Teens questioned in hanging prank  \section*{By MATT LAWSON}

Three Moscow High School students admitted to participating in a practical joke which involved the hanging of a dummy in the University of Idaho Arboretum according to Moscow Police according to Moscow Chief Dave Cameron.
Four more Moscow High students will be questioned today in the incident that took place between KUID and Nez Perce drive.
The dummy, which had 'I was a Jew printed on its chest, was discovered by UI campus security at 1 a.m. Saturday morning and reported to police.
The campus police reported the last time they checked the the last time they checked area was Wednesday night. area was wednesday night.
Investigations proved that the papers filling the gym clothes were from local newspapers, with the latest issue from August 21.
"The ones we have talked to so far have admitted (to doing the prank)," said Cameron. I don't think there's too much question they were involved.'
Authorities responded in a serious manner as a result of Sharon Andrew Akhavan hanging himself in the same area in late July. Akhavan's suicide brought national media attention when original reports suspected a lynching.

We look at this as two separate incidents," said Cameron of the suicide and Friday's incident. "This (incident) is one of less damage. In one sense it's not quite so serious but in another sense it is more serious."

Cameron said the students involved talked to classmates and friends which led to their being questioned by the police.
The Jewish reference hinted at a possible relation to Akhavan's death. Akhavan was an Israeli which created suspicion the incident was racially motivated.
"If you think of the statement 'I was a Jew,' the meaning is not very clear, University of Idaho Vice President of Relations and Development Harry Peterson said. "We know enough that whatever the motive of the people involved was, this is very unacceptable behavior and will not be tolerated.'
"It is a reminder of the events of several weeks ago," Peterson said. "It is very tempting for people to speculate how and why this could have happened.'
Although the University chose to not release information to the public until Monday, communication between the University of Idaho administrators and the Moscow Police Department ran efficiently.
"We appreciate the help of the Moscow Police Department and the University of Idaho," Latah County Prosecutor Craig Mosman said. "The UI is taking this very scriously. The students have to realize this is a very serious crime that won't be tolerated."
University of Idaho President Elizabeth Zinser responded to the incident with an optimistic attitude.

Financial aid awards up  as handing out financial

Money has been filling the pockets of Univer sity of Idaho students and there is more where that came from.

Financial aid for those students who filed Federal Financial Ald Forms last semester is now available at the financial aid desk at registration. According to Dan Davenport, director of the financial aid office, more financial aid checks have been ready for students at this registration than ever before.
"We feel good about where we are with financial aid this year," Davenport said. "This has been a smooth registration as far aid is concerned."
Davenport cites several reasons for the increased readiness of financial aid for registration.
Most importantly, not as many changes in federal regulations were made this year," Davenport said. 'That allowed us to get started earlier on processing"
He added that the second year with the new computer system, additional office space and long evening and weekend hours put in by the staff added to the efficiency of distributing financial aid checks at registration.
According to Davenport, $970,000 in UI scholarships,

Dormitory students settling in

By SHARI IRETON Staff Writer

The beginning of school brought a flood of students back to the University of Idaho Residence Halls. Crowded elevators, rooms overflowing with boxes and the hovering of parents is an annual ritual here at UI. I took a little time to observe the freshmen species of students, nervously shuffling into the cafeteria and shyly hiding in the corners of the lounge. What do these new students miss about being away from home? "Well, I miss my dog....but not my parents!" said one frosh emphatically. "I miss my Mom's home cooking," said another (and who doesn't.)
What is the biggest complaint about coming back to school by returning students? "God, I forgot how awful these rooms are with no air conditioning! When do you think it's going to snow? and the usual gripe about no parking. (You guys ever heard of a bike?)
However, as the week prog. ressed and the parties grew, 1 noticed the complaining began to be replaced with comments like "Yes! No curfew dudes!" and "You mean, like, this beer is free?"
The UI residence halls have increased their number of forcign exchange students greatly this year. For example, Necly Hall has 8 foreign exchange students out of 50 students altogether. Students from England, Chile, Sweden, Spain, Holland and many other countries came over on the ISEP oxchange program (International Student Exchange Program).

The big social faux pas in the residence halls for this year is the word "dorm". According to Resident Hall Advisors the definition of a dorm is "a place where you sleep and take a shower". However, the correct term for dorm is "Residence Hall", where you bond, make friends and a place you call home. (Please!)
Why did these students decide to go "geek" instead of greek? Most said they liked the total independence and not having to conform to anyone else's rules. Others anyone else's rules. Others wanted to avoid the familywanted to avoid the family-like atmosphere "I lived in a like atmosphere, "I lived in a big family for 18 years, and 1 couldn't wait to be on my own," said one student.
Yes, the dorms...uh residence halls are back into the swing of things.

UI water causing headaches

By AUDRA MLLER Staff Writer
When the University of Idaho campus was surrounded by boil warnings in the Resident Halls, Wallace Cafeteria, and most other campus buildings last other campus buidings the week, many studen question, "Why?"
According to Ken White of the Moscow physical plant, it seems the age of the campus has caused the build-up of mineral deposits on the inside of the water piping. This allows bacteria to form and then enter into the water system causing its contamination. It has also been a problem controlling the contaminants due to the fluctuation in the water level control. For years, the level of chlorine in the campus water has been at a low of 0.2 parts per million. This low level allows bacteria to remain in the water and collect there until a boiling order must be issued.
White stated after the first reading of water pollutants was taken, it was decided to raise the chlorination up to 2 parts per million commencing on Friday, August 23. This action continued through the weekend and was then lowered down to 1 part per million on Monday, August 26. This level of chlorination is very low, but is still five times higher than the original amount.

In finding the water solution, other problems may arise with the experiments of the research ers but those will be taken care of in time.

Other actions are being started to clear up the water problem The ITAC reservicing project (a relining of the piping) has begun. This project should be completed by the last week in September. Another unnamed funded pro ject is being debated and brought up before the Department of Public Works to possibly add to the water solution
"We hope that the water problems will be solved on a permanent basis, but its like playing a guessing game." said White.

New ID's double as credit cards

By KARMA METZLER Staff Writer

You've heard of credit cards, cash cards, and playing cards, now you have the Vandal Card.
Last week, at registration, every student got their picture taken for a Vandal Card. The card not only gives access to games and the library like the old I.D cards, it also allows students to open a debit account with the university.
According to Christian Stokes, UI's business manager for Auxiliary Services, students can use a debit account to pay for almost every on-campus purchase. Stokes says the cards are good at Ticket Express, Student Health and the UI Bookstore. Purchases made at any university dining service location will get a five percent discount.
"We're here to serve," Stokes said. "This is a good service to provide to students...it will make their life casier.
New pictures for the cards were taken after fees were paid at registration. The news cards will be ready for students later this weck. Beginning September 5, the old I.D. cards will be unusable.
Tim Taylor, manager of the Vandal Card office said similar cards used on other campuses have made campus purchases much quicker.
Taylor pointed to Vanderbilt University where more than 90 percent of the total sales at the bookstore are made with the debit card. He also believes the debit accounts will bencfit parents.
"All the purchases possible are on campus and are relevant to school," Taylor said. "(the card) will make it easier for parents whose students have a little trouble managing their moncy.
Stokes said the University will pay $$ 90,000$ dollars to upgrade the current system. He said about $19,000 comes from student fees, the rest comes from commissions on dining sales and from money already budgeted for the old I.D. cards.
Taylor said students can open their debit account in the Vandal Card office on the second floor of the Wallace Complex. Accounts can also be opened at the Controllers office, but Taylor points Please see ID'S page 9>

Some students don't have the luxury of relaxing Take John Schenk and Kelly Cross for example. Yes, they can go home and put their fect up for a while...but the shrill scream of the fire whistle can change it all. Schenk and Cross are firefighters at Moscow's Voluntecr Fire Department. They, and 14 other students get free room and board in exchange for fighting the city's fires.
When the fire whistle blows, they go to work...and earn their keep.
"There's no relaxing. If the bell rings, you have to go," said Schenk. "But its not a bother, we all love to do it" Schenk and Cross live with ten other student firefighters in Sta tion One downtown. Four stu dents live at Station Two near Safeway.
The rooms are arranged much like dorm rooms, with a set of bunk beds, desks, shelves and closet space.
Right now only men live at the station, although women have in

But Cross says the commradrey helps on the job.

Education should continue out of classroom

So here you are, at the University of Idaho, as close to real life as you have ever been. You're on your own, paying your own bills, motivating yourself to go to class, setting your own standards, and making your own decisions. It is a time that will shape the rest of your life.
Whether you're from a small town like Fenn, Idaho (pop. 25) or from an out-ofstate big city, you have brought with you prejudices from the environment you grew up in. Liberal as well as conservative sentiments run high, and as always racial and religious biases are present. The best way to defend yourself is to educate yourself.
While education does begin in the classroom, it is very important that it does not end there, especially at the collegiate level. Even in Idaho, a state with a very small population, there is ample room for self-development.
Where does this development start? A wide variety of newspapers, magazines, and publications are available for use at the UI Library. Speakers are often invited to our campus, and informational seminars are regularly held. Art exhibitions, plays and movies are provided for no or very low cost.
While these events are available, there is no one that can make you go. In order to learn inside the classroom, you must do your homework. In order to learn about life outside the classroom, you must also be a dedicated student. Dedication, tolerance, and activism are the three steps that I believe are essential to self-instruction. Have you ever been involved in a conversation with an individual who speaks his/her mind for 30 minutes, not saying much and never giving you a chance to respond? Isn't it irritating? Remember that next time you are involved in a discussion . let those who disagree with you air their thoughts, because tolerance is one of the vital lessons of life.

Tolerance is a key to self-education in that it results in balanced, well-rounded individuals. It is, to a Catholic, what makes living next door to an atheist bearable. It is what keeps politically diverse roommates alive. Surviving in a house with 70 other people would be impossible without it. Tolerance is also a key to knowledge. By tolerating others' opinions and attitudes, we learn from them. We learn that there are two sides to every issue, and that our side is not always right.
Once you have begun your search for knowledge and self-discovery, once you have mastered the skill of being tolerant and have become an open-minded person, use these skills and apply your opinions: become active! Leave your apathetic attitude behind and become involved-speak your mind, volunteer your time, and vote
Have a good year, and study hard.

President Zinzer calls for better communication

Editor;

As President of the University of Idaho, I wish to comment on the effigy found in the arboretum this weekend. This University campus is a territory of tolerance for diversity. An effigy is an invasion of that tolerance. The University is a place of learning through the free and open exchange of ideas and values. This effigy was an anonymous monologue, and the message is unclear as to meaning and intent. Regardless of the circumstances or the intent, there can be no mistaking the perception of this image as antisemitic, which harkens back to similar effigics of ens
Any act that can be received as racial or religious hostility, regardless of intent, is repugnant, inhumane, and uncivilized. And it has the potential to incite personal harm. Such acts are not tolcrable, as they do not further the aims of freedom not furning the aims of freedom, learning, and truth. Rather, they intimid and stifle communication.
We are dealing with moral principles and educational issues here. As a university community, we care about human beings and our relationships. As educators, we care about replacing ignorance with enlightenmentwhether immature ignorance about the effects of a childish prank or "learned" ignonilish prank or loarned ignorance in the form

Abortion activists should compromise

Abortion may be one of the biggest issues of our time, but it is almost comical the way the two sides, Pro-life and Pro-choice, have been stabbing at each other the last fow years. Is either side more credible than the other? Judging by the ridiculous "I'm Pro-choice and I vote!" bumper stickers and the recent Pro-life demonstrations in Wichita, Kansas in which federal marshalls have had to be called in to prehave had to be called in to prevent violence, I think the answer is a resounding no. I'm going to try and come from a different angle which I choose to call personal choice.
Personal choice would involve each individual women making a personal decision regarding abortion. Thus, if a woman had a religious or conscientious objecreligious or conscientious objection to abortion, she could simply tion to abortion, she could simply have the child, and likewise, if have the child, and likewise, if the womandidn't have any probthe womandidn'thave any problems with abortion, then that lems with abortion, then that woman could terminate the prewoman could terminate the pr gnancy with an abortion.
Is this personal choice view taking an avoidant stance on a tough issue like abortion? It is much better than a woman having to jump up and down on a soapbox proclaiming her views on abortion. Abortion is a very personal issue and both Pro-life and Pro-choice activists have made little progress with Prolifers screaming about the child's rights or the ensuing howls that go up from Pro-choicers about the woman's right to decide what happens to her own body. This is senseless simply on the basis that nothing will be accomplished. Perhaps the most important thing to come out of personal choice would be the fact that the federal government wouldn't be able to dictate what happens to a woman's body. It seems that I have sided with the Pro-choicers but this is simply not the case.

Abortion is too murky an issuc and the government needs to stay completely away from this. If a person stops and thinks, abor tion is really the only medical procedure which the govern ment is considering laws based on a moral stance. There is abso lutely no logic in this because one side or the other is not going to be represented fairly by laws. A woman, whether Pro-life or Prochoice, should be able to decide whether she wants an abortion or not without help from a federal government which might cater to a particularlobbying group. Duc to the fact that abortion is such a murky issue, a government decision might not appeal to the majority of the people in this nation, and unrepresentative legislation might go into effect.

Abortion should be a nonissue as far as the federal government is concerned because of the many gray areas that exist. Now if the government would only turn to a more pressing issue like ectucamore p

Kirkland also stated the program is trying to refine a recycling process called "cubing". The recyclers take mixed paper waste and densify it into casy-to-store briquettes. These briquettes are usually burned later in the UI wood-fired boiler that produces $95 \%$ of the University's power and heat.
The UI Recycling Program currently processes five types of waste materials: ledger paper, computer paper, cardboard, aluminum and glass. Collection stations will soon be found all over campus near main building entrances, vending areas, Argonaut drop-off areas, residence halls and main offices.
Why recycle? According to the UI Recycling Program, the Unitod States produces approximately 160 million tons of waste per year. If some of this waste can be recycled, it can greatly reduce the size of our already over-full land fills. Even though recyeling

One new change noted by Davenport was in the policy for new student GSL oans. Incoming students can not receive their checks until 30 days after classes begin in accordance with Federal regulations.
"We have made special arrangements with the controller and housing to delay payment by those students until their checks arrive," Davenport said. "Hopefully that was helpful to them."
Applications for financial aid are up 39 percent in the last five years, according to Davenport.
"What that means is more and more students are continuing to apply for financial aid.

Hilbert gets Vandal netters in shape

By MATT LAWSON Editor
Opinions run strong through out athletic teams across the nation that great teams are made in the off-scason.
The 1991 University of Idaho volleyball team is no exception. After completing their two week fall training the Vandals look to be in the best shape in sevcral years.
Head coach Tom Hillbert changed his approach prior to this scason's camp and it payed off for his team.
Idaho started workouts August 12 and practiced every day for seven hours.
Daily workouts included two three-hour practices (7-10 a.m. and 1-4 p.m.) along with an additional conditioning session for an hour.
The variations in Hillbert's additional sessions helped his team escape boredom from continuous repititions of the same exercises.
He broke it up really well," Senior setter Christic Roes said. "Last year we went out to the track everyday which was a real drag."
Those multiple workouts included swimming, weightlifting and workouts on a sand court.
"I like the sand workouts," Roes said. "It makes you quicker on the wood court and helps your specd."
The team grew together more this season and proved it could work together with positive unity.

We like the opportunity to push each other in practice," Dee Porter said. "This year's camp was great."
That unity not only helped the Vandals push each other, but allowed for a stronger mental altowed for a
"It was easier this year because everyone was motivated," said Sophomore Jessica Puckett, who squats over 350 pounds. "It made it a lot casier to get things accomplished."
It was an awesome camp," Rocs said. "I feel like l'm in really good shape now.
"Tom hasn't totally abused it," Rocs said of the long hours dur ing training camp. "Last year it was just too much. This year he was really smart with his drills because they actually helped with our skill development more.
Hilbert also made changes from last year to keep his players content.

Dunn and company dominate defense

By Christopher gatewood

 Sports EditorIs the University of Idaho Vandal defense that bad or is the offense that good?
Whatever the answer is, the Vandal offense dominated the football teams first scrimmage, which ended one of the most optimistic fall two-a-days in ecent memory.
"Our defense obviously has a long way to go, but our offense is pretty good," Vandal coach John . Smith said.
If the 564 combined yards passing, the Vandal quarterbacks had is any indication, it could be a long season for the Vandals. Sophomore quarterback Doug Nussmeicr started the game and was virtually unstoppable. He yards and two touchdown passes. Both touchdown strikes were to All-American wide receiver Kascy Dunn, who caught six passes for 164 yards."I really liked the looks of our offense today," Smith said. "We made a lot of big plays. I just hope once the scason starts we can do the same thing."

Both of Dunn's touchdown eatches further illustrated the lack of depth in the Vandal secondary, which has been depleted by injuries and players leaving Safety, Mike Noble added to the casualties by tearing cartilage in his knee halfway through the scrimmage.
Dunn's first catch was a 58 yar der, in which he caught the ball over the head of freshman quarterback turned free safety Eric Hisaw, and then outraced every body to the end zone. His second touchdown was a 45 yarder, also over the middle. When Dunn caught the ball there wasn't a defender within 15 yards of him.
"It was just a bad day for the sccondary," said defensive back Jeff Jordan, who neatly summed things up.
The mysterious absence of starting free safety Terry Green caused Hisaw to move from quarterback to safety. Smith wouldn't claborate on the absence of Green Back up quarterbacks Pat West and Kurt Thorne were also impressive West comploted 80 17 passe for 129 yars, 17 passes for 129 yards, including a pretty 20 yard touchdown pass to Curtis Richardson in the cor-caught three passes for 43 yards. Thorne completed 8 of 12 passes for 221 yards, including a nifses for 221 yards, including a nif-ty 50 yard touchdown pass to ty 50 yard touchdown pass to Alan Allen that was thrown perfectly between three defenders. Allen could have scored another touchdown, but he dropped a perfect pass after beating the secondary.

"Thorne did a great job," Smith said "He has an outstanding arm and great ability Devon Pearce led all rushers with 42 yards on just seven carries and came close to breaking long runs several times.
"It was a day for passing," Pearce said. "When we're passing the ball like that, I don't need to run."

SUCHDOWN IDAHO!
Sound familiar. It's the voice that has called play-by-play for University of Idaho football for over 30 years. The voice of the man you picture in your mind, but aren't sure what he really looks like.
It's the voice of Bob Curtis. The man has become as much a part of thaho football as the silver, gold, and back colors that make the uniforms.
And why not? Curtis has been ackinted with the miversity longer than anyone in the athleti full-time broadcaster, there was not even a dream of an ASUIKibbic Dome, UCC, or Wallace Complex. The library that is now undergoing renovation, had just been dedicated, brand new.

There was no Big Sky Conference either. Idaho still competed as a member of the Pacific Coas Conference and Washington Conference and Washington
State University was their preState Univer

Although this will be Curtis' 35 th year calling Idaho games, he didn't plan on being around that didn't

The University of Miami, joined by scven other former inde pendents, led the way for the formation of the Big East Football Conference. Just when everything appeared to be settled, rea lignment came out West Fresno State University announced it would leave the Big West Conference and join the Western Athle tic Conference in July of 1992. This left an opening in the Big West, and two schools, Boise State Univer sity and the University of Nevada, came up as possi ble replacements
It's been no secret Boise State and Nevada have wanted to move to Divivsion I.
Nevada, located in Reno averaged 15,737 fans a game last scason in 20,000 scat Mackay Stadium. This year, Mackay will seat a 26,000 capacity, still shor of the 30,000 required by the NCAA for Division football.
In Boise, there have been plans to expand Bronco Stadium to 30,000 seats for some time. BSU averaged 19,325 seats last year Although both schools made excellent candidates for the Big West, the prob lem was each school's location.
Nevada is in the heart of Big West territory, and instate rival University of Nevada Las Vegas also

It will be a long, but worth while wait for the students who enjoyed the benefits of the multipurpose room in the basement of memorial gym The room has been temporarily taken over by the Early Childhood Learning Center, and will not be open for student use until spring semester.
The Early Childhood Learning Center (ECLC), a child care center for children of faculty and students, had to vacate its previous location, the Sweet Avenue complex, in order to house the over flow for the Panhellenic council.
"We had no place to put these kids, and the multi-purpose room is big enough and safe enough," Division Director of Health, Physical Education Recreation and Dance (HPERD), Cal Lathen said.
The ECLC plans to inhabit the multi-purpose room no later than Oct. 15 , then it will move into a ew triple wide module, which will be constructed at the corner Deakin and Taylor streets. "We're looking forward to having the module so all of the centers are together, and we want to thank the university and the parents for helping us in locating the multi-purpose room as an Dirctor Kathleen Pullmann said. After the ECLC moves out, construction will begin to add storage space and a ventilation storage space and alti-purpose systin the mult system in the multi-purpose room. The room was built without an adequate ventilation system because of an overbid on the project and virtually no storage space.

"Without a ventilation system in the multi-purpose room, it gets unbcarably hot and a person can't imagine what it would be like to have an aerobic dance like to have an aerobic dan purchase more exercise bicycles and relocate them to the multipurpose room, in order to make more space in the weight room. "One of the benefits of the work will be increased usage. The bikes are so popular and right now, as it is we can't increase the number in the weight room because lack of space," Lathen said. "If everything goes as planned, it should make it nice for the people that come to the weight room to work out and bikes. Because it is right around the corner from the weight room. It's nice for the people that just come to bike, because they won't have to go into the crowded weight room."

Beginning spring semester, the multi-purpose room will be used for club sports, conference and enrichment classes, such as elementary physical education, activity classes and high and low

The University of Idaho has a new temporary director of the outdoor program. Jim TangenFoster will fill the position until the current director, Mike Beiser, roturns from a one year leave of absence. Beiser took his leave of absence to sail in the Pacific for a ycar.
Tangen-Foster will act as direcor through the end of this school year.
"I was hired for nine months," Tangen-Foster said. "I'm going to try to do as many wild and crazy hings as I can in that time." Tangen-Foster has lived in the Moscow area since 1978 and achieved his masters degree in physical education from the UI in 1980. He is currently working toward his PhD.
From 1980-1982 Tangen-Foster taught physical education and dance courses at the UI. Then fom 1982-1984 he ran the U intramural program.
Since that time, Tangen-Foster has been running the Adventure Bound program for the UI Adventure Bound is a summer camp that was originally for 8-13 year olds. Since the beginning of the program 5-7 year olds have been added and this year $3-5$ year olds were allowed for the first time.

Tangen-Foster loosely modeled the program after Outward Bound which he taught in North Carolina and Canada.
While he has quite a diverse background, rock climbing is Tangen-Foster's strong suit. He has climbed almost all of the majorareas in the Northwest and periodically enters climbing competitions
"I would like to get people involved in sport climbing," he said. "It's rock climbing without the risk."
Sport climbing involves toproping, fixed anchor, artificial climbing walls and bouldering. Because of the controlled conditions the risks are greatly reduced.
As of now most parts of the program are still in the developmental phase.
'I'm trying to find out who the (trip) leaders are and what they want to do," Tangen-Foster said. "For now we're making up a preliminary schedule so the students will have something.
An interest and planning ses sion has been scheduled for Wednesday at $6: 00 \mathrm{p} . \mathrm{m}$. in the SUB Russet room. The purpose of the mecting is to help plan the fall and winter schedules for the outdoor program.
Tangen-Foster said he doesn't want to copy what has been done in the past, but wants to get input from the students who will use the programs to better serve those students.
One other objective TangenFoster mentioned was trying to increase the base of users of the OP.
The outdoor program has a eputation of being for those who participate in high risk activities, Tangen-Foster said. To combat this reputation, day trips are planned in activities like hiking and fishing.
Other day trips that are planned include mountain biking on Moscow Mt. and sport climbing on Pullman rocks and Giranile Point at Wawawai. Another trip to Wawawai is hecing planned specifically to go cing phanne

Cook discovers love-rock explosion at O-Town music convention

By TIMOTHY COOK Staff Writer

$\mathbf{W}_{35}^{\text {hat beterer way to spend }}$ budget than to sem my travel the fine folks over at $K$ records in Olympia, Washing ton and the International Pop Underground Convention tha they organized for last woek. The convention was designed to celebrate and showcase independent music, music that lacks major distribution net works and needs something like this every now and then: a collective of under appreciated talent of various kinda funny trying to persuade the folks at the con troller's office about the legitimacy of this event-a lot of blank stares, but in retrospect, they were nice, I suppose. OTown, the capitol of Washing ton proved a marvelous host to the convention, nice parks where a fella like me could go and get a cheap beer in between acts that were overly dull or clubs that were overly hot. There was also a majestic park outside the capitol building for frisbee, the only really enjoyable leisure sport besides croquet, but who has room for a croguet set in the car in the midst of a weeklong road trip?

The week start with a bill referred to as the All-Girl Love Rock Explosion, and featured girl groups sporting cute now wave haircuts and funny wire-rimmed spectacles singing cute/funny songs about being driven crazy. This show ran like a talent show, charming stuff...made me wish I had at least 48 lives so 1 could marry each one of these girls at least once and, of course, eat pancakes with each one of them every morn ing, especially the band Bratmobile, native Olympians who were just the best. couldn't scrape up enough nerve to tell this group how wonderful I thought they were, but there'll be other opportunitics to see Bratmo bile. At least I hope there will.

It was just too hot in 0 Town this week, but that didn't stop Boise cum Seattle's Trecpeople from perfoming a furious set of material from their new record Guilt, Regre and Embarrassment due out on $C / Z$ records sometime in late September or so. The rest of Wednesday was devoted to music out of the rock genre. Notably the Olympia Chamber Orchestra and their piece called "Mrs. Warhola" written by a local fellow whose name I can't recall because I just ran out of memory drops for my brain. The twenty or so sized member ensemble work was faintly reminiscent of fohn Adams or some of the work of the Kronus Quarto in its tense and spacious armongement that featured ape of an immigrant woman describing the dislocation she felt in separation from her amily. Performing under the name of The Steve Fisk Fusion Experience Incorpor ated, Steve Fisk, Mark Hosler (of another group called Negativland) and another fell whose name I can't rememwhore nane 1 cant remem posed of compact disc loops, trum machines, keyboards, home-made instruments and things. Imaginative work and d like to hear more from these folks.
Perhaps the 'hit' of this convention was a group of juvenile delinquanets from Washington D.C. called Nation of Ulysses. The group took the stage of the intimate confines of the Capitol theatre in threc-piece suits only to destroy their equipment in a fit of high energy and low regard for human hearing The singer also played trumpet when he wasn't doing backflips off of the drumset and onto his head. A very striking performance that created a tremendous buzz amongst the welve hundred or so in attendance. Nation of Ulysses was recently picked by Sassy magazine of all places as the "sassiest" group in America, and it took the fabulous Beat Happening, the perpetrators of this love-rock extraviganza, to sort of 'clear the palette' with their unique blend of stripped-down garage rock from heaven. Pick up a copy of their last record called Dramy for a good idea of what I'm talking about, it's both epic and cute, and a this point I'll throw in word like 'giddy' for description purposes. The evening was topped off with a performance by the Scottish indie/ phenom types called the Pastels and a blend of noisy bubblegum with guest vocalist Jad Fair (whose known for his own independent institution Half Japanese).
Hung over on life, and an early ten a.m. show with Jac Fair solo, I wound up late for the Sub Pop records dub bar beque at the Evergreen State soccer field and missed lunch the biggest disappointment of the week. Like a diamond in the mouth of a corpse, I was the mouth of a corpse, I was able to make a day of it by getting my frisbec quotient in getting my frisbee quotient
Of course frisbee is the only Of course frisbee is the only real recreational sport and i will forever sneer at those thundering dunderhead hackcy sack ctopes. Volloyball is pretty stupid, though Ive always sorta liked lawn darts Well, anyway, the highlight of the last show was Fugazi, like Ulysses from D.C., turned in the tightest, most energetic and well-spoken performances of loud rock music l've heard Forget that show's rather lame openers: L7, from Los Angeles who insist on recycling the same old metal riffs Motor head perfected in 1903 (some idiot cracked his skull 'dancing' during this) and Seattle rap act High Performance, who I felt their main musical influence was Bobby Brown. Fugazi blew everyone away despite the early nonsense. The convention wound up with a Planet of the Apes film festival (fun trivia quiz: Can you name all five P.O.T.A. films in order?), but no one sat through all show ings, I think, but I wouldn't Please see COOK page 14 movic and you'll find IT DOESN'T WORK. Something has to give, and in this case, the sacrifices were scene sequence, dialogue, and the general flow of the whole movie

It started out well. Chicago 1971. A boy watches in awe as his fircfighting father heroicly saves a little girl's life. Sickeningly sweet, but I can handle it. Seconds later, the same boy sees his father heroicly save another fireman's life and then mortally suffor the consequences. A "Life" magazine photographer documagazine photographer documents the boy's anguish and later wins a Pulitzer prize for the wins a Pulitzer prize for the picture.

Twenty years later. This same boy (William Baldwin) has just graduated from the firemen's acadeny and sets to work in his older brother's (Kurt Russell) unit. So far, so good. Then the gruesome sensationalism started to settle in. We were subject to numerous shots of charred corpses that seemed more like an intentional shock to the audience rather than realism
With all the storylines and subplots, I could ever really figure out which plot was the main story. From the beginning, many characters were introduced and then not seen again until you for got their significance. One such casuality was Rebecca DeMor nay, who did a surprisingly fan tastic and convincing representation of Kurt Russell's ex-wifc. But we just didn't see enough of her This happened throughout Backdraft. After awhile I got tired of waiting for a return to any of the number of storics he number of storics going on Not that they wouldn't catch up ventually-it just took too long. The dialogue went through a t of suffering. Cheesy lines like

"I'm not gonna quit, Steven, ya hear me? ' 'm not gonna quit" and "Look at him. That's my brother, goddammit," made me cringe inside and laugh out loud. The writing sounded like a combination of an old John Wayne movic and Reader's Digest's "Drama in Real Life." Yuck.
Director Ron Howard had no obvious direction for this flick, but it reminded me way too much of Dic Hard, Star Wars, and

Movies receive new life on video

By TRENT YOUNG Entertainment Editor
Movies, unlike humans, are quite lucky. If a movie is flawed, it can be redone. If a movie is well done but unpopular, it can be rerelcased. If a movie is so incredibly bad that the producers see the words Ishtar slowly making its way into the critics' vocabulary, it can be pulled and stacked away in some dusty room, never to be secn by human eycs again.
Never to be seen again, that is, unless the producers can find a market for their trash on video. In fact, now that the video industry is actually rivaling the box office for consumer dollars, most of what docsn't really hit at the theaters will appear soon for rental.
An example is this year's biggest turkey, Hudson Hawk. While the film failed miscrably at the theaters, it's being predicted as a blockbuster renter, mostly because Bruce Willis has recognition value, and because people flock to see things that the critics universally panned. King Ralph,

Leonard Part VI, and Howard the Duck did wonderful business despite the fact that everyone became nauseated watching. Who's That Girl? also made big bucks on vidco--not too bad considering that one critic actually blamed the film for his sudden bout with bed-wetting and night sweats.
Yet, most of what appears on tape is nothing near the trash of the motion picture industry-oon the whole, it is much better. Recently, such televsion networks as TNT, HBO and USA have begun releasing their exclusive movies and productions onto the video market, and have garnered quite a bit of success. I'm Dangerous Tonight, a USA film by Tobe Hooper of Texas Chainsaw Massacre fame has hit near the tops of rental charts, proving big budgets aren't needed for big profits.
FOX Television's version of Robin Hood with Patrick Bergen also proved that the small screen can readily compete with the silver screen. During the summer run of Kevin Costner's awful travesty of the same name, critics lavished praise and adoration on the FOX version, calling it the best version of the tale ever.

- BITHELL from page 10

Idaho President Dr. Elizabeth Zinser and Idaho State University President Dr. Richard Bowen said they felt BSU's exit would hurt the Big Sky and their schools. Because BSU would have more scholarships to give out, this would create inequality on the field between the three rivals.
Keiser said if the emotion surrounding BSU's bid to leave was defused, then the people would see the feasibility of the Broncos going to the bigger conference. Right. No emotion for the fans of Idaho's older institutions watching rival BSU make another quick evolutionary move? It was only 1974 BSU became a university instead of a college. It was 1965, it moved from being Boise Junior College to Boise State College. And the school was only founded in 1932, as a religous college.
At that rate, how long until BSU ends up being the state's leading institution? Another 20 years?
Athletically, BSU still played junior college ball until 1965. At that time Idaho was Division I, having left the Pacific Coast Conference (now the Pac-10) after 1958, and joining the Big Sky in 1963. BSU joined the Big Sky in 1970, but remained a Division II school.
Then, in the early ' 70 's, a new conference was being formed, called the Pacific Coast Athletic Association (later to become the Big West). Idaho, a Division I school in the Division II Big Sky, wanted to join. But, on October 20, 1972, the State Board of Education denied Idaho permission to leave the BigSky, preferring all three state universitics compete in the same leaguc.
When the NCAA created Division I-AA in 1978, Idaho had little choice but to drop down a notch. The rest of the Big Sky moved up. Now, in 1991, Keiser said BSU

has become too much for the Big

 Sky.Ok, John. No doubt Boise has a solid population base to support a Division I football program. BSU's attendance would rank right at the top of the Big West.
But that's because it's the Big West, arguably the weakest Division I football conference.
If BSU is too much for the Big Sky, why haven't the Broncos won a football championship since 1980? Why haven't they finished above third place since 1981? Why have they lost nine straight games to the Vandals? Sure, the broncos might beat up on some Big West weaklings, because there are a lot, but solid Pac-10 or WAC teams would crush them.

Maybe, just maybe, if BSU began to dominate the Big Sk year in and year out, in basketbal as well as football, and they won a Division I-AA national title a couple of times, people would want them to move up. As it is, though, there is still too much emotion over BSU's greed to get everything for themselves.
For the time being, BSU will stay in the Big Sky and at Division I-AA. So John, relax on moving up in football so fast, and concentrate on academics a little more like a university president is supposed to.
