Jazz Festival

Transmissions will be speaking at the 25th annual Live and Loud Jammin' / Chatter Jazz Festival.

The UI students who gathered with students from the University of Idaho at the University of Idaho in Moscow, Idaho, for the President's Day observance were all of our country's leaders who followed.

ACLU civil rights attorney to speak

Stephen L. Fevar, co-counsel in the Grangeville school prayer case, will be speaking in Moscow at the College of Law today in the Law School Courtroom. He will be speaking on "Litigating Civil Rights Cases." Fevar is Regional Counsel for the Mountain States Office of the ACLU, and is supervising litigation in the ACLU's recently filed challenge to commencement prayer in Grangeville. He is no stranger to civil rights cases, for he has litigated some 200 cases involving Constitutional rights. His areas of specialty include prisoners' rights, free speech, Indian rights and separation of church and state.

Although Fevar's speech at the College of Law will discuss in particular the cases he has litigated in Idaho, he has argued cases in the U.S. Supreme Court and in at least 10 different Federal District Courts and U.S. Courts of Appeals. As Regional Counsel for the ACLU he supervises litigation in an 11-state region. Fevar is a specialist in Indian law. He teaches a course on the subject as an Adjunct Professor at the University of Denver School of Law, and is the author of "The Rights of Indian and Tribes." From 1971-74 he was staff attorney with South Dakota Legal Services on the Rosebud Sioux Indian Reservation.

Sen. Benson stands up for UI students

By ANNEA VOSE News Editor
Unlike past Latah County Legislators, Betty Benson is sticking up for University of Idaho students, even when it means an agitated UI President Elizabeth Zinsar and the Idaho Board of Education staff.

calling out to not raise student fees, and though many students follow legislative action in Boise, her efforts to protect the UI student's checkbook should not go unheard. "The State Board of Education is trying to raise fees 8.1 percent. I assume there will be public hearings on it, so the students have some input into the process," Benson said. Benson was working toward her Master's Degree in Geogra-

During the last few months, District Five Sen. Betty Benson has been loudly voicing her opinions about student fee issues in Boise. That voice is

Bill to assist interns

Benson's latest effort is Senate Bill 1126, a bill designed to give more students the opportunity to be legislative interns. It has been printed and sent to the Education Committee, and is waiting to be voted on.

"It is difficult for students to participate because they have to pay all other costs besides the cost of living in Boise," Benson said.

She stressed that although the student participants will be elected through the Political Science Department, the selection will not be limited to Political Science majors.

There are currently 11 student interns working in the Idaho State Legislature, all of which are students at Boise State University.

"It would be nice to have other students participate because it is a wonderful experience," Benson said.

The bill would help students with the cost of living in Boise, as well as providing them with a small salary, compensation and a stipend. The legislature would also reimburse registration fees, depending on full-time or half-time enrollment.

The stipend would be $150 per week, to cover costs of relocation to Boise, and the salary would be $5 an hour for up to 40 hours per week.

Benson wants students to have an "equal opportunity," and wants to see opportunities opened up for all students regardless of their financial situation.

"I know from experience that it is a very expensive experience," she said.

Benson was an intern for senate democrats. She did research, reports and sat in on hearings as a substitute. Benson remembers it as "a great opportunity that was a lot of fun."

War restrictions trap UI prof in India

By KIM MANTWELL Staff Writer
A University of Idaho law professor studying the legal system in Pakistan is being affected by the restrictions the Bush administration implemented as a result of the Persian Gulf Crisis. Ken Gallant, director of UI's legal aid clinic, and his wife, Mary Beth Lageraur, are waiting in New Delhi, India, for their options to unfold. Gallant has a federally funded Fulbright grant to study Pakistan's bar association and moot court system from the University of Punjab Law School in Lahore. Pakistan is considered an American ally and receives foreign aid. But the war has stirred anti-Western sentiments among the Muslim population. Federally supported programs and foreign travel in countries with large Islamic populations, including Pakistan, have been restricted by the Bush administration. The restrictions have left the couple without income or a place to live. They will return to Moscow if they cannot transfer their Fulbright grant to programs in Sri Lanka, Nepal or South Africa.

Unfortunately, returning to Moscow won't make their predicament less complicated. Their house has been rented out, their car is on loan and the UI has no job for Gallant this semester. Other UI faculty and projects have been put on hold because of the war situation, including a UI irrigation project in Pakistan through the Department of Agricultural Engineering. Also, professor of forest resources, Chuck Hatch, returned to the United States following the cancellation of his federally supported research program.

Kappa Sigs run marathon for charity

By KALISTA BARCLAY
Staff Writer

The annual Kappa Sigma 24-hour basketball marathon will be held this weekend.

The marathon is a fund raiser for the Mountain States Tumor Institute, the philanthropy of the Gamma Theta chapter of Kappa Sigma at the University of Idaho. Teams from fraternities, sororities and residence halls compete against six teams from Kappa Sigma from noon Friday until noon Saturday at the Physical Education Building. Teams of five play full court for two 20-minute halves. Games will be played once every hour. The women's team and men's team who win by the largest margin of points wins a pizza party.

According to Bill Buxton, a member of Kappa Sigma, nine places are still available for teams. An entry fee of $25 is required. So far, 11 women's teams and four men's teams have signed up for the event. Buxton said the marathon may be extended if there are more teams signed up than slots available.

"We hope to raise $400 to $600 this year with the help of sponsors such as Pepsi Cola and Dominos Pizza," Buxton said. Last year the event raised about $300. He said that Kappa Sigma will accept donations for the Tumor Institute from living groups who can not participate but would like to help their cause.

Renfrew clean-up grant debated in Senate

By MAREN BARTLETT
News Editor

Unless Idaho's legislators act now, they may be paying more in the long-run for improving the University of Idaho's Renfrew Hall.

UI's President Elisabeth Zinser will have a difficult time pushing the bill through the legislature, due to the dreary budget outlook and to the fact that the UI's top building renovation priority is the $2.4 million request to complete a library addition, construction that is tentatively scheduled for this summer and next fall.

While it will be a difficult battle, it is one that must be won, according to Harry Peterson, vice president for university relations and development.

The UI received a $1.3 million federal grant to renovate Renfrew Hall, in order to improve the lighting, ventilation and working conditions. All of these areas currently do not meet federal minimum standards and are in drastic need of improvement. There are also safety problems, including leaky roofs, hazardous electrical systems, inadequate ventilation and plugged plumbing.

While the improvements may seem to be secondary, it seems that it would be in the best interest of the legislature to accept the fact that they will eventually have to update the hall, which facilitates up to 1,500 students who are taking chemistry labs this semester. The building is also an important center for research, with projects from the chemistry and physics departments that include $1.2 million in grants.

If this fact is not realized, and the state does not agree to

Low-cost vision examinations offered

George A. Paris, O.D., of Moscow is providing free eye examinations to low-income workers and their families during national Save Your Vision Week, March 3-9.

Paris is participating in a special event of Vision USA, a national charity founded by members of the American Optometric Association and sponsored locally by the Idaho Optometric Association. This year, optometrists across the nation will participate in the March event marking the first national effort made by a profession to provide free health care to low-income workers.

"Low-income working families with no health insurance are at a great disadvantage for health care benefits," Paris said. "Because they are employed, they often fall between the cracks of government and private medical assistance programs."

The Vision USA project is open to individuals and families who meet the following criteria:

- a member of the household must be employed

- the family must not be covered by health insurance

- eye examination must not have been received in the past year

- income cannot exceed an established level based on family size.

People who believe they are eligible for benefits are encouraged to call 1-800-766-4466 toll free. Eligible workers will be referred to a participating optometrist in the area. Eyeglasses for those in need will be provided at a small extra cost.

Proposed scholarships designed to help minorities

By MAREEN BARTLETT
News Editor

The Idaho State Education Committee gave a "do pass" recommendation to a new minority scholarship bill which could dramatically change state scholarship policy if it is approved by the legislature.

The bill proposes a new program designed to aid minority groups in Idaho, as well as students who are in financial need.

Proposed by Gov. Cecil D. Andrus and sponsored by Sen. Mike Burkett, D-Boise, the program would pass out $2,500 scholarships to minority and "at-risk" students based on need. "At-risk" students include individuals who meet three of the following five criteria:

- potential first-generation college student;
- handicapped;
- migrant or seasonal farm worker or dependent of one;
- ethnic minority;
- has financial need.

Currently, state-funded scholarships are only awarded based on academic performance and other measures of merit. Under the proposed bill, the applications of minority and needy students would be given extra consideration.

As well as allowing these minority students the short-term chance of attending college, this program could also help the minority populations of Idaho in the long-run. Sam Bird of the Idaho Task Force told the committee that state funding will help Hispanics to attend college and to graduate, providing strong role models and positive influences for younger Hispanic students.

Hispanics make up from 4 to 7 percent of Idaho's population, but only 1.8 percent of Idaho's colleges. Many of these are children of migrant workers who do not have the resources or the guidance to attend college. This bill would give them a chance to attend an institution of higher learning.

Isidore Gourneau III, a junior at Boise State University and a member of the Stoux tribe, told the committee that many Native Americans are afraid to take on student loans because of the risks they take. Many Native American graduates return to Idaho's reservations where there are few jobs and little opportunity to repay college loans, and this fact keeps them out of school.

Gourneau stated that a state minority scholarship program will help encourage more Native Americans to attend college.

BSU student body president Eric Love, himself a minority student, stressed that the state needs to send a message to young blacks that athletic excellence is finance 60 percent of the cost of the planned construction, they may eventually end up footing the entire $3.3 million bill. The grant was hard enough to get the first time, and Peter Griffiths, chairman of UI's chemistry department, said that it is unlikely that the National Science Foundation will award it to the UI again if it is not utilized.

The National Science Foundation awarded 74 grants to a selection of more than 430 applicants, illustrating just how competitive the field phy at UI when she was appointed to the Idaho Senate last December, her student-oriented attitude stemming from her direct on-campus experience. UI students couldn't ask for much better representation.

However, the unfortunate twist is that there is not a high student rate of voter turnout in Moscow, and that there is a high voter turnout for the business people and in the community. Although this applies a certain amount of pressure to cater her interests in legislative actions, Benson has not given in and maintains a balance between the university and the community.

Benson requested the Senate Education Committee to create a sub-committee designed to scrutinize student fee issues.

The committee will study fee guidelines set up by the Idaho Board of Education, student financial aid options, and how Idaho's fees compare with its counterpart's prices.

This week, Benson refused to interview with the Idaho Education Association's political committee for an endorsement. Her refusal was mostly due to unfair personal preference by the IEA in past elections.

"They wouldn't endorse Liz Sullivan in '88 when she was running for the House of Representatives, they wouldn't endorse me (in a bid for the House of representatives last fall). To put it simply, they just like Tom Boyd better than us," Benson explained.

One of Benson's ideas for improving and saving money in some academic areas was to merge duplicate programs. She gave an example of economics, claiming that there are three or four different economic programs in different departments, and if the departments were to merge their information they could come up with a broader based "dynamite offering."

The increase the State Board of Education is considering comes to approximately a $50 increase per student for fees. Benson knows and has felt the economic hardships students face.

"I know how hard it is to be a student and try to make ends meet. For those making $50,000-$75,000, $50 is not a lot of money," Benson said. "But $50 for a student is not just money lying around, sometimes it's grocery money."

LOSE 20 POUNDS IN TWO WEEKS!

Famous U.S. Women's Ski Team Diet

During the non-snow off season the U.S. Women's Alpine Ski Team members used the "Ski Team" diet to lose 20 pounds in two weeks. That's right — 20 pounds in 14 days! The basis of the diet is chemical food action and was devised by a famous Colorado physician especially for the U.S. Ski Team. Normal energy is maintained (very important!) while reducing. You keep "full" — no starvation — because the diet is designed that way. It's a diet that is easy to follow whether you work, travel or stay at home.

This is, honestly, a fantastically successful diet. If it weren't, the U.S. Women's Ski Team wouldn't be permitted to use it! Right? So, give yourself the same break the U.S. Ski Team gets. Lose weight the scientific, proven way. Even if you've tried all the other diets, you owe it to yourself to try the U.S. Women's Ski Team Diet. That is, if you really do want to lose 20 pounds in two weeks. Order today. Tear this out as a reminder.

Send only $10.00 ($10.50 for Rush Service) - to: SlimQuick, P.O. Box 103, Dept. 2R, Hayden, ID 83835. Don't order unless you want to lose 20 pounds in two weeks! Because that's what the Ski Team Diet will do. © 1990

City parking signs defeating alcohol education

With all of the recent hype concerning drugs and alcohol, the concentration on the "War Against Drugs," the increased drinking and driving laws, and the awareness of our alcohol problem by the IFC and Panhellenic Council, it amazes me that the Moscow City Administrators are actually encouraging students to drive while intoxicated.

Up and down Main Street, the street on which most of Moscow's bars are conveniently located, there are parking signs which prohibit parking after 2 a.m., the time at which the bars conveniently close.

For students who have been out carousing and partying all night, any choice they make at 2 a.m. is going to be an unclear one. A decision to drive home after drinking in the bars for five hours, motivated by the fact that they will receive a $10 ticket if they do not, could be a life-threatening one.

The city says the signs are needed in the winter, in order for the snowplows to plow the entire street. There is only one problem with that justification: Moscow only has substantial amounts of snow three months out of the year. I would much rather have the citizens of Moscow dig their cars out of the snow than have them drive home and endanger themselves and others.

As these signs are not needed for the majority of the year, perhaps they could be covered in the fall and spring. Perhaps our city officials could designate a 24-hour parking lot in the downtown area, most of which are also restricted "No Parking" areas from 2 to 7 a.m. This would allow the streets to be plowed, and the downtown workers would have adequate space to park.

The issue of driving while under the influence is an important one in any town, especially in a college town where there is and always will be possibility for it to happen. The fact that at least one UI student is arrested for a DUI almost every week is proof that it should be taken seriously.

For all of the emphasis on education, on designated drivers and on red ribbons, reality must be dealt with first. These influences will eventually have an effect on some, but we must prepare for those on whom it does not.

Western press part of Saddam's propaganda

Never before has a war been made so complex by those whose job it is to make things simple.

Chuck Brockway
Commentary

The western press in Baghdad, including CNN's much-hailed and much-criticized Peter Arnett, is being shamelessly duped by Iraq; they are now no less than a messenger for Saddam Hussein's propaganda. One of the allied forces' stated aims has been to completely dismantle Iraqi communications to both troops in Kuwait and to the Arab and Western communities. They did. Now, the international press is filling vacancies left by downed Iraqi radio towers quite nicely. With the leash of censorship tightly in hand, Iraqi officials tow them around Baghdad. They are not shown damaged military installations, and they are not allowed in or around Kuwait where the allies have wreaked the greatest havoc. They dutifully file their reports, laced with Iraqi lies and punctuated by feeble disclaimers explaining the censorship restrictions.

Recycling Club needs volunteers

Editor:

Last semester the Environmental Science Club generated the interests of about 40 students. These students wanted to become more involved with the preservation of our environment. Unfortunately the club got off to a poor start and was unable to provide enough projects for everyone to work on. This semester is different. Last week on Thursday night the Club met and only 10 people attended. I was disappointed because we have many new and exciting projects for students to help with. Some of these include a campus clean-up day, dorm recycling, Paradise Creek clean-up, Sierra Club trail project, energy conservation (already underway), and even a dumpster survey to see how much waste the UI Recycling Program is recovering from the waste stream on campus. Students not only missed a good chance to get involved, but also the new Environmental Top Ten List that will now be presented weekly. They missed the Top Ten Reasons to Conserve Energy, which is as follows:

#10 When the lights are off you don't have to look at your roommate.

#9 Meeting people at parties could be much more interesting in the dark.

#8 Taking a nap is easier than running five miles.

#7 The small electrical shock you may get from pulling out a plug feels really cool.

#6 Philosophy and psychology readings make more sense in dim light.

#5 If it was darker in the cafeteria we wouldn't have to see what we are eating.

#4 Birds don't really like being covered in oil.

#3 Doing your homework is probably a better idea than watching TV.

#2 If the Wallace Complex conserved heat, maybe the food in the cafeteria would be warm.

#1 It's easier to sleep in class

when the lights are off.

The Top Ten List is meant to be fun and not taken personally. It's just a way to deal with the many environmental problems we are faced with everyday. I hope those who care about our planet will get involved. We have projects that need volunteers, or students can create their own. I hope to see more students at our next meeting.

claimed was an apartment complex. The rubble happened to bury the alleged 130 civilian casualties, who were unseen by reporters. U.S. bombers Wednesday rightfully demolished a reinforced, camouflage-clad building surrounded by barbed wire and frequented by military vehicles. Iraqi officials claimed it was only a bomb shelter, evidenced of course by the civilians they planted there. Rampant deceit by any government is despicable, but the propagation of it by the enemy press is revolting.

What effect does this one-sided reporting have? Clearly, America and the West are intelligent enough to see through Saddam's devices. His real audience is both the Arab community, where the fire of hate for the United States can be whipped into an inferno instantaneously, and the Soviet Union, who has been vacillating since the conflict began. The propaganda can do the most damage in those two forums, and it is. Among Arab countries, anti-American demonstrations as well as formal objections to the coalition's tactics have escalated. The Soviet Union is now timidly condemning the bombing of the civilian-occupied Bunker last Wednesday. Saddam Hussein's obvious goal has always been to split the Arab/U.S./Soviet coalition. Now, however, he has the press on his side.

Those who argue against pulling journalists out of Baghdad claim piously that any information, even one-sided information, is inherently better than the absence of it. Television journalism has not only molded the views of the public, but it has induced journalists themselves to chip away the concrete from once-cherished doctrines. The press now holds to the fallacy that facts alone always qualify as news. On the contrary: pure facts, without significant relevance to the full picture, are not often news. Moreover, one-sided facts are never news. The journalists in Baghdad have lost their instinct to test and evaluate information for validity before presenting it to the world. The new instinct is to get any and all information on the air and in print as quickly as it arrives. That the pictures and sound emanating from Baghdad are indeed factual (the demolished buildings and smashed cars are not parts of extravagant movie sets) should not be enough to justify transmission.

It is intriguing that journalists, their public status already at a low, would rather stay in Baghdad and be censored than spare their journalistic credibility by pulling out. The ones who so ardently scream for a free press are the very ones insisting that suppression must be tolerated in the name of arbitrary information. The hypocrisy is almost worse than the censorship.

Note: This is the third article in a four-part series on the Lionel Hampton/Chevron Jazz Festival.

This week, some of the truly finest musicians and singers from around the world will descend upon Moscow for the Lionel Hampton/Chevron Jazz Festival.

Some of the less publicized, but just as talented performers range from jazz singer Billy Eckstine to Latvian tenor saxophonist Raimond Raubusko. But favorites like Dianne Reeves should once again steal the show.

BILLY ECKSTINE

Eckstine has been at the top of the mountain of jazz singers for the past 40 years. "Mr. B's" silky smooth Baritone can be recognized worldwide.

Born in Pittsburg in 1914, Eckstine lived with his mother and found his musical talent attending church on Sunday mornings. In high school, Eckstine began to take his musical talent seriously.

"I entered the contest (a local talent show) and won for five consecutive weeks, doing my version of Cab Calloway," says Eckstine. "The judges at the show got sick of me winning every week so they gave me a job singing at a local club for $15 per week. That was big time as far as I was concerned."

Eckstine's first big break came in Chicago when Earl Hines heard the young singer and invited him to join his band. His first million-selling record, "Jelly Jelly," with Hines came about in 1939.

After his time with Hines, Eckstine formed a band of his own including such greats as Charlie Parker, Dizzy Gillespie, Fats Navarro, Gene Ammons, Frank Wess, Art Blakey, Tad Dameron, Jerry Valentine and many others. This band was a strong pioneering force in the new wave of jazz.

In Eckstine's solo career he virtually reigned as the premier singer and garnered a slew of gold records. Attendance records for his concerts at prestigious concert halls such as Carnegie Hall and the Paramount Theater in New York were constantly breaking attendance records.

With all of his ups and downs, Eckstine believes strongly that he was able to survive all these years with his no nonsense singing.

"There are those who came into this business with faddish gimmicks, something that wouldn't last. I have always said that my only gimmick was singing, and I have constantly tried to embellish my craft. If you set a certain precedent for yourself and stick to it, I believe it will outlive fads and other quick changing trends."

STANLEY TURRENTINE

During the 1960s and through the early 1970s Master of the tenor saxophone Stanley Turrentine had led his group to greatness with his interesting sound, dabbling with some music popular of that era which has expanded his audience past jazz listeners.

Turrentine has collaborated with such artists as Hank Jones, Benny Powell, Mickey Roker and Kenny Burrell who have all performed at the Lionel Hampton/Chevron Jazz Festival.

In 1987, Turrentine Collaborated with the Gene Harris Trio to produce the album, "The Gene Harris Trio — Plus One" which captured the "Grand Prix du Disque de Jazz," the French equivalent of the Grammy.

PAQUITO D'RIVERA

Born in Havana, Cuba in 1948, D'Rivera was considered to be a child prodigy began his musical studies at the age of five under the watchful eye of his father Tito, well-known in Cuba as a classical saxophonist and conductor. At the age of seven, D'Rivera became the youngest artist ever to endorse a musical instrument when he signed on with the Selmer company.

Dissatisfied with the tight control placed on his music in Cuba, D'Rivera decided to leave. In May 1980, during his tour in Spain, Paquito sought refuge with the American Embassy and left Cuba forever.

With much help from Dizzy Gillespie, David Amram, Mario Bauza, Bruce Lundvall and others, D'Rivera entered the United States. Paquito became well respected after the release of his first two solo albums "Paquito Blowin'" and "Mariel."

With such media attention from PBS, TIME, Jazz Times and CBS Sunday Morning, D'Rivera's audience began to spread and his album's have now hit the top of the jazz charts and received rave reviews.

RAIMOND RAUBISKO'S

JAZZ THET

Considered the top tenor saxophonist in the Soviet Union, Raubisko enjoys being surrounded by young musicians and always varies the amount of artists he works with. The other artists in the Jazz-Thet are Juli Smirnoff, sax and flutes; Victor Avdyukovich, bass; Madars Kalnins, piano; and Raimonds Kalinins, drums.

DOCTOR BLUES

Soviet Union Quintet, Doctor Blues, was founded in 1989 by musicians who caught the "white blues virus" by becoming infected with the influences of such western artists as Johnny Winter and Eric Clapton.

Accomplishments of the band include performances at the Latvian Festival, "Rock for Independence," international festival, Fiesta Jazz in Paernu, Estonia and first place at the Rawa Blues competition in Katowice, Poland.

Band members include: Yevegeny Janson, keyboards; Igor Novikov, guitar and vocal; Igor Eunapu, guitar; Alexander Syrtsov, bass guitar; and Stanislav Nidvalsky, drums.

ETHEL ENNIS

Ethel Ennis has been called a "cultural treasure" of her native Baltimore — and with good reason. Ennis was born in the depths of the Great Depression on the third floor of a Baltimore rowhouse. She began playing piano and singing while she was in high school. She was well accustomed to public recognition while she was still a teenager and by the time she was 22 she had made her first national recording on the old Jubilee label. The record is still re-issued from time to time and many other albums followed.

Ennis quickly became the most celebrated jazz-oriented singer from Baltimore since Billy Holiday. During the 1960s, Ennis made numerous recordings for RCA, and crossed the U.S. and Europe on dozens of tours.

The 1970s saw Ennis' participation in Baltimore's urban renaissance with frequent downtown concerts. She became widely known for contributing her singing talent to a diverse assortment of charitable and cultural events. She brought down the house with her unforgettable "acappella" rendition of the national anthem at the 1973 presidential inauguration.

Ennis has continued her civic activities through the 1980s, traveling occasionally for concerts or club engagements around the country. She was named an official cultural ambassador for the city of Baltimore in 1982, a role she has performed in earnest with two visits to Rotterdam, The Netherlands, one of Baltimore's sister cities.

PHIL WOODS

Born in 1931, Phil Woods inherited his first alto saxophone from a deceased uncle. He spent four years at Juilliard School of Music and gained experience with Charlie Barnet, Neal Hefti and Jimmy Raney, before cutting his debut album with trumpeter Jon Eardley in 1955.

Since that time, the accomplishments Woods has attained seem endless. He started with the Downbeat New Star Award in 1956. He won the Downbeat Critics' Poll 1975 through 1979 and 1980 through 1988. Without any surprise, he has also won four Grammys.

DIANNE REEVES

Some observers called Reeves the "singer of the '80s" because her unique sound and style encompass all the energy, creativity and grace necessary to make a tremendous future a distinct possibility. She was born in Detroit, grew up in Denver, but now resides in Los Angeles where she enjoys singing, doing gigs and teaching voice. Reeves has been a professional singer since her teens, with opportunities to perform with greats such as Clark Terry, Louie Bellson, Chick Corea and Count Basie.

Her recording credits include backing vocals on records by George Duke, Stanley Turrentine, Alphonse Mouzon, Bill Summers and Ronnie Laws. One critic said, "Although she has studied music both in Denver and L.A., the joy and excitement she brings to a song comes from someplace only great artists know."

Whether it's on a gentle ballad like "Better Days," or on the spirited funky title cut, "Welcome To My Love," Reeves' extraordinary vocal abilities are apparent. Her three-octave range and unerring sense of phrasing let her sing a chorus of "My Funny Valentine," or sizzle through the snappy "Perfect Love," with the same warmth and assurance.

The New Kids had the 'right stuff' for young female crowd

Ouch! That noise, that deafening noise. I have heard some intense sounds in my life: airplanes taking off, fire alarms, M-80s on the Fourth of July, and that pesky car radio pumped to the maximum decibel on a Monday morning. But I have never heard anything so harsh, so irritating as the mounting discourse inside Beasley Coliseum Saturday night.

Thousands of teen-age and pre-teen girls screamed a piercing cry that would have made Ella is it live or is it Memorex Fitzgerald run for cover. The people who caused all this mayhem were, of course, the "Beantown Boys," better known as the New Kids on the Block, a candy wrapper, soda pop group which has caused a hysteria not seen since the days of Beattle-mania. Shortly into their concert it was evident that the Beattle's they ain't, but they come a lot closer than Milli Vanilli do.

The show seemed more like a carnival than a concert. This has to be one of the few acts where you can buy snow cones and glow-in-the-dark adjustable plastic tubing in the coliseum halls. The New Kids promoters sell snow cones and the Grateful Dead promoters sell organic burritos. I guess the merchandise really fits the band.

one point, the lead singer of this three member black youth band dropped his microphone down to his knees and before he could get it back to his mouth, the words came out from the dubbing tapes. With songs like "La la la la ... Searching for love," predictions that this group is the next New Kids can be put to rest.

The New Kids hit the stage backed by explosive fireworks and multi-colored strobe lights similar to those found in a Pepsi commercial. As the concert went along, it became increasingly clear that these five commercial sensations knew who their audience was and they knew how to please it. Unlike some acts who, when playing in small towns, seem to be merely going through the motions, the New Kids played with powerful sincerity.

"Are you ready to get crazy?" Donnie Wahlberg shouted as the band kicked out the bouncy love tunes "Call It What You Want," and "My Favorite Girl."

And crazy they got. Picture this: a group of 10,000 girl scouts upon hearing that they sold the most Truffle cookies in the nation and would therefore receive the grand prize — a

Patrick Trapp Review

The concert began with a pumped-up, over-glamoured, lip-synched love song from a man who looked and acted like Vanilla Ice on female hormones. This was followed by Biscuits, a former body-guard of the New Kids magically transformed into a hip, obese, pop sensation. Too bad he couldn't sing; this one was lip-synched, too. But the true "goat of the show" award goes to the Perfect Gentlemen. At

Nightmare finish stops Idaho

By CHRISTOPHER GATEWOOD
Staff Writer

The Vandals had a chance to take over sole possession of second place in the conference going into Saturday night's Big Sky match-up with the University of Nevada Wolfpack.

It was not to be, as Nevada used a 24-3 run over the last seven minutes of the game to blow out the Vandals 71-51 before 5,245 fans at the Lawlor Events Center.

The Vandals drop to 8-4 in the Big Sky and Nevada is now 9-3.

"We had good shots down the stretch, we just couldn't put it in the hole," Vandal Coach Larry Eustachy said. "I've said it all year that outside shooting has been our achilles heal. We just don't have a go-to guy down the stretch."

The game was not as big a blowout as the scoreboard might lead you to think. The Vandals had a 48-47 lead with 7:17 left in the game until the Wolfpack explosion.

The thing that hurt the Vandals was 6-foot-9 inch freshman Deon Watson fouling out right before the run occurred. The only thing that kept the Vandals in the game was their offensive rebounding. The Wolfpack's biggest lead of the game before the blowout was 29-24 at halftime.

"Deon fouling out really hurt us because of the job he was doing on the boards," Eustachy said. "I think lately the officials have been cracking down hard on the physical play and calling things tighter. I thought they called some ticky-tack fouls."

Rick Herrin, Nevada's center who leads the Big Sky in scoring and rebounding, led the Wolfpack with 17 points and 15 rebounds. He had 14 of his rebounds on the defensive glass.

"I don't think Herrin caused us too many problems," Eustachy said. "We told our interior people to play behind him and it got us in foul trouble."

Eustachy also commented on a tenacious zone defense that bothered the Vandals all night. The Wolfpack's plan was to pack in the defense to stop the Vandals strength — their inside power game. It worked as Sammie Freeman was kept to just nine points, Watson five and Stewart four.

"They might have the best defense in the conference," Eustachy said.

The Vandals have four conference games remaining against Montana, Montana State, Eastern Washington and Boise State. With a good showing the Vandals can still finish in third place.

With three of those games at home it looks optimistic for the Vandals to finish behind Montana and Nevada. The time between those games makes the optimistic outlook a little cloudy.

Idaho has to play the University of Montana and Montana State University Sunday and Monday before traveling to Boise State just two days later. The Vandals don't have a chance to take a breath as they host Eastern just three days after Boise State. That makes four games in seven days for Idaho.

"If we finish 11-5 going into the Big Sky Conference tournament, I'll be happy," Eustachy said.

Women drop to 5-7

By TOM BITHELL
Staff Writer

It wasn't a lack of effort that cost the Lady Vandals two Big Sky losses this weekend. It was the inability to get needed baskets down the stretch.

Friday night Montana brought their Big Sky wrecking crew to Moscow looking for their 20th win of the season against three losses. The Lady Griz (21-3, 13-0 after beating Eastern Washington Saturday) have been a dominating force in Big Sky women's basketball since it began in 1983 — winning six of eight championships including the last three in row — and they showed why as they put down a determined Idaho effort 72-52.

Idaho (11-12, 5-7) had lost to Montana 67-50 earlier in Missoula by letting Montana build a 51-25 half-time lead and coast to the final. This time, though, Idaho played a hard first-half and stayed in the game with good defense.

With 2:19 remaining in the half, Montana had built a 30-19 lead and it looked like it might be over early. But Idaho came back to tighten the score.

With 31 seconds remaining Krista Smith hit a shot in the lane to cut the Grizzly lead to five. Then as Montana brought the ball down for a last shot Idaho guard Sherry Peterson stole it away, drove the length of the floor and hit a three-pointer from the top of the key with two seconds showing on the clock. Idaho trailed 30-28.

An upset looked possible early in the second-half. Kelly Moeller opened the scoring with two of her 16 points coming on a turnaround shot that drew a foul, giving Idaho a three-point play and 31-30 lead. It would be Idaho's last.

Dome records tumble in Vandal Indoor Meet

By TOM BITHELL
Staff Writer

Friday night saw the 16th Annual Martin Surfacing Vandal Indoor and five new ASUI/Kibbie Dome records set.

"The meet itself was probably one of the better Vandal Invationals we've put on in the last five years," Idaho Men's Coach Mike Keller said. "The disappointing thing was the lack of UI students."

Indeed few students were present to see Idaho's best run against competitors from schools like the universities of Oregon and Washington as well as independent athletes.

One of the best races took place in the first heat of the 55-meter hurdles when former Vandal and Goodwill Game silver medalist Dan O'Brien matched up against Washington State University's Tony Li, the defending NCAA champion. O'Brien broke out into an early lead and held it as he finished in a record time of 7.18 seconds.

Li wasn't finished, however. In the final heat with O'Brien unable to finish the race, Li ran a 7.15 that broke O'Brien's record the same night it was set.

Records were also set in the women's 55-meters and 1600-meter relay as well as the men's high-jump.

Idaho's Eversley Linley ran his best 800-meter race of the year as he placed first in the event with a time of 1:50 flat. Linley's time was good enough for a provisional NCAA qualification, meaning that if not enough athletes make the automatic time he may be selected to compete.

"He's one of the better 800 runners on the west coast," Keller said. "I still think he has a good chance of getting in the NCAAAs."

Keller was also pleased with his distance runners Mark Olden (mile) and Bernardo Barrios (3,000-meters) who are both running their best heading into the conference meet March 1 and 2 in Pocatello.

"Each week he's getting better and I think he'll be a contender for us at conference," Keller said of Olden.

"Barrios has improved every meet for the last four weeks and has done a great job of getting over the (muscle) tears in his back," Keller said.

While the Vandal men ran mostly at Friday's meet the women ran athletes in both meets. Women's Coach Scott Lorek remains optimistic of his team's chances the Big Sky meet.

"I think this weekend we hopped up looking good all over," Lorek said.

One of the best team performances came from Jackie Ross. As a sophomore Ross has already won a Big Sky title in the triple-jump and a second in the long-jump. Now Ross is running the 55-meters as well and Friday she set a new UI school record with a time of 7.21 that may have even been better had her next heat not had timing problems.

"It doesn't surprise me that she's capable of this kind of time," Lorek said. "Her speed is just a lot better."

half points made sure of that.

The Vandals on the other hand couldn't get a basket in the clutch and it cost them a possible victory. Montana's 82 percent second-half shooting made the difference as Idaho shot a cold 24 percent, and couldn't take advantage of numerous opportunities to cut the lead.

Saturday against Montana State (17-7, 10-3) Idaho found the key to scoring the big bucket. However, this time it came a second too late in a 67-65 loss.

MSU came out with a full-court press and built a 12 point lead at 31-19 with 4:51 to play. But again Idaho went on a run to close in on the Bobcat lead 35-29 at the half.

With 59 seconds left to play MSU led 66-57. A Kelly Moeller seven-footer a second later brought Idaho within seven. Twelve seconds later Moeller hit her first three-pointer of the season and Idaho trailed 66-62. Following one made free-throw for MSU Idaho's Dawn Sievers nailed a three-pointer with 15 seconds remaining to set the score at 67-65.

The Vandals got one last chance at victory. After MSU missed another free-throw Hettie DeJong fired a shot that banked off the glass and through the net. But the ball was shot just as the buzzer sounded.

Idaho loss moves tourney closer to Missoula

Plan on attending the 1991 Big Sky Conference basketball tournament? Well pack your bags because Missoula is your destination.

Idaho's loss to Nevada on Saturday almost finalized the inevitable as the Montana Grizzlies will have to lose two of their last three games to relinquish the host role in the tournament.

Idaho has not accepted their label as an underdog going into a tournament that they have won the previous two years. But those tournaments were held in the all-familiar confines of the Boise State University Pavilion where the Vandals love to play.

The Vandals are sporting a healthy 7-3 record in their last 10 games at the Pavilion and one of their losses came to UNLV in the 1989 NCAA Tournament.

Unfortunately Toto, we're not in Kansas anymore. Or Boise, for that matter.

Yes, we are heading to Missoula. Where the men are men and the sheep are nervous. Larry Eustachy will probably join the likes of the sheep by the time March 7 roles around. Idaho's record in their last ten games in Missoula is 2-8, including a 67-62 loss this season.

The Vandal doubters are chomping at the bit and are anxiously awaiting their chance to jump on the Idaho faithless bandwagon. I realize it will be overcrowded, but I am sure they will all find a place to sit comfortably.

I have shown a lot of faith in Idaho team this season and several people have stated their doubts in my judgement together with the Vandals ability to win the conference.

Matt
Lawson Opinion

Idaho fans can't count the Vandals out yet but they are warming up their calculators. The remaining schedule figures to let Idaho head into the tournament with a number three seed.

The first three seeds are consistent, but the last three spots in the six-team tournament are entirely up for grabs. Boise State stands in fourth place with a 6-6 record after two big wins this weekend and looks like one of the favorites to join Montana, Nevada, and Idaho. Montana State (6-7), Idaho State (6-8), and Weber State (5-7), will battle for the final two spots.

Eastern Washington, 4-8, is a long shot and with games at Montana and Idaho still on the Eagles schedule they should start recruiting for next season. Northern Arizona, 1-11, was out of it a month ago.

Montana State and Weber State should join Boise State and Idaho as the teams that play in the first round on March 7. Idaho and Montana State will survive the first round, but things will get more difficult from there. Idaho will have to play Nevada in the second round, a team that beat them twice this season. In defense of the Vandals they have the success from the last two tournaments on their minds and Nevada may find it tougher to beat Idaho three straight times.

No predictions on the tournament for now, but look for Idaho and Montana to battle it out for a chance to play UNLV in the first round of the NCAA tournament. What a promising opportunity! I hope the winner enjoys their Big Sky crown because they won't enjoy playing the Rebels.

>NEW KIDS

dream date at Disneyland with Kirk Cameron. Not counting their accompanying mothers, the average age of the crowd was about 12. The New Kids didn't help to keep the noise level down. After every song, someone in the band would complain: "I can't hear you." These guys had to be deaf.

"He also forgot where he was, shouting 'Are you ready to party Spokane?'"

Despite the verbal abuse lashed out at the New Kids day in and day out, they put on a show free of overdone instrumentals, boring intermissions and, believe it or not, lip-synching. At no point in the show did it appear that the band was not live in every sense of the word. No, the Kids did everything short of playing instruments.

The show did have its downfalls. At times, youngest member Joe McIntyre was a bit too flamboyant and almost feminine with his constant pelvic thrusts and his continuing cry of "I love you all very much." And Wahlberg often contradicted his moralistic diatribe by grabbing his crotch and revealing his underwear. He also forgot where he was, shouting "Are you ready to party Spokane?"

However, had I enjoyed the quirky pop music they stand for, the New Kids show would have ranked among the best of the several dozen concerts I have seen. But, as it was, I wished I was 12 and of the opposite gender. Then I would have really had a good time.

AND NOW, SOME EXCERPTS FROM VALENTINE'S DAY:

DEAR CUPCAKE, BE MY JELLO LOVER. YOURS FOR A ZILLION YEARS, LUST BUNNY.

HEY, SPOOK--THAT GIRL YOU'VE HAD A CRUSH ON FOR THREE YEARS JUST VISITED THE GUY NEXT DOOR WITH A DOZEN ROSES.

(SHE WAS WEARING NOTHING BUT A TRENCH COAT.)

HEY, HOMER--IT'S THAT GIRL YOU ASKED OUT LAST SEMESTER, CALLING TO SAY SHE'S STILL GLAD SHE REJECTED YOU.

(SHE SAYS SHE STILL CAN'T BELIEVE A TOTAL NERD LIKE YOU ASKED HER OUT TO SHOP FOR SPATULAS.)

MAKE YOU EVER NOTICED HOW THIN OUR WALLS ARE?

Should up.

Sigh.

THERE'S SOMETHING ABOUT THEM, THOUGH...
L.A.Z.O.M.I.A.S.
SOMETHING SPECIAL AND BEAUTIFUL...
B.A.D.O.M.B.A.S.T.
SOMETHING WORTHY OF LOVE, ROMANCE, AND EMOTION...
S.B.A.S.T.
