Scholarships offered by PepsiCo

By KELLY TYNON Staff Writer

hanks to Pepsi and the University Dining Services, UI students have a chance at a $5000 scholarship.

This afternoon from 4:30 to 7:30 in the Wallace Cafeteria, Pepsi will be videotaping students singing along with, "You Got the Right One Baby." Students will be able to take home their own video, and possibly have it entered into the national sing-along contest.

The national contest will consist of the best videos chosen from each campus. The winner of the national contest will receive a $5000 scholarship from Pepsi.

Larry "Bud" Melman, from the David Letterman show, is the judge for the national contest. Melman has been traveling to campuses around the U.S. to promote the contest.

Phillip Ruskin, a representative of UN Productions, the company promoting the contest for Pepsi, said everyone should come out and have fun. "If students have an instrument, they can bring it along. They don't even have to sing the right words, they just have to be funny, goofy," said Ruskin. "It's like the commercials with Jerry Lewis and the other celebrities. We want something crazy. People have even brought their pets to these things."

Marriot will be giving every person who walks through the door a can of Pepsi or Diet Pepsi, and every fifth person will receive a Pepsi squèeze bottle. There will also be a drawing for a motorized raft during the evening.

"We're having a 50's theme night, including a special menu with burgers and milkshakes," said Mark Kjeseth, a University Dining_Services board manager.

ASUI Vice-President resigns position

By LANE GRACIANO Staff Writer

he provision of funds for telephone-number stickers was the hottest debate at Wednesday night's ASUI

Senate meeting at the SUB. Senate Bill #212, which would transfer $110.60 from the General Reserve to the Senate to fund 2x2-inch emergency/important telephone-number stickers, came under intense fire after the debateless passing of six Board-member appointment bills.

The argument was sparked by Sen. Allison Lindholm, who questioned the meaning of the acronym CGD, which appears on prototypes of the stickers. Sen. Charles D'Alessio, who designed the stickers, replied that CGD were his initials. They were there, he said, because he felt he was due the credit of having spent time on designing the stickers. Senators Lindholm and Richard Rock, however, contended that the measure was not appropriate for an ASUI project. Sen. Bill Heffner then put forward a public request to remove the initials from the stickers, to which Sen. D'Alessio replied, Sen. D'Alessio went on to explain the project entailed 2000 stickers to be printed each year for four years.

ASUI would cover the entire cost of the first printing, then split the cost over the subsequent years 25 percent to 75 percent with the other sponsors of the stickers. The sponsors — including such organizations as Alternatives to Violence in the Palouse, Student Advisory Services, and the Women's Center — would also act as distributors of the stickers.

According to Sen. Rock, many dorm phones are already adorned with similar, bright orange stickers provided by Housing Services, but the stickers are outdated and need to be replaced. So

SAEs receive sanctions

By DOUG TAYLOR and JIM VOLLBRECHT Staff Writers

he University of Idaho Interfraternity Council Tribunal announced yesterday 18 sanctions that e Sigma Alpha Epsi fraternity must adhere to in order to remain a member of the IFC.

"My response to santions is that they are a little stiff, but we will do what we can to comply with them and hopefully turn it into a positive thing," said Mike Lincoln, SAE President.

Mike Smole, IFC Tribunal Chairman, said that the sanctions could have been greater than what was handed down.

"If we followed the sanctions to the letter, they would no longer be in the IFC," Smole said.

The sanctions include the extention of their present probationary status until at least May 1, 1993. In addition the chapter will not be allowed to participate in social activities with any other living group.

An advisory board will also be created by the IFC to assist the fraternity in creating a positive contributiuon to the greek system. The board will consist of members of the student body, greek community and Moscow residents.

The board will formulate a plan of educational programs that will include alchohol awareness, hazing education and risk management. The board will also make recomendations on philanthropic endevours within the university and the community.

Priviledges have also been revoked by the IFC regarding the SÁEs participation in 1992 rush.

According to Mike Smole, IFC Tribunal Chairman, the fraternity could still be eligible to participate in fall rush. The fraternity has a semester and a half to prove themselves to the Tribunal has strongly advised the chapter's alumni commission to implement a strong alcohol policy.

The IFC Tribunal will keep an eye on the SAEs through the use of detailed weekly reports as well as unannounced spot inpections by the IFC. The SAEs will also have weekly contact with the IFC advisory board.

The fraternity also will need to aquire a resident advisor. According to Smole, the SAEs were required to have a resident advisor according to the conditions of their current probation. The Tribunal, however, was never clear as to whether the fraternity had ever filled the position.
"We were under the impression that they had a resident advisor," said Smole.

The advisor will be selected by the SAE alumni committee in conjunction with the UI and the IFC Tribunal. There will be no direct involvement in everyday activities of the house by the Tribunal.

"We have got to give them some room to breath," said Smole.

Students go 'Into the Streets'

By KALISTA BARCLAY Asst. News Editor

Student leaders representing a varity of groups all over campus are preparating to go "Into the Streets."

The program "Into the Streets" is a national outreach, recruitment and education program created to take college students across the country into the streets to work with disadvataged youths and adults. Sponsored by the National Interfraternity Conference, the program is designed to strengthen service programs and build a sense of community on college campuses by getting everyone involved.

On November 1 thousands of students nationwide will kick-off the program. University of Idaho students will join them by offering their time to agencies here in Moscow. A pep rally will be held Wednesday, Oct. 30 to generate interest and provide more information to interested students.

According to John Saywer, coordinator of "Into the Streets" for UI, plans have been made for students to volunteer at six community agencies. Volunteers will spend time Nov. 1 or Nov. 2 with organizations such as Good Samaritan Retirement Village, Big Brothers/Big Sisters, International Friendship Association, Stepping Stones (an organization for the developmentally disabled), Hospice of the Palouse and Volunteers in Moscow.

Students will spend an evening participating in activities such as visiting and helping the elderly, young or disabled, being a big brother of big sister, doing holiday gift wrapping, doing fall yard work for someone who can't do it themselves or just talking with someone who is disabled in some way.

The committee is organizing activities for about 200 students who will be divided among the six agencies. However, according to Sawyer, there will be plenty of opportunities for volunteers who

Grace Wicks: A UI Tradition

By KELLY TYNON Staff Writer

Most students know Grace Wicks as the former housemother of FarmHouse fraternity, a job she held for twentyone years. Some may recognize her name from her weekly column in the Idahonian. However, many don't know Grace Wicks, the person.

According to Wicks, "Everyday is a privilege and I want to use it well." Believe me, at 85 years old, she has used all of her days well.

When I arrived at her apartment at 8:30 in the morning, I was greeted by a small woman in a purple robe. She was standing in front of a mirror, curling her grey hair, while watching the Thomas hearings on television. "Go ahead and wander around the apartment," she said. "I'll be with you in a minute."

As I began my self-guided tour, it became obvious that family is very important to Wicks. Her collection of family memorabilia begins with three large paintings of 18th century ancestors on the wall and continues up through the years, from daguerreotypes to recent photos of her great grandchildren.

"That keeps me going," said Wicks of her family.

The other important pictures on Wicks' wall were of prominant republicans, with one photo signed, "Grace, with my deepest personal regards,

Ronald Reagan." She also has a silver plate that was presented to her by the Republican Party for being a state committee woman for many years. The inscription reads, "To the Grand Lady of the Grand Old

When she was done curling her hair, Wicks led me around the apartment to show off her pictures and plaques. During the conversation, she noticed my sorority badge.

"It's not a sorority, it's a women's fraternity," Wicks reminded me. She was the first president of the Alpha Phi chapter at UI and received the Ursa Major Award from the international fraternity. This prestigious award is given for service in the community and only one is given out at the international convention every other year.

Wicks also told me about her husband, Guy Wicks. It was in his memory that she donated the money for the landscaping of Guy Wicks field. There is

Shooters shine in competition

By WENDY DEAL Staff Writer

Last Saturday, the ROTC had their Second Annual Rifle Target Shoot. Mark Stewart won the men's division with four perfect bullseyes and one near miss. He scored an almost perfect score of 49 out of 50. Brittany Waldock took first place in the women's division with a score of 46 out of

The competitors were given nine rounds to sight in their guns and get warmed up for the actual competition. The competition was made up of seven rounds with the best five out of seven rounds determining the winner. The course was made up of seven bullseye targets. If a competitor hit a perfect bullseye they were scored with a perfect ten with one point being deducted from each ring away from the bullseye. Tshirts were awarded to the top competitors of the men's and women's divisions.

Graduate assistant of intramurals, Shane Klingenstein said, "We expected a larger field of competitors, but numbers were down this year because the contest was on the opening day of hunting season."

The Target Shoot took place in the shooting range, which is a new addition to the Memorial Gym this year. Located behind the Day Care in the basement of Memorial Gym, the shooting range is open to all students and faculty.

The shooting range is open Tuesday and Thursday nights from 8 p.m. to 10 p.m. The Navy ROTC Gunnery Sgt. Joe Flores and Cadet Major Janie Howe supervise the range while it is open. Only .22 caliber semiautomatic and rifles are allowed in the range. Saftey equipment is available, but you must provide your own amunition.

Deborah Norum, Assistant Director of Campus Recreation commented, "I'm pleased the Intramurals Office can offer so many diverse activities. The shooting range is a great addition to our intramurals program, especially for those involved in ROTC."

Forum discusses global impact of mass media

By Christian Thompson Staff Writer

The last of the five forums on Exploring Global Issues: An Intercultural View was presented Tuesday night in the Borah Theatre and focused on the effect of the American media on other

The forum included Alex Tan. director of the WSU Edward R. Murrow School of Communication and researcher of socialization of minorities, Fekri Hassan, an Egyptian professor of Anthropology at WSU, Qingwen Dong, a Chinese doctoral student, and Dr. Bob Doornik, a retired WSU professor who taught for a year in Korea.

Tan discussed why American television is everywhere and discerned that it is basically because it is so cheap. It costs only between $120 and $1500 for a half hour show whereas it cost about $350,000 to produce an original show. Also, with satellite technology, it is very easy for countries to receive U.S. transmissions, but there are some drawbacks.

Tan, Hassan, and Dong explained how negative the images of American television are. Tan said, "The U.S. is being portrayed in a most negative light, with violence, preoccupation with sex, and the consumption of material goods." He also said, "foreigners and minorities are portrayed as violent and easily corrupted."

Hassan stated "how frequent stereotypes are" when the U.S. portrays people of the Middle East. The media's "powers are enormous and far reaching-a vehicle for an alternative reality reducing the complexity of other cultures to stereotypical icons."

The television shows "filthy rich sheiks squandering their money on gambling and women or fanatic terrorists murdering innocent people; basically the villans in a bad western." American television also stereotypes the women of the Middle East as "voluptuous and sensual women who are oppressed beyond reason."

Hassan also mentioned the misrepresentation of Islams and Arabs by the mass media. The word "Arab" now encompasses many different nationalities inculding Egyptian, Islamic, and Arabian. "This is like encompassing all of Christianity in the Ku Klux Klan."

Dong said U.S. television "covers more conflict and action news," ignoring the good news about developing countries. Creating a "distorted view which is reported out of context about developing nations." For example, he spoke about the student revolution in Tienamen Square in 1989. All the U.S. saw was the riot. The news failed to provide economical or political information about the situation. Instead, it focused on "audience impact and unusualness," because "nonprize winning reporting is less important and it makes less money. A station could go bankrupt if the audience is not interested."

Doornik provided another view, by presenting a study conducted by his wife, Jinny Doornik. The researchers questioned Koreans about American television's impact on their value system. It didn't seem to matter if the Koreans were first generation immigrants to the U.S. or living in Korea, there was basically no effect. Which is surprising when you consider that American television is in 96 percent of homes in Korea. Doornik believes that the Korean "culture is so strong that American television does not have a large impact in Korea."

Tan did mention that some positive views are presented in American television including freedom and the value of different ideas.

Because technology has expanded so quickly, U.S. views have exploded around the world. Whether they have an impact is still argued, but Hassan believes media that "serves the market in which it is located and is then transported to another market is out of context, because we (the U.S.) look at the world with a set of values that are not shared by the rest of the world."

In the words of Dong, "News media is so powerful today that they shape the pictures in our

Thomas' nomination goes beyond sexual harassment

Clarence Thomas' nomination to the Supreme Court has been confirmed by the United States Senate. Sometime this afternoon he will be sworn in to his position as one of the arbiters of judicial review. Do I have a problem with that?

Yes, I do, and it has nothing to do with the sexual harrassment issue.

Part of my problem is the attitude that started appearing around 3:20 p.m. Tuesday afternoon: the attitude that Anita Hill got what she deserved.

The Senate confirmation hearings were not Anita Hill vs. Clarence Thomas. The fact that was obscured by the fog of media hype surrounding the sexual harrassment issue is that a liberal member of the Supreme Court has been replaced by a conservative judge.

What's my problem with that? I just enjoy my civil liberties, that's all. I'm goofy that way.

Did abortion go away while the networks were occupied with the baseball playoffs and Thomas' confirmation hearing? Did the L.A. cops go away?

Two of the stated goals of the Conservative in American politics is to minimize government and legislate morality. The group that is now going to decide issues like abortion consists predominantly of conservative justices and only one female justice.

I believe that abortion is wrong and it would crush me if the woman bearing my child had one. But I don't think it's right to force my beliefs on someone else. I don't think it's right to legislate morality. A conservative court will see things differently.

I hope anyone who disagrees with me will write the Argonaut a letter. I also hope they clip those letters out and save them. I hope they read them again in fifteen or twenty years when their daughter can't get an abortion and the police are searching their car without a warrant and only the flimsiest excuse for probable cause.

Call me another bleeding heart liberal trying to rock the boat if you want, and a lot of you will. But then if I remember right, that's what they called the Supreme Court Justices that came up with the Miranda Warning and reformed search and seizure procedures. That's what you called a Presidential candidate who dared to be honest while you voted for a man who lied to America on national television. Or maybe you were listening to the "chingching" of the cash register when he did

So what? You could have read his lips. Once again the American public has been misled about what the important issues really are by the media and let down by their elected officials.

Both sides are to blame

Apparently, Ralph Nielson does not like Republicans (letter October 15). He seems to believe that Reagan, Bush, and all other republicans in the federal government are responsible for the fiscal crisis the United States is engulfed in.

If Mr. Nielson knew anything about our government, he would realize this in not entirely true. The U.S. House of Representatives and the U.S. Senate, with the exception of two years, has been dominated by democrats. With the system of Congress' approval. No matter how many republicans want something done, it won't be done without democrats concurring. Therefore, democrats can equally be blamed for fiscal irresponsibility. Besides, Franklin Roosevelt, someone who is almost a deity among modern day democrats, caused an explosion of the national debt because of his erratic spending for social programs.

I agree that government and the citizens need to be fiscally responsible, but let's realize that the blame does not lie with one group, but rather a majority of the leaders.

Highway addition not necessary

By STEVE HENSCHEID Staff Writer

Sometime in 1995 or 1996, Moscow and Pullman will have a four-lane expressway transversing the eight-mile stretch between the towns. Commuters will then be able to zip along to attend a class or two at WSU or

The question is whether our communities need this wider road. Certainly there are times when a string of eight or ten cars follow one another, but they often still maintain the speed limit. Creating an additional two lanes would only encourage more of us to drive this road instead of seeking alternatives such as car pools, mass transit or bicycling.

The Palouse already has organized car pool groups. However, a great many of the cars traveling the route contain only the driver on his way to a class at one of the universities. By consolidation such oscillating students would rould be curbed as well.

Mass transit is a less immediate answer because we currently have no such system on the palouse. If enough interest was generated by both universities and the two communities it would serve such a project would be feasible, however. The cost of running a bus service would indeed be high and financially not very profitable. However, the cost of widening the highway is in the neighborhood of a million dollars per mile, so a bus service would be a bargain.

Finally, for those willing to risk getting in shape while at the same time commuting, one can bike. Such a jaunt takes no more than thirty minutes and except for the fact that you get a little winded, there really aren't too many negative aspects to it. Presently, bikers not only conserve gas, but the are forced to share the road with occasional bottleneck of traffic speeding automobiles. This problem would be largely reduced by constructing a separate bike path next to the road. At roughly a hundred thousand dollars per mile it's not only cheaper but would encourage people to leave their gas-guzzling, ozonedepleting cars behind once in awhile.

Of course come winter the path wouldn't be good for anything but cross-country skiing. Then again, skiing is about as healthy an activity there is.

Perhaps when talk of widening the Pullman-Moscow highway surfaced again, there wasn't enough interest in other solutions. Now as the construction date nears, it is time to take action. Consider for yourself whether we really need such an improvement and then write the Washington and Idaho Departments of Transportation to tell them what you think. The only way to make waves is to jump into the pool.

Regular students have needs too

We are writing to comment on Last Friday's Argonaut article titled, "For UI football players, it's dealing with class."

Point 1: Football players are not the only individuals "dealing with class" management." and "time

Point 2: Athletes can, and do, receive special consideration when scheduling classes, labs and practice.

What happened to the majority of individuals attending this University? Are football players the only ones who feel the stress of time management? What about Volleyball, Track and Basketball participants? Furthermore, how about considering the student at the UI who works 40 hours a week, has 3 children, a spouse, is preparing for Medical School entrance and is an active member of their community and church? This person receives no special consideration or allowances for their equally as demanding schedule. We feel that there is excess focus on football players and not enough on the rest of the student

The reality is that football participants are not treated as "general students." For example, some players are not required to attend classes (eg. lab) during normal class hours. Furthermore, not only are attendance policies waived, but in the past, instructors have been urged to not fail a football participant. Therefore, given these special circumstances it is difficult for us to consider football players as typical, "general" students. It is our opinion that coaches have a responsibility to enforce the player's educational requirements as well as to teach them football. We are not attempting to attack or deflate those players of great merit. However, if the "general" student body here at UI received the same personal opportunities, attention and considerations as football players, we would lessen many student's stress involved with time management and enable a not so exceptional student to become exceptional

Sen. Lindholm then voiced her reluctance to fund "something that will go right into people's trashcans." However, Sen. Lindholm.

Meanwhile, ASUI Vice President John Noh resigned from office and Sen. Bill Heffner submitted his resignation from the Senate to replace Noh. Noh explained that he was quitting because of academic reasons. "I realized that the reason I'm here is not to play politician," he said, "it's to get a degree."

Both Noh and Heffner thanked various friends who have helped them attain success in the Senate. "It's been exciting to see new ideas coming out of an organization that's been stagnant recently," said Noh. "Projects like the campus shuttle will definitely benefit students."

In a 15-minute adjournment, Heffner was sworn into office as the new ASUI vicepresident.

In other business, Senate Bill #206 was also passed.

The bill provides for the inclusion of the Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity, the Alumni Resident Center, and McConnell Hall as recognized and represented ASUI living groups.

Sen. Amtul Sheikh presented blueprints for free Moscow-Pullman campus shuttle routes. Senators Sheikh and Amy Anderson, together with the head of Risk Management, Carol Grupp, have proposed the idea to Idaho and Washington bus companies. A service intended to aid students and faculty in transiting between the UI and WSU, the shuttles will begin their runs next fall. In addition, a park-and-ride system may be installed, where motorists could buy a $20 oncampus parking permit and a S2 bus pass.

ASUI Productions spokesman Sean O'Connor presented a list of its upcoming events,

"She did a lot more than we realized," said Gordon Lance, the vice-president of Farm-House. "She was a part of us."

Tasked her what she did in a normal day, but she said, "I don't want you to take space for it." However, she did say that she gets up in the middle of the night to write letters or to write her weekly Idahonian column. "That's when my head is buzzing with ideas," said Wicks.

Wicks was concerned that I iust write about the good times in her life. "My life, as I look back on it...I like to see the positive. I prefer that the constructive, supportive parts of life are emphasized in an understanding way.'

As Wicks was talking, she remembered all the things she has seen invented in her lifetime.

"I've seen electricity, telephones, germs discovered, the rabies vaccine, x-rays, radio, television, and commercial aviation," said Wicks.

I had heard many things about Grace Wicks before I went to interview her, and she is a pleasant surprise. I thoroughly enjoyed myself and I wish everyone could spend at least an hour with her, listening to her stories. Grace Wicks is local history.

When I left, she gave me a kiss on the cheek. "You come back and visit anytime. You're one of my special girls," she said with a smile.

It's time to turn it around

By TOM BITHELL Senior Staff Writer

The Vandals will try to put a halt to their three game losing streak Saturday night when they face rival Idaho State University in Pocatello.

Idaho, 3-3 and 1-1 in the Big Sky Conference, got off to its best start since 1924, winning it's first three games of the season and climbing to No. 2 in NCAA Division I-AA polls.

Then turnover troubles and second-half problems set in as the Vandals slipped down the top 20 week-by-week until last Saturday's 45-17 loss to Weber State University put them out of the polls.

"That's the difference between last year and this year," Idaho Coach John L. Smith said. "Last year we weren't turning the ball over, we were getting them."

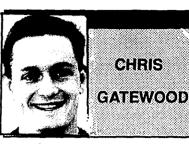

In the last three games the Vandals have lost the ball 11 times, while being outscored 75-7 in the second-half.

"It just comes down to going out and playing football," Smith said of the second-half struggles.

Idaho State (2-3, 1-2) has also experienced problems with turnovers this year.

"I think turnovers are the big

We'll take just one

By CHRISTOPHER GATEWOOD
Sports Editor

The headline above just about says it all. Just win one game. That's all I'm asking. At this point I'd say that's about all anybody's asking.

At the start of the season things couldn't have looked brighter for the University of Idaho Vandals. They had a host of returning talent, were ranked fourth in the nation by the Associated Press, and were talking of a national title. Now the Vandals would just settle for a win this week against the Idaho State Bengals, a team that is the most improved in the Big Sky Conference. Most years, this game would be a laugher, a stat builder, but now it shapes up to be a real test. The most important of the season.

Where did this mudslide start? How can team that had a 3-0 start fall so far in such a hurry? The warning signs were there. They looked sloppy in crushing nonscholarship Sonoma State and after nearly throwing the game away, had to rally to beat Southwest Texas State, 41-38. The last time the Vandals won a game was against Montana State, 48-14. A team that Bozeman High defeated in a pre-season scrimmage. The Vandals are lucky they aren't 2-4, because they nearly threw the game away against Southwest Texas.

It seems my worst fears before the season have come true. The Vandals have little depth on defense and injuries have decimated them. It seems that at one time or another, everyone on the field has been hurt. Here is the medical list: linebacker Will Saffo, ankle; linebacker Brian Wamsley, knee; defensive end Billy Sims, knee; safety Mike Noble, knee; running back Devon Pearce, ankle; offensive tackle Jody Schnug, knee; guard Floyd Dorry, knee; offensive tackle Shawen Smith, knee; defensive tackle Mat Groshong, knee; safety Jeff Jordan, achilles tendon. I'm sure l've missed a few, but there is still enough guys here to have a M.A.S.H. reunion.

The injuries to the defense have been the ones that have hurt the most. Besides, losing Jordan for the season, the Vandals had promising, young safety Josh Moore quit and Noble go down for the season. That is why last week Weber State quarterback Jamie Martin picked them apart for 398 yards and five touchdowns. That is why the defense is ranked second-to-last in the conference in total defense.

But the situation the Vandals are in goes deeper than that. John L. Smith said after the Weber State loss that he'd take suggestions from anyone. I have a couple.

Vandals take to road

By SEV HOINESS Staff Writer

Today, Head coach Tom Hilbert and his University of Idaho Lady Vandals embark on a potential make or break road trip. They travel to Pocatello to play Idaho State tonight and then the Weber State Wildcats of Ogden Saturday evening.

"It's a big weekend for all three teams, all three of us are sitting within a match of one another and if we go 2-0 we'll be in a position to go to the playoffs," Hilbert said.

The Vandals are finally healthy and have worked out the early season kinks. They've started playing together and are more consistent and comfortable with each other. This is allowing Hilbert's game plan to fall into place.

Hilbert needs his outside hitters, Jessica Puckett and Heather McEwen, to have good matches. If they do than that will give the Vandals an edge because Brittany VanHaverbeke, Nancy Wicks, and Dee Porter will get more sets allowing the Vandals more versatility and power.

Odds are that Puckett and McEwen will play well. According to recent statistics McEwen is third overall and Puckett is sixth in the Big Sky Conference, in regards to kills per game with 3.41 and 3.07 respectively. Porter is also a dominant hitter and picks up a lot of slack with her impressive digging capabilities.

Hilbert feels that one of his teams strong points is their well balanced attack. Everyone can hit, set, and dig well. When the Vandals hustle and communicate they have had success.

The Vandals go into this crucial weekend with a little bit of momentum after defeating five out of their last seven opponents, including a nail biting loss to the second place Northern Arizona Lumberjacks.

"Nancy Wicks has been doing a great job," praised Hilbert, but best of all is the way every player has been competing and really selling out."

Every night the Vandals have someone else who steps up her level of performance and elevates the rest of the team.

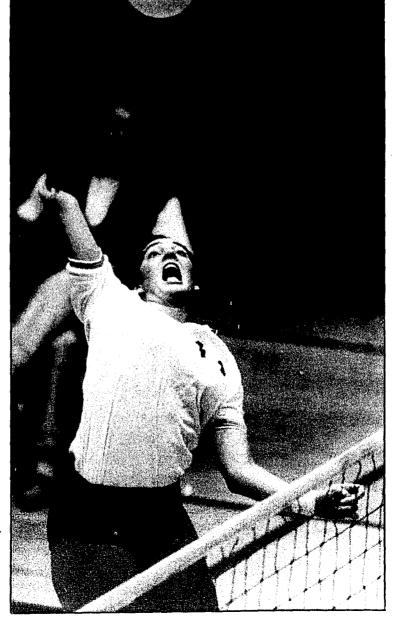

The Vandals have shown a lot of character to come back from the dismal first half of the season and put themselves in a position to make the playoffs. Although they were playing theoretically better teams and basically weren't expected to win, they could have folded and called it a year.

More than likely the competition offered by the larger schools early in the year made the Vandals become tougher and more competitive.

The Vandals have found themselves in a familar situation. Last year it came down to four matches in the end of the season that the Vandals dropped in succession and consequently lost their bid for post-season play.

Last year the Vandals started four freshman most of the year, now the Vandals have a more seasoned and experienced team.

The Vandals also resist off-field problems

This is the second in a twopart series on Vandal time commitments

By CHRISTOPHER GATEWOOD Sports Editor

The place has an almost legendary status among University of Idaho Vandal football players. It's called the H.O.H. house and we'll skip what the initials stand for in order to protect the innocent.

Innocent may not be the proper word to describe this house, but Jay Mills, John Sirmon, Jeff Robinson, Floyd Dorry and Pat West, the inhabitants of this grand palace, like to have fun and spend time together off the field.

"To tell you the truth, I'm surprised how many people have heard of this house," Mills said. "Sometimes people will come up to me and mention that they know the house."

It's not uncommon for the five teammates to get together, share a few laughs and share a few beers. It's not uncommon for 90 percent of the campus to share a few beers. But is alcohol a distraction for the Vandals? Does alcohol affect the performance of this team? Does it explain in any way, shape or form why the Vandals have lost three straight games?

Mills insists that alcohol is no distraction for this football team.

"We like to get together as a are going to run until they puke," team off the field," Mills said. Smith said. "If I catch them in the "We like to hang out together and blow off steam, but this is no Animal House."

Maybe not, but it's no big mystery that many college athletes drink occasionally. Vandal Head football coach John L. Smith knows it, and does what he can to make sure it doesn't become a team distraction.

That is why the Vandals are restricted from going to bars during the season. Smith wants to keep that element of temptation away from his team as much as possible.

"These guys know that if I catch them in the bars that they bars again then they might be told to pack up. I don't mess around with this rule."

No one is exactly sure when this rule came about. According to Mills it was around before Smith showed up on the scene, but it has become an institution under the third-year coach.

The only time Smith has had to enforce this rule to the limit is when former defensive lineman Cord Smith was in trouble for alcohol abuse. He knew the rule, but broke it. To compound his problems he also got into a brawl.

"The athletic department actually had a contract set up with him that he wouldn't drink at all," Smith said. "I think Cord had a real drinking problem and he had some counseling for it. We will do what we can to help a kid, but there comes a point where we have to separate ourselves from

The athletic department also has a simple rule regarding drugs: Do them or even associate with people who do them and dismissal from the team becomes a harsh reality. That includes steroid abuse. Smith had to deal with this problem early on as a Vandal coach.

"We had some problems with guys that were on them and I think the problem has been dealt with," Smith said. "I think around the nation the steroid problem is decreasing."

Fortunately, Smith hasn't had the problem of dealing with illicit drugs such as cocaine. However, the players still go through counseling with a prosecuting attorney when they arrive at UI. They talk about things like rape, drug abuse and alcohol abuse.

"Í think building a good foundation is bringing in the right players," Mills said. "John L. definitely does a good job of doing that."

indicator of the game," ISU Coach Garth Hall said. "In the games that we've played well, we haven't turned the ball over."

Picked as the pre-season Big Sky favorite, Idaho now finds itself in a must-win situation the rest of the season in order to keep its slim playoff hopes alive.

The Bengals, a team that has won only three Big Sky games in the last three years, were picked to be the conference doormat for the second straight year.

But the picks appear to be wrong. Idaho State ran over Northern Arizona two weeks ago, 45-14, in their biggest win since 1985. And last weekend at the No. 1 ranked University of Nevada, the Bengals were tied with the Wolfpack 20-20 before giving up three fourth quarter touchdowns to lose 41-20.

"They're much more solid in what they're doing," Smith said. "Their offense is more suited to what they're doing."

ISU has found a new offense this year on the ground with running backs John Peoples and Scott Hersley. The Bengals average 180 yards a game on the ground to Idaho's 121 yards.

"Right now we're more run than pass, " Hall said.

But ISU isn't just limited to running. Bengal quarterback Trevor Cavanaugh has the offense gaining an average of 203 yards per game through the air and scoring 24.6 points.

"Trevor has had some good games," Hall said. "He's struggled a little bit. Last week against Nevada he was under a lot of pressure, so his stats aren't where they should be."

"I really like the quarterback," Smith said. "I think he's a competitive player and he finds a way to Cavanaugh's favorite receiver is Sylvester Jones, but he likes to spread it out to others like Al Smith and tight end Pete Molino.

"Offensively we've got to come out and establish ourselves," Hall said.

On the defensive side the Bengals are also improved over last year when they were giving up 403 yards per game.

"Defense has kept them in games this year," Smith said. "A year ago they were giving games away.

Defensively for the Vandals the big test will come up front, where they will have to stop ISU from establishing a running game with Peoples, and force the Bengals to the air.

➤GATEWOOD from page 7

First, the Vandals are sorely lacking in fundamentals. They are one of the poorest tackling teams I've ever seen. I can't begin to count the number of missed tackles I've seen this year. The Vandals can't hold onto the ball. In the last three games the Vandals have turned the ball over 11 times. This is the same team that had 27 interceptions last season.

Second, this team believed all the hype that reporters like myself help build up before the season. But the Vandals did nothing to squelch this talk. They bragged before the season started that they were going undefeated. Smith should have nipped this in the bud. You don't talk of undefeated championships during the spring, you talk of improving yourself.

Now if the Vandals lose they won't even make the playoffs. They need to win the rest of their games to do so, and I don't see it happening.

Frankly, I'll take one win.

Fall films break off summer Hollywood losing streak

he gab around Hollywood is that everyone has their fingers crossed for the fall season of films. After the worst summer of box office receipts ever, producers and movie moguls are hoping that the general upward trend at the theatres recently will continue until Thanksgiving.

Leading the pack of hopefuls is the directorial debut by actress Jodie Foster. Little Man Tate, the story of a child genius and his strange relationship with his dim but caring mother, has, although seen in limited release, managed to blast its way into the top. The film barely outgrossed another critical and economic wonder, Terry Gilliams The Fisher King, which had remained at the top spot for the past two weeks

Other films that have the industry betting all they've got to spend are the film version of E. L. Doctrow's Billy Bathgate with Dustin Hoffman, and The Aadam's Family musical extravaganza. Insiders say that both films are very good, and are likely to draw huge crowds to the theatres.

What insiders aren't saying, though, is that the last movies of 1991 won't be of a high enough quality to even compete with those in the first three months of the year. When the Oscars go out, Silence of the Lambs and Thelma and Louise will be big winners, with nothing, not even a terminator, capable of halting their progress.

In fact, word coming out from the screening houses tells that Steven Spielberg's Hook is so bad that it might just be his first big bomb since the John Belushi pitof-a-film 1941. Dustin Hoffman and Julia Roberts spend so much of their time fighting over who should get more money and bigger KVs that this Peter Pan remake might have been better left to the folks at Disney.

At any rate, Hollywood has a long way to go before they can be truly happy about the way that 1991 turned out. With only 15 percent of all released films actually grossing enough profit to pay back their cost of production, BANKRUPTCY is a word that should become all too familiar. Orion Pictures already fell prey to the big Chapter 11--who'll be next? My guess is that we can kiss MGM-UA good-bye.

Fantasia overwhelms reviewer

By Cecilia M Thunes Staff Writer

It's easy to see why the Disney Corporation considers Fantasia to be its masterpiece among all the many other films it has created. With a classical soundtrack as a base to the animated creativity, the artists, musicians, and technicians involved (over 1,000 all together) never missed a beat.

As narrated at the beginning of the film, three types of music were incorporated: one to tell a story, another that held no plot but contained definite pictures, and a third was used just for the sake of its beauty.

The point of Fantasia was to translate the artists' impressions of the music into a two-dimensional form. The artists used intangible images as well as developed stories to bring a wide range of compositions to life. Leopold Stokowski conducted the Philadelphia Orchestra in several pieces encompassing composers from the Baroque, Classical, and Modern eras.

J.S. Bach's Tocatta and Fugue in D-Minor began this journey of imagination. Rolling hills of deep red and black lulled as the bass rumbled, golds and lighter reds flew with the violins. Though abstract in form, one could clearly see the artists' intentions as they unfolded on the screen.

The artists used a wide range of simplicity and complexity throughout Fantasia. The dancing Oriental mushrooms were the most plain and unassuming, as they pranced in circles to Tchaikovsky's Nutcracker Suite. Moussorgsky's powerful A Night on Bald Mountain contained complex and intricate details of evil at . work, as a demon sitting upon a mountain called spirits from beyond the grave. Working against this theme was the quiet and unpretentious flow of Schubert's Ave Maria, with softly glowing forms walking in pairs through a forest, arriving upon a rising sun.

As with many Disney films, Fantasia runs one through a spectrum of emotions from fear to jubilation to sadness to enchantment. For older people, this film may bring a wave of nostalgia, or at least a few good memories. People of any age can enjoy the thrill and magic of Disney's masterpiece, Fantasia.

Fantasia can be seen at the Micro Cinema daily at 4:30 P.M., 7:00 P.M., and 9:30 P.M. Admission is $1.75.

Bar & Restaurant Guide

Editor gives picks for best restaurants around

Review by TRENT YOUNG Entertainment Editor

The best thing about this job, other than the incredible pay and the chance to meet members of the Senate and Communications Board, is that I get to have my say. In real life I am often too shy to really express myself, but writing is different. I don't get tongue-tied or spit on people when I write, and, if people don't like what I'm saying, they have to hunt me down before they can proceed to pound me. I'm a natural at hiding.

But, this is not a story about how well I can hide, or how, through the fact that my Mom was bitten by a radioactive tick in Arco, I can cling to walls and ceilings for hours. No, this is not about me, this is about food ...

(PSST! SHOW THE TITLE!)

A NIGHTMARE ON ELM

STREET PART 7: FREDDY'S A

POSTAL WORKER WITH A

TASTE FOR SANDWICH

(not that title)
THE BEST RESTAURANTS

That's better. Now anyway, as I was saying, I appreciate this job just because it gives me the chance to do what I'm doing now — giving a little appreciation and recognition to those who work so hard without much of the same. I know how nasty restaurant work can be, since I've worked in more restaurants in my time than I needed to, and I also know how opinion is based on good food and service.

No matter what anyone will tell you for the sake of saving their restaurant's image, there is no excuse for poor food, service, or management. A quality restaurant keeps a constant image and goal in mind and never lets that ideal drop, even at the most frustrating and pitiful moments. Like any other business, food service is a team, and only the best teams, like these below, can be counted as winners.

(LISTED IN NO PARTICULAR ORDER)

Zany Graze: Located in Lewiston right across from that meca of MOMs everywhere — K-

Mart — this is one incredible place to eat. Unlike other fast food places around that try to coat themselves with the 50's diner atmosphere, this is the genuine article. Chrome and formica are everywhere, with comfy booths and jukeboxes situated in the corners for relaxation and romance.

The menu features everything from fish to pasta to salads to burgers to steak to chicken to fish. There, we've come full circle. The prices are reasonable, the people are friendly, and the beers are served in a huge mug at a price you can't really find in Moscow. My favorites here are the Strawberry Mug-o-Rita for $2, the huge mushroom or avacado burgers ($4), or the fried cheese platter ($3).

Bonauza: Not the best place in the world, but a pretty damn good meal for two people under $10. Last time we went, Cecile and I had a great meal (steaks and salads with french fries) for less than it would cost to eat at McDonald's. The best part is the never-ending pop supply, and the chance to listen to some foreign folks sing Grace Jones' songs while working in the back.

Effie Tavern: HUGE BURGERS! Literally huge hamburgers over a pound and a half in weight, coated with a delicious special sauce and served on homemade buns. One burger, split evenly, will easily fill two people's appetites. BUT WAIT! DON'T ORDER NOW, THERE'S MORE! A gigantic basket of steak or curley fries or deep fried mushrooms for less than 2 dollars, and pop served in tiny ice cups for fifty cents.

Located in downtown Lewiston two blocks past Dairy Queen and the Police Station, Effic Tavern is one of those truly unique places that exist only in Idaho. The owner/hostess is so friendly that you could die, and she's always ready to let you look at her guest book. The place is not really pretty at all, but it does offer something that we all strive so hard to find: bare honesty.

You can sit and eat between a bankrupt Native American and a yuppie and listen to both bemoan their lives. You can watch women play pool with pregnant bellies tumbling out of polyester slacks as they guzzle beer and scream at their six other kids playing in the bathrooms and think to yourself: Was this in Blue Velvet?

Chang Sing: Sooner or later we had to come to this fantastic little place. The best meals here are the Orange Chicken, the Chinese Style Egg-foo-Young, and the Chang Sing specialty fried rice. All three of these are so totally incredible that it makes the heart weak to think about them. The Orange Chicken, perhaps best of all, is so tender that it actually dissolves in the mouth, leaving a taste like honey. If you can't make it there to eat, call on Fridays and Saturdays — they DELIVER.

When you go, ask Shirley to sit down and talk with you. It might take a bit to actually talk her into it, but when you do finally succeed, you'll find one of the nicest people in this or any other city sitting next to you. Chuck and Shirley Eng are the most generous people I've ever met, and they have tried on numerous occasions to feed me hella loads of delicious food. My only regret I that I don't have two stomachs, or a lack or scruples, to take advantage of their generosity.

Phillipine Cuisine: Tasty dishes, great prices, nice people. Oriental food with a definite twist is what I'd call the food here, and it most definitely pleases the palate. I wish that it wasn't in Pullman so I could run over and get some chow.

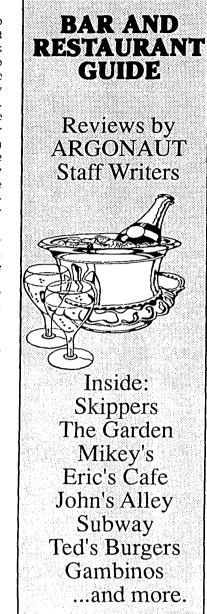

Rooters: Again, I wish this restaurant wasn't in Pullman, so that when ever I got the craving for some barbeque somethings I could run right over and fill my stomach to the rim. I've just eaten there once and the only thing I really have to complain about is the wait. This last Sunday the place was so swamped that it took about a half hour to get our food. The service people are nice and the menu is full of treats. I can't wait to go again. One suggestion to the manager, though, is to put some more toppings (pickles, onions, etc...) on your beef sandwich.

Pizza Pipeline: My vote goes to the newcomer as the best pizza in town. Never have Cecile and I had problems with an order, had our order deivered late, or disliked the results of the suggestions that were freely donated by staffers. Also, through the use of the mighty coupon, the price of their product is much, much less than that of others, especially those that want you to come and pick up your own pizza.

Talking truthfully, this is the only pizza in town that I can eat without upsetting my healing ulcer. Other brands are much too greasy, have too much pepper in their sauces, or just generally taste and look bad.

Best bets at Pizza Pipeline are their desert pizzas, (Apple-Nut Crunch is the best) their plain cheese specials, and their incredible Chicken Fajita Pie, covered with lettuce, sour cream, nacho chips, chicken strips, tomatoes, cheese, onions, olives, and peppers.

Well, that concludes my picks as to what really is tops in the area. Decisions were made on the following areas, among which Cecile and I both cast votes: originality, service, price, swimsuit competition (naw!), location, atmosphere, and whether or not people gave you funny faces if you smoked while eating. To all of you that made it on this list, I just want to take the time to tell you that you deserve a pat on the back for good service and great restaurants.

For those that didn't make the list, all I have to say is that I've tried to be fair and honest. Some restaurants were much too snotty and over-priced for their own good, had terrible food, awful wait-persons, bad attitudes, or just smelled really bad — and that's why they're not included here. Better luck next year.

Mikey's makes good

By MOLLY PAFFILE Contributing Writer

There once was a man from Nantucket who was nuts about Greek food. He moved to Moscow to major in something to do with numbers and other boring things. He was incredibly miserable and gross (because in his sad state he forgot about personal hygiene) until one glorious day, he happened upon Mikey's Gyros. All of a sudden, the birds began to sing, rainbows appeared, and a Carpenter's song played from some unknown source.

This is a true story. I swear. And if it centers around Mikey's Gyros, how on Earth could you even question the validity of the miracles described above?

Now, to make your own miracles start happening, run (don't walk) down to 527 Main and just look around. Notice the gorgeous opposite sex everywhere. Beautiful people hang out and they're all single. The people who work there are always smiling and cooking up the most tasty vittles. The music is quite entertaining, none of the elevator jingles other eateries are prone to playing. And if you're very very lucky, you may be able to see the man who has his hands in cucumber sauce to make Moscow all the more happy. Bert is not only the coolest person who just had a birthday last week, but he is too wonderful for words. Aknowledge him.

away this very pretty blond a super-cool girl named Nancy Earth.

Laughlin took our order, my friends and I sat down and discussed how the workers we had met so far made such a positive impression on us that we wanted to befriend them. Soon after finishing our Camels right out of the box, an incredibly charming waitress delivered our food, who also knocked out a male friend of ours with her heavenly beauty. The demure girl named Maria Marie Mamelmahay Corsini returned to work after service with a smile.

My friends and I filled ourselves full. Corky had a chicken pita with barbeque sauce and jack cheese. Bubbles feasted on a hero gyro. Jillian K. Seddon, roommate extraordinare, was all smiles munching on her nachos. I opted for a spicy hot falafel. Umm, umm! We washed it all down with freshly blended juices (try the Strawberry- Lemonade or Pineapple-Orange-Banana), and for dessert, homemade cookies and brownies- baked fresh every time they run out! You are probably thinking our fabulous meals cost $900.00, and don't think the food tastes like it's worth any less, but we only spent about five dollars a piece for this nectar of the gods! What a place.

Regretfully, the gang and I had to go. As we walked out, I slammed a twenty dollar bill into Monday, three of my friends the tip jar, belched, and made my and I went in for a bite. Right way out. The wonderful crew waved and gave heartfelt salutanamed Tara Clark said hello, and tions to us all. I knew I'd found made us feel right at home. After the closest thing to heaven on this

By KELLY TYNON Staff Writer

Ok, maybe I'm biased because I worked there my senior year in high school, but Eric's Cafe simply has the best burgers, curly fries, and milkshakes in Moscow.

I know I'm not the only person who thinks this is true. The readers of the Palouse Journal have chosen Eric's as having the best burgers in town for two years in a row. Believe me, this is the place to get your burgers.

First of all, don't judge Eric's by appearances. Yes, it looks like the ultimate greasy spoon, and it's located in the mall of all places. Add to that the fact that Eric is trying to make the place look like a 50's diner, with booths and a checkered floor. This almost makes the average college student want to avoid the cafe entirely. I personally like the 50's atmosphere, but then I'm not the average college student.

Another strange thing about Eric's Cafe is that you have to order at the counter, and then your food is delivered to your table. I guess this isn't really strange, but it throws some people for a loop. When I worked there, you wouldn't believe how many people didn't see the sign, "Please order at the counter."

Although the menu takes up the entire wall above the counter, the only thing to order at Eric's, in my opinion, is the What-A-Burger at $3.99. If your stomach can't handle a half-pound burger, order the Little What-A-Burger for $3.29. It's the same thing, only smaller. Imagine that.

Lrik's Cafe simply has the best burgers, curly fries, milkshakes in Moscow.99

Anyway, these burgers are pure heaven, with tomato, lettuce, pickles, and cheese and onions if you request them. Of course, curly fries are included.

Curly fries are one of Eric's trademarks. The portion that comes with the burgers is usually enough to be a meal in itself. The fries are sprinkled with seasoned salt and must be eaten with special sauce to achieve the perfect flavor.

Eric's special sauce is otherwise known as ketchup and mayonnaise mixed together. (I hope I didn't just give away a family secret.) It must be the way Eric mixes it that makes it so special. I usually put a generous amount of the special sauce on my burger as well, enough to make it slobber down onto my plate. YUM.

Nothing quite completes this totally filling meal like a milkshake. First of all, there are nine flavors to choose from: vanilla, chocolate, strawberry, black rasberry, pineapple, butterscotch, fresh banana, and peanut butter. Some adventurous people even mix chocolate and peanut butter to make a Reese's milkshake.

The amazing thing is not the flavors, it's the size. Not only do you get the milkshake in the frosted shake glass, you get the extra in the tin cup. If that sounds like too much, take a friend and share. One milkshake fills up two frosted glasses. All this for only $1.89.

After a meal at Eric's Cafe, I'm full for the rest of the day. This is the perfect place to take that hungry hunk-of-a-man, or a poor student who hasn't seen food in a couple of days. Eric's Cafe is, plain and simple, an inexpensive place to get great food. Take an appetite.

Burger joint promises more food for less cash

Pretention is not something that any person should have to deal with when dining out. Sure, the people you're with may be pretentious, but your servers and surroundings should not.

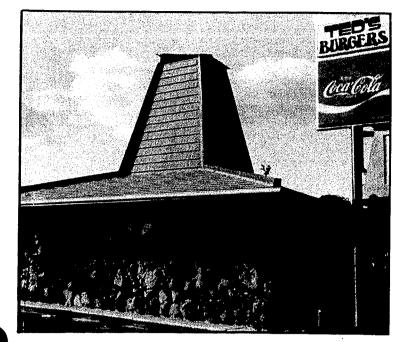

Welcome to Ted's Burger Express. If any dining establishment can claim an earthy and unaffected atmosphere, Ted's is it. Where else can one find a hamburger called "THE BIG ONE"? That's a half-pound of real ground beef, bacon, ham, cheese, mayo, lettuce and tomato. Yes, it comes with a bun. No extra charge.

Options abound while you wait in this little culinary gem. You can play pinball, smoke a cigarette, listen to the easy sounds of country and western music, or you can look at the plant. That last option may sound boring, but it will invariably bring a rush of delight upon sight. Just go see it.

Ted's offers a wide variety of main courses, side dishes, and desserts. When's the last time you found an ice cream soda at a fast food joint? Or how about mushrooms for a buck? And french fries are only 45 cents. They're nice and thick Ore-Ida fries, and the employees of Ted's are not stingy about giving them

Ted's burgers are not for cholesterol-laden folks. Those people can pick up a McLite from the Golden Arches. And if you're polite, and give them an extra 70 cents, you can get a basket with your hamburger, with potato salad to boot. What a deal!

Ted's Burger Express, on the road out to Coeur d'Alene. One of the last places on earth where five dollars will buy a heck of a lot

Gambino's food good, prices too high

By MEYLA BIANCO Staff Writer

Gambino's Italian Restaurant is a place most people from Moscow or Pullman have undoubtedly visited at one time or another and enjoyed. It seems Gambino's is more than a restaurant; it's a landmark.

My feelings for Gambino's are decidedly affectionate though I have only been there twice. Why shouldn't I love Gambino's? The food is great and I am a proud one fourth

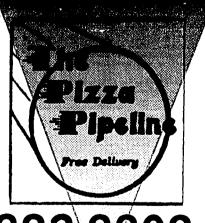

Not only this, but the typical vegetarian won't starve. Gambino's has three vegetarian sandwiches to choose from, and two entrees: great lasagna and excellent ravioli.

The last time I had the pleasure of dining at the fine establishment, I had cheese raviolis that I thought were pretty good, though not as good as the ones my great grandmother from Asti, Italy made when I was a tiny child. The kind it took all day and five pounds of fresh tomatoes to make. The kind that are, in my opinion, unduplicatable.

The one aspect I really don't like about Gambino's is the highish prices. If I have $6.95 at any given time, it is unlikely that I will spend it on restaurant food unless I am really hungry. I guess I was pretty hungry last Saturday.

Upon reflection, I see that the meal was just about worth the money. You see, the bad plumbing fairy had dropped by my house, and Mr. Rotorooter was a full $25 away. The dishes were stacked to the sky, there was nothing to cook in; it was ugly. Then the Gambino's alternative came to mind, and life seemed a little more bearable.

Like I said, go to Gambino's if you have the money, it's worth it. You won't even have to do dishes.

Old Country features best breakfasts

By TIM COOK Staff Writer

This is it, this is the biggest gut buster on the Palouse, even if it is only breakfast. Also, even if it is in Pullman. The Old Country, or the T.O.C. (an abbreviation that I've developed some strange fondness for), leaves you with the feeling of impending explosion, at a reasonable price...that rare "I cannot believe how much I ate just now" sensation.

In a name The Old Country evokes images of yesterage when plump Europeans that lived and worked in buildings that were either overgrown with ivy or obscured in snow.

This image makes one believe that food is a language into itself, in my case understanding exactly what my food intake could actually be until I've finally eclipsed my own personal pain threshold by such a wide margin I question my own life and count the minutes to emmenant reces-

This is a breakfast joint, unique to the Palouse, it doesn't deal in anything else, and pulls it off so much more sucessfully than say an International House Of Pancakes (though wouldn't you just love a late night alternative to the University Inn?). The food is absolutely delicious, which is, in my opinion, fairly unique to the Palouse.

For what its worth the Old Country serves the best breakfast roll/cream cheese creation I have ever tasted, dripping with melted cheese and leaves the customer thinking the meal will be a letdown in comparison.

Fresh fruit pancakes are my faves in the main course portion of the menu, though there are combination plates with waffles, eggs and the ultimate breakfast meat option of links versus bacon. The Old Country blueberries rule the earth because they're fresh, not the industrial blueberry syrup goop one would find if they spent twice as much at the Pantry.

The service is another positive attribute of the restaurant, coffee refills, emptied ashtrays and a slightly used morning paper all within seconds of flagging the help down, sometimes without the use of the spoken word as it worked for me simply by making erratic body gestures mimmicing the function of the ashtray. Perhaps the quick service is in hopes I would stop with this idiotic practice, eat my meal in record time and vanish, but they were so nice that I tend to doubt it.

The Old Country is an environment geared toward making its customers fat, and in retrospect I'm suprised that the employees weren't, but future patrons will learn not to notice details like this when the task at hand is finally dropped on the table with a resounding

Pantry offers luxury late nite dining

By JEFF KAPOSTASY News Editor

O.K., I know most people think of it as an overpriced Denny's, with about as much personality and atmosphere as the Jansen Engineering Building. The pop is way over-priced, and the service is often as slow as a diesel Chevette.

Yes, it's true the Pantry may be a downright blah kind of place. But where else in beautiful Moscow can you go for a fine steak dinnner at 3:30 a.m.? Aside from a few complaints, I find the Pantry to be a fine place for getting a good cup of coffee and some decent food. It also offers a nice break from a pizza or a sub sandwich.

In case you never set foot outside the library, the Pantry is located at the University Inn, next to the Palouse-Empire mall.

Walking inside reminds me of stepping into an airport, with the sliding glass door and a smiling person at the counter. I have never seen the Pantry empty and on Friday and Saturday night, a person can expect to wait in line before being seated.

Service depends highly on who's working. Sometimes, people's cups are filled with coffee within a minute. Other times, they have to wait for fifteen minutes or more. The Pantry also no matter where you sit.

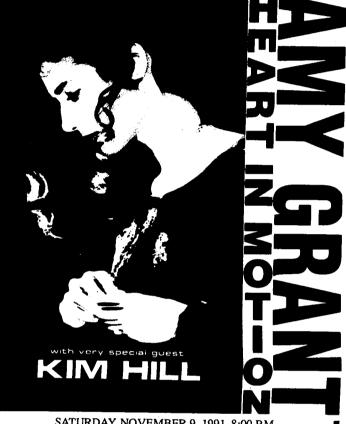

The menu is Denny's-esque. There are the usual offerings of omelettes, burgers, and salads, and on the more expensive side, steaks and chicken. If you did well on a test and there's room to splurge, I recommend the steak and teriyaki chicken. This entree is as good or better than many similiar dishes I've had at much more expensive restaraunts. Every time I've ordered this entree, both the steak and the chicken cuts have been lean and perfectly cooked, and the teriyaki sauce is very tasteful. The dinner also includes a decent salad with the best ranch dressing I've ever had. Such a dinner will run you about twelve bucks.

If your budget is a little tighter, try the chef salad for five-bucks.

You get a huge serving of diced cheeses, ham, turkey, olives, tomatoes and fresh lettuce. The only problem is, there's always an inch of pink water at the bottom of each bowl. Something like that is kinda inexcusable.

The omelettes and breakfast entries are all good, but don't bother bringing books in to study, because the charge for increasing your knowledge with anything more than the soup of the day is three dollars. The drunk people filtering in from Chaser's often provide entertainment. No, the Pantry may not be the most interesting place to eat, but what's wrong with a Denny's look-a-like?

Harvest of quality booze at the Garden

By JILL SEDDON & MOLLY PAF-FILE

Contributing Writers

Ah, the Garden. Le jardin est

The place is is kind of like our second home. We have a lot of fun every time we come here and can bet you will too. We know all of the employees including the bartenders, waitresses, doormen, and all of the regulars. We know the special nights (Monday and Wednesday, dummy), the drink list, and all of the beers on tap. Do we sound a bit biased? Well, too bad, because we think the Garden is the best bar around, if not ever.

Actually, we don't even callthe Garden by its name. We just call it "the bar" because it's understood that the Garden is really the only place to go. So accompany us on a typical night at our favorite hangout.

Grab your I.D., because a hunky guy on a stool will ask for it at the door(unless it's Tim Pitts, the doormen are usually real cute). At this point you'll receive a little stamp on the back of your hand that you can show off the next day at school.

Now you have the option of either buying your drink right away or finding a table. Hold a place for us in line while we say hello to our many friends, who have eagerly anticipated our arrival. Molly likes to swill on White Russians and fill either drinks Chi Chi's or orange beer (that's beer and orange juice that tastes like a cross between Tang and wine coolers.)

Shall we sit upstairs or downstairs this evening? Actually, there are four levels in the Garden. It's kind of a social hierarchy. Downstairs, lots of pool, darts, longhairs, and cigarette smoke.

Around the bar, you'll find the ubiquitous goateed Lex trying to bum cigarettes and/ or beer, or a shot, if he's lucky. Here also is the brandspanking-new CD jukebox. Yeah, now we have to pay for our music, but at least we can

On to upstairs. A big screen television is here, and if there's a good game, you can bet it will be on. This is the best site for people watching and for observing frustrated scammers strike out. Ha Ha, sucker. How lucky we are to have never participated in such silly games.

Up, at the very tip-top, it is very comfortable. Couches on which to lounge, tables on which to place tasty drinks, and seats on which to pull up when the couches get crowded (notice how everyone makes room for us.)

Scurrying about are the waitresses. They sure do work hard, and they carry heavy trays too. Sometimes they are slow, but we always sympathize with them. Sometimes they drop drinks, too (like you haven't.) You should always tip your friendly waitress.

Lee, Dennis, and both Nicks are usually working hard to feed your liquor fix. They're handsome, funny, charming, witty, and eager to pour a tall cool one. Everything you'd ever dream of in a bartender.

Some more important facts about the Garden Lounge:

Jagermeister is lipsmacking good, and very hip. Bathrooms are downstairs, Bathrooms are downstairs, past the pool table, at the very end of the basement. They are usually clean and well supplied.

Don't forget to say hi to Alvin, especially if he's just done one of his tricky falls down the stairs.

It is very hard to go to the Garden for "just one drink" — in fact, it's impossible.

Moscow is too small of a town to drive around drunk. Don't get our favorite bar busted.

Corda discovers SalmonFest

By STEVE CORDA Asst. News Editor

With bone showing through emaciated flesh, and every muscle straining, the exhausted salmon fight the current with the singleminded determination to spawn and die.

With the same singleminded determination, I strain against the clutch of my mysterious female companion's Nissan Pulsar and fight the current of Pullman Highway traffic.

The destination: Skipper's seafood and chowder restaraunt. The event: SalmonFest.

I'd called every day since I'd first seen the billboard advertising SalmonFest, and now the time had come. Day one of "The Fest." The only thing holding me from sheer ears back, mouth open, primal scream enjoyment of this event was my job. I looked at my reflection in the window of the l'ulsar. Hey, Skipper's, I'm just another guy in a black and gold Idaho hat, right? Not a restaraunt critic on a mission for the Argonaut.

Argonaut.
It was my first visit to the Moscow edition of Skipper's and I was impressed by the interior. It was cheerful and comfortable, lots of white walls and blue counters. It was the kind of clean, well lighted place Ernest Hemingway would have loved if he not only hadn't killed himself in Ketchum, but had also lived to be about 150 years old.

There was a palpable sense of expectation as my beautiful blond female companion and I strode up to the counter. It wasn't the unbridled atmosphere of joy I'd expected. But then again, this was the first day of the Salmon-Fest. Moscow had plenty of time

Happy Hour every day 5 -7 pm 882-7531 to laugh and cry and feel a whole range of emotions.

The people behind the counter were young and friendly. There were two women in blue polo shirts and one man in red. I nonchalantly asked one of the young ladies about the SalmonFest. She answered my questions with a smile, but seemed to be hiding something. I abandoned my line of questioning (I didn't want to blow my cover) and placed my

They ladeled our salmon chowder into a large bowl at the counter, gave us two cups, a tray and a number. We poured our own drinks and sat at a booth near a window.

The baked salmon arrived before five minutes had passed. The hand-sized, boneless slab of salmon came on a plate with a baked potato, a perfect cone of cole slaw, a lemon wedge and a stalk of parsley. The potato was tough on the outside and was clumped together on the inside like soldiers in a foxhole. There was also a white liquid sheen over the salmon that made me suspect the salmon and potato had been re-heated on the plate, and the cole slaw, lemon, and parsley added later.

But this is fast food. I crumbled a handful of crackers into the chowder, squeezed the lemon on the baked salmon and dug in.

The chowder flat out rocked. I don't know if it is always this good or if I was getting the first batch, but I had almost finished the whole bowl before the baked salmon arrived. That was a good sized helping too, so I must admit I shamelessly powerchowed in full view of the 5:10 Skipper's set.

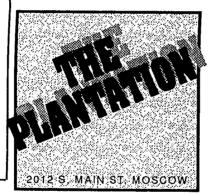

The Salmon chowder had a subtler taste than clam chowder. (What else am I going to compare it to, brussell sprouts?) It had a smooth texture and a very slight salmon taste I enjoyed. But then, I enjoy Elvis impersonators, so maybe you should go out and spend twelve bucks of your own, huh?! What do you think about that, you media slaves?

Your opinion on the baked salmon will probably depend on whether or not you usually like salmon. If you do, then you'll probably like the slammin' salmon offered at Skipper's.

I was a little bit leery about my entree's appearance, but it was both soft and moist. Unlike most other soft and moist things, it tasted pretty good. Another point in the baked salmon's favor was the fact I didn't run across a single bone.

I set the parsley aside, the potato was like something I would have cooked, so that leaves only the cole slaw. I don't eat cole slaw (I have bad dreams); so my mysterious and beautiful blond female companion ate it for me. She had nothing to say about it. She did, however, set down her fork and suggest we leave for her apartment immediately to have window shattering sex.

I highly recommend the cole

Subway excels

By MEYLA BIANCO Staff Writer

If you are starving at 11 p.m. and you only have a couple of dollars, stop in at Subway. That is, if you're not into atmosphere. Subway is definitely devoid of any style save canary yellow formica and pseudo-newspaper wallpaper. If you can look past the decor, have a vegetarian on wheat with extra mustard, no oil and vinegar and extra pickles. This is my personal favorite, and it has saved me many times from eventual starvation.

Remember to order wheat bread, though; stay far, far away from that extra chewy, gut wrenching white air-puffy stuff. Take the leaden, dark wheat and I promise you will be happier an hour later.

Also remember to get your own Subway card, and get a stamp every time you purchase a sandwich. After ten stamps, you get a free sandwich. What a deal. Only in America.

A few more words of warning: watch out for surly employees (relatively rare at Subway), cockroaches and people who forget to stamp your card.

One last thing: if you are at all squeamish about other people's hands on your food, circumvent Subway entirely because they prepare the sandwiches without cellophane gloves or facemasks.

Local pub relives the glorious 1970's

By LESLIE ALEXANDER
Staff Writer

The Alley is NOT 1: a narrow passage between buildings. It is, however, located by an alley and often attracts strays wandering on the street. The Alley is NOT 2: a place for bowling. Although you can drink so much that you end up in the gutter. If you haven't figured out what the Alley is, I am talking about John's Alley the bar.

It's a good sort of dive that you can sit back and just drink a few beers and listen to your favorite oldies but goodies music. Because now The Alley has a state-of-the-art compact disc player loaded with all the music that the radio stations never play. The music may be old, and you might "smell that smell," but you'll seldom see anyone dressed in 70's looking apparel.

If you know Ray the bartender, then you must know he is a famous singer for The Surf Dogs. I've even had the pleasure of doing some back up singing with a few of my friends for the Dogs. We sang "Smokin in the Boys Room" after consuming large quantities of beer five hours previously. For some reason The Dogs haven't asked us back.

Anyway, I enjoy John's Alley just because everyone is friendly and you can just be yourself, not to mention the music is really HIP. HIP NOT being 1: the body part or joint between the pelvis and femur. But HIP meaning 1: keenly aware of or interested in the newest developments.

You can be sure to find your regulars hanging out at this pub, because the prices are affordable and the beer is abundant.

Cars restaurant serves up genuine Southern favorites

By PATTI CROW Contributing Writer

On April 4, 1991, Moscow, Idaho got its first taste of authentic Cajun and Creole homestyle cooking. Car's, a restaurant that draws on jazz'n blues automobiles, and a home feeling of Louisiana opened its doors. Patwynne Evans, manager, calls it "Moscow's very own Burbon Street (which) serves food that swings with jazz."

Indeed, Car's is a hip place with a relaxed, inviting atmosphere and some great gumbo soup, which I can certainly recommend. Creole Gumbo comes from the French peasant's pot-au-feu and the fisherman's bouillabaisse. It also comes from the African okra stew. Add to that the Choctaw Indians' crab and shrimp soup. This patchwork combines to make a massively creative one-dish meal.

The roots of this family-run operation, led by Mrs. Evans and her husband Augustus, go back to a visit she made to Moscow a few years ago. She found the area enjoyable and immediately fell in love with it. She married Augustus soon after establishing herself here.

After this, the couple, with family and friends, began to cater birthday parties. Mr.

Evans had studied at a culinary school in San Fransisco earlier. There is a wealth of cooking skill among those involved with Car's.

The word spread about their food, and in December, Mrs. Evans leased the space on the corner of Third and Washington Streets, where One More Time used to be located. For the next four months, the owners worked to create a restaurant whose presence the Evans felt was needed in this area.

"Cars is a hip place with a relaxed, inviting atmosphere.99

Mrs. Evans sings on her own television show through KLEW TV, of Lewiston, and she hopes to schedule concerts and talent nights in the restaurant, along with forming a local ensemble to jam with on the weekends. Music and cooking go hand-in-hand at Car's. Patwynne and Augustus give to the community sincere thanks for making the endeavor possible. "People have been very helpful," Mrs. Evans said. And you will find a warm and friendly place at Car's, where, as their advertisement invites you to, "Come to eat." Give your mouth a treat, take off your shoes and relax your feet."

Add to the good food and good service the 10 percent Študent discount (I.D. required) and you get a good deal. Check out Car's!
