Martin wins award

Boyd Martin, who has devoted all his professional life to the cause of peace, has won the Distinguished Idahoan Award from the University of Idaho Alumni Association.

The director of the Martin Institute for Peace Studies and Conflict Resolution was honored at a reception Oct. 25.

Martin is only the third recipient of the award since it was established in 1979. The most recent was former U.S. Ambassador Philip Habib, who was honored by the UI Alumni Association in 1983.

A native of Cottonwood, Idaho, Martin earned his bachelor's degree in political science from the UI in 1936. He joined the political science faculty in 1938, and in 1945, attended the first United Nations conference in San Francisco.

Martin was named dean of the College of Letters and Science in 1955, at age 44, making him one of the youngest deans in the country.

In 1970, he left the dean's post to become Borah's distinguished professor of political science, the first teaching chairmanship established at the UI. He retired in 1973 after more than 35 years of service to the university.

During the early years of World War II, Martin and his late wife, Grace, invested their life savings of $800 toward their dream of one day establishing an institute dedicated to the study of peace and the discovery of alternatives to conflict.

By 1979 their $800 had grown to nearly $1 million, enough to create the Boyd and Grace Martin Institute of Human Behavior at the UI. The name was changed in 1990 to the Martin Institute for Peace Studies and Conflict Resolution to further clarify the institute's primary purpose.

Among his numerous honors, Martin was named to the UI Alumni Hall of Fame, won the Idaho Statesman Distinguished Citizen Award, and captured the Service Award of the National Association of the Partners of the Americas.

Two UI employees Olympics-bound

By JEFF OLSON
UI Communications' Office

When the 1992 Winter Olympics begin in Albertville, France, this February, two UI employees will be there, competing for Olympic glory on the bobsled course.

Chris Stokes, UI business manager, is brakeman for the Jamaican bobsled team, and Trond Knaplund, assistant track coach, is the pilot for the Norwegian bobsled team.

As unlikely as it may be that two UI employees would be Olympic bobsledders, it's even more unlikely that the university would become the sight of an impromptu Olympic bobsled training camp.

But it has.

For the past three weeks, the Jamaican bobsled team has been working out in the Kibbie Dome weight room, running on the track and practicing their starts on the track, using a bobsled frame on wheels.

"When we decided to start this year's training program, I invited my brother Tal, who's the driver of the team," said Stokes.

"He said it was such a good idea he brought the other two men on the four-man team up here." The other Jamaican team members are John McFarlane and Michael White.

Since Stokes and Knaplund regularly train together, it was only logical for the Norwegian to work out with the Jamaicans, making the training camp an international event.

The bobsledders are preparing for a series of World Cup races over the next two months. The first races, warm-ups for Olympic competition, are at the end of October in Calgary, Alberta.

Stokes and Knaplund were both track athletes at the UI in the mid-'80s, earning undergraduate and masters degrees from the institution. But they followed different paths into the sport of bobsledding.

Music department head resigns position

By DOUG TAYLOR
Staff Writer

Dr. Robert Miller, the director of the Lionel Hampton School of Music for five years, has decided to resign. His resignation will be effective as of December 1, 1991.

Miller currently teaches a full load of classes in addition to his duties as director of the School of Music. He cited his desire to get back into full-time teaching as the primary reason for his resignation.

"I can't do justice to both positions. The time has come for me to develop my teaching skills further because I love to teach and it's my chosen profession," said Miller.

Miller also spoke highly of the students who are currently in the music department. He listed this as another reason for him to teach on a full-time basis.

"I have a full studio of excellent students here in the music department who are both dedicated and ambitious. So the moment is right to get back into full-time teaching," said Miller.

University Communications Director Terry Mauer who is a friend of Miller's concurred with Miller's reasons for his resignation.

"He basically told me that both teaching and directing the music department was impossible because he couldn't do justice to either job," said Bauer. "He wanted to do the thing he loves best, and that is return back to the classroom."

Doyle Anderegg, associate dean of the College of Letters and Science, said that an acting director will be chosen to direct the school for the remainder of this year. According to Anderegg, this acting director will also help supervise the search for a permanent director.

"The school has grown under his direction, and I think the faculty has been pleased with his direction," said Anderegg.

Craig Landron who takes saxophone lessons from Dr. Miller was happy to see him return to the classroom.

"It is good to see him return to the thing he enjoys most which is teaching in the classroom," said Landron.

Miller came to the U of I on August 1, 1986 from Stephen F. Austin State University in Texas. He replaced Greg Steinke who directed the school of music from 1983 to 1986.

As director of the music department, Miller revised and broadened its undergraduate and graduate curriculum which included developing arts administration, pedagogy/performance programs and music and business.

Miller teaches saxophone and woodwind techniques and graduate courses in music education, theory and history.

UI fish lab still dormant

By SHARI IRETON
Staff Writer

After the death of 4,400 chinook salmon, the University of Idaho fisheries laboratory at the College of Forestry, Wildlife and Range Sciences is still closed from chlorine contamination.

However, the future is looking brighter for researchers and scientists.

The university has almost completed the modifications in the lab's water filtration system and will soon have a fresh stock of salmon transported from central Washington.

Last August, during the UI campus boil order, the university used heavily chlorinated water from campus. City water was not used because it was chlorinated five times higher than university water. The lab has since been on the city's water system, which now chlorinates its water at slightly lower levels.

Ken Hall of the UI Physical Plant, said they placed the importance of human safety ahead of research projects when increasing the amount of chlorine in the water. The campus had been subjected to four boil orders in the period of about one year, and was taking no more chances. The lab was hoping their active carbon filtration system would make the campus water non-toxic to the fish. The system includes three carbon filters and each filter has the life expectancy of seven to ten years. The new ones were installed five years ago.

Unfortunately, the filters didn't work well enough, killing about $100,000 worth of salmon. Virtually all of the salmon were being used for studies in bacterial kidney disease.

RHA holds conference at UI

By SHARI IRETON
Staff Writer

Little is known to the every day University of Idaho student about the Resident Halls Association, but this week, they will host their regional conference.

The UI RHA will hold the Intermountain Affiliate of College and University Resident Halls (IACURH) conference for the north west region here in Moscow. The conference will run from Thursday morning until Saturday night.

RHA representatives from over thirty schools, including New Mexico, Arizona, Montana, Colorado, Utah, British Columbia, Alberta and Saskatchewan, will visit the campus.

Around 300 students from these areas will be attending the conference.

Ray Horton, UI RHA President and co-chair of the conference, said that the agenda will include over 40 programs in six program sessions. These programs are divided into three categories: personal, school and global.

"These programs deal with everything from drug and alcohol abuse to developing leadership skills," said Horton. Campus crime, AIDS, the environment, running effective meetings and dealing with student leader problems will also be discussed.

Two guest speakers have been invited to talk to the delegates at the conference.

The first, C. Shaw Smith, is a magician and motivational

Take a walk down Arbor Lane

By Christian Thompson
Staff Writer

How do you remember an occasion? Do you take pictures only to see them go undeveloped because of mistakes at the printers? Here at the University of Idaho something entirely different is done. We commemorate an occasion through a living thing by planting a tree.

The UI is famous for its tree-lined Hello Walk (which is the diagonal sidewalk running to the Administration Building) grand monarchs shading the sidewalk, creating an aura of safety and seclusion. The walk received its name from Theodore Roosevelt who, when visiting UI in 1911, walked down the sidewalk, shaking hands with anyone who passed him and said "Hello."

But there are other important trees. In fact, the Admin lawn is covered with them.

The UI has planted trees to commemorate 100 years of cooperation between the city of Moscow and the university, to celebrate Silver and Gold Day, to commemorate the 50th Anniversary of the Borah Foundation, and to celebrate the George Washington Bicentennial.

Trees have been planted by such dignitaries as Theodore Roosevelt, 26th U.S. President, William Harvard Taft, 27th U.S. President, Thomas R. Marshall, 28th U.S. President, Charles Curtis, 31st U.S. Vice President, Anna Eleanor Roosevelt, Human Rights advocate and wife of 32nd U.S. President, Frank C. Church, U.S. Senator from 1957-1981, and Philip C. Habib, 1942 U.S. Envoy Diplomat, Ambassador. All of these people commemorated their visit with a tree.

So ... take the time to stroll along Hello Walk and say "Hello." Admire all of the trees, and read the plaques. This is part of U.S. history and the university's history.

speaker. He will encourage the students on reasons for why it is important to be a student leader.

Will Keim will also speak to the students on how to effectively deal with problems faced on campus. He will tell them how being a student leader will benefit the delegates for the rest of their life.

The agenda will also include movies, dances, casion night, aerobics and other fun items for the delegates to participate in.

Horton said that having the conference here was an advantage for UI because it gave all student leaders a chance to attend.

"A lot of the hall officers and R.A.'s will be exposed to a lot of good ideas from other schools."

The UI RHA was nominated with six other schools last year for the National School of the Year award

Horton said that last year the university submitted a bid against Utah State Unvieristy to have the conference held here.

"Usually it's a big deal to get to host one," remarked Robin Gentry, who is a National Communications Coordinator and in charge of scheduling hospitality and fund raisers for the conference.

"I'm excited!" exclaimed Mary Paradise, who is also a National Communications Coordinator and banquet chair for the conference. She said that alot of hard work has been put into the conference and hopes that everything will "pull together".

Paradise and Gentry also said that the annual conferences have "really brought the RHA together". Instead of having separate halls or schools, they said, you have one big group of students with a common interest: student leadership.

RHA said that the programming sessions are open to any interested UI students. For more information about IACURH, contact the UI RHA at 885-5948.

sport was the result of a telephone call from Tal. The Jamaican team, competing at the '88 Olympics in Calgary, needed another member. The call came on Wednesday, and the race was the following Monday.

Stokes jumped on a plane and arrived in time to watch a few practice runs. His first ride in a bobsled was in an Olympic heat.

"That was my introduction to the bobsled," said Stokes.

As a brakeman, Stokes' job is to push the sled at the start, and stop the sled at the end of the race.

"I have to concentrate and get my speed up as quickly as possible," said Stokes.

"Once that is over I'm pretty much along for the ride."

Knaplund has another set of responsibilities during the race. As pilot, he steers the bobsled, at speeds of up to 100 miles an hour, through the 14 to 19 icy turns on the bobsled course. Some people might think of it as being out on the edge. And an icy edge it is.

"When you drive really well and do all the right things, it's never being out on the edge or in danger," said Knaplund. "However, that might not be the fastest way of getting down the course."

Knaplund found his way into bobsledding several years ago while coaching sports in Norway. The Norwegian Bobsled Federation was looking for athletes to train in the sport. Knaplund applied, was tested and nominated to train as a pilot.

Both Knaplund and Stokes are excited about the chance to compete in the Winter Olympics, but the two friends haven't really thought about competing against each other.

"I wish we could compete together on the same team," said Knaplund. "That would

While the two UI employees can't compete together on the same team, they do plan to take a practice run together down the bobsled course at Calgary.

"We'll take a two-man sled down the course," said Stokes, "just myself and Trond."

"We'll see what it would be like to have a University of Idaho bobsled team."

Washington, will be supplying more than 4,000 salmon replacements, said UI fisheries professor and researcher Christine Moffit.

The cost of the modifications to eliminate the chlorine in the lab has cost the college close to $15,000 including labor.

Equality lacking in pre-registration system

What do students with last names starting with H, I or J have to do to register first around here? Start a riot? Believe me, the thought was extremely tempting to me after I picked up the Spring semester time schedule last Tuesday.

This is my fifth semester at the University of Idaho and I still remember the old Dome registration system that was formerly used. The university has now set up the new computer/phone pre-registration and SUB fee payment to save the students time and trouble. Who do they think they are kidding?

Some of us H — J seniors and juniors who still need to fulfill our core requirements are being beat out of classes by freshmen, just because their names are different. Does this make any sense whatsoever? So far, every semester that I have attended UI has resulted in me pre-registering last or second to last.

According to the registrar's office, to whom I have complained about this "minor" setback, the order of the names are supposed to rotate. When are they going to rotate them ... every decade??!!

I still need to take some classes that are only offered during the spring semester, but usually the way it works is that by the time I can get to the computers to pre-register, all I see is "CLOSED".

Even the 100 level classes like Economics are a pain to pre-register for because if your section is closed, you are forced to rearrange your entire schedule. This usually leaves you with 8:30's every day of the week, or night classes.

It was worse when I was a science major, because the only open labs or recitations would just happen to be during a class (the only open one out of all 20). So, I would pick up my pencil, grab the time schedule and the hell would start all over again.

Those people with the lucky names that start with an A or a Z at least get to switch from first to last every semester.

According to some people, the reason only the first and last of the alphabet get to go first, is because they are the ones who complain. O.K., I'm complaining and I want something done! Everyone one of you H — J students, go to the registrar's office and complain ... LOUDLY!

I am just extremely angry and fed up with the university! I pay a lot of money to attend the university that my mother had so much faith in when she came here. The educational opportunities here are exceptional, but the system needs a lot of work.

Someday, us H, I and J students may actually get to pre-register first. Until then, patience, lots of time and perseverance will see us through our school years.

Result of Thomas hearings unclear

It seemed as if the entire nation watched the senate hearings concerning Clarence Thomas' suspected sexual harassment of University of Oklahoma law professor Anita Hill.

The end result of these hearings was unclear because no conclusive evidence was collected to accuse Thomas of sexual harassment. The only thing that seemed to be evident was that we, the people, have disgraceful representation in the U.S. Senate. I was almost embarrassed by the unorganized way in which the hearings were conducted. Not only were the Senator's questions vague and irrelevant, but they were often redundant.

This poor showing by our nation's senators, however, is not the main part of the big picture. The biggest ramification of these hearings is that Clarence Thomas was confirmed as a judge to the highest court in the nation simply on the basis of his poise in the hearings. His election to the United States Supreme Court didn't seem to be based on his qualifications as a judge. Instead, his confirmation by Senate vote seemed to be based on his honesty and composure when questioned by the committee about his dealings with Professor Hill.

Doug Taylor Commentary

Now Clarence Thomas sits on a court which has more impact on our everyday lives than President Bush because the Supreme Court hands down decisions on everything from search and seizure laws to the death penalty. The real frightening part of Judge Thomas' confirmation is that he shows bias by claiming to be a conservative which tilts the

Those who take risks are responsible

Editor;
Drunk driving accidents are caused by those who choose to get behind the wheel of a car after they have been drinking. They are not caused by rules, regulations or laws that try to protect society from people who choose to take risks with their own and other peoples' lives.

Instead of using the terrible accident that claimed Mr. Mondahl's life to grind his axe with the University, Mr. Lawson could have used the letter as an opportunity to plead with his peers to reevaluate the choices they make concerning alcohol. I doubt that the car carrying Mr. Mondahl and his friends was the only one in the Moscow area being driven by a drunk driver this weekend. They just weren't as lucky as some of the others.

When a young adult comes to a university, he or she makes many choices that will affect their future. When this weekend comes, I hope the students who choose to drink will also choose not to get behind the wheel of a car. That choice could make it possible for them to make others in the future.

Change to greek system much needed

Editor;
It is the opinion of most middle aged adults. It is the opinion of politicians, school administrators and officials. It is the opinion of the majority of the people who are not affected by the law. No, I am not talking about the drinking age being under 21, nor the laws that involve drinking and driving. I am talking about the laws that IFC has irrefutably enforced on the Greek System.

The Inter-Fraternity Council is taking a position that is not rightfully theirs. When you have alcohol in your own home, the law cannot come into your house and punish you for it. IFC is able to act beyond the law and come into "Greek Houses" and penalize us for an act that is beyond their jurisdiction.

Students are going to drink, of age or not. It's a way to relieve the stress and pressure of college that seems unavoidable. IFC's laws are forcing both of age and under age students to drink off campus, whether it be at the bars, apartments, or at Robinson Lake. This action is obviously going to cause more problems than it will cure. Not only could it hurt the individuals that are drinking, but it will inevitably hurt the innocent people on the streets.

Who is to blame for such consequences? This is a question the Student Affairs and IFC should ask themselves when enforcing more strict policies to keep alcohol off campus. Is it lives of U of I students we are worried about, or the political reputation of the University?

It seems as though Student Affairs Administration thinks that the greek system is just a social center for partying. Fraternities and Sororities contribute a tremendous amount of scholastic achievement for the individuals and education itself.

This is all great, but if IFC keeps swinging their magic wand around at the rate they have been, the 90 years of directing and cultivating the intellect of the individuals in the greek system will merely be an image of the past.

What can we do about it? We need more letters like this one, protesting IFC's laws, written to IFC, Student Affairs, and the Argonaut. We need to ban together, abolish IFC's laws and start from scratch. We are the ones affected by the laws, not the political system that forces IFC to make these laws. Therefore, they need to come to terms with us, not us with them.

balance of the court decidedly towards conservatism.

By being impartial and fair, the U.S. Supreme Court represents a place where justice can be served. However, if it is biased towards one political party then its decisions are simply catering to the interests of that group. This travesty of justice within the U.S. Supreme Court will affect the lives of everyday people. It is also important to keep in mind that judges on the Supreme Court sit on the court for life because there is no term limitation. This may magnify the problem of political bias in a huge way.

The solution to these problems is that the people of this nation should vote on candidates for the Supreme Court rather than the U.S. Senate. The U.S. Senate has strayed from the idea of representation of their respective states due to influencing of lobbying groups. Due to the influence the Supreme Court has on people's everyday lives, it is time for the people to choose candidates rather than lobbying group-conscious Senators.

Taking things for granted

If there's one thing I've learned, people always take things for granted. Men take their girlfriends for granted, women take their boyfriends for granted, we all take our families for granted and, lastly, we take our American culture for granted.

Last week I was giving a young lady named Lane Graciano a ride home. Lane is from Indonesia and is now going to the University of Idaho and working for the Argonaut as a writer.

While sitting in the car, I asked her if she had seen any of the World Series. Her response was a look so blank, you'd thought I'd just asked to take her clothes off. I quickly realized why I got such a look. She had no idea what I was talking about. I had just taken it for granted that she should know something about our national pastime. Why shouldn't she know anything about baseball? I mean, everyone in the world knows that little bit of American culture.

But that's the problem — not everybody thinks the sun rises and sets on the American way of life. I'm afraid I must put myself in the narrow-minded group of people that think our culture is the only culture.

Lane explained to me that proof reading my articles was like reading hieroglyphics. She simply didn't understand the terminology. In other words, she was sports illiterate.

I asked if her if she wanted me to explain some of the basics and she looked mildly interested. So I gave it a try, a weak try. Let me put it this way, if there's ever a course offered called baseball 101, I shouldn't be the one teaching it. Here is, chronologically, my feeble attempt at explaining baseball.

■ INNINGS — I quickly realized explaining this would be similar to pulling teeth. Lane asked why it was called an inning. I honestly can't tell you where the name inning came

Vandals hammer NAIA LCSC

By SEV HOINESS
Staff Writer

Tuesday night the Vandal volleyball team romped to an easy victory over the Lewis Clark State College Warriors in three straight games 15-3, 15-4, 15-5.

The Vandals have been playing great volleyball as of late and the Warriors crossed their path at a bad time. Idaho's head Coach Tom Hilbert took the opportunity to give reps to some players that haven't gotten much of chance to play since the league matches kicked in. "We served the ball tough and LCSC didn't really get into a rhythm," said Hilbert. "They're a lot better than they played. They beat us a game down at their place."

LCSC did exhibit some talent during several rallies where they dug and blocked Idaho successfully. LCSC rambled for three straight points in game three after an Idaho net violation, but were never a threat to upset Hilbert's superior squad.

One other bright spot for the Warriors was a solid service game lead by Tammy Jennings who aced Idaho in game two.

Idaho didn't play intense or with the ornery attitude they've adopted during the season and that could have contributed to LCSC's few success'.

Freshman Mindy Rice of Grandview, Idaho got some playing time and made her presence known with a powerful kill in game three. Rice didn't play substantially, but foreshadowed good things to come in the future.

"Every chance I get, I just want to get out there and have fun," said Rice.

Heather Cross-Schroeder also played well for not seeing much action as of late and served with authority, scoring an ace and holding serve successfully.

The usual Idaho stand-outs Nancy Wicks, Dee Porter, Jessica Puckett, Heather McEwen, Brittany VanHaverbeke and setter Amie Hanks were free to roam the court and attack at will — inflicting damage indiscriminately.

Christie Roes, who hasn't played much lately, worked into Hilbert's line-up in an experimental offense that Idaho may use more in the future.

"We tried new things," said Hilbert.

Idaho will have to step it up a level this weekend in order to beat rival Boise State University Broncos, who are 5-5 in conference play. Idaho is 6-6 in league and the team that wins this weekend will more than likely take over the fourth place slot and a post-season birth.

"It's huge," said Hilbert. "We're competing with Boise for the last play off spot."

The Vandals play at Boise, Saturday evening.

Sugg quietly punts well

By DOUG BAUER
Staff Writer

Being third in the nation and first in the Big Sky Conference in punting would be a big thrill for most people, but for Vandal punter Tom Sugg, it is just another rung on the ladder.

When Sugg mentions his improvement, it does not take him long to speak of his weaknesses.

"One thing I want to concentrate on for next season is getting the ball out inside the ten," Sugg said. "I haven't been doing that very well so far this season."

Sugg attended high school in Burbank, Calif., and went on to play football for two years at Glendale Junior College in Glendale, Calif. There is only one major difference between today's Sugg and the Sugg of yesteryear.

He used to play tight end. "I injured my left knee my second year at Glendale," Sugg said. "That ended my playing tight end."

Sugg punted in high school, but did not at Glendale due to the fact that Brian Greenfield was the starter. Greenfield was the top punter in the nation at the time, and received a full scholarship to Pitt after he was done at Glendale. He was drafted last year in the tenth round.

After his knee injury, Sugg began working on his punting again, and made a tape and sent it around. Idaho showed the most interest, so he decided to take a trip up north and check the place out.

"It was a lot different coming from such a big town to such a small town," Sugg said. "My parents and I decided that Idaho would be the best for me because of academics and football, since it was such a powerhouse."

Sugg came to Idaho and red-shirted last year, but the question might be raised as to whether he has enjoyed it.

"I've met a lot of new friends and the school is great," Sugg said. "Best of all, I've had the opportunity to play."

Sugg began fall practice last year at UI as a tight end and only punted in his spare time. It was not until spring training of this year that Sugg committed to punting for good.

"Coach Smith decided that it would be best for the team if I just punted," Sugg said.

That was not all, however. Smith also told Sugg that he was bringing in some other punters and challenging him to do as well as he could.

"I wasn't about to be beat out of the starting job for punter by anyone," Sugg said.

Sugg returned home for the summer and worked hard, and when he returned in the fall, he won the starting job handily.

Ever since, Sugg has been booting the roof off of the Kibbie Dome, averaging 44.6 yards a punt and a 39.8 yard net per punt.

"I've had a lot of support at home as far as my dad and his friends go," Sugg said. "One of my dad's friends had a connection up here and they just thought that it would be a much better school for me."

Sugg has noticed his improvement since he got here, a lot of which he credits to the coaching of Smith.

"When I first got here I was really slow getting the ball off. It was taking me about two point four seconds on the average," Sugg said. "When you're playing in this league, that is way too slow."

Sugg worked on time a lot over the summer and shaved his average by two tenths of a second, a reduction that is critical when punting.

Another one of Sugg's bonuses this season is that he has not had any of his punts blocked. According to Sugg, a lot of credit from this should go to his snapper.

"Pat West is getting the ball back there every time just the way that it needs to be," Sugg said. "The line is also doing a very good job."

The most memorable event of Sugg's season so far has been his booming 61-yard punt that he nailed in the game against Nevada.

"I was out there and the ball was snapped and the whistle was blown and I just kicked the ball anyway. That kind of gave me a little warm up," Sugg said. "I didn't even feel the ball go off of my foot. It's just a great feeling to hear the crowd roar, it's not often that a punter gets that kind of recognition."

Tom Sugg leads the Big Sky in punting with a 44.3 average this season. (JIM VOLLBRECHT PHOTO)

Sugg is majoring in business finance and would like to attend the Cleveland Chiropractic school in Hollywood after he gets done at Idaho. He would like to open his own chiropractic clinic in the future.

"I'm majoring in business finance so that I can learn to manage my money," Sugg said. "That way I don't have to pay someone else to do it."

If Sugg keeps up the way that he has, he may not have worry about going to chiropractic school. After all, good punters are rare in professional football and with a business finance degree and all of the money that he could make, how could he fail?

from, that's just the name of it. She had trouble grasping the concept that baseball had no time limit, that an inning could conceivably last forever if the team batting never got three outs. Another blank look ... what's an out?

■ OUTS — When the batter either hits a ball in the air and somebody catches it, or the batter hits one on the ground, somebody catches it and throws it to the first baseman for an out. How am I doing? Lane obviously doesn't think so hot because I get another blank look ... what's a base?

■ BASE — A square pad on each corner of the diamond shaped field. From right to left the bases are first thru third, with home plate being where the catcher sits. Not too blank of a look. She must have understood this better.

I went on to explain that batters reach the bases by getting hits. Getting to first base is single, second and a double, third a triple and reaching home plate is a home run. No blank looks. She's getting this game down. I then explained that every time a player touches the plate that this scores a run. Whoever gets the most runs, wins the game. Totally blankless looks.

I should have left well enough alone. But I was feeling a little cocky so I started explaining the concepts of balls and strikes, along with differences between starting and relief pitchers.

I explained that starters pace themselves and pitch long innings, and that relievers pitch hard and go for short distances. We're back to the blank looks again. I then realized by trying to explain what a full count was, I was committing suicide. Again, another blank look. By completing my death wish, I tried to explain to her what a full count was and felt totally tongue-tied and helpless. Complete blank looks, void of all expression.

Thank God the conversation didn't go much further because it was time for me to drop her off. I felt a little empty when I got back to my apartment. I turned on my television and reflected on the conversation.

It seemed amazing to me that a sport I know inside and out, I couldn't explain. Baseball has been with me since I was eight years old. I remember the first game I ever played in. I sat down in the outfield and faced the other direction. My poor dad just about had a coronary.

From seventh inning stretches, to hot dogs, to guys wearing headphones, baseball can be pretty strange to an outsider — just like I find jai alai (Mexico's answer to indoor lacrosse) weird and slightly silly. I guess we all find comfort in familiarity.

Like everything else, we take it for granted.

Local female a capella trio to perform

Review by MEYLA C. BIANCO
Staff Writer

On Saturday at the cozy Combine coffee house in Pullman, I was impressed. It is not often that this happens to me, but the a capella trio Lotus definitely made me sit up and take notice.

The powerful voices of Dana Chapman, Kelly Teague and Sherrie Lutsch are clear and beautiful, and the ideas in the songs they sing enhance their overall sound.

They sang a song familiar to most Americans: "Teach Your Children Well" by Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young. I've never really listened to that song before, dismissing it as a sappy rendition of an idealist movement. Saturday, thanks to Lotus, I actually listened to it and even appreciated it. At first I was frightened and thought I must be very hormonal to recognize this song as beneficial. Then I just let myself go and appreciated it, a quality the group Lotus seemed to bring out in the audience.

Other songs included "God's Gift to Women," a song about the advantages of having a plain looking man for a romantic companion over a handsome and arrogant one. Another was "Don't Put It in Your Mouth," a song about a mother's good intentions and the way a child interprets them. One I particu-ary liked was a song called "Factory Girl," about a hardworking woman who knows well the advantages and disadvantages of labor.

The largish espresso slurping crowd at the Combine showed their appreciation with ample clapping and the occasional unexpected foot-stomping yell.

Lotus' program stressed self-reliance, equality, the importance of children, and love; that big mysterious concept that makes the world go around.

Because I was so impressed by Lotus, I decided to ask Dana a few questions about the group.

MEYLA: "When did Lotus get together as a group, and how was that accomplished?"

DANA: "In February of this year, Sherrie and I met in jazz choir warming up before a choir concert. We started singing together to warm up (some of our favorite Roches' songs). We loved the blend and decided to sing together regularly. Two weeks later, Kelly came into our lives. I met her in the company of mutual friends over breakfast. Here was the soprano of our dreams! We were set!"

MEYLA: "What are your plans for the future?"

DANA: "Lotus plans to keep singing. We're saving 90% of what we earn for a future recording. No matter what happens, however, we're glad to play together. Oh, but wouldn't a small overseas tour be nice..."

MEYLA: "Have any of you had professional lessons?"

DANA: "Kelly is the true professional, she's a vocal performance major at the UI. I'm a Spanish major and Sherrie's a graduate student in Statistics."

MEYLA: "What do you want people to think of when they hear the name Lotus?"

DANA: "Harmony and good music."

If you are thinking Lotus sounds interesting, check them out November 8th at the SUB at 8pm. I guarantee, you won't be ready for them if you are expecting the typical a capella group. These women are progressive, intelligent and fun, and appeal to a wide variety of people.

Mexican eatery provides change of pace

Review by JILL SEDDON
Contributing Writer

Most often, eating at Johnnie's Las Hadas is truly an unforgettable dining experience. Usually when someone speaks of an "unforgettable dining experience" we think of fine wine, excellent service, neat tablecloths, etc. No, not in this case. I'll admit it - a lot of times Johnnie's is really weird, but we go there all the time anyway.

Let me explain. When we sit in the non-smoking section (the area right when you enter) there are usually about five or six food-preparing types peering out of the kitchen into the dining room. Sometimes they smile and wave, other times they look confused or angry. So eat in the smoking section, you say. Yeah, well, then you have to look at the people in the lounge, who on several occasions make weird gestures and grunting sounds. I'm not quite sure who these people are, but if you're in the mood for a little entertainment, or a political lesson (I overheard a very lively debate about World War 2 last year), that's the place to be.

Everything else aside, the food at Johnnie's is very good. Excellent even. They offer a great selection of imported beers and the margaritas are scrumptious. And even though the size of the portions vary (and sometimes the ingredients), I've never really had a bad meal there.

The all-female group Lotus consists of members Dana Chapman, Kelly Teague, and Sherrie Lutsch: Women who know what they want, and aren't afraid to tell. (ASUI PROMOTIONS PHOTO)

Nikita leads pack of great new video releases

Review by MEYLA BIANCO
Staff Writer

If you are in the mood for an interesting, non-static movie that involves some refreshing depth, and missed the relatively recent showing at The Micro, rent La Femme Nikita on video.

This French film (English subtitled) is a quality endeavor that successfully marries hard-hitting criminal action with tender love scenes.

"Rent La Femme Nikita on video."

The hero, Nikita, is introduced as a very tough tomboy drug addict who robs a pharmacy in order to procure drugs of the most addictive nature. After a gunbattle, during which she kills a policeman, she finds herself in a very interesting state: dead and incarcerated. (She is in a jail in a type of hell.) She is then offered a deal by the prison officials in order to live again. She is to be rigorously trained for the government as a secret spy, and to be at the beck and call of an official who secures high-risk and espionage-ridden jobs for her.

Toward the conclusion, the film becomes chaotic and even gruesome. One instance in which a bottle of acid is poured over an unconscious man is particularly disturbing. This just serves to illustrate Nikita's toughness when faced with the necessity of dealing with the harshness life has handed her.

Nikita has depth and sensitivity. Despite the difficulty in being this way when faced with situations starkly devoid of any such humanism, Nikita is likeable and easy to identify with.

The music in this movie is infectious and well-done. While it has an industrial feel, it remains enjoyable and does not drone.

The surprise ending of Nikita is one of the greatest aspects of the film, and even if I were to hint, you would never guess.

Dig some change out of the ashtray in your car, or from between the cushions of your sofa and rent La Femme Nikita. This movie is a good way to spend an evening with a friend and it is definitely a foreign film worth the money.

While you're at it, check out interesting recent releases such as: Truth or Dare, The Doors, Mystery Train, Reversal of Fortune, and Queen's Logic. With winter upon us, it's a good time to curl up in front of one of these movies and relax.

Especially excellent for viewing are the latest releases: Defending Your Life, Silence of the Lambs, and The Borrower. Written, produced and directed by Albert Brooks, Defending Your Life is a critical favorite that few will find unappealing. Look for a great cameo appearance by Shirley Maclaine, and excellent comedy by Rip Torn and Meryl Streep.

Silence of the Lambs needs no introduction, but The Borrower is one of those treasures that flopped at the theatre and needs to be seen. The follow-up from the creator of Henry: Portrait of a Serial Killer, The Borrower is the tale of an stranded alien that supplements its own dying body with the parts of human victims, and cheap alcohol. Vaguely reminiscent of The Hidden, this film is totally gross, very funny, and yet manages to pack a few genuine chills (especially when the alien, "BOB") decides to rip people's heads off.
