and Southwest Missouri State and were riddled for nearly 700 yards rushing.

"I think you're going to see improvement in our defense because we have seen the flexbone twice now," Smith said. "We have to do a better job shedding blocks and getting to the perimeter."

"I think our execution needs to get better and I think we'll get it done," defensive end Jeff Robinson added. "If we take our proper assignments we'll be ok."

Getting it done will mean stopping one of the best running backs in the nation, fullback Joe Ross. Ross is Georgia Southern's all-time leading rusher with 3,876 yards. In 1989 Ross was a Payton Award finalist as he pounded out 1,354 yards rushing. In the 1990 regular season Ross rushed for 868 yards.

"Ross is so strong he can kill you inside and outside," Smith said. "He just pounds you and pounds you and the next thing you know he's gone."

"We watched him on film and Ross is a great athlete," Robinson said. "He's big, but on one play he hurdled someone."

Defensively the Eagles won't be as aggressive as Southwest Missouri State, who blitzed the Vandals constantly. The Eagles play a conservative zone style and wait for opponents to make mistakes. For the Vandals to be successful they are going to have to continue to get explosive performances from wide receiver Kasey Dunn and running back Devon Pearce.

"This will be the most explosive offense we've faced this year," Georgia Southern Head Coach Tim Stowers said. "They run and pass the ball so well I don't know how we're going to stop them. Kasey Dunn might be the finest receiver ever to play in "Paulson Stadium".

"We are going to have to continue to do the things we do well and that's ball control," Smith said. "We are going to pass first and then counter with the run. I think we'll run the ball well because nobody has stopped us all year and I don't see why this week should be any different."

The strength of the Eagle defense is on the defensive line where three players weigh over 260 pounds, but the best of the bunch is 6-foot-1-inch, 230-pound, Giff Smith who has been an All-American the last two years.

If the Vandals can win on Saturday they will advance to the semi-finals for the second time. The Vandals advanced to the semi-finals in 1988.

Idaho looks to slow down improved Cougars

By MATT LAWSON
Sports Editor

After a difficult road trip last weekend in Mississippi, the Idaho Vandals are looking for a victory Saturday night against the Washington State Cougars.

Unfortunately for the Vandals, this victory won't come easily against the team that some people call the most improved program in the nation.

After losing their final 17 games of the season last year, Cougar coach Kelvin Sampson went out and recruited an impressive class.

Four of five current Cougar starters did not play on the team last season. Junior college transfers Neil Derrick and Terrence Lewis join the sole returning starter Bennie Seltzer in the backcourt.

WSU presents a new offense to compliment their new faces.

Derrick, Lewis and Seltzer all scored in double figures in the Cougars' first three exhibition games. They combined for 48 points in 68 minutes of play in WSU's win over BYU-Hawaii

Wednesday night.

Vandal Head Coach Larry Eustachy realizes the talent he faces in the backcourt with the Cougars.

"I think they have three perimeter players that can play on any team in the country," Eustachy said. "We have to be aware of them and defend them, or we are going to have a tough night."

The Cougar frontline is led by junior college transfer Ken Critton. The West Texas Junior College product had 11 points and 11 rebounds in WSU's 112-81 victory over BYU-Hawaii.

WSU can definitely score. They have tallied over 100

Lady Vandals travel to Westerwinds Classic

By TOM BITHELL
Staff Writer

The Lady Vandals will put their 2-0 record to the road test tonight in Macomb, Ill., when they face Butler University at the Westerwinds Classic.

The Westerwinds is a four-team tournament hosted by Western Illinois University. The tournament field consists of Western Illinois University, Butler University in Indianapolis, the University of Idaho and Chicago State University.

The classic will be the women's first road games of the year. They will be hoping to improve on their road play from last season, where the team had a 6-5 record.

"Usually all teams play a little better at home than they do on the road," Idaho Coach Laurie Turner said. "We need to be a better road team if we want to achieve our goals as far as our conference performance."

Although the University of Idaho has never played Butler, nor either of the other tournament teams before, Turner has a good idea of what to expect.

"Butler is very good," Turner said of their 3-0 squad. "They're not a running team so to speak. They're a little more controlled than we are."

The Bulldogs run a half-court offense that is averaging 89 points a game this year, while the University of Idaho is averaging 73.5.

The Lady Vandals will go into tonight's game with three starters averaging in double figures.

Forward Krista Smith leads the team in scoring, with 19.5 ppg., and rebounding, with 8.5 rpg. Center Kelley Moeller is second with 13.5 ppg. and 7.0 rpg. and forward Hettie DeJong is third with 12.5 ppg. and 7.0

rpg. Rounding out the university's starting five will be guards Sherry Peterson and Julie Balch.

Peterson plays the point averaging 9.0 ppg. and 6.5 rpg., and has only five turnovers so far this year. Balch, the off-guard, is averaging 7.0 ppg. and 1.5 rpg.

"We played well last weekend, but everyone has things they need to work on," Turner said.

Offensively the women need to work on their shooting percentage and shot selection, Turner said. She will also be looking for more good play off the bench from Dawn Sievers, Kortnie Edwards and Karen Poncina.

"Offensively the kids off the bench did a good job and they need to continue that performance," Turner said. "Defensively we are gonna need to be able to put pressure on these people. We need to concentrate on being able to put a little more full-court pressure on out there. We're also working on our zone defense as well."

Idaho returns home to play the LCSC Warriors on Dec. 14.

Pro athletes becoming a problem

I thought I had seen it all in the realm of professional sports. The constant whining and bickering between players and teams. The drugs, alcohol and off-field melees.

But when James Worthy was arrested a couple of weeks ago for soliciting two prostitutes in a hotel room, I was absolutely shocked. I mean James Worthy. Are you kidding me? Of all the people I thought this could ever happen to, James Worthy was about the last one I ever expected.

This is just another in a recent rash of incidents that have plagued professional sports. Here are a few more for you to mull over. Last week at the Seattle Supersonics basketball practice Sonic forward's Xavier McDaniel and Dale Ellis got into a fight during practice. An hour later, after agreeing to meet outside, they brawled in the parking lot. A witness nearby said that there was bloodshed and that it wasn't McDaniel's. These are professional athletes we're talking about. Men that are supposed to be mature adults, the best at what they do. It's little incidents like these that help build team morale.

Three weeks ago, in a Boston area bar, New England Patriot's wide receivers Irving Fryar, who has already enough off-field problems with various domestic disputes, and Hart Lee got into a brawl that led to both of their arrests.

Dexter Manley, who has been thrown out of the NFL twice for drug abuse, has been let back into the league to play for the Phoenix Cardinals. As usual the NFL is taking a tough stand on drugs.

Chris Gatewood
Comment

What kind of message are athletes and the leagues giving to the fans; namely kids. And I'm not talking about your spoiled rotten, suburban, silver spoon-in-the-mouth kids. I'm talking about kids that come from not-so-nice neighborhoods. Kids that have to struggle to get a break. In the McDaniel-Ellis incident, the police came and broke the fight up, but neither player was arrested. Once again, society is instilling the value system that athletes are special and above the law. Kids have trouble distinguishing the fact that athletes are people with flesh and blood just like they are.

For many kids, athletes are the only role models they have. For some kids, sports is the only way to get a college education. Kids see sports as their only hope. I think quarterback

Warren Moon of the Houston Oilers said it best when he told ESPN that he thinks athletes have a responsibility to portray a positive example.

Athletes often say that because they are human beings that they have a right to make mistakes. I agree, but when you are in the public eye representing a professional team, the city and making a six figure salary you owe it to that team and the fans that watch them to set an example.

And what must adults think of these so-called men. Think of the blue collar worker who struggles to make ends meet. He comes home from work after busting his hump all day only to turn on the TV and watch athletes whine because they didn't get that $50,000 raise. Do you realize that school teachers in this country make only about five percent of the money that professional athletes make. At least athletes can show a little respect for the people that help support them. I think a lot of athletes forget the backgrounds they came from.

It's time for society and the leagues to say enough is enough and take a stand on drugs and poor behavior. The athletes also need to learn to treat themselves and their profession with more pride before the very fans that rally around them betray them.

points in all four of their games. Eustachy feels the points scored and pace of the game will determine the outcome in Idaho's first game of the year in the ASUI Kibbie Dome.

"I think the score has to be in the 70s for us to win the game," Eustachy said.

Idaho had two tough losses to Alcorn State (79-77), and Jackson State (84-77), but Eustachy feels that the team has responded well to the adversity of a tough start.

"I think they are a little embarrassed (about the losses)," Eustachy said. "It gives us a chance to improve. We know where we were at and we need to get better."

Seniors Ricardo Boyd, Sammie Freeman and Clifford Martin have led Idaho early in the season.

Martin is averaging 18 points and 6.3 rebounds a game, while Boyd is averaging 16.5 points and six rebounds.

Freeman has been strong inside for Idaho with 12.7 points and nine rebounds per contest.

Junior college transfer Calvin Ward has been a positive addition to the Vandal team with 14.3 points and four rebounds a game. Ward has shot an impressive 60 percent (9-15), from the three-point range.

The Vandals had difficulty on the road but Eustachy does not plan on making any changes for the WSU game.

"We're not changing anything," Eustachy said. "We are going to attack their defense the way we have (in the past). We just have to get better at it."

Eustachy has a lot of respect for the Cougars, although WSU hasn't beat Idaho since the 87-88 season.

"If it isn't LaSalle or Baylor, I think this is the best team we'll play this season," Eustachy said, referring to Idaho's schedule.
