Idaho congressmen visit UI campus

By JEFF KAPOSTASY
News Editor

Both of Idaho's two congressmen made a brief stop at the University of Idaho to talk politics with UI students and community members Saturday in the SUB.

Democrat Congressman Larry LaRocco pulled in early Saturday morning to meet people within his district. LaRocco, in his second year as congressman, is the first democrat in twenty-six years to fill the district 1 congressman position. So far, no one has challenged LaRocco for his seat in Congress in the upcoming elections.

The first topic brought up by LaRocco was the issue of term limitation. There is currently a movement by some politicians and lobbyists to limit the number of terms a congressman can serve; a movement LaRocco plans to fight all the way. Currently, the average term for a congressman is 9.7 years. Some are trying to cut the number of terms down to two.

"We need to preserve our way of life here in the Northwest," LaRocco said. "We need to hold people accountable...something we can do less of if we limit terms."

LaRocco also voiced some strong feelings against a current bill designed to open the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge to oil drilling.

"I will not vote for this bill. This country has no energy policy...no direction," said LaRocco. "Our greatest untapped energy resource is conservation. We need more than just talk on energy policy."

On other environmental issues, LaRocco blamed the spotted owl controversy on poor forest management, and said the government is not "minding the issues."

Saturday afternoon brought in Congressman Richard Stallings, Idaho's Second District Congressman. Like LaRocco, Stallings is against opening the ANWR to drillings, unless it is a last resort.

"It's true the resources are there, but it's a very fragile area," said Stallings. "Right now, the environmental risk isn't worth the economic benefits. Conservation is the way to go."

Stallings also voiced opinions against Clarence Thomas being appointed to the Supreme Court, but said that President Bush is the one standing to get hurt by this.

GE: Killer of 'good things'?

By SHARI IRETON
Staff Writer

General Electric's motto "We bring good things to life" may have a new meaning to many University of Idaho students.

The situation hit close to home, as the Palouse area is an area downwind from Hanford Nuclear Power Plant.

Thursday night, students were given the opportunity to view for the first time the half hour video titled Deadly Deception: General Electric, Nuclear Weapons and Our Environment. The video was aimed at the giant corporation of GE which operated the 560-square-mile Hanford Nuclear Reservation for the government for 21 years.

The video contradicted GE's "good life" commercials with the damage caused by the Hanford radiation. Tom Baile, a Hanford area wheat rancher, discussed the incidents of deformed children and livestock, and high rates of cancer in the area known as "death mile." He said when growing up on his farm, about 80 out of 200 cows were born deformed.

Other residents who lived in the "death mile" area stated it was not hard to understand why someone's hair was falling out because of cancer, especially hypothyroidism (which is a deficient activity of the thyroid gland).

Between 1944-55, Hanford released nearly 540,000 curies of radioactive iodine (I-131), approximately two times the radiation released by Chernobyl. However, in the Three Mile Island accident of 1979, only fifteen curies of I-131 were released.

GE officials never issued warnings on danger involved while at Hanford.

The Hanford plant, according to the video, also released 7,780 curies of I-131 in a "secret experiment," during which students at nearby Whitman College experienced hair loss and thyroid problems later in life.

The Hanford video also included aerial photos of barrels of nuclear waste along with workers operating equipment to clean up the area and transposing them with the soft commercial images like, "From plastics to financial services, we bring good things to life."

The video was produced and directed by Debra Chasnoff, who won three awards for Deadly Deception at the EarthPeace International Film Festival.

The presentation was sponsored by Citizens Against War, The Palouse Preservation League, UI's Students for Peace and INFACT Northwest.

INFACT is a non-profit grassroots organization that began their work with the boycott of the Nestle Co. in the mid-1970's. The group sparked ten nations to join the boycott to stop the export of infant formula to Third World countries. The formula had caused death by baby-bottle disease.

Now INFACT hopes to stop the production of nuclear weapons, which are sponsored by GE. INFACT already has appealed to many hospitals, who have stopped purchasing GE CAT scanners, which cost approximately $1 million, and other equipment. In addition, many food store chains have stopped selling GE products to consumers.

Faculty receives new vacation sharing policy

By Wendy Deal
Staff Writer

Faculty and staff of the University of Idaho will soon be able to take advantage of a new shared leave plan. The new leave program will enable employees that have a surplus of vacation time to donate it to a fellow employee who has used up all of his or her own leave.

The plan was approved by the Idaho Board of Education at the September meeting. Carol Grupp, director of Human Resource Management and Risk Management hopes "to have the program underway within a month."

Employees may donate a minimum of eight hours of annual leave; vacation time, not sick leave. Extra vacation time can be donated to a specific individual or to a shared leave pool.

This program will be beneficial to employees that are dealing with a serious illness, have two working parents, or a major crisis. The extra leave makes it possible for employees who would otherwise have to take leave without pay continue working at the university.

Washington State University began offering a similar benefit two years ago after Washington Legislature passed a law that all state agencies must have a shared leave program. In turn, Idaho picked up on the idea and is in the process of initiating their own program.

In order to receive another person's leave, an employee must have used up all of his or her own sick leave and annual leave. The employee must also have a relative or household member with a severe illness or injury to qualify for the donated time.

Forum views women and culture

By CHRISTIAN THOMPSON
Staff Writer

"Too many capes are hard to wear at the same time," explained Maria Krasnec, University of Idaho professor of psychology and moderator at the Exploring Global Issues: An Intercultural View forum on women and traditional culture on Oct. 8 in the Sub Gold Room.

The forum consisted of five panelists, each representing a different culture, including Chinese-American, Mexican-American, Native American, Iraqi and Czechoslovakian. The discussion began with a discourse on the effect of Chinese-American values on the development of one woman, Esther Louie.

Louie explained how she had grown up with three main values. The first was piety, which she described as observation and respect for her elders...a very important concept in her culture. The second was humility...not being loud, boisterous or aggressive, but living the "stereotype of shy, quiet, passive people," Louie said. The last value was emotional control, restraining certain types of emotions.

These three values were enforced through guilt or shame instead of punitive measures. Louie said this was very effective, because if you overstepped your bounds, you not only shamed yourself, but your family suffered embarrassment and a loss of respect in the community.

The guilt and shame were a form of manipulation, like the saying that Louie grew up hearing: "They drown baby girls in China," which forced her to be good for fear of a drowning.

Chinese women are not treated as second-class citizens, but men are considered more important, and though a woman can aspire to a career, her choices are limited and as soon as she becomes a mother, she must stay in the home.

Also, in school, "Children are taught to get good marks: A's and B's, no C's, because that's average," said Louie. "But many feel it is unnecessary for women to go to college. If a woman is too educated she will never get a husband."

Louie also told of how much American values conflicted with her traditional Chinese upbringing. "Americans are boisterous and aggressive. They push to succeed. Bouncing between the two, I was never a successful Chinese," said Louie.

She closed with this thought: "Whether you see it (the contrasting cultures) as a challenge or a denial as a woman, take the best from both cultures, though sometimes decisions are difficult."

The second speaker was Anna Pena, a Mexican-American student at Idaho State University, whose father is Mexican and mother is Caucasian.

"It's been very unique to see a glimpse of what it is like to be a woman in the Hispanic culture...but never experiencing it," said Pena.

In Hispanic culture, the woman is very important. She keeps the culture alive, which women have done a very good job of. "After generations of migrations, the culture is still intact, mainly because we don't blend in well with Caucasians," explained Pena.

The woman is also the person at home, devoted to her husband, unquestionably, even if he is abusive. The marriage and family must stay intact.

For Pena, there was never a huge difference between the two cultures. Her father believes education to be very important. Through this outlook, more and more people expect a woman to succeed.

"There are more female role models to look at and say, 'Hey, that's what I want to be,' than there were before," said Pena. In fact, Pena admitted, "my father drives me harder than my brothers, saying, 'You have to do this.'"

The next speaker was Dianne Allen, UI Minority Student Adviser and member of the Puyallup and Coeur d'Alene tribes. Growing up in a traditional Indian culture, Allen was taught the roles of a woman in her society.

"She must maintain personal and family balance in all areas of development: spiritual, emotional, social and physical," Allen said. "She doesn't just see to her own harmony, but that of the whole family, which includes all of its extensions: her children, her sister's children, her brother's, her nephew's and so on."

The women, like in Hispanic culture, hold on to and continue the culture, teaching the ways of her people, explaining the rituals of everyday life. For example, Allen explained how a wife and mother must greet the new day joyfully, rousing her family out of bed with a smile and cooking breakfast with only good thoughts, because bad thoughts can be transferred to the food and affect the family negatively.

Women are also responsible for attending all social events, including funerals, pow wows, ceremonies and everything in between. This takes a lot of time, but it is necessary...everyone goes; it's part of the culture.

For Allen, these values never change, primarily because "it was driven into me that 'those are my duties' and it's been driven into my husband that 'those are her duties.'"

For Allen there was never a question about what she could do. "A woman could strive to become anything she wanted, even before the white man came...we were never restricted to the home, but we were told we could never reach authority. But in the past, women abandoned one role for another. Now we do it all."

The fourth speaker was Shari Shirkhani, a UI political scientist, who explained women in Iraqi culture.

For centuries, Iraqi women have been praised as good wives and mothers. They receive high respect by raising committed Muslim children and the woman's value is derived by her ability to raise children. Hence, there is early marriage, early childbearing, a large family, and the women are devoted to their husbands.

Shirkhani believes that if women are given "an opportunity to do more than just be a mother, then the families will be smaller." And "When the state provides for women to be economically productive, socially active and politically involved, they will have something else to do than marry at an early age and raise a family."

The changes are happening, but very slowly, especially in the rural areas. Women are being educated, more in the cities than anywhere else. But though change is slow, Shirkhani feels it is inevitable.

Maria Krasnec, the moderator, born in Czechoslovakia and now living in the United States, explained the values she grew up with.

A woman's role was to be in the family, but there was equality. They could do essentially anything men do in the workplace, but in the home they are the carriers of the culture.

Two senators deserve thanks for their efforts

A few weeks ago, while most Americans were intently following the Clarence Thomas Supreme Court confirmation hearings, or the major league pennant races, the United States Senate quietly defeated a bill that would have increased the fees charged to ranchers who graze their livestock on public lands.

By a 60 to 38 vote, senators from the 16 Western states affected by the legislation helped to squash the bill, which was sponsored by Senators Howard Metzenbaum (D-Ohio) and James Jeffords (R-VT). The measure would have raised the fee charged per animal unit month (AUM) from $1.97 today to $2.63 by next year, and to $5.13 by 1996.

The proposed increase may seem large until one discovers that the current fee of $1.97 per AUM is only one quarter of what private landowners charge for similar grazing privileges.

So, even if the bill had passed, ranchers would have still had a sweet deal. They would have been legally guaranteed a leg up on the competition, since they would have still been charged far less than market value for the resources they used.

Metzenbaum and Jeffords maintain that the current low fee amounts to nothing more than a $60 to $70 million annual subsidy for the two percent of ranchers who graze their cattle and sheep on public lands.

Although they often follow divergent political philosophies, when it comes to trying to slaughter this sacred cow, Metzenbaum and Jeffords are both correct. American taxpayers, whether they enjoy an occasional T-bone or not, should give a collective thanks to the two senators for their efforts.

It is more than a little disturbing that members of Congress, Republicans and Democrats alike, who so often voice their opposition to special interest groups and welfare of any sort, combined to defeat the fee increase.

Where is the consistency among Republicans who routinely support the free market and oppose welfare?

Where is the consistency among Democrats who are fond of taking stands against big business?

The consistency, in this case, probably stems from the political pressure placed on Democratic and Republican senators by ranching interests from Washington to Texas.

Every additional dollar which ranchers spend on grazing may be one less dollar they have to contribute to reelection campaigns. It seems that it is only consistency most senators care about.

And that's no B.S.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Rock's complaint unimportant

Editor;

So Richard Rock is perturbed by Congressman Richard Stallings' little bank overdraft and wonders whether we should send him to the U.S. Senate next year (letter Oct. 8). Well, Mr. Rock, do you know who over the last ten years TRIPLED the national overdraft, making the United States the world's biggest deadbeat? Do you know who gave huge tax cuts to the rich and raised the taxes of working people? Do you know who gave away hundreds of millions of our tax dollars to dictators and death squads in many parts of the world? Do you know who recently spent 92 BILLION DOLLARS for the sole purpose of putting an oriental despot back on his gold-plated throne? And in the process slaughtered several hundred thousand men, women, children, and fetuses?

Richard Stallings hasn't been in Washington nearly as long as Ronald Reagan, George Bush, James McClure, Steve Symms, or Larry Craig. He may have made a little error in his personal checkbook—I've done so myself—but he is not responsible for any of the above. But Richard Rock knows who is. And he is probably proud of them, too.

AMID GROWING OUTCRIS FOR DISCLOSURE ON CHECK BOUNCING AND NON-PAYMENT OF RESTAURANT BILLS:

GE a wolf in sheep's clothing

Everyone has seen them: fuzzy representations of the idyllic American family enjoying wholesome activities. From white linen picnics on expansive, green lawns, to tearful accounts of the new born baby, to tranquil boatrides on deep blue lakes...you get the picture.

The company who spews forth these revolting ads based on an imaginarily happy and healthy America is GE, the most powerfully dangerous corporation in the United States.

Did you know:

1. GE is the leading manufacturer of bomb triggers in the U.S.
2. GE lobbies for more nuclear weapons production by sitting on influential governmental committees.
3. GE owns NBC television.
4. GE contributes to public radio, and to the Audubon series.
5. GE has made the Columbia River the most radioactive in the world.
6. GE is responsible for 27 of 28 families being affected by deadly cancer in a single one mile radius near Hanford.

I had no idea GE is such a powerful and harmful company until I attended a presentation at the SUB Borah Theater on Thursday. I, too, had been sucked into passivity subliminally by watching years of commercials full of happy families blowing out candles on cakes and learning to rollerskate.

I was made aware of this fact by Northwest INFACT, a non-profit organization dedicated to stopping GE's (and other companies') unconscionable and destructive environmental actions.

The presentation of a 29 minute documentary called Deadly Deception: GE and Our Environment was extremely informative, and haunting. It was one of the scariest films I have ever seen because it made it clear that GE is totally pro-nuclear and pro-profit, and will trample over people in order to pursue their selfish interests. It is a morbid and moving film which uses starkly different elements to make its point: GE must be stopped.

The content of the film ranges from inarticulate speeches by John Knowles (Neutron Jack) to real film clips of nuclear bomb detonation to emotional accounts of loved one's deaths because of GE's negligence. It is made evident that, although facts point directly to GE as the culprit in many unnecessary deaths, GE has the monetary power to ignore and deny these atrocities.

The fairy tale goes something like this: Once upon a time, it seems GE built nuclear reactors

IFC should try to help the SAE's

Editor;
After reading the Argonaut article printed on Friday Oct. 11, we felt that we must write. SAE made some mistakes last year. They paid for them in the form of severe penalties passed down from IFC, the UI and their national fraternity. This year SAE is being charged with having alcohol at their house the day before rush started. Imagine that! The day before IFC's ban on alcohol, people drank. One house on campus has charged them with drinking alcohol the day before rush, with rush guests present. SAE was in error for their actions; They should be punished. But, before IFC decides that SAE should lose their charter, maybe they should consider whether or not their own houses could pass the same scrutiny. This seems an awful lot like selective persecution to us. Readers must also consider the source of the sanctions against SAE. IFC Tribunal is the most biased, unfair council at the UI.

At tribunal, you are guilty until proven innocent and tribunal acts as judge, jury and prosecutor. Maybe the organization that needs the overhaul is IFC Tribunal, not SAE. IFC should be helping SAE, not threatening to destroy them. TKE deliberated for a long time about the merits and repercussions of writing this letter. We decided the truth was worth risking it. You can't put someone on probation for telling the truth. -The men of Tau Kappa Epsilon

Stallings should give apology

Editor;
Representative Stallings, would you please answer the following moral questions? (this is not political).
1. You first said you did not write any insufficient funds checks, then you said you wrote many insufficient funds checks, then you said you wrote 5 checks, then 7 checks without enough funds. In Idaho, if you write checks $50 or more and they bounce, it's a felony. If convicted, the felon can be imprisoned for up to 3 years. Besides you, did any of your staff have bounced checks?

balance? Please explain.
2. Have you or your staff had parking tickets fixed by House attache's or others, and in what cities?
3. Have you or your staff charged meals in the House dining room? If so were they all paid for?
4. Mr. Stallings, would you agree that House Speaker Rep., Tom Foley, (who also wrote bounced checks), should make public all unethical and dishonest practices that congressmen have committed?

Congressman Stallings, maybe you should write all the Ricks College students you taught and apologize for the 5 or 7, or whatever, unethical bad checks you wrote.

Thanks for your early reply.

Some students give back to Moscow

Editor;
I am writing to clarify a portion of the Argonaut's coverage of my candidacy for Moscow City Council as published on October 11, 1991. Specifically, Kelly Tynon incorrectly quoted my comments before a Report Writing class by omitting the positive comments I made pertaining to the community service projects regularly performed by UI Greeks and dormitory residents. It is my opinion that these groups, with regard to their commitments of time and effort for the benefit of charitable causes (i.e., "Paint the Palouse", "Into the Streets", etc.), represent a small minority of all UI students. The students who participate in such programs are clearly not among those to whom I referred as "taking from Moscow without giving anything back."

Nice to see beliefs stood up for

Editor;
I would like to compliment you on your editorial last week about legalizing marijuana. It took an incredible amount of guts for you to print your beliefs. I am sure that your actions are and will continue to be criticized, but it is time to look at the facts America. There has never been a overdose victim of marijuana. It has been proven that you will pass out before you could even get near toxic levels of THC in your blood stream. The war on drugs has been going full steam since the Nixon administration and look how far it has gotten. All the government plans have done is waste vast amounts of tax dollars. Legalizing marijuana will allow law enforcement personnel to concentrate on stopping more serious drugs from entering the country, like heroin. By legalizing, and therefore making marijuana cheaper, the profit factor is taken out and there would be no incidents of people using force to guard their plots. Also, think of the large tax revenues that could be gained from legalization.

Way to go Matt. I am proud that you stood up for what you believe in, despite the risks. What you did is something most Americans are afraid to do, speak out for their rights.

Abortion compromise is impossible

Editor;
An Argonaut editorial (27 Aug.) presented the idea that the pro-/anti-abortion conflict should be settled via a compromise. The suggested compromise was to put the responsibility for the abortion decision on the individual level (defined by the writer as "personal choice"). According to the individual this would allow any pregnant woman to decide whether abortion is an ethical way to terminate her pregnancy.

A settlement acceptable to both pro- and anti-abortionists would be an amazing accomplishment.

Placing the abortion decision solely on the individual level does not achieve that distinction. "Personal choice" does nothing to relieve the conscience of those that believe human rights are violated when the deliberate, premeditated destruction of an unwanted, non-criminal human life occurs.

When an abortion is performed, one result becomes clear: human life is destroyed.

The Declaration of Independence contains the idea that human life is endowed by the creator with certain unalienable rights (including the right to life).

Exterminating a fetal human because it makes someone's life uncomfortable, less carefree and more complicated violates one fundamental concept on which our nation was founded.

A proposal that allows the unborn of our population to be treated as expendable nuisances is a concession that anti-abortionists are unlikely to accept. I the author of the 'personal choice' essay believes that such a proposal is a true compromise between the Pro- and anti-abortion positions, then that person should consider taking a course in common sense.

NO. There are things you can do to prevent this company from causing even more deaths, even your own. (Remember, we are all downwinders here in Moscow.) Prevent yourself and your family from getting: hypothyroidism,

It is simple. Do not buy GE products or any subsidiary brands' products, such as: Hotpoint and RCA. Spread the word! ## Weber St. crushes Idaho, 45-17

By TOM BITHELL
Senior Staff Writer

When it rains, it pours.

Such has been the case for the Big Sky Conference pre-season favorite University of Idaho football team of late.

Saturday night Idaho's problems continued as they suffered a humbling 45-17 loss at the hands of Weber State University (5-1, 4-0).

Three weeks ago Idaho (3-3, 1-2) was coming off a 48-14 stomping of Montana State University, and ranked second in I-AA football.

Then the bottom fell out.

Idaho's offense began to struggle in the second-half and the Vandals dropped two straight home games to top 20 opponents — the first back-to-back home losses since 1981.

Saturday's game wasn't any more encouraging as Idaho's losing streak reached three games, the longest since 1984. The loss also dropped the Vandals out of the Division I-AA top 20 for the first time this season.

Idaho started the game looking good right after receiving the opening kickoff. The offensive line blocked well and the Vandals drove 78 yards for a touchdown, capped off by a six yard run by Ronnie White.

"I think we did much better," Idaho Coach John L. Smith said of the offensive line. "That's the one positive thing we did. Sean Watkins stepped in and did a real good job."

On their next possession, after Weber State's All-American quarterback Jamie Martin directed the Wildcats to a 73 yard touchdown drive in front of an 11,263 homecoming crowd, the Vandal offense responded again.

This time Idaho drove 93 yards to the WSU three yard line, but once there signs of trouble arose:

On second-and-goal quarterback Doug Nussmeier pitched out to Ronnie White, who fumbled but recovered the ball and picked up a yard. On third-and-goal Nussmeier fumbled the snap from the center, Watkins, and lost a yard. It was the second fumble between the two on the drive.

"We look at the films and try to find where the problem exists," Smith said. "There are times we can say it's the quarterback, and times we can say it's the center. Maybe it's the fact that it's the new center."

As a result of the fumbles the Vandals had to settle for a 20 yard field goal by Thayne Doyle to take the lead, 10-7. It was the last Idaho lead of the game.

On WSU's next possession the Vandal defense held on fourth-and-goal from the two yard line to hold the lead at the end of the first quarter.

"The first half I thought we played pretty good," Smith said of the defense. "Really at the first

For USC the tradition rolls on

Oh, those mighty Trojans from USC.

Once again the Men of Troy made their jaunt from Southern California to take on the Washington State Cougars Saturday at Martin Stadium in Pullman.

Fate was definitely on the side of the Trojans with a 42-5-4 career record against WSU coming into the game.

However, a more important word more commonly used when referring to USC football is tradition.

Want to talk about tradition then look no further than the Crimson and Gold. The Trojans are second only to Alabama in Bowl wins with 22, have won eight national titles and 19 Rose Bowls, not to mention ranking sixth in career winning percentage with over 600 career victories.

But WSU tried to ignore tradition for a day as the game was in Pullman, a place that USC has been reluctant to call its home away from home.

True, the last time WSU defeated the Trojans was a 36-14 trouncing in 1986, but the Cougars were primed for an upset as USC came in with an uncharacteristic 2-2 record.

I did stand on the sidelines for the game and being the loyal USC fan that I am, the Trojan sideline seemed more like home.

The biggest thrill, other than meeting the USC song girls, was standing at the edge of the tunnel when the Trojans took the field before kickoff.

A sense of confidence loomed from the Trojan players as they took the field, but they soon found out that escaping Pullman with a win would be much more difficult than expected.

The Cougars came into the game with a 2-3 record, but it didn't show in the first half, as WSU jumped out to a 21-10 lead on two long touchdown passes.

But USC didn't fold under the pressure and heat from over 23,997 screaming WSU fans.

The USC tradition has always been running the football. With the likes of O.J. Simpson, Mike Garrett, Marcus Allen and Charles White heading the long list of successful alumni, the Trojans have gained more than their share of yards on ground.

Unfortunately for the Cougars, it was the same song, but a different verse Saturday.

USC, behind their devastating offensive line, did what they did in big wins over Penn State and Oregon earlier this season.

They simply wore the Cougar defense down.

Mazio Royster ran for 114 yards in the first half, but had to leave the game with neck spasms. It didn't matter as Deon Strother came in and powered his way to 122 yards on 22 carries after

Vandals split with Montana schools

The Vandal volleyball team earned a split this weekend.

(JIM VOLLBRECHT PHOTO)

By KATE LYONS-HOLESTINE
Staff Writer

The Idaho Vandals volleyball squad started the weekend on a sweet note downing Montana State 10-15, 16-14, 13-15, 15-13, 15-13.

"It was a long match," UI coach Tom Hilbert said. "But our team showed a lot of character coming from behind to win the games."

However, on Saturday, their weekend took a sour turn when Montana, the top ranking Big Sky Conference volleyball team, took the Vandals in three games 11-15, 11-15, 13-15.

"We played well, we just didn't finish," Hilbert said.

The Vandals led in every game, but Montana's strong offense took control.

"Montana's just more mature. In retrospect our players look back and realize they have to stay tough throughout the match," Hilbert said.

Anne Schenke, Montana's setter, is believed to be one of the best in the nation by Hilbert and with her running their offense, the Vandals had a hefty foe.

Montana took to the courts this season with six returning letter winners from last year's team that advanced to the NCAA Tournament.

"We were pretty balanced offensively and there were just some critical times where we needed to put more pressure on Montana," Hilbert said.

In the final game of the match, UI was leading 13-11 when Montana sided-out. Montana ran the next four points straight to clinch the match.

"By good serving and a great transition game they can score like that in certain rotations - that's when we need to be able to side out," Hilbert said.

The Vandals didn't let Montana dominate the court; they challenged Montana every step of the way.

"We were close, within two or three points in every game," Hilbert said. "You will see us improve a lot over the season and do well the next time we see them."

The Vandals will travel to Missoula for an end of the season match-up Nov. 8 to try and avenge their home court loss.

Friday night, the Vandals prolonged their victory going five games against Montana State.

"In the end our team came through," Hilbert said. "They got fed up in the third game and went out to show them (Montana State) who was dominant at the time."

Krebsbach takes first place at Idaho Inv.

By DOUG BAUER
Staff Writer

Kari Krebsbach stole the show in the women's race at the Idaho Invitational Saturday by capturing first place honors to lead the Vandals to a second place finish in the six team invitational.

"I think that has been her best race of the year. I'd have to check the records, but I don't think that we've had any individual champions in awhile," women's Coach Scott Lorek said. "That is just a great deal for Kari, especially in front of the home crowd and being a senior and all."

Although Robyn Slate returned for the Vandals, they were running without their number one runner Dianne Knudson, who is still trying to recover from a stress fracture that she suffered last spring.

"Dianne is on a day to day basis," Lorek said. "Our goal is to get her to recover in time for the district tournament."

Slate was followed closely throughout the meet by teammate Angie Falk. Slate finished the race in seventh place overall, while Falk wound up eighth.

"Robyn (Slate) had a decent race, she's capable of better and I'm sure she'll show it," Lorek said. "She's only ran twice this year and the last time that she did run was at the Whitman Invite."

The women's team title was captured by WSU, who recorded a total of 20 points, compared to the Vandals' 40.

Facing stiff competition from an ever improving Washington State University Cougar team, the University of Idaho men's cross country team was smothered at their home meet.

Cougar runners placed in the top four positions, led by sophomore newcomer Josephat Kapkory, who finished with a time of 23:32.

The Vandal's top finisher for the second week in a row was Ty Koellman, who finished eleventh overall.

"I think that Ty is really coming around," men's runner Mark Olden said. "He is improving week by week and he is really becoming a good runner."

Olden, the Vandal's top runner is still not running up to par as he is still in the recovery process from an achillo-bursitis injury that he incurred last spring.

"I was a lot happier with my performance this week than last," Olden said. "I raced competitively but I think that it is just going to take time. I've still got everywhere to go."

Olden was second on the Vandal squad, finishing eleventh in the tournament.

The men's team is still not up to full strength. Darren Kotsovos, a top runner for the Vandals, is suffering from a stress fracture to his ankle, but, according to Olden, he will be back in the running by the end of this week.

The second part of of time commitments of Vandal football players will run Friday because of space limitations

Turnovers continue to plague Idaho offense

By TOM BITHELL
Senior Staff Writer

Saturday night the University of Idaho demonstrated again what turnovers can do to a team. The 45-17 score against Weber State University doesn't tell the whole story. Looking at the stat sheet does. While the hosting Wildcats tallied up 657 total yards of offense and had 30 first downs, the Vandals came up with 551 yards and 28 first downs. It sounds like a close game by those measures until you read the turnovers and the play-by-play. On Idaho's third drive of the game the Vandals start on their own 25, leading 10-7. Quarterback Doug Nussmeier hits Kasey Dunn, all alone over the middle, but Dunn trips at the eight preventing the touchdown. The next play, first-and-goal, Nussmeier fumbles the snap from center Sean Watkins and WSU recovers. It's the third fumble between the two, but the first that the Wildcats recover.

"Maybe it's the fact it's the new center," Coach John L. Smith said of redshirt freshman Sean Watkins in his first start. "We're going to do a lot of extra snaps."

WSU takes the possession and drives 90 yards to score and take the lead 14-10.

In the third quarter, WSU has just scored to open a 21-10 lead. Idaho has the ball at their own 35, third down-and-five. Nussmeier drops back and is intercepted by WSU's Mark Hood.

Again the Wildcats capitalize and score. WSU 28, Idaho 10.

The Vandals then take the ensuing kickoff at their own 28. Pat West, replacing Nussmeier, drives the team to the WSU 32. On first-and-ten he hits Walter Saunders over the middle for 10 yards, but Saunders fumbles.

WSU recovers again, but this time they don't score.

When Idaho gets the ball again, West moves them to the WSU 27 before a holding call sets them back 10 yards at the Wildcat 37. Two plays later West hits Curtis Richardson at the 10, but Richardson fumbles too, and another Vandal drive is halted.

This time WSU drives 80 yards and scores to lead 35-10.

The Wildcats drive another 90 yards and score, sealing the Vandal's fate at 45-17.

Idaho fumbled a total of seven times on the day but luckily recovered four of them. Nussmeier and West also threw an interception apiece.

Idaho now has nine more turnovers than their opponents, second in the Big Sky Conference only to Eastern Washington University.

part we pretty much controlled the line of scrimmage."

Idaho's ensuing drive went 89 yards to the WSU eight yard line before Nussmeier fumbled again on the snap.

This time the Wildcats recovered and again drove to the Idaho two yard line where they faced fourth-and-goal once more. This time Martin found receiver Dave Hall in the corner of the endzone. With the extra point WSU set the halftime score at 14-10.

In the second half the Wildcats opened it up, punting only once and scoring on five of eight drives while giving up no turnovers. And WSU's offense generated 657 total yards for the game.

Meanwhile Idaho turned the ball over four times in the second-half with two interceptions and two fumbles, despite 551 total yards for the game. Both fumbles and one interception came inside Wildcat territory.

"Those are some of the things you just can't explain," Smith said of the turnovers. "What you've got to do is correct them."

Nussmeier, who was 11 of 21 for 225 yards and one interception, was benched with 7:10 remaining in the third quarter in favor of backup Pat West.

West completed 15 of 29 for 265 yards, one interception, and one touchdown — the only Idaho touchdown through the air.

This week Smith said the start against Idaho State University will be up for grabs between Nussmeier and West.

"We're going to wait and see how Doug and Pat do," Smith said. "We'll take them out and let them play and then decide."

WSU's Martin, who picked the Vandals apart all night, was 33 of 42 for 398 yards, one interception, and four touchdowns.

"He's the most accurate guy I've seen since John Friez," Smith said. "He reacted real well to everything we did."

Wildcat Alfred Pupunu led all receivers with a career high 14 catches for 200 yards and one touchdown reception.

WSU also ran up 243 yards rushing to Idaho's 61, led by running back Geoff Mitchell's 110 yards. And all but 62 of those 243 came in the second-half when the defense had to key on the passing attack.

The offensive bright spot for Idaho was Kasey Dunn. Dunn caught nine passes for 185 yards, putting him just two receptions shy of breaking Idaho's all-time receiving record of 230 receptions set by Jerry Hendren in 1969.

The loss dampened Idaho's hopes of making its seventh straight I-AA playoff appearance. In order to make the 16 team field the Vandals will likely have to win all five of their remaining games beginning this Saturday at ISU. Three of Idaho's last four games will be at home.

replacing Royster.

Deon Strother took a continual beating from the determined Cougar defense, but refused to quit.

A lot of that abuse came in the form of WSU linebacker Anthony McClanahan. McClanahan had one of the greatest individual performances I have ever witnessed with 23 total tackles including 21 unassisted.

All total, USC ran for 301 yards on 61 carries while only passing the ball 22 times.

WSU didn't have the same luck on the ground as the Cougars were held to 78 yards rushing on 29 carries and had two fumbles.

It wasn't the most exciting football game I have ever seen, but USC did win 34-27.

For the Cougars it was another frustrating loss to their counterparts from USC.

And for the Trojans, the tradition continues.

By Sev Hoiness

The Prichard Art Gallery and University Art Gallery, in Ridenbaugh Hall, are both funded by University of Idaho dollars as well as private donations. Nevertheless, turn-outs are generally low and students should be taking advantage of the galleries to become art literate.

Both galleries are directed by pleasant, friendly individuals that are willing to take the time and walk through the exhibits and make a visitor feel at ease if they haven't been exposed to the art world.

The exhibitions involve a variety of art forms including architecture, landscape architecture, ceramics, photography, folk and installation art, traditional painting and sculpture.

At the Prichard on Fifth and Main, downtown Moscow, the exhibit called Environmental Impact Statements opened September 13 and will close on October 20.

This collection of 32 works by Pacific Northwest artists revolves around the environment and the artists' conceptions of mankind's abusive nature. Although the Pacific Northwest is targeted, global ecology is also addressed.

Also on exhibit is David Nechak, who portrays a more abstract form of art entitled CONNECTING ROOMS: Wisdom of the Desert, Questions of the Soul. Nechak has exhibited across the country and is on the faculty of the Cornish Art Institute in Seattle.

Since the Prichard opened in 1985 there have been 72 exhibitions, 32 one-person shows and 40 group shows. A total of 1166 artists have exhibited and annual attendance at exhibitions is 20,000 persons whereas the Prichard serves a regional population of 35,000.

Classical Disney leaves reviewer numbed

Review by MEYLA BIANCO
Staff Writer

There are some things that are just natural when you're a kid. Any blue food is automatically the best, the most forbidden toy is the most sought after (toxic plastic bubbles, for instance) and Walt Disney cartoons are nirvana.

Last Tuesday I saw Fantasia and my image of Disney was altered. No longer was he the creator of fun, whimsical cartoons to eat sugared cereal by. Now I am aware that he is the creator of a different type of entertainment: the epic animation fest.

Fantasia was so long and overpoweringly classical I could hardly stand it. Don't get me wrong, I stayed through the whole thing, it was free and all, but it was definitely a feat of superhuman patience.

I can only stand so many sweet cherubic winter pixies flitting about complacently. Similarly, I could only appreciate about ten minutes of the 1940's style centaurs, innocently exhibiting draconian early American courting values. After the ten minute mark I felt a deep hatred welling up in my throat for the prancing darlings and their equally chipper companions. I mean, pastels are okay and all, but really! I get a big enough dose of them walking by the Easter display at Rosauer's.

"FANTASIA was so long...I could barely stand it."

Maybe it is the difference in eras that makes me such a raving cynic. In the 40's, perhaps everyone was just equipped with a higher innate threshold for goofiness. Maybe it was because it was 115 degrees in the SUB Borah Theatre, but I did not really enjoy this movie, this journey in time, this test of adult-style patience.

From one mundane instrument tuning sequence to another, I found myself drifting off, thinking of things far removed from the screen before me.

When the roly poly white cupids came on, naked, shooting their arrows into the saccharine centaurs, I found myself wondering why they looked so ridicuous. Then I realized they had no sexual organs. That's right, even though they were stark raving ass naked there was no evidence of any genitalia! It made me wonder what Disney was trying to say to the people of the forties.

Another odd thing was that every character in the hellishly long Fantasia was white, save two black servant women. Curious.

The scene in which the alligators were dancing with the elephants and hippos was probably the best, for a while. After a time, I thought it might have been more entertaining if the alligator would have brazenly snapped off the leg of one of those cutesy hippo ballerinas.

The music droned for me, I must say. I do appreciate classical music at times, but as far as two hours of it married to adorable cartoon images goes, I'll pass.

If it wasn't for the sorcerer in The Sorcerer's Apprentice or the "cool bat creature from hell" sequence, I think it would be safe to say that I would have hated this made-to-be-a-classic movie.

Obviously, some gentle reader out there will think I am a heathen for berating the likes of the American hero, Walt Disney. Too bad. When a movie annoys and irritates me to such a degree, I have to speak out, no matter how classic it is, and no matter how many people hate me later for ruining the image of the movie where they met their now fat and bald spouse.

New York brass ensemble opens Chamber Music Series

The Saturday Brass Quintet, (Quintet-in-Residence at the Manhattan School of Music) will perform this Friday, October 18 at 8 P.M. in the University Auditorium.

This appearance marks the opening of the sixth season of the critically-acclaimed Auditorium Chamber Music Series on the UI campus. Other performances slated for this year include: The Ridge String Quartet, Music's Recreation, and the Arden Trio.

The Saturday Brass Quartet has been called "Class of the Brass," by the Washington Post, "an unusually brilliant ensemble," by the New York Times, and was awarded the 1990 Walter F. Naumberg Chamber Music Award--the first brass ensemble to win in 14 years.

Friday's program will feature works by Paul Hindemith, Giovanni Palestrina, Peter Maxwell Davies, and Richard Wernick. Tickets cost $8 for adults, $5 for students and senior citizens, and may be bought at the door or at Ticket Express (885-7212).
