UI alumnus freed

By DOUG TAYLOR
Staff Writer

University of Idaho alumni Jesse Turner was released Monday, Oct. 21 by a radical Shiite Muslim faction. He had been held hostage in Lebanon for nearly five years.

Turner's release coincided with the release of 15 Lebanese prisoners in Israel. The imprisonment of these Lebanese people had been a big area of contention with the Shiites, but the United Nations was able to negotiate Turner's release in turn for the release of these Lebanese people.

His captors turned him over to Syrian security forces who drove him to the Syrian capital of Damascus where he was then handed over to a United States ambassador. From there he was flown to a U.S. airbase in Wiesbaden, Germany for a complete medical check up.

Turner spent a decade at the University of Idaho from 1971-1981. While here, he received master's degrees in both mathematics and philosophy, and a doctorate degree in mathematics. He also taught some undergraduate math classes while at UI.

Following his stay here, Turner went overseas to teach mathematics at Beirut University College where he was kidnapped by the Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine in Jan. of 1987.

Turner's release prompted rejoicing among his former colleagues here at the UI's math department.

"Along with the whole nation, we have been waiting for this day," said Clarence

Second student dies following accident

By KALISTA BARCLAY
Asst. News Editor

Denny Nelson, the driver of the car involved in last weekend's fatal accident died Saturday afternoon.

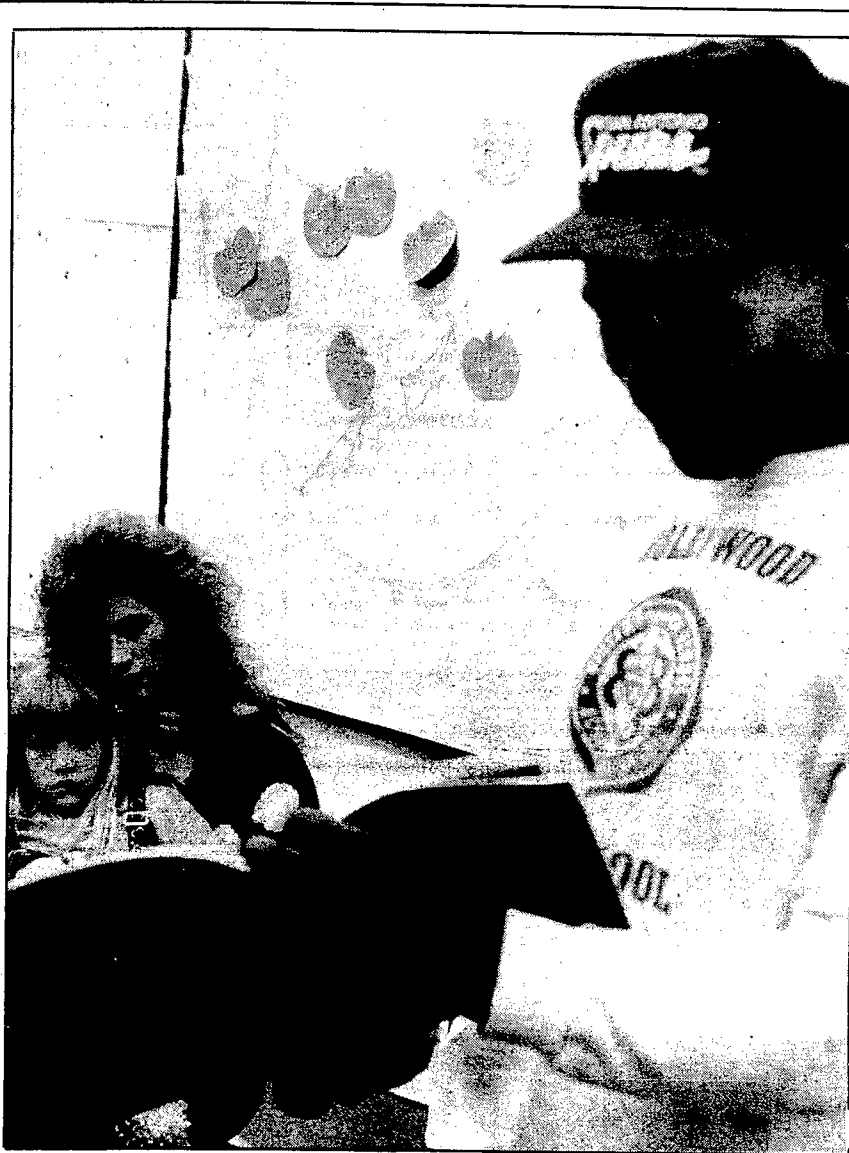

Nelson was driving his car along Robinson Park Road early Sunday, Oct. 20 when he missed a turn and rolled his car, killing one University of Idaho student and injuring two students from College of Idaho. Nelson, 21 of Payette, Id. and member of Kappa Sigma Fraternity, had been in intensive care in Lewiston's St. Joseph's Regional Medical Center since the accident. He sustained massive head injuries in the crash when he was ejected from the car as it rolled end-over-end.

Scott Mondahl, 18 of McMinville, Ore. was the passenger killed in the accident.

SAE president responds to sanctions imposed by IFC

By DOUG TAYLOR
Staff Writer

In the aftermath of the recent sanctions placed on Sigma Alpha Epsilon for alcohol violations during Fall 1991 rush, it was time to hear the other side of the story. This voice belonged to that of the SAEs, and in a recent interview with SAE President Mike Lincoln, we spoke about everything from alcohol restrictions to the new image of fraternities. The following are excerpts from our conversation.

Taylor: From what I understand, the SAEs were approached by the InterFraternity Council upon hearing allegations from another house that alcohol was served at a rush party this year. Can you illuminate me on this and take me through the entire process?

Lincoln: Our house was approached by the IFC after they received a complaint stating that there was alcohol present at a rush party this fall. The IFC conducted an investigation into the matter to determine if there was enough evidence to conduct a trial. They found that there was sufficient evidence to hold a trial, and since we were already on probation for hazing last year, we felt it was best to plead guilty. After this, we proposed our idea of sanctions which we thought would account for what happened as well as deal with a fair and effective punishment.

Taylor: So alcohol was served at that particular rush party?

Lincoln: No, we didn't plead guilty to serving alcohol to rushees. We pled guilty to alcohol and rushees being present at the same place. This function occurred the night before rush actually started, but it still constituted a summer rush infraction. However, by cooperating with IFC and admitting guilt, we hoped for some leniency from the IFC.

Taylor: As a result of all the sanctions, how did you feel about the role of the IFC Tribunal during the whole process? Are they both fair and effective in their role as a fraternal governing body?

Lincoln: As far as effectiveness, Tribunal is effective as a governing body. They have the very unenviable position of having to enforce the rules set down for fraternities. In regards to fairness, that might be another matter, because during the IFC's investigation, communication with myself and the vice-president wasn't as extensive as I would have liked. The IFC talked with the rush chairman and the pledges, but their communication with us was limited.

Taylor: The IFC strongly suggested alcohol sanctions to your individual chapter's alumni. In the wake of last week's fatal accident involving members of the Kappa Sigma fraternity, how meaningful is the dry house rule?

Lincoln: The alcohol sanction was something I fought the whole way exactly for the reason you listed above because if someone wants to drink they will drink whether or not sanctions have been applied to a house. If people can't drink here there is a greater possibility they will drive in order to get to a party, and with this there is a greater possibility of an accident. Human lives are much more important than our charter, and this is why I think some sort of middle ground could be reached on the alcohol sanction.

Tower ready for Halloween

By SHARI IRETON
Staff Writer

As Halloween approaches, so does the University of Idaho's annual Theophilus Tower Trick or Treat.

The Trick or Treat is held on Halloween evening in the Tower from 5 to 8 p.m. Parents are invited to bring their children, who will be escorted to rooms in the Tower by residents. Every other floor in the Tower will have about eight rooms handing out candy.

Along with receiving candy, the children will also be able to take in the sights and sounds of Halloween, as the women handing out the candy will be in costume and have their door decorated.

The community of Moscow and the residence halls in the Tower, have donated money, candy and prizes for this annual event. The prizes will be awarded to the college students for the best costume and door decorations.

The Trick or Treat has been put on by the Resident Advisors of the Tower for their area program. Like Paint the Palouse, put on by R.A.'s from a wing in the Wallace Complex, the R.A.'s are involving the residents with a community service project. The spring time Easter Egg Hunt is another area program put on by the Tower.

While waiting to be escorted, the kids can take part in the haunted house found in the basement of the Tower, provided by the residents of Borah and Houston halls. The haunted house will have a graveyard, mad scientists, witches, a maze and other scary things for entertainment.

A big advantage of bringing children to the Tower for trick or treating is safety. Without having to worry about the danger of crossing busy streets or children eating candy that has been tampered with, the parents can rest easy while the kids have a good time.

Another advantage is that the Tower is on the way to the Palouse Empire Mall, which also provides candy for eager trick or treaters Halloween night.

Greeks set for trick or treaters

By Wendy Deal
Staff Writer

Trick or treat, get some candy from the greeks. Six of the seven sororities on campus and some of the fraternities will be handing out candy to children in the community. In addition, many of the greek houses also have other community activities planned.

Alpha Kappa Lambda Fraternity has a pumpkin carving contest planned for their philanthropy, the Latah County Friends Unlimited. The AKL's had planned an event called Spooky Sunday to take place at Robinson Park, but because of the inclement weather, it did not happen.

Alpha Tau Omega Fraternity will also be having a pumpkin carving event. The children of the staff and faculty members of the university will be given an opportunity to get to know some of the members of the ATO chapter and a chance to carve a pumpkin for Halloween.

FarmHouse Fraternity is putting on a haunted house for children in the community. They will be holding their haunted house at Tumble Town in the Palouse Empire Mall on Oct. 31, from 5-8 p.m.

Phi Gamma Delta Fraternity will also be putting on a haunted house in conjunction with Kappa Kappa Gamma Sorority. After going through the haunted house, the children and sorority or fraternity members will have the opportunity to meet each other and participate in a few games such as bobbing for apples.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon Fraternity is planning a children's party.

Not only are the Greek chapters providing the children of our community a safe place to collect candy, they will be given the opportunity to interact with people that are not part of the campus.

Weird UI stuff for spirit of season

By SHARI IRETON
Staff Writer

In the spirit of Halloween, stories of the bizarre, frightening and even disgusting have resurfaced to haunt the students of this campus.

Many UI students are unfamiliar with the rumors of the extraordinary, however, a bit of research and probing has revealed quite the opposite.

One of the disgusting, and perhaps most discomfoting areas of campus is the UI "meat" lab, as it is fondly called by students. This is the building which holds the human corpses used for visual aids for students studying the anatomy of the body.

One pre-med student told me of the human arm provided by the lab, with it's skin layed open, revealing the tendons and muscles. This same student informed me of the fun of pulling the formaldehyde-soaked tendons and watching the fingers move, frightening her friends. However, the fun was over when she was caught by a TA.

Another quite common, yet abominable sight on campus are the infamous "window" cows. These creatures, who reside on the hill of the UI farm, have clear plastic windows surgically placed in their sides to provide a view of physiological processes of the unsuspecting bovine. These content animals chewing their cud are always surprising parents and new students as they return from a nice day of shopping at the mall.

As with almost any university in the world, UI claims to have at least two haunted areas on campus.

The first ghost resides in the music practice rooms of Ridenbaugh Hall. While no one is quite sure how the rumor started, some say that years ago a music major committed suicide in the build-

Potratz, UI math department chairman.

UI mathematics professor, Bill Voxman, added that, "It's a real joy to know he's out."

Voxman said Turner appeared unfazed about the possibility of being kidnapped before he departed for the Middle East in 1981.

"He assured me it would never happen because the security around Beirut University College is tight," said Voxman.

Concurred Alan Rouyer, a UI political science professor, "I talked to his ex-wife several years ago, and she said Turner believed his students in Beirut would protect him from any potential kidnapers."

Rouyer believes Turner was kidnapped for two reasons with the primary reason being, the United States has always been pro-Israel. He said because Israel has battled Muslim groups in Lebanon for many years, Turner was at risk due to his American passport.

In addition, Rouyer thought Turner was in danger because the United States has always supported the status quo in terms of leadership in the Middle East.

"The U.S. became unpopular for supporting the existing regimes in the Middle East because the presence of American power in the region was considered to be a threat from a neocolonial power."

Taylor: Obviously, the entire image of fraternity life has changed since the 1970's with the abolition of hazing and the reduction in the number of huge parties. How is this changing image going to affect rush in future years?

Lincoln: Fraternities did slip in the 1970's as the animal house mentality was dominant. Now, however, there is a transition period occurring which has been marked by houses trying to clean up their act. I think this new image can still be appealing to incoming freshmen who want to join a fraternity. Besides, the true meaning of fraternity life for me has been the friendships I have gained as a result of joining this house and not the wild drinking parties which have gone on in the past. It will be interesting to see if this new image will appeal to freshman in the years to come.

for practicing, thin strains of music can occasionally be heard coming from the upper floors of the building.

The second widely circulated rumour cites a number of apparitions to be roaming Gault Hall. Many years ago, a fire took the lives of three students on Borah Hall. Today, some students claim to smell smoke coming from no where and hear footsteps walking down the halls when no one is there.

Blue Key directories ready

The new Blue Key telephone directory will be delivered to offices and departments all over campus this week, and students' copies will be available for pick up in the S.U.B. In addition, other new city and regional phone books will be arriving at the University of Idaho during the first three weeks of November, leaving the campus swamped with obsolete directories.

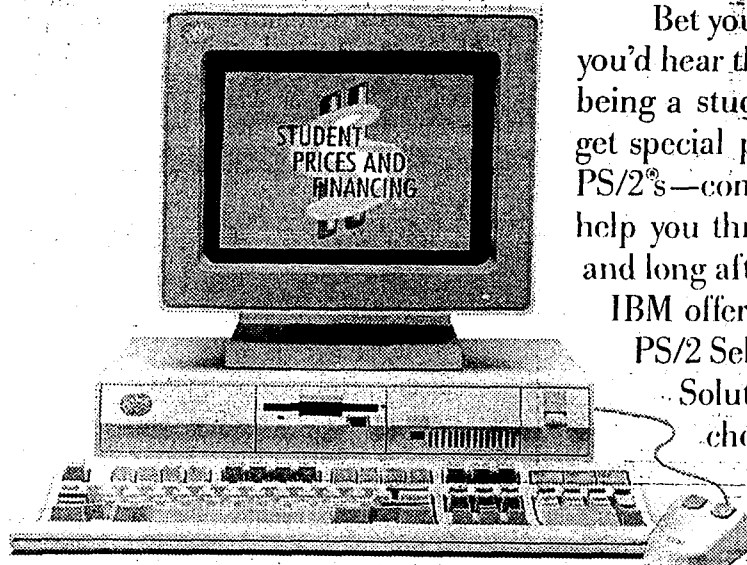

The UI Recycling Program would like to encourage students to temporarily hold on to their old phone books, of all varieties, so they can be picked up and passed on for recycling. Over the next few weeks, place your directories to be discarded in boxes in your offices and departments. These will be picked up by our recycling crew during the week of Nov. 18-22 and the first three days of next week, Nov. 25-27. If you run into space problems before these scheduled collection dates, please let us know and we will do our best to accommodate you.

Recycling conscious students will have the opportunity to turn in their old Blue Keys at the same time they pick up their new ones in the SUB. Special collection boxes will be designated for phone book deposit. Arrangements will also be made to collect discarded phone books at the regular recycling collection stations in campus living groups during the same time periods stated above. Check with your living group recycling coordinators for details.

The combined efforts of UI students and staff on this project will go far to make use of recyclable materials.

Student body fan support utterly disappointing

As the humble and sometimes brutally treated News Editor of this great establishment that is the Argonaut, I rarely get a chance to stick my head out from behind my heap of a desk. When I'm not being poked and prodded by "The Gate and the Laws," I'm forgetting to please some organization that wants coverage for their extraordinary gala the following day.

So, needless to say, when I try to have fun, I try to do it up right. Since I'm a measely 19 years-young and don't like to play complicated drinking games, the few chances for relaxation I get are taken full advantage of.

Enter the 1991 Homecoming game. After hearing all the chatter from the sports experts around me, even I was getting fired up, and I'm a far cry from any kind of foaming-at-the-mouth, yeah, I-know-the-facts sports fan. I played football in high school, and I hated it, and I don't like any kind of pain that's brought on by myself. Plus, I'm from Cleveland, a city better known for burning lakes than outstanding athletic teams.

But, I was ripped and ready for this game. A bunch of guys in my house painted their faces with shining support for our alma mater football team. We got there an hour early for prime seats, and got ready to make our voices hoarse in support of the Vandals.

But what the hell is wrong? After about one minute of team support, most of the crowd sat down and settled in for a three-hour snooze. After an intense session of screaming Vandal spirit encouragement, I turn around to see thousands of zombies who could have just as well been watching "The Price is Right" from their living room.

To top it off, a bunch of people sitting behind us muttered obscenities at us for blocking their precious view, like we were sinning for showing a little enthusiasm.

I have no problem with people hating football and staying at the library studying.

The problem occurs when these people flock to the Kibbie Dome for some unknown reason. I still haven't figured out why they came, but I've ruled out 'team support.' KRPL covers Vandal football for people who want to listen to the game. So why not leave the Dome to those of us who want to get involved once in a while?

I'm not saying the Vandals lost because the student body kept quiet, but I do think it is a distinct possibility. I know if I was talented enough to wear the Vandal football uniform, I'd almost rather play on the road.

I know there are greater problems in the world than this, but I left the game feeling a little empty. If people needed to "Recycle Their Spirit For Idaho," then UI is a throw-away student body.

Grazing facts misleading

Editor:

I would like to clarify a few statements made in the recent article "Two senators deserve thanks for their efforts" by Pete Gomben. It is a fact that federal permittees pay $1.97 per AUM to graze each cow calf pair on federal land, while on private land the current lease rate is approximately $7 to $9 per AUM. Many people who look at these figures without first finding out the facts are misled! The truth is that the ranchers grazing federal ground have higher nonfee costs compared to ranchers that graze on deeded ground. These costs average $17.54 on federal land compared to $14.76 for nonfee costs of grazing private land. These higher nonfee costs cover such things as lost or dead animals, association fees, veterinary fees, moving of livestock, herding, salt and feed, travel, water, horse, fence maintenance, water maintenance, development depreciation (carried out on non-deeded ground), the capitalized cost of the grazing permit, and other costs.

The senators from the 16 western states were able to see the misguided judgement of senators Metzenbom and Jeffords. In sworn testimony provided to the Congress it was revealed that

What does a woman want?

Sigmund Freud, eminent 20th century thinker and founder of the Blame Your Mother school of psychoanalysis, first posed the question that has haunted men to this day:

"What does a woman want?" Kids? A career? A sensitive guy who cries while watching Born Free?

A midnight blue Mercedes 500SEL with tilt steering wheel and cruise control?

What? In search of a clue, I conducted an informal, nonscientific survey into the most basic desires of women here at the University of Idaho.

"A good-looking man" and "guys with cute butts" were mentioned. So was the wish, "to be left alone."

One woman (a Gemini, in case you were wondering) said she wished to "live in harmony with the powers that be in the universe." Don't we all?

Another woman wanted a man with which she is mutually compatible, noting that she is "not compatible with fat dudes, guys with hair coming out of their nostrils and men named Stanley."

Men with hairy backs also got a big thumbs down.

An extremely confused and distraught respondent said she wanted "a man without a dog." Psychoanalyze that one, compatible with fat dudes, guys with hair coming out of their nostrils and men named Stanley."

Another woman did admit there are a few females who, if a man slid a two carat diamond onto their ring fingers, wouldn't care what the hell came out of his mouth.

Maybe I wouldn't either.

Other women want to have their own stacks of money stashed safely away. They may crave a home life but they need financial independence because modern romance is a shaky and nebulous thing.

Maybe a bit selfishly, a woman wants a man who is understanding if she tends to jump off the emotional deep end once in a while.

Many women are looking for a measure of security. Some find it in material things, like the hunks of rock guys give them to wear on their fingers. Call it a symbol of commitment or a down payment on the future, but there are some women that absolutely DEMAND tribute.

Lack of responsibility took life

Editor;
I must agree it is a tragic thing to have the life of a friend or loved one snuffed out so quickly and for such a simple and "relieving" reason. I am writing this editorial assuming, as did Matt, that alcohol is involved and part of the cause of this tragedy.

Matt feels that the blame for this accident lies not in the hands of those involved directly, correct me if I am wrong, but in the hands of those who are running this country. I disagree.

Whose decision was it to go to an "alternate" location (Robinson Lake) to drink and relieve the "stresses" of college life? Is college really that stressful or is it just a "good" excuse to party?

Please don't get me wrong, college does have its trials, but through the help of friends and "brothers" any problem should be able to be resolved in a responsible manner. I am a member of the Greek system myself, not on this campus, but nevertheless a member for four years, and I have a sense of what brotherhood and friendship are.

Back to the "hierarchical form" where the blame lies. Those persons in positions of authority have been where we are right now and know what can happen (and did). I feel that for this reason there is a drinking age and restrictions on alcohol consumption. These restrictions are put in place to protect us assuming that we are responsible enough to abide by them and if we choose not to do that we either maintain our sense of judgement (responsibility) and not get caught or suffer the consequences. The reason people can't go to bars until they are 21 is because a large portion of the irresponsible people who have been caught in the past drinking and driving are under 21. (Maybe we should raise the age to 22 or 23 so individuals Denny's age can't enter bars or possess alcohol, in an attempt to prevent more deaths.) This leads me to your (Matt's) comment on students on the U of I campus drinking alcohol in the past, pre-

Please see BLAME page 15>

Lay responsibility on upperclassmen

Editor;
While I agree with your estimation that Mr. Mondahl's death was a senseless tragedy, I must take exception to the flawed logic that would place the blame for it on another "hierarchical" source. Mr. Lawson, you reason that since underage students have always consumed alcohol on this campus (even though it is illegal) and probably always will, then it should be formally allowed and that the University should look the other way. Following that line of reasoning, would you, Mr. Lawson, agree that since sexual assault has always occurred on college campuses, and since we really can't do anything about the unbridled hormonal surges these poor young rapists are subject to, perhaps we should just look the other way and say, "it's really not the rapist's fault"? I think not. No, Mr. Lawson, I have to disagree with you. It isn't the University's or the State of Idaho's, or the federal government's or middle-aged voters' responsibility that this senseless tragedy has occurred. If "hierarchical" responsibility is to be laid on anyone's doorstep, lay it at the feet of the upperclassmen in Mr. Mondahl's fraternity, who evidently didn't care enough about him to discourage him from engaging in the extremely dangerous and foolhardy illegal activity of drinking and driving.

I agree with you on one point Mr. Lawson, no one can bring back Scott Mondahl. My sympathy is extended to his family and close friends. But intellectual honesty requires that we not shift the blame beyond where it ultimately must rest.

-Phillip Waite

Those involved in tragedy are responsible

Editor;
How many times will one of our friends and/or fellow students have to be maimed or killed before we pay attention? Why is it so hard for people to learn from the tragedies that happen all around them? May I suggest it is because deep down we really don't care very much? The way I see it, the ones who are truly mournful of Scott's death are those who do something about it. That is, taking precautions in your own life to make sure you don't make the same mistakes so many others have.

The editorial in Tuesday's Argonaut (Oct. 22) placed the blame for Scott's death on the government and those who told Scott and his friends that they couldn't drink in their house. Could it be that they care and are doing something about it? Let's let the facts speak for themselves.

According to the National Safety Council's 1990 edition of Accident Facts, "alcohol involvement in fatal traffic accidents decreased between 1982 and 1988. In 1982, about 46% of fatal traffic accidents involved at least one driver or non-occupant who was intoxicated. By 1988, this proportion had dropped to about 39%. The proportion of fatal accidents involving drivers or non-occupants who were alcohol-impaired but not intoxicated remained relatively constant during this period, about 10 to 11%. It is estimated that in 1988, for the first time in the reporting period, less than half of all fatal traffic accidents involved alcohol. The reduction in alcohol involvement was especially large for drivers under 21 years of age. It is important to remember that 31 of 50 states raised the legal drinking age to 21 between 1983 and 1987!

So let's assume that nothing could have stopped them from going to Robinson Lake. What if one of the three passengers was not drunk? Why didn't they take the keys? What if Denny was not drunk? Why was he doing 75mph in a 35mph zone? What if all four were drunk? Was there nobody to go along and be a

"If he is willing to drop two months salary on a ring," they probably think to themselves, "then he is probably pretty serious about me."

Other women find security in kind words, verbal reassurances, and the thousands of valuable little things in life which carry no price tag.

Then there are women that fall somewhere in between. They want to hear men confirm their feelings in words, but they also need something tangible and solid to hold onto.

Women in the 1990s are in pursuit of: "commitment with freedom, balanced to a woman's liking," and "the independence to do more things in life, with the security of a relationship to go back to."

Sound a bit chauvinistic? Of course. If you think about it, that's pretty close to the same deal men have had for most of history.

Women want a man who will not only be a boyfriend, but a best friend as well; someone with whom they can hang out and share secrets. They want someone they can confide in and feel comfortable around without always having to be on their best behavior.

Which, strangely enough, is the same type of thing many men want in a woman.

So, what seems to be the problem?

What is the point of all this? Simply that it was not rules or rule makers that took Scott's life, but it was a lack of responsibility and caring. In no way am I saying that I'm better than them or any of you that read this. In fact, I would bet I've made as many, if not more, mistakes and have a hard time listening to the advice of those who have experienced things first hand. How I wish I had listened the first time.

One thing I have learned however is that alcohol does nothing to solve my problems or make me feel any better. I learned that from trying it myself, but mostly from listening to the countless people who have said that alcohol did nothing positive for them. I have also personally experienced in a powerful way an alternative to alcohol. That alternative is someone who DOES care. His name is Jesus Christ. Have you given him a try?

EWU ends UI's playoffs hopes

By CHRISTOPHER GATEWOOD

The Eastern Washington Eagles knew they had to play a near perfect game to beat the the University of Idaho Vandals. Their performances of the past two weeks in losses to Portland State and the University of Nevada simply wouldn't get it done.

Well, calling it perfect might be a bit presumptuous, but the Eagles committed zero turnovers and got an uncharacteristic passing performance from quarterback Mark Tenneson as the Eagles shocked the Vandals, 34-31, in double overtime, in front of a stunned homecoming crowd of 14,800.

The loss leaves the Vandals at 4-4 overall and 2-3 in the Big Sky Conference and ends any chance of the them going to the playoffs for the first time since 1984. The loss was also the Vandals third this season in the Kibbie Dome. They haven't duplicated that feat since 1981.

"This is just a terrible feeling," said All-American receiver Kasey Dunn. "You can't believe the pain I'm going through. I spent so many hours getting ready for this season and now we're not going to the playoffs.

"I'm crushed personally," said defensive end Jeff Robinson. "Everybody busted their asses all summer. I really feel bad for the seniors."

It was the performance of EWU that caused the pain. The Vandals played good enough to win, but had a fumble on the six inch line that could've put them up 28-14 and a missed 29-yard field goal by Thane Doyle. The Eagles also had an answer for everything. Most of the answers came in the form of Tenneson, who threw for 224 yards on

How will Vandals react?

Idaho suffered one of its most heartbreaking defeats in recent memory at the hands of the Eastern Washington Eagles Saturday in the Kibbie Dome.

Idaho fell to 4-4 on the season after its fourth loss in five games, and fell completely out of the playoff picture. What does this mean for Idaho?

■ Idaho's streak of six straight playoff appearances will come to an end.

■ The Vandals won't win the Big Sky Conference for two straight years — for the first time since 1984.

■ Idaho will finish out of the top three in the Big Sky for the first time since 1981.

■ With two tough games left against Montana and Boise State the Vandals have the threat of finishing below .500, a feat that last happened in 1981.

With all this looming in the minds of the players the coaching staff gave them two days off after the loss to think about the remainder of the season.

For the seniors, it is a matter of ending their career on a winning note. For that to happen, Idaho will have to win at Northern Arizona Nov. 9 before facing their two nemeses at home to finish out the season.

A win at Northern Arizona will not only help Idaho's attempt to finish above .500, but it may boost a confidence level that looms close to zero.

Montana is arguably the hottest team in the Big Sky and the Grizzlies will be looking to end a three-game losing streak, including a 35-14 drubbing last season in Missoula.

With two wins over the Lumberjacks and Grizzlies, Idaho would clinch their tenth consecutive winning season, but the only true win that may save some lost pride and retain any Vandal tradition that is left, would be a win in the big one.

Beating Boise State has always been a goal of Idaho's and a tenth straight win over the Broncos would give the seniors something they could be remembered for other than the championship team that never was.

But things don't look good for the Vandals and the sense of confidence that has slipped from the Idaho locker room might take a while to return.

The frustration couldn't have been more evident Saturday as Idaho seemed to play harder than they have in several weeks and still couldn't find a way to win.

But Saturday is now just a record in the statistic book and it is time to move on and forget about what could have been.

Accepting reality is not an easy thing for any person, and for a team that had expectations of a 15-0 season, the pain even burns longer.

UI earns tough split

By KATE LYONS-HOLESTINE
Staff Writer

The UI Vandals rolled over their Big Sky Conference foes, the Nevada Wolf Pack 15-12, 15-4, 15-12, but lost a heartbreaker to Northern Arizona, 14-16, 12-15, 16-14, 15-12, 15-12 in volleyball action last weekend.

From the attack line Heather McEwen, Nancy Wicks, and Dee Porter kept Nevada's defense scrambling throughout the match.

"We are hitting the ball very well," UI coach Tom Hilbert said.

"The outside hitting of Heather was extremely dynamic tonight—I think they could feel it down at the dorms."

"They played the best they've played all year and we just didn't play well at all," Nevada coach Paul Lenae said. "Last week we blew out BSU, we blocked them all, but we just couldn't here."

McEwen recorded four kills in the final game of the match alone.

"We had some great serving from Dee Porter and Brittany-Van Haverbeke. Dee's jump serve was really on tonight," Hilbert added.

Porter served for five points in the first match, had two aces in the second game and one in the final.

The Vandals started slow, but gained momentum to widen the point margin in the second game. In the third and final game, Nevada wasn't rolling over. They fought back after even the slightest Vandal mistake. The UI built a 5-0 lead and Nevada quickly tied the game at six, seven and later at 12 with an ace serve.

Van Haverbeke broke the 12-12 tie, but the ball changed possession. The Vandals quickly regained possession and Porter served the final two points of the game.

McEwen and Wicks added the final two kills for the UI offense behind Porter's serving.

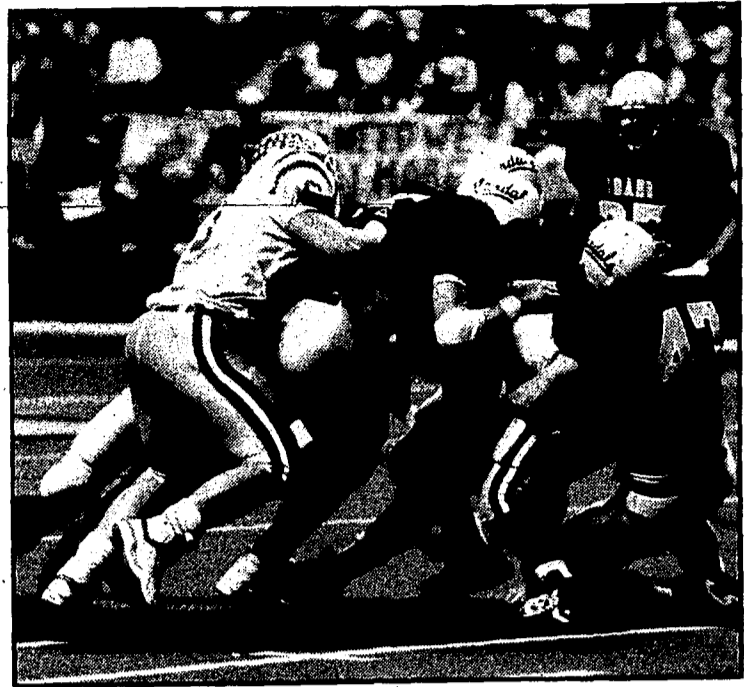

"After (Nevada's) BSU game I was concerned. They pass extremely well and when they're on a roll they're hard to beat," Hilbert said.

Eagle kicker ends Vandal season

By CHRISTOPHER GATEWOOD
Sports Editor

It wasn't pretty but, thank goodness for the Eastern Washington Eagles, it counted.

With the score tied 31-31 in the second overtime period, the Eagles were engaged in a brutal battle with the University of Idaho Vandals. After trying unsuccessfully to run the ball for a first down, EWU coach Dick Zornes called on his kicker Alex Lacson to come in and provide the game winner.

"At that point in the game I wasn't about to do anything risky," Zornes said. "We knew that all we needed to get was that field goal to win."

Lacson came in and hit the kick like he could've done it blindfolded. He didn't kick it well, but he had enough leg to make the wobbly 37-yard kick split the uprights and with it the Vandals hearts.

"The kick was wobbly, but all that mattered was that it went in," said the freshman. "I tried to kick the ball too hard early in the game and missed it."

True, Lacson missed a field goal from that same distance late in the second quarter. But in the second half Lacson compensated and tried not to overhit the ball.

"The main thing I had to do was concentrate," Lacson said. "I just wanted to make sure I hit through the ball and hit it solid."

"I always have qualms about ending a game that way because it's the type of thing that shortens careers," Zornes said. "I have confidence in Alex's ability as a player."

Seldom do kickers have the type of impact on a game that Lacson did. Not only did he hit the game winning field goal, but he hit a 32-yarder that gave the Eagles the lead 24-21 with just under three minutes left in the game.

But his biggest play of the game might have come with 11:20 left in the fourth quarter with the Eagles trailing 21-14. EWU had the ball on the Idaho 14 yard line and faced a fourth and seven situation. A field goal would cut the score to 21-17, but Zornes thought his Eagles might not have another chance to take the lead.

So the Eagles lined up for a field goal and snapped the ball to Lacson, who ran for seven yards and got EWU a first and goal on the seven yard line. Four plays later Eagle quarterback Mark Tenneson hit Tony Brooks for a touchdown to knot the score at 21.

"I've been waiting to do that most of the season," Lacson said. "I should've scored on the play. The blocking was there. I should have cut outside instead of going inside."

Lacson may stand just 5' 10" and weigh 165 lbs., but unlike many kickers he isn't just skin and bones. He's well muscled and looks as if he could just as easily play receiver or defensive back.

"I don't think of Alex as just a kicker, but also a fine athlete," Zornes said.

Lacson is also mature beyond his 19 years of age. Before the game winning kick, the Vandals tried to "ice" Lacson by calling a time out. Many kickers would crumble with this idle time, but not Lacson, who seized the moment to get ready.

"Having the extra time didn't make me nervous," he said. "It helped me focus on the goal posts and get a better look at the kick."

24-of-37 completions with three touchdowns and no interceptions. Not bad for a quarterback, who was averaging just 177 passing yards per game coming into Saturday's performance.

"I thought he played an outstanding football game," EWU coach Dick Zornes said. "He did a good job of finding things in the seams of their zone. We knew they were going to run a cover two and you have to attack the seams first if you want to get anything long later."

That is perhaps the reason Tenneson was able to find his receivers deep in the middle of the zone throughout the second half. Tenneson's biggest completion was a 25-yard touchdown pass to Tony Brooks to give the Eagles a 31-24 lead in the first overtime period. He also hit Brooks with a 17 yard-pass late in the fourth quarter to keep alive the drive that would give the Eagles a 24-21 lead with 2:59 left.

Tenneson also scrambled well in the game, rushing for 44 yards on nine carries. Three of his runs enabled the Eagles to keep alive their last drive of regulation.

"I thought the game was sort of like cat and mouse," Zornes said.

"They had us on the edge a few times, but Mark did some scrambling that allowed us to keep drives alive."

Vandal quarterback Doug Nussmeier wasn't spectacular, completing 19-of-34 passes for 289 yards, but he did lead the Vandals on a two-minute drive late in the game that came up just short.

The drive was all Nussmeier. He started the drive by keeping for three yards, he then hit Yo Murphy on consecutive passes of 12 yards before hitting Dunn with another 12-yarder. Next, he hit Murphy for 13 yards and then kept the ball for 15 more yards giving Idaho first and goal from the seven yard line. But the Vandals just couldn't punch it in.

On third and goal Nussmeier hit Dunn with what looked like a perfect strike, but defensive back Robert Puller made a spectacular play knocking the ball away at the last instant. The Vandals would have to settle for a Thayne Doyle 28-yard field goal that knotted the score at 24.

"The pass was just so close," Dunn said, holding his hands slightly apart. "I couldn't believe it."

"I thought we were going to score," Nussmeier said "I didn't think we were going to have to settle for a field goal."

The Vandals still had the overtime period to win the game. After EWU took a touchdown lead, Nussmeier came right back, hitting Murphy, who had eight catches for 125 yards, with an 18-yard touchdown, knotting the game at 31 after the first overtime period.

After the third coin flip, the Eagles elected to let the Vandals take the ball first from the 25 in the second overtime period. This strategy proved to be costly for the Vandals.

"When you have the ball first in the overtime period, it limits your options because you haven't seen what the other team has done yet," Vandal coach John L. Smith said.

"If you have the ball last offensively, you know whether you need a field goal or a touchdown," Zornes said.

The Vandals had already been stuffed on third and one by linebacker Jason Marsh and now faced fourth and one from the three yard line. The Vandals chose a straight dive and again Marsh stuffed it, allowing Alex Lacson to kick the game winning field goal. Marsh, a former Vandal, led the Eagles with 14 tackles.

Vandal coach John L. Smith couldn't have asked for an off week any sooner than this Saturday.

Regrouping his team may be a painful process, not only with the abundance of injuries, but several coaching questions have come to mind.

When teams are winning it is easy to come out and practice hard and make the effort needed to continue to succeed. But busting your butt with nothing but pride on the line is a different scenario.

The fanfare is now gone and the less than loyal fans (especially the students) might find something better to do on the last two Saturdays of the season.

It is obvious that the players have only one thing to play for. Not a national championship. Not the Big Sky Title. Not even a playoff spot.

The only thing they can play for now is themselves.

It is time for the players to stop worrying about the pressure of winning football games and just go out and play like they are capable of.

Is it that they don't care or that they don't want to put out the effort to win?

If you think that you should ask the players, including senior wide receiver Kasey Dunn who was in tears in the locker room after Saturday's loss, that question.

Every athlete wants to win, and after putting in hour after hour working for success and it doesn't come, it can be the worst feeling in the world.

The Vandals are down, but they're not out.

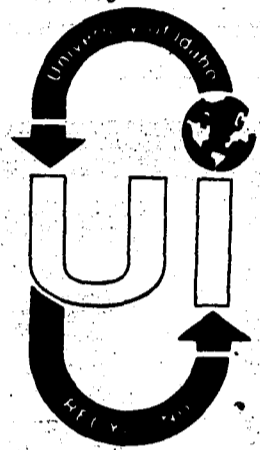

Sure, a 7-4 record wouldn't set the world on fire and after finishing 56-19 over the last six seasons it is hard to compare.

But if Idaho does find a way to win the last three games it probably won't help Vandal fans deal with an off year.

But it will probably help them deal with themselves.

 was an entirely different matter. Although it began with Idaho routing the second place Lumberjacks 2-0 in the first two games, the tide turned quickly and Idaho saw their commanding lead dwindle away painfully. "We had opportunities to win it and didn't, it was basically a lack of experience," said coach Tom Hilbert. Idaho jumped out ahead on the strength of two convincing wins 16-14 and 15-12. The powerful Angel Leath played right into Hilbert's game plan and Idaho held her in check the first two games. "The first two games we completely took her (Leath) out," Hilbert said. Idaho served Leath short, making her approach to the net awkward which crippled her usually lethal spikes. The Vandals held Leath to 19 kills in 59 attempts. They continued to dominate after starting the third game 5-0. But NAU being a good team battled back and tied the game at 5-5 with a questionable line call. NAU and Idaho traded side outs and points until Idaho was serving for game and match point at 14-10. "We just didn't finish it at the end of game three," Vandal standout Dee Porter said. "Our serving had much to be desired in the third game," Idaho setter Amie Hanks said. Game four found Idaho committing unforced errors left and right. NAU took advantage of Idaho's ineptness and came back to lead Idaho 14-11. But dependable server Amie Hanks got the ball into play and VanHaverbeke blocked Leath's spike, Hanks set to Porter who blistered one past NAU blockers to up the ante 14-12, still in NAU's favor. The fifth game saw Idaho and NAU locked at three. Both teams' intensity level was at full tilt. NAU scored an important ace to make it 13-11 in their favor and Idaho couldn't recover. The missed serves caught up to the Vandal netters and they dropped the match 15-12. The loss was disappointing but Idaho can still make it to the post-season tournament by winning three of the next four scheduled league matches. Tonight's match is non-league and features LCSC in Memorial Gym at 7:30 p.m.

Vandal women take cross country title

By DOUG BAUER
Staff Writer

Walking away with the team title at the Wandermere Invitational last weekend, the University of Idaho Vandals women's cross country team is ready to travel to Salt Lake City and participate in the District Seven cross country tournament.

Seven teams participated at the Wandermere, including Eastern Washington University, Gonzaga University, Bellevue Community College, Spokane Community College, Clark College, and Green River College.

EWU finished 30 points behind the Vandals with a score of 56, while Gonzaga took third place honors with an 87.

"The most important thing was that we needed some real solid races from our group," women's coach Scott Lorek said. "I was really surprised with our team running such solid races."

When Lorek speaks of running solid, he is most definitely not joking around. The Vandals had five runners place in the top ten, with Keri Krebsbach leading the way, finishing in second place overall. Robyn Slate was not far behind her, crossing the finish line in third place.

"Keri and Robyn ran excellent races in California (Cal Poly SLO Invitational, October 18), these races this weekend were also just as solid," Lorek said. "Keri has just ran a real solid race every meet, her consistency has been absolutely wonderful."

The District meet will be held in Salt Lake City November 16. All cross country teams from the Big Sky Conference, the Western Athletic Conference and all the independents in the area will be at the meet.

Representing the Vandals will be Keri Krebsbach, Dianne Knudson, Robyn Slate, Angie Falk, Laura Moore and Tara Edwards. The seventh spot is yet to be decided.

The Vandal men's team finished fifth in the twelve team tournament, behind Washington State University, who had the top three runners; Moscow USA, a team club; EWU and Gonzaga.

A bright spot for the Vandals was the return of Mark Olden. Olden raced in the last few tournaments, but he had run more for physical conditioning than for competition.

"Mark ran exceptionally well," assistant cross country coach Marcus Dunbar said. "He finally raced well for the first time since his injury."

The injury that Dunbar is referring to is an achillo-bursitis injury in the ankle that Olden acquired last spring.

The next finisher for the Vandals was Ty Koellman, who finished in the mid twenties. Troy Holman, Adam Bray, and Jason Brenton rounded out the top five Vandal finishers, coming in the 30, 31, and 32 positions.

WSU's Josephat Kapkory and Samuel Kibiri tied for the win, both finishing at 25:05, a convincing 40 seconds before the next finisher, E.J. Guo, also from WSU.

The men's team will also be making the trip to Salt Lake City. Olden, Brenton, Holman, Bray and Koellman are the set runners for now, while Darren Kotsovos is questionable.

"He's kind of a wild card for us right now," Dunbar said. "Most of the training that he's doing right now is being done in the pool."

Parapsychology course offered at UI

By PATRICK J. TRAPP
Contributing Writer

If you've ever had an out-of-body experience, a premonition that something was going to happen, or just tinkered with a Ouija Board, then UI has a class that might interest you.

The parapsychology class taught by Professor James Crandall offers an objectional look into such oversensationalized paranormal activities as ESP, telepathy, psychokinesis, poltergeists, and hauntings.

If you are looking for a semester extension of a Time Life Book commercial, though ("He was from the same small town as me, and his name was John, just like me"), you may be disappointed. Crandall's class is full of case statistics, and experiments offering an objective view of stories of paranormal activity. The class could be called the battle between the skeptic and the believer.

"I don't like to tell (the students) what I believe about these things because that would be biasing," Crandall said. "I like the students to be able to go over the evidence and make up their own mind. The last thing in the world that I want to do is convert people."

Though this is the time of the year most associated with ghosts and spirits, Crandall said that there is no correlation between Halloween and the paranormal.

"There is no evidence showing that there is more paranormal activity around Halloween," Crandall said. "I think that it's just all the ghost stories that make it seem that way."

The weird stories are the most intriguing aspect of parapsychology and certainly the most entertaining. At the beginning of the semester, students are asked to anonymously write down any paranormal experiences they have had. Over the years, Crandall has received some bizarre accounts. Here are a few samples: believe it, or not!

■ A woman, asleep in the passenger seat of a moving car, dreamt that her car was involved in an accident. Suddenly she woke up, and the car beside darted in front of them and slammed on its brakes. The collision was unavoidable. No one was hurt.

■ Here in Moscow, a student took a picture of "something" she thought she saw in a local cemetery. She developed the print and what appeared looked like a radiating ball of light. The developer said that he had for years developed photos from so-called "spirit photographers" and in every case, there was always a rational explanation, yet this was the only instance in which he could find no reasonable explanation.

■ Three UI students began to experience poltergeist-related activities after moving into a house. The lighting and water power in the house would frequently fail to work. After checking on the house, the Washington Water Power company found absolutely nothing wrong with their electricity. One of the residents of the house noticed a terrible stench in his clothes, even after they had been washed, another characteristic of poltergeist. Where this house is located was never revealed.

"Fake" magician to appear Wednesday

C. Shaw Smith: magician and political insider.

The Political Concerns Board is sponsoring a speaker to address the subject of Political Motivation. C. Shaw Smith, will present his speech to UI students at the Administration Auditorium on October 30th at 7 p.m., free of charge.

"He makes it so much fun to be there...just because he's such a great speaker", said Christy Kretschmer, the chair of the PCB. Smith will also speak at the RHA Internmountain Affiliate of College and University Resident Halls conference to be held this week.

"The way C. Shaw incorporates his years of experience with college students...is an occasion not to be missed", said Kretschmer. She said that he is a motivational speaker who tells students how to get up off the couch and get involved with the real world.

Smith, a former director of student services at North Carolina State University, is an active member of the Democratic Party. He is well-known for his talent as a magician, as well as for his wit and humor.

Satanist leader reveals secret highway to success

By T.S. HATECRAFT
Unknown Cult Leader

So, you want to start a devil-worshipping cult. Welcome to the club. You probably have visions of sex, power, glory, money, and eternal damnation. Well, I'm here to tell you, it ain't all that pretty. Before you get to the fun stuff, there is a lot of preparation that few people consider. I am not saying that recreational Satanism isn't a lot of fun, but to make money at it as well, you have to get organized.

Start by taking a long critical look at yourself in the mirror. Do you have what it takes to motivate people? Remember the key here is not beauty, but distinctiveness. People must not forget you. Large scars are ideal, but any grotesque facial feature can be worked to your advantage. If you have squinty-beady eyes, shave off your eyebrows to accent them; a long nose is just begging for a wart, although a zit will do in an emergency; sideburns all the way down your cheeks or a narrow waxed mustache can turn on otherwise featureless face into an incarnation of evil (particularly if you are female.)

Once your appearance is in tip-top condition, it is time to get your props together. This is where a little planning and foresight can greatly reduce your capital expenditure. The accessories are going to fall into the categories of Arcane Literature, Ceremonial Aids, Pyrotechnics, and Living Sacrifices.

Good Devil-worshipping literature is at a premium these days. The Necronomicon is a good place to start and is commonly available in better occult book catalogs. Stay away from the New Age bookstores. New Age religion just doesn't have enough fear and guilt associated with it to create the resentment that is so essential. Hebrew literature is ideal, the Old Testament is just filled with ways to burn in Hell. I have found that the Benediction read backwards is just the ticket for a tough crowd.

Remember when looking at the big thick books, power is the name of the game. You are not in this to become a scholar, so you don't actually have to understand any of what you're reading. Just find some interesting papers to read aloud during the ceremonies and you'll do just fine.

I won't say much about sacrifices, except that Ozzie thought it was a rubber bat. Chickens, sheep, goats, etc. all smell bad and bleed a lot. It is much better to tell everyone about the big sacrifice they missed last week. That way the word gets around with a minimum amount of clean-up required. Red Tempura mixed thick with salt and a dusting of iron filings will substitute in most recipes calling for real blood.

As for human sacrifices, leave that to the big-boys. Sure, a quick and brutal slaying may appeal to your sense of drama, but it is bound to get the neighbors talking.

Speaking of neighbors, it is about time to recruit some cult members: After all, being by yourself in the woods, naked and chanting, gets old quickly. Naked rituals, a holdover from witchcraft traditions, mandate that you start the cult with attractive members of the opposite sex. Try this line next time at the bar: "Say, how's about coming over to my place for a seance and some dangerous wrestling with knives."

If you have done your homework, your new friends will enjoy the festivities so much that they will tell their friends, and your activities will get bigger and bigger. You will be well on your way to cult leader status. When planning your cult get-togethers, follow these three rules:

1. Have lots of snacks available for both hardcore and new members both. New recruits usually get turned-off at the sight of blood, so include some veggies and cold luncheon meats.

2. Try to have everyone memorize each other's names, or go for name tags. A group that knows one another is much more likely to stay together through thick and thin.

3. Offer door prizes and awards for attendance-for-past cult get-togethers.

The actual ceremonial items can be as simple or as elaborate as you wish. Make sure that you have plenty of candles, chalk for pentagrams, ink made from icky-slimy things, and of course, the Black Mass.

Originally made of baked human fecal material, Black Sabbath (B.S.) is considerably more enjoyable when an alternate ingredient is used (see the Betty Crocker Cookbook for fecal substitutes).

Perhaps the most important ceremonial item remains the idol. Remember that this represents Lucifer, Prince of Lies, Lord of the Flies, the Old One himself. Please do not use a Cabbage Patch doll. One of the more effective Satanic idols that I have ever seen was just a large rock. Simple, effective, and oh-so cheap. Dress it up with your choice of ruins and you are set.

Finally, what would a movie be without special effects. Pyrotechnics, as we in the trade call it, is what sets the amateur Satanist apart from the professional cult leader. Start simple with the flash-paper found in most magic stores. Try using it to punctuate important sentences or indicate a successful demon conjure.

So, how does all of this effort put money in your pocket? For this racket to pay you need to make the most of the two Satanic sub-fields of drugs and extortion.

Good Luck! See you on Gerardo.

Truth more frightening than Halloween spooks

Commentary by TANYA MADISON
Staff Writer

My fellow journalists think that Satan worship and dismembered bodies are scary. Me, I think that's kid's stuff. What is so scary about people who don't wear goat horns and dance naked in wheat fields at night? If I see a guy wandering my neighborhood in a hockey mask, I assume his face is broken out from too many Mars bars.

No, I'm much harder to scare. I feed Milkbones to werewolves. I send vampires to the dentist. I would encourage a witch to use Compound-W and intergrate pastels into her wardrobe.

Other things frighten me. Things that are unspeakably evil. So I'll try to write about them instead.

I think Zsa-Zsa Gabor is scary. I think she is either a Muppet experiment gone very wrong, or Jimmy Hoffa in drag. I don't think he is buried in a football stadium. I think he is wearing fake fur and terrorizing Beverly Hills policemen.

I am frightened by frozen food. I think the Hanford facility is really a dummy company for a frozen food enterprise. The gelatinous mass on your Salisbury surprise once powered a nuclear submarine.

Tabloids are frightening. Not because they exist. Not because they stretch the limits of reality beyond infinity. They are scary because they are addictive. More than chocolate, sex, or crack. Once you've read that a "95 year old virgin gives birth to own brother, meets Elvis for cocktails," you are hooked. You can never stand in line again before subtly checking on Oprah's latest diet or the dog-boy who flunked out of obedience school.

The Gorgeous Ladies of Wrestling. Need I say more?

People who think Arnold Schwarzenegger is a great actor are not only scary, they need professional help. They need to know that "Hasta la vista, baby" does not rank up there with "Frankly my dear, I don't give a damn" in the annals of tremendous movie history.

Televangelists. They are evidence that Satan has a sense of humor. But when you think about it, what is more terrifying than polyester wearing, hooker visiting, pseudo-intellectuals who want to take possession of your soul (and your house, and your car, and your bank account)?

No, I'm sorry. You can show me Friday the 13th until Reagan gets a conscience but you'll never convince me that a few deranged lunatics with axes protruding from their craniums have anything on reality. After all, you can always change the channel on Norman Bates.

The terror within the jewelery box

By LESLIE ALEXANDER
Staff Writer

The story you are about to read is based on a true life experience of, perhaps, unknown supernatural powers. To protect the privacy of the individual who encountered this ghostly spirit, I will use a fictional name.

"My name is Jody Lewis and I live in large house by myself. I am an ordinary college student and have lived in Moscow, Idaho all my life.

"I was very close to my grandparents until the death of my grandmother in 1985 and my grandfather in June of 1991. Well, it wasn't until my grandfather's death that strange things started happening in the house. First of all, sometimes when I would be sitting upstairs watching T.V. a cold draft would come along. I usually checked the windows to see if I had left any windows open, but all had been shut.

"On occasion I had felt like someone or something had been watching me when I was working on my studies. I then took my studying to the SUB.

"As I opened the door the old fashioned blue lamp my grandparents once owned had turned on all by itself. I stared at the lamp. The jewelery box my grandmother gave me (that was on top of my dresser) turned on all by itself. (It's one of those boxes that you have to wind up to get it to play.) I got goose bumps and right when I was ready to freak out both the lamp and the jewelery box shut off.

"I didn't know what to do or if I should tell anyone what had happened. I was afraid people wouldn't believe me or would think I was going crazy."

Jody Lewis has been one of only thousands of people who have encountered some unknown supernatural power, and it will remain a mystery of why such occurrences happen. So, if you know of someone, or you've experienced anything like this, don't be surprised if someone or something is watching you.

"I didn't know what to do or if I should tell anyone what had happened. I was afraid people wouldn't believe me or would think I was going crazy."

"It was on September 16th that I finally knew my house was haunted by one or both of my grandparents. It was 11:30 on a beautiful Monday morning and I had just finished my breakfast. I then went to get dressed and started for my bedroom.

Death on a country road

By KORINNE BODILY
Fiction Writer

Our old car rambled down the road, dust flying behind us. To be honest, it always scared me a little to ride around in the dark. As the three of us rushed home from a little soiree, the moon glowed across the grain entombed road. And no other cars had passed us for at least twenty minutes.

Rounding the corner by the old Moody farmhouse, it looked like something was in the road up ahead. Closer and closer we drove. Deeper and deeper the fear settled. A human body lay in the road.

Resisting the urge to speed away, I pulled to the side of the road. My sister and Renee climbed out and I locked all the doors.

Then they came from everywhere. I don't know how we didn't see them before. There were so many. The blank looks on their faces were inhuman. And then I couldn't see anything but a wall of strangers. I guess I panicked.

Ten minutes later I was in town. Alone in the car.

When they went back out to that field, there was nothing. Nothing, that is, except the tip of Renee's pinky finger, and one of my sister's loafers soaked in goat's blood.

I thought the horror would end there.

My mind was numb and cold like the dark wind. I sat in the hospital room with a towel wrapped around me. The nurse was trying hard to get me to take some valium in a cup of hot chocolate. I couldn't eat. A cop kept questioning me. "What did you see?" "Eyes."

The nurse checked my pulse and the questions droned on. A picture in my mind appeared of Renee, her face bloody, came into view. Cyclopean eyes, like those of cows, blinked and winked in bloodlust at her dying flesh. My toes curled like party toys. My heart skipped one beat, then another. The cow eyes curled into squinting grins. I took my last breath, puked on the cop, and fell to the cold floor with tiles shaped like dogs.

"There was nothing there...except the tip of Renee's pinky finger, and one of my Sister's loafers soaked in goat's blood."

The paramedics revived me a few minutes later. I felt my mind clouded with thoughts I'd never before experienced. I couldn't control my limbs. I knew then that I was to forever wander country lanes, feasting on the flesh of unwary teenagers.

sent, and in the future. The fact that it (alcohol consumption) has been done in the past and students have died, and that it happens now and students are dying, and that it will continue and students will continue to die is all the more reason to search for a solution and change.

If the fraternity to which Scott was a pledge can no longer have alcohol on the premises indicates a lack of responsibility on someone's part to handle alcohol. Is this the U of I president's, the legislator's, President Bush's, or the fraternity members fault? You tell me.

In conclusion, I have had family members die in accidents that have and have not involved alcohol. I understand the feeling of sorrow which accompany these kinds of tragedies, but I also maintain that it was no ones fault other than those involved directly that the tragedy happened, assuming they were not forced to do anything they did not want to, but this is a topic of its own.

bank portfolios of the western states are strongly composed of loans to ranchers utilizing federal grazing areas. The Western District Farm Credit Council and the Idaho Bankers Association report that higher grazing fees would cause western banks to default. In fact, 60%, 43%, and 16% of the bank loans in Utah, Northeastern California and Arizona, respectively, would default if federal grazing fees were raised dramatically. In the state of Idaho, $350 million are in livestock loans. With the 200-400% increase in grazing fees proposed by some members of congress, 90% of Idaho's livestock loans would default. This astounding default rate would be caused by the fact that banks lend money based on cash flow: when the expenses exceed the income or when margins become too narrow, they are not able to make loans. The truth is that the western senators can see what this loss would do to the economy of the western states. It is the western senators that deserve our thanks, not Senators Metzenbaum and Jeffords.
