UI student dies in auto accident

By KALISTA BARCLAY
Asst. News Editor

A University of Idaho student was killed early Sunday morning when the car he was riding in ran off the road. Three other students were injured in the accident.

Scott Mondahl, 18, from McMinnville, Ore. and a pledge of Kappa Sigma Fraternity, died of head injuries sustained when the car he was in failed to make a curve and rolled several times. He was pronounced dead at the scene.

According to Idaho State Police, the four students were driving along Robinson Park Road about 12:30 a.m. when the accident occurred. State police said that UI student Denny Nelson, 21, of Payette, ID, was driving his 1985 Oldsmobile at about 75 mph. The posted speed limit is 35 mph. He missed a turn, and his car rolled end-over-end in a field before landing right-side-up. Nelson and the two passengers riding in the back seat—Michael Holcomb 19 of Payette and Sean Clow 21 of Fruitland—were not wearing seat belts and were thrown from the car. Mondahl, the only one wearing his seat belt, was found still in the car.

Nelson, a member of the UI Kappa Sigma Fraternity, suffered massive head injuries and was taken to St. Joseph Regional Medical Center in Lewiston where he is listed in critical condition. According to Zell Cantrell, president of Kappa Sigma Fraternity, Nelson will be under observation for the next three to four days. Doctors will continue to sedate him until his condition stabilizes and the extent of his injuries can be diagnosed.

Holcomb was flown to Seattle's Swedish Hospital to be treated for a crushed pelvis. He underwent surgery early Sunday morning, hours after he arrived, and is listed in critical condition.

Clow was admitted to Gritman Medical Center for overnight observation and was released Monday.

Holcomb and Clow, both students at College of Idaho and members of the Kappa Sigma chapter on that campus, were visiting the UI Kappa Sigma chapter during a stop on a bicycling trip to raise money for a philanthropic project.

Four additional College of Idaho Kappa Sigma members were following Nelson in another car when the accident

UI graduates satisfied with their education

By Wendy Deal

Recently, the Outcomes Assessment Office surveyed University of Idaho graduates from 1987 and 1988 regarding how their attendance at the university helped them achieve their goals throughout their college education.

Outcomes Assessment is the collection, review and use of information about student performance and development. The information is gathered from various sources, including admission to graduate programs. Its purpose is to enhance student learning and to improve the curriculum and university programs.

Judith Doerann, director of Outcomes Assessment at the UI, commenting on the survey said, "I really do believe in Outcomes Assessment because it focuses on student learning. It allows us to spotlight the student experience here and learn from those who have been here."

The survey, which was conducted last May, was the pilot test for a future university-wide survey. A variety of issues were dealt with in the survey, including the value of core curriculum, goals of those surveyed, and how attendance at UI prepared them for their futures.

The alumni survey was sent to the 1,200 plus students who graduated in 1987 and 1988 with Bachelor's degrees. Just 353 (about 30 percent) responded. Of those responding, 63.1 percent were male, and 36.9 percent were female. The average age of the respondent was 29. Doerann noted the survey was not sent to graduates from the colleges of Business or Letters and Sciences, because those colleges already had surveys about its graduates underway. Doerann characterized the results as, "informative, and in some cases, unexpected."

Approximately 99 percent of the respondents ranked being proficient in a career and

Students hit by Spokane fire

Too many UI students, on-campus residences and living groups are "dorm sweet dorm." But in the wake of Wednesday's wildfires in northern Idaho, several students left their homes away from home last weekend to help save their neighborhoods.

John Warner, a Graham Hall resident, worked a makeshift fire line when he visited his Hauser Lake home over the weekend. Returning home to watch his sister crowned homecoming queen and play in her high school marching band, he volunteered for service to keep the fire manageable until fire crews came.

Together with his father and a friend of his father's, he fought the flames for half an hour, preventing it from devouring the trees in the Hauser Lake timberland.

"We were stretched thin for firefighters," Carlson said. "There were so many hotspots, and fuel like leaves and brush, that we had to build a 3-foot fire line—and we had a hard time getting it built because there were just three of us."

When first-year student Brandon Carlson returned to his Hauser Lake home Friday night, a large area around the lake was already scorched.

"But the fire moved so fast it didn't burn the trees—they're still green," Carlson said. "It burned a lot of underbrush and destroyed six to eight houses."

One house was brought completely down, leaving only "a brick outline and the tin roof," Carlson added; but his own family's house a quarter of a mile away from the area was untouched.

"There were about 600 firefighters at Boat Launch, who fought all day Friday, Saturday and Sunday," said Carlson, "and helicopters were going to the lake to get water and bringing it up to the mountains."

Farther south, firefighters battled to save residential areas and timberlands around Ponderosa. "It started coming from the east," said Jodi Persom, whose house was not in direct line of the fire. "Then it turned south to Painted Hills—but not before six families lost their homes."

Boozeless beers: An alternative

By Mary A. Schwantes, R.D.
Student Health Center

More than 75 percent of my clients are health-conscious dieters. They have found that while a cocktail or two may taste great and add to the festivities of a party, many dieters will attest that these libations also tend to melt away resolve, pile on empty calories, then reward them with a headache in the morning.

Research confirms that as far as willpower is concerned, alcohol has a greater effect on calorie-conscious people than on those who can eat whatever they want. In fact, in a 1980 study in which both dieters and non-dieters voluntarily had a drink or two, then were offered a tempting food, the dieters subsequently went overboard with the goodies. And interestingly enough, the alcohol had no such effect on the food intake of the non-dieting comparison group.

Alcohol's abundant calories are just about the last thing dieters need as we approach holiday time. At 150 calories, a foamy mug of lager will take 30 minutes of brisk walking to work off; a single 90-calorie glass of white wine, 22 minutes of cycling. Sans the exercise, all those calories can really add up. In one year, two daily bottles of ale in excess of normal calorie intake can tack on 31 excess pounds of body weight; a daily 90-calorie glass of wine, nine pounds. And we're hardly better off turning to distilled spirits; one vodka and tonic, while tasting very light and refreshing, contains a hefty 160 calories, 17 potential pounds if ingested on a daily basis.

These virtually empty calories can wreak havoc on otherwise healthy meal plans. Cognizant of the high calorie content of alcoholic beverages, many dieters may turn to "make them up" by skipping whole meals. This is where the potential health hazard comes in. True, a bottle of beer and a cup of corn chowder may have the same calorie content, but the beer doesn't have 11 grams of protein, nor any significant number of vitamins or minerals.

In tune with this nation's recent health kick, liquor sales are at their lowest ebb since Prohibition. In response to this undeniable trend, domestic brewers and winemakers have begun to rethink their products and are rallying to offer their consumers healthier, lower-calorie alternatives. In December 1989, Miller Brewing Company launched Sharp's, a non-alcoholic brew (beverages that contain less than 0.5 percent alcohol can't be labeled "beer"), and Anheuser-Busch rolled out its own version, O'Doul's. These beverages joined an already healthy market led by Kingsbury, with close competitors like Texas Light and the imported brands: Kaliber, Clausthaler, Moussy and Wardeck.

Currently, non- and low-alcohol products are the only segments of the beer industry that are experiencing growth. The non-beer wagon is gathering speed at an average of 15 percent a year, and future prospects look just as rosy. According to marketing people of Clausthaler, only 14 percent of Americans have ever tasted these products so they feel the number will double as a result of advertising by Miller and Anheuser-Busch. This will raise consumer awareness of the entire non-beer market for all of us.

But does the fake stuff stand up to the real stuff on taste? The surprising answer: Today's non-beers really do taste like beer—according to Consumer tasting panels. "They taste like beer and not like sudsy dishwater, the way many of their predecessors did." In a 1986 blind tasting at the Los Angeles County Fair, four judges awarded non-alcoholic Ariel blanc, an alcohol-free white wine, a gold medal. They thought they were drinking the real thing but their prizewinner was the only faux entry in the contest. Crimson-faced, the judges created a new category for "soft" wines, which are defined as those containing no alcohol.

Drinking alternatives may have prevented accident

University of Idaho freshman Scott Mondahl died tragically in a car accident this weekend.

As his family and friends, along with the UI student body, mourn his death, thoughts of what could have been loom in the minds of all.

It is suspected that alcohol was related in the accident which makes the death even more difficult to swallow.

The students appeared to have been drinking at Robinson Lake, several miles from campus.

Are they to blame for this unfortunate accident or can the blame be directed to another source, possibly in the hierarchical form?

Since Mondahl's fraternity was not allowed to have alcohol in any form on its property and the victim was under the legal drinking age, it was time to find an alternative spot.

It was this alternative that eventually cost Mondahl his life.

Of course, the decision by students to drink and drive was in poor judgment. But are they wrong by wanting to have a good time in an attempt to seek relief from the stresses that come with college?

Definitely not.

Students have consumed alcohol on this campus since the UI was adopted; rules may slow them down, but they will never stop the underage drinking problem.

Underage drinking occurs today and will continue to occur as long as there is alcohol to be consumed.

Why tell students they can't go to a bar because they aren't 21 or they can't drink in their living group because of other offenses unrelated to alcohol?

It doesn't really make any sense.

The argument for raising the drinking age is to prevent deaths, like that of Mondahl, from occurring. It obviously isn't working.

Our government seeks to please the conservative viewpoint while continuing to ignore the realism that pertains in a college student's life; nothing will change.

If it is more important to please middle-aged voters than save the lives of future leaders of this country, then so be it.

No one can bring back Scott Mondahl, but those people who told him he couldn't drink at a safe location--where he wouldn't get in a car--might want to think about the next Scott Mondahl; before it is too late.

Cancer patient faces uphill battle

I'm sure that every student here at the University of Idaho has faced the event known as midterm week. This lowest circle of Dante's hell occurs every semester as UI students can count on being assaulted with several papers and tests in the course of a two or three week period. I managed to get off easy this semester with two tests, a twenty-minute presentation and a lengthy quiz. I recently learned, however, of two local people who were involved in a tougher situation than any college student facing test anxiety.

While reading a local newspaper, I came upon the story of two Moscow youths who were waging a war against a serious form of cancer known as leukemia. I read the story and then looked at the accompanying picture that ran with the story. It was there that I made the connection with the name Ken Anderson.

Ken and I both lived in the small town of Kendrick, Idaho for a number of years before I graduated from high school and went on to the University of Idaho. I graduated from high school with Ken's sister, Traci, and so Ken is merely an acquaintance. Kendrick is a town of only 500 people, therefore I was interested to see how Ken was doing.

Seattle's Swedish hospital to receive a bone marrow transplant from his little brother. He expressed his desire of returning for his junior year of high school next year and playing varsity football for Moscow High School. At no time did Ken waver or express any kind of fear against a disease which our society has stigmatized as a death sentence.

I concluded my conversation with Ken, and I came away amazed at how much poise he showed in the space of our five-minute talk. If I was told I had leukemia, my first impulse would be to panic and then probably collapse.

No, this isn't an article designed to induce pity or fear for Ken. It is more of a statement to say that I have recaptured my belief in the strength of people to face adversity. In addition, I have regained my sense of perspective in terms of what's really important. No test or paper deadline I have is more important than the

I asked him about the treatment he was receiving for his cancer, and he told me that he was soon going to

Battle for natural resources main issue

Editor;
You are correct in attributing the vote on the grazing bill to political pressure. I don't understand why you would complain, when that same political pressure protected the spotted owl.

The real issue is the battle for control of our natural resources.

Mr. Metzbaum wants to protect natural resources FROM man, his opponents want to protect natural resources FOR man.

Improved private pasture, planted with high food value grasses and clovers, fenced against predators (human or otherwise), is worth more than range land. By increasing the rent on range land, Mr. Metzbaum knows he will deny the citizenry one more use of "public" land.

Land we can't include in our local tax base. Land we can't use for productive purposes.

After graduation, I expect your job search will take you far away from Idaho. Remember the people who have made Idaho their home, who are trying to make a living and provide good schools for their kids.

Gomben should try saving a tree

Editor;

I must take exception to your article in the Argonaut. Remember, the one that slammed loggers for "deliberately annihilating a species of animal". Were you aware that over 500,000 trees are used each Sunday to produce newspapers, 88% of which are never recycled?

Loggers don't run out and fall trees for the pure pleasure of destroying a tree. If the demand for paper wasn't there, the jobs wouldn't be there. Each individual using a paper product is responsible for the growing demand for wood products, and loss of natural habitat for all forest animals.

Pete, do you realize every time you write one of your enlightened articles you are helping create "a graveyard of stumps"? Why don't you quit worrying about your own hardship, adapt to a new situation, and save a tree. Move to radio!

Greek system should support tribunal

I am writing to clear up any misconceptions that exist regarding Interfraternity Council (IFC) Tribunal. IFC Tribunal is the judicial branch of IFC, consisting of eight members and a chairman. Our purpose is to enforce the standards the greek system has set upon itself, and to form sanctions for chapters who stray from those standards. When creating sanctions, Tribunal must provide punishment but more importantly our goal is to design positive and constructive sanctions that help the chapter improve. As an example, we have recently dictated sanctions designed to help chapters improve their public relations, social service, internal structure, and standing within the greek system.

Recently, our treatment of and actions towards SAE have been questioned. SAE violated a summer rush rule which prohibits alcohol at summer rush parties. At the time of their infraction, SAE's recognition as a member of our greek system was on probationary status, meaning that their reduced by 95%. This translates into the reduction of about three million square miles of Indian land becoming about 200,000 miles.

This unfortunate statistic leads many Americans to believe that the Indian culture is virtually dead now. This is a costly untruth. There are 1.5 million Indian people living in the U.S. today, half of which remain on the lands of their ancestors. Indian culture is alive and well, not dead, dying or doomed.

Recently, I listened to an amazingly old Indian woman tell stories, an important part of her continuing culture. She was only one native in America, yet she spoke for thousands through her native tongue. She was an engaging individual and an intelligent one who was easily able to translate from her ancient language into perfect English. The legends she told were complex, old, and undoubtedly relatable to contemporary life of any culture.

I find it appalling that U.S. public schools do not teach Native American history. Why was it that I never learned about a people whose culture is so much a part of—a basis of—this country? Why did I hear so little of white people brutalizing Indians into surrendering their native lands until recently? Isn't the intentional slaying and waste of thousands of buffalo by white people history, just as proclamations signed by white people are?

Perhaps portions of history were left out simply because the real, pitiful, greed-oriented version was deemed too disturbing for children to read about. More likely is that the predominantly white text book publishers do not want the responsibility of owning up to the gruesome accounts of bloodshed committed by their race.

In a very culturally mixed society, is it really fair to selectively omit portions of history? I don't think so.

To me, it is curious that mainstream news coverage routinely excludes action pertinent to Native Americans (and other minorities) unless it is negative. It seems one never hears of the incredible contemporary Native American culture, which boasts timely and striking art and literature, and a cultural reverence toward the Earth.

It is unfortunate that one has to seek out news and information about a people whose value to the contemporary U.S. society is so important.

The only place I have heard any exclusively Indian news is on public radio, on a program called National Native News. It is a good morning show, a half hour long I believe, and is devoted exclusively to Indian affairs.

When Columbus Day 1992 rolls around, and the quincentenary celebrations begin, think twice about what you are celebrating. Is it the celebration of the "discovery" of America, or celebration of the Anglo-Saxon discovery of America?

vide an economic advantage for federal permittees. Public land permittees incur greater operating expenses ($12.26/AUM) compared to those on private lands ($10.32/AUM). In addition, the public land grazing permit results in a property investment cost that is not incurred by private land permits. When public land permittees bought their ranch properties, they paid for the land's increased value (either through capital outlay or increased inheritance tax) that was gained from having a public land grazing permit assigned to the property. The value of the grazing permit is capitalized into the value of the private ranch property and it paid by the permittee in the form of interest. This increased value is recognized and taxed by the Internal Revenue Service, and FDIC insured banks accept the value of grazing permits as collateral for loans. A recent study by the USDA's Economic Research Service found that there was no significant difference in net receipts between permittees and nonpermittees. Before we applaud Senators Metzenbaum and Jeffords we should look at a true representation of the facts. For a more detailed discussion I would encourage you to read Seven Popular Myths About livestock grazing on Public Lands, published by the University of Idaho's Forest, Wildlife and Range Experiment Station.

recognition would be withdrawn if they were convicted of violating any rules of conduct. Because of this, our judgement to dismiss SAE was mandated. However, SAE presented a very valid case during their sentencing hearing for withholding that judgement. Tribunal has therefore decided to indefinitely withhold that judgement. It is our belief that SAE is progressing forward and making the needed changes, and we recognize that such changes don't happen overnight. It is our hope that the greek system will support our decision and SAE's efforts to improve.

Vandals beat cocky ISU, 46-21

TOM

Poor, poor Oregon State

Pac-10.

The words send shudders up the spine. Visions of greatness come to mind. After all it's the league many consider the best in big-time football.

A head coaching job in the Pac-10 and your career's on its way up. Next stop, the NFL.

Well, maybe?

Maybe, that is, if your anywhere but Oregon State University.

Ever since I've watched college football I've always been intrigued by the underdogs, the perennial losers, but OSU tops them all.

When Penthouse releases its bottom ten every year I have to read it.

The bottom ten is just what it sounds like, the opposite extreme of the top 25. Every year the names look the same with teams like Oregon State, Northwestern, and New Mexico State vying for the title of the nation's worst Division I football team.

Jokes about which state can be called the "black hole" of college football are often written about.

An example from Sports Illustrated a few years back: When Bear Bryant died, his widow decided she wanted to get as far away from good college football as possible, so she moved halfway between Eugene (home of the University of Oregon) and Corvallis (home of OSU).

While Oregon the state has lost the title of the "black hole" of college football to New Mexico over the last few years (mostly because Oregon has become a legitimate program), OSU has continued to contribute to the cause on the state's behalf.

This year the Beavers were again picked as Penthouse's number one team for the bottom 20 — the worst team in America.

And despite a new coach, offense, and the easiest schedule in the Pac-10, OSU has defended that ranking.

Following Saturday's 44-7 loss to UCLA, the Beavers stood a perfect 0-6 overall and held down the bottom of the Pac-10 with an 0-3 record.

At the beginning of the year hope was again alive in Corvallis. Jerry Pettibone had just come to Corvallis from Northern Illinois after turning that program around.

Pettibone initiated rapid change. Instead of the trendy pass-orientated attack the Beavers used under previous coach Dave Kragthorpe, Pettibone installed the "Pettibone," a spread option attack using one receiver, one tight-end, and three running backs.

Pettibone had to know what he was getting into, and said it would take possibly five years to

The University of Idaho played a full 60 minutes Saturday night, and the scoreboard showed it—Idaho 46, Idaho State 21.

For the first time in four weeks Idaho's offense came to play in the second-half, where they out-scored Idaho State University 26-14. The result was the end of a three-game Idaho losing streak, and the fourth straight victory over the rival Bengals.

"We just talked about doing things we had done in the first-half," Idaho Coach John L. Smith said of the Vandals half-time talk. "We talked about cleaning up a few things, but other than that we talked about going out and playing. The kids just got to want to go out and do it."

The Vandals never lacked motive to get the job done. Besides dropping their last three games, ISU contributed to the emotional fire with cocky attitudes in the early going.

Idaho knocked the chip off the Bengals' shoulders quickly, as the Vandals drove 65 yards for a touchdown on the opening drive.

When ISU got the chance to answer, Idaho's defense held them at the ISU 39, forcing the Bengals to punt.

It wasn't until the early second quarter that the Bengals got into Vandal territory, where they were forced to punt again from the Idaho 35.

Taking over on their own two-yard-line, things looked grim for Idaho. The Vandals' problems were compounded when quarterback Doug Nussmeier fumbled the first-down snap from freshman center Sean Watkins. Luckily Ronnie White recovered on the one.

An incomplete pass later and it was 3rd-and-11 Idaho on their own one-yard-line, clinging to a 7-0 lead.

The stage was set for the biggest play of the game.

Nussmeier dropped back and hit Kasey Dunn on a streaking pattern for an 82 yard gain. Covered by ISU linebacker Craig Barr, Dunn got out in front of the Bengal defense and raced to the ISU 18 before being brought down by Bengal free-safety Dave Richards. Four plays later Devon Pearce took it in from the five-yard-line, and Idaho opened a 14-0 lead.

The Vandals' big plays weren't finished yet.

On the next Idaho possession, Nussmeier hit tight end Elia Ala'ilima-Daley on the sidelines for a 49 yard touchdown strike. Idaho's lead opened to 20-0 after Thayne Doyle missed the extra point attempt.

Netters drop two important matches

By SEV HOINESS
Staff Writer

Coach Tom Hilbert and his lady Vandal volleyball team returned this weekend from a disheartening 0-2 road trip that left them in a big hole that will be hard, but not impossible, to climb out of.

"I was pretty disappointed, we played OK Friday, but Saturday we basically just gave them two games," said Hilbert. The Vandals came back to win the next two, but let Weber State off the hook. Weber won the final game to take the match.

Friday, against Idaho State, the Vandals lost in three games 15-11, 15-11, and 15-13. Hilbert thought the Vandals played better in their straight game loss to ISU than their five-game loss to Weber State; 15-9, 15-9, 5-15, 10-15, 15-12.

"Weber's a good team, but we are a lot better than we played, now were going have to play catch-up to get into the playoffs," said Hilbert.

"I was really frustrated this weekend, basically that's the only way I can put it," said Brittany VanHaverbeke, who according to Hilbert played well.

Despite losing both matches there were good individual efforts by several Idaho players.

Versus ISU Nancy Wicks had 14 kills and as many digs, Jessica Puckett had 12 kills while VanHaverbeke had nine.

Against Weber State there were five players with double digit kills. Puckett had 18, Wicks 11, VanHaverbeke 10, Dee Porter 10 and freshman Mindy Rice turned in a career high performance 15 K's.

"Mindy Rice has never really played much except in special situations. She came in and played the left side and got 15 kills," said Hilbert.

"I thought that Nancy Wicks and Brittany VanHaverbeke had good matches both nights. She (VanHaverbeke) kinda just does her job night after night and she's just a freshman; as a matter of fact I don't know another freshman that's been playing as well as she has."

In recording 19 kills, VanHaverbeke had only two hitting errors, she had five block assists Friday and a total 16 digs for the weekend.

By the way she has been playing, VanHaverbeke seems to have the inside track on the Big Sky Freshman Player of the Year.

This week the Vandals play Northern Arizona, the University of Nevada and 2-6 Eastern Washington University at Cheney.

"They're (Eastern) at home and they're going to be good. We can't take it lightly," said Hilbert.

Eastern lost an important player last year that crippled their team and left them rather feeble. Hilbert doesn't want his team to look past Eastern because from now on every game counts.

Hilbert feels that his team needs to win at least six out of their next seven league matches to make the playoffs. While Idaho was losing, Northern Arizona was winning and widening the gap between them and the rest of the pack.

"We're definitely still in the thick of things, this is a big week for us and we need to come away with at least two of the three," said Nancy Wicks. "We need to be mentally tough; we're one of the best teams physically, but we fall apart when something bad happens and we need to push through those tough situations."

After a disastrous road trip that could have given the Vandals some breathing room, Hilbert and the Vandals are forced to play catch-up for the rest of the season.

Dunn breaks a record and it's no big deal

By CHRISTOPHER GATEWOOD
Sports Editor

Vandal wide receiver Kasey Dunn is just one of those types of guys that doesn't make a big deal about anything.

For example, Saturday, in the Vandals 46-21 route over Idaho State, Dunn broke the all-time Big Sky Conference record by catching his 231st career pass with just over nine minutes left in the third quarter. His second catch of the game put him ahead of former Vandal Jerry Hendren, who finished his career with 230 catches. But like most things, Dunn simply shrugged off the accomplishment like a bad habit.

"That kind of stuff really isn't that big of a deal," Dunn said nonchalantly. "Maybe someday when I'm old and grey I'll think this was all great. I mean it's nice to have it, but I think it's nicer that Jerry had the record."

Dunn may not realize the magnitude of his accomplishment, but the fact remains that Dunn has made a statistical assault on the record book. The numbers don't lie. He finished Saturday's game with five catches for 138 yards, which gives him a career total of 231, fifth on the all-time NCAA-IAA list.

By the time he finishes at Idaho he should be able to pass Brian Forster of Rhode Island, who had 215 catches, and become the second leading receiver in I-AA history. San Francisco superstar Jerry Rice, finished his Mississippi Valley State days with an amazing 301 receptions. Dunn realizes that he's keeping good company.

"I know how incredible Rice is, but it's hard for me to realize the accomplishment that I've achieved," Dunn said.

All of Dunn's accomplishments aren't lost on the NFL scouts, mainly the Pittsburgh Steelers and the Washington Redskins. Both teams have found road maps to the ASUI Kibbie Dome to see Dunn play, but both are being secretive on their opinions about Dunn. Mum's the word with the Redskins but the Steelers will go as far as to say they think Dunn is productive.

"I try not to think about it too much, but it's hard to not wonder what the scouts are thinking," Dunn said. "I just go out and play the best I can."

Poor ISU probably wishes that Dunn were in the NFL this very minute because he gave their defense fits for the better part of four quarters. His first catch was an 81-yarder when the Vandals were on their own two-yard line. Needless to say that little catch got the Vandals out of trouble and put them in a position to score.

Long catches like that haven't been easy for Dunn to come by this year because of the various zone and man-to-man defenses that have been thrown at him. Dunn is the kind of player that opposing coaches make special game plans for. Dunn usually makes most of his catches in front of the zone because teams are intent on keeping the Vandals from having the big play. ISU was no different as they played a zone in which Dunn was followed and bumped most of the game.

"They weren't really keying on me, it just seems like they were everywhere I was most of the game," Dunn said. "They (ISU) had some good athletes, they made me work for the catches that I got."

Dunn's five catches were nowhere near a season high, but he called it perhaps his best game of the year. Last week against Weber State he caught nine passes, but said it's a game he'd like to forget.

"First, we lost and that's never good," Dunn said. "Secondly, I missed chances to catch a lot more passes than I had. I missed on some situations that could've helped the team. I'm just to blame as much as anybody else for the loss."

Most receivers base their games on sheer numbers alone, but the reason Dunn holds the ISU game in such high regard is because of his blocking, which he says was his best of the season.

"It wasn't a real fun week of practice for us because we spent a lot of time blocking and working on technique," Dunn said. "I did a good job of staying with my blocks."

Dunn has 51 catches on the season, which ranks him third in the nation. Last season after seven games he had 62 catches and had a higher profile. Three straight

Vandal losses and a quarterback controversy have put Dunn somewhat in the shadows. "I don't care about all that other stuff, I just want to win games," Dunn said. "As far as last year is concerned, I think my performance has been similar."

OUR REPUTATION OPENS THE WORLD TO ENGINEERS

the Ralph M. Parsons Company
WORLD HEADQUARTERS

As a major worldwide engineering firm, The Ralph M. Parsons Company has established a sound reputation for building some of the world's most dynamic and challenging projects.

Our projects offer professionals a wide range of complexity, diversity, and location — from a major airport in Saudi Arabia to construction management for Los Angeles' $3.3-billion Metro Rail Rapid Transit System.

And our concerns are just as global — from projects that handle vital environmental needs such as the treatment of hazardous and nuclear waste products to studies on the Advanced Launch system for the next generation of large-payload space launch vehicles.

Since 1944, our projects and people have advanced our world's capabilities. In the process, we've developed an unlimited world of opportunity for Engineering professionals in the following disciplines: Chemical, Civil, Electrical (power option), Mechanical, Nuclear, Structural, and Project Controls.

We offer a competitive salary and benefits package, including an Employee Stock Ownership Plan. Our on-campus interviews are scheduled for Thursday, November 7th, and an information session will be held on Wednesday, November 6th. See your Placement Office for details. The Ralph M. turn OSU around. But is it really possible?

OSU is through the easiest part of their schedule that included non-conference losses to Utah (22-10), UNLV (23-9), and Fresno State (24-20), and the rest looks rugged. The Beavers have three games on the road and two, against Cal and Washington, at home. Sadly, their best bet will probably be against rival Oregon in Eugene.

In the one Pac-10 game they were supposed to have a chance to win, against Washington State, the Beavers were blown out, 55-7.

Watching OSU on Sundays on Prime Sports Northwest, when their games usually are televised delayed, doesn't lend a lot of confidence.

The last two weeks Arizona State and UCLA have ate the "Pettibone" up, allowing only two OSU touchdowns. What Washington's number one defense might do to the Beaver's ground game on Nov. 16, is scary.

If Prime Sports Northwest is going to televise this one, they ought to run a disclaimer warning of the graphic content. The game could scar young option-quarterbacks-to-be for life.

Maybe I'm being too cynical. Maybe Pettibone will surprise a lot of people and install an option attack at OSU to rival that of Nebraska's, or Colorado's. Maybe the Beavers will see their first winning season since 1970, their first bowl appearance since 1969, and their first Pac-10 championship since 1964.

On the other hand, maybe Pettibone should keep his resume' up-to-date. After all, an option in the Pac-10? Maybe, at Washington, UCLA, or USC, but at OSU?

One thing is for sure: turning OSU's program around is going to be like paying off the national debt. And it would probably take Moses to do it.

familiar territory; two of the last three weeks the Vandals had led at half-time only to lose the game.

This time would be different. After the defense forced the Bengals to punt without a first down, the offense took over on the Vandal 32.

On the first play from scrimmage Pearce took a pitch left and broke for a 27 yard gain. Three plays later, Nussmeier found Ala'ilima-Daley for a 27 yard touchdown. After a failed two-point conversion the Vandals led 26-7.

From that point on, Idaho never looked back. The Vandals scored touchdowns on their next two possessions to put the game out-of-reach at 39-7 at the end of the third-quarter.

"Overall as a team we really played hard," Smith said. "That was the difference between this week and the last three, the guys just played hard."

Defensively Idaho played hard all night. Defensive end Jeff

Robinson won Big Sky Conference player of the week with his six tackles, four of which were for losses, including two sacks.

"Overall as a team we really played hard. That was the difference between this week and the last three, the guys just played hard."

— John L. Smith
Idaho Coach

ISU's running attack was held to 75 yards while Idaho gained 186 on the ground. In the air the Bengals came up with 259 yards to Idaho's 344.

Offensively, Nussmeier erased some doubts about who the starting quarterback should be. He completed 18 of 25 passes for all 344 Idaho passing yards, and threw no interceptions for the first time in the season.

Although the offense didn't turn the ball over in the game, they did fumble six times. Most of those came between center Watkins and Nussmeier on snaps, which concerns Smith.

"We've really got to work to clean that up between Sean (Watkins) and Nuss," Smith said.

Other than that Smith was pleased with the offensive line's play.

"That's two weeks in a row the offensive front has come out and improved and done a good job," Smith said.

Three Vandal defensive players suffered injuries in the game furthering the depth problems. Brothers Mat and Mark Groshong will both be out for two to four weeks, while David Gistarb is hopeful to return for next week's game.

Vandal women take seventh at meet

By DOUG BAUER
Staff Writer

Capturing seventh out of 27 teams, the University of Idaho Vandal women's cross country team proved to everyone that they could compete with tough competition last weekend.

The Vandals raced in San Luis Obispo, California, at the Cal Poly SLO Cross Country Invitational.

"Our first three runners ran very, very well," Vandal women's cross country coach Scott Lorek said. "I think we're almost where we want to be."

Dianne Knudson was the top finisher for the Vandals, capturing fifteenth place overall with a time of 18:02, while Keri Krebsbach ended up in eighteenth place and Robyn Slate crossed the finish line in twenty-eighth place.

The race was won by Rayna Cervantes of Cal-Irvine with a time of 17:13.

"The whole purpose of this meet was to see some good competition like we did," Lorek said. "There is a lot of good things that we got out of this."

Knudson was racing for the first time since the Emerald City Invitational. A stress fracture in her ankle has been bothering her and hampering her running ability ever since it occurred last spring.

A few of the men's runners made the trip, but strengthened their running tactics rather than running competitively.

None of the top three runners for the Vandals showed up for the meet, including Mark Olden, Darren Kotsovos and Ty Koellman.

The Vandals will travel to Spokane Saturday to participate in the Wandermere Invitational, a meet which will see quite a bit of quality competition.

The Wandermere will be the last race for the Vandals before they travel to the conference meet in Salt Lake City. According to Olden, it will be a big race for some people.

"The Wandermere will decide who does and does not go to the district tournament," he said. "There are already three people (Olden, Darren Kotsovos and Ty Koellman) going and two other people will have to make the trip."

Kotsovos is in the recovery stage from a stress fracture that he acquired earlier in the season, but according to Olden he is already training again for the conference tournament.

It will definitely be a good competition to see who will get to make the trip to Salt Lake, but whoever they are should be able to represent the Vandals well, considering some of the running ability that has been exhibited by a few newcomers to the program this season.

Alum looks back upon outstanding life with UI

By SHARI IRETON
Staff Writer

"Mr. University of Idaho," as he is fondly called by UI faculty, has certainly given his time to this university.

James Lyle, a graduate and former secretary of the Alumni Association (now the title is director), has been actively involved with the university practically all of his life.

Lyle, born in Peck, Idaho in 1905, graduated from pre-medical school from UI in 1929. During his schooling, he became a member of Beta Theta Pi fraternity, which he is still a member of after 57 years.

"The thought of attending the UI suited me alright," said Lyle.

After receiving his degree, Lyle substitute taught for a rural school, and in August of 1930 started teaching 25 high school students in Southwick, Idaho. He later became Superintendent of the Kendrick and Grangeville schools, respectively.

Lyle returned to UI and received his Masters degree in Education in 1940.

After being released from the Army in 1946, Lyle was approached by UI officials and asked if he was interested in becoming secretary of the Alumni Association.

During his time as secretary, Lyle mixed politics with pleasure as he went to away Vandal football games and also set up alumni meetings. From 1954 to 1968, he missed only two football games.

Lyle's fondest memory while he attended UI was, when he cleared out and sealed up rooms of students inflicted with small pox or chicken pox, which resulted in meeting his future wife, Doris.

Lyle has seen many changes at the university over the last sixty years and spoke favorably of the architecture at the university, but stated, "mixing modern architecture with buildings like the Administration," has not been happening.

Lyle was also happy to see the change in women's rights at the university. Using the Rotary as an example, Lyle said they just recently began admitting women into, what had formerly been known as, "the old man's club."

"They (women) have given a lot of life, so to speak, to that group," said Lyle of the organization.

Lyle also liked the change stress on academic achievement.

"I think stressing academic achievement is a real desirable thing," said Lyle.

Lyle feels the university, while not being a very large school, has graduated many road scholars who have passed "with flying colors."

"We didn't pose as a Yale, Harvard, or Princeton, but graduated some excellent students," he said.

Both of Lyle's daughters attended UI, one for two years in pre-med and the other received her bachelor and master degrees from UI in Counseling.

Lyle is also actively involved with the Rotary, Masons, and other community activities.

European band with Texas name provides southern comfort

Review by Cecilia M Thunes
Staff Writer

Rock music: heavy, medium, light, whatever. You hear it all the time. More often than not, though, it's hard to find anything with some kind of depth in today's pop medium. Recently, however, I stumbled upon a collection of music so worthwhile that I find myself listening to it repeatedly. I guess you could say it's just heaven; well, Mothers Heaven to be more specific.

The UK-based group, Texas, has given us their first release off the Polygram label. Just to listen, though, one would never guess that they were from anywhere else but America. Their musical roots sound as if they're deeply implanted in the South.

Maria McKee, lead singer of Lone Justice, provides backing vocals on "Mothers Heaven," "Alone with You," and "Wrapped in Clothes of Blue." Perhaps this explains the Austin-based Lone Justice influence resounding in much of Mothers Heaven. This identification with another group does not hinder the development and creativity of Texas. If anything, it only adds to its power.

If you set aside the major municipalities of the state of Texas, you might envision desert heat, dryness, wide, expansive spaces, and a certain ease of the area. Texas relates these sentiments to music by providing simple, earthy, and comfortable combinations of the electric and acoustic guitar, piano, organ, bass, drums, and harmonica.

"This Will All Be Mine" opens with a soulful and unaffected electric guitar; you can picture a middle-aged woman resting on her front porch, wiping sweat from her face and fanning herself. This is reminiscent of another Texan group, Eddie Brickell and the New Bohemians, and their song "Oak Creek Bra."

TEXAS

MOTHERS HEAVEN

Sharleen Spiteri co-wrote all of the songs with Johnny McElhone on Mothers Heaven and is the vocal lead of Texas. She sings with an honest and unpretentious approach. This straightforwardness is apparent in her lyrics as well. Spiteri pleads for honesty, from herself and others, in her music, as is evident in "Return": "Why did I give you my soul/ When I knew there'd be/ Nothing in return/...I don't like what I see/ And I been living with it everyday/ So make it now/ Or turn around and change your ways."

"Wrapped in Clothes of Blue" demonstrates the diversity of the electric guitar by opening with a static confrontation toward the simple and repeating bass line. The passion of this song builds as the guitar echoes with electricity, coupled with Spiteri's soulful and clean voice as she cries for compassion: "I'm wrapped in clothes of blue/ And I need you to assure me/ Always be near me." The build-up continues until it peaks with passion, then collapses into a whispering a cappella ending: "Show me you're right."

"Walk the Dust" consists of Spiteri's haunting voice and acoustic guitar accompaniment until it explodes into a full band, complete with organ, bass, drums, electric guitar, and harmonica. "Walk the Dust" tells the story of a woman who can not find the strength to leave her husband. The friend in the song tries to encourage her, but finds that nothing will change. The lyrics end at this point, with a long, slow fade-out of the music, giving us the impression that the wife is about to endure a lifetime of an unending cycle of complacency, unless, as the friend pleads, she "takes (her) hand, there's still time."

Yes, this is rock--medium, light, whatever you want to call it. Texas, however, provides something extra that you won't be able to find on your mainstream pop stations. Texas does not compromise its integrity just to make itself more accessible to the masses. Instead of pumping their own egos, their songs clearly and honestly emote stories and sympathies. They provide a comfortable and uncomplicated place to go when you tire of the mediocrity found in other music. In short, Texas is heaven.

Acclaimed guitarist materializes at UI recital

Guitarist David Tanenbaum at rest. Neat eyebrows, Eh?

By KORINNE BODILY
Staff Writer

Heuwill Tircuit of the San Francisco Chronicle says it, "came as close to perfection as has been heard from a guitarist in memory." According to the New York Times, "Mr. Tanenbaum played so musically and so expressively that the listener was led directly to the essence of the composer." Muscovites can soon hear this guitarist for themselves.

Coming directly from the Far East, David Tanenbaum has recently performed in Japan, Singapore, and Taiwan.

Tanenbaum has received grants from the National Endowment for the Arts, the Martha Baird Rockefeller Fund and the California Arts Council.

His program will feature a wide range of music. It will include a suite by French Baroque guitarist Robert de Visce and Frank Martin's "Quatre Pieces Breves" created in 1933. Romantic works by the Spaniard Francisco Tarrega will also be featured. Performance of Bach's Second Violin Partita, with the famous Chaconne, will be the highlight of the program.

Sponsored by the Lionel Hampton School of Music, Tanenbaum's appearance is the second of three programs in the 1990-91 UI Guitar Series. Tickets are available at the door and will be $5 for general admission and $3 for students and senior citizens. The concert begins at 8 p.m. at the UI Music Building Recital Hall.

West springs into fall hunting action

By WILLIAM T. WEST
Hunting commentary

With the Idaho Elk and Deer season upon us, those of you out there who have put off your hunting preparations in order to booze it up, or have blown your conditioning with organic stimulants, had better get off your butts and prepare yourselves!

The first order of this process is to be certain that your rifle is not only shooting straight, but exactly where you want it to. Don't think that because it was driving tacks last season that you can expect it to do the same this year. Scopes and barrels need to be rebbed via a session at the range every six months.

More harvestable game is missed each year due to improperly sighted-in rifles than to any other single cause. To keep success rates high, it is imperative that hunters know exactly where their guns are hitting.

Go buy a couple boxes of the ammo that you will be using this season (different brands all vary in point of impact) and some targets and head out into the hills to shoot. West's Words of Caution: "Stay away from Moscow Mountain to shoot."

There are so many drug crazed freaks from Seattle running around up there that, even given their neon clothing and strange scent, you can't be sure of not unintentionally bagging one of these ding-bats. I guess they figure that they've got bullet-dodging down pat, coming from their gang-filled cities, and that they have no cause for alarm here.

Once last year, I almost blew away a group of pot smokers that were running in the forest pretending to be trees. In the woods, you always have to be on the defense against people who don't know how to handle their crap. Anyways, shoot far away from people, period!

For most situations you'll encounter around here, a 200 yard zero will do. That way you'll hit six inches lower out to 330 yards, and most rifles with 2600 feet per second muzzle velocity will be about 26 inches high at 400 yards. Thus, on paper, at 100 yards you should be able to hit about 3 inches high.

Personally, I have my 7mm mag zeroed at 300 yards. Most of the shots I take where I hunt are cross canyon, (400 yards plus) so I need the extra range, but to do this I have to hold under out to 200 yards — something hunters less versed in the finer points of ballistics might forget with the emotion of the hunt.

Finally, a note on cartridges for big game. For elk, West's Words of Wisdom are: "The bigger, the better." As I have earlier noted, elk are damn big and hard to kill. I don't mean to infer that you'll need the bone-smashing annihilation capabilities of a .375 H&H, but if you are choosing from the most popular rounds, I wouldn't recommend starting lower than the .270 Winchester level.

My wife Wilma took the advice of famed central Idaho guide Joe Lamorte, and shoots a .243 Winchester, which is small, but for a petite feminine build, recoil must be considered. The main drawback to this, though is that she must be absolutely certain of shot placement, which means passing up many opportunities.

Never in any case go below the .243 level! The .22 calibers don't even approach the needed power, and there is not a bullet made that can reliably handle smashing through to the vitals on big game. That means all you G.I. Joe Army nuts out there with your assault weapons should leave them to deal with urban combat — as they were designed.

Truth about coffee beverages revealed

By KELLY TYNON
Staff Writer

After spending a weekend in Seattle, I noticed that espresso bars have definitely taken over Northwest restaurants. Every restaurant in the city, whether it be a high-class French bistro or Joe's Pizzeria, has an espresso bar. I've even heard rumors that espresso bars are making appearances in 7-11 stores.

Moscow, being the hip town that it is, has at least three places I can think of where one can taste the new drink of the Northwest, and one is right here on campus. The Espresso Stop in the SUB provides the opportunity for every University of Idaho student to get that special caffeine high. Unfortunately, students rarely know exactly what they want to order.

Die-hard coffee drinkers who like coffee strong enough to put hair on their chests should order straight espresso. A single shot is two ounces of strong, bitter coffee that will keep you wired for hours. A double shot of espresso should keep you going for the day. Of course, this does not apply to the small percentage of the population that has become addicted to espresso. I don't think any number of shots could affect these people. They are truly a special breed.

Cappuccino is espresso with a little bit of steamed milk and a lot of foamed milk. This is for coffee drinkers who add that

LIVING WITH MEN By Heidi Kenyon

PART III: EATING HABITS
(Wherein Jake, Danny and myself pretend to be cooperative participants in a healthy, happy living environment, and I only try to kill them once a week or so.)

I'm on a diet.
For some, those words inspire memories of horror and misery. For others, they evoke feelings of sympathy and understanding. However, for some reason, those words elicit howls of laughter and derisive snickers from my so-sensitive housemates.

I won't say that men don't understand diets, but I will say that I have never met one that does.

On the first day of my diet, Danny baked a cake. His mom sent him this mix for his birthday, and he finally got around to making it. I'm sure it was just a coincidence that he chose the day I started my diet to do so, after all, his birthday was only about two months ago.

Not only did he eat it right in front of me, he brought the whole cake into the living room and waved it in front of my nose. It was chocolate. Chocolate fudge. Moist, rich, dark, luscious chocolate fudge, the kind that sticks to your fork and clings to your taste buds. With lots of frosting. I tried not to breathe.

On the second day of my diet, Jake and I went to Spokane. This meant that we had to eat out. For lunch, I ordered a salad. It was... green. I picked at it.

Jake had ordered this really thick, creamy, delicious-looking clam chowder. Steam rose from it in little white wisps. It smelled like heaven. I'm not sure, but I think the people at the next table sent their food back and ordered clam chowder just because of the delicious odor which wafted gently up from Jake's bowl. He closed his eyes when he tasted it, savoring the subtle mixture of flavors. I asked him if I could have his saltines. I tried to savor the subtle mixture of flavors in them, but it was hard.

His sandwich came with a mountain of potato chips. I think they were Lay's. I asked him if I could drink his water, and tried not to get too much drool in it.

On the third day of my diet, I woke up already hungry. I tried not to think about it. "Jake," I said finally, "for breakfast, why don't you make up some omelettes with lots of cheese, and some bacon, and pancakes with thick syrup, and muffins with butter slathered on, and a big glass of creamy, foamy milk?" He looked at me in surprise. "For you and Danny," I added. "I'll have grapefruit and dry toast." The creep had the gall to laugh.

Diet day four arrived. The boys didn't feel like making dinner. What do college students do when they don't feel like making dinner?.. You got it. Sausage and mushrooms on one, pepperoni and black olives on the other. I thought I could handle this. I was pretty confident. After all, I'd already had my four ounces of salad and my rice cake, and I wasn't hungry anymore. Ahem.

Danny came into the living room with two slices of pizza on a plate. He sat down on the couch next to me. He began to eat. He noticed that I was staring at him, observing the way the cheese stretched from his mouth to the slice, the way little drips of sauce would squeeze out and he would lick them off his fingers, the way the sausage bulged under the cheese like... like...

"Would you like some?" Danny asked.

I shook my head violently and returned diligently to my studies. "Oh, no, thanks, I'm not hungry."

Please see MEN page 15

small dollop of cream to their coffee and think it affects the taste. The steamed milk helps cut down on the bitterness, but not by much. Cappuccinos can still ruin delicate tastebuds.

Lattes are for those coffee drinkers like me who need a little coffee with their cream. A latte is an espresso with a lot of steamed milk and a thin layer of foamed milk on top. The steamed milk dilutes the espresso, making it drinkable, but the aftertaste can still get to you if you aren't prepared.

"Mochas ... are a must for chocolate freaks."

Mochas are simply lattes with chocolate syrup and whipped cream on top. These are a must for chocolate freaks, as long as you ask for extra syrup.

Any of these drinks can be enhanced by Italian syrup. This syrup usually goes into Italian sodas, but can flavor the coffees as well. The most common flavors added are: hazelnut, orgeat (almond), vanilla, creme de cocoa, creme de menthe, and chocolate mint. However, combinations such as a raspberry mochas and orange cappuccinos are not unheard of.

My current favorite is a mocha with creme de menthe syrup added. It reminds me of an Andes after-dinner mint, or, for those alcoholics out there, like hot chocolate with peppermint schnapps.

So, discover the new drink of the Northwest. If at first you don't appreciate the taste, learn to tolerate it. I promise you'll be thankful for the extra caffeine during midterms and finals week. Besides, getting a little culture into your system can't hurt.

Correction

Correction to the article titled, "ASUI Vice-President resigns position."

Allison Lindholm did not vote "Nay" on the proposal to fund telephone emergency stickers.

Bill #206 did not pass, but was held in committee.

Carol Grupp and the Purchasing office proposed the idea to Idaho and Washington bus companies, without Senators Lindholm and Sheikh.

Correction to the article (Oct. 11) titled, "UI minority population rises."

The African-American student enrollment dropped, not rose, by nine percent.

Alcohol Awareness Week is coming soon, Nov. 10-16. Take a moment to evaluate the good reasons to drink an alternative to an alcoholic beverage. Try a "Mock-tail" such as "White Lightning" made from:

- 1 can frozen white grape juice concentrate
 - 2 cans water
 - 1 can sparkling water
- Serve on the rocks. Makes one quart.

Or try a boozeless beer with less alcohol and, in most cases, fewer calories.

Houston Hall resident Jamie Warner didn't return home over the weekend, but her brother did, to help prevent flames from reaching her family's property.

Warner didn't know anyone personally who was drastically affected by the fire; but Carlson was a friend of the firefighter who was killed Wednesday, one of the only two casualties of the wildfire so far.

Recent damage estimates cite 50,000 acres and 120 homes ravaged by the runaway flames.

Many students whose properties were damaged, however, were fortunate enough to have them spared from total destruction. Graham Hall resident Alex Barkley's Coeur d'Alene house sustained a $2,000 damage when the wind caused a tree to cave in through a section of the roof. The house of an unidentified student near Rathdrum, meanwhile, remained intact as another house and a barn burned on either side of it.

"Most people have been let back into their houses," said Carlson. "But there are still hot ashes on the ground and with the winds today, the flames could start up again. That's one thing I'm worried about right now."

Most of the flames, however, have been contained by volunteer firefighters. Hopefully, the fire will blaze no more trails.

"No, no, here, go ahead," he offered not-so-innocently. The man actually pushed the plate toward me and waved his hand over it to push the smell my direction.

He might have looked better with it all over his face if the sauce had matched his shirt, but as it was the orange and green clashed terribly and he ended up a prime example of fashion ineptitude.

Fortunately there was more pizza. My diet was over.

attending college. When asked how their education at the UI contributed to achieving those goals 95.4 percent of the 1987-88 graduates responding said, "very strongly," or, "quite well."

Overall, 98.3 percent of the respondents said their education at the UI was personally very satisfying or somewhat satisfying. However, 51 percent of those surveyed said written communication needed to be emphasized more at the university, 59 percent said the UI needs to emphasize oral communication, and 66 percent said computer and technological skills needed more emphasis.

"We gained valuable feedback about the core curriculum," Doerann said. "In most core categories, graduates thought the emphasis was about right. Only in written and oral communications and in computers did they recommend more emphasis."

So far no citations have been issued in the case.

Funeral services will be held for Mondahl in McMinville Thursday, Oct. 24 at 11 a.m. According to Cantrell, about 30 members of Kappa Sigma are planning to attend.

BEFORE TRUSTING YOUR FUTURE TO ANY COMPANY, ASK FOR SOME LETTERS OF REFERENCE.

You put more than just your savings into a retirement company. You put in your trust and hopes for the future, too. So before you choose one, ask some questions. How stable is the company? How solid are its investments? How sound is its overall financial health?

A good place to start looking for answers is in the ratings of independent analysts. Three companies, all widely recognized resources for finding out how strong a financial services company really is, gave TIAA their top grade.

IN THE FINAL ANALYSIS, TIAA IS LETTER-PERFECT.

TIAA received A+ from A.M. Best Co., AAA from Standard & Poor's and Aaa from Moody's Investors Service. These ratings reflect TIAA's reliable claims-paying ability, exceptional financial strength, superior investment performance, and low expenses. With its guaranteed rate of return and opportunity for dividends, TIAA is one of less than ten companies, out of 2,200 nationwide, that received these highest marks.

CREF. FOUR MORE LETTERS EVERYONE SHOULD KNOW.

For further growth potential and diversification, there's the CREF variable annuity with four different investment accounts to give you the flexibility you want as you save for the future.

Together, TIAA and CREF form the nation's largest private retirement system, with over $95 billion in assets and more than 70 years of experience serving the education community. For over one million people nationwide, the only letters to remember are TIAA-CREF.
