Forum focuses on racial diversity

By LANE GRACIANO
Staff Writer

Racial diversity was the catchphrase of the day throughout the Student Union Building yesterday, as students, faculty and administrators attended a university-wide educational forum addressing ethnicity issues.

The program officially started at 9:30 a.m. in the SUB Ballroom. Following UI President Elizabeth Zinser's welcome, Dr. Frederick C. Jefferson Jr. of the University of Rochester, New York, made the first of his three presentations.

Jefferson, a nationally recognized authority on racism and sexism elimination techniques in educational institutions, spoke on topics ranging from cultural identity to political correctness. In dealing with these potentially explosive issues, Jefferson said "we have to learn how to set the stage for dialogues." He also stressed the importance of affirmative action, explaining that a sense of "belonging" to the university contributes more to the self-esteem of a minority student than any legislation would.

An informal interaction with Jefferson followed in a brown-bag lunch discussion session at 12 p.m. Jefferson was then joined in a panel presentation by Bill Wassmuth, Director of the Coalition Against Malicious Harrassment; Jeanne Givens, former State Representative, and moderator Dr. Ray von Wandruzka of the UI Juntera Committee. The panelists individually dealt with various aspects of such topics as separatism, the rapidly changing national demography and cultural sensitivity education, with emphasis placed on the difference between racial diversity and segregation.

According to von Wandruzka, separation results when people believe that "race precludes culture" and assume "cultural common ground" with their ethnic comrades. Speaking in terms of a university campus setting, he said "racial exclusivity in any (student) organization is totally undesirable" and urged "voluntary non-exclusive aggregation" in student associations in order to "generate situations that are not inviting to prejudice."

The only female panelist, Givens, a double minority person because she is "American Indian," introduced her Uncle Henry's theory of the "stew pot" as opposed to the

Using the ozone layer, ridiculous heavy metal contents in Eastern Europe, and poor nuclear waste management in Asia are just a few of the problems our world faces today.

However, with the help of international communication, these problems may one day be eliminated.

Tuesday evening, four chemists from the University of Idaho spoke at the Student Union Building for the second of five "Exploring Global Issues, an Intercultural Perspective" panel discussions.

Peter Griffith, chair of the UI department of chemistry, introduced the panel members before they commenced their talks on global environment.

"All of us look at environmental science in a different way," said Griffith, since each panel member represented a different part of the world.

Leszek Czuchajowski, a UI chemist from Poland, came to the United States ten years ago. He said that Eastern Europe's environmental problems are almost as bad as the present problems in the United States. Because the once communist countries were emphasizing on industry instead of technology, there became serious pollution in these areas.

"We were so stupid as to not realize what was going on," said Czuchajowski. He also said the topic of pollution used to be very taboo in most European countries.

When asked why these problems have been ignored, and why no one speaks out, especially when these countries have such educated people, Czuchajowski muses.

Budget gets State Board consent

By WENDY DEAL
Staff Writer

The Idaho Board of Education gave their consent to all but one of the University of Idaho's general education budget requests last Friday. Obtaining the Board of Education's consent is the first step in passing the University's budget. The budget requests and other UI funding requisitions will be forwarded to the governor and the Legislature's Joint Finance and Appropriations Committee to be voted on and finalized.

All but one of the university's programs was reinforced for the following year. The only program that did not receive additional funding was the dietetics program, which happens to be the only accredited dietetics program in Idaho. The Medical Department had requested $13,500 to be used in the area of dietetics.

Funding for the UI co-operative extension service and agricultural research was also withheld. Out of 16 requests made by the extension service for funds, five were not granted. The programs not granted were the youth and child development program, the barley enhancement program, the nematode research support program, the food quality & lean beef program, and the response to critical issues program. The co-operative extension service has 42 county offices that maintain agricultural research, 4-H, and Home Economics programs.

The Education Board also negotiated an increase in the university's Engineering program. The Board granted the university $80,000 of their $349,300 request. In addition to these endorsements the board awarded $500,000 to the UI so a program may be initiated to safeguard Idaho's drinking water.

"We are very pleased with the support that the board has shown for the university's budget requests," said Jerry Wallace, financial vice-president.

Rape 'hidden' problem at UI

By ALISA STOFFEL
Staff Writer

The UI campus has a higher than national average rape and attempted rape occurrence, according to statistics and campus surveys.

Nationally, one in every four women is raped or is attempted to be raped. Results of a rape survey conducted in May '90 at UI show approximately 65 percent of the female students surveyed have either been raped or suffered an attempted rape. Although these findings are not scientifically provable, they do give insight into the problem's enormity.

Twenty percent of the women surveyed were raped an average of 1.76 years ago. At the time, the average age of the respondents was 20 years. Of these women, 59 percent engaged in unwanted sexual activity because they were overwhelmed with continual requests, arguments, pressure, or bribery. Thirty percent were threatened or physically forced to act against their will.

Alcohol and drugs have accompanied 39 percent of the incidents, and 33 percent of the rapes occurred at a party. Ninety-four percent of the women at UI knew the men who raped them. This average is close to the national average of women who know their perpetrators.

Perhaps most frightening of all is the fact 62 percent of the women answered they were raped on the UI campus.

Already this year, rapes on campus have been reported to the Student Counseling Center and the Women's Center. However, no reports have been made to the Moscow Police Department.

The MPD does not have a rape crisis trained officer, but instead has a female communication specialist who stands by.

"We don't really have a big problem here like big cities do," said one Moscow dispatcher.

Betsy Thomas, director of the Women's Center, says, "We inform the women of their options (to report the rape to authorities or not), let them make their own decisions, and we stand by them either way."

Support helps relieve the isolation, lowered self-esteem, and embarrassment which may follow a rape. Healing can begin after "we slow down the tornado," says Thomas.

Survivors are encouraged to take part in individual or group counseling, and may be referred to the Student Counseling Center or a private practice. Wherever

Light shines on outstanding students

For many students, it's difficult to make up the work from one missed class. Marci Hyatt and Renae Southwick already have to catch up on two weeks of missed classes due to travel for their organizations. Hyatt is the Idaho FFA Association President and Southwick is the Idaho FFA Treasurer. FFA, formerly Future Farmers of America, is an organization of students studying the science, business, and technology of agriculture.

They have already missed two weeks in order to travel for their offices, and will miss five more weeks this year.

"It's an applied education. I'm learning things I never would have learned in the classroom," said Hyatt.

The two were elected in April at the State FFA Convention in Idaho Falls. After a three-day interview process, including a speech on the environment and agricultural facts, Hyatt and Southwick were chosen out of a field of over 30 people.

"It's an incredible experience. I'm meeting people and making a lot of contacts," said Hyatt. "I didn't know all that was out there."

"It's an honor (to be chosen). FFA showed me who I was and where I wanted to go," said Southwick.

During the summer, Hyatt attended the State Presidents and Vice-Presidents Conference in Washington, D.C., where she met Idaho's four congressmen. Both Hyatt and Southwick went to the Leadership Conference for State Officers in California this June.

"FFA has given me a lot of opportunities to travel and see things I wouldn't have seen," said Southwick.

Throughout the year, Hyatt and Southwick will each visit many of Idaho's thirty-eight FFA chapters to give workshops and presentations. In November, they will travel to the National FFA Convention in Kansas City.

Through the Agricultural Education department, both Hyatt and Southwick receive two credits for a Directed Study in Leadership. According to Hyatt, however, it's still hard to keep up in class.

"I'm not taking as many credits, but sometimes I feel as if I'm only learning the basic overview. Luckily, my professors have been understanding," said Hyatt.

Hyatt is a sophomore majoring in Agri/business. She is also the corresponding secretary of Alpha Gamma Delta, the secretary of Phi Eta Sigma, and a member of APO.

Southwick is a freshman majoring in Animal Science. She coordinates the Campbell Hall newsletter and plans on joining several clubs this year.

Acne common, can be controlled

By Dr. Donald K. Chlin
Student Health Center

Acne is the most common skin problem, affecting 70 to 90 percent of the population. The symptoms include pimples, soreness, burning, and itching of the skin.

Acne is caused by blocked oil ducts in the skin. Sebum is an oily substance produced by the sebaceous, or oil gland, located at the base of the hair follicles of the skin. When an increase of sebum can't pass through a duct to be excreted on the skin, some of the oil becomes trapped and clogs the follicle, causing a backup of oil. The pimple which is formed may become infected causing pustules. If the duct becomes completely blocked, a whitehead develops. Sometimes the duct becomes plugged with oxidized sebum and becomes a blackhead.

Contrary to common belief, junk food, chocolate, or nuts play a small role in exacerbating acne. Surface dirt is not a cause of acne. Sexual activity does not effect outbreaks of acne. Worry and stress don't cause acne, but may make it work.

Oil-based make-up, suntan lotions, oily hair lotions, and vaseline can block pores and make acne worse. Rubbing hard with towels or facial scrubbers can irritate and clog the oil ducts. Heat and humidity may cause you to break out more severely, and women may find their acne worst just before and during their menstrual cycles.

The treatment for acne is a control, not a cure. Over-the-counter drugs such as benzoyl peroxide work by inflaming the skin and causing it to peel, thus preventing oil plugs. Topical or oral antibiotics can be effective for moderate to severe acne. For the most severe cases of cystic acne, a medicine called Accutane may be used with great effectiveness.

have her body used in a way she does not want it used, regardless of the way she behaves.

Many women have "good social skills but not good survival skills," said Betsy Thomas, who teaches the class. Communication between men and women is an important aspect of prevention. "Women must say what they want and what they don't want," said Thomas. But no one wants to be raped.

trees...environmentally, things might be different", said Czuchajowski jokingly.

Chien Wai, who has received the Outstanding Teacher Award and the Outstanding Researcher Award, spoke on the environmental problems of Asia.

"The way each culture treats pollution problems are very different," said Wai. He said because of citizen complaints the Shoshone County Bunker Hill Mine was forced to close down its operations after a short time. On the other hand, a similar Chinese mine, whose environmental problems were worse, was ignored for about twenty years.

Wai stated some of the problems with nuclear waste and nuclear treaties is the fact that countries like Iraq and China refuse to sign any agreements.

Sherry Farwell, also a UI chemist, discussed the world wide problem of the ozone layer.

Farwell explained that the air immediately surrounding our environment, the troposphere, is present until around 10 to 15 kilometers. Ozone is found in the stratosphere, the next layer is the atmosphere. In polar regions alone, said Farwell, there is an average of three percent loss in four to six weeks time.

"We can't seem to win in the case of ozone," said Farwell.

"All people would like a clean environment," said Farwell in response to a question asked on the role of culture in environmental issues. Countries and cultures alike will eventually be brought together due to pollution.

"The more mobile the pollutant (i.e. atmospheric gases, oceans, rivers)," said Farwell, "the more necessary it is for international relations."

"Instead of religion, cultures or other ideologies, we have an issue with a basis on which we all can agree," he continued.

Farwell also discussed the ever present greenhouse problem, calling it "the human effect on the greenhouse effect".

they go, the aim is the same: to heal.

Of course, the ideal is to avoid the "tornado" in the first place. Avoidance tactics are taught by the Acquaintance Sexual Assault and Rape Avoidance and Prevention class. Presentations are given in residence halls and Greek houses. One main point the presentation stresses is no woman wants to be raped; no one asks to

The sign says: $270,000,000,000

Will someone please explain to me why the majority of our national representatives feel that the United States of America needs to invest $3.2 billion in 4 B-2 bombers?

Is it because we must defend ourselves from outside invasion, and if so, from whom? The Cold War is over, remember, and even if it weren't, I don't think the U.S.S.R. is in any shape (nor will it be in the next ten years) to go one-on-one with us.

Is it because we did not thoroughly demolish our "enemy" in the recent Persian Gulf crisis? If so, are we going in for another bombing attack on the citizens of Iraq?

Is it because we must be the protectorate of the world, saving little-before-known oil-rich countries ruled by tyrants from slightly bigger countries ruled by slightly more insane tyrants? Or maybe from little men men in red suits?

Even if someone could possibly think up a logical answer to this question, there's still the punchline: The B-2 bomber may not even work! That's right, we're investing billions of hard-earned taxpayer money into a stealthy, radar-evading plane that might not get the job done.

Reminds me a little of that anti-missile system that we pumped so many dollars into back in the '80's. Guess what? Iiiiitts baaaaack, and if the present defense appropriations bill is passed, $4.6 million will be spent on this nightmare. <-w

All totaled, the proposed defense budget totals almost $270 billion. 270 billion dollars. 270,000,000,000 dollars.

I don't know about you, but I don't want to buy even one B-2. I'd rather help find a cure for AIDS, feed and shelter the homeless, educate our nation's children, eradicate racism.

Remember these ideas? They're called domestic issues, those risky points that no one wants to comment on ... because in trying to lessen the problem, you might not solve it, and that could mean political disaster.

Is there a logical reason why so much attention is spent on foreign policy, on defense, on creating an indestructible superpower? If so, I'd like to hear it.

Defending our country is important, and it should be a priority. But it should not be our main priority, nor should it be topping the list ahead of so-called less important domestic issues; because if it is, then what will we have to protect anyway?

President Bush has proven that he's not a "wimp" on the warfront. Now let's see some work on the Homefront.

Overuse of violence unnecessary

I am so sick of it! I can not stand all of the violence I see and hear around me. It's everywhere, and frustratingly, no matter how hard one tries, there seems to be no escape.

One can no longer even pick up a daily paper without being repulsed and disturbed by the latest atrocities. Whether the feature articles are about government issues, or about the typical suburban household, it seems violence is always lurking around the next headline.

Today I read Trent Young's editorial on animal abuse in our immediate community, and I was sickened. How, I ask myself, can humans be so cruel and insensitive to each other and to animals?

One main reason comes to mind: the powerful influence of the mainstream media. This device is extremely harmful in that it is extremely accessible, widely accepted as correct, and often as the ideal. These types of attitudes only serve to desensitize people to the violence that they could decrease by thinking for themselves.

MEYLA BIANCO OPINION

The evening news is still worse. On television, one is not only treated to lengthy descriptions of violent crime, but often the altogether nightmarish images of the incidents are flashed across the screen. Also, one doesn't have to think about television, as is necessary while reading. The news is delivered to the relaxed person on the couch at home, without the challenge of turning pages. After having seen this type of thing hundreds of

Gomben gives satirical advice to women

In the battle of the sexes, it is time for someone to get beneath the surface of male/female communication problems.

Here is some friendly advice for you ladies: If you want to get and keep a man, you've got to learn to talk like one.

Let's face it, women who are cute and giggle a lot may be the hip thing in high school, but this is college, dammit, and men are more sophisticated and mature, even if they don't dress like it.

Ladies, learn to insert manspeak into your conversations!

Some guys may be temporarily turned on by perfume and tight dresses. But a real man who likes to spend Sunday afternoon with the same woman he saw Friday night is looking for something more substantial.

He wants a woman he can talk to; someone who will fill in the pauses between his longwinded male bragging with more than just an "I see" or a "Really? How special!"

A little scenario will best illustrate my point: Imagine three equally attractive women and one very handsome man sitting around a table at a local restaurant.

The man is raving (as men often do) about his epic hunting exploits. With the use of only his manly wits, and a high-powered rifle, he managed to slay a large and possibly rabid elk, then drag its carcass over two mountain ranges and through three rivers before arriving back safely at his Chevy Blazer.

PETE GOMBEN

As the man finishes his heroic tale, he sits back to gauge the women's responses.

The first woman says: "Oh, how brave you are!"

Wrong answer! The man will write this woman off immediately. His braveness should have been so implicit in his story that to even mention it is an insult.

Woman number two says: "Dear me, fighting nature all by yourself! You are quite a fellow!"

The man will pause and smile, but then look at the last woman to see what she has to say.

The third woman responds: "You know, that reminds me of something that happened to me back in '87. I was tracking bear up in British Columbia when all of the sudden a gut-shot grizzly charged me from a thicket of tag alder. Damn if that bear didn't take three rounds from my Remington and kept on coming. I finally had to slit it's throat with my Bowie knife.

"In fact, I still have the bearskin at home in front of my fireplace. Do you want to come over and take a look?"

Bingo!
 It is a match made in heaven, and the woman need never confess that she actually bought the bearskin rug for twenty bucks at a yard sale.

Look, I'm not saying this kind of thing is honest or morally correct. But these days, it seems hon-times, from the comfort of the Lazy Boy, one becomes less aware of it as being wrong, and also, simply less aware of violence in general.

Ironically, the cinema, which has traditionally been noted as a way to escape the mundane realities of life, is now saturated with violence. True, film's purposes are not only to provide superficial entertainment. If it were so, film's cultural importance would dwindle, and then die. It just seems something so harmful and unnecessary would be seen as unappealing. Instead, there is a perverted curiosity for this type of "entertainment."

This leads to people viewing violence in relation to violence, with no scale of realism to balance their cognitions. Once, I heard two people talking about a woman who had been raped and whose face had been slashed with a knife. One of the people said "she was not killed, though, right?" As if being raped alone was not so violent as to gain the woman any sympathy, or at least produce some emotion besides nonchalance from the conversationalist.

Daily, I either hear or see some shockingly horrific story about abuse of some sort, whether it is between humans, or inflicted on animals by humans.

The question I am asking here is: is so much and so frequent amount of violence really necessary? Is there really a reason to bombard each other with such harmful sludge?

Surely it is not healthy. It is easy to see that violence breeds violence. Perhaps the fact that the average American child witnesses 20,000 murders on television by their teenage years has something to do with it.

Violence is such an overwhelming acute problem in contemporary American society that many feel there is no way to attempt to begin solving it. I disagree.

By being aware of how we react (or do not react), everyone can at least attempt to diminish violence in their own environment by facing reality and deciding whether or not you feel you need to change it.

Next time you hear of a violent crime, put yourself in the victim's shoes for just a moment, or imagine the grief of the family of the victim (Remember, this does not only apply to humans but to animals as well). Granted, this is unpleasant, but so is rampant violence. By being more aware, we can make ourselves more cognizant of the need our society has for less violence and more thought. After this, we can work to make our immediate surroundings free of violence, and then the community, state, country, world, universe, etcetera.

Today, we can no longer afford to be blissfully ignorant or apathetic when the topic of violence comes up. An important phrase to remember is: change begins with the individual.

Correction: In Doug Taylor's column run in the Sept. 24 issue of the Argonaut, the woman in Jungle Fever was Italian.

esty and morality don't seem to make much difference when it comes to relationships between men and women.

Guys also like technical talk, especially about automobiles.

Ninety five percent of all men know little or nothing about cars, but to admit such ignorance would be on par with confessing that they wear panties covered with dancing pink pandas. It's just not cool.

So whenever Bill hears his buddy Steve talking about a new car with a four-barrel engine, triple cams and a plutonium suspension, he will smile and nod and make guttural grunting sounds to hide his lack of knowledge.

Of course, Steve has no idea what he is talking about either, so when he speaks, he must do so with an authoritative voice. That way he at least sounds intelligent.

After they have sufficiently enjoyed this male bonding ritual, they will agree to go out for a beer so they can talk about women.

Which is, come to think of it, a subject most men don't know much about either.

So ladies, if you happen to see the man of your dreams sitting in the library, or standing at a bar, or flexing his triceps at the gym, walk up to him and in your most seductive voice, say:

"Hey, big guy, have you seen this year's Chevies?"

Argonaut Letter Policy

The Argonaut will accept letters to the editor until noon on the day prior to publication. They must be limited to two double spaced typed pages in length. For subjects requiring greater exposition, arrangements may be made with the editor.

Letters must be signed in ink and include the name, address, student identification number or driver's license number, and phone number of the writer. For multiple-authored letters, the above information will be required for each writer. Proof of identity will be needed at time of submission. Letters received by mail will not be run unless confirmation of authorship is made. Names of writers will not be withheld.

Letters may be edited for length, mechanical errors and spelling errors. The Argonaut reserves the right to refuse to publish any letter.

Gibb trades administrative position for classroom job

By LANE GRACIANO
Staff Writer

A framed Kodak moment on a desk in Dr. Richard Gibb's Education building office shows him standing on the doorstep of a sorority house, surrounded by grinning undergraduate seniors. That photograph hails back from his UI president days, between 1977 and 1989. Nowadays, Gibb is an economics professor.

When asked what motivated him to go back to teaching, Gibb replied, "My first love has always been teaching."

For eight months before he returned to the classroom, Gibb served as part-time director at UI's newly established Center for Economic Education.

The chairman of economics asked if I would consider directing the center," recalled Gibb, "and I said, well, I only work one semester a year teaching, so I'm willing to give up one day a week to the center—because I believe in the concept."

One successful project that Gibb successfully developed for the center last summer, together with associate professor of business education Marty Yopp and the chairman of economics, involved bringing in high school teachers on scholarships for an intensive two-week seminar on consumer economics.

"We wanted to teach more than balancing the checkbook," explained Gibb. "If they're teaching economics to high school students, what can we do to improve that?" The program, he added, "got some marvelous feedback" from its participants.

But it was exactly this interest in the welfare of the student that convinced Gibb to give up his directorship at the center in favor of the classroom. In his presidency days he "used to drop in unannounced at fraternity and sorority houses to meet with the student leaders and say, whether you live in a residence hall, whatever your organization is, I want you to invite me over to your place—I want to meet with your people."

He also lived by two philosophies that he would give as advice to any university president if he thought it was wise for him to advise at all: "One, keep your speeches short; and two, anytime you spend with students is time well spent." His present job still allows him to keep in close touch with the many students he has befriended over the years. In fact, he will be attending a scholarship dinner at a sorority house on Monday night. Added Gibb, "There's nothing better than just being with students."

Gibb's teaching schedule for the spring semester will place him in front of three classes, including an introduction course to economics. At home, where he lives with his wife three miles outside of town, he "spends several hours a day—except in wintertime—beautifying the land" around his house.

"I have the best of both worlds," he said. "I stay busy, but I'm home almost every night now, which I appreciate. I have free time, I can read and I'm even going to start taking some classes." Added Gibb firmly, "You never quit learning, and you shouldn't."

Vandal netters set for Big Sky tests

The Lady Vandals won a big match against LCSC and await two Big Sky foes this weekend. (JIM VOLBRECHT PHOTO)

By MATT LAWSON
Editor

The Idaho Vandal volleyball team faces its biggest matches of the season this weekend when Boise State and Idaho State visit Memorial Gym.

After a 4-9 (including an 0-1 mark in Big Sky Conference play), the Vandals must win the games that head coach Tom Hilbert feels are necessary to contend for a playoff position.

"These are the teams I picked to finish in the middle of the pack and we have to beat them at home if we are looking at earning a position in the playoffs," Hilbert said.

The Vandals face defending Big Sky Champion Idaho State tonight at 7:30 p.m.

The Bengals are 9-9 on the season, but past performances against the Vandals leans in Idaho State's favor.

Idaho has never defeated the Bengals since Hilbert took over two seasons ago, including two four-game losses last year.

The Bengals have struggled in BSC play losing to Montana and Weber State to start the season but look to provide a challenge to Idaho.

"They won the conference last year, but I don't think they're as good as they were last year," Dee Porter said. "They lost some good players and I think it will be to our benefit."

Idaho is set to battle Boise State Saturday at 4:00 p.m. in order for Vandal fans to attend both the match and the Idaho-Northern Iowa football game.

"We will be fired up to play Boise State because of last season and due to the fact that they are a big rivalry," Porter said.

Boise State poses the same problems for Idaho as the Vandals have failed to defeat the Broncos during Hilbert's reign at Idaho.

Idaho lost a tough five-game match last season in Boise which

I guess I should acknowledge the rest of the college football world once in a while. It seems that up here in Moscow, the paradise of the Northwest, I get caught up in just talking about the University of Idaho and their success on the gridiron. True, the Vandals are ranked No.2 in NCAA Division I-AA, but there are quite a few intriguing matchups and happenings going on in the NCAA. Let's take a look at a few.

■ You don't have to go much further than Ann Arbor, Mich. to find the game of week. The No.1 ranked Florida State Seminoles will be battling the third ranked Michigan Wolverines for top dog.

Right about now is the time of year when the Seminoles usually slip up and lose a game and blow their chance for a national championship. Last season they lost their first two games and then won 10 straight games to finish sixth in the nation. If FSU could avoid those little slips they would have probably won two national championships in the last four years.

If Michigan can win the war up front and keep from falling behind they will beat FSU in front of a home crowd of 104,000. The key is going to be an offensive line that averages 6-foot-6, 295 across the board. The group is led by 6-foot-8, 320 pound All-American Greg Skreparnek who leaves people begging for mercy. FSU's linebackers aren't very big and if the Wolverines get into their bodies it could be a long day.

The Seminole's best chance to win is going to be their speed. Tailback Amp Lee is as quick as they come and those same linebackers that I call small, are also extremely quick.

■ The other intriguing match-up of the day is Nebraska at Arizona State. The Sun Devils are turning out to be a much better team than many people expected. Currently, they are 3-0 and off to their best start since 1987, when they beat Michigan in the Rose Bowl. Last week they shocked USC, 32-25, in Los Angeles. I still haven't figured out USC. One week they beat up and dominate 10th ranked Penn State and the next they lose to ASU. I love the way USC head coach Larry Smith bad-mouthed quarterback Todd Marinovich (he's now hurling passes for the Raiders) all of last year. Now he'd give anything to have him back because their quarterback at the moment, Reggie Perry, is horrible.

Anyway, Nebraska is going to lose to Arizona State because of the 100-degree heat they're going to have deal with at Sun Devil Sta-

Vandals won't look past Panthers

By DOUG BAUER
Staff Writer

Two top 20 teams meeting each other and both with something to prove.

Sound familiar? It should. It is basically the 1991 schedule for the University of Idaho Vandals.

This week's episode: The number two ranked Idaho Vandals meet the 17th-ranked Northern Iowa Panthers.

The Panthers were previously ranked fourth, but a missed field goal in the closing minutes of last week's game against the Southern Illinois Salukis deleted that.

The Salukis defeated the Panthers 21-20 in a major Gateway conference upset.

"They're a good football team," Vandal head coach John L. Smith said. "They're very physical and they're the most well balanced team we've seen."

Northern Iowa should hope to be a good team. They will be venturing into the Kibbie Dome tomorrow to face the top offense in the nation. But, as Smith puts it, there is still room for improvement.

"We're trying to get better," Smith said. "We still need to be able to run a little bit better. Our receivers are doing good after they catch the ball, but we need our offensive line to come around a little."

As for the Vandals, they are coming off of a 48-14 thrashing of Montana State University in Bozeman in their first conference game of the season.

Idaho quarterback Doug Nussmeier is having a stellar season as of last week. So far this season he is leading the nation in total offense with an average of 378 yards per game and a total of 1134 yards throwing.

In the Montana State game, Nussmeier completed 23-of-48 passing for 396 yards and five touchdowns. He was named Cenex/Land O' Lakes Offensive Player of the Week for his play in Bozeman.

"Doug is doing a good job. He's getting better each week and he's getting out of trouble when he needs to," Smith said. "He's a great competitor and he keeps getting the job done."

The Vandal defensive line, led by sophomore Jeff Robinson, has been tearing up and literally vandalizing opposing offenses lately.

Robinson, the Vandals' all-time sack (27) and tackles for a loss (40) leader, had three quarterback sacks for minus 49 yards, and seven total tackles, five of them being solo. He was also named Cenex/Land O' Lakes Defensive Player of the Week.

"We're getting a lot better on the defensive line," Smith said. "The defensive front is kind of carrying us at this time."

The Panthers have a top notch quarterback in Jay Johnson. He is returning for his senior season after an outstanding 1990 season. Last season he completed 163-of-320 passes for 2929 yards and was ranked second in the nation in passing efficiency and thirteenth in total offense.

"He's a good player and a good athlete, he can throw the ball well and he has good mobility," Smith said.

There is speculation that another standout for the Panthers, defensive back Willie Beamon, might not be playing this week. Rumor has it Beamon might not be playing for an unspecified reason.

Smith would not comment on the situation, but if the rumor is true, then the Panthers will have a definite gap to fill at the cornerback position.

Beamon is an all-conference player and a two-year starter. His backup, Rodney Gray, has only seen limited playing time at UNI, most of it coming on special teams.

Other than that, UNI has a

Amie Hanks has been lifted from her red-shirt year and is helping the Vandals at setter. (JIM VOLLBRECHT PHOTO)

Hanks makes most of chance

By DOUG BAUER
Staff Writer

Her name is Amie Hanks. She is 20 years old and from Rexburg, Idaho. She started for two years at Ricks College in Rexburg and has been recruited by the Vandals ever since she was in high school.

The Vandals are 4-9 overall so far on the season and 0-1 in Big Sky play.

Hanks was put on redshirt for this season, however she was taken off to replace senior Christie Roes one third of the way through the season.

Hanks has taken over as the starting setter for the Vandals and has helped lead the team to a 2-2 record since she has come off of redshirt.

The question is however, why did Vandal volleyball coach Tom Hilbert take Hanks off of redshirt to replace Roes when Roes is a senior.

"The change added a little too our offense. We're not a good passing team so we put Amie in there. It made us generate our offense a little more," Hilbert said.

"I was excited to start, but not necessarily because it was over Christie Roes," Hanks said.

"She seemed surprised when I took her off of redshirt, but she was eager," Hilbert said. "She never wanted to redshirt but she did it because she thought that it was best for the team."

Hanks was a four-year letterman at Rexburg and was not only recruited by the University of Idaho, but also by Idaho State and the University of Utah.

"I wanted to get as far away from my home town as possible. Also, I really liked Moscow and the school has a good name academically," Hanks said.

Hanks streaked to the top in her first showing at Gonzaga. She had two kills, 10 digs along with 35 assists.

"Gonzaga has easily been my best game," Hanks said.

"She may be the best that I've had here," Hilbert said. "Her court demeanor too me is really good."

Hanks is majoring in nutrition, and after this year, she will have only one year of eligibility left, but nonetheless, she is still delighted to be playing.

Coaching wise, according to Hilbert, Hanks is a pleasure.

"She is not afraid to ask questions and that is a good quality," Hilbert said. "She knows how to win and when she gets out playing she talks a lot and gets things going."

Hanks has started in four games now, and since she has recorded 12 kills, 32 digs and four blocks to prove that setting is not the only thing that she can do well.

"She can hit the ball very well," Hilbert said. "She is a very versatile player."

Versatility is a needed trait when playing at the Big Sky level. Competition is fierce and a player must be able to have a very good mental strategy when going into a contest.

"We need people out there who are going to be able to play in pressure situations," Hilbert said. "When we need a serve I am confident that she can come through for us."

From an interviewer's standpoint, Hanks is very shy and seems less than anxious to talk about herself. But shyness is not a side of her personality that Hanks shows too often.

Hanks has enough confidence in her serves that she does not have to look to Hilbert for signals like most other players do.

"If she doesn't like the signal, she will say no to it," Hilbert said. "She is the only player on the team that will do that."

Serving is also another strong point for Hanks. She has eight aces with only two errors in the four games that she has been in, and with her confidence, there is definitely room for improvement.

"She goes back there and serves where she wants to," Hilbert said. "She is really accurate. I honestly didn't think that she would be able to do as well as she has so far."

The Vandals have fared sufficiently well since Hanks has come around. As a team, the Vandals seem to have a little more spunk when they play and their team statistics show it.

The Vandals had dropped five straight and had not won a game in a two-week period before Hanks joined the team.

"I go out there and do what I can," Hanks said. "I really enjoy playing with my team. They have a lot of potential and they are a lot of fun. Hopefully we can keep playing tough and we can start winning some more."

If the Vandals can keep winning, this season's future could still be bright. They are 0-1 in Big Sky contests, losing a game against the Eastern Washington Eagles.

Hanks has got the teammates too make a difference. Among some of the top players on the Vandal squad are Heather McEwen, Dee Porter and Brittany VanHaverbeke.

The Vandals have yet to play 15 conference games, with two coming up this weekend against Idaho State and Boise State at home.

As a matter of fact, the Vandals have only one non-conference game left on their regular-season schedule. Most of their upcoming games will be against tough competition on the road, where they seem to play sub-par to their ability.

Six of the Vandal's losses have come on the road, which goes to show that home crowd can make a difference. At recent home games, the Vandals have averaged close to 500 people, which is a lot better than their turnout last year.

If the Vandals can turn around their season, as they have so far since Hanks has come off of red-shirt, there is a possibility that they can be playing well after November 16, when their regular season ends.

Concentration will be the key, however, as no teams can be overlooked in the remaining two-thirds of their season.

Keep up the good work Amie, and help the Vandals to become what they can, a Big Sky powerhouse.

proved critical in their failure to make the Big Sky Conference playoffs.

The loss that must stick out in Idaho's mind more was a three-game drubbing at Memorial gym in the final match of the season.

"I'm really excited," Brittany VanHaverbeke said. "I think if we all are intense and ready to play and stay focused we will win."

"We have the talent to do it," Hilbert said of winning both matches. "It puts more pressure on us to win after we lost our opener at home to Eastern."

The Vandals gained some much-needed confidence in a four-game victory over LCSC Tuesday night.

After losing the first game 4-15, Idaho responded behind the outstanding play of Dee Porter to win three straight games and the match (4-15, 15-12, 15-3, 15-3).

Porter led the Vandals with 13 kills and 12 digs, both team highs. It was the first time Porter had led Idaho in kills since a Sept. 7 loss to Illinois, but it was the third straight match she has led the Vandals in digs.

The sophomore middle blocker now has an impressive 112 of Idaho's 556 total digs. Porter also leads the team with 19 service aces while having .193 kill percentage.

"It was a confidence boost,"

Porter said of the win. "They always get fired up for us and we started out a little slow, but we came back. We needed a win to build our confidence again and remember what it is like to win."

Serving, an Idaho nemesis all season, played a major role in the Vandals victory.

Idaho had a season-high 18 service aces compared to only three for the Warriors.

The Vandals also made strides in their offensive passing which led to 37 assists by setter Amie Hanks.

Hanks now has 142 assists after taking over the starting setting job four games ago.

"She's doing well," Hilbert said of Hanks. "She's got a little more to learn, but I've been very happy with her serving and defense. Setting wise she is still learning."

While the offense was getting on track the defense continued to shine led by sophomore Nancy Wicks.

Wicks had six of Idaho's 15 blocks as the Vandals out-blocked LCSC 15-8.

"We served tough and blocked well," Hilbert said of the scoring coming from different areas. "We don't get a lot of offense generated because we don't pass consistently. That's where our deficiencies lie right now."

dium. Also, Nebraska is lousy in grass stadiums and still hasn't beaten a proven team.

■ Do you think there is any way we could avoid giving out the Heisman Trophy this year? Simply put, nobody deserves it at this time. David Klinger of the Houston Cougars, everybody's All-American has taken himself right out of the race with two bad performances in the Cougar's last two games. Houston has lost 91-20 the last two weeks.

Life has a way of evening itself out. The big, bad Cougars were priding themselves on beating up on little opponents and running the score up, but the bully found out that there is always somebody bigger and tougher on the block.

In terms of the Heisman, it seems like centuries since there have been awesome players like Bo Jackson, Herschel Walker, Vinny Testaverde, Barry Sanders, George Rogers and Mike Rozier. There just aren't players like these that dominate football games anymore. I say we give it to Desmond Howard of Michigan, or hell, let's give it Jason Hanson over at WSU.

■ Last week the University of Washington played the finest half of football I've seen in a long time when they scored 29 points in the second half to beat Nebraska. The Huskies looked like they were sleepwalking for three quarters. Then it was time to turn it on and BOOM! they just did it. The good teams know how to turn it off and on and UW just turned their game up another level. If there is a defense in America that is any better than the Huskies, I'd like to see it.

■ Oh yes, I forgot about that other defense. The one that belongs to the Miami Hurricanes, who might be ranked No.2, but have the best team in America, period. They can beat anybody put in front of them. They have no weakness at any position and yes, contrary to popular belief, Dennis Erickson can coach and win with his own recruits. Look for Erickson to be coaching in the NFL in about three years.

■ And I still must think about what's going on in our own little conference. The Vandals are playing Northern Iowa and should beat the Panthers with little trouble. The Vandal offense is moving like a well oiled machine and if Northern Iowa can't beat the Southern Illinois Salukis, then how do they expect to come to the Kibbie Dome and win?

high-powered, balanced offense. Their run-to-throw ratio is about equal and according to Smith, they are solid all the way around.

"They have good running backs and wide receivers and their offensive line is also strong," Smith said. "We're just going to have to be able to cmove out and stop them."

Defensively, the Panthers have lost five key players to eligibility. But Smith expects them to be strong nonetheless.

"They're going to sit back and make us earn everything. They are not going to give up a big one like this very easily," Smith said. If the game comes down to a field goal, the Panthers are readily equipped. Their starting kicker, Brian Mitchell, set or tied 11 all-division national marks and set school records for field goals made in a season (26) and career field goals made (40). Mitchell did falter, a rare event, in the go ahead field goal attempt last weekend however.

The big question that Vandal fans are asking is whether or not the top two teams in the nation, Idaho and Nevada will be meeting next week in the ASUI/ Kibbie Dome with undefeated records. If they do it will probably be the biggest showdown seen in recent NCAA I-AA history.

Meeting Nevada in such a situation is what the Vandals are hoping for, but they are not worried about it yet.

"When it comes around it'll be here and we'll take care of it at that time. Right now we're going to take care of these guys," Smith said.

▪ FASTBREAK ▪

▪ SOCCER — The University of Idaho International CoRec soccer team took a fourth-place trophy home from Missoula, Mont., this weekend, recording a 1-2-1 record in four matches.

The UI team began play Saturday on a 1-1 tie with Bozeman, with Colleen Fagan scoring the goal on cross from Jabbes Mohammed. Idaho then fell a goal short against Missoula Dux Deluxe, 4-3, on a pair of unassisted goals by Jabbes and one by team captain Ahmed Fahsi on an assist from Carol Ritchie.

The total goals put UI in the winners bracket Sunday where they finished 1-1. Their victory came with a 8-0 pounding of Missoula Village Inn while the loss came on a 2-0 shutout at the hands of Billings.

UI Club was idle over the weekend but is scheduled for action against the Whitworth College Junior Varsity next Saturday in Spokane. International will duel WSU International Sunday afternoon at 2 p.m. on Wicks Field.

▪ RUGBY — Idaho Rugby will hold its first league game Saturday at Guy Wicks field against Whitman College at 1 p.m. Last November, Idaho lost to Whitman in the last few minutes of the match after leading most of the game.

Idaho is now looking to avenge that loss and pull off its first league win of the season. Last week against Gonzaga, Idaho scored one quick try to take the lead 6-0. By the half, Idaho led the Bulldogs 12-8. In the closing minutes of the match Gonzaga scored again to tie the game.

Negativland slapped with lawsuit

N E G A T I V L A N D

No, it's not those whiny Irish fellows from Dublin, it's America's own NEGATIVLAND: a truly unique group rediscovering the wonders of the corporate legal system the hard way.

By M.R.T. COOK
Staff Writer

Though I'm not sure of post-modernism's precise meaning either, I've found myself using it in reference to the newest and perhaps most controversial single by Negativland, a team of mass-media cannibals from Contra-Costa County California who have in the past invented white lies in these American mass media systems in order to re-edit the results to make statements about sensationalism in pop song and album length form.

This time the focus and target of the splicing is Top-40 radio and one of its most beloved: the Irish band U2. Taped fragments of "I Still Haven't Found What I'm Looking For", interviews with Bono (U2's singer) seriously explaining what an innovator he firmly believes he is, David Willis, (Negativland's spokesman named "The Weatherman"), profanity off of short-wave radio and most astonishingly, Casey Kasem.

Kasem, caught in glorious candor as he is heard on "U2" screaming at American Top-40's crew, proving, at least to me, to be the complete wanker I've always known he really was. I suppose these things get out, sound engineers and producers must know other sound engineers and producers and pretty soon groups like Negativland make recordings like this one.

The story evidently doesn't stop here, as according to the College Music Journal of Sept. 27th, the single has been recalled due to a lawsuit filed in the Federal District Court of Los

I Still Haven't Found What I'm Looking For

Angeles by U2's label Island records, and it's publishing company Warner Chappell Music.

Negativland has also been slapped with a cease and desist order which prohibits SST records, Negativland's label and distributor, from further distribution, marketing or promotion of the single. The order went so far as to demand that radio stations that may be programming the single to stop and return it to SST.

The suit also charges

Negativland and SST with deceptive packaging, claiming that the graphics used on the cover art (notice the large letter U and the numero 2) might fool any right thinking U2 fan into buying something that somehow might make them not like U2 anymore. That would be a corporate tragedy, as when Island records was purchased by the Phillips owned PolyGram empire two years ago, U2 received unprecedented percentage points on the selling price, all on the heels of their best seller The Joshua Tree.

Do the copyright laws need revision in this day and age of sound-bytes and home capturing devices like tape decks and VCRs? Its unlikely that this controversy will produce any liberating progress except what Negativland's main point appears to have been, merely pointing out this situation by embracing it.

"U2" looks as if it could simply be too post-modern to legally exist, what with the main characteristic of post-modernism being its inclusion of all styles, no matter the relevance, giving way to the golden age of celebrities and egos, and, of course, sleazy major labels and music publishing firms that lose their sense of humor in the wake of the dollar all-mighty.

GAL WITH A GUN By Cecilia Thunes

Now this is a flick that the Gal with a Gun can really get into. Two gals, two guns, a cool car, and a rapist who is shot. Yeah, cats, this is it.

Susan Sarandon and Geena Davis star in Thelma and Louise, a movie that shakes us awake to some of the crap women have to go through, in a world dominated by masculine rule. It touches on emotions that, for the most part, women had not been allowed to approach in such a violent and strong manner.

Thelma and Louise is a thrilling, violent, captivating, shocking, and utterly fantastic movie of two women on the lam after one, Louise (Sarandon), shoots a rapist. But what's so bad about shooting a rapist? The women probably would've been found innocent, if they felt they could've convinced anyone that Thelma (Davis) did not provoke the actions of her attacker.

Oh, but all the signs were there: Thelma was drunk and had been dancing with the rapist most of the evening. Hell, she even kissed the guy.

But, wait. Was that a "NO" we heard Thelma say over and over again? Well, maybe she meant, "No, I'm sorry, but I don't want you to violate me on the trunk of the car. Perhaps the backseat would be better..." I think not.

However, this is the whole premise of the movie. Louise, as the shooter of Thelma's rapist, is the only witness to the situation. --And who is going to believe two women who left town for the weekend, with the sole purpose of getting away from men?

Please don't consider this a male-bashing film. Just because Thelma and Louise wanted to spend a few days away from the men in their lives, does not mean they lacked compassion for half of the world's population. Louise's boyfriend, Michael Madsen, is shown in a most sympathetic light. Thelma's tryst with a smooth loner-on-the-road, (coolly played by Brad Pitt) is one of the more light-hearted segments of Thelma and Louise.

Harvey Kietel plays the sympathetic detective, whose only objective is to help Thelma and Louise and convince them he can ease their plight. Kietel's role is one of the more egalitarian male roles seen in cinema in the history of movies.

The soundtrack to Thelma and Louise is thoughtful and creative. There was no song throughout the movie that sounded as if the producers were just looking for a Top Ten Hit. The music actually correlated with the movie, whether it was Glen Frey's "Part of Me, Part of You" or Marianne Faithfull's "The Ballad of Lucy Jordan." Charlie Sexton, that "Beat's So Lonely" 17-year-old kid from 1985, makes a cameo appearance as a musician and singer in a country bar, performing "Tennessee Plates" and "Badlands."

And the stars themselves, Sarandon and Davis, gave us Oscar-winning performances. I found it hard to believe they were just "playing" best friends. Their emotional highs and lows carried flawlessly across the screen, as they went from fun-loving weekend travellers to women who realized they were in a no-win situation.

If there is any woman or man who is not affected in some way by viewing Thelma and Louise, I'm afraid I'll have to assume they are a little immune to life and society's injustices. This film punches us in places where we, as the human stew we compose, had not been taught to notice.

Thelma and Louise is showing nightly at 6:15 P.M. and 9:30 P.M. at the Micro Cinema through October 2nd.

New coffeehouse opens

Brigham Young is alive, well, and running a coffeehouse in downtown Moscow.

Owner and operator of Moscow's newest attempt at civilization, (the presently un-named Moscow Coffeehouse) Brigham Young has big dreams of building a lifetime by selling caffeine-laden brew at seventy-five cents a cup (all you can drink).

The grand opening of the Moscow Coffeehouse (located next to Paradise Ridge records on 3rd Street) is this weekend, and following that event, the shop will remain open 24 hours a day. Students are more than welcome, although Young warns, "when you start shaking, I stop serving."

SHALYN ON A WHIM WITH KARIN AND KIM

Advice by Karin Mason and Kim Blodgett

"Can't talk to women"

Dear Karin and Kim,
Why is it when a guy breaks up with a girl in a sorority he is always labeled by that sorority as evil and senseless no matter what the circumstances? Why can't they be rational and think of both parties involved?

I have lived on this campus for four years now and I have seen it happen to several friends and roommates. Can't they just mellow out and be somewhat mature about the situation when it arises?

Signed, Upset With Women

Dear Upset,
We can definitely sympathize with you, breaking up is hard to do, especially with a sorority girl. Of course, you must realize the same applies for a guy and his fraternity brothers. It goes both ways.

Kim: First of all, be aware your ex-girlfriend's friends may be biased. When they find out about the break-up, they're going to assume it's YOUR fault. They've heard only one side of it, and a girl's perspective is usually more accurate.

Karin: Yes, I've noticed that as well. What Upset says is true about everyone being against a guy that breaks up with a girl, but nevertheless, it is also true a guy needs to cushion his ego more than most girls. So her friends are probably justified in their opinions to be against you.

Kim: One thing you can do to put your shattered image back together is be polite and courteous to her friends. For example, send each girl in the house a flower or a small box of See's Samplers with a note apologizing for whatever it is you obviously did wrong. If your budget will not allow this expenditure, handmade, personalized cards are special and will also do the trick.

Karin: Why, that's a great idea, Kim. Thank you. Personally, I feel a public announcement of some sort would be appropriate. Perhaps a radio or television ad expressing your deepest regrets to your ex-girlfriend and her house may be of some help. Or, a large ad in the newspaper may also help get your message across. If these suggestions are not to your liking, may I suggest counseling? That may be your only hope.

Upset, you'll be in our prayers.

Dear Karin and Kim,

I am a really attractive guy and babes usually dig me just from my physical appearance. The problem I have is when I have to speak to these women, I tend to freeze up and can find nothing to talk about. I then result to performing weird tricks with my body I find either funny or that I feel would add to the conversation.

The first one or two oddities usually goes over well, however, I tend to get carried away and before I am able to get a grip I find myself alone again.

So, to sum up my problem, I first need advice on how to talk to women and second, I need help in deciding when I've gone too far with the "performances." Do you think flipping my eyelids inside out is the breaking point?

Signed, Lookin' for Love

Dear Lookin',
Keep on looking, but please listen to our advice first.

Kim: To begin with, you definitely have self confidence, that doesn't seem to be a problem. When are guys going to learn they don't have to perform stupid human tricks to impress a girl? Why don't you try talking to girls as though they were just ordinary people, not someone who gets off on a freak show.

Karin: Yah, you love-starved fool. I think your performances are quite unnecessary.

Keep trying Lookin', there's someone for everyone, even you.
