UI tree thieves skunked

By STEPHANIE BAILEY
News Editor

Campus Christmas tree thieves will be greeted with a smelly surprise if they try to cut down any more University of Idaho trees this year.

Every year the university's evergreen trees are targets for Christmas tree thieves and this year is no exception. Already one campus evergreen, valued at $300, has been cut down. But a mixture of skunk scent and coyote urine sprayed on UI trees should prevent any further losses. The scent will disappear after the holiday season.

"Trees are valuable resources for campus and the university."

— David Rock
UI Forestry Manager

The mixture can't be detected outside in cold weather temperatures but once the tree is inside it will "really reek" physical plant forestry manager David Rock said.

This is the first year the university has tried the preventative method. Spraying trees at other campuses and parks has been effective in deterring people from stealing a "free" tree.

People caught stealing Christmas decorations, lights or trees valued at under $150, will be charged with a misdemeanor and face a sentence of six days in the county jail as well as fines ranging from $100 to $200 or more depending in the judge's decision, according to Campus Liaison Officer Corporal John Roys. Any person caught stealing anything valued over $150 will be charged with felony theft. Felony sentences include time in the state penitentiary plus fines.

An eight foot evergreen landscape tree costs approximately $500 to purchase, plant and maintain for several years.

"Nothing is hurt if they (trees) are left alone," Rock said. "Trees are valuable resources for campus and the university and the university and campus communities in general should keep their eyes out for this kind of thing and report anything (that looks suspicious) to the police."

Homeowners can make their own urine/skunk scent solution to protect their own trees. Mix one part fox or coyote urine into one part water and add three or four ounces of skunk scent (sometimes sold under the trade name K9 Call, available at hunting supply stores).

UI sanctions against the SAEs questioned

By M.L. GARLAND
Senior Staff Writer

Despite university officials' denial of impropriety, ASUI Attorney General Dennis Charney has alleged that sanctions imposed by the University of Idaho and greek governing boards on Sigma Alpha Epsilon's local chapter are invalid.

"They (the university and Interfraternity Council) cannot sanction a violation of the student code without our permission (ASUI attorney general, the judicial adviser in Student Advisory Services and the complainant)," Charney said. "They proceeded to impose sanctions that are null and void according to the code (Code 3340, Faculty-Staff Handbook)."

Last month after investigating alleged hazing of the 19-member pledge class, IFC, followed by the Panhellenic Council and SAE Nationals imposed sanctions on the chapter and the university withdrew its recognition.

Harrasment and hazing are violations of the UI Student Code of Conduct, Article III. Sunday the Tribunal, the IFC judicial board which usually handles rush violations, issued sanctions on the chapter, which they will disclose tonight at the council meeting.

"I do feel we handled the situation appropriately and I do feel the university has a right and responsibility to confront inappropriate behavior," Bruce Pitman, dean of student services said. "Interfraternity Council clearly has the power to sanction or create sanctions and penalties for its members and the powers are defined in the IFC Constitution. If a group wants to be a part of IFC and the university Greek system, those groups must agree to work in that system."

SAE President Robert Alexander said the chapter's national organization likes the way the university is handling the situation. The nationals were able to approve the sanctions before university enforced them.

Hal Godwin, vice president of student affairs, defended the university's handling of the

A judicial board of the University of Idaho fraternity system's Interfraternity Council will release specific sanction guidelines for the UI Sigma Alpha Epsilon chapter tonight.

"We felt we owe the SAEs fast action to let them know how Tribunal feels and what actions we are going to hand down so they can accomplish these tasks," Mike Sterling, Tribunal chairman, said. "I am really confident that they will be back. I think they are sincere in their goals."

TOMORROW'S NEWS

RECYCLING INFORMATION BOOTH AT SUB.

The UI Recycle Committee will sponsor an informational booth about recycling and environmental issues all day Dec. 5 at the SUB. Students should stop by and pick up information or ask questions.

FREE MEALS FOR KIDS. The Early Childhood Learning Center announced its sponsorship of the U.S.D.A. Child Care Food Program. Meals will be made available to enrolled children at no separate charge. Parent's income determines the amount of money U.S.D.A. will reimburse them to provide meals to enrolled children. Income eligibility guidelines are available by contacting the Center. Children from households whose monthly income is at or below these levels are eligible to be counted for free or reduced price meal reimbursements.

HUMAN RIGHTS DAY CELEBRATED. The University of Idaho and Moscow chapters of Amnesty International will sponsor a showing of a made for T.V. movie, which appeared on TNT last month. The movie is titled "Forgotten Prisoners: The Amnesty Files." The movie will be shown at 7 p.m. on Dec. 10 in the Borah Theater at the SUB. The movie shows Amnesty International in a tense battle for human rights on behalf of 17 prisoners of conscience, detained in a country known for its brutal and systematic torture of political prisoners. Admission is free and the public is welcome.

MOUNT EVEREST CLIMBER TO SPEAK. "The Unclimbed Ridge," an adventure by a American-British team that attempted to climb the northeast ridge of Mount Everest, will be shared by Markus Hutnak Dec. 6 at 7:30 p.m. at the Community Congregational Church in Pullman.

The presentation will be preceded by a potluck dinner at 6 p.m. The dinner and meeting, sponsored by the Palouse Audubon Society, is open to the public. Please bring a covered dish and place setting if you wish to attend the dinner.

TODAY

REPUBLICANS DISCUSS WAR. The UI Young Republicans will be discussing the Gulf Crisis, "Countdown to War," at their next weekly meeting, tomorrow at 3:30 p.m. in the SUB EE DA HO room.

RADIO CONTROL CLUB MEETS. The UI Radio Control Club and the Palouse Ridge Runners will meet tonight in the conference room on the second floor of the Wallace Complex at 7:30 p.m. All R/C fliers and all those who are interested are urged to attend.

DR. CATTERALL GIVES LECTURE. Dr. William Catterall, chairman of the department of pharmacology at the University of Washington School of Medicine, will give a lecture entitled "Molecular Properties of Voltage - Gated Ion Channels" today at 12:30 p.m. in Life Science South room 163.

Future UI fish lab under fire

By ANDREA VOGT
Staff Writer

Suppose all the water on the earth could fit in a gallon jug. If you poured out the undrinkable portion — too salty, polluted or hard to get — only one drop would remain. Would it be safe to drink?

This question, which was raised by the Center for Science in the Public Interest, also concerns Moscow water activist Tom Townsend.

Townsend has spent almost two years challenging the ethics of the University of Idaho's proposed aquaculture laboratory. He is concerned about the potential health and environmental problems; which could surface if not all of the chemicals from the fish lab are eliminated before being used to irrigate campus lawns or being discharged into Paradise Creek. The lab plans use the modern day penicillin called Erythromycin to eliminate the seven chemical by-products and bacteria from the fish research.

But Townsend argues that Erythromycin and penicillins today don't kill all bacteria; some strains of bacteria are resistant to the drug.

"If I were a student on campus, I don't know if I would want to be playing rugby or softball on a field that has bacteria which are resistant to modern day drugs,"

Townsend said.

Townsend has asked the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare to halt construction of the facility immediately. Construction of the $922,000 fish research facility began two weeks ago. He also contacted the Idaho Board of Education, asking them to revise the approval of the cost estimates for the fish research project.

Jerry Wallace, financial vice president at the university said the design plans for the water treatment facility were submitted three weeks ago. He said the school assumes the plans are satisfactory until they are told otherwise by the Health and Welfare department. The approval by the Health and Welfare Water Quality Bureau in Boise is still pending.

Townsend said the Palouse water supplies are already over-used. The fish lab will draw water from the upper aquifer, which is about 300 feet down. According to Townsend, the water supply from this aquifer had been exhausted once already in the past, and it recharged itself. The fish lab, he said, would draw it down even more.

State officials are studying the latest complaint and have said the Health and Welfare Department must give formal approval before the waste water treatment part of the project can be built.

Townsend says he's not trying to cause trouble for the university, but rather just raising some important questions.

"I'd like to have this thing checked out," Townsend said, "prior to building time. If someone who knows more than I do about it would come in and say 'yeah, it's okay, it's safe' then I would probably shut up."

But shut up is what Townsend said the administration has tried to do to those with questions about the aqua research facility.

"University of Idaho has a strong ASUI but I don't think they (the administration) listen to you at all," Townsend said. "They give you a lip service but they don't really give a damn. President Zinser wants this to be the number one research school in Idaho and to hell with whatever anyone else thinks. The university tends to go on its own path, regardless. It's certainly not a democratic society up there."

The administration has not heard from the ASUI on the construction of the aquaculture laboratory.

Townsend said he has been relatively alone in his quest for answers from the university.

"It is difficult in a town like Moscow to stand up against the university because most of the citizens work for the university," Townsend said. "But I don't, so I don't care if they don't like me."

UI prof made L&S associate dean

By JIM VOLLBRECHT
Staff Writer

Dene Thomas, an associate professor of English at the University of Idaho, has been selected to fill the position of associate dean for academics and outreach in the College of Letters and Science.

Thomas, who joined the faculty in 1984, currently is fulfilling her duties on a part time basis.

"I'll be glad when January comes so I can be in one place full time," Thomas said. "I'm very excited about the appointment. I'm getting a better sense of what the position entails. It will take until January to get the full sense, but I'm finding it exciting and challenging."

In noting Thomas' selection, Kurt Olsson, dean of the college said, "I am very pleased about this appointment. Professor Thomas comes to the position with an outstanding record as a teacher, adviser and program administrator."

Thomas will coordinate undergraduate and graduate academic programs in the college. She will also direct programs in general studies and interdisciplinary studies, as well as help develop strategies for recruiting students and training advisers in the college.

Thomas earned a bachelor's degree in literature from South-west State University in Marshall, Minn., and a doctorate in English from the University of Minnesota. She won the UM Distinguished Leadership and the Excellence in Teaching Students of Agriculture Awards in 1984 and the Excellence in Teaching Students of Agricultural Award from the University of Idaho in 1986.

ter said. "I didn't plan to talk today, but it became really one-sided. I don't oppose them (the protesters); I just think you have to live by the laws of the land you live in."

One of the protesters, Heather Pennington, said she felt the issue was about people being lied to. The soldiers "have been raised in small towns and brought up to believe in truth, justice and the American way. They still think this is for our good, but it's just promoting the interest of big business. Everything we read comes from the polluted, politically miserable businesses," Pennington said.

Another protester, Jay Stone, said he was in support of U.S. troops who are presently in the Middle East but the policy makers are in error.

One of the few passers-by who stopped to listen to the protest was David Symms.

"I think this is all right, I have no quarrels with this. I think the biggest problem in American society is that people don't know what's going on and this is a way to get information," Symms said.

situation. "Regarding university recognition of greek organizations, the bottom line is that the university has an obligation and responsibility to see that greek organizations live up to a standard of conduct," Godwin said. "Interfraternity Council, the greek organizations themselves, determine what that conduct is."

Charney based his allegations on his interpretation of the Faculty-Staff Handbook code 3340, which says a living group disciplinary body must communicate with the ASUI attorney general and the judicial adviser in Student Advisory Services before taking jurisdiction over a group that has violated the Student Code of Conduct.

It continues saying "if the ASUI attorney general, the judicial adviser and complaining party fail to agree unanimously on the proper hearing body, the matter is referred to UJC, which decides the case on the merits... If a living group disciplinary body proceeds without jurisdiction, its proceedings, findings and sentence are void and are no bar to a new trial."

Pitman said University Judicial Council's purpose, as the code is currently interpreted, is to hear Student Code violations dealing with individual students rather than entire living groups.

A panel, consisting of Pitman, Greek Adviser Linda Wilson, IFC and Panhellenic Council presidents and alumni representatives met Nov. 14 to discuss the allegations with officers of the local SAE chapter. The SAEs sought and followed Charney's advice, choosing not to comment at the meeting. IFC sanctions were then imposed on the following evening based on the SAEs silence.

"We went to Dennis not to question the fact we were hazing, but to find out the correct or fair way to have a sanctions hearing," Alexander said.

According to IFC President Fred LeClair, Charney's actions and statements harmed the SAE house and were not thoroughly researched.

"He jumped at it to get a name for himself at the expense of the SAEs, in my opinion," LeClair said. "He doesn't understand how it works."

week and during the weekend with SAE members and Sunday they discussed the implementation of the sanctions with the new spring chapter officers. A review board has also been initiated to monitor and assist the SAEs in completing their sanctions in order to petition for recognition.

Tribunal sanctions on the SAEs, in addition to already imposed university ones, include participation and adoption of a highway program, an article for Idaho the University discussing positive aspects of the greek system and provision of a detailed statement of how they are improving the situation to the Tribunal. They must also attend all IFC sponsored and related meetings as well as attend two house meetings at each campus fraternity and sorority to discuss the changes they are implementing.

"We have to complete all these steps to participate in formal rush next fall," Chris Zenner, newly elected spring semester SAE president.

According to Sterling, there are two more possible sanctions still under consideration; and SAEs will be on Tribunal probation until May 1992. IFC President Fred LeClair confirmed that the final Tribunal sanctions will be released at tonight's council meeting.

The SAEs will meet once a month with the Tribunal review board to discuss current programs, plans and improvements they have accomplished.

"With this review board we will monitor all their boards... and if there is any incident or violation, they will be asked to leave," Sterling said. "That is stated in the proposal."

Sterling said if the SAEs are implementing constructive programs and moving in a positive direction the Tribunal will allow them to participate in formal 1991 fall rush.

"Not to let them go through rush would kill them and we don't want to do that," he said.

Zenner said he was pleased with the Tribunal's prompt action and was encouraged by the effort they placed on discussing the options with the SAEs.

Take time out to really smell the Christmas trees

'T was the night before Christmas and all through the house, not a creature could endure, not even a mouse.

As I sat in my bedroom, watching TV, I smelled the aroma of coyote pee.

I grabbed for my kerchief to cover my mouth. Low and behold, I had to ralph.

I ran to the living room to see what was gross. I went by the tree - it seemed to smell most.

And what to my wondering nose did arrive, the smell of such a substance just can't be described.

The tree had been stolen from campus with care, despite actions by officials to keep the evergreen there.

Who would have thought the tree had been sprayed with skunk scent and urine, it smelled worse than Raid.

My roommate ran out, right behind me. All we wanted was to get rid of the tree.

We pushed and we pulled with all of our might, the scent was so bad it affected our sight.

And finally we shoved the tree out the door, vowing to steal Christmas trees no more.

We ran out and spent 12 bucks for a tree, and took it home and decorated it with glee.

We learned our lesson, and we learned it well. If we steal another tree we'd rather go to Hell.

For such is the fate of stealing a tree, to have it all covered with skunk junk and pee.

The moral of the story: be courteous, be kind, leave all the campus evergreens behind.

A message to those who haven't seen the light, "A Merry Christmas to you and buy a tree that smells right."

Library inconvenient, not adequate for student use

Last Sunday was one of the most frustrating nights of the entire semester. You see, I had to write two papers for Monday morning, I was running behind and everything was going wrong.

Mark Milam
Commentary

First there was the weather I had to fight. The ice and snow put up a good challenge; but I was able to slide and swerve my way to the library. Surprisingly, I was able to park close to the library, it was a refreshing first.

I soon realized why there were not too many people at the library. It was impossible to get anything done; people were being loud, I could not find the book I was looking for and then there was the copying machine dilemma. The copy machine problem was simple — too many people on too few machines.

This made me ask "Why?" First, there should be additional machines and the library should consider it a priority to keep the machines in working condition. Also, it hardly helps if the machine is working, yet out of paper. This was the case Sunday night, and it seemed to take a great effort by the library staff to get it up and going.

Someone might ask who am I to criticize the library and the staff that runs it; yet I feel, since I am a full-time student who helps fund the library, I should have the right to express my displeasure. Right now I view the library as an excellent center of information; but I do not want to study there. It is often crowded, noisy and I find it hard to concentrate. I would much rather go to the public library.

It is time to seriously consider our options concerning the library. We need to go forward with either expansion or a revitalization of the existing facilities. In my view we have a good library; what we need is something that will rise to the level this University prefers to reach for. Anyone who has used the library at Boise State University can see the difference in the two places.

This university has a large volume of important and unique information and records. Unfortunately, getting to this information is neither convenient nor comfortable. When I want to find an article or a fact I do not want to spend five hours looking for it.

By the way, one bit of advice to people who use copiers on campus, if you are going to be using the machine for an hour or so, it would be nice if you would let those people who only want to copy one thing go ahead of you. I waited so long on Sunday that I left all my patience in the recycle box, I mean I left every single drop.

Protestors inconsiderate

Editor:

This is a note to the Operation Desert Shield protestors who interrupted my class time to make their point.

I pay $600 a semester to learn what I've come here to learn. When your protest is too loud for me to learn, your protest forces me to forfeit my freedom to be educated, which I've paid dearly (financially and personally) to receive. Your interruption of my class isn't aiding your efforts, but rather angering myself, other students and professors, those who can and will affect your cause. It's not considerate and you won't receive support from people who feel you're inconsiderate.

Finally, I'd like to offer food for thought. Whether you agree with the action being taken in Saudi Arabia or not, it's important to remember that it's one thing to reject a national policy and another thing to reject a person! Let's not turn this into another Vietnam Reaction.

War with Iraq would provide perfect peace

Editor:

President Bush last week stretched out his hand in a gesture of peace just one day after the U.N. Security Council cleared the way for war. By sending Secretary of State James Baker to meet with Saddam Hussein, President Bush has gone the extra mile and taken the extra step to avoid conflict.

As much as all Americans would like to avoid bloodshed, we must, however, be prepared for the possibility of confrontation. The United States and the world could continue its policy of defending Saudi Arabia and waiting for sanctions to work; but even if the blockade were to force Hussein out of Kuwait, how does that ensure he will not acquire nuclear weapons? The lives at risk in stopping Hussein today would be dwarfed by the lives at risk if we allow him to develop nuclear terror.

Richard Perle was quoted in the Nov. 13 issue of the U.S. News and World Report as saying, "With Saddam Hussein in possession of chemical weapons and hard at work on nuclear ones, only the dismantlement or destruction of his capacity to wage wars of aggression will suffice." World War II taught us that giving in to aggression only ensures further aggression. It seems, however, that many people would rather dwell on the catastrophe that was Vietnam rather than the lessons of World War II.

A war with Iraq would not become another Vietnam for three reasons. First, there is no question about who initiated the crisis. Contrast this with the endless debate about which side violated the Geneva agreements of 1954, and about who terrorized whom. To quote Richard Perle, "There's none of that in the Gulf."

Second, Hussein's aggression has been so brutal that he has no credible support in the world community. This has been reflected in the 13 United Nations' resolutions condemning his actions. In Vietnam it was questionable whether we even had the support of the people we were 'helping' much less the rest of the world.

Bush's corrupt war not necessary

Editor:

In the wake of the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, the United Nations has passed an authorization to use force if the Iraqi Armed Forces refuse to withdraw from Kuwait.

President George Bush said the world's supply of oil is in danger and Saddam Hussein could have nuclear capabilities in the next few years. This is the result of the United States turning its back on Iraqi military build-up, Bush's involvement with the Iran-Contra Scandal and the fact that our petroleum reserves are being limited because of our policies concerning buying oil from the Middle East.

In the past decade, Iraq and Iran have been involved in a long and hard war and both sides have suffered considerable economic losses. It was the official policy of the United States to not support Iran for its terrorist practices; so instead we officially sent arms shipments to Iraq as well as feeding their armies.

With this build-up of arms, Iraq was easily able to invade Kuwait and pose a threat to the oil reserves in Saudi Arabia. This was a serious mistake the Reagan and Bush administrations made concerning foreign policy.

Bush was involved in the Iran-Iraq war and has been spotlighted for doing secret deals with Iran. Based on recent disclosures, Nation reported on Sept. 19, 1988 and Oct. 3, 1988 that Bush may have been involved in a covert hostage-for-arms deal with Iranian leader Ayatollah Khomeini.

In other words, Bush made a deal with Iran stipulating that the hostages would not be released for a long time to make sure Reagan would beat Jimmy Carter in the Presidential campaign in 1980. This sure could explain why the hostages were released on the day Reagan was inaugurated as President in 1981.

After that, according to The New York Times on Aug. 13, 1990, the United States has been courting Saddam Hussein, whose arms build-up could have been courtesy of George Bush, as a counterweight to Iran's revolutionary fervor.

Meanwhile, our supply of our own petroleum reserves has been mishandled under the policies of the Reagan and Bush administrations. According to The New York Times on Feb. 2, 1989, oil and gas companies have continued to reduce their funding of oil exploration in the United States. At the same time, existing wells are being exhausted, cutting domestic production.

In other words, "cheap" crude oil has for the most part been shipped from the Middle East and refineries in America have been used to convert the crude oil into usable gasoline, giving large

Perhaps the most striking difference, however, is the ability of Iraq to replace what is destroyed. Every tank that is disabled, every missile launcher destroyed and every gun captured is a tank, missile or gun that cannot be replaced. There would be no continuing resupply of the Iraqi force such as the Viet Cong had. Hussein cannot reproduce what is destroyed and as a result could not wage a prolonged war.

"A well conceived offensive against Hussein," explains Perie, "would not turn into another costly quagmire. Even if ground combat is necessary, it need not occur until Iraqi forces are decimated from the air."

A war with Iraq would be everything Vietnam was not: decisive, clean and quick. General Sherman, shortly after the Civil War said, "The legitimate object of war is a more perfect peace." A peace that allows Hussein to perfect nuclear terror is hardly more perfect than what we have right now. Only by eliminating his capacity to blackmail the world can we attain a more perfect peace.

profits to the oil companies. Now, domestic production of oil will not be available for at least five years.

With all of this in perspective, it seems we may go to war without giving economic sanctions a chance to succeed. Bush says it is up to him to represent the American people; but I think he is doing the opposite. These are not the same circumstances as in World War II, in which world freedom was threatened by Germany. Saudi Arabia is not a democracy and neither is Kuwait. Both countries are lead by absolute monarchies along with Jordan, Syria, other Gulf states and Iraq.

Now, Bush wants to send our men into Iraq and devastate that country with its millions of innocent victims so oil companies can maximize their profits. If our country was actually attacked, I would go out and do my best to defend it.

In this case, there is no way I can support Mr. Bush in this war, when jobs can be made in oil production rather than soldiering. With Bush's possible covert actions with Iran and Iraq, our objective does not seem ethical and it is used to cover past actions concerning the Iran-Contra Affair and the S&L Scandal.

Somehow, I think this also ties in with Bush's War on Drugs. If Bush could scare Congress into declaring war and starting the draft, young men would be enlisted and programed to live a structured life stipulated by the Commander-In-Chief. In the future, they could serve as Bush's shock troops.

According to the Constituion, it is up to Congress to declare war in accordance with the will of the people. I do not think the people want to go to war. We must peacefully take to the streets, organize rallies and write to our local Congressman and Senators and tell them not to vote for war.

At the same time, we must consider taking steps to legalize marijuana to help pay for the national deficit and to promote the use of hemp to make paper products rather than trees.

It is up to us to decide the fate of our loved ones going off to war; we cannot be the silent generation this time. It is up to all of us to take our constitutional rights to speak out openly and help get this country moving again.

Vandals come back for big win over Cougars

By MATT LAWSON
Sports Editor

The Idaho Vandals looked like two different teams Saturday night against the Washington State Cougars.

The first Vandal team struggled for the first 32 minutes of the game, but the other Idaho team appeared just in time to overtake the Cougars, 67-60.

Idaho's first half was less than impressive. Idaho turned the ball over 16 times, shot nine of 25 from the field and missed five of 12 free throws before intermission.

The Cougars could not take advantage of Idaho's problems and only led 31-25 at halftime.

Idaho continued to struggle early in the second half. With 8:48 the Cougars had their biggest lead at 53-42.

From that point on the Vandals overcame their early problems and took control of the "Buick Border Battle."

Leonard Perry hit a jump shot less than a minute later; then Ricardo proved why he was picked as the pre-season most valuable player in the Big Sky.

Boyd hit the first of four three-pointers by the Vandals in just over three minutes. He also hit three of the bombs while scoring 15 of Idaho's last 21 points.

Cougar coach Kelvin Sampson felt the three-pointers were a key to the game for the Vandals.

"You have to give Idaho a lot of credit," Sampson said. "They made three-pointers down the stretch to cut into the lead."

While Idaho's offense began to light up the score board the Vandals' defense dominated the Cougar offense. Washington State had scored over 100 points in their first four games, but were held to 29 points in the second half by an aggressive Idaho man defense.

Idaho outscored the Cougars 25-7 in the last nine minutes of the game and first year Head Coach Larry Eustachy was pleased with his team's effort.

"We won the game from the defensive end," Eustachy said. "I told my team if we held them to 40 percent (shooting) or less that we would win."

The Vandals did just that as Washington State shot 24 of 49 (40.9 percent), including one for 11 from three-point range.

Idaho only shot 38.6 percent (22-57) from the field, but the difference was at the free throw line.

The Vandals shot 14 more free throws (29-14) than the Cougars and made an impressive nine out of 12 from the charity stripe in the last four minutes of the game.

Idaho looked in better shape than Washington State and it showed at the end of the game.

"I think it's a big win because we've worked hard and it finally payed off for us," Eustachy said. "I thought Washington State got a little tired."

Idaho also controlled the boards as they out-rebounded the taller Cougars 43-33. Sammie Freeman and Clifford Martin controlled the glass as they had 11 rebounds each.

"Freeman and Martin are so good inside," Sampson said. "They go to the boards well."

Idaho had help rebounding from their tough start when the Kibbie Dome crowd gave them a wake-up call.

Over 6,500 fans ignored Moscow's December weather to play a major role in Idaho's victory.

"Idaho's crowd is a tough crowd," Sampson said. "They really helped their team tonight."

Eustachy agreed with the Cougar head coach.

"I thought the crowd played a big role in the win," a relieved Eustachy said. "Our seniors have a lot of faith in this building and in our fans. Our fans were as important as any one player."

Boyd finished with 23 points and six rebounds and would have had more if not for a rough

Idaho suffers difficult loss

By CHRISTOPHER GATEWOOD
Staff Writer

There are some football teams the gods seem to smile on. That's exactly what happened in Saturday's 1-AA quarterfinal playoff game between Georgia Southern and Idaho.

Georgia Southern made the big plays when they needed them; and their prayers were answered with a thriller over the Vandals 28-27 in front of over 11,000 at Poulson Stadium in Georgia. The loss ends a fine Vandal season.

"They did what they had to do to win, good teams do that," Vandal Head Coach John L. Smith said. "They really made the plays that killed us."

The first of the killers came in the first quarter on the Vandals' second possession. Vandal quarterback Steve Nolan completed a pass to wide receiver Kasey Dunn at the Southern 24; Dunn dropped it and Southern free safety Mark Giles picked it up and raced 76 yards for a touchdown giving Southern a 7-0 lead.

The other killer came in the fourth quarter when the Vandals were driving for the winning score. Down 28-27, tight end Scott Dahlquist, who had a spectacular game catching a career high 15 passes for 202 yards, caught a ball over the middle and fumbled as he took a lethal shot from Giles. There was a mad scramble for the ball and after the smoke cleared the Eagles had recovered it.

"Scottie had such a great game it was a shame to see his career end that way," Smith said. "They were concentrating on stopping Kasey so much that they just gave us the tight end."

Georgia Southern was lucky to escape with a win. The heavily favored Eagles were dominated in almost every offensive category. The Vandals outgained the Eagles in total offense 553 to 314, time of possession 36:52 to 23:08 and ran 83 plays to the Eagles 58.

"They never really stopped us all day," Smith said. "We killed ourselves with penalties and got some bad breaks."

Once again lady luck wasn't on the Vandals side as early mistakes cost them dearly. In the second quarter Dunn had caught an apparent 49-yard touchdown pass that was called back because of a penalty; and on fourth and one from the Eagle five Nolan threw a bad ball that cost the Vandals another scoring opportunity.

"We passed because they left one of our receivers wide open," Smith said. "It was a called play but Steve just missed it. Maybe we should have gone for the field goal."

Nolan didn't miss much of anything else. He completed

Women move to 3-1

By TOM BITHELL
Staff Writer

It was a weekend of extremes for the Lady Vandals at the Westwinds Classic in Macomb, Ill.

Friday night the University of Idaho women's team faced a undefeated Butler University team that defeated them 80-68. Then, the next night, the Vandal's met up with winless Chicago State University and earned themselves a road split 79-51.

"Butler is a good team," Idaho Coach Laurie Turner said. "They had beaten Vanderbilt going into that game, which was at that time a ranked team in the top 20."

The Bulldogs came out and ran off 10 unanswered points while the Lady Vandals went zero-for-six from the field and committed seven turnovers.

"I think the biggest disadvantage we had is that they were 3-0, all of their three wins came on the road, and this was our first road game," Turner said. "We started out very sluggish. We dug ourselves a hole and had a very difficult time getting out."

The bright spot for the Lady Vandals was the outstanding performance by senior forward Hettie DeJong. DeJong hit 14 of 20 from the field for a 70 percent shooting average, scoring a game high 28 points and grabbing nine rebounds, while last weekend's big player, Krista Smith, got into foul trouble early and eventually fouled out.

"Once we get this team firing on all cylinders we're going to be pretty good," Turner said of the off and on performances of her players.

DeJong was the only Lady Vandal who scored in double figures in the BU game. She was followed in scoring by Kelly Moeller, Sherry Peterson, Julie Balch and Karen Poncina, all of whom scored eight points each.

Saturday night against CSU in the third place game, DeJong again continued as the team and game scoring leader with 14 points. She was seven of nine from the field for a 77 percent shooting average and was voted to the all-classic team, leading the

Vandals play host to Gonzaga

By CHRISTOPHER GATEWOOD

After two straight losses on the road in Mississippi the Idaho basketball team looked like they might be in a heap of trouble.

Saturday night the Vandals rebounded and got a big win over Washington State in the "Buick Border Battle." Tonight the Vandals will try to even their record at 2-2 when they battle the Gonzaga University Bulldogs in the Kibbie Dome at 7:30 p.m.

"They're a good basketball team," Vandal Head Coach Larry Eustachy said. "We will have to improve to beat them."

Last year when these two teams met in Spokane the Vandals beat the bulldogs easily. This year it won't be quite the same picnic for the Vandals. Even though the Bulldogs lost All West Coast Athletic conference performer and leading scorer Jim McPhee at over 24 points per game, the Bulldogs will be a more balanced team.

The leading scorer is guard Jarrod Davis who is averaging 16.3 points per game and center Bill Fredrickson who is averaging 11.5 points per game. Fredrickson is big and strong and should give the Vandals fits inside.

"I know we're moving in the right direction," Eustachy said. "I think we will play our best basketball in February."

Gonzaga is 2-2 so far in the young season with wins over Eastern Oregon and Southwest Texas State.

tournament in total points scored with 42.

"Hettie is really the only player that played well in both games," Turner said. "She was the only one who was consistent on the floor."

Against CSU the Lady Vandals played a more balanced game, albeit against a less talented team.

32 of 43 passes for 372 yards, two touchdowns and no intercep-

In addition to DeJong, four other UI women scored in double figures. Julie Balch put in 13 points, Kelly Moeller and Karen Poncina scored 12 each and Krista Smith scored 11.

"They have some good athletes, but there's not a lot of discipline," Turner said of CSU.

"Our biggest concern right now is our team defense. Overall on defense we were a better defending team a year ago than we are right now."

shooting night. Boyd made only six of 17 field goals but shot three for five from the three-point range and heated up in Idaho's stretch run.

Martin and Freeman added 12 and eight points respectively to go with their impressive rebounding performances.

Perry scored nine points, but his defense on Cougar point guard Bennie Seltzer was more important in the Vandal victory. Perry held Seltzer to four points, none after halftime.

"I want to give a lot of credit to Idaho and Larry (Eustachy)," Sampson said. "He did a good job getting his team focused after their tough losses (in Mississippi). That's a good college basketball team."

tions. Nolan finished the season with 2,108 yards passing and only two interceptions in 214 attempts in only six full games as a starter.

The Vandal defense did a better job of slowing the option attack. The defense held quarterback Ray Gross to just 21 yards on seven carries and running back Joe Ross to 31 yards on seven carries in the first half. It was the big play, including a 46 yard scoring strike to wide receiver Terrence Sorrel who finished the game with 99 yards receiving on only four receptions, that gave the Eagles a 21-10 halftime lead. One reason for the success of the defense was the switch of corner Charlie Oliver to safety.

"The switch allowed us to get more pressure on the pitch man," Craig Bray, Vandal defensive coordinator, said. "We had practiced Charlie there the past few weeks but just now decided to make the switch. We probably should have done it sooner."

The fired-up Vandals came out in the second half and quickly gained a 24-21 lead behind two Nolan touchdown passes to Dunn for eight yards and two minutes later to Dahlquist for 49 yards.

After the Vandal score, Georgia Southern would go on a long drive and end when Gross hit receiver Karl Miller for a nine yard touchdown pass. Thayne Doyle would hit a 35 yard field goal to complete the scoring at 28-27. Gross and Ross who finished with 92 and 69 yards respectively both had big second halves.

Shakespearean play to open at Hartung Friday

By KERRI FLODIN
Contributing Writer

A merry comedy about what is more valuable, the friendship of two men or the love of a woman, is scheduled to open Dec. 6 at the Hartung Theater.

"This comedy is about young people, their idiocies, raptures..."

— Peg Hamlett
Publicity Director

"The Two Gentlemen of Verona," by William Shakespeare, will be performed at the Hartung Theater on Dec. 6, 7, 8, 9, 13, 14 and 16. All shows will begin at 8 p.m. except for the Sunday matinees, which are at 2 p.m.

The setting for the play is Verona, Milan and a forest on the frontiers of Mantua in 1594.

"This comedy is about young people, their idiocies, raptures, despairs and sudden desperate attachments," Peg Hamlett, public relations director for the Theater Arts department, said.

Cast members include Eric Jacobsen as Valentine, John O'Hagan as Proteus, Jean Lund as Speed, Rozlyn Simmons as Julia, Virginia Belt as Lucetta, Susan Conner as Antonia, John Hurley as Pathino, Lisa Lechner as Silvia, Tim Johnson as Lance, Dale Hitsman as Thurio, Mark McDonough as Duke and Mike Jones as the Servant. The outlaws will be Emily Louise, Quimby Lombardozzi and Roger Brown. The Musicians include Elisa Cannon and Mike Jones. Sara Hansen plays the hostess, Elisa Cannon is Ursula, Phil Eilmann is Eglamour and Moose the dog will make a special appearance.

David Banner directs the play. Dan Emerich is set designer, Dean Panttaja technical director, Brent Karlberg light design, Joseph Malachea sound designer and Patricia Martinas the costume designer.

Hamlett said one of the great advantages of this play is the guest artist/drafter Joy Missaggia from Chicago. Missaggia has helped design the wardrobe

Leisure time takes too much time

By PATRICK J. TRAPP
Staff Writer

Are you too busy to sit down and watch television? The problem may not be that you have too much work to do, but rather you have too much relaxing to do. Simply put, this country produces so much leisure equipment that nobody has any time left to enjoy it.

Several years ago my father bought a VCR so we could make copies of programs we were unable to see at air-time. He liked it so much he bought another one. The purchases have caused unbelievable conflicts. I remember a case in point that happened a few years back.

It was Christmas break and I was working to save money for college. The week-end, I figured, would be a time for relaxation. I couldn't have been more wrong. It was more work trying to relax than it was actually working. For example, one day I recorded the Notre Dame-Southern Cal. football game. When I came home in the evening I decided to play it back, but my little brother wanted to play hockey on the TV with his new Nintendo game system.

We had just finished one half of play when my sister came into the room and asked if she could listen to her INXS tape on our new stereo. I told her I was waiting to finish the hockey game so I could watch the football game I had recorded. She said if I watched the football game for three hours, I would miss "Knot's Landing." I told her I would record "Knot's Landing" and we could watch it after the game. She protested that "It's a Wonderful Life" was showing for the 1,800th time at 10:30 and she wanted to see it again.

"I know," I said. "We can watch Knot's Landing" late Saturday and "It's a Wonderful Life" Sunday morning.

"But if we watch 'It's a Wonderful Life' tomorrow morning, when can we see the home movies we took in Florida?" she asked.

"We'll see them after we play pool on the new table."

"If we do that," my brother said, "we won't be able to see the Chicago Bears-Minnesota Vikings game."

"I'll record the game and we'll watch it while 'The Golden Girls' is on the air," I said. "We can watch 'The Golden Girls' at ten o'clock."

My sister said, "Why don't we listen to my INXS tape while we're eating and then we can save an hour so we can play computer baseball?"

"O.K.," I said. "The only problem is I bought a videocassette of 'The Honeymooners' and it runs over two hours."

"You could show it on Monday night," she suggested.

"I promised Phil he could have it that night. I have a plan. I won't go to work Monday morning and we'll watch it then."

"I was hoping to work on my computer program Monday morning," my sister said.

"And I'm using the set Mon-

Students win awards

By PATRICK J. TRAPP
Staff Writer

The Washington Idaho Symphony announced five winners of this year's Young Artists' Competition. Among them were University of Idaho students Jim Northrop and Debra Trimmel.

The 15th annual competition featured 12 solo performances from musical artists in Washington and Idaho. The 12 finalists were chosen from 27 taped performances sent to the Symphony.

Judges for the competition were Ruby Ronald, music professor at Washington State University, Robert Spevacek, professor of music at University of Idaho and Robin Davis, music teacher and former violinist with the Seattle Symphony. The competition is sponsored annually through contributions from Rotary Clubs in Pullman, Moscow, Lewiston and Clarkston.

"The annual Young Artists Competition is one of the highlights of the season," Sylvia Nance, Symphony manager, said. "It features some high quality performances."

Northrop, a junior music major, was recognized for his compelling rendition of "Non Piu Andrai," an Italian opera selection from "The Marriage of Figaro," by Mozart. For his performance, Northrop received $50 and the opportunity to perform with the Washington Idaho Symphony.

"I'm really excited to work with a full blown symphony," Northrop said. "I've worked hard for this and it's just an honor to be noticed."

Trimmel, also a UI music major, was recognized for her soprano selection from "Candide," by Bernstein. She will also perform with the Symphony.

A community orchestra since 1972, The Washington Idaho Symphony will perform two concerts in February. The first is on the 10th at 3 p.m. in the Bryan Hall Auditorium at Washington State University. The second concert will be the next evening at 8 p.m. at Lewiston High School. The five Young Artists' winners will perform the same pieces that earned them the recognition.

Let's learn some film etiquette

By TRENT YOUNG

"Down in front, please!" This last weekend I went to see The Creature from the Black Lagoon in 3-D at the Micro. As I picked up my glasses and got some popcorn, I thought to myself: "This is going to be cool." Yet, after I ended up sitting behind a chatty family of four with a little boy sitting atop his seat, and I listened to a woman talk about her life (in a voice far, far louder than the soundtrack, might I add) for the entire length of the film and previews, a different thought blossomed: "This really sucks."

Why do people go to movies if they don't intend to watch? Don't these people have TVs to talk in front of at home? Has the 80's anti-family spirit destroyed our communicating abilities so much that we can only have meaningful intercourse in the dark among strangers? (...Wait a minute! That's not what I mean! You! Wipe that smirk off your face!)

Anyway, my point is this — whatever happened to movie viewing courtesy. I'm sure we don't need to go back to an age of ushers with red flashlights; but it would be nice not to hear a family squabble about back taxes during a feature presentation.

I hold the management responsible. Even at a place the size of the Micro, someone should be there to maintain order.

Don't get me wrong — I don't mind watching a film with some noise around. I just can't sit still, however, and try to concentrate on a movie when some kid keeps yelling to his Mom about going poop and then proceeds to play in the aisles.

If we're going to shell out anywhere from $1.75 to $5 for theatrical releases, we should be able to enjoy them with a mature, non-hooting, and non-talking crowd. The management owes that much to us.

Oh. The movie was pretty good. Too bad I couldn't hear a thing.

day afternoon," my brother said, "to play Mario Brothers with my friends."

"You can't do that," I said. "I have to watch the news in the afternoon if I'm going to watch 'The Honeymooners' in the morning."

"Why can't you watch the news at dinner?" my sister asked.

"Because my friends are coming over to watch the Florida movies."

"Then when will we see Monday Night Football?" my brother asked.

"Tuesday," I said. "Does that mean you're not going to work on Tuesday?" my sister asked.

"How can I go to work," I shrieked, "when I've got so much leisure time on my hands?"

Cinderella fails, but Tesla succeeds

Review By JAY FORMAN

In rock and roll, it's OK to change. It's OK to experiment. That's what makes you different. Supposedly it could make you better.

In March, Guns 'N Roses has a triple album coming out, the first band to do that since Yes in the 70s. In theory, it works. But in the case of Cinderella's new album, Heartbreak Station, things should have been left the way they were.

Cinderella is a band from Philadelphia, who hit it big with their debut album Night Songs in 1985 and a tour with Bon Jovi. Their second album, Long Cold Winter, was a step above their previous, and was a great success.

Heading into the studio, they were on a roll. I don't know what happened.

The new album is dizzyingly mediocre, and not even close to what it should be. It's no secret that blues are surfacing again in the recording industry — that's cool. But Cinderella took it a step over the edge here. What made Cinderella great was Tom Keifer's screaming vocals grooving to guitars that had a hook in them. The hook is gone, baby.

Don't get me wrong, when Cinderella does what they did right in the past on the new album, notably "The More Things Change" and "Electric Love," they make the progression they should have made. But on almost western sounding songs like "Winds of Change" and "Dead Man's Road," they're taking the blues to bed...and leaving them there.

Dissatisfied? You bet.

That's why Tesla's Five Man Acoustical Jam is amazing. Tesla knows what makes them tick. This unplugged show taped in Philadelphia is a classic.

Tesla was taking a break when they were asked to do some back-to-basics club shows. These shows were playful, loose sessions, which luckily were recorded for future pleasures.

The thing separating this album from most other live albums is the intimacy Tesla brings. They sing like they are singing directly to you; and with no stage techniques to worry about, the B.S. is stripped away to let the music do the talking.

The best part of this treat is the cover version of Creedence's "Signs," which is about a long haired guy just trying to get by in a time that didn't like changes. The way it comes across is heart felt and touching.

Face it. If Tesla can beat Cinderella in a club tour, it's time for Cinderella to start over and for Tesla not to change a thing.

"Madness, mayhem and merriment. Their audience is reduced to helpless laughter."

"My doctor approves of my losing 87 lbs. He also approves of how I lost it — Nutri/System."

"I used to be sick all the time. And my blood pressure was way too high. My doctor felt I had to lose weight. He agreed that going to Nutri/System made sense. So I tried it. It was the best decision I ever made. The program really works. And it's completely safe. Now I'm at a weight I can live with. My blood pressure is normal. And I'm 100% healthier and happier."
