Ground war draws near

By ANDREA VOGT
News Editor

Defense secretary Dick Cheney announced that U.S. soldiers will be prepared to launch the ground offensive "before the end of February."

Cheney said that although extensive allied air attacks against Iraq have been on the most part successful, they alone won't dislodge Iraq from Kuwait.

U.S. Marines have been training daily, learning how to penetrate enemy fortifications and avoid mine fields.

If all the service men and women in the Gulf region were used such an offensive would put 480,000 Americans against 540,000 Iraqis.

However, the most concerning new development in the Persian Gulf is the gigantic oil spill which Cheney has pointed the finger at Iraq and called "environmental terrorism." The oil spill could threaten Saudi drinking waters, and Saudi desalting plants, which are having to use chemical dispersing agents in order to stop the flow of oil into the valves of the plants.

Environmental experts say this threat to the Arab Nations' water supply is very possible. High waves or choppy waters can cause the oily water to splash over the many petroleum "blockades" set up to keep the polluted water out, polluted water which is threatening over 18 million people's water supply.

Legal and religious implications of the draft discussed

By SARAH WEPNER
Staff Writer

Young men celebrating their 20th birthdays this year will not have much to celebrate about if President George Bush decides to instill a military draft.

Those individuals turning 20 during the 1991 calendar year will be the first group to be sent to fight in the Persian Gulf.

This issue was one of many that were discussed Monday evening at the Draft Information Meeting sponsored by Students for Peace.

Rev. Jim Neilson, Director of the Common Ministry at WSU, Jim Watson of the Koinonia House in Pullman, and University of Idaho Law professor James MacDonald, presented both the legal and religious aspects involved in draft deferments, and the relationship between conscientious objection and religious beliefs.

Although there is little concern that a draft will go into effect due to its extreme unpopularity and resulting political debate, individuals who plan on seeking deferment must begin preparation now.

"Bush doesn't want to deal with a draft," said Neilson. "It would be the last straw."

However, a system of registration for the Selective Service is already in place and the president needs simply to request Congress to pass the necessary legislation.

Induction notices will be sent out as soon as Congress passes the legislation. Consequently, time is of the essence.

If an individual wishes to file for any type of deferment, be it medical, financial hardship or conscientious objector, he has 10 days after receiving his draft notice to obtain the needed forms and return them to the Selective Service.

"These forms (Form 9) should be available at the local post office, but they aren't," said Neilson. "They are going to be difficult to find."

Neilson hopes to have them available at the Koinonia House

UI students express varied opinions, decisions related to draft

"I am out of the average age-bracket, but I think that more effort ought to be put into staying this issue and seeking other alternatives. I would resist conscription."

—William Snyder, a graduate student and former UI professor.

"If I were called, yes, I would definitely go. But I am opposed to the draft because it subjects individual rights to those of the collectivity, putting individuals under the control of the state."

—Steven Samuelson, a senior majoring in Civil Engineering.

"Have to be willing to participate, because this country has given a lot to me and my family, and it would not be right for me to stay while someone else goes and kills. Plus I just had knee surgery so they probably wouldn't take me anyway."

—Steven Corda, a sophomore majoring in journalism.

"I suppose I would do what they asked me to. I don't believe in war, but if I live in this country I have to do what they ask me to."

—Stephanie Norvell, a junior majoring in History.

"I am pretty much straight forward opposed to the draft. My father is a conscientious observer...I have proof that I am one also. I would not ever kill anyone, so I would have to find somewhere to serve here."

—Gregory Tollefson, a freshman majoring in English.

TOMORROW'S NEWS

MIDDLE EAST NATIONALISM DISCUSSED. David Mulla of the Washington State University College of Agriculture and Home Economics will discuss "Islam and Arab Nationalism" at the CUB beginning at noon.

GULF CRISIS SUPPORT GROUP TO FORM. An open discussion and planning meeting for anyone with family and friends in the Persian Gulf who would be interested in forming an on-going support group will be held on Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the southwest corner of the SUB Ballroom. Staff from the counseling center will be there to facilitate discussion and planning.

LANCE OLSEN TO READ. Fiction writer Lance Olsen, also a teacher of creative writing and contemporary fiction at the UI, will be reading from his recent novel Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the UI Law Building Courtroom. There will be a book signing and party afterward at Bookpeople on Main Street.

PSSA MEETING TO BE HELD. Anyone interested in Political Science or in discussing current world political events please come to the Political Science Students Association planning meeting Thursday at 4 p.m. in Administration Building room 203.

PRSSA WELCOMES INTERESTED STUDENTS. Public Relations Student Society of America invites all interested students to a new membership meeting on Thursday at 7 p.m. in the Communication Building Reading Room.

Dist. Prof. Yoder to retire after 15 years

By ANDREA VOGT
News Editor

After 15 years of dedication to the Political Science Department at University of Idaho, Distinguished Professor Amos Yoder is teaching his last semester.

After receiving his degree from Ohio Wesleyan University and his Ph.D. in International Relations from University of Chicago, Yoder was in diplomatic service and worked for the U.S. Department of State for 25 years.

His experience with the United Nations and other international organizations has made his Political Science 440 International Organizations and International Law class his most enjoyable course. During the semester the class has the opportunity to set up authentic model U.N. meetings, providing the students with realistic scenarios and dilemmas which they must solve as the U.N. Security Council.

"The most fun is to see the students get hooked to it, they start meeting after class and on their free time trying to think up solutions to the problem," Yoder said.

"I get the actual minutes from the U.N. and the embassies and let the students use speeches from the country they represent. I encourage them to plagiarize in this course."

During his years at the University of Idaho Yoder has witnessed many changes in student opinion. One of the most noticeable was the slow change in attitudes about the Soviet Union.

"Students, just like the American public, have changed their views about the USSR. People want cooperation rather than a cold war," Yoder said.

"As far as the Iraq war is concerned, at first the students were split on the issue, but now they tend to generally support the war," he said.

Yoder, however, does not predict the support to remain so strong.

"It will change. If the U.S. mounts a major offensive or the number of casualties go up, I expect a lot of opposition to this war," Yoder said.

After his retirement Yoder is hoping to travel to Hungary and program.

"Hungary is the country that pulled the plug on Eastern Europe," Yoder said, referring to the succession of events which led to the end of the Iron Curtain.

"It was a historic event of the century and I want to be a part of it," Yoder said.

Syllabi from his classes often include texts which he has written. He has published six books and several other publications and articles.

Yoder's wife, Janet, was acting head of the UI Enrichment Program and set up more than 100 non-credit courses for the university. Yoder said they plan to eventually move to Ohio where their family and many friends are located, and where they originally met. But leaving Moscow won't be easy for them.

"Moscow is a lovely town. I'm going to miss it," Yoder said. Moscow, too, will miss Amos Yoder's loyal dedication to the university, to the student body and to the community.

UI students go into business

By KIM MARTINELL
Staff Writer

Many University of Idaho students work during the school year to put themselves through college. But two UI juniors, Craig Kernan and Jason Pfaff, have found a way to not only earn money but also gain experience as entrepreneurs.

These two best friends own their own business in Moscow. "New Earth Landscaping" is a venture which has been founded on hard work, experience and their life savings.

The two landscape architect students dropped out of college and took off for Lihue on the Hawaiian Island of Kauai, spending one year as crew supervisors of 100 people for a landscape design and construction firm.

Now, they own their own landscaping business. They do landscaping design and construction - everything from the drafting to the finished product and they charge roughly $20 an hour for their work.

Although they are back in school, both young men agree they have learned a lot that college alone could not have taught them. They feel it's not how much or what you know in the real working world, but rather who you know that really counts. They also believe that getting out into the business field is the only way to learn and move ahead.

"We wanted to gain a better understanding of the real world, and this was the perfect opportunity," Pfaff said.

Not only did they get to know the local Hawaiian people and the relaxing life of beaches, sand and sun, but they also made contacts with several international landscaping firms.

"It opened a whole new world for us," Kernan said.

Although these two UI students have been very successful, and are quick to motivate others, they admit that there are rough times ahead to prepare for.

"Owning your own business isn't as easy as it looks. There's a lot of underlying legal aspects you have to be aware of to avoid hardships. You can't just jump into it; you have to know exactly what you're getting into," Pfaff said.

These two off-campus students are true adventurers. Kernan enjoys skiing and outdoor recreation. Pfaff is a black belt in kokondo, and would like to travel around the U.S. on his motorcycle. They would both like to become more involved in buying and selling real estate. They are experiencing some culture shock re-adjusting to life as students again, but they say that Moscow people are a lot like Hawaiians; friendly and laid back. The only things that they do not like about the university? The girl-to-guy ratio and the parking problems.

AMNESTY INTERNATIONAL TO MEET. The University of Idaho chapter of Amnesty International will hold its monthly meeting tonight at 7 p.m. in the Chief's Room at the SUB. Cases from China and Nigeria will be discussed. Amnesty International is a world-wide human rights organization.

RESUME WRITING WORKSHOP HELD. Alpha Zeta will sponsor a Resume Writing Workshop featuring Joy Passante from the UI Center for Business Research and Development. The workshop will be held tonight at 5:30 p.m. in Room 10 of the Forestry Building. It will last approximately one hour.

* Applications for Phi Eta Sigma National Honor Society graduate and undergraduate scholarship and awards are due Feb. 12. Any eligible member who is interested in applying should get in touch with the chapter adviser Dr. Marvin Henberg in the Psychology Building, Room 102.

POLICE NEWS

* Jan. 25, 9:36 p.m. UI student Michael John Swenson, 23, was arrested on a warrant issued on two charges: failure to appear and failure to show proof of insurance.

* Jan. 25, 11:34 p.m. LCSC student Shad Ray Mix, 20, was arrested at Murdoc's on one charge of fraudulent misrepresentation.

Louis wears two uniforms. Thirty-nine days a year, Louis wears a U.S. Air Force uniform. For the remaining 326 days, he can be found wearing blue jeans and a U of I sweatshirt.

"I consider myself lucky to have found them. No other employer could have helped me through college like the Air National Guard has. As a physics major, I can take what I've learned here and use it down there as an imagery processor."

Louis Orndorff is a senior at the University of Idaho majoring in physics and a Senior Airman in the Idaho Air National Guard.

We've helped a lot of college students like Louis. We offer part-time jobs with impressive salaries. In addition, we can also grant up to $15,000 towards a student's full-time college education. Who else can offer you an opportunity like this? If you would like to know more about the opportunities we offer, or how you can apply or qualify, give us a call.

911 system on schedule

Moscow's 911 emergency number service is running smoothly and as planned according to a Moscow Police Department spokeswoman.

Sis Clift, a communications supervisor at the police department, said the 911 service has been operating as scheduled. The emergency number service has been in existence in Moscow since the beginning of December.

The 911 number is available strictly for emergencies 24 hours a day. Clift said they have not received any prank calls and the number has been used by the public for legitimate emergencies.

"On average, we receive around three calls a day," Clift said.

She did not know the overall cost of operating the 911 number, but said everything is going as scheduled.

Clift said that people work in shifts at the emergency number. Only one person is needed to work at the number at any given time.

Oil slick justifies continued military action

I really didn't want to write about the war again so soon, but this Saddam Hussein guy really pisses me off.

So Saddam, explain your rationale for causing an oil slick that makes the 1989 Exxon Valdez accident in Alaska look like a minor incident. Experts are saying the oil slick in Kuwait will be "more than 40 times" the 11 million gallons that the Valdez leaked into the sound. Additionally, they are estimating the main slick to be as large as 35-by-10 miles. Other secondary slicks have brought the length to about 85 miles. Neat.

If Saddam was hoping to win any support from fellow Arab nations, this new "terrorist" act did not help his cause. Not only has this environmental catastrophe endangered the lives of his enemies (i.e., cataminating drinking water) and various wildlife, but he is "cutting his own throat" as well.

Last time I checked, Iraq depended upon the waters of the Persian Gulf as well.

Question: Should we halt our war efforts in order to attempt to clean up the waters? I say no.

We should bring in experts in order to study the problem and determine what efforts will be most successful in cleaning the slick up, but we should not halt military activity in order to make clean-up efforts.

This is exactly what Saddam wants us to do. If we were to halt our efforts, Saddam would use this time in order to re-build his war machine. He still plans on winning this war.

I'm not saying we should ignore the problem and that we shouldn't make attempts to clean it up, but the damage is done, and the military cannot halt their plans. By the way, the slick is located in the middle of the war zone, making clean up almost impossible.

One thing that we should not overlook is the fact that the world should expect catastrophes such as this to occur during war time. Especially when we are battling an enemy that makes Hitler look like a good citizen.

Hopefully this act of naked disregard for all life that Saddam has committed will do nothing more than generate even more support for our troops and the war effort. It is obvious that we must make every effort to stop this madman as soon as possible. God only knows what he will do next.

Baltic crackdown dims hopes for world order

I must admit Mikhail Gorbachev had me fooled.

When he first began to develop a reputation as a reformer, I was skeptical. But as relations between East and West thawed, I became optimistic. Perhaps Gorbachev really would preside over the demise of the old Soviet hierarchy of K.G.B. scoundrels, Red Army thugs and Communist Party hacks.

P.T. Gomben
Commentary

Many people in the West fell for his smooth rhetoric. Words such as "glasnost" and "perestroika" became fashionable in political conversations from Boston to Berkeley. With his photogenic wife Raisa by his side, Gorbachev looked about as threatening as the mayor of Des Moines. People began to forget that he remained a very powerful dictator.

However, it appears the days of dreaming of a new world order may be over. The leaders of the U.S.S.R. are regressing. Many reformers who aided Gorbachev in restructuring the Soviet government have now been replaced with people more committed to "maintaining order."

Eduard Shevardnadze, a close friend of Gorbachev, quit his post as Soviet Foreign Minister late last year. In his final address to the Congress of People's Deputies, Shevardnadze noted the loss of the reformers and warned of an impending dictatorship.

His words were prophetic. A few days before Iraq and the U.S. stopped trading insults and started swapping missiles, the Soviet army, attempting to "maintain order," began a bloody crackdown in the independence-minded Baltic republics of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia. It was a shrewd move, really. Why not take care of some domestic unrest while the rest of the world is focused on events around the Persian Gulf?

We may never know whether or not Gorbachev, the recipient of last year's Nobel Peace Prize, directly authorized the use of military force. Whatever the case may be, his reputation as a conciliator has been destroyed.

If he did order tanks into the Lithuanian capital of Vilnius, he has shown the world that a callous hard-liner lurks beneath his reformist facade. Even though some liberties have been granted to freedom-starved Soviet citizens, Gorbachev's actions have demonstrated that the government will always loom willing and able to use repression to get what it wants.

However, if Gorbachev wasn't informed of the outbreak of violence, one must wonder just how much control he has over the Soviet military. Or could it be just a matter of the Soviet military beginning to exercise its control over him?

Assuming Gorbachev authorized the crackdown in the Baltic states, the question is: Why?

On the one hand, he may have temporarily appeased Soviet hard-liners by allowing the army to beat up on unarmed civilians. That's always good for a few points with the Stalinists. He may also have wanted to use the Lithuanians and Latvians as examples, lest the citizens of other Soviet republics get an uncontrollable urge for independence.

On the other hand, does Gorbachev really think people who have tasted the fruits of freedom for the first time, after many years of repression, will cheerfully resubmit themselves to totalitarianism? After all, through his reformist rhetoric, didn't Gorbachev actually encourage people to seek greater autonomy and democracy?

How should America respond to Gorbachev's sudden about-face? According to President Bush, "The brave people... of the Baltic states have, indeed, acted with dignity and restraint."

He is correct. However, when people yearning for freedom receive no official recognition or support from the world's fore-

Give Peace a chance

Editor:

Peace be not. As our nation gets deeper into war our people cry harder for peace. Every day we hear of new anti-war movements. It's almost impossible to avoid hearing and feeling the cry for peace. Peace isn't something that you can cry for just because you're anti-war. Peace is something more. It's not a state of mind or an attitude, it's a lifestyle. Peace isn't something you can proclaim, it's more. I'm not against the Peace movement, but I hate the peace movement. The problem is that most do not have the right to beg for peace. They do not have the right because they do not have Peace. I'm talking about personal peace. In order to cry for peace in the world one must cry for Peace within himself. How can you not be called a hypocrite when you seek world peace, but don't have personal Peace. That's like saying, "I'm anti-drugs" while smoking a joint. The personal Peace I'm talking about only comes from one place. Most try religion, but religion can't bring Peace. Peace only comes from the Prince of Peace Himself. In order to rightly cry for peace you must know the Prince of Peace as your best friend. He is my best friend and His name is Jesus Christ. He is not a religion, He is a friend, a hope and the only way to gain true peace. On that note, may I see peace and Peace reign in this world.

Ahson's letter inaccurate

Editor:

I read with great interest Mr. Ahson's letter on Jan. 25. I would like to make a few corrections regarding the letter.

Ms. Mareen Bartlett wrote an excellent story. She spent many hours researching for the story and wrote a thorough newspaper. I really appreciate that she took the time to write the story and brought it to the attention of the university community. Based on my experience as a staff reporter, I truly felt that Ms. Bartlett's article was well written.

Mr. Ahson brought up the point that the story was based on one person's interview. If he had read the whole article, he would have realized that two other people had given their opinions as well. But maybe he does not consider Mr. Yasin Shaaban or Mr. Masud Abdel-Latif, both finishing Ph.D.s, human beings and Moscow citizens or as having valid opinions.

I would hate to burst Mr. Ahson's bubble, but racism does occur in this world. I was fortunate that I have had only one main run with this hatred in my life, which was in the third grade. According to Mr. Ahson's advice, I should have forgiven this boy. Well for his information I forgave this boy 10 years ago, but as everyone knows when a young child is hurt, the pain lasts for a long time, and the child becomes wary of others. If Mr. Ahson hasn't experienced any racism in the last 10 years, he's lucky. The Muslim community has worked hard to provide the public information and knowledge which made it easier for people like him. The latecomers should appreciate the pioneer's work, like most democracy, and cannot defend themselves bullet for bullet, they MUST be dignified and restrained or else face certain death.

Although some members of Congress are urging the President to use economic sanctions if the crackdown continues, the Bush Administration is still planning to ease trade restrictions with the Soviets. And, as things now stand, a U.S./U.S.S.R arms summit is still scheduled for next month in Moscow. Maintaining a "business as usual" attitude would send the wrong message to the citizens of the Baltic states and the Soviet government.

This entire situation may have been averted. Last March, as Lithuania was creeping nearer and nearer to democracy, Bush could have given diplomatic recognition to the fledgling elected government in Vilnius. He didn't. If the United States had recognized Lithuanian claims to independence, perhaps Gorbachev, or whoever ordered the crackdown, may have had second thoughts.

Dreams of freedom always burn warm, but it is shaping up to be a long, dark winter along the Baltic Sea.

Ambassador Philip Habib's work, which started at the turn of the century. I do agree with him that the people of the Palouse are "kind, supportive and friendly."

My family, who has lived in Moscow for the last 23 years, has experienced all these things.

I would like to thank him for his advice, but I'd like to make a few clarifications:

1) In response to my "high school mentality." Last time I checked, people in high school were intelligent, smart and wise. A lot of high school students have the mentality equal to people who are 30-year-olds and many 30-year-olds have the mentality of 10-year-olds. I consider his comment a compliment.

2) About taking advice from Dr. King — I agree totally. I admire Dr. King a lot and have always thought greatly of his courage, bravery and truthful words. Even Dr. King got mad once in a while at the ignorant people in this world — nobody's perfect. I hope that Mr. Ahson attended all the wonderful programs that were offered for Dr. King's birthday. I have attended these programs for the last two years and have learned greatly from them. Also you quoted Dr. King when he said, "...Let us stand with greater determination...to make America a better nation."

I want Mr. Ahson to know that what Dr. King said is how I live my life. I stand up and don't let anyone put me down and lead my life with morals because I'm an American citizen and deserve equality just like anyone else. About making America a better nation, I have done my best to improve anything that I felt was wrong. I care for my friends and colleagues and my work shows that. I feel that every little thing a person does improves America.

I had always thought that Moscow and America were a cohesive nation. We all have made America what it is, whether we are white, black, brown or yellow. I have no desire to make Moscow or America a "polarized or segregated" community or nation, but on the other hand I will not compromise my values and ideals — keeping one's identity is very important.

I'm afraid that Mr. Ahson's opinion was outweighed, by good wishes, 10 to one. I would like to thank all my friends and professors who told me that the story was wonderful.

Like I said during my interview, Moscow is where I was born, where I live and I love Moscow! I'm proud to be an American citizen.

ce and who is going to control this resource," Lovins said.

In order to prevent future problems such as this one, Lovins recommends that our country establish a rational national energy policy, one that will only be created by a ground-swell of pressure and activism across the country.

Lovins stressed the importance of information and action as prevention of such conflicts, stating that all issues are related to each other, and that a change for the better in one aspect of life will lead to a positive change in another aspect.

According to Lovins, the attitude that "I don't count, I don't matter, I can't make a difference" must be replaced if we wish to become independent from countries such as Kuwait and Iraq.

"Each one of you has an important role to play," Lovins said, referring to actions from writing to legislators to talking amongst ourselves and thinking about how to save energy.

in Pullman and the UI Campus Christian Center in Moscow.

Once filed, a Form 9 will delay induction until further paperwork is completed and deferment is or is not granted.

"Now is the time to begin working on papers and gathering documentation for deferment," Neilson said.

"Once the draft is in effect, there simply is not going to be time to respond," MacDonald said. "The key thing is advanced planning."

One type of deferment, that of conscientious objector, asks the individual for a personal statement against war due to their ethical, moral, philosophical or religious beliefs.

The individual must appear in front of the regional draft board and convince them he is sincere in his beliefs against war and violence.

The draft board would be most likely to grant conscientious objector status to an individual with a record of pacifism, documentation of peaceful ideology or membership in an organized church.

"Agnostics and atheists aren't out of luck," said MacDonald. "They may even have a better chance of receiving objector status."

People without religious beliefs have an advantage because they are not tied to any church doctrine concerning war. This allows them more freedom in compiling their statement as an objector.

Other deferments include a long list of medical ailments and financial hardships. More information on specific deferments is available through draft counselors such as Neilson.

Neilson is offering workshops for individuals to come together to discuss and formulate their statements as conscientious objectors. These will be held Feb. 12 at 7:30 p.m. and Feb. 21 at 7:30 p.m. at the Koinonia House in Pullman.

Professor MacDonald has also offered to research and answer any questions pertaining to legal aspects of the draft. He can be reached at 885-7947.

Aside from the disastrous ecological effects the oil slick has caused technological difficulties. The sludge can gum up the engines of assault ships and smoke from the oil slick fires could possibly be a hinder for air attacks by the allied warplanes against the targets which are located in Kuwait.

Idaho women even record with Eastern win

BATTLING. Idaho lost a close game to Weber State University on Friday night. The loss wasn't because of a lack of hustle by Hettie DeJong (#22) as she struggles with a Wildcat player for the ball. (JIM VOLLBRECHT PHOTO)

Staff Writer

The University of Idaho women split a pair of Big Sky home games this weekend, losing to Weber State University and defeating Eastern Washington University, to even their record at 9-9 overall and 3-5 in league play.

Friday night the UI women faced off against a Weber State University team that had narrowly defeated them just six days earlier 74-69 on the road. While winning on the road has been tough for the Lady Vandals, winning at home hasn't been so bad.

But Weber State changed that. The Wildcats (9-9, 6-2) started out fast on Idaho, making it look like things might get ugly. With 10:33 remaining in the first half, WSU opened up a 12-point lead at 25-13.

Then the Vandals came alive in front of the 727 fans, the largest showing of the season, and began cutting into the Wildcat lead. With 5:39 left in the half, baseline jumper Hettie DeJong gave Idaho the lead of 30-28, and the Vandals led at the half, 42-35.

"In the second-half we started to force the issue," Idaho Coach Laurie Turner said. "And their guarding was a little better."

The Wildcats, behind a game-high 25-point effort of guard Melanie Knott, regained the lead mid-way through the half at 54-53. After opening their lead up to eight-points WSU never let Idaho back within five.

Despite many opportunities to close the gap the Lady Vandals spent the final eight minutes exchanging baskets with WSU, and found themselves with their first home defeat, 77-70.

"It was one of those games that could have gone either way down the stretch," Turner said. "Right now I really think they are a better team than we are."

Krista Smith scored 16 points, Kelly Moeller 12 points and Hettie DeJong 10 points, to lead Idaho's scoring.

The next night EWU (4-14, 2-6) visited the ASUI/Kibbie Dome, but the Vandals were ready for the struggling team.

Idaho had already defeated the Eagles 66-43 earlier in the year and they wasted no time with them this time.

EWU held their only lead at 2-0 before the Lady Vandals opened up their transition game and took the half-time lead at 34-22.

Behind four starters scoring in double-figures the Lady Vandals continued the onslaught into the second-half. Turner cleared the bench to let her inexperienced players in on the action and the UI women easily defeated EWU 75-52.

Turner praised her teams inside play in both games, saying she felt they were playing their best basketball of the year.

Center Kelly Moeller controlled the Eagles inside, scoring 20 points with 59-percent shooting and grabbing 11 rebounds. Forwards Smith and DeJong both added 10 points for the UI front line while guard Brenda Kushthau scored 10 points.

Vandals shoot past EWU 72-55

By MATT LAWSON

For most of the night Eastern Washington University played even with the Idaho Vandals. But for 12 minutes in the first half the Eagles didn't play even allowing the Vandals to outscore them 21-4 and cruise to a 72-55 victory.

With the Vandals leading 15-10 with 12:16 remaining in the first half, Eastern looked like they could play Idaho close the rest of the game. But at that point the bottom fell out for the Eagles (2-2, 6-11). Eastern was held without a field goal until a three-pointer by Miquel Johnson with one second remaining in the half.

"I thought the intensity was good and the effort was good," Head Coach Larry Eustachy said. "We're on a string now where I don't think anyone has shot over 40 percent for a while on us. It's not just coincidental. I think we defend quite well."

The Eagles did make four free throws during the dry spell, but the four points didn't quite stand up to Idaho's 21 and the Vandals took a comfortable 36-17 half-time lead.

The defense for the Vandals was tenacious in the first half holding Eastern to a wretched 22 percent (6-27) from the field. Idaho didn't suffer from the same shooting woes as they converted 14 of 25 shots for 56 percent.

"Basically we did what we wanted to do," Sammie Freeman said. "That was to come out and play good team defense. The guards did a good job of working the guys and by the time they (the Eagle guards) got down (the court) they were too tired to look inside."

Ricardo Boyd came out of a two-game shooting slump and came close to out-scoring the Eagles single-handedly in the first half as he had 13 points. Boyd shot a blistering 72.7 percent on 8 of 11 and made all three of his three-point attempts to finish the game with a team-high 24 points.

"I got my confidence back like I wanted," Boyd said. "I just felt comfortable and everything was working out a lot better for me. The main thing (for me) is not to worry about missing shots and just keep playing hard."

The biggest defensive performance came from guard Leonard Perry as he overwhelmed Eastern's leading scoring Brian Sullivan. Perry held Sullivan scoreless in the first half and the Eagle guard only managed four points the entire night under constant pressure from Idaho's point guard.

"The foundation of our team is the defense," Perry said. "I think we struggled offensively but the defense picked it up (the slack)."

Eustachy was pleased with the defensive performance of his team and was quick to compliment the play of his guards.

"I think my guards are the best defensive guards in the conference," Eustachy said. "Calvin Ward can guard anybody and Leonard Perry also."

Idaho's outside players were also the difference in the game offensively as they scored 47 of the Vandal's 72 points including nine points from Perry to add to Boyd's 24.

The inside players weren't exactly silent as Idaho's two big men Freeman (nine points) and Keith Stewart (eight points) combined for 17 points and 11 rebounds.

Freshman Deon Watson made the difference as Idaho outrebounded the Eagles 43 to 26. Watson had seven boards for the Vandals while Otis Mixon grabbed five rebounds.

The victory gives Idaho momentum heading into the second half of the conference schedule and gave the Vandals their third road win in the Big Sky this season.

Idaho takes the week off from conference play hosting Southern Utah State Feb. 2 and Eustachy feels it will be a much-needed break for the coaching staff and players.

The Vandals have five of their last eight conference games at home and currently are tied with Montana State for second in the Big Sky with a 5-3 record.

Track teams perform well

By TOM BITHELL
Staff Writer

The University of Idaho's track and field teams made their 1991 indoor debut this weekend at the UI Invitational Scoring Meet in the ASUI/Kibbie Dome.

The invitational was the first of four indoor meets the Idaho teams will host this year. Competition in the dual scoring meet included the University of Washington, Washington State University, Eastern Washington University, Boise State University and the University of Portland.

Although the UI men lost both of their two dual meets, 59.5-41.5 to EWU and 65-34 to UW, Idaho Coach Mike Keller was not concerned with the team scoring, but rather the individual performances of the men.

Idaho's men, short on numbers, traditionally are focused on running events and often have to forgo field events, where most of UI team are walk-ons.

"We're a running team rather than a track and field team," Keller said. "I've decided to go strictly with track."

And track was where the Vandal men performed.

Eric Haynes and Stephen Lewis both ran strong races for the UI team, each winning their heat in the 200-meter dash. Haynes finished first overall in the 200-meters with a time of 21.62 while Lewis placed third at 21.79.

"I thought Eric and Stephen both ran excellently," Keller said.

UI's Eversley Linley started his season with a good performance, winning the 800-meter run and earning an NCAA provisional. The provisional mark is used to fill the NCAA field at the indoor championships if enough runners don't qualify under the automatic time.

Although the UI women split their dual meets, beating UP 81-14 and losing to WSU 68-35, emphasis was placed, like with the men, on individual performance at this first meet.

"As our first meet, just overall, I'm real pleased," women's coach Scott Lorek said. "Very few did anything sub-par."

Highlighting the day was the usual winning performance of Jackie Ross.

Ross, last year's Big Sky Champion in the triple and long jumps, placed first in the triple-jump with a jump of 40-3 1/4, more than a foot short of her personal best of 42. Lorek didn't enter Ross in the long-jump for the meet, saying he planned on rotating her between the two events, but did enter her in a non-scoring heat of the 55-meter dash, which she won.

"Actually we just want to see where Jackie is because it might be an event she'll run next year," Lorek said. "We're working with her towards the heptathlon."

Pacing the Vandal women in distance running was Diane Knudson with a first place in the 3,000-meter run at 10:04.21. The 3,000 is a 10-lap run around the dome track and Knudson controlled the tempo all the way.

"She's just getting so tough, so mentally tough, it's good to see," Lorek said.

Opinion

Eight seconds remain in Super Bowl XXV and 20 weeks of blood, guts and toil rest on the foot of kicker Scott Norwood. This is the way the season was meant to end — the two best teams in the NFL battling it out in an epic struggle to see who will be left standing.

The whole scene during that last eight seconds left me utterly breathless. On one sideline you had the Giants' defensive backs kneeling down, clasping hands and praying for the same miracle they had against the 49ers.

On the other side of the ball you had rookie Super Bowl coach Marv Levy praying to God that Norwood would have the leg to put it through. Fortunately for the Giants Norwood didn't and the Giants had their second Super Bowl victory. I won't forget the shot of Everson Walls jumping in slow motion after the kick was missed.

But it was more than the kick, poor planning at the end of the game cost the Bills their Super Bowl victory. The Bills needed another first down to get Norwood within his range. Before that kick Norwood was only one of six from beyond 45 yards for the season and 47 yards was just too much to ask.

In Norwood, the Bills trade distance for accuracy. If the Bills hadn't used their time-outs earlier in the half, they would have had the time to get closer.

The Giants also showed their experience on that last drive doing various things to speed the game up. On two different plays when Bills' running back Thurman Thomas was tackled the Giants held him down and leaned on him to get up. This tactic, although illegal, killed precious seconds.

I also question Bills' quarterback Jim Kelly's play calling on that last drive. First of all you don't call a screen when there's only a minute and a-half left in the game. Even though Thomas got big yardage on it, it kept the ball in bounds, further helping the Giants. Kelly was also intent to run his favorite crossing pattern with receiver Andre Reed, a play that also keeps the ball in the middle of the field. When you have only one time-out left you have to get the ball to the sidelines.

From the start, the Giants' game plan coming into the game was marvelous and they executed it to perfection. The Giants wanted to control the ball on offense and on defense keep the Bills from getting the big plays they had against the Dolphins and Raiders. The Giants wanted to play behind the Bills' receivers, let them catch the ball for short yardage and then punish them whether they caught the ball or not.

I can't remember a play during the game when a Bills receiver wasn't hit after the catch. Giants cornerbacks Myron Guyton and Mark Collins, who played great games, had Reed looking over his shoulder after he had a big first quarter. There were two times during the second quarter on third downs when Reed dropped passes that halted potential Bills scoring drives.

And what can you say about a devastating offensive performance by the Giants, especially up front. The Bills' offensive line, which should have been MVP, is made up of tackles Jumbo Elliot and Doug Reisenburg, guards Eric Moore and William Roberts and center Bart Oates put on the most devastating display of drive blocking I've ever seen.

In the first half they had trouble stopping a fired up, stunting Bills defense. Bills All-Pro defensive end Bruce Smith was all over the field, shooting through gaps and making big plays. But a half-time the Giants solved the puzzle and went to work on the Bills defense. Elliot was a dominant force erasing Smith as he panicked him play after play. It was nice to see the biggest mouth in the league shut up.

Running behind this line was 34 year old Ottis Anderson and the firepig Dave Megget. The Bills knew what was coming, they just couldn't stop it. Giants coach Bill Parcells reduced the game to its simplest form: smash mouth football. It was crude but effective. This combination plus a gutsy performance by Jeff Hostetler allowed the Giants to take home the Vince Lombardi Trophy.

Resort owners make additions

By KENDALL KAISER
Staff Writer

North Idaho skiers this year have been anxiously awaiting the chill of winter, and with good reason.

This summer, both Schweizer ski resort in Sandpoint and Silver Mountain ski resort in Kellogg did major renovations in hopes of competing with nationally known resorts like Vail, Colo. and Jackson Hole, Wyo.

Silver Mountain has been on the receiving end of some national attention from ski trade magazines, and for good reason. The resort now boasts the world's longest gondola, and has added 1,500 acres of runs for a total of 2,000 acres.

The changes at Schweizer, although not as major as those at Silver Mountain, were no minor project. The resort spent $15 million on renovations in the seven months prior to the start of the season. Some of the changes included a new four-story day lodge and a four-story hotel, as well as "The Great Escape," a high speed, four person ski lift. The Sandpoint resort also added night skiing in addition to its renovations. Schweizer plans on spending up to $100 million in the next 10 years updating various features at the resort.

Unfortunately this year's weather has not been altogether kind. Factors such as extreme cold at the start of the season kept all but the bravest souls off of the slopes, while the more recent warm front melted off some of the not so ample supply of snow.

You have to wonder whether the resorts will be able to compete this year.

Tennis teams take advantage of early match

By CHRISTOPHER GATEWOOD
Staff Writer

The University of Idaho men's and women's tennis teams opened the 1991 tennis season with a dominating performance over NAIA Central Washington Sunday. All six Idaho men's seeds won their matches easily including two doubles matches, while the top four women won, including both their doubles matches.

"We usually don't have a match so early in the season, but the opportunity to play was there and we didn't want to pass it up," coach Dave Scott said.

"I can't tell you how pleased I am with the performance. Central isn't a very strong team and usually it's hard to keep your intensity level up against a weaker opponent. I can't remember the last time I had a team dominate the way we did," he said.

Leading the way for the men were number two player Jose Palacios and number three Larry Gresham. Both players won their matches in what Scott calls a "bagel" 6-0, 6-0. Number one player Scott Anderson also won easily 6-1, 6-4.

Winning at the number four was Dan Streeby 6-3, 6-2; at number five it was freshman Kurt Snedeker winning 7-5, 6-2 in his first college match and the number six player John Moskowitz won easily 6-2, 6-1.

On the women's side Scott couldn't say enough about his two freshmen, number four Leah Smith, who also plays volleyball, won 6-2, 6-0 and Marianne Moore, who lost 6-2, 6-4, played in her first match in seven years.

"Both women played hard and with good intensity," Scott said. "Leah is a tremendous athlete. She has a great future for us in tennis."

Adding to the win total was the number one player Patricia Shanander 6-2, 6-1; number two Karina Heimbürger 6-3, 6-1 and number three Merlene Forde 6-2, 6-0.

In doubles the team of Moskowitz and Palacios won easily as well as Anderson and Snedeker. On the women's side Shanander with her new partner Heimbürger won easily 6-0, 6-0. Last year Shanander teamed up with her sister Kathy to post an incredible 32-0 record.

UI'S Olsen to read from novel

By LARRY OLSEN
Staff Writer

With another novel under his belt, University of Idaho Associate Professor of English Lance Olsen will read from his newly released book, Live From Earth, Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the UI Law Building Courtroom.

When asked about the response he plans on getting towards his new novel, Olsen believes it will be positive.

"Right now it is too early to tell what people will think, but one review that talked mainly about the book's theme and style enjoyed the novel," Olsen said. "So I feel that the public's results will probably be good."

Other works that Olsen has published include two studies of post-modern fiction, Circus of the Mind in Motion (1990) and Ellipse of Uncertainty, as well as more than 100 stories, poems and essays in Bomb, Iowa Review, Mississippi Review, Hudson Review, Yellow Silk, Cream City Review and other periodicals.

"They have a love so strong, they're not about to let a little thing like death get in their way."

Olsen's reader's guide to William Gibson will appear next summer. Other works Olsen is working on include a collection of stories called Addicted to love and a novel, Speaking with Aliens. (Live From Earth) is a love story about how a couple marry and fall in love. The husband dies, but comes back as a ghost," Olsen said. Or, he goes on to explain, the wife is hallucinating that he came back. "The story is basically a comedy even though it sounds pretty heavy."

In Live From Earth, Claire is a forthright young art student with the heart of a battered humanist looking for a class to complete her graduation requirement. Bink is a quiet, budding writer teaching a literature course on "all those things that bring a thought to the head and a lump to the throat." He also experiences flashbacks of Vietnam. Neither of them expect the plane they are riding in together to crash. Only they have a love so strong, they're not about to let a little thing like death get in their way.

A book signing and reception at Bookpeople on Main Street will follow Olsen's reading.

Spike's latest is Mo' Better

Racism runs rampant but students wouldn't know it

By SARAH-JAYNE PARSONS
Opinion

Last Thursday at 12:30 p.m., the film "Racism 101" was shown in the Borah Theater at the SUB. It was one of four films from the "Many Faces of Racism" film series, which was organized as part of the week long Martin Luther King Jr. celebration, and one which I thought students would find most relevant to campus life.

From the PBS "Frontline" series of 1988, this film reported on the increase of racism and racial violence on America's campuses. I watched this film in disbelief as I saw and heard racial confrontations on various university campuses.

In 1986 at the University of Michigan, a campus radio station aired a program filled with racial jokes. This sparked off a strong confrontation between black and white students.

Another example was what sounded like indiscriminate beatings of black, Hispanic, Chinese, and Asian students at the University of Massachusetts, after the 1986 World Series baseball game. The anger and frustration of the losing team's supporters was vented into racist taunts of the most violent order.

On the Dartmouth campus, the college newspaper, Dartmouth Review, constantly expressed strict conservative views and published several racist articles. The paper even harassed a professor who taught an ethnic music class, accusing him of giving high grades to black students in a subject the paper deemed to be of low academic standard which they felt shouldn't have even been taught on the campus.

The frightening thing about this case is the writers of the review went on to become "pen men" in the U.S. government. One even became a speech-writer for Ronald Reagan. Makes you think, doesn't it?

The preceding are just three out of 30 racist incidents which occurred on American campuses between 1985-1988. Other campuses which had similar problems were Columbia, Harvard, Purdue and Swathmore. I admit I am unaware of how the statistics stand now, but the film, for me, a student new to the U.S., was an unsettling insight into what appears to be a return to strong racial prejudices of earlier decades.

However, what prompted me to write this article was not just the shock of the film subject, but also my disappointment at the number of people watching the film. Including myself, only 11 other people attended the show, and at least three of them were event organizers.

I don't think it was a problem of advertising — posters promoting the film were everywhere on campus and KUOI announced the event.

So then I got to thinking that maybe it was because the screening was at 12:30 p.m. ... feeding time at the zoo, so to speak. But then again, I wasn't the only one eating my lunch while watching the film. You can actually eat and watch at the same time, you know!

No, my final diagnosis was that rude six-letter word — apathy. A lot of time, money and effort went into this "admission-free" event, and I have to say that I felt embarrassed for the sponsors, ASUI Productions and the Martin Luther King Jr. Commemoration Committee, that only a handful of students showed up.

Maybe students feel that problems of racism don't affect the UI campus, and that is why they didn't come to see the film. I hope they are right, and if so, then I'll take back all I've said here. But frankly, is there anything wrong in opening your eyes to problems on other American campuses?

"Racism 101" showed that the students were just ordinary kids like you and me, not raving fanatics, and yet they had to cope with this problem every single day of their college lives. I think it's a real shame that we are all so selfish and wrapped up in our own little Moscow world.

your senses; set in Brooklyn with plenty of music, sensuality and tension.

While Spike Lee's previous release, Do the Right Thing, deal with racial and social issues with violent and tragic consequences, Mo' Better Blues is more subtle and discreet.

Still, if you are a Lee fan, you won't be disappointed. The cinematic style is distinct and definite. The evolving story never lets you rest. Taking off right from the start, Mo' keeps the pace, and always with a moral around each corner.

Anyone who had difficulty with Do the Right Thing will not find Mo' Better Blues quite as abstract in meaning. Washington brings credibility and entertainment to the film. The plot is much easier to swallow, but equally thought provoking.

Mo' Better Blues is an adventure that will take you full circle. As thoughtful as it is funny, Mo' Better Blues is Mo' better. Look for the Lee film in the near future at the Micro.

RADICAL THOUGHTS

Everyone who believes that Jesus is the Christ is born of God, and everyone who loves the father loves his child as well. This is how we know that we love the children of God: by loving God and carrying out his commands. This is love for God: to obey his commands. And his commands are not burdensome, for everyone born of God overcomes the world. This is the victory that has overcome the world, even our faith. Who is it that overcomes the world? Only he who believes that Jesus is the son of God.
