POW/MIA to be honored

By DEANN NORTHAM
Staff Writer

"There is nothing we cannot accomplish as men and as a nation..." said Captain Ralph Parkison on Thursday at the Administration Building's north lawn. Parkison, of the U.S. Marine Corps Reserves, was the guest speaker at a ceremony honoring Prisoners of War and those Missing in Action from all of America's wars.

The ceremony was hosted by the Army, Air Force, and Navy/Marines ROTC units at UI, and by local posts of the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign War. Captain Sandy Clark, commanding officer of the UI Naval ROTC unit and master of ceremonies, introduced the troops, welcomed the audience, and particularly those who "have pain and suffering, uncertainty" in regards to missing relatives and loved ones.

Clark made a special presentation of a medal to Dr. Harry Vaughn for recognition of his being a POW. Clark said that it was just in 1988 that the president of the United States authorized the presentation of medals to POW's.

Clark introduced Parkison by mentioning his accomplishments in the Desert Shield/Storm conflict. Parkison, the commander of a tank battalion in the Gulf War, was sent with his squad on December 17, 1990. In February of 1991, 11<sup>9</sup> enemy vehicles, including 59 Iraqi tanks, were destroyed by only 14 tanks under

Urgent for students to change address

Matt Telin of the UI Registrar's Office stresses that students must change the address on the DIAL PREREC computer system.

Telin said that since they have gone to the new computer system, students are responsible for updating the information on the system.

Yesterday, he said that over 1,000 students were still missing from the computers and that their names will not be put in this year's Blue Key.

Telin also said that it is imperative that the students update their address or all university mail and organizations trying to contact UI students will be sent to the old listing.

Besides missing out on some employment possibilities, the students without their current phone number and address could miss out on their social life if friends don't have correct information.

Bush rallies in Colville, pushes for jobs in Northwest

By TIM HELMKE
Staff Writer

Now that the presidential election is less than two months away, Bush and Clinton are all geared up for the campaign.

Bush came to Colville, Washington and spoke in front of the Vaagen Bros. Lumber, Co. and close to 3,500 people.

Bush landed in Spokane in Air Force One and was then flown to Colville in a helicopter for his one o'clock speech. Bush met with some representatives of the agriculture and timber industries and discussed some of the issues that are concerning them for about 20 minutes. He then went on to the lumber yard where he gave his speech.

President Bush was introduced to the crowd by U.S. Senator Slade Gorton of Washington. Bush met a crowd that was full of supporters ranging from community members to the many College Republicans that had made the trip to Colville. The crowd waved signs ranging from the red, white and blue "Bush and Quayle" signs to those that supported the candidate's issues.

For UI student Dan Brown, the moment that the President walked onto the platform to give his speech, "time just sort of stopped as it was an anxiety filled moment." This was Brown's first political event he had attended and he was excited about seeing the president on his campaign stop. Brown and the group he went with was within close distance of the president, which made him feel even more excited.

Bush mostly spoke about the issues that effect the Colville/Pacific Northwest area. He keyed in on the logging and timber industry and their importance to the economy of the United States. The President tied in the timber issue with the families, jobs, and communities that are affected mainly by the industry.

"Bush tied in the timber industry to the to the families by discussing the balance that needs to be struck between the environmental issues and the economic well-being."

— Will Hart
Vice President, College Republicans

Another UI student that made the trip to Colville was Will Hart, the vice-president of the College Republicans group at UI.

"Bush tied in the timber industry to the families by discussing the balance that needs to be struck between the environmental issues and economic well-being," said Hart.

Bush also emphasized the need for the environmental issues to begin to put the people first again as jobs are just as important. "Bush reported that each owl has 3500 acres to inhabit and each human has nothing compared to that," said Brown.

Hart feels that Bush chose a very ideal spot for his campaign stop as he brought the focus on small towns, the environment, and the logging industry. "This stop shows that Bush is not as out of touch with the American people as many believe," said Hart.

Bush then mingled with the crowd before he flew back to Spokane. This was Hart's second time seeing Bush and feels this time it was more personal than when he saw him in Washington, D.C. Hart describes President Bush as "one of the best speakers" that he has ever heard.

Bush left the Colville speech sight and then went back to Spokane for a $5,000 per ticket fundraiser at a Spokane International Airport fire station before leaving for his next stop in Medford, Oregon.

Democratic candidate Bill Clinton was also in the Pacific Northwest with a campaign stop in Eugene, Oregon.

Now that the elections are coming quick, both sides will be campaigning harder than ever especially with the debates starting soon.

After Bush's visit, both sides can say that they have taken time out to stop in Washington as Clinton was in Spokane in late July.

UI searches for engineering dean

By BRANDY CORGATELLI
Staff Writer

A national search is underway for a College of Engineering dean.

Current Engineering Dean Richard Jacobsen was appointed by Elisabeth Zinser in 1990 to fill a three-year temporary term as a 'term dean,' according to Roger Korus, a committee member in the search and the department head of chemical engineering. "Term deans are internal people who are well qualified to assume the position (in the event of a vacancy)," Korus said.

Korus said the faculty handbook requires a search committee to be formed to fill a dean position on a permanent basis.

This is the last year in Jacobsen's three-year appointment, so the search for a permanent dean begins this fall.

"We are looking for a person who can lead the college into the future," said Margrit Vonbraun, a member of the search committee and an associate professor of engineering science, who was also complementary of the job Jacobsen has done in the past three years.

Vonbraun described what a qualified applicant might look like. "They are normally a full-tenured professor, have a good teaching and research record, are good administrators, and can raise money," she said.

UI club "hams" it up

By DEANN NORTHAM
Staff Writer

W7EQ. It's "our official name as far as the ham world is concerned," said Dan Steffens, president of UI's amateur radio club.

According to the 1982 Radio Amateurs Handbook, ham radio is a "global fraternity for people with common and yet widely varying interests, able to exchange ideas and learn more about each other with each new on-the-air contact."

"It can give an individual the opportunity to speak to anybody worldwide, whatever their interests are, and get to know their cultures. It's a way to satisfy curiosity and reach out and meet new people while sitting at your own home," said Steffens.

UI's ham radio club was established in 1927. The purpose of the club, according to Steffens, is to "give facilities for amateur operators to use, and to teach people interested in amateur radio."

All amateur radio users, like a commercial radio station, must have a call sign to operate on-the-air, as regulated by the Federal Communications Commission. W7EQ has the capabilities to license interested individuals. Steffens said it's relatively easy to obtain a novice license; basic regulations, some theory of amateur radio, and five dollars and forty cents are needed. Steffens said to get the novice license, it can take "anywhere from three days to a month, depending on how fast they learn." W7EQ can also provide instruction for further licensing, for technician, general, advanced, and extra licenses.

Ray Knoff, a member of W7EQ, says the club has a broad range of communication capabilities. They can use Morse code, voice communication, and digital computers in high frequency and very high frequency. They also have the equipment to communicate via low earth orbit satellites, or those about 500 to 600 miles above Earth. "We can communicate anywhere from around the world to shortwave across town," said Knoff. "We have the capabilities to send personal messages or receive bulletins anywhere in the world."

W7EQ participates in several events throughout the year. Hamfests, where a bunch of amateur radio people get together to swap equipment and exchange information is a place where, "hams on the air can get together and meet face-to-face," said Steffens. W7EQ members also have field days, where they "get up on top of a mountain and set up mobile equipment and have contests to see who can reach the most countries..." said Steffens.

The club also has guest speakers, and monthly meetings held at the SUB on the first Tuesday of every month. For more information, contact Steffens at 885-8762, or Mark LaMoreaux, the club trustee, at 885-6342.

Senator works hard for students

By TANYA MADISON
Editor-in-Chief

Editor's note: This article is one of a weekly series on ASUI student leaders.

ASUI senator Amtul Sheikh hasn't met too many students — or student causes — that she doesn't like. The second-year senator has served on a half-dozen committees during her tenure and is always embarking on another project.

"She is one of the most active senators," said ASUI president Amy Anderson. "She is always working on some kind of project for the students. If I have to go to someone in the senate, I go to Amtul. I know that I can really count on her. Things get done on her programs. She doesn't mess around."

This semester alone Sheikh has worked to get the WSU-UI shuttle up and running, helped to plan the student leadership retreat and planned Cultural Diversity Week.

While Sheikh says she loves being active in the ASUI she admits that her schedule sometimes gets a little scary. "The worst thing about my job is time," Sheikh said. "It's not that I hate giving it, it's that there is never enough time to give. I had 20 million things I wanted to get done today. I was lucky to finish just one."

Sheikh is a 20-year-old junior majoring in accounting. She first applied to the senate in the fall of 1990. "It was fun-and appoints committee in the ASUI. Her main job is to interview candidates chosen by ASUI president Anderson and then recommend to the senate whether those appointments are approved.

But she doesn't restrict herself to that. She is working hard now to plan Cultural Diversity Week which will be Nov. 1-6. In her free time she also works with the International Friendship Association. "That is a very rewarding group to work with," she said.

Sheikh said the best part of her job is the administrators and students that she has met while in office. "Now people come up and say hi. Administrators and students that I probably never would have had the chance to meet are now people I can talk with all of the time. It's great."

Sheikh represents Gamma Phi Beta, off-campus residents and students in Graham and Targee halls. "I really just want everyone to know that I am open-minded and willing to listen," she said. "I love it when students come in and ask what's what. That's what we are here for. Our main goal is to reach out to the students and to be there for them."

ny when I saw the interview you did with Brad (Moeller, ASUI vice president)," she said. "He told you that he didn't become a senator at first because Dave Penya picked someone else. Well, I was that someone else," she laughed.

Sheikh is the chairwoman of the government operations

Three cheers for dads

By SHARI IRETON
Assistant News Editor

Today, when students call home for some extra cash, they might be rewarded with a visit from dear old dad.

Yes, it's the second Dad's weekend at the University of Idaho and the next few days are packed with festivities. The event is sponsored by the UI Student Alumni Relations Board and will begin tonight with a social hour during registration at 6 p.m. and then a barbecue. UI President Elisabeth Zinser and world champion decathlete Dan O'Brien will join the participants for the dinner, which begins at 6:30 p.m.

"Dad's day used to be a real popular event until the early 1970's," said Mike Davis, associate director of alumni relations. He said that the Dad's Day was so successful when they reinstated it last year, that they decided to make it into a whole weekend. "Last year... we had 85 dads register and right now we already have over 200 for the Dan O'Brien dinner," he said.

Tomorrow morning, a welcome booth with coffee, juice and doughnuts will be set up and open at 9 a.m. in the practice field east of the Kibbie Dome. While enjoying the refreshments, dads can participate in a "punt and pass" competition and register for a variety of prizes. A trip for two to the Idaho-Boise State basketball game in Boise on March 4, 1993 will be the grand prize.

The Vandal Marching Band and cheerleading squad will brighten the west end of the Kibbie Dome as the Idaho Family Football Festival begins at 11 a.m. with food from several Moscow restaurants.

At 1 p.m., the UI Vandals will clash with Weber State Wildcats, kicking-off both squads' season opener, and the UI Dad of the Year will be named at halftime. Visiting fathers should sit with their students' living group and the group with the highest participation will win a prize.

The University Inn will hold a post-victory celebration in the Convention Center. The Inn expects the event to be very successful, with an estimated turnout of 800-1000 people.

Davis said that Shane Brown, SARb chair of Dad's Weekend, is in charge of the weekend and that "he has really put a lot of energy and enthusiasm in this."

Skipping class part two: delinquent students cost taxpayer

By BETSY CARVER
Staff Writer

Running a university is expensive business. There are millions of dollars do be divied out every year to specific colleges and programs. But what many regard as the most important aspect of a university is the students attending.

Of all the money flowing in and out of the UI system, only 15.44 percent comes from student fees. The other 84.56 percent comes from state allocations, land grant endowment income, and private grants. Mainly, the rest of the money outside of student fees comes from taxpayers.

As stated in a previous article, a full-time, in-state student taking 15 credits pays $3.38 per lecture class through the course of a semester. Thus dividing the cost of each class ($3.38) by the total percentage payed by the entire student body (15.44) the total is $21.81. Subtracting from this number the cost of one class for a 15 credit carrying student ($3.38) equals $18.43. This number can be argued to be the cost taxpayers pay per class for an individual student.

If this figure is added to the cost of one class plus the amount lost in opportunity cost the total ends up being $36.86. The importance of this total is to relate the expense of going to class everyday for the college student. For every class skipped approximately $36.86 is lost, $18.43 out of the student's pocket, $18.43 out of the taxpayer's pocket. This figure would vary for those taking more or less credits and those paying more or less tuition, but on the average skipping class is a spendy decision.

All of these numbers and the process of getting them can get complicated, but the important thing to remember is that the taxpayers pay a large hunk of each individual student's education. Not only does the student lose out on a fulfilling hour of discussion with a trained professional, but he also cheats the taxpayers in not allowing their allocated taxes to go to the proposed use: to educate.

Parkison's command. There were no casualties in Parkison's squad. His unit also destroyed enemy resistance, and contributed in smashing a large counterattack. Parkison, now working in Spokane with Shearson Lehman Brothers, received a Bronze Star for his work.

"In trying to decide what to say, I went through an incredible range of emotions," said Parkison. He said he had pride in their accomplishments in the war, and was grateful that they had lost few things, yet he felt sadness for the comrades before him that still aren't accounted for.

Parkison said it was the sense of brotherhood and joy that helped the U.S. military. "...Unity and teamwork, brotherhood, allowed us to defeat..." he said. Parkison said this unity carries throughout the nation. He said the strength of the people's support was great in the war. On the plane back from the war, Parkison said they watched a film While You Were Away, a collection of support rallies. "In a plane load of battle-hardened Marines, there was not one dry eye anywhere," he said.

Parkison is optimistic about the future of our nation. "We are not just a great nation, but a great people and can maintain truly great things."

AIDS: personal observation, campus information

On campus tests available to students

By TIM HELMKE
Staff Writer

With the rise of AIDS awareness, the number of AIDS tests given out are on the rise at the UI Student Health Center.

Dr. Donald K. Chin, Director of the Student Health Center, reported that AIDS tests are definitely "increasing as the awareness increases." Dr. Chin reported that after the Magic Johnson case was brought public, the number of tests run were increased dramatically. He also added that as the new semester begins, there is another rush of tests being run.

Dr. Chin explained the test process as one that is easy to go through and one that is important if one is a member of the high-risk group.

When one goes in to get a test, they meet with one of the doctors or clinicians and are counseled on what they are going to go through. The clinicians want to make sure that the person being tested understands what he/she is going through with the test process.

The process of counseling usually runs about 20 minutes in which the issue of confidentiality is stressed more than anything else. The Student Health Center takes every precaution to make sure that the identification of the person being tested is confidential by changing over the ID to a number system.

The results of the test are released to the person tested behind closed doors only with the clinician and the person tested present.

After the counseling session, the clinician will take a blood sample that is then sent to the Idaho State Laboratory in Lewiston.

At the lab, the blood is put through antibody tests to see if the person has the HIV virus. This testing process takes about two weeks to complete. As soon as the results are back at the Student Health Center, they contact the person that was tested to come in to the center to find out the results.

The Student Health Center will not release the test results over the phone because of the confidentiality issue. The results of the test are released to the person tested behind closed doors only with the clinician and the person tested present. Chin defines the high risk groups as: those people with multiple sexual partners, people that use IV drugs, people in relationships with people that have used or use IV drugs, and those that have received blood transfusions of untested blood.

Dr. Chin encourages those members of the high risk groups to get a test or anyone that may think that they may have contracted the virus.

There is a coupon in the Vandal coupon book that enables a person to a free AIDS test or there is a $4 fee to pay for the cost of the lab tests. Chin encourages the people to get tested to get a "peace of mind, if nothing else."

AIDS hits home for writer

By TIM HELMKE
Staff Writer

AIDS has always been in the news, but I never thought that it would happen to someone I knew.

This was not the case when I saw a friend of mine that had not seen for many years. He was in the hospital, and I was the only one that he recognized.

The next day I saw him in the hospital, and he was in the hospital. He was in the hospital, and he was in the hospital. He was in the hospital, and he was in the hospital.

The shock of such news was over what I had thought. I had thought that this virus was always in the news, and nothing had ever happened to me. When I began to think about the time that I spent with my cousin, it all took a different meaning. Everything that he had said to me about anything was now so much different to me.

My cousin and I had discussed family that we had never really known on his side and he didn't know mine. This discussion of family has a whole different meaning to me now as he is my part of my family and this AIDS case now has its closer than ever.

My cousin and I have not talked since I saw him in May, but I can still feel a bond among our whole family since the AIDS virus has hit our family. We now speak of him often and care for our family members in a new way.

It is a realization that AIDS can happen to any family, and any person who is as close as I have experienced. I have seen and heard of people who are suffering from AIDS, and I can relate to what other families go through. I can now feel the sympathy that is needed for AIDS patients and their families as I am a family member.

according to Korus, is an ableness to work with people in the business and government circles.

The search committee for the new dean is composed of faculty from most all the branches of engineering and computer science, including civil, chemical, electrical, mechanical, agricultural, and metallurgical engineering and engineering science.

The committee is looking at several different methods to advertise the opening.

"We will advertise in the main engineering journals and will probably mail announcements to every campus engineering department in the nation," Korus said.

Korus said the biggest issue a new dean will have to step in and deal with is the involvement of the college of engineering with the rest of the state, especially in Boise.

"That is politically the most sensitive issue," Korus said.

The big issue on campus is facilities, according to Korus. "There is the feeling that to do more we need more facilities."

The committee will meet infrequently throughout the semester and hopes to begin interviewing candidates in January and hire someone by July, according to Vonbraun.

"The big work will come after the closing date when we have to evaluate every candidate," Korus said.

Castration was motivational, educational and unnecessary

What the hell is wrong with Jackie Sherrill?

With the inflamed egos of many coaches and the fact that players often get special considerations unknown to normal students, some people were already beginning to have their doubts about the legitimacy of college football.

And now we hear about the decision of Sherrill, the head coach at Mississippi State University, to have a bull castrated in front of his team.

But wait! Let us not judge Sherrill before we have heard his reasoning. The removal of the creature's delicate "bullhood" served two purposes, he said.

First, he used the castration as a valuable educational tool for his team. One day, he said, he asked his players what a steer was. Much to his chagrin, none of them knew.

"Damn the inadequacies of the American public education system," Sherrill must have thought, "let me give the players a real life demonstration to expand their group consciousness."

It is not known whether M.S.U. players know what a lobotomy is. If not, perhaps Sherrill will find a suitable volunteer to demonstrate.

The second reason cited by Sherrill was motivation. The bull was castrated prior to Mississippi State's game against the University of Texas Longhorns.

Although the Texas mascot is a longhorn steer, it is not clear if Sherrill wanted to use the castration to give his team an idea of what to do to the Texas quarterback, or to threaten his players with what might happen to them if they lost.

As it turned out, the Bulldogs won. There were no serious groin injuries to either team.

While nothing inhumane was done to the animal, not everyone took the incident as lightly as Sherrill might have hoped. The associate dean of M.S.U.'s veterinary medicine school questioned the appropriateness of the stunt.

"As a veterinarian concerned with the treatment of animals at Mississippi State, I think it was out of place," he said.

And as a college football coach who should be concerned with the education of his players, Sherrill should be a little less concerned with snipping off the testicles of a bull and more concerned with seeing that his players attend classes.

If he cared, he would see to it that all his players could recite the alphabet, balance their checkbooks and speak in coherent sentences.

Unfortunately Sherrill, like coaches across the nation, must win games or be fired, so he does whatever is necessary to get his players ready for a game while neglecting to get them ready for life.

Sherrill has not commented on what he will do to motivate his team when they play the Florida Gators, the Arkansas Razorbacks or the Auburn Tigers, but the people at the A.S.P.C.A. may want to keep their eyes on him.

Incidentally, the new steer is doing fine.

'Boardom' strikes deep at UI

COMMENTARY

I'd only seen their emblems. I'd only seen a group of teenagers barely big enough to fill out their faded flannel shirts and their long johns, buried beneath whatever rhomboid shape was cool to wear their hair in that week, wanting desperately to be noticed.

Now they looked just as blurry and out of focus as everyone else. They were only distinguishable because they moved at a different pace.

As they glided past and I moved on, I thought of their own campus counterparts. They're the people that make you feel like Rush Limbaugh would have felt if he'd wandered into Woodstock to ask for directions. You know there's something going on but you're just not sure exactly what.

There's a subculture at UI that

The angry disenfranchised Moscow youth were out in force tonight. I didn't have my contacts in or my glasses on, so to me they looked like colorless blurs skimming the ground outside the SUB on thin planks that they hopped on and off of from time to time.

In my nearsightedness, I couldn't see the wheels that held their skateboards up, but I could hear them spinning.

I didn't see these kids the way I'd seen them with clear vision.

The fat lady is warming up

Years ago, professional baseball players wore baggy, ill-fitting uniforms and played on fields with names like Forbes and Ebbetts.

Phrases like "love of the game" could still be considered applicable.

Now examine baseball under a modern-day magnifying glass.

The Chicago Cubs' Ryne Sandberg makes seven million dollars a year while the Orioles' standout shortstop, Cal Ripken, Jr., will haul in $32.5 million in the next five years.

And these two don't even represent the real problem.

More troubling is the resignation of baseball commissioner Fay Vincent last week amidst a tidal wave of conflict he had been having with the owners of the 28 major league teams.

Vincent's three-year reign as top dog was inundated with problems. He was heavily criticized for his lifetime ban of the New York Yankee's owner, George Steinbrenner, who was involved in shady dealings with known criminal Howard Spira.

Vincent also took the heat for banning Yankee reliever Steve Howe, despite the fact that Howe had six prior suspensions for drug use. Criticism also came his way with his neutrality involving the possible move of the San Francisco Giants to Florida.

COMMENTARY

Perhaps the biggest storm of Vincent's short tenure involved his talk of realigning the National League by moving the St. Louis Cardinals and Chicago Cubs to the N.L. Western Division from the N.L. East. The Cincinnati Reds and Atlanta Braves would then have moved to the N.L. East from the N.L. West.

Vincent did this because of the geographical advantage that such a move would cause, and he made the move by citing the "best interests of baseball" clause in the baseball charter.

By using this, he was able to make the decision and avoid any owner intervention concerning his decision. It was at about this time that a roar from Chicago could be heard.

The Tribune Company, which owns the Cubs, threw a much-publicized fit about the realignment proposal, saying that moving the Cubs would result in decreased team revenue because of schedule revisions. Faster than a person could say greedy fat cats, the Cubs blocked the move with an injunction from a federal judge.

Despite the injunction, a base-

Writing art reviews requires skill

Editor,
Fire the art critic! I just read Jay Forman's review of the shows at Ridenbaugh Hall. It is obvious that he didn't bother to educate himself on any of the issues involved with either show in order to make informed judgments about the art. Criticism at its worst is merely visceral opinion. I challenge your readers to learn the story of the Japanese internment in the United States and to judge Nomura's work on the basis of its context. Is all the work "watercolors on white paper" that could have been done by your "little sister ... in third grade"? Does the Environmentally Conscious Architecture show consist of "drawings and photos of buildings of the future"? No doubt a time traveler brought back the photos. Whether you like it or not, art has cultural content.

Editor;

Front-page news and regular TV and radio broadcasts tell us of Israel progressively coming on the scene. The prophetic clock of the divine word says Zechariah 12th chapter, 2nd and 3rd verse: "behold I will make Jerusalem a cup of trembling and burdensome stone."

In some form the word is taking place. Different peoples of the earth being shaken up who come in contact with it, and the enemies of Israel being staggered and wounded from a burdensome stone.

Although Israel is coming on the scene, the church is going off, referring to a called-out group of baptized believers in Christ. Not the church building; that's only the place of assembly for believers. "The fullness of the Gentiles" is the completion of the purpose of God in this age, out calling from among the gentiles a people for Christ's name. Romans 11th chapter 25th verse, and Ephesians, 1st chapter, 22nd and 23rd verses: "the body of Christ which is his church." Palestinian state? For Gaza Strip? Consult the Scriptures. They speak differently. Genesis 15th chapter, 18th verse says: "In the same day the Lord made a covenant with Abram, saying: 'unto thy seed have I given this land, from the River of Egypt unto the great river, the River Euphrates.'"

Also if God had said Ishmael in this next verse, Arabs would've been joint owners in that land, but he said in Genesis, 21st chapter, 12th verse: "For in Isaac shall thy seed be called." You haven't seen nothing yet: Israel is going to expand all the way to the Great Euphrates River.

On the other side of God's great moving prophetic (time) clock, translation awareness is now appearing among his church. It happened to Enoch who had this testimony that he pleased God: Hebrews 11th chapter, 5th verse. Also in the day of Elijah the prophet. Supernatural transportation was believed to be happening in II Kings 2nd chapter, 16th verse: "and they said unto Him, behold now there be with thy servants fifty strong men; let them go, we pray, thee, and seek thy master lest peradventure the spirit of the Lord hath taken him up, and cast him upon some mountain, or into some valley." And he said, "ye shall not send." 17th verse: and when they urged him till he was ashamed, he said, "send. They sent therefore fifty men, and he sought three days, but found him not." Their search was very sincere and thorough but what they couldn't believe nonetheless had happened, the great prophet Elijah had permanently disappeared off the earth by the power of God. Enoch, who lived in another age, was taken off the earth.

Genesis, 5th chapter, 24th verse and Hebrews, 11th chapter, 5th verse, tells us he was not found because God had translated him. So shall it be in our age, I Thessalonians, 4th chapter, 16th and 17th verses: "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God. And the dead in Christ shall rise first." 17th verse: "Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord." John 6th chapter, 21st verse, expresses supernatural transportation, the miraculous power of Christ manifesting itself by removing the barrier of distance about 3 miles and a quarter. A furlong equals 582 feet and they had rowed about 30 furlongs. John 6th chapter, 21st verse said: "then they willingly received him into the ship, and immediately the ship was at the land whither they went." Brother, sister, friends and relatives, space and gravity is under his control and so shall it be when the church disappears.

Some may agree in interpretation, others may differ, but we better be sure it's constructive difference: for we must obey and answer to Romans 12th chapter, 18th verse: "If it be possible, as much as lieth in you live peaceably with all men."

ball fan could almost hear the axe blade being sharpened for Vincent. The owners said he was arrogant and condescending in office and generally impossible to deal with. But before the fat lady could clear her voice, Vincent had skeddaddled out of office ahead of the tar-and-feather committee.

And it is somehow sad that a man, who showed some integrity and leadership, would be put before 28 rifles. After all, Vincent's realignment idea was supported by former commissioners Bowie Kuhn and Peter Ueberroth, who testified under oath that his decision was indeed in line with the charter's guidelines.

However, Vincent had to realize that no individual could stand in front of the piles of dollar bills and block the owners.

As a case in point, look at the CBS-Major League Baseball deal that was finalized a couple of years back. At this time, CBS shocked the sporting world by offering Major League Baseball a four-year, $1 billion contract to televise the majority of professional baseball games (ESPN still has good baseball coverage as well). The owners understandably did cartwheels because they figured to profit handsomely from the deal.

However, the ratings for CBS' baseball games haven't translated into the cash cow that CBS President Lawrence Tisch thought they would be when he signed on the dotted line.

Subsequently, the owners' profits have remained small, and Vincent's realignment idea might have been the perfect opportunity for the owners to find a scapegoat.

Now that Vincent has escaped with his life, the owners must find a new man for the job. Or is lapdog a more suitable word? Commissioners are selected by vote from the owners, and don't think that the owners will bring someone in who will oppose their grandiose, money-making schemes. There is simply too much cash involved in baseball now.

I can see Vincent's replacement: A feeble man wearing a larger-than-life smile, who walks into an owner's meeting and cuddles beneath the leg of the guy who gives him the most dog biscuits. He will go to all the owners looking for attention, and they will pat him on the head saying, "Good boy, now just run along and try not to make a nuisance of yourself."

Sound ridiculous? It may not be according to the Sept. 14 issue of Sports Illustrated. In an article speaking of Vincent's demise, Chicago White Sox owner Jerry Reinsdorf gave a description of the "perfect" commissioner.

"He should be a CEO of the owners — not the players or the umpires or the fans," said Reinsdorf. "He would handle issues involving integrity or discipline. In issues involving business he would answer to the board of directors — the owners."

When looking over the above statement, it is easy to see that the national pastime is in big trouble because Reinsdorf's amazingly frank description indicates the owners' need for unrestricted power.

I know it is silly for me to mention this, but wasn't baseball built upon fans coming to support their favorite team? Isn't this the American pastime? Maybe fans should boycott this game and make the Jerry Reinsdorfs of the baseball world grovel for their money in new, more creative ways because right now, the fat lady is singing.

fuels itself on cigarettes, attitude and general mind bending weirdness. Their roots can be traced to the hippies, but at least the hippies made some pretense at trying to band together against the tacitly accepted social system which was .... Let's take a break here. I've had three tests this week, I've already made my point and now I have nothing left to say. Besides, what makes me so cool is that I'm expected to show the passion of Ralph Nader the weirdness Hunter S. Thompson and the sensitivity of Alan Alda every week.

I think we'll tag team this one. That way I can cut my losses, collect my inch pay, and return to my miserable life.

The first person I tagged up with was Cynthia. She was in charge of telling me something profound. She told me about a scene from Leo Buscaglia's "Love" video where Leo was sitting on a bench in Paris and an old man came to sit beside him. The old man had a loaf of bread that he shared with Leo. Leo asked him what the secret to a happy life was.

"Keep your brains full and your bowels empty," the old man said.

Samantha Groom gave me an insight to the female psyche. She said the female version of the shhhtandard (that's not a misspelling. My 10 readers should know what that is and who started it) male revenge fantasy. The female version has the woman being attacked by a man who ends up reading from the top line of the sheet music by the time she's done with him.

Richard Nibbler (not his real name) honed my management skills by telling me about two samurais who stood in the rain, swords poised, neither one moving, waiting for the other to strike. Why do they just wait there, getting soaked? Because neither one wants to give up the advantage.

Deann gave me the lowdown on romance. First step, guys, be ready to be with your lady without the guys around. If you sacrifice a night out with the boys to see her, that sends the message that you care.

Another pointer she gave is to attempt to cook a meal for the object of your desire. Women love to see men flat out flounder. Romance should spark even if the Ramen is overdone.

Loren used his tagup to try his hand at comedy. He told about two unidentified male Argonaut writers who covered last year's UI-Montana State football game. The budget was tight and there were only two beds for five people. These two ended up sharing a bed.

Both of them were used to sleeping with their girlfriends, so the second they feel asleep they started cuddling the first thing within reach. When one of them woke up nestled in the other's arms, the first and only thing he said was,

"No one needs to hear about this?"

Pete Comben wasn't here to take his turn in the ring, but if he were here, I'm sure his beard would be impeccably groomed. (Editor's note: It was.)

I've blown off my job well enough for this week. My 10 readers can look forward to vintage (read bad) Corda next week if I haven't taken up residence in a Las Vegas roach motel with a beautiful and mysterious dark-haired female companion. Until then, if you buy the ticket, you've gotta take the ride.

Vandals passing into conference play with Weber

By LOREN ROBERTS
Sports Editor

The conference championship could very well be kicking-off tomorrow in the Kibbie Dome.

At 1:05 p.m. the Idaho Vandals (2-0) will clash with the Wildcats of Weber State (1-1) in both team's league opener. The match-up will be the 29th between the two pass-happy squads, which could produce over 900 passing yards. Both teams have been labled as conference contenders, so the outcome could have serious implications on who claims to be No. 1 in November.

Dave Arslanian, Head Coach of WSU, and long time friend of Idaho Head Coach John L. Smith, isn't completely sure where his team stands at this point.

"Maybe we're as good as people thought we were, I don't know," Arslanian said. "As far as playing Idaho in the third week I'd prefer to play them a little ways down the road, but it's here, so let's go get after it."

Weber State will be getting after it behind the arm of All-American Quarterback Jamie Martin. The senior out of Arroyo Grande, CA. was 300-for-510 for 4,125 yards, and 35 touchdowns last season on his way to winning the Walter Payton Award which is given to the best player in Division I-AA. Martin passed for over 300 yards in nine of 12 games last year, and for over 400 in three games. This season he has started out slowly, throwing for only 491 yards in his first two outings.

"We're facing the best kid in the league," Smith said. "He's a real good quarterback, who has good speed, a strong arm, and a great release. I trully believe he'll be playing at the next level."

Last season, Martin led the Wildcats to a 41-17 victory over Idaho in Ogden, as well as an 8-4 record that included a trip to the playoffs. As a junior, he threw for 414 yards, and four touchdowns in the game against Idaho. The loss was Idaho's third in a row, and knocked them out of the Big Sky title hunt.

"We have to approach it (the game) that this is championship week," Smith said. "I think our guys are going to be ready, and I believe our seniors are going to be really focused."

One senior in particular that has been as focused as focused can be is Tight-End Ronnie White. The Nevada transfer came in last season at running-back for the injured Devon Pearce. This year, with the graduation of Elia Ala'ilima-Daley, the tight-end spot needed to be filled.

"He's been a great addition for us," Smith said. "This guy is totally for the team, and nothing for himself. That is the kind of attitude we need everyone to have on this team."

Both teams are coming off wins, but if one had to make a judgement on motivational advantage, Idaho would most certainly have the edge. The Vandals came from behind to defeat Division I Colorado State last week 37-34, moving them up three spots to No. 6 in Division I-AA. WSU is not ranked, but Smith is not going to have his team playing solely on the memory of what they did at CSU.

"Colorado State is over," Smith said. "That game is in the rear-view mirror, and has no bearing on what has to be done against Weber. It was a great win, but the only thing that will win the game this week is what we do on Saturday."

While the Wildcats boast Martin, Idaho counters with a great passer of their own in Doug Nussmeier. This week's Big Sky Player of the Week, Nussmeier threw for 390 yards, and two touchdowns against CSU. The junior out of Lake Oswego, Ore. has 610 total yards passing on the season, and has thrown 17 touchdowns against one interception in his last seven games.

Defensively, Idaho took a couple of shots in the arm as they lost two players this past week. Senior Defensive End Billy Sims experienced a groin strain, and will be out of action Saturday. Freshman Spencer Folau (6-5, 260) will take over for Sims at the right side. In the secondary, the Vandals lost the leadership of senior Jeff Jordan. The starting senior Cornerback will be out due to a fractured thumb he suffered in the CSU game.

"I think we're going to be tested defensively," Smith said.

Volleyballers prepare for invitational

By DOUG TAYLOR
Staff Writer

The University of Idaho volleyball team continues to roll, and on Wednesday night, Missouri Southern played the role of the victim.

In the middle of a week-long road trip, the Vandals received strong performances from outside hitter Dee Porter and Heather McEwen as it beat the Joplin, Mo., team 15-10, 15-7, 15-9 in a nonconference volleyball game.

Porter recorded 10 digs, 10 kills and five service aces to give her a team-leading 18 aces for the year. McEwen contributed with nine kills and five blocks while sophomore Britany Van Haverbeke added kills.

The win moved Idaho to 6-1 overall, but coach Tom Hilbert said the victory was a hard-fought one.

"This was probably the second most competitive team we've played all year," said Hilbert. "Next to Cal-Poly San Luis Obispo, this team had better mechanics than anybody else we've faced. They just made a few too many service errors and reception errors and we were able to capitalize on it."

With the win, the Vandals will head into this weekend's Sooner Invitational in Norman, Okla. The tournament features the University of Oklahoma, University of Tulsa, and Illinois State University in addition to the Vandals. The Preceding the match with Missouri Southern, the Vandals played Oral Roberts University and again came away victorious with a 15-6, 15-13, 15-6 win.

Senior setter Amie Hanks led the Vandal offense as she piled up 21 assists in the three-game victory. Van Haverbeke and Jessica Puckett benefitted from Hanks' passing as they combined for 14 kills. Defensively, the Vandals limited ORU to a team .186 hitting percentage.

The Vandals' hot start has resulted in some impressive individual and team statistics.

The team is currently ranked 8th among all NCAA Division I-A teams in blocking and 15th in hitting percentage. Individually, the UI's Van Haverbeke is 19th in the country in blocking.

The Vandals return home for a Friday, Sept. 25 match with Montana followed by a Sept. 26 match with Montana State. The matches next weekend will be the opening of the Vandal's 1992 Big Sky Conference schedule.

Idaho names new A.D.

By LOREN ROBERTS
Sports Editor

University of Idaho Athletics will have a new face in Pete A. Liske, who was named UI's new Athletic Director Tuesday.

Liske comes from the University of Washington where he served as Associate Athletic Director for the the past seven years, and will continue to stress academics within athletics.

"Academics has always been a priority of mine," Liske said. "I don't feel a student should be happy with just a degree, and I will try to set their aspirations in pursuing a Master's Degree."

As well as his years in athletics at UW, Liske has a colorful past as an athlete as well. He attended Penn State where he played football under the command of Joe Paterno, and led the Nittany Lions to a Gator Bowl victory as quarterback. He went on to play 12 years of professional football, and was captain of the Philadelphia Eagles, Denver Broncos, and Calgary Stampede.

Idaho President Elisabeth Zinser said that it was a multiple of qualities that resulted in her decision to choose Liske.

"He stood out because of the diversity of experience he brings," Zinser said. "He definitely had the broadest set of duties the past seven years. Taking nothing away from the other candidates, he just stood out."

The opening for the spot became available when former AD Gary Hunter resigned to accept a similar position at Wichita State. Liske was one of five finalists which included interim AD Wayne Anderson.

"The interviewing process was splendid," Zinser said. "We had five really, really qualified people to interview. He (Liske) satisfied us very, very well with his knowledge of the university."

Liske is expected to finish up some loose-ends at UW, and take over at UI at the beginning of October. He said the change from Seattle to Moscow won't exist because wherever you are, you're just dealing with people.

"It's a very impressive university, and a very good community," Liske said. "Before (being hired) I'd heard a lot of positive things about the university from other people."

Zinser emulated Liske when he said he wants to see both athletics, and academics move forward.

"He brings high aspirations for the athletes educationally," Zinser said. "He will help us to move forward, and that is one of the many things that sold us on Pete Liske."

Vandal's Nussmeier quickly enjoying football days at UI

By LOREN ROBERTS
Sports Editor

When Doug Nussmeier thinks back about the past three years he's spent at the University of Idaho, it kind of blows his mind about how fast it's gone by.

"It seems like it's gone by so quick," Nussmeier said. "I've never really thought about, but it's going to be really strange when it's all over."

But the south-paw quarterback from Lake Oswego need not worry because he's got plenty of time left to wear the black-and-gold. Now a junior, Nussmeier has held the starting duties as trigger-man for the Vandals since his freshman year in 1990. Recruited his senior year by Washington State, Nussmeier almost gave up on football when WSU signed Moscow High standout Mike Pattinson. However, football wasn't the sport at the top of the list for the lefty.

"I really didn't know what I wanted to do, and at the time baseball was my favorite sport."

But one particular WSU assistant coach at the time remembered Nussmeier, and asked him to come to Idaho.

"It came down to choosing between UI and Portland State because PSU was going to let me play baseball, also. I didn't really want to stay in Portland because it's more of a commuter school, and I wanted to go to a university with the college atmosphere. So when Coach Smith got the job at Idaho I decided to come over."

When he arrived, Nussmeier was red-shirted because Idaho already had an aspiring quarterback in John Friesz. By watching Friesz, Nussmeier learned how to be successful in the Big Sky. "I learned more from watching him than from him telling me anything. He's such a great player just to watch."

After Friesz departed for the NFL after the '89 season, the new freshman got his chance to play in '90. In his first collegiate game against Montana State, Nussmeier completed 20-of-32 passes for 313 yards, and three touchdowns. At that point it was detectable that this was no ordinary freshman quarterback.

"I felt real fortunate to play as a freshman. I've played football since I was in the second grade, so I loved getting back on the field to compete."

He competed well through six games until disaster struck. Against Cal-State Chico Nussmeier fractured his ankle, and was done for the season. Idaho went on to finish the year 9-4, going all the way to a quarterfinal game with Georgia Southern. The freshman, however, was forced to watch it all from the side-lines.

"At that point it really helped me to learn a lot about the game just by watching. From watching the game I could understand a lot better what the coaches were trying to teach me."

The fracture healed with time, and he returned the next season to make up for lost time. The Vandals jumped out to a strong 3-0 start, which included a game-winning drive against Southwest Texas State, led by the arm of Nussmeier.

"It was great. At the beginning nothing could go wrong. We were all playing well, and everyone was ready to win the national championship."

As quickly as Idaho began is as quickly as they fell apart. There was nothing the quarterback could do as the Vandals lost three games in a row for the first time since 1984.

"It was really tough. At the beginning there was nothing we could do wrong, but then we hit a three game stretch where everything that could go wrong did."

Nuss-and-company are all about crasing last year. Especially for a quarterback, who takes a lot of good with a lot of bad, is ready to redcem himself.

"To go out there, and one, get your rear-end kicked, and two, fall apart, is terrible. I hate it."

One of the things that Nussmeier doesn't hate is the competition each week. Looking ahead to bettering himself, and the team this year, Nussmeier feels he has something to prove.

"Last year is on everyone's mind, and this is the year to get back at everybody. I think last year we were laughed at by the rest of the league for finishing fourth. There's much more to being on this team than just playing. This year myself, and the team are a lot more focused."

When focusing on the post-season, Nuss enjoys the time he spends with teammates like Yo Murphy. Nussmeier, and Murphy, a senior wide-receiver from Idaho Falls, have a friendship that extends off the field, and up into the great outdoors.

"I met Yo when I came on recruiting trips with him when we were seniors in high school.

We go hunting and fishing together, and I go down to Idaho Falls for a week each summer to hang out with him. We have a good time down there."

As for now Nussmeier is hunting for a Big Sky Title with his arm loaded, and firing. Through two games he has thrown for 610 yards, and three touchdowns. Although three TD's is a low number for him through the air, he has ran for another three, and been sacked just once. And with another year left of eligibility, Nussmeier said that he is having the time of his life right now.

"I'm just happy to be here, and I'm having a great time. I feel proud everytime I put on that uniform, and knowing that there are people out there who'd trade places with me any day of the week."

Nussmeier's biggest fans are his parents, who make the drive from the Northwestern Oregon town over to home games.

"That's one of the nice things about being close to home because it's great having them come over to watch me. I can't say enough about them, I just love them to death."

It all may be going quick for Nuss, but with fans like that, no one can argue that things could ever go slow enough.

SPORTS BRIEFS

■ X-Country The Women's Cross Country team placed second out of nine teams last weekend at the Whitman Invitational. The competition consists of one race, a 5,000-meter run.

Washington State took first place with 26 points, and the UI striders followed with 36. The next closest competition was Whitman with 111.

"This is a good opening meet for us because it was a big enough field, but with some fairly easy competition," Head Coach Scott Lorek said.

Idaho had 11 runners in the race, with the placings of the top five finishers counted. The other six are not recorded towards the total, but help in knocking other school's times down. Lauren Moore, a freshman, finished highest for Idaho at second place in 18:39.

"We had a real good showing, and mentally this is one of the best opening meets we've ever had," Lorek said. "We had real solid races, and everyone ran up to their potential."

Idaho's gap between themselves and third was much greater than the difference between them and WSU. Lorek imagined this happening, and thought they had a shot at winning before the race took place.

"I thought we'd have a shot, but I didn't realize that Jennifer Capenter (who finished third for WSU) was back with them this year."

This weekend the striders head to Seattle for another 5,000-meter in the Emerald City Invitational, and will see some much stiffer competition. University of Washington will host the meet, and joining Idaho will be Boise State University, University of Montana, Eastern Washington University, Pacific Lutheran, Seattle Pacific, and George Fox (Portland).

"Our next two weekends are really tough," Lorek said. "We have the UW meet, and then the Mountain West Classic in Missoula. That meet will have every team in the conference excluding Northern Arizona plus UW, WSU, Oregon, and some Texas schools."

As far as judging where his runners are, Lorek is pleased after watching their first race.

"We have a good team this year, but next year we'll be even better," Lorek said. "Even if Kerry (No. 3 runner Kerry Huss) doesn't return from her injury this year we'll be a strong team.".....Strider notes-

The 1992 Lady Vandal's Stride for Gold will be held October 3 before the Idaho/Cal State-Northridge game. The fund raising event is designed to generate money for the Idaho Women's Athletic program. Last years total was 34,800, and the goal this year is to exceed that amount. ■ Rugby The UI Women's Rugby team will be holding practices throughout the semester for those interested in playing. Practices are Monday and Wednesday from 5:30-7:30 pm at the North-side of the Kibbie Dome. For further information call Kim Gortz at 883-0602.

■ Men's Track Any male track or field athletes interested in indoor and outdoor participation need to contact Head Coach Mike Keller within the next two weeks. All interested athletes are required to participate in fall track practice which begins Monday, September 21. The cross-country season has already begun, and tryouts for the team are restricted after September 24. Anyone interested in either sport should reach Mr. Keller at 885-0210, or drop by his office, which is located on the second floor of the Kibbie Dome in room 227.

■ Hockey The UI Hockey Club will be holding tryouts next week. The set dates are Friday, Sept. 25th at 6:00 pm, and Saturday the 26th at 10:15 am. Both try-outs will be at the Eagle Ice Arena in Spokane. For carpool information call Scott Squires at 883-3655.

■ Fun Run The 9th Annual Huff N Puffin run will be Saturday, October 3. Starting time is 10:00 am, with pre-registration check-in from 7:30-8:50. The race distances are 5km and 10km, with t-shirts going to all those who pay the $10.00 entry fee. Late registration begins after September 25, and will be $12.00. For further information call Campus Recreation at 885-6381, or Moscow Parks & Recreation at 882-0240.

■ Visual Vandals The Vandal Football Team will be seen live both in Boise, and in Salt Lake City in their matchup with Weber State Saturday. KTRV-TV Channel 12 in the Treasure Valley, and KXIV-TV in Salt Lake and Ogden are both picking up the game.

■ Vandal Sentenced University of Idaho offensive lineman Christopher Moore, 19, was sentenced Wednesday to two years probation following a felony grand theft conviction.

Moore's sentence was part of a plea-agreement that will allow him to travel with the team to away games, and serve his 30-day jail sentence at the end of the season. The sentencing was a result of Moore stealing 20 compact discs from a UI fraternity last spring.

Exploring America's two favorite pastimes

Warning: This column may not be suitable for children, fundamentalist Christians, persons with high moral fiber or my grandmother.

I've spent most of my time in the last two weeks battling a lovely combination of viruses which rendered me unable to do anything more physically exhausting than slamming Nyquil shots.

It was in one of my Nyquil induced hazes that I watched Sunday afternoon and Monday night football. It was then that one of the great realizations of my life hit me: Football is a very sexual game.

Now I realize the fact that I was doing Nyquil shots with nighttime cold reliever chasers may negate my credibility somewhat on these matters. It was under these same influences that I pondered what kind of underwear the Pope wears and how long a pizza can remain in the refrigerator and still be fit for human consumption.

But even now, without the benefit of Nyquil or most other drugs, I firmly believe that football and that other "great American pastime" have a lot in common.

You don't believe me? Read on. Before both there is usually an extensive pregame warm-up. Football players stretch, grunt a bit and suit up. Sounds like foreplay to me.

When a couple is engaged in intercourse they are "in the sack."

Sacking is also a popular pastime in football. Football players are always trying to make a play, so are lovers.

Football players are obsessed with nailing, going deep, getting penetration, ramming it through, looking for the opening, making passes and scoring. Does this sound familiar to anyone?

Football players use pigskin. Lovers use lambskin (or latex).

Think of the names of some of the teams in the NFL. The Rams. The Oilers. The Packers. The Giants. The Chargers. The Raiders. The Cowboys. Is anyone else noticing a slightly Freudian trend here?

There are some activities that are penalties in both sports. The short list includes:

- Illegal use of the hands.
- False start.
- Unsportsmanlike conduct.
- Roughing.
- Piling on.
- For pedaphiles and passers there are illegal receivers.
- Unnecessary roughness.
- Player misconduct.
- Illegal movement.
- Too many men on the field.
- Pass interference.
- And last, but certainly not least, illegal celebration.

The similarities are endless. Both can be done indoors or outdoors. Rain-outs are few and far between in both sports. Both can involve an excessive amount of hiney-slapping, sweating and grunting.

Both can last for hours. Real time ceases to exist during both. Fumbles are looked down on in both; touchdowns are endlessly celebrated.

An both can be followed by wild cheering or boos.

Of course, this is just one woman's take on the game. But I can at least understand why so many men are avid football fans now.

They tend to like the other recreational diversion as well.

Sorry Gram, you were warned.

"Howards End" may garner an Oscar

Review by PAUL PREIMESBERGER
Contributing Writer

It's no coincidence that the final scene of Howards End fades slowly from the screen. We are left with a image that resembles a painting. Filled with cleverly framed shots of grand architecture and bucolic landscapes, much of this beautiful picture is, just that: a beautiful picture. However, Howards End produces more than just aesthetically pleasing images; this is, simply put, a wonderful film.

Based on the E.M. Forster novel, Howards End chronicles the strained relationship(s) between two immutable families forced to coexist in spite of their differences.

The Schlegel's, headed by sisters Margaret and Helen (Emma Thompson and Helena Bonham Carter) are the antithesis of the patriarchal Wilcox family led by the dominant Mr. Wilcox (Anthony Hopkins). A friendship, death, and marriage intermittently intertwine these families; though tragic at times, family ultimately reigns triumphant.

Director James Ivory (A Room With A View) certainly has a feel for early 20th century England. The landscape of this film is as much a presence as the characters. From the design and depth of the exteriors, to the rich pageantry of the interiors, buildings and rooms possess qualities all their own. Ivory also has an eye memorable. Although at times the audience is made conscious of watching the film (there are several window shots and other framing), Ivory's otherwise simplistic directing style allows the story and authenticity of the piece to hold the viewer's attention throughout.

The script includes characters of depth and diversity; and, rich in dialogue and emotion, gives them space to develop. The performances by the actors and actresses are equally impressive. Emma Thompson (Dead Again) gives the performance of her brief cinematic career. Her character is central to the development of the film and she carries it well. Anthony Hopkins, Helena Bonham Carter (Hamlet; Room With A View) and the remaining cast (including Vanessa Redgrave) give performances that support, rather than outshine, each others' characters.

While not a 'statement' piece, Howards End is one of the finest, well-crafted films of the year. It is certain to be mentioned come Oscar time and should not be missed.

McConnell Mansion: Moscow's historical house

By KIM BLEDSOE
Staff Writer

Architecture fans will have the opportunity to view the Smithsonian Architecture Exhibit, which features American architectural designs ranging from early Colonial to contemporary international styles, at the McConnell Mansion.

Beginning Sept. 26, the exhibit entitled, "What Style Is It?" will open at the McConnell Mansion using 45 panels of photographs, drawings, and text to describe the 20 most common American architectural designs.

Although many of the styles are to be found only in large metropolitan areas, there are examples that can be found in the Palouse.

According to Mary Reed, Director of the Historical Society, "people who moved to this area around the turn of the century brought their favorite architectural styles with them. Consequently, many homes and business blocks are modest versions of, or contain elements of, the grander styles."

Organized by the United States Committee of International Council of Monuments and Sites, the National Trust for Historic Preservation, and the National Park Service, the exhibit is one of two Smithsonian exhibits traveling to Idaho museums.

In order to give the exhibit a local focus, the Latah County Historical Society is sponsoring a lecture and slide presentation by Dr. Jennifer Attebery, an architectural historian and folklorist. The presentation, "What Style Is It, and Why Should We Care?," will discuss how historic buildings "teach us about history and values of our communities" using examples of architecture from small Idaho towns.

The lecture is scheduled for Oct. 13, at 7:30 p.m. in the Moscow Community Center, and a reception and viewing of the exhibit will follow at the McConnell Mansion.

The McConnell Mansion is open Tuesday through Saturday from 1 to 4 p.m. The Smithsonian Architectural Exhibit will conclude Oct. 24, and because of the educational nature of "What Style Is It?" the Society encourages architecture classes and school groups to make special arrangements to attend.

The McConnell Mansion's exhibits are free and open to the public (donations welcome) and tours can be arranged. The mansion is located at 110 South Adams in Moscow. For more information, contact Joann Jones or Mary Reed at 882-1004.

"Truck Dog" truckin' in as a one dog, err, man show

James Donlon in "Truck Dog."

By KARIN MASON
Staff Writer

The University of Idaho Theatre Arts Department kicks off the semester tonight with a one-man comedy entitled "Truck Dog," the first of five presentations offered this season.

The show is about a scruffy dog's adventures in almost every canine's favorite place—the back of a pick-up truck. Professional guest artist James Donlon is the star of the show. He combines theater, mime, clowning and minimal props to pull the show off.

This performance not only confronts the simple life of a dog who receives a great thrill out of wind whipping through his fur, but also tackles several social and environmental issues facing society today.

Donlon successfully mixes humor and insight throughout his performances. The New York Times calls his work an "extraordinary blend of skill and lunacy." The play is also said to appeal to audiences of all ages.

"Truck Dog" made its debut at the Northwest Drama Conference held jointly at the UI and Washington State University in February of this year, and has since traveled throughout the United States, Canada and Mexico.

Upcoming theater productions include: "You Can't Take it With You," a comedy about a unique family and their lunacy in the world of business and bureaucracy which plays Oct. 15-18 and Oct. 22-25; "Three Sisters," a Russian family's search for happiness Dec. 3-6 and Dec. 10-13; "Lovers: Winners," an Irish teen-age romance that is both fun and thought provoking on March 2-7; and "Little Shop of Horrors," a musical in which a florist assistant becomes a nursemaid to a man-cating houseplant playing April 29-30, May 1-2 and May 6-9.

"Truck Dog" will perform tonight and tomorrow night at 8 p.m. in the Hartung Theatre. Student tickets are $5, adult tickets are $8 and senior tickets are $7, available at the Hartung Theatre Box Office. The box office opens at 7 p.m.

Student Counseling Center offers hope

By Alicia Larson
Contributing

Whether it be counseling for rape or indecision on a major, the University of Idaho's Student Counseling Center (SCC) offers plenty of hope.

For one reason or another, most students do not take advantage of the SCC offered by the UI.

"When I first heard of the counseling center, I thought it was a place for students on the verge of a nervous breakdown," said UI senior Kathleen McQuillen. McQuillen visited the center one spring to use its vocational library and found a different story. "I just wanted to look at a bunch of careers, and the people there were more than helpful," McQuillen said.

The vocational library, along with certified counselors, enables the center to offer career counseling. Students find the career of their choice by taking an interest test. The test is then evaluated and students can see from the results the vocational areas that interest them.

Not only does the center offer career counseling, it also offers standard services such as alcohol and substance abuse counseling and personal support. In addition, they have services for counseling couples, overeating, and even resume assistance.

IRONICALLY, THE TIME TO START SAVING FOR RETIREMENT IS WHEN IT LOOKS LIKE YOU CAN LEAST AFFORD IT.

Can't afford to save for retirement? The truth is, you can't afford not to. Not when you realize that your retirement can last 20 to 30 years or more. You'll want to live at least as comfortably then as you do now. And that takes planning.

By starting to save now, you can take advantage of tax-deferral and give your money time to compound and grow. Consider this: set aside just $100 each month beginning at age 30 and you can accumulate over $192,539* by the time you reach age 65. But wait ten years and you'll have to budget $227 each month to reach the same goal.

Nationally syndicated advice columnist and author speaking at SUB Tuesday

By KARIN MASON
Staff Writer

Ellen Gootblatt, a nationally syndicated advice columnist, author and "relationship" specialist, will appear Tuesday night at the University of Idaho Student Union Building.

Gootblatt will host an open-format, just like Geraldo or Oprah, for the audience to discuss mating and dating relationships.

Gootblatt knows her stuff when it comes to relationships. Among other things, she has hosted the number one rated radio evening talk show heard in 39 states called "Getting Together with Ellen Gootblatt," and has written the books: "Men Are Worth the Trouble: Translating, Understanding, Appreciating and Celebrating Men," and "Meeting, Dating, Relating and Mating: 250 Important Questions to Ask Before You Go Further in a Relationship."

Some of Gootblatt's guests on her radio show have included: Steve Allen, John Denver, David Brenner, Kris Kristofferson, George Carlin, Phyllis Diller and Lucille Ball. The topics of her show have been about building and sustaining relationships in a positive way, marriage, divorce, the lifestyle of singles and widows or anything that she felt might be meaningful to her listeners.

Because of her great curiosity of people, she questions her guests, including the celebrities, about the kinds of things that everyone wonders about, but no one dares to ask. Her act consists of a good-natured tone and it helps if listeners have a good sense of humor.

"I don't think there's anything more important in a person's life than his or her personal relationships. We deal with the relationship toward oneself, to lovers, friends, family and anyone else who touches an individual's life. I also like to ask questions most people just wonder about," Gootblatt said in a press release.

Gootblatt was born and raised in Borough Park, Brooklyn, New York. She received her bachelor of arts in education, speech and theater from Brooklyn College. After teaching English, sex edu-

Now, she also travels to do lectures. ## Neil Young appearing at Champs de Brionne

Neil Young, who is rapidly becoming the premier gray beard of rock'n'roll, will be performing an acoustic concert at Champs de Brionne Amphitheater at George, Washington tomorrow at 7 p.m.

Young's musical career has spanned four decades. He has served stints with Buffalo Springfield and Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young. However, he has found the most success with his solo career and with his band, Crazy Horse.

The Saturday night show comes on the heels of the Ragged Glory Tour, which featured Young and Crazy Horse. According to a Warner Brothers publicity agent, the Ragged Glory Tour was "one of the most acclaimed concert events in recent memory."

One critic described the tour as "surfing on big waves of an electric guitar; it felt like you were privy to musicians tapping into high voltage rock... in a blaze of mega-decibel distortion and feedback."

Other critics agreed, noting that "Young's music achieves its immense power by pitting his high, fragile voice against the corrosive brittleness, the harsh beauty of his guitar playing."

A third likened the experience of seeing Young in concert to "ragged stamina and tempestuous incandescence."

Young has called his association with Crazy Horse "the essence of my musical life. This is the core, the smoldering thing that I come back to over and over again."

"You can name any notes, any songs, Crazy Horse just keeps coming back. If I had never done anything else, the Crazy Horse stuff would just stand on its own."

Undoubtedly, Young will stray from his distortion-laden electric sound for the acoustic show, mixing more mellow versions of songs off the Ragged Glory and Freedom albums with earlier, folksy standards such as "Heart of Gold," "Old Man" and "Everyone Knows This Is Nowhere."

Reserved tickets are $29.50, general admission tickets are $22.50 and can be obtained by calling (206) 255-3600.

Mortar restarts motor with membership drive

By ARIEL PLYWASKI
Contributing Writer

The University of Idaho's Mortar Board is rejuvenating its membership.

The Mortar Board is an academic honorary for seniors which stresses scholarship, service, and leadership.

Members are usually elected in the spring of their junior year, but students may also apply for a position on the board, according to Jennifer Halker, the secretary of Mortar Board.

Kalista Barclay, Mortar Board president, said that there are Mortar Board chapters all over the U.S., but added, "We're just getting started (this year)."

The Mortar Board was established in 1918, and the UI became a chapter member in 1923. One of their past projects was an AIDS awareness week which included speakers and a panel debate.

The Mortar Board's goals for this fall, according to Brian Kramer, director of communication, is to reduce a $300 dollar deficit incurred from last year and to raise awareness on campus about the organization. One activity they have going this fall, to reach some of their goals, is a "Green Card" sale. "Green Cards" cost a dollar, and have discounts from several businesses around the area. The cards last all semester and the profits benefit the Mortar Board. Students can buy a "Green Card" from the information desk in the SUB, or buy one from a Mortar Board officer.

Some other activities they're hoping to sponsor include taking shelter animals to nursing homes and a national literacy project.

Also, look for the "word of the week" posted around campus and sponsored by the Board, and look for their booth at the UI Activity Fair on Oct. 3. The Mortar Board's next meeting is Tuesday, Oct. 6, in the Pend O'reille room in the SUB.

Wendy Pini's "ElfQuest" isn't just for comic book collectors

By ARIEL PLYWASKI
Contributing Writer

Serious comic book collectors have probably already heard of the series ElfQuest, but this series is not just for collectors. Kathy Sprague, owner and manager of Safari Pearl Comics in Moscow, said that ElfQuest appeals to a larger audience because it's not your average superhero comic-book. "This is not a comic book about superheroes on testosterone. The characters show real emotions, so you care about them," Sprague said.

The storyline and artwork are both done by Wendy Pini, whose editor and sounding board is Richard Pini. The story is about a planet called the "World of the Two Moons," and the elves, trolls and other creatures who live there.

"Pini was the first woman to break out of the underground," Sprague said. Sprague said that women have always worked in comics, but that they've traditionally done the touch up work or been colorists and have not had their names in the credits. "What women have to offer are thoughtful stories which focus on relationships and character interactions," Sprague said. She added that reading about, "geeks in spandex beating on each other gets old."

"What women have to offer are thoughtful stories which focus on relationships and character interactions. Geeks in spandex beating on each other gets old."

—Kathy Sprague
Owner of Safari Pearl Comics

Sprague said that since Pini, there have been more and more women working independently in the comic book business. These include Reed Waller, Kate Worley, Roberta Gregory, and Julie Doucet. All these comics are diverse, and are intended for the adult reader.

While ElfQuest is based in the fantasy world, it is also aimed at the mature reader. The characters have real relationships with each other, and the artwork deals with mature subject matter.

Sprague said that most of these comic books have a cult following, but there have been a growing amount of fans of ElfQuest. One of these fans is Jean Crawford, University of Idaho library assistant and local science fiction fan. "I started collecting the series because I liked the artwork and the storyline, which is fairly adult," Crawford said. Crawford also said that the elves are not cutesy, and that they act like "real people." Crawford said she collects mostly small press comics such as Epic and the Anne Rice series.

The paper used in ElfQuest is high quality, to show off the artwork and the storyline, and the price reflects this quality. A series issue costs around $4 per issue, and a graphic novel, which usually contains a complete series, costs around $16.

call and say 'We're flying in from Tokyo and want to know how to make that recipe,'" joked Burtenshaw.

The restaurant owner said it was pretty amazing that cafe Spudnik was chosen for a segment.

"Out of all the places that he went in the United States, he only included about 20 restaurants in the show, and mine was one of them," said Burtenshaw.

Pierre Franey is a big fan of lentils, so the Maryland Public Television show contacted Burtenshaw last year about featuring some of his recipes in an episode. Burtenshaw didn't hear from the show again for six months, until the day he got a phone call from them saying, "We'll be in tomorrow." The company filmed the segment in July 1991, and told Burtenshaw it would air early next year.

"I started to wonder when it was going to be on. It wasn't until this July that I got the companion cookbook in the mail and thought, 'Well, at least I'm in the book,'" said Burtenshaw.

The show aired locally on KUID-TV 12 Monday night, but according to Burtenshaw the segment will be on again after it is re-syndicated. Marilee Renfrew of KUID-TV 12 said the next showing of the Moscow segment has not yet been scheduled.

"This was a really big opportunity because now I've got my foot in the door and it's the next step for having all the food magazines coming out here," said Burtenshaw, who opened Cafe Spudnik in February 1988. "I think it's going to help put Moscow on the culinary food map."

The companion cookbook, "Pierre Franey's Cooking in America," is available through any of the local bookstores.
