Idaho student fees to increase by 6 percent

By MAREEN BARTLETT
News Editor

Fees for the University of Idaho and all of Idaho's colleges and universities will increase by 6 percent next year, according to a ruling by the Idaho State Board of Education last Thursday.

Full-time undergraduate in-state students will pay $1,236 to attend the university next year, a $70 increase from what students are currently paying. This increase was cut from the 6.9 percent increase that UI President Elisabeth Zinser had originally asked for.

Out of the four state presidents of Idaho's four-year universities, Zinser was the only president to request a fee hike more than 6.1 percent — last year's consumer price index. Her reasons for seeking a fee hike of 6.9 percent included the university's need to move ahead aggressively in support of its student services and general education classes.

Consistent with its tradition of treating all four-year schools similarly, the board's finance committee cut Zinser's request down to 6 percent, an across-the-board figure.

ASUI President Mike Gotch argued for an even further cut, down to the 4.9 percent CPI from March of 1990 to March of 1991, which he cited from the Wall Street Journal. Such a decrease would have cut the increase by

Gotch also argued that the matriculation fee, or the Institutional Maintenance Fee, a fee whose profits are supposed to go exclusively to the Physical Plant fund, should be cut.

"In actuality, the IMF increases approved by the state board have been transferred or reallocated by the university to other university budgets," Gotch said.

Referring to the law that prohibits Idaho universities from charging tuition, Gotch asserted that the university had illegally transferred from the Physical Plant budget to various university departments.

According to figures presented by Gotch, the matriculation fee has increased 3,000 percent over the last 10 years, while the Physical Plant budget has increased a mere 61 percent.

State Board Executive Director Raymond Barton of Boise refuted Gotch's claims, guaranteeing the legality of the accounting transfers.

Ironically, while student leaders at the university are protesting the fee increase, students at Idaho State University want the board to increase the school's fee hike to 7.2 percent, which was the figure originally proposed by the school's administration.

Increased fees would help to accommodate growth at ISU, which has grown 40 percent in the last three years and is expected to keep growing.

Chancellor proposal killed by state board

By MAREEN BARTLETT
News Editor

The proposed plan to create a chancellor position to oversee the Idaho university presidents and to coordinate the institutions within Idaho, was voted down Thursday afternoon by the Idaho State Board of Education.

The proposed creation of a 12-member task force to make recommendations for the position was defeated by a five to three margin. The proposal for the task force came from member Keith Hinckley. It would have been composed of four lawmakers, presidents of the state's four-year schools and four others, responsible for recommending how Idaho's university's leadership should be controlled and governed.

One of the decision the task force was to make was to determine whether or not the board should elevate its executive director to the chancellor position.

The defeat of the task force proposal leaves the presidents of all four-year schools in Idaho in their present situation of reporting directly to the board.

While the idea of a review system and coordinator did not appeal to the majority of the board, board President Gary Fay of Twin Falls voted for the proposal with the idea of coordinating Idaho's universities and colleges while saving them money at the same time.

"The proposal was a triple proposal, and two of the three proposals did pass," Fay said.

These two included authorizing universities and the board members to increase activity and responsibilities in conducting day-to-day activities, and to revise the board's agenda to make it more compact and work on broader cases concerning Idaho's higher education.

As far as future plans for the chancellorship, Fay said that the proponents will wait until the other two provisions have been implemented and are in control to see what they accomplish, and to see whether or not they accomplish the goal of coordination.

COLOMBIAN FILM-MAKER TO SPEAK. Marta Rodriguez, one of Latin America's most noted documentary film makers, will screen and talk about three of her films that will be presented April 24 at the E.J. Iddings Agricultural Science Building Auditorium on the WSU campus.

"Chircales" (The Brickmakers) will show at 3:30 p.m., followed by Nacer de Nuevo (To Be Reborn) and at 7 p.m. "Amor, Mujeres y Flores" (Love, Women and Flowers).

STUDENTS HOLD RECITALS. Emily Kelther, mezzo soprano and Sharon Payne, flute, will give a student recital at 4:30 p.m. Wednesday afternoon. David Bobeck, saxophone, will also perform a student recital at 8 p.m. Wednesday.

Both recitals will be held in the Lionel Hampton School of Music Building and are free and open to the public.

UI ORCHESTRA IN CONCERT. The UI Orchestra will perform a concert in the University Auditorium Thursday at 8 p.m. The concert is free and open to the public.

PROFESSOR RETIREMENT RECEPTION. A retirement reception for Distinguished Professor of Political Science Amos Yoder will be held at the Sweet Avenue House on Thursday from 4 to 6 p.m.

ASUI PRESENTS 'SALAAM BOMBAY!' Winner of the Cannes Film Festival's coveted Camera D'Or Award, "Salaam Bombay!" is the story of a 10-year-old boy who is abandoned on the streets of Bombay.

This ASUI Productions film will be shown Thursday at 7 p.m. in the SUB Borah Theater.

PUBLIC HEARING HELD. A public hearing at which you may be present and speak will be conducted before the mayor and city council of the city of Moscow at which time the council will consider a proposal by the UI to relocate the curb on the west side of Rayburn Street between Paradise Creek and State Highway 8, 14 feet to the east of its present location. If approved, this action would result in the narrowing of the street from 44-feet to 30-feet. On-street parking would not be permitted on this section of Rayburn Street.

The hearing will be held May 6 at 8 p.m. in the Council Chambers of City Hall, 122 East Fourth Street.

Earth Day environmentally enlightening

By JEFF KAPOSTASY
Staff Writer

The Palouse-Clearwater Environmental Institute encouraged Moscow residents to think globally and act locally this Earth Day.

"Kick the Oil Habit" was the theme used to describe the activities and events for the second annual Bike or Walk Day. The event was co-sponsored by the PCEI and the local chapter of the Sierra Club and encouraged people to begin walking and biking in a more ecologically aware direction.

People who traded their cars for a walk or a bike ride in the spirit of Earth Day were helped along by booths set up at Friendship Square, the Moscow Food Co-op and the Key Bank. These locations provided encouragement, refreshments and drawings for prizes. Local bike shops gave free inspections and minor adjustments. At the end of the day, there was entertainment and speakers to keep the spirit alive. The mayor of Moscow was also presented with a petition signed by 200 people asking for more biking facilities, a system of bike paths and a citizen's committee for bicycle transportation awareness. Money for the events was donated by local businesses. All this was done to encourage people to save energy and the environment.

"Ideally, we'd like to see people bike or walk to work at least once a week," says Bike or Walk co-chairman Diane Prorak. "Last year, the involvement in the activity was pretty good even though the weather was bad. Hopefully, the weather will be nicer this year and we'll have even more involvement," Prorak said.

Prorak got her wish.

"Participation was great this year," said the other Bike or Walk chairman Ed Clark. "The 200 signatures for the petition may really get results. The mayor said the best way to get something done is to have a petition. If people walked or biked more often, there'd be a lot less pollution and traffic."

Class in surrealism questions common sense, challenges normalcy

By ANDREA VOGT
News Editor

Next fall the foreign language department will offer a class a little out of the ordinary. Although the course could be titled "Specific instructions on how to try and change the world, shake up society, and reflect on what life is all about," it is actually a modern French literature class which will focus on the surrealist movement from 1924 to the present surrealist influences.

Surrealism was a movement which swept through France between 1924 and the early '30s. Led mainly by fanatic André Breton (one of 40 or 50 regular advocates) the movement refused to accept anything as given and challenged the establishment and the world to change their ways of thinking. Surrealism had hundreds of followers until there was a split in the movement after the Bolshevik Revolution tempted many to join the Communist Party.

Carrying with them such slogans as: "The real state is the dreaming state and being awake is interfering with our reality," Surrealists considered themselves creative artists who wanted revolutionary changes in their world and in people's minds.

Their somewhat radical premises prompted accusations of "screwed-up imaginations." Surrealists claimed that rather their imaginations being screwed up it was reality which was screwed up, and that people should be questioning common sense.

revolution in the '60s, as many of the slogans representing the feelings of that time were borrowed from surrealism. In a conversation with Andre Breton's wife during the student protests in May 1968, only a few years after Breton's death, Rose quoted her as saying: "If Andre had been here now he would have said this is what surrealism would have been."

Rose described one of the reasons for the course was to inspire students to "take time out to reflect on what it's all about."

The course is listed as Modern French Literature and translation, it is a 300 level course and is offered to both French speaking and non-French speaking students.

"The real state is the dreaming state and being awake is interfering with our reality."

— André Breton
Surrealist Leader

Instructing the class will be associate professor of French, Alan Rose, who has been doing research on Surrealism for many years.

"The thing that really turned me on to this (Surrealism) was here was a group of vibrant young people in the middle of a World War who said no to everything," Rose said.

Rose said some of the class will focus on the student protests and

'Greenstock' pulled off, but unorganized

It looks as if Greenstock turned out OK, despite all the hype. Those who attended seemed to have no complaints about how the party turned out, even without the advertised 30 bands, and beer that was to be provided by the organizers for a small fee.

However, with a little cooperation on the part of the organizers and the Whitman County Sheriff's Office, the concert could have been the event of the year.

By Friday afternoon, confusion had set in as to whether Greenstock was on or off. It had already been changed from its original venue at the North South Ski Bowl in Benewah County. Then at the last minute, organizers canceled the event totally after apparently being warned of possible criminal charges and a civil suit from Whitman County.

Despite media reports of the official cancellation, more than 1,000 people managed to get past police road blocks and make their way to the site, a 15-acre parcel of private property near Boyer Park.

The organizers managed to rope off areas of the property that were dangerous, set up trash bins and post signs warning those attending the event not to drink and drive. This had to take organization, and it is hard to understand why these people could not get organized enough to obtain the permits needed to make the concert legal in the early stages of planning.

And what about the 500 plus who bought the Greenstock medallions at $10 each? These were supposed to cover admission to the 30-band concert.

"Greenstock" as it was, turned out to be a private party, without an admission charge.

With rumors flying about how the Whitman County Sheriff's Office would handle the event, and who would and would not be arrested, many who would have attended were intimidated into making other plans. As a result, most who attended were not from the area.

Obviously there is interest in having Greenstock, and it looks as if it is possible to have it without having uncontrolled, irresponsible drinking.

The police made no arrests at the site, there were no fights, and the property was cleaner when the group left than when they got there.

Now that the water has been tested, hopefully organizers will make Greenstock even bigger and better next year.

Educational decline did not start at top

Some time ago I expressed my opinions about the deterioration of undergraduate teaching and the shift toward indifference that has coaxed most professors into caring more about research than the welfare of living, breathing students.

Chuck Brootway
Commentary

This is indeed the case, tragically. But the educational corrosion didn't only begin at the top, in universities. It began at the bottom as well, eating its way through our elementary schools, middle schools and high schools. Most liberal "thinkers" have consistently blamed the degradation on lack of public school funding, but the true culprit is a lack of public school caring. Funding alone will not create caring.

In hopes of squelching the destructive spread of apathy, the Bush administration unveiled its new plan for educational reform last Thursday. If or when the reforms begin to have an effect, the nation will see whether the "education president" has lived up to the self-imposed title.

Fortunately, the plan avoids the temptation to smother problems with money. Unfortunately, it does little more than pay lip service to those localized attempts at reform that can at best be called unique. Programs like public vouchers, corporate-sponsored private schools and limited competition among public schools are achieving only sporadic success, mainly because they are only minor steps toward an invalid goal. It is time to stop pruning the weeds and pull them out by the roots.

If Bush feels a deep passion for academic excellence, he must go beyond mere publicity. He and Education Secretary Lamar Alexander must realize that until the public school monopoly is crushed and until educational choice is entirely in the hands of the parents, American schools will continue their decade-long swirl into the pit of mediocrity.

The public school system, like most monopolies, breeds apathy and inefficiency by its very nature. Parents who are disgusted with the performance of their "assigned" public schools but can't afford the private school fee are helpless. They can do little more than watch as their child receives an education in mediocrity. They have no choice. They can govern what their children eat, what they watch, what they hear and who they socialize with. But control of their children's education, the most significant influence in their lives, is

Marriott, students should solve waste problem

Editor;

As one of those students who is concerned about the amount of disposable plastic that the SUB and the Satellite SUB generate, I am gratified by Marriott's willingness to find a solution to the problem. However, Marriott's Mike Thomsen's assertion that it would be impossible to shift to reasonable dishes and utensils at the Satellite SUB because of space restrictions doesn't take into account the possible addition of space for a scullery.

The real crunch, as I see it, is Marriott doesn't want to sacrifice its profit margin, which is certainly a reasonable point of view, but the sacrifice of the environment and limited landfill space for their profitability is not a reasonable point of view.

To solve the problems which confront this society, and indeed the earth in general, we must be able to solve them at the community level. Here we are faced with a waste management problem the UI community in concert with Marriott should be able to solve, and the earth will thank us for it.

Fees should be kept low for future students

Editor;

In Friday's Argonaut, Matt Lawson asked the question, "What does $100 in four years" of student fee increases amount to, other than chewing gum money. He asserts that we should not complain about fee increases.

For most of the UI's over 100-year history, students fought to keep fees low. We truly are indebted to those who fought so that education could be as affordable as it is today.

Yes, we should work to see that fee increases are kept to a minimum. Not just for ourselves, but also for future generations of students who will be working to scrape enough money together to attend the UI. By the way, if fees were increased $100 every four years, our fees would be $2,500 a semester. Get the big picture?!

—Mike Gotch
ASUI President

Religious beliefs should not be forced on minority

Editor;

An opinion in the April 16 issue of the Argonaut asked a question — "How can you avoid religion in the schools?" The answer is simple. We may avoid religion being taught in the schools if we protect the rights of all citizens in this country, and if we do not force the beliefs of one group of people upon everyone else.

The writer claimed that our nation has declined because religious teaching and Christian values have been removed from the Student concerned about assaults in dorm

Editor:

Three young women from my hall have been sexually assaulted by the same man in the past three weeks. Until the third one, who happened to be a friend of mine, I knew nothing about it. Now, I wonder if there are any other girls who have been attacked, but haven't reported it. If there are more, please, please report it. The more information the police have, the better the chances are of catching him.

The appalling thing is not the attacks, though their impact should not be down played; it is the fact that they have taken place either on my hall or in the back staircase. Then, there's the response of the university.

In the course of reporting and researching these attacks, we discovered that Nightwatch, billed as a protective service, locks our doors at 11 p.m. but unlocks them at 3 a.m. because they are only on duty until 5 a.m. and it takes over an hour to unlock all the doors. Supposedly, Nightwatch patrols the dorms throughout the night. Well, where were they when my friend was trapped in that stairwell with that maniac?! And to think that I never gave a thought to my security because I trusted Nightwatch.

In the interest of protecting the other girls on my hall, I brought the subject up at a hall meeting. I then discovered that the R.A.s knew all about it, but due to a confidentiality policy, they couldn't tell the rest of us! I don't need to know who the girls were, or any of the details, but I should have been warned about that stairwell. I can't count the number of times I have gaily skipped up those stairs, alone, at night, without even a second thought! I still use those stairs, but now I'm a lot more aware of my surroundings.

A proposed solution to the problem is to lock the back stairs and allow me one to use them. I am strongly opposed to this. My dorm room is my home, and that staircase is one of the entrances to my home. Why should I be denied its use because some pervert likes to hang out there and masturbate in front of hapless young women?! Locking the door is fine, but give me a key!

The police have posted composite drawings of this young man. Please, everyone, take a good look at these posters and then help the Moscow Police, the only people involved who have behaved as professionals, find this jerk. It is time for us to get angry! Security in the dorms must be improved, and the only way to do that is for us to write letters, make phone calls and change things!

Spring arrives in Moscow, along with a word of caution

By DIANA KOTTKEY, R.N.
Student Health

Spring is here. Our thoughts turn to blue sky, flowers and romance. Sally and Rick were going out on a blind date. Sally's friend had made arrangements for the date. She assured Sally that Rick was a great guy. The date was a kegger at the picnic grounds by Moon Lake.

The conversation was going well, they had a lot of things in common. They laughed, talked and had a few beers. Sally drank more than she realized. She was dizzy and decided to lie down. Rick said he would take her for a walk. Sally barely remembers being taken down the trail around the lake. The next thing Sally knew, Rick was removing her clothing and had raped her. He was so strong that Sally could not fight him off and she did try very hard to get Rick to quit. She was very frightened and crying. She became angry and left asking some friends to take her home.

Rick could not understand what was wrong with Sally. She was happy to be with him, smiling at him and talking the whole time. She looked very sexy in those short shorts and halter top. It seemed like she wanted to do it with him, but as things progressed she became very upset. You could tell by the way she dressed and how she acted that she wanted to do it. Rick did not understand what the struggle was all about.

Date or acquaintance rape is forced, manipulated or coerced sexual intercourse by a friend or an acquaintance. It is an act of aggression, power and violence. A woman is forced to have sex through verbal coercion, threats, physical restraint or physical violence. Her protests are ignored by the perpetrator.

Date or acquaintance rape often is accompanied by use of alcohol or drugs. Social inhibitions and cognitive thought processes are decreased with the use of alcohol while physiological sexual function may be hindered. Women are often accused of giving men the wrong idea or in some way appearing seductive.

Rape itself has serious psychological ramifications for life.

Women often do not seek assistance or tell others about the rape due to shame and guilt. They suffer devastating effects alone and in silence for many years. By reporting rapes, the woman is assisting others. Sexual offenders will often repeat crimes if they are not stopped. Call the police, University Women's Center or come to Student Health Center if you have been raped. The questions asked may be uncomfortable, but are very necessary to apprehend the assailant.

Not only is there the danger of pregnancy with date or acquaintance rape but also the danger of receiving sexually transmitted diseases is present. Pregnancy can threaten your life both physically and psychologically. Sexually transmitted diseases can cause discomfort, pain, sterility, blindness and death.

Some tips to avoid acquaintance rape include:

Women

- Know your sexual desires and limits. You have the right to set those limits and STOP!

- Talk very clearly about those limits. Say NO and mean NO! Don't be polite, be assertive. Passiveness is often interpreted as permission to go ahead.

- Don't be vulnerable: watch what is going on around you.

- Trust yourself. If you feel pressured to have unwanted sex, your feelings are probably valid. Listen to your intuition.

- Avoid excess alcohol and drugs. You become vulnerable, unable to think or act effectively. Communication becomes a problem.

Men

- Know your sexual desires and limits. Communicate openly. It's OK not to "score."

- If you are turned down for sex, don't take it personally. Remember your actions are within your control even if desire is strong.

- Accept no. Don't continue after a NO!

- Don't assume sex just because a woman is dressed in a sexy outfit or flirts with you.

- If you received previous permission for sex, don't assume that applies to this situation.

- Avoid excess use of alcohol and drugs. It interferes with clear

Idaho baseball club takes three from BSU

By MATT LAWSON
Sports Editor

Winning close games is the key for any baseball team. The University of Idaho practiced the art of winning those games to perfection this weekend as they won three games, each by one run, to take a four-game series from Boise State.

Idaho played a doubleheader Saturday and took both games by the scores of 6-5 in extra innings, and 7-6.

Rich Schaeffer led the Vandal hitting attack with a 3-for-4 performance and scored two runs. Dave Schwartz had two hits and Dean Diffin had two RBI to support Schaeffer's effort.

Bob Demontigny went the distance for Idaho to get the win as the Vandals played eight innings instead of the usual seven due to a tie game at the end of the seventh inning.

Schwartz continued his contribution to the Vandal team with a pitching win in the second game along with a two-run home run. Schaeffer picked up the save in relief of Schwartz while Nate Diaz had three hits and two RBIs.

Sunday the Vandals again hosted a doubleheader and took the opener 11-10 before losing the final game of the series 14-11.

Craig Knott got the win for the Vandals with help from two hits by Daryl Peterson and Schwartz. Brett Lolley knocked in Schaeffer with the winning run on a triple in the last inning.

Idaho's defense fell apart in the last game committing nine errors to allow 11 unearned runs to score.

John Konrad had two hits including a two-run homer to pace the Vandals.

Idaho upped its record to 12-9 on the season and continued to dominate Boise State. The Vandals are now 6-1 against the Broncos this season.

"I wish we could play BSU every game," Vandal coach Kevin Driscoll said. "We're hitting the ball a lot better now. We are trying to prepare for the Big Sky Tournament in two weeks."

Vandal tennis players struggle at tournament

By CHRISTOPHER GATEWOOD
Staff Writer

Going into the Big Sky Conference Tennis Championships this weekend at Idaho State, Vandal Tennis Coach Dave Scott knew it wasn't going to be easy. The Vandals hadn't played a match in nearly two weeks and basically hadn't practiced because of bad weather and lack of scheduled time in the ASUI/Kibbie Dome. But not even Scott could have predicted the brutal beating the his team would receive in the face of the strongest field in years.

"I hadn't seen all the teams and players because we didn't play everybody in our conference," Scott said. "I had heard from the coaches to watch out, but I never expected the talent level to be as high as it was."

Because of the talent level, no Vandal player made it past the first round in singles except for Patricia Shanander, the Vandals number one player, who made it to the quarterfinals. She received two byes and won her third round match against Kim Wertenberger, but was then dominated in the quarterfinals by Idaho State freshman Rebecca Smith 6-2, 6-3.

"Smith is just an unbelievable talent, she has every shot in the book," Scott said. "She isn't very big but I've seen few players recently who hit the ball as hard as she does and still maintain excellent control."

It was the Vandal men, however, who had the toughest day of all. Coming into the tournament hopes were high. No. 1 player Scott Andersen was coming out of his mid-season slump and had been playing well. No. 2 Magnus Orrod was having an outstanding year and his confidence was high and No. 4 Larry Gresham was red-hot with an 11-match winning streak.

All that ended in a hurry as Andersen was beaten by Weber State's Johan Standberg 6-2, 6-3; Orrod lost in three tough sets to Nevada's Juha Sirelius 6-2, 5-7, 6-4; and Gresham was defeated by Scott Potter of Montana State 6-2, 6-3.

"I think everybody's confidence was low throughout the whole tournament," Andersen said. "Losing to Boise State the day before hurt us. I didn't feel good about how I played."

"We weren't ready for this," Orrod said. "We didn't have enough practice or a tough enough schedule to be ready for something like this. Weber and Nevada have been playing schools like Utah, New Mexico, BYU and schools from California. I also played as bad as I ever remember playing."

Idaho's No. 3 player, Jose Palacios, was also defeated handily by Tony Matkulak of Nevada 6-1, 6-1.

Perhaps the biggest surprise for the Vandals was the play of Palacios and Gresham in doubles. The two hadn't played together all season but were thrown together for the championships. They meshed together in a hurry and won two matches before losing in the quarterfinals to Tarn Callis and Jim Cripe of Montana State 6-2, 7-5.

The men's and women's champions were both repeat performers from last year. Lani Hunsaker of Weber State who is ranked among the top 40 in the nation defeated Smith in the finals 6-4, 0-6, 6-3 and Mike Tebbut of Northern Arizona

Former Vandals gather for benefit game

By CHRISTOPHER GATEWOOD
Staff Writer

The cause is victim's rights and the effect is basketball. The two don't usually go together but they will Friday night at 6:30 at Moscow Junior High as former Vandals get together with Latah County players and coaches in the second annual Victim's Rights basketball game.

The cost to get in will be just $1 and proceeds will go for video and audio to help abused children. The interview process for court cases is very traumatic and the new equipment will help alleviate some of that.

"The new equipment will take the burden of many kids," Gwen Spence, of the prosecuting attorney's office, who is helping to head this program. "We interview kids now, but the new equipment will allow the process to be much easier. Many times the interview process has been done more than once and we want to stop that."

Last year the tournament raised about $500 dollars and this year the county is hoping to make a little more. Last year the admission charge was $2 for everyone over 12 and free for anyone else. By charging a dollar to everyone, the county is hoping to make a little more money.

"The whole idea is for everyone to have a good time and for us to make a little money along the way," Spence said.

If the game was anything like last year's, everyone should go home with a smiling face. Besides having former Vandals in the game, Latah County Prosecuting Attorney Craig Moorman will play along with Judge William Hamlett and John Weber of Budweiser Distributors.

Latah County coaches and players will include Dennis Jensen, Head Coach of Deary High School; Matt Kobe of Moscow High; Ron Lovell of Potlatch High; and Lance Hanson of Troy High. The players, who will be all seniors, will include Brian Loomis and Bernie Zimmerman of Moscow High School, Chris Miller and Joey Kirk of Deary High School, Jon Whitcraft and Dustin Aherrin of Genesee High School, Joel Karley and Brian Pope of Troy High School, Ron Morgan of Kendrick High and Brian Pope of Potlatch High School.

"I'm really looking forward to this game," Loomis said. "I've never played against this kind of competition and I'm looking forward to the challenge."

The challenge will definitely be there because a fine cast of former Vandals has been assembled. From the 1980-91 Vandals there will be Ricardo Boyd, Leonard Perry, Cliff Martin and Sennie Freeman. Representing the 1989-90 Vandals will be Dan Allena, Cesar Prewer and perhaps the biggest star of them all; Ode Livingston. "Sweet O," as he is known, was All Big Sky Conference as a senior when he was fourth in the nation in assists at 8.5 a game. He was the highlight show of last year's game when he scored 48 points.

"I was doing things in last year's game that I didn't think I could do," Livingston said. "I mean, I surprised myself. I was hitting three pointers and scoring from all over the place."

The Vandals are mixed up among the coaches and high school players and two teams are made. Last year's game was a thriller as the team led by Prewer won when he hit a three pointer at the buzzer to lift his squad to a 97-96 win.

"I couldn't believe the shot he hit," Livingston said. "He must have hit it from about 30 feet."

Besides the game there will be a free-throw shooting contest at halftime in which three contestants picked at random from the audience from three different age groups will compete for such prizes as a $70 dollar gift certificate from Frenage, a $30 dollar gift certificate from The Broker, a $25 dollar gift certificate from Lamont's and other prizes from Sams' Subs and Aloha Ten and Video.

Tom Morris, the voice of the Vandals on KRFL radio, will also be on hand for the public address announcing duties.

"I can really appreciate an event like this because I have kids," Morris said. "I think this whole event says something good about the community as a whole."

■ UI TRIATHLON

Allen Wright dominated the competition as he won the overall individual competition with a time of 2:06:19. Tracy Whitehead won the women's individual title with a time 2:41:40.

The team of Webb, McLaughlin and Thomas won the men's team title with a time of 2:10:36 while the team of Fealing, Hall and Britten finished second with a time of 2:12:26. The women's team champion consisted of Reicher, Danstraven and Prewer with a time of 2:42:25 while the team of Barry, Plaster and Madson won the mixed team competition with a 2:28:22.

■ SOCCER CLUBS

UI International set-up the soccer team from Walla Walla College Sunday afternoon, handing the visitors a 4-3 late morning loss before the UI Club team drubbed them 6-2.

Steve Williams added two goals for the UI while Hugo Flores and Ahmad Fashi had one goal each. Flores, Mike Rodriguez and Tim Tear all had assists for Idaho.

Scott Livingston and Jeremy Salzman led the way for the UI Club team as they combined for three goals and three assists in the victory. Solomon scored his two goals in the second half while Livingston converted his score in the first half. J.P. Schell had one goal and one assist for Idaho while Chad Briggs and Jeff Vance contributed one goal each to the Vandal cause.

Defensive line shines in scrimmage

By MATT LAWSON
Sports Editor

The offense for the University of Idaho Vandal football team has started to come around as spring practice winds down for the Vandals.

Unfortunately for the offensive players, the defense has progressed at a rate equal to, if not better than their counterparts.

The progress of the defense showed in Idaho's second scrimmage of the spring season as they recorded 12 sacks and forced two turnovers while limiting the offense to only one drive over 55 yards.

Junior defensive end Billy Sims came back from missing one week of practice with a neck strain to record 4.5 of the defenses sacks and six total tackles.

"He's (Sims) got the ability to rush the passer," Vandal Head Coach John L. Smith said. "He had a strong performance."

Idaho's offensive line has been slowed by injuries this spring and it showed in their performance on Saturday.

"We didn't protect the passer real well," Smith said. "We have to be more consistent on offense, especially on the front."

As a result of the lack of depth on offensive line, the Vandal coaching staff moved defensive lineman Jay Lukes to the offensive line last week. Lukes has quickly responded to his move and Smith is pleased with his progress.

"He made the most significant gains of anyone last week," Smith said. "He is one guy that stands out in my mind."

Despite the constant pressure from the defensive line, quarterback Doug Nussmeier still managed to have an impressive outing. The sophomore from Lake Oswego, Ore., completed 10 of 14 passes for 136 yards and two touchdowns.

"Nussmeier really executed well today," Smith said. "He did a great job. He was moving around well and picking out his targets."

Idaho's receivers were much-improved from the previous week as they rebounded to catch 17 passes for 260 yards and three touchdowns.

Ella Al'ilima-Daley had his best effort of the spring with four catches for 85 yards including a 29-yard touchdown reception from Nussmeier on the first drive of the scrimmage.

Nathan Hamilton had five receptions for 63 yards while Yo Murphy continued to impress Smith with four catches for 40 yards including a 10-yard touchdown from Nussmeier.

"Yo has had a great spring," Smith said. "He's worked hard and gotten better all spring."

Freshman redshirt Wind Henderson anchored the running game for the offense as he carried the ball 14 times for a total of 62 yards. Henderson also scored two touchdowns on two four-yard runs to cap drives of 55 and 35 yards.

"He's getting tougher," Smith said on Henderson's improvement. "He's running north and south instead of dancing as much."

Linebacker Will Sells led the defense with nine tackles and a pass deflection while Josh Moore and Jason Riddick had six tackles each. Jeff Robinson and Kyle Russell complimented Sims with two sacks each while Mat Groshong had one sack and a fumble recovery.

Greg Hill had the only interception of the scrimmage after the defense had four interceptions in the previous scrimmage.

Senior kicker Thomas Doyle converted all three of his extra point attempts and drilled a 33-yard field goal.

Smith noted that the intensity of the team improved Saturday after a lackluster performance in the previous week's scrimmage.

"We had a good week of practice last week," Smith said. "They got after it."

Idaho escaped the scrimmage without any significant injuries and Smith accentuated the ability to play outside on the grass a big factor.

Idaho will wrap up their spring practice with the annual Silver and Gold game Friday at 7 p.m.

"We're hurting as far as depth goes," Smith said. "We might have guys go both ways to fill in positions."

McKain signs with Vandals

Vandal Head Men's Basketball Coach Larry Eustachy has announced that Jason McKain of New Orleans has signed a letter of intent to attend the University of Idaho next fall.

McKain, a 6-foot tall point guard, led St. Augustine High School to a 60-3 record over the last two years while averaging 12 points, more than five assists and four steals a game.

He comes to Idaho with a 3.1 grade point average and will graduate in the top 10 percent of his class.

McKain's career high is 28 points during his sophomore year and he averaged 25 points during a tournament to earn most valuable player honors.

Idaho has now signed four players to National Letters of Intent, as McKain joins point guards Scott Matthews and Andre Whitney, along with forward Chummy McBride.

Ross continues success

The University of Idaho track women finished higher than teams got caught up in a battle of giants in Pullman this weekend and it showed.

Idaho's men lost to Washington State University 136-16 and the University of Oregon 129-29 in the dual meet, while the women lost 101-30 to WSU and 106-26 to the UO.

WSU and UO, both national track powers and old rivals, battled for pride, while the smaller Vandal squads competed for individual achievement.

The only Idaho win of the day came in the women's triple-jump where sophomore Jackie Ross continued to dominate with a jump of 41-feet-1 1/2-inches, a new Mooberry Stadium record. Ross has yet to lose in 11 regular season competitions in the triple-jump and she is also a top long-jumper. This weekend in Eugene, where the Idaho women will face the Ducks again, Ross will compete in her first heptathlon.

Idaho's Karen McCloskey finished second in the 100-meter hurdles for the women, while Kristi Becker (100-meters) and Kim Gillas (400-meters) earned third place finishes. No other UI women finished higher than third, as the WSU women won both their dual meets, including a 79-57 score over the UO.

Idaho's men fared no better against the Pac-10 competition as their best finishes came in the 200 and 1500-meters.

Eric Haynes finished behind WSU's Augustin Olobia's 20.94 in the 100-meters at 21.11 followed by teammate Stephen Lewis's 21.33. Olobia was an NCAA indoor champion in the 55-meters, finishing ahead of Notre Dame's Raghieb "Rocket" Ismail.

Lewis was a hopeful in the 100-meters for Idaho, but WSU's George Ogbeide, a former Vandal, ran a 10.27, and Olobia a 10.32, and Lewis had to settle for third with a time of 10.41.

The Vandal men's only other second place finish came from Mark Olden in the 1500-meters with a time of 3:48.01.

No other Vandal man finished higher than third, as the WSU men also swept their duals, beating UO 111-52.

Idaho's men will take next weekend off, while the women travel to the Oregon Invitational.

Ceremony honors the best of the Palouse

By PATRICK J. TRAPP
Arts/Leisure Editor

Where is the best place to kiss on the Palouse? Who is the worst local politician? Where can you buy the best hamburger? These questions and more can be answered Thursday night as winners of the Palouse Journal's 1991 Best of the Palouse survey will be honored at the third Annual Awards Ceremony at the Moscow Hotel.

The Palouse Journal's survey asked its readers to choose the best, and in some cases the worst, offerings in the region. It covers everything from the best bartender to the best place to buy music. The ceremony offers a chance to honor the winners of the survey. Some of last year's lucky winners were John's Alley for Best Juicebox, the Lewiston Morning Tribune for best newspaper and Mikey's Greek Gyros beat out Taco Time for Best Meal for Under $5.

"We thought that the awards ceremony would be a lot of fun," said Palouse Journal owner Ivar Nelson. "The Seattle Weekly has had one for 10 or 15 years and it's been a great success."

Bill Hall of the Lewiston Morning Tribune will be the master of ceremonies. He will announce the winners Academy Awards style. Other features of the show are exotic beverages and snacks

Dogwood Festival continues with art show

The Eighth Annual Lewis Clark Invitational Art Show will take place from Thursday through Sunday and will include the work of 59 regional artists and many new art forms. The show and sale, a major event of the Dogwood Festival of the Lewis Clark Valley, will be open to the public in the Williams Conference Center.

Works in the traditional media of oil, watercolor, tempera and mixed media will be displayed with art forms new to the show.

"The Art Show Committee considered the work of many regional artists for display and found several new art forms including clay, blue steel, and wood sculptures," said Committee Chairwoman Anita Rognas. "The expansion of the show was made possible by relocation to the Williams Conference Center on the LCSC Campus, and allowed us to include new artists from throughout the region."

The Art Show and Sale is a major fundraising activity of the Lewis Clark State College Artists Series, with corporate sponsorship from First Security Bank of Idaho. It is a cornerstone event of the Dogwood Festival. The show has been used as an educational field trip for the art students throughout the valley who have the opportunity to see original art works and meet with the artists attending the show.

"The use of the show as an educational outreach activity of the Artists Series is very important to the board and the Art Show Committee," said Artists Series Director Leslie Esselburn. "We jury the show carefully to provide the finest possible representation of artists and art forms."

This year's the show features the unique work of Don King, a Challis artist whose medium is furniture. King, a recent Fellowship recipient of the Idaho Commission on the Arts, creates one-of-a-kind furniture art pieces with thematic titles.

MicroFridge offers new way to eat

It's shortly after midnight in the middle of finals week. Since about four in the afternoon, you've been studying in your dorm room for tomorrow morning's Russian literature exam. You completely forgot about dinner until after the dining hall had closed. And now, needing several more hours in the books, you realize you are absolutely famished and can't read another line of Dostoyevsky without some nourishment. What to do?

Until recently, students on most college campuses had essentially these choices (and trade-offs):

- Go out in search of an all-night eatery — an inconvenient, time-consuming and often futile exercise.

- Heat up some food on a hot plate, toaster oven or other food-heating appliance — a hazardous and "prohibited" option in most campus residence halls.

- Devour some packaged "junk food" — tasty but, well, junky.

- Tough out the hunger and study through it — uncomfortable, often unproductive and, when coupled with fatigue and exam-anxiety, potentially unhealthy as well.

- Go to sleep — highly satisfying in the short run, possibly hazardous to one's academic standing in the long run.

A new choice
During the past few years, a highly attractive sixth choice has emerged at more than a hundred colleges and universities across the country: a combination microwave, freezer and refrigerator. This compact "multipurpose" called the MicroFridge is already in use by many thousands of students at such major institutions as Brown University, the University of Southern California, Pennsylvania State University, Duke University, University of Massachusetts, North Carolina State University, several campuses of the University of California and many more.

A key to the unit's rapid proliferation has been student demand of both the formal and informal variety. In some cases, students who have seen the unit on other campuses have started a drum-roll on their own. In most cases, however, college administrations — as at Penn State, one of the original MicroFridge customers — surveyed students to determine support for paying a modest annual fee (typically $50-$70) for the use of the appliances in their dorm rooms; the results were overwhelmingly (more than 90 percent) positive. Moreover, by a vote of 55 to 45 percent, students said they preferred having MicroFridge in their rooms over access to cable TV.

This level of enthusiasm has been independently registered by students at many other leading institutions looking at ways to improve the quality of life in on-campus housing and increase residence hall retention. At Boston University, for example, 81 percent of students surveyed said they used one or more small food-preparation appliances in their rooms, and 95 percent said they would be willing to pay an additional $50 per year for room and board if the university installed and maintained a MicroFridge unit in their rooms. At the University of Michigan, responses to those questions were 91 percent and 87 percent, respectively; at Yale, 85 percent and 56 percent; at Notre Dame, 70 percent and 76 percent; at the University of Connecticut, 83 percent and 87 percent; and surveys at other colleges and universities produced similar results.

"Where's the beef" (and the Fix-in's)?
What are the reasons for MicroFridge's burgeoning popularity among students? Why are students lining up to request MicroFridges for their dorm rooms? And why do they regard the appliance as a substantial incentive for staying on campus?

According to both surveys and interviews, convenience is the major appeal. Since the unit has a real freezer, students are able to

Seagall establishes himself as prominent movie hero

By Jeremy Forman
Staff Writer

In the world of movies, action stars are beginning to look alike. First, there were Chuck Norris movies. Chuck's movies were OK, but Chuck didn't make the ladies quiver. Then Rambo came around, and Sly did well in his stint as the man in action movies. And now Arnold Schwarzenegger reigns supreme as the king of action films. Arnold, Sly and newcomers like Bruce Willis are loved nation wide. Their movies do well because they follow the action formula — big budget, explosive effects and big name casts.

Now, in the lower spectrum of action movies, future prospects such as Jean Claude Van Damme and Jeff Speakman are getting their spotlight. Their movies are predictable and dumb, but revenge action movies are pretty basic to begin with. The king of this particular hill is ex-CIA agent Steven Seagal.

First off, Seagal will be the king here for a long time because he is a growing star. His three previous movies before Out for Justice were, Above the Law, Hard to Kill and Marked For Death.

They all fared well at the box office. Each movie has done better than its predecessor and Out for Justice should follow suit.

In all of Seagal's movies, the main character is a renegade cop of some sort. Justice is the story of a New York cop named Nico (just the name that Seagal needs), who chases a cop killer. Cop killers seem to run rampant throughout Seagal's world and it's beginning to get old.

The villain in this one, a drug crazed kid named Richie who has ties to the mob, kills Nico's best bud Bobby and from there goes on a killing spree.

Seagal doesn't like that.

He goes after him in the only bone breaking way he knows how; piece by piece. He tries to find Richie in various ways, getting information from Richie's sister and, to Seagal's shame, father.

The movie tries to be honorable, and Seagal pulls off the torn-cop act admirably. This movie has plenty of car chases and violent beatings because, hey, Steven Seagal is allowed to do that kind of thing.

This movie has already made millions and there is no doubt that Steven Seagal is still batting a thousand. But what he needs to do is get into higher budgeted, bigger star type of movies. Jeff Speakman and Jean Claude Van Damme are nice company, but Steven Seagal's next movie should try to break it wide open.

Seagal is a good actor, and that's no surprise. He's good at what he does, and it's only a matter of time before he gets better.

Hartung presents second production of the spring season

The Department of Theater Arts has announced the second Hartung Theater show of the spring semester A ... My Name Is Alice.

A ... My Name Is Alice is a musical revue that deals with the joys and frustrations of being a modern woman. From climbing the corporate ladder to climbing out of bed in the morning, this show provides witty insight into the world of women. Women will be able to identify with the host of characters and their quandaries, while men can gain insight into the mysteries of the opposite sex. A ... My Name Is Alice will tell you everything you wanted to know about women — and more.

The show features the talents of Virginia Belt, Susan Conner, Beth Davidson, Kim Kempfert, Jean Lund and Christine Mundt. Each actress plays a variety of roles within the musical to represent the kaleidoscope of "types" of women. Fred Chapman, a professor of theater arts at university, is the show's director.

A ... My Name Is Alice will run at the Hartung from Thursday through Sunday and from May 2 through May 5. All shows begin at 8 p.m. except for the 2 p.m. Sunday matinees. Tickets are $5 and $7 and are available at Ticket Express in the SUB or at the theater box office.

All UI students will be admitted free with their student IDs and their drama cards.

keep frozen and fresh food in their rooms, and to prepare it whenever they want to. This benefit is enhanced by the opening of more and more on-campus convenience stores where students can easily stock up on a wide variety of quality food items.

The other major appeal is safety. The MicroFridge unit has no external heating elements; it never draws more than 10 amps of power; the refrigerator and freezer shut off when the microwave goes on; and therefore the unit never causes wiring overloads — even in the oldest dorm buildings. That's why the MicroFridge is the only sanctioned residence hall cooking appliance on many campuses where it is in use.

Among its other attractions, the MicroFridge is compact — a key factor in residence hall rooms; it responds to the widespread sensitivity of many college students to energy conservation, nutrition and fitness, and other timely issues; and it is highly reliable. As Bill Thompson, the University of Southern California's director of housing, said: "We've purchased a product with no problems ... a product that is hassle-free."

An extension of the real home Off-campus housing has traditionally attracted students because it offers both independence and a comfortable extension of their "real" homes. However, now that the MicroFridge — which offers a measure of both — is becoming a standard amenity in thousands of dorm rooms throughout the country and a true boon to the quality of student life, on-campus housing is becoming an increasingly attractive alternative for many students. The MicroFridge may not be able to enlighten you about Crime and Punishment during an "all-nighter" cram session, but it certainly can make the process more palatable.

So if you live in the residence halls, here's your chance to express your concern for want of a better way to satiate your appetite. Bon appetite.

and those present will be eligible to win door prizes. Nine local restaurants will battle for the "Best Cheesecake on the Palouse" title in a taste test extravaganza. Attendees will sample cheesecakes and vote on their favorites.

Tickets for the show are $3 at the door and dress is "anywhere from blue jeans to tuxedos." Basically, it's a pretty casual affair.

stripped away by a government that thinks parents must be irresponsible boobies.

The defeat of apathy and mediocrity requires drastic measures. Here are two reforms the Bush plan should have implemented:

■ Eliminate the public school monopoly. Parents who choose private education for their children are hit twice — they pay both the private school tuition along with taxes for public schools that they do not use. Tax reductions for the parents of privately educated schools is the only logical solution.

■ Let market pressure elevate the quality of our schools. By basing funding on student enrollment and allowing parents to freely choose their child's school, substandard institutions would be forced to improve.

Bush's reforms should have been driven by the need for parental choice and the belief that free-market mechanisms can themselves eliminate apathy and create academic excellence. Instead, the motivation was the political need to straddle the line in an attempt to please many while offending none. Of course, pandering to the lowest common denominator has always been Bush's forte, but there is no room for pandering when the future of America is on the line.

schools. Which period of American history had these wonderful values? Looking at our history, I find little that is reassuring, unless you were a white male with property.

Were our values superior when slaves were brought to this country? Christian values said it was permissible because they were not Christian, and yet conversion did not stop the slavery. Eventually a death sentence was imposed for educating slaves. Proper values?

Christian values allowed the Native Americans to be decimated, the remainder imprisoned within reservations, forbidden by this country to perform their religious rites. Our values were intact when the Orientals we imported for cheap labor were virtually enslaved on the West Coast. Women weren't slaves, of course. They were man's chattel, like cattle and horses.

All that was in the distant past, but the traditional values that were claimed to be so superior have been hard to discard in this century. Should we be proud of the values that placed the K.K.K. in political power in many states and Washington, D.C. during the '20s, the radio programs hosted by a religious figure in the '30s that taught hatred of Jews, the almost daily lynching of Blacks in the South through the '40s, or the fact that Blacks were denied entry to "white" schools or establishments throughout this country?

The values espoused by the writer did indeed form the moral character of this country. I am willing to give full credit where it is due. Education in the past was designed for white Christian males, and there were less problems when everyone else could be kept uneducated and disenfranchised, stripped of any semblance of power.

I, like many people in America, am not a Christian. I resent someone telling me that I and my children must observe someone else's religious rites. I live a good, moral life already, thank you.

Forcing Christianity upon non-believers is the worst form of religious oppression. The tyranny of the masses should not be forced upon the minority.

It is always shocking to discover how people forget that many came to this country to get away from religious oppression. The oppression that those people fled from was being forced to follow the religion of another person, "for their own good." The early European settlers were, by the way, Christians fleeing from Christians. You have the right to believe as you do, please allow me the same freedom.

"The system will not collapse without it, we just brought it to everyone's attention," Fay said.

Opponents of the proposal included new board member Roy Mosman of Moscow, who said that the two motions which passed would change the agenda so that more routine items would be able to be considered by the state board staff, and that having them categorized and summarize less relevant issues would give them more time to concentrate on larger issues.

"The third motion (chancellor proposal) should give the first two proposals a chance to work and see if that would accomplish our purpose without having to do anything as drastic as establishing a chancellor," Mosman said.

A second reason Mosman gave for encouraging fellow board members to vote no on the proposal was the time factor.

"It was moving too fast, we had no time to study the proposal and had to vote yes or no without considering the consequences," he said.

Diane Bilyeu of Pocatello said that even with a chancellor, lawmakers will still want to hear from a university president. She added that she believes the board is spending too much time on higher education issues, and that it should increase time spent on public education issues.

The stage was set up just below the camping site, along with the landowner's teepee which had been temporarily turned into a first aid tent, his horse coral and tack room and a huge metal tub of water for hikers to cool off in as they ended their journey up the trail. Organizers were on top of things, despite the misunderstanding about the permit and last minute location change. They had roped off sections of the bluff which were dangerous and posted signs all along the trail and parking lot with concerned messages such as "Please don't drink and drive" and "Beware, rocks and rattlesnakes!"

As campers reached the top of the trail, they were given a safety lecture about how to handle rattlesnake encounters, of which there were many. Cooked rattlesnake was featured as a culinary delight at one person's campsite and no rattlers were seen in the vicinity of that tent the rest of the weekend. Garbage bins were provided so trash wouldn't go awry and security roamed the bluff on watch for possible fights or violence, of which there were none all weekend.

Friday night, landowner May took the microphone to welcome all the campers and make a few announcements.

"By the way," May began, "Greenstock is canceled, so, welcome to my own personal teepee warming party." He went on to give the crowd a little scare by letting them know that "without a doubt there is a rattlesnake within 300 yards of any of you." He warned campers if they were going to try to kill a snake to be sure they got it good so the mad and wounded rattler wouldn't stick around to harrass the other peaceful campers.

After a few announcements the music began and though Friday night consisted of recorded music, it was loud and it suited those there just fine, as many danced and gathered around the speakers to enjoy the music. Saturday the bands began to play and continued long into the night.

No arrests were made at the site, and the police commented on the overall good behavior of the Greenstock attendants, saying they encountered close to no problems, and that the party site was cleaner after Greenstock had ended. By Sunday afternoon most everybody had packed up their tents, bagged up their garbage and started back toward their cars. The bands recruited unoccupied persons to help them carry equipment back down the rugged trail. Only the organizers and a few helping clean up were left at the site.

Overall, Greenstock, canceled or not, proved to be a very successful weekend with cooperation from all parties involved. Mother Nature provided a lot of sunshine, the people all had a good time, there was plenty of music, the rattlesnakes didn't bother anyone, and neither did the police. One couldn't have asked for a more superior weekend.
