Fire raises questions of building neglect

By ALISA STOFFEL
Staff Writer

Friday's fire is old news to any Moscow resident. That is, any resident who didn't rent one of the Zephyr Apartments from Apartments West.

The question now is, who pays for the extensive personal losses?

Apartments West carries a standard homeowner's coverage, which does not compensate the tenants in any way for their losses. Toni Koubourlis, manager of Apartments West, said "Everyone I've talked to is covered under their parent's homeowner's policy."

However, Debbie Semler, one of the ex-tenants of Zephyr, is independent, and has no insurance of her own. She lost a few thousand dollars worth of personal belongings.

Apartments West has not contacted Semler for any other reason than to serve her a liability release form. In order to get her prepaid deposit and last month's rent back, Debbie and the other fire victims have to forfeit their rights to litigate against Apartments West for their negligence.

"It's ridiculous," says Semler, "The community is being really generous, and Apartments West has done nothing to help the tenants from the Zephyr 'firetrap.'"

"The Apartments West

Manager doesn't even know the insurance company's name," says Semler, "Or at least Toni (Koubourlis) is not giving it out. It's hard to decide. She's a good actress." Semler maintains a positive attitude though.

"This just might be a good thing for renters who get apartments turned over to them as is, but with a higher rent."

Semler hopes students will stick together and lobby for better tenant rights.

Are there regular fire checks making sure buildings meet the fire code?

"It doesn't really happen," admits Koubourlis.

Moscow Fire Inspector Don Strong says apartment buildings are inspected "whenever we get back to them" if someone calls with concerns.

But one of the tenants had called with concerns only a few days ago. Because the complaint wasn't written, nothing could be done. Further complications abound due to Apartments West demand for written consent allowing any inspector to enter the premises.

Why do inspectors have to write a special letter for Apartments West? What have these landlords got to hide?

According to one renter, who prefers remaining anonymous to avoid any negative feedback from Apartments West, quite a bit.

PCEI works for creek clean-up

By SHARI IRETON
Staff Writer

Paradise Creek has been going through immense changes in 1991, thanks to the Palouse Clearwater Environmental Institute (PCEI) and countless volunteers.

The Adopt-A-Stream program, one of the fourteen currently in Idaho, helped bring community awareness to the pollution and environmental damage on Paradise Creek. Last April at the creek clean-up, approximately 500 volunteers showed up to remove 6 tons of garbage and plant 3,000 trees.

However, according to the Paradise Creek update meeting held Wednesday, there still is a lot of work left to do.

There are plans to publicize streamwalks and design a greenbelt for Paradise Creek. PCEI will create and install stream interpretation signs along the creek at public access points. So far, the designated trails where the signs will be located are near Guy Wicks Field and the Good Samaritan Village.

A plan will be developed for building and maintaining a fish habitat structure, with help from the local UI American Fisheries Society.

Volunteers will be needed for revegetation of selected sections of Paradise Creek. Since last April's clean-up, some of the newly planted trees have been hit with weed eaters and lawn mowers in preparation for graduation last spring and Elizabeth Zinser's wedding.

PCEI will sponsor one large community-wide clean-up day for Paradise Creek in the spring of 1992. Volunteers will be needed for cleaning up any large objects in the stream missed last year, as well as remaining garbage.

Paradise Creek is also in need of time, to heal from the destruction of man.

"If it were left alone...", said Tom Lamar of PCEI, "We'd probably see the water level come up in the stream."

Living groups at the University of Idaho campus are encouraged to contact PCEI to help the creek's survival. Volunteers are needed to help with clean-up, write brochures, paint signs and build bird and bat houses for Paradise Creek. Some of the work may even be worth college credit for science students.

"This kind of volunteer work can be fun...and it's nice to be able to work outside," said Lamar.

For more information on how your living group or club can help with Paradise Creek, contact PCEI at 882-1444.

UI new home to nature conservancy

By WENDY DEAL

Just east of Moscow on the Troy highway, an area on the University of Idaho Forest Research Nursery, has been registered as a certified Backyard Wildlife Habitat by the National Wildlife Federation. Craig Tufts, director of the federation's Urban Wildlife Program, explained by certifying backyard habitats the National Wildlife Federation plans to encourage the development of a "nationwide network of mini-refuges for wildlife in American communities."

On the Backyard Wildlife Habitat, a quarter acre pond can be found with an island and a goose nesting box. There are three species of game birds and nine water fowl species. Eight birds of prey species and 34 other bird families have been sighted on the habitat. Every kind of bird, from the American Robin to the Great Horned Owl, has been viewed in the Backyard Habitat.

Along with all of the fowl, animals such as cottontail rabbits, weasels and whitetail deer have found a home at the habitat. Aquatic plants have been placed around the pond to provide food. They also consume the excess nitro-

"There are two switches next to the front door. One turns on the lights, the other operates the fire detector. Anyone could hit the wrong switch by mistake and turn off the smoke detector." The apartment does have a fire extinguisher, but it needs to be recharged. The tenant was told the extinguisher would be serviced, but nothing has been done.

One tenant called the office with his complaints. Apartments West sent out their handyman who made the initial check and said he would return later to make repairs. He never did. "That was months ago", said the tenant.

Most of the Apartments West buildings are old to begin with, and the undermanned repair staff is unable to keep up with the buildings' needs.

To combat some of these many problems, students have banded together to make their complaints heard.

UI offers quality health care

By KIM MARTINELL
Staff Writer

University of Idaho students have the opportunity to receive some of the best health care available on the Palouse.

UI Student Health Center physicians and the nurse practitioner provide optimal health care to students, students' spouses and dependants.

Dr. Donald Chin, SHC director/general practice physician, Dr. Susan Gelletly, general internist physician, and Cathy Hanson, registered nurse practitioner, have the credentials and expertise to evaluate and treat illnesses and injuries with utmost competence. Addressing health care policies that influence the structure of the health care system at the university, providing preventive health care and supplying health education are activities in which the professional staff takes a strong and dedicated interest.

"I enjoy my position at the Health Center because it gives me an opportunity to have a positive impact on the students," said Cathy Hanson. "The students make my position worthwhile, they are interested in their health and have the motivation to change negative health practices. One of the major challenges that I face is seeing patients in a timely manner, yet still being able to give them the care they deserve."

The Health Center staff is continually striving to improve the services offered to students. The staff consists of registered nurses, a registered pharmacist, a nutrition counselor/registered dietitian, registered X-ray technologists, psychiatrists, nurses aides, a registered lab technician and the clerical staff, along with the physicians and nurse practitioner. These health care experts aim to provide convenient, economical, high quality medical care at the lowest possible cost.

Student Health provides outpatient treatment for any medical problem in addition to preventive care. These services include diagnosis and treatment of illnesses and injuries, physical exams, allergy injections, TB tests, immunizations, psychiatric services, nutritional counseling and screening and treatment for sexually transmitted diseases.

"I enjoy my position at the Health Center because it gives me an opportunity to have a positive impact on the students."

— Cathy Hanson
Nurse Practitioner

Annual pap tests and pregnancy testing and counseling are provided at the Student Health Center along with treatment of fractures, sprains, concussions, and lacerations. Blood tests, liquid nitrogen wart treatments, X-ray examinations, laboratory studies, prescriptions and over-the-counter medicines are also provided at a nominal cost.

"Being a state institution, Student Health qualifies for state contracting prices on a variety of medications. Reductions in these prices are then passed on to UI students," said Ed Wimer, registered pharmacist.

Students are encouraged to take advantage of the services the UI Student Health Center has to offer.

"Students can be assured their right to strict confidentiality of student records and information is respected at the Health Center", said Dorcy Chenard, registered nurse. Medical records are not part of the university record system and are not included in educational records.

The Student Health Center is located on campus, at the corner of Ash Street and University Avenue, across from the Life Science Building.

Patient care is available for fall, spring and summer sessions, except during recognized holidays. The Health Center hours are Mon. through Fri. 8 to 4:30 p.m. Every Thursday, the Center is closed from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. for a staff meeting.

ASUI Attorney General offers student legal advice

By P. THOMAS ADAMS
ASUI Attorney Gen.

(Editorial note: This article is the first in a series about student's rights and access to legal first aid. The author, Thomas Adams, is a third year law student and the ASUI Attorney General. He is also president of the Moscow chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union, and a legal intern for Siebe, Landeck, Westburg, and Judge.)

Many individuals accept the notion that only "criminals" ever encounter the justice system. There is a pervasive myth the police don't stop people unless they have "done something wrong." However, law enforcement officers are fallible human beings just like the rest of us, and they sometimes make errors based upon incorrect presumptions of fact or law.

Many also believe Americans have "too many rights" and we are a nation that is soft on crime. However, there are more people per capita incarcerated in the United States, for longer and more strict sentences, than anywhere else in the world. Ninety percent of persons charged plead guilty. Of the remaining ten percent, 85 to 95 percent are found guilty at trial. Only one to four percent have charges dropped on "technicalities". We are arresting and convicting individuals faster than we can build facilities to hold them.

There no longer is a need for the maxim "there ought to be a law" because there probably is. Most citizens cannot traverse life in America without unwittingly committing a crime or two. Ignorance of the law is said to be no excuse; but if you were to attempt to read every criminal act and regulation society expects you to comply with, you would spend the rest of your life reading code books.

The University Judicial Council (UJC) is an administrative court that presides over complaints alleging violations of the Student Code of Conduct. Administrative summons and complaints are prepared and filed against students by "judicial advisors" employed by the Student Advisory Services (SAS). The term "judicial advisor" is deceptive because the SAS advisors also prosecute complaints for the University before the UJC. The UJC is an adversary proceeding, and if a student pleads or is found guilty, the UJC has the authority to impose fines or probation, expel students from the university, or impose mandatory community service work.

"Most citizens cannot traverse life in America without unwittingly committing a crime or two."

— P. Thomas Adams
ASUI Attorney Gen.

Within the first week of school, 33 students were charged with misdemeanors by the Moscow Police and/or served with UJC complaints. Most of these complaints arose from incidents where students had been subjected to investigatory stops on campus by Moscow Police. Even if a student does not receive a criminal or civil citation, he or she may still be cited for a violation by SAS judicial advisors. Students often face double jeopardy via a criminal or civil proceeding in district court and a concurrent administrative proceeding before the UJC.

Students have a right to remain silent, and the right to counsel. You can forfeit these rights by voluntarily providing incriminating information to authorities. It is extremely difficult to remain silent during an encounter with police officers. The natural tendency of most individuals under stress is a compulsion to talk. However, anything you say can and will be used against you. In many instances, the primary basis of the arrest and conviction are statements made to an officer by the person stopped. Statements that may seem innocent or harmless can be damaging. Consequently, you need to remember three simple rules: 1. Shut up. 2. Shut up. and 3. Shut up!

When stopped by a police officer, ask him or her why you were stopped. If you are driving, be aware drivers are required by state law to produce a driver's license, registration and proof of insurance upon request. Be polite, courteous, and respectful at all times. If you are rude, inappropriate behaviour may be used to prejudice a judge or jury against you. (Traffic stops are often covertly video-taped or recorded for evidentiary use.)

If it appears you may be under investigation and the officer starts to question you, ask if you are under arrest. If the officer answers in the affirmative, you should invoke your right to remain silent and ask to call an attorney. If the officer states you are not under arrest, ask if you are free to go. If so, LEAVE IMMEDIATELY. If not, politely decline to answer questions, and periodically inquire if you are free to leave and for permission to call an attorney. Depart or call an attorney at the first opportunity.

If you are arrested or receive a citation, you have nothing to gain and everything to lose by talking to a prosecutor without first consulting an attorney or the UI legal aid clinic. Anything you say to friends or family may also be used against you. Do not talk to ANYONE about the incident other than those you retain to provide you with legal assistance. If you receive a UJC complaint, do not talk to the SAS "judicial advisors" until you first talk to someone at the ASUI Attorney General's office or hire your own attorney.

Laws and regulations are complex, and law enforcement officials sometime make mistakes. You may be innocent and unjustly or improperly charged. You may have been stopped without probable cause, or the case may be based upon an incorrect assumption of law, a mistaken observation, or misinformation. Consequently, it is wise to obtain competent advice in order to make an informed decision concerning your best legal or administrative options.

Many UI students will never experience such unfortunate circumstances, but hundreds wind up in the UJC and/or the criminal justice process every year. If you do incur difficulties, use your right to remain silent and seek professional advice immediately. Students served with UJC complaints can obtain free assistance from the ASUI Attorney General's office by calling 885-6331 to make an appointment.

Fire victims received unwarranted abuse

In the aftermath of last week's fire on Lilley Street, the pain and suffering has gone much further than what the fire handed out.

And the 24 students left homeless by the fire have one organization to thank.

Gratitude goes out from those former residents to Apartment's West, the owners of the burned complex.

After speaking with over half of these unfortunate students, I have come to an obvious conclusion.

Apartment's West made a big mistake and it is time that they pay for their repetitive ignorance in treating their former tenants.

Immediately after the fire I listened to the manager of the complex explain how willing Apartment's West was to help the people involved in the fire.

But after the media coverage died down and the shock of the fire subsided, it was time for Apartment's West to inform their former tenants of how the owner would handle the fire.

Surprise.

These people pointed out that it was the first time they had heard from the owner, and one woman admitted that she had lived there for over a year.

Definitely service at it's finest!

Where was the owner when the tenants had problems with their stoves that took, after numerous phone calls, several months to fix?

Another specific example of this "fine" service ... a tenant had a hole in her ceiling and after weeks of proding it was fixed with the hammering of several nails into it.

Of course, it is the responsibility of apartment owners to check for fire safety and provide proper prevention materials.

Then why is it that they forced the local fire marshall to get a court order before inspecting a place that tenants had already complained of smoking outlets.

When the fire actually occurred, the fire alarms malfunctioned and didn't sound-off.

For eight apartments there was only one fire extinguisher and one room didn't even have a window to escape from the building.

Apartment's West should be held accountable for the fire if it is indeed a legal question.

They definitely tried to take advantage of naive students by asking them to sign a paper that supposedly was just to get their initial deposit back.

However, this form stated that "the parties mutually agree to release each other from all claims and liabilities whatsoever now and in future arising."

Fortunately the students recognized the injustice and refused to sign it.

But Apartment's West wasn't through yet.

In a feeble attempt, they designed another release form with extensive legal jargon in an attempt to fool the students.

The bottom line is that Apartment's West finds themselves in a precarious position without an escape in sight.

Now it is just a matter of time before the cause of the fire is determined and Apartment's West pays their dues.

Until then, good luck to those unfortunate students involved in this incident.

And for Apartment's West, good riddance.

— Matt Lawson

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Victim thankful for support

Editor;

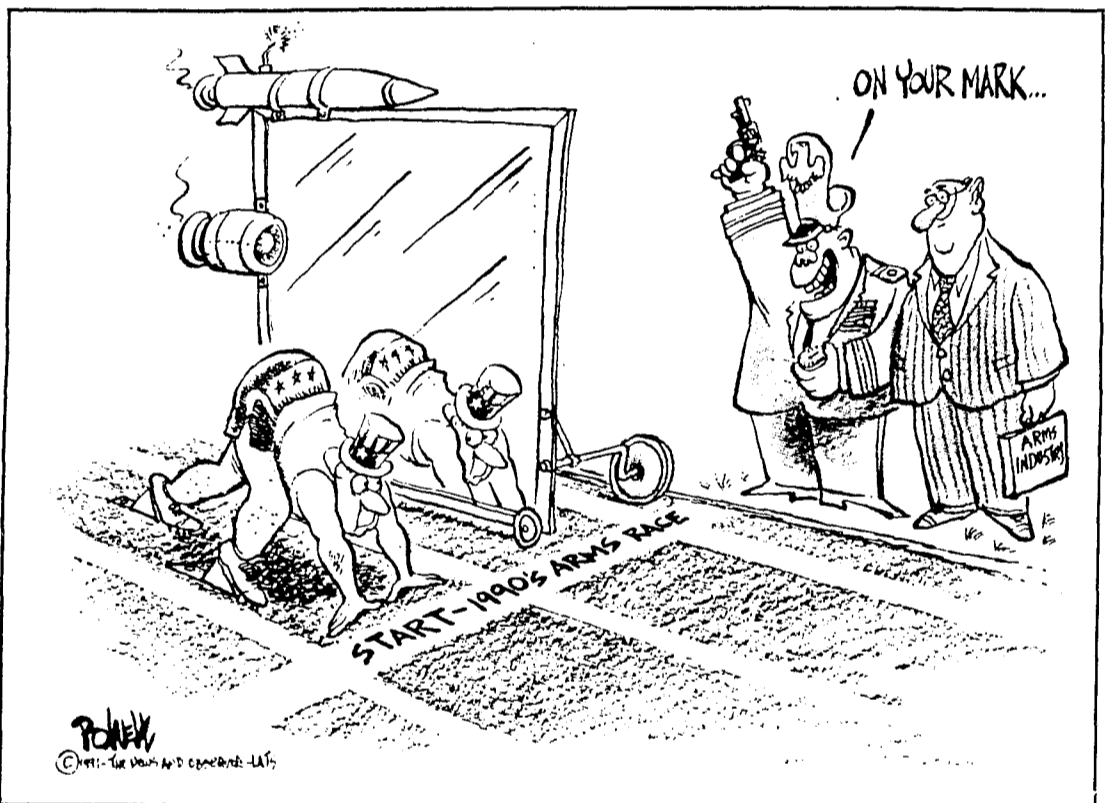

I am writing this letter in acknowledgement of the wonderful people of this community. This was demonstrated to me personally after my apartment and all of its belongings burned last Friday. Within the hour, people that I knew, and even those who I didn't, were offering assistance of all sorts. Offers of housing, clothing, and anything else I might be needing came pouring in. It's heartwarming to know that I live in a community so ready to help others.

The number of people who have offered me assistance is so long I couldn't even begin to list them all. I do want everyone of you to know how grateful I am for your kindness and generosity. Your show of concern has made this much easier to endure. I would like to thank the owners and crew of Sam's Subs. I would also like to thank the ASUI Senate for their quick action in helping myself and the other tenants financially. Tricia Borgmann and Emmy Lou Saxton, a special thanks goes out to you. You dropped your own lives in order to help me with mine. You'll never know how much that meant.

I can't even begin to express my appreciation and love to the men of Lambda Chi Alpha. You have, and still are, giving me much needed support, both emotionally and financially. You

There is no room for sexism

"I don't believe in isms. Isms, in my opinion, are not good."--Matthew Broderick, Ferris Bueller's Day Off.

The "ism" I abhor most intensely is SEXISM. On a daily basis I, and other women, have to deal with sexist behavior from men who either aim to intimidate us, or don't realize the things they say are sexist.

Of course, not all men are sexist. The ones who aren't, we usually don't hear from enough to know they're actually out there. Can you imagine how difficult it must be for a man to stand up to his friends while they are comparing their girlfriends' breast sizes?

The thought of this makes me sick, but it happens. A lot of men talk about women as if they have no respect for them and their ideals. To remain silent in this situation not only demeans women, but also the passive party.

The blame for this ongoing behavior does not lie solely on the shoulders of men. Women, if they are directly or indirectly the victim of an attack, need to speak out against insults that may or may not be intentional. Silence, in any form of abuse, is a license for the offender to continue.

Most women have been the subject of chauvinism at some point in their lives. As a teenager, I remember being hassled by some guys in downtown Boise. Whistles and hoots followed me as I walked by. In my teenage insecurity, I had no idea if they were sarcastic or if they actually thought their calls would flatter me. I still don't know, however, I do recall their behavior angered me.

But I didn't say anything. I thought if I challenged them, told them how they insulted me, they would see me as uptight and cold. In my silence, I gave them free reign to continue.

There are many times men may not even realize what they say is sexist. This is an opportunity for any woman to educate them. The key to helping men learn and for them to not feel defensive is in how you tell them.

Nobody takes kindly to being attacked about the way they live their life. Aggressive behavior will not help the situation if you are dealing with an aggressor. If you remain assertive without becoming overbearing, more than likely, respect for your input will follow.

I am ashamed to think of the number of times I allowed someone to indirectly insult me. Because I am a woman, some men actually think I can't drive a stickshift, play pool, or understand a football game. Growing up, society told me I shouldn't know those things anyway. And women just needed to accept the fact male behavior allowed sexism.

Not anymore. Now is the time for women and men to undermine this particular "ism." Sexism, in any form, is a fire to be extinguished. Passivity is its fuel. If we choose to remain silent, sexism will burn indefinitely into the future, teaching yet another generation to accept life the way it is.

Minerva Leon is an exchange student from Chile, who is here to experience the English language first hand. In Chile, Minerva taught technical english and translated agricultural texts from English to Spanish for the government.

The president of the Rotary club in her area suggested to Minerva that she come to the States to specialize in translating and make her job easier.

Alpha Delta Kappa, a group of retired teachers, granted Minerva a full year scholarship. Her previous teaching experience and high test scores on the TOFL enabled her to come to UI.

Back in Chile, Minerva used her linguistics degree to develop foreign language programs in the university. There is only one department in one university that translates agricultural texts, and it is "very small and doesn't pay very much." Minerva has plans to rejoin her fellow students and enlarge the department after her year here is done. The new department will translate for private businesses, larger companies, and Agricultural schools.

Minerva likes the university, especially the high level of organization here. But there is one problem, "I'm having a hard time with the food," Minerva admits. Welcome to Marriot.

Minerva still communicates with other members of the foreign exchange group, but she mostly interacts with Americans. "We (foreign students) are not just here to get a major, we are here to learn more about the culture, the people, the language. And if we continue talking among ourselves, we will never do it."

When Minerva completes her year here, she will return to Chile and "start to work immediately because they are waiting for me." "Now that I have seen other teachers working here at the university in the United States, I plan to go back and work a little bit more with the programs (in Chile). I'm seeing new ideas and techniques here." She is planning on taking more agriculture courses in Chile because "at this moment it has a lot of future in Chile."

"Chile is an undeveloped country, and we are learning from other countries." Not only is agriculture important to Chile, it is personally important to Minerva, who grew up on a farm. "Now I want to contribute something to my area and my country."

"Now I want to contribute something to my area and my country."

— Minerva Leon
Exchange student

The social change for Minerva has turned out to be more of a pleasure than a shock. "We are alike, I like the people here very much." Minerva admits to being a little surprised by the welcome she has received here. In Chile, Americans are believed to be "cold". "I have to write to everybody and tell them it's not true."

Minerva's roommate, Heidi Bitterwolf, enjoys rooming with a foreign exchange student. "I get the opportunity to learn as much as possible about another culture and its language." In return, Heidi is "proud to share the ways of the United States with Minerva."

Last year, 497 exchange students from 72 different countries attended UI. "The International Student Exchange Program has tripled its size since Bob Neunschwander took charge," says Molly, an office coordinator for ISEP. All students interested in studying abroad are encouraged to see Neunschwander for information and to talk to people like Minerva to hear firsthand what studying abroad is like. It might just be the experience of a lifetime.

gen and phosphorous surrounding the nursery.

Kas Dumeroese, nursery research associate, David Wenny, nursery manager, and Ken Quick, nursery technician, have tried to attract birds of prey by planting several unusual trees on the habitat.

The Backyard Wildlife Habitat is still under construction. When finished it will incorporate windbreaks, an area containing Idaho native trees and a small Christmas tree plantation. Potholes may also be included to catch pond overflow and extend the water purification process. The potholes would also provide a good habitat for the waterfowl. The habitat is two years away from being open to the public, but should be very beneficial for both wildlife and observers.

Dumroese commented, "The habitat is getting to be a popular place with critters. We hope it will be popular with humans too."

12 reasons why you'll love Macintosh

1. It's easy to use.

Bring home an Apple® Macintosh® computer today, and use it to complete assignments by tonight—even if you've never used a computer before.

2. You don't have to speak computerese.

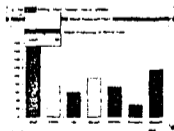

Instead of cryptic MS-DOS commands such as COPY C:\WORDPROC\DRIFT.DOC A:\WORK, Macintosh uses familiar words, such as Copy and Print, and pictures, such as file folders for storing your documents and a trash can for files you want to throw away.

3. You don't have to be a computer science major to set one up.

Just plug everything together, flip the "on" switch, and you're ready to roll.

4. It's a breeze to copy information and paste it into another document.

To copy this chart, simply use the mouse to choose the Copy command.

To place the chart in another document, just choose the Paste command.

5. All Macintosh programs work in the same way.

Learn to use one Macintosh program, and you've learned the basics of using them all. For example, the commands you use, such as Open, Close, Copy, Paste, Save, Cut, Print, and Undo, are found in the same place—every time.

6. It can grow with you.

This week you're majoring in philosophy, next week it's nuclear physics. After all, no one knows exactly what the future will bring. That's why millions of students have found that investing in a Macintosh is a smart move. Because Macintosh can immediately help you do whatever you do—better. And if, come tomorrow, you find that you want to do something different, no problem. It's easy to upgrade your Macintosh to help you rise to the challenge.

7. It's great for college and beyond.

Doing your work faster, better, and more creatively is also a plus in the working world—and that's precisely why Macintosh computers are used in 74 percent of Fortune 1000 companies.*

74%

8. It's got connections.

To connect a printer, a modem, an external hard disk, or just about any other peripheral to a Macintosh, simply plug it in. That's all there is to it.

9. It lets you work with others.

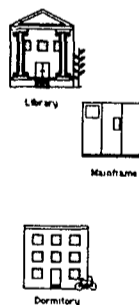

Every Macintosh is equipped with an Apple SuperDrive™: a unique floppy disk drive that can use not only Macintosh disks, but also MS-DOS and OS/2 disks created on IBM and IBM-compatible computers. With SoftPC from Insignia Solutions, you can even run MS-DOS applications on your Macintosh.

10. It's so easy to network.

Just connect the LocalTalk® cable from one Macintosh to another Macintosh. It takes just a few minutes, and you don't have to buy any additional hardware or software.

11. You can connect to your school's mainframe or minicomputer.

With Macintosh, you can send in assignments, gain access to software you need for a class, and receive lecture notes, class schedules, and other information—right from your own room.

12. It's more affordable than ever.

Macintosh prices have never been lower—especially with the student pricing available from your authorized Apple campus reseller. You may even qualify for financing, which makes Macintosh even more affordable.

These reasons all add up to the power of Macintosh. The power to be your best.*

One year later: Revenge is the key

After an impressive performance last week running back Ronnie White might see more action against Montana State. (JIM VOLLBRECHT PHOTO)

By TOM BITHELL
Senior Staff Writer

The University of Idaho will be looking to get even with the Montana State University Bobcats this Saturday in Bozeman, Mont.

Even, that is, for last season's opening day loss to MSU, 27-24, in the ASUI-Kibbie Dome.

That loss snapped a 16 game Vandal winning streak over Big Sky Conference opponents, and ended a 14 game regular-season win streak in the Dome.

It also set the Vandals at 0-1 in the Big Sky Conference, and in part, cost them a fourth straight Big Sky Championship.

This year's game is just as important, for either team's Big Sky hopes.

"Obviously this is an important game," MSU Head Coach Earle Solomonson said. "This is our opening league game and we're excited for the ballgame."

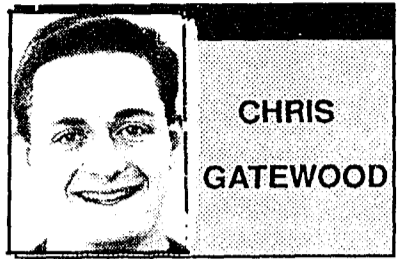

The loser of the game comes away 0-1 in the Big Sky. It's a hole nobody wants to get in since the Big Sky has been won only once by a team with more than one league loss—Montana in 1982.

In last year's game Idaho fumbled three times to the Bobcats, while MSU didn't turn the ball over once. Two of the fumbles resulted in MSU touchdowns, forcing the Vandals to play catch-up the rest of the day.

This year, turnovers could again play a big part in a Montana State (1-2) upset of the No. 2 nationally ranked Vandals (2-0).

"We've got to try to force some turnovers against the run, as well as pressure the pass," Solomonson said. "We look at Idaho and we see tremendous ability to throw the football and

Head for the hills

Could somebody please hand me a kleenex, and please be quick about it?

It seems the altitude at the top of the NCAA Division I-AA polls has gotten quite high. All the way to the top of the Big Sky Conference to be exact. So high, in fact, my nose won't stop bleeding.

For the first time in the history of the Big Sky, which started in 1963, two teams, the University of Nevada and the Vandals are ranked first and second in the nation respectively.

Yes, the same Big Sky Conference that is located in the middle of nowhere. The same Big Sky Conference with rolling hills, snow capped mountains and of course gambling casinos. The same Big Sky Conference that is isolated from much of the country, because of travel costs and location. The same Big Sky Conference that is so spread out, the nine members comprise six different states. The same Big Sky Conference that is finally getting the recognition it deserves for being the best conference in I-AA.

"It's nice to look at the top of the polls and see two of our teams sitting at the top," Big Sky Conference Commissioner Ron Stephenson said. "We have known for a long time we have a good conference."

A conference good enough to have a 68.4% winning percentage against all teams outside the Big Sky. A conference that has won nearly 90% of its games against Division II and NAIA schools and has a 2-3 record this year against Division I schools. Granted, those two wins are over pathetic schools like Long Beach State and UNLV, but all the same, they're still wins over teams that offer 30 extra scholarships.

Actually, scholarships are the reason the Big Sky is stronger for the most part. A few years ago the NCAA reduced scholarships down to 95, a move that has forced some would-be Division I players to drop down a notch.

In 1992 Division I will be further limited when their scholarship limit drops further down to 85. This means 10 players that won't be at Notre Dame, USC and Washington. They may find themselves at outposts like Moscow and Bozeman.

This has made the whole conference stronger. Besides, Nevada and UI, Boise State is ranked sixth in the nation and seems to be just as good as last year, maybe better. They have the best cornerback in the nation, Frank Robinson. In BSU's first two games he had two interceptions and leads the Big Sky Conference in punt return average. Weber State University has a powerful offense. An offense good enough to be second in the Big Sky in total yardage. Their quarterback,

Vandals look to keep drum rolling

By MATT LAWSON
Editor

Defining the Idaho Vandals volleyball win over Gonzaga Tuesday night as big wouldn't do the streak-ending victory applicable justice.

Idaho rallied from a first-game loss to completely take over the match for a 7-15, 15-5, 15-7, 15-7 triumph.

The Vandals had lost 15 straight games since Sept. 1, and after a humbling weekend in California things didn't look good for Idaho heading into Tuesday night's match.

Gonzaga defeated Idaho in four games Aug. 31 and after Idaho's difficult times things looked bleak for the Vandals.

Idaho coach Tom Hilbert realized the Vandals were struggling and he had to make a move. That decision came in the form of setter Amy Hanks.

At the beginning of the season Hilbert decided to redshirt Hanks and go with senior Kristie Roes.

But after an ankle injury and a struggling offense Hilbert tried to find a spark by putting Hanks in the lineup.

The transfer from Ricks College responded with 33 assists and 10 digs in her first game ever for Idaho.

Those stats didn't compare to her serving domination that filled a gap that had plagued Idaho all season.

Hanks had three service aces while making no errors and won the second game almost single-handedly with eight straight serving points.

"The Eastern game is the key match for us. WSU will just be fun for us."

— Tom Hilbert
Idaho Volleyball Coach

"After last weekend I felt we needed a change," Hilbert said of the move putting Hanks in the line-up. "Kristie's ankle is still bothering her and her mobility is lacking because of it."

Middle blocker Dee Porter responded with maturity on another coaching move by Hilbert between games one and two.

After Porter struggled in the first game Hilbert decided to take her out of the lineup for the first time all season. The sophomore from Weiser, Idaho responded with nine kills to go along with five digs and two blocks.

The outside hitting duo of Heather McEwen and Jessica Puckett continued to dominate with 16 kills along with 10 digs by Puckett.

McEwen, who continues to lead the team with 104 kills, has shown impressive leadership over the young Idaho team.

Idaho's defense also played a major role in the win.

Gonzaga was held to a stifling .029 hitting percentage. Idaho countered its strong defense with a season-high hitting percentage on 39 kills.

Brittany Vanhaverbeke and Nancy Wicks had three blocks apiece to lead Idaho to a 8-3 advantage over the Bulldogs.

Freshman Brittany VanHaverbeke felt the victory was crucial for the Vandals as they head into Big Sky play tonight against Eastern Washington at Memorial Gym (7:30).

"It was good to finally win a game," Vanhaverbeke, who has led Idaho in blocks the last three matches said. "We had a good week of practice and we just need to keep playing good."

Vanhaverbeke leads the Vandals with 30 blocks on the season while Wicks has 25.

Eastern Washington is arguably the hottest team in the Northwest as the Eagles have won five matches in-a-row and have had their best start at 7-1.

One of their victories, a four-set match over the University of Washington, stands out in the Vandals' minds after Idaho lost in three straight games to the Huskies Aug. 30.

The Vandals won't have any time to breathe after the Eastern game. Idaho travels to Washington State Saturday night to take on a Cougar team that defeated Washington Wednesday in Pullman.

"The Eastern game is the key match for us," Hilbert said when comparing the two games. "WSU will just be fun for us."

Idaho is now 3-7 after their toughest pre-season since Hilbert took over as head coach.

Idaho's next home games are against Idaho State and Boise State September 27-28.

Doyle keeps it in perspective

By DOUG BAUER
Staff Writer

A kicker is just a guy that calls himself a specialist and lets his team do all of the work.

Not this kicker.

A kicker is just like a punter, a cry-baby that can't play the real game.

Not this kicker.

A kicker is...Enough! This kicker is Thayne Doyle and he's a team player that has enough heart to play anything.

Doyle is the University of Idaho's kicker. He is in his fourth year starting for the Vandals and he's shattered numerous school records.

His records include most points scored (256), most conversions made (127), most field goals attempted (66) and most field goals made (43).

"I don't think about the records now, maybe in ten years they'll be nice, but right now I'm just living week to week," Doyle said. "As long as I do it for the team when they need it, that's all that matters."

Week to week is the way a kicker has to live. According to Doyle, if he dwells on mistakes he's made before, then he'll be down on himself and continue to kick bad. If he is too sure of himself, he'll become overconfident and miss.

So far this season, Doyle leads his team in points with eighteen. He has two field goals and is one hundred percent extra point wise.

"I think Thayne's the type of guy that starts off slow and finishes strong. I think he's hitting the ball pretty well this season," Vandal Head Coach John L. Smith said. "He's just got to start pounding the ball the way that he can."

Doyle started kicking footballs his junior year of high school at Gonzaga Prep in Spokane. He had always played soccer before then.

He kicked a forty-eight yarder in high school and his team won the state championship his senior year. He then signed with Idaho over Boise State and Montana.

"It was the only place that offered me a full scholarship, and it's nice to be able to play where my parents can come and see me," Doyle said.

Doyle red-shirted his freshman year, and beat out starting kicker Brian Decicio in spring training of that same year.

Decicio gave up his senior year to accept a job offer in California, and Doyle has been booting field goals and extra points left and right ever since.

As far as his team goes, Doyle contributes all of his accomplishments to their great play.

"They put me into position so that I can do my thing. If it wasn't for them, I probably wouldn't have any points at all," he said.

Doyle has played on the same teams as some past Vandal greats, including John Friesz, Mark Schlereth, Marvin Washington and Charlie Oliver, just too name a few.

If you will, Doyle can be called a great right now, but not that he will attest too.

"I do what I can, kicking is one third snapping, one third holding and one third kicking, anyone on the chain can screw up," he said.

"He'll do anything you tell him to do. He continues to work and he wants to be the best he can be," Smith said.

Doyle is majoring in sports science and minoring in sports psychology. He would like to attend graduate school to study sports psychology after graduation this spring.

"A lot of teams have sports psychologists now to help their players become more mentally prepared for games and such," he said. "I'd like to get into run at you. We're going to go in and try to contain the run, and then stop the pass as much as possible."

While MSU expects the pass mixed with the run from Idaho, Idaho can't be certain what MSU will emphasize — the run or pass.

"It's hard to say what they're going to really do, as far as them throwing the ball, or whether they're gonna go back and run it or what," Idaho Coach John L. Smith said. "I'm just not certain what they're gonna give us at this point."

Last season, Idaho was the first team to face MSU after they scrapped their wishbone attack for more of a passing look.

This year at least, the guessing shouldn't be as hard.

"We've at least seen last year's film," Smith said. "We know what they did during the year even though they've changed. They're a little bit different right now, we know what to expect." Solomonson agrees.

"I think they know a little more about us than they did a year ago," Solomonson said, but added, "some things will be different."

While Idaho barely escaped defeat at home last week against Southwest Texas State University, 41-38, Montana State barely lost, 19-17, to visiting Sacramento State University. It was the second straight home loss for the Bobcats, who also lost to Sam Houston State University 26-23.

"We've made quite a lot of penalties on offense," Solomonson said. "We're a capable football team. We've got some good skill people and we have the ability to move the ball. The bottom line for us is that we ourselves have to play up to the level we are capable of as a football team."

Offensively the Bobcats have struggled the last couple of weeks. Last weekend Solomonson benched the starting quarterback, senior Joe Volek, and brought in sophomore Mark Fisher who will start Saturday's game. MSU is currently eighth in Big Sky total offense.

Defensively the Bobcats rank second in the Big Sky in total defense, while Idaho ranks eighth.

MSU defensive tackle Corey Widmer, an All-American selection, recorded two of the Bobcats eight sacks against Idaho last year. This year he will have to be reckoned with again, along with the other two returning defensive line starters.

Wherever it is, Idaho's offensive line will have to rise up for the challenge Smith said.

Offensively the Vandals hope to have the offensive line in better shape. Center David Spellman will be back from a bought with the flu, along with tackle Shawn Smith, and back-up center Bryan Steinberg. Tackle Jody Schnug could also be ready to play after recovering from an ankle and knee injury that sidelined him in the season opener.

The Vandals go into the game leading the Big Sky in total offense, while quarterback Doug Nussmeir leads in passing efficiency and total offense among quarterbacks.

Defensively Idaho is led by pre-season All-American defensive end Jeff Robinson. Robinson was all over the field last week against Southwest Texas, and led the defense with 13 tackles, including three for losses.

"I think they know a little more about us than they did a year ago."

— Earle Solomonson
MSU Head Coach

"There's not a whole lot you can do," Smith said of Widmer. "They move him around so much you don't know where he's gonna be."

Cross country set to battle

Trying their hand with some tough competition tomorrow at the ten team Emerald City Invitational at Seattle, the Vandal cross country teams will see what they're made of.

The women's team is coming off of a decent showing last week at the Whitman Invitational at Walla Walla. It should prove to be quite a bit harder against the competition they will meet tomorrow however.

"The competition will be great. There will be two great teams there and it will be a real high caliber meet," women's Coach Scott Lorek said.

Lorek is not joking when he talks about tough competition. Both the University of Oregon and the host team, the University of Washington will be there. Oregon is one of the top five cross country teams in the nation and Washington is definitely no slouch themselves.

The women's number three runner, Robyn Slate will be out of action this weekend, due to having bronchitis, but other than that, the women's team is looking strong.

The men's team will be running once again without their top two runners, Mark Olden and Stephanos Phygetakis.

They will have to depend mainly on young inexperienced freshmen and older, yet just as inexperienced runners.

The men's teams are coming off a not so strong showing last weekend at the Whitman Invitational. No Vandal runners finished in the top five.

Jamie Martin is as good as it gets. He is second in the nation right behind the Vandals Doug Nussmeier in total offense. Even the Montana Grizzlies are still right in the middle of things with Lewiston High graduate Brad Lebo at quarterback. In a loss this past weekend vs. Louisiana Tech, he threw for a career high 331 yards. "Overall, I think the conference is as strong as it has ever been," Stephenson said. "Top to bottom the teams in this conference are all comparable." Yes, even the lowly Idaho State Bengals aren't that bad. They did lose 41-7 to Kansas State, but they committed five turnovers inside their own 30.

Which brings me to the issue of Nevada. Thus far, the Wolfpack has been in a word, awesome. They started the season by whipping UNLV, 50-8, by putting on an awesome defensive display. With five minutes to go in the game the Rumm'n' Rebels had just 32 yards in offense and one first down. Last week they crushed Northwestern State (La.) 45-14. Nevada is ranked No.1 in the Big Sky in pass defense, scoring defense and total defense.

"Right now I think Nevada is the best team in the conference," Stephenson said. "Idaho is real close behind. When the two meet, it should be real interesting."

Ah yes, the game. The Vandals will meet the Wolfpack on October 5, in the Kibbie Dome. If both keep winning, then it will be a war of epic proportions. The Vandal ticket office estimates an expected crowd of around 14,000, a good crowd for the Kibbie Dome.

"I think Nevada could challenge the Big West title right now," Stephenson said. "They have a good football team."

Maybe, but they still have to beat the Vandals. The Big Sky Conference may not be Notre Dame, but I'll enjoy or own little brand of football until I graduate.

■ BASKETBALL — University of Idaho men's basketball coach Larry Eustachy has agreed to a new four-year contract.

UI officials, including President Elisabeth Zinser, Hunter and Eustachy, have agreed to the contract. The education board meets today and Friday at Boise State University.

The contract is similar to the one football coach John L. Smith signed in December, 1990. It includes yearly bonuses should Eustachy stay at Idaho and a liquidated damage clause — the so-called "buyout clause" — which would be costly to Eustachy if he leaves Idaho before four years.

Because the wording is virtually identical to that in Smith's contract, Hunter doesn't expect any hangups with approval from the education board. Idaho coaches has operated on one-year contracts until Smith's deal.

■ ULTIMATE FRISBEE — Ultimate frisbee begins at the UI starting Tuesday September 25. There is also a captains meeting on September 26. There is one hitch. When people miss the captains meeting, the teams are automatically disqualified from the playoffs.

■ CO-REC SOFTBALL — The deadline to join co-rec softball is September 25. The games begin Saturday, September 28 and will also be played on the 29th.

■ SOCCER — Last week, the University of Idaho International soccer team used a 15 minute overtime to its full advantage in handing the UI Club its first defeat of the season 3-1.

Chinese restaurant serves up culinary pleasure

OPINION by

TRENT YOUNG & TIM COOK
Silent Witnesses

TENTATIVE TITLE:
STARDUST MEMO-RIES IN A CUTE
CAFE. TENTATIVE SUBTI-TLE: I BOUGHT TIM
DIN—DIN.

Our visit to the fabulous Chang Sing chinese restaurant last Friday night was the stuff from which legends are made and, strangely enough, reminds me a personal anecdote.

(THE UNIVERSE GROANS)

Once, when I was about seven or eight, my parents took my brother, sister and I out for a Chinese dinner that ended in tragedy. TIM TRIES TO INTERRUPT,
BUT TRENT SQUASHES
HIS UNGAINLY AND,
FRANKLY, RUDE DEMA-
NOR ... During the pork n' seeds appetizer, my unwatched brother stole over to the establishment's gigantic (apocalyptic-sized) fish tank and proceeded to kill (mercilessly) one endangered aquarian after another. My parents whipped us all and took us home.

It's all true. I'm still scarred with anxious wounds. As a result, I have a hard time relaxing in an oriental restaurant. I keep thinking my Mom's waiting somewhere in the shadows with a ginsu knife.

YOU KNOW THOUGH,
TRENT...our visit to Chang Sing came on the heels of my 22nd birthday party in which I actually punched a friend for no other reason except I knew I wouldn't remember it. (AND THE FACT THAT HE'D HAD
HIS LIMIT OF B-DAY
BEVERAGES, AND KEPT
CALLING EVERYONE
"HARRY".)

I was sort of beleaguered

I was sort of beleaguered this next night we went to the Chang Sang, nursing emotional pain, as well as a body that was rejecting all of my attempts to apologize. I wasn't in the mood to eat.

TIM. The Name of the restaurant was Chang Sing, not Chang Sang--which probably means something entirely different in the restaurant lingo; possibly something to the effect of...

TIM CONTINUES: Thanx
a lot, Trent, going back in the story and misspelling the name just for another cheap opportunity to correct me. Its' really great luck you get to edit this section so you can humiliate me in print...and you're "failing utterly" (borrowing a phrase from one insightful reader).

TRENT TALKS: Don't be petty. Anyway, our trip commenced at about 10:45 P.M. last Saturday. Having just finished a hellish shift at the video emporium, (God knows, though, how I can never seem to leave that place) Cecile and Tim-boy came to get something to eat.

We bemoaned the time and brainstormed for a place that might be open this time of night besides Zip Trip and the candy counter at Circle K. Then, we looked across the street and found our blessed sanctuary.

TIM REMINDS US that Trent was whining about his desire for some Chinese food for what has seemed like an epoch. Who was I to complain, I just welcome all food contributions. So what the hell, I bid...I would have to spend just another hour with him.

I THINK THAT NOW would be a good time to introduce our hostess and waitress. As we all walked in, (actually, Tim and Cecile were already there. I had to run home and get my warmly by the Owner (slash) Welcoming Committee (slash) all-around-pal, Shirley Eng.

At the table, Michelle Sorenson was unlucky enough to wait on us as we sat, smoked, and talked

"Chang Sing is in."

about how much we hated prospective employers who leave you dangling just for their own perverted and infantile reasons.

TIM STAYS SILENT AND ALLOWS TRENT TO BLATHER.

From the start of our visit, everything went exceptionally well. Although we tried our best to be the most ignorant and demanding customers, Michelle came through every time with flying colors.

By the time we had all sat down to order, the time was well past their scheduled 11 P.M. closing, but Michelle took the whole thing in stride. (We later found her boyfriend was waiting outdoors in his car for her for well over a quarter of an hour, but she never expresses any impatience.)

But back to our tale. We ordered a gigantic load of food, including two orders of french fries, a combination dinner, pork noodles, an order of shrimp fried rice, two cokes, pork and seeds, tea for three, and a nice little egg roll just for little Timmy to eat all by himself.

This was the best dining experience I've had in ages.
The food was delicious and I thought the leftovers were certainly better than anything I could originally compose.

AND, DEAR FELLOW, it must be recalled that Chan Sing is the most totally groovy place around to munch in. Not only is the decor an inventive mixture between classic chinese and 50's diner's fixtures, but there also exists within an amazing substructure of weirdness. A TV sits on the wall, broadcasting the best in late night network offerings, while two miniature orange trees are in blossom on the counter. (An attached sign reads: "DO NOT PICK THE ORANGES.")

Really, this is the only place in Moscow where I can go to relax. Unlike other restaurants that are crowded with folks, or serve rancid food--this cafe has incredible prices, great service, and delicious food.

Just for fun last year I ordered some type of American food there (I think it was a hamburger, but I'm not sure--I was alone and lonely at the time) and it, too, turned out to be great. The cooks have a wonderful talent with food: they serve what you order fast and piping hot.

I think the whole reason this restaurant is such an undercover treasure is most students have this severe monetary phobia about restaurants, thinking that a good meal will drain their bank accounts. Yet, at Chang Sing the prices are reasonable. We ate all of our huge feast of food for a cost of less than twenty-five bucks.

OK. Cecile says to say Chang Sing is "wonderful and worth every penny."
That's a pretty big compliment, coming from a woman who really doesn't dig chinese food, but enjoys being pampered. Take all our collective advice and go. We demand it.

Nice even to complete idiots who come in asking for a photo, Shirley Eng demonstrates just where her restaurant got its charm. (JIM VOLLBRECHT PHOTO)

New pinball games rival videos for entertainment

By MEYLA BIANCO
Staff Writer

So you thought you had to wear a jean jacket with a twelve inch by twelve inch Metallica patch on the back to enjoy pinball. You thought you had to smoke cloves and subsist on atomic fireballs and Classic Coke.

Not so. I myself have recently been introduced to the unbelievable world of pinball, via my pinball-addicted boyfriend.

I do not smoke and I do not even own a jean jacket. I was skeptical at first, and I admit, prejudiced against arcades and related hangouts.

Now I've seen the light. Pinball is actually really fun, especially at certain times, as long as several other key elements are present.

Bring along handfulls of Dum Dum suckers, a get down and get funky attitude, and try to block your olfactory nerves. (I said I was no longer prejudiced against arcades. I didn't say I liked the smell.)

I am now proud to say I have played several worthwhile pinball games. My two favorites are Rollerderby and a new one, Terminator Two.

Rollerderby, from the frenzied disco times of the seventies, is a machine that takes advantage of such seventies' delights as tight silky shorts, feathered hair and multi-colored windbreakers.

The main goal is to "ride the wall," a vertical, checkerboard patterned challenge designed to either cause you to lose your ball, or to die by the rollerderby wayside.

Terminator Two stands out in a crowd of ordinary pinball machines because of its auditory effects: LOUD and cool. There are several messages, all by Arnie himself. They range from "RUN" to "GET OUT" to "PASSWORD SECURED" to "I'LL BE BACK." Besides the spoken word, T2 boasts some of the best sound effects I've heard, in movies, music or Disneyland rides.

Design wise, Terminator Two is done exceptionally well, with precise graphics, two ramps, two special points areas and even a gleaming chrome skull and war plane.

A unique feature of T2 is the "video mode" effect, complete with a cannon to aim and shoot, which is in the place where the cheezy pull back trigger is usually housed. In the video mode you are challenged to shoot oncoming and aggressive terminators in under fifteen seconds to score "big points."

Folks, how much would you pay to play Terminator Two just once? A dollar? Seventy five cents? At the WSU CUB, plan on only spending a mere quarter for five balls, definitely worth it.

Sometime soon when you're bored or restless, or just want an excuse to listen to top forty arcade music, fill up your pockets with quarters and think about pinball.

Tase T. Lentil visits Palouse

By JILL SEDDON
Staff Writer

Celebration of the Palouse's favorite legume - the lentil - will take place this weekend at the National Lentil Festival in Pullman.

The festival began in 1989 to promote the Pullman area, where 98% of all lentils are grown. Organizers of the festival hope to attract tourists and locals alike with a diverse offering of events, most of which will be in downtown Pullman's Reaney Park on Saturday.

The festivities include:

-A continental breakfast from 8:00 to 10:00 a.m. at Reaney Park with juice and lentil muffins.

-A children's fishing derby at the Reaney Park swimming pool. $1 guarantees one trout for each child.

-Arts and crafts from several Northwest artists will be sold throughout the park from 10:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

-Microbrewery tasting will take place from 1:00 p.m. to 5:00 in the tented area of the park. Purchase of one $2 ticket entitles the beer connoisseur to three ounces each of five Northwest beers or 1 bottle of their choice.

COME MEET

TASE T. LENTIL

-Opportunities to sample a variety of lentil foods such as lentil ice cream, brownies, etc. will be available from 11:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

-Entertainment featuring such bands as The GTE Connection, The Trenchcoats, The King Brothers, and Lentil Bean and The Swingbeans will fill the park with music from noon to 5 p.m.

On Sunday, the Palouse Industries farm tour will allow participants to view distinctive local homes and farms. A Veteran's Memorial golf tournament will also take place at the WSU Golf Course on Sunday.

Aside from a good reason to enjoy a nice Saturday afternoon and perhaps meet the festival's mascot, Taste T. The Lentil Festival is a great opportunity to learn more about lentils, which are high in protein, fiber and iron yet low in fat, sodium, cholesterol and cost.

Additional information about the festival and lentils in general is available at both the Pullman Chamber of Commerce (334-3565) and the USA Dry Pea and Lentil Council (882-3023).

SHARIN' WITH KARIN

Advice by Karin Mason

Dear Readers,

Because I am tired of taking all the blame for my advice, I have acquired a partner to share the responsibility. From this point on, we are both to blame.

Dear Karin and Kim,

I love guacomole, and so does my boyfriend, yet I won't let him spread it on my body, so he's quite rude to me.

Jams and preserves are OK since they don't sting. Mayonnaise and ketchup are nice and add a lot to hair fullness and shine, and make a nice secret sauce for dipping. I don't like peanut butter. It's too chunky.

If he really loves me, he'd let me wear what I want.

Help me.

Dec-licious But Down

Dear Dec-licious,

After consulting many cookbooks, and a trip to the local market, we've come up with some fun, healthy, easy-spreading ideas for you.

But first, you need to talk to your boyfriend and let him know how you feel. Make sure he is aware you don't enjoy having guacomole spread on you, but that jams and preserves are OK.

If you really love each other, try to compromise. For instance, try creamy peanut butter, instead of chunky, with jam. Or, leave out the lemon juice in the guacomole to avoid the discomfort of stinging.

Our suggestions are:

■ Karin: I say cream cheese. It's smooth, creamy and comes in many flavors. Plus, it spreads easily with a knife and tastes better than butter.

■ Kim: Well, maybe. However, Easy Cheese is a lot more fun. You can make neat decorations (smiley faces and stars) on your partner, and it can be licked off easily. Another advantage is it doesn't require refrigeration, so it can be kept in easily accessible areas.

■ Karin: I suppose you're right, but have you ever considered yogurt? It's nutritious and fruity flavored, and just imagine the toppings you can add! Granola, chocolate chips and candy sprinkles are just a few of the possibilities. I wouldn't recommend it frozen because it may be a bit uncomfortable on those sensitive areas.

■ Kim: My, what an imagination! I'll have to try that. But, I tend to lean towards deliciously rich and gooey foods like marshmallow creme. Add chocolate syrup and you have a dessert you could die for and you don't even have to leave the house.

Dear Karin and Kim, I have a pet peeve. It's a little odd, but it's driving me crazy!

Have you ever noticed on a new pair of pants how they stitch the tag on the outside of the pocket? Well, that's not my problem.

What gets my goat is when people tear the tag off and leave the threads still in place. Uggghh!!!

Why do people do this?

Signed, In Stitches

Dear Stitches, We also have witnessed this oddity.

■ Kim: It seems to me people who fail to remove those annoying threads are also the same type who walk around with their shoes untied. The best way to handle the situation is to go right up to the person and demand something be done. Offer them scissors, tweezers or whatever it takes.

■ Karin: Maybe writing a letter to pants and shorts manufacturers nationwide instructing them to put directions for buyers to remove these bothersome stitches would help clear it up. I agree something must be done to stop this craziness.

We hope if any of you out there are of this variety, please take note. Don't be an untied-shoe, thread-hanging fool.

Ten songs to cruise by

The last road sign you passed indicates another 127 miles must be covered before you're there. Sweat acts as glue between your hands and the steering wheel. You've run out of things to fantasize about, and the scenery is about as beautiful as eastern Montana from a dingy window. Your breath has the unpleasant tint of bacteria-ridden coffee, and you'd give anything for a nice butt massage. In fact, the only thing keeping you awake is a fear of waking up plastered to the front of an eighteen-wheeler.

Thank God for music. Having encountered the above scenario a few times, I must say music can be better than mixing Jolt and Vivarin for keeping those on-the-road blues away. Through the years, I've assembled a collage of cool tunes to keep you motivated into the night: "Cruisin' Classics."

- "Runnin' Down a Dream"-Tom Petty
- "Panama"-Van Halen
- "Radar Love"-Golden Earring
- "Start Me Up"-Rolling Stones
- "Red Barchetta"-Rush
- "Why Don't We Do It in the Road?"-Beatles
- "Over the Hills and Far Away"-Led Zeppelin
- "On the Road Again"-Canned Heat

Staff Writer

Pardon my absence, fellow star-gazers, but I for all the constellations in the Milky Way could not pass up the spectacular opportunity that fell into my lap regarding the Cattle Demons of Awagura and the under-rated cast of Facts of Life. That Tootie sure can do tricks with Slim-Fast, and Blair isn't half as cute as Natalie when it comes to but-tocks. Don't let me go without saying Edna Garrett is one fine woman around the cold Awagurian region.

Now readers, by popular request, I will devote this week star-interpretation to matters of the heart. Fasten those seatbelts, grab the frankinsense, and let's discover each other together in cosmic harmony.

ARIES: If you had any unselfish bones in your self-absorbed body, maybe you could prove to be an OK girl/boyfriend. Oh well, your innocence and trusting attitude could do some real damage to your ego which is far too large and vulnerable. Get a spine, learn your left from your right and go torture Aries, Gemini, and Aquarius natives who eat Eggos.

TAURUS: Although you really seem to get off on affection, touching and losing at card games that aren't your speed, you should realize that sometimes you can get carried away and your beloved doesn't appreciate those slimy hands of yours all over them. Take a breath and try to put some effort into love relations because prospective mates won't just come along. Not to you, anyway. Try hitting on Capricorn, Virgo and Pisces. That, or buy a new deck of cards.

GEMINI: Your on-again off-again freaky way of using people isn't working- like it ever was. You're no prize, I assure you. In fact, anyone thinking straight would have nothing, I mean nothing to do with you. Don't forget to put the mayo away after cooking and screwing up that romantic dinner for two—pigs in a blanket. If you can schmooze someone into hanging out, concentrate on Aries, Aquarius and Sagittarius.

CANCER: OK, OK. Do you even need advice in this department? The beautiful exceptions of this harsh, cruel world—angels from the heavens. What would this world be without you? I shudder to think the thought. Because of your charm, wit, piles of money and incredible good looks, everyone flocks to you for friendship, advice, and Love. Be careful because there are a lot of bad, yucky people in the world and they'd probably try anything to be near and intimate with you. Gosh, you're so nice, sexy and longed for, can you blame them? Set your standards on Taurus, Scorpio, Capricorn and Pisces— if they can cut it.

LEO: Goodness gracious. Too bad your only sexual contacts these days are with 1-900-FANTASY. And to think you're wondering why. It's common knowledge that some don't particularly like your oh so aggressive ways. Though you may use Aqua-Velva, it's still not millionaire cologne. People don't like you for who you are, it's what you have.

VIRGO: Uptight and anal retentive little virgins- oh so frigid and unable to give yourself up to love. There's a big ol' Shucks Buddy. Your not worth it anyway. Or this space in my column. Go bother Scorpio, Capricorn, or Taurus.

LIBRA: What comes around goes around, right? Well if your ideas weren't so damn stringent, and your levelheadedness a bit less severe, you'd realize your share is more than fair. In fact, single folk dream of what you somehow squelch through a lot of BS. Anyway, if you must, try to 'whip' Sagittarius, Aquarius and Aries.

SCORPIO: Your fluctuating mood swings and vast emotional history leaves you a person with a lot of baggage to bring into a relationship. Incredibly enough, you allow loser after loser into your life never learning how to say no kind of makes you a loser as well. If you must, pursue Capricorn, Pices, and Cancer—realizing the latter will only accept the few supreme Scorpions.

SAGITTARIUS: Well...Obstinace, stubbornness, close-mindedness and lack of being monogamous really size you up. Too many times you've been caught with your hand in someone elses pie (and if you haven't you better feel guilty about straying). You're much too warped to have a serious relationship but perhaps if you want to fake something real go after Aquarius, Gemini, and Leo.

CAPRICORN: Don't worry your piggy little head about love and all that. You are much too busy getting yourself out of the trouble you create for yourself without even trying. This applies to relationships as well. Just think before you start ruining someone's life. Brush three times a day and don't forget personal hygiene.

AQUARIUS: You're much too evasive to pin down. I think you'll always be happy skipping around in five inch spikes on unsuspecting young hearts or bringing some poor wretch misery and pain-as well as yourself. Just try to think hard about what you want from love before you screw someone over like you always do. Pair up with Gemini, Aries and Sagittarius who are just as kooky as you.

PISCES: Sensitive dumb fish. You are way too naive and stupid about matters of the heart. Also, you are way into yourself to make room for any other being in your life. Write poems, rent foreign movies and daydream with clergy, or- if you can master up the courage, go meet Taurus, Scorpio and Capricorn.

 thing like that someday."
 Many people will downplay kickers if they don't win a game when necessary, or if they don't kick the ball well.
 "There is no way to cover up what you do. Either I hit the ball well or I don't hit the ball well," Doyle said.
 There is absolutely no question as to the pressure a kicker must face. Last year Doyle missed a game winning field goal against Nevada.
 "I think about that a lot. I think in a way, that has helped me because I don't want to make the same mistake again," he said.
 "I think Thayne's just the kind of person you'd want in there at the end of the game. He's an intense competitor and he would get the job done," friend and fellow Vandal kicker Ryan Woolverton said.

 Doyle is definitely an intense competitor, he is the kind of guy that doesn't just forget a miss or a bad kick.
 "I don't like to dwell on things, but it's hard. If I think too much on the field, I'll second guess myself," Doyle said.
 It has already been shown Doyle's college career here at the UI is nothing to be taken lightly, but how does he feel about it?
 "I think I've been successful here, but I've had my highs and lows.
 This year, Doyle is competing with a new enemy however, the rule book. The NCAA rules committee decided the goal posts were too wide, so they moved them in and left the hashmarks the same, which has made it mathematically harder to kick a field goal in college than it is in the professional ranks.

 "I think they moved them in," Doyle said jokingly.
 However, the difference in the goal posts is no laughing matter. The rules committee moved them in a total of five feet, making them 18'6" instead of 23'6", like they were before. The hashmarks stayed the same, with each hashmark equaling out to be located at one third of the field.
 If pride towards a team could be measured, Doyle could break the scale when his Vandals come to mind.
 But for now, he is concentrating on Montana State. After all, he is taking it all one week at a time.
