UI football player arrested in melee at night club Xenon

By GREG BURTON
Staff Writer

Three people were arrested Friday night when a near riot involving some 200 people spilled onto the street in front of Xenon.

Several people were injured and two men were transported by ambulance to Gritman Memorial hospital.

University of Idaho football player Shawn T. "Duke" Garrett was treated and released into the custody of the Moscow Police after his arrest for allegedly brandishing a handgun.

Reports indicate the fight began on the dance floor inside Xenon, a Moscow night club, when an unidentified Washington State University football player hit and knocked Garrett to the floor. Xenon security responded immediately breaking up the fight and calling the Moscow Police for assistance.

Ray Walrath, a UI senior, said the WSU football player "just dropped Garrett with one punch. After that the flood lights came on, the music stopped, and everybody took it outside."

Xenon owner Barry Tassler said after the first fight several small skirmishes broke out. "The police responded with one officer in the nightclub at 1:45 (a.m.), but he immediately went outside to call for backup," Tassler said.

Police officials could not confirm or deny the presence of a gun, but people on the scene said that Garrett threatened to get a gun once he got outside of Xenon.

Garrett was convicted of discharging a gun within the city limits last September.

"Garrett said he was going to his car to get a gun, but I never saw one," said Walrath.

UI senior Lisa Upshaw also said she never saw a gun, but she confirmed Garrett threatened to get one.

Coach John L. Smith of the University of Idaho denied any bad blood between the WSU and Idaho football teams. WSU football coach Mike Price was unavailable for comment.

Units from Moscow, Pullman, Latah County, Whitman County, Idaho and Washington states arrived to find several people engaged in fighting.

WSU student Demarcus J. Girmar was arrested during the incident and charged with disturbing the peace. While Girmar was being taken into custody, fellow WSU student Jeffie Lou Jackson was arrested for battery on a police officer.

Jackson was apparently upset by the treatment Girmar was receiving by the police. She refused to comment.

Upshaw said the police were pushing Jackson out of the way when they were trying to transport Girmar to a vehicle.

Former UI football player Joshua Moore sustained the worst injuries in the melee. Upshaw said Moore was just standing on the curb on Main Street when a man ran across the street and elbowed Moore in the back of the head.

Moore, who was not charged, was brought to Gritman at 1:55 a.m. on a stretcher with head injuries.

According to hospital employees Moore was treated and released after some two hours in the emergency room.

Gritman employee Maris Cundith said that Moore was coherent and very friendly. "He was mellow, in a really good mood," Cundith said.

The incident is still under investigation and arraignment for Garrett, Girmar, and Jackson is scheduled for Tuesday in Moscow.

Problems with purging plagues some students

By TIM HELMKE
Staff Writer

With the first week of the semester done with, University of Idaho Registrar Matt Telin hopes the purging system problems will almost be done as well.

Students who had not paid their bills to the Controller's Office after pre-registering prior to Dec. 7 were purged from their classes on the afternoon of Jan. 7.

Other students, like Ron Hodge, were purged from the system for other reasons. Hodge said he paid his bill on time but the Controller's Office did not receive it.

He was later charged the $50 late registration fee when he came in on Jan. 11 and purged from his classes.

"The system with purging may make some things smoother, but has some major glitches," said Hodge.

Students had been advised by both the Registrar's Office and the Controller's Office to pay the bills before Dec. 28 or face being purged from their classes. Students were given the extra week and a half from Dec. 28 to Jan. 7 to make up for the time lapses with the postal service due to the holidays.

Telin said 7,434 students were billed by the university and 11.3 percent, or more than 800, of them were purged from their classes on Jan. 7.

"Our office worked together with other university administrators to make the decisions to purge," said Telin.

Telin also reported his office had compared similar billing figures to last semester in which approximately eight-percent of the total students billed did not return their bills and to classes. These students are termed "ghosts" and Telin pointed out that of the 11.3 percent involved in the purging, it only involves 3.3 percent of the total students.

Telin said the initial pressure to purge those students who did not pay on time came from university faculty members. The faculty was plagued with those students who would reserve a slot in a class through pre-registration and then did not show up for class.

According to Telin, this then left other students who wanted in the class unable to get in.

"At the beginning of the week of Jan. 4, our office began receiving calls from students to see if purging had taken place yet. These students apparently wanted to get into classes in which those students who would be purged were in," said Telin.

Telin reported the UI system

University cuts back due to cut in budget

By JEFF KAPOSTASY
Staff Writer

As a result of efforts to trim the general education budget down one percent, cost-cutting measures may be felt by staff and students alike.

Class size, operating budgets and construction projects are likely to feel the fiscal squeeze of a $555,600 cut from the University of Idaho's $67 million general education expense.

"It has been a serious challenge to meet the budget requirement for fiscal year '93," Financial Vice President Jerry Wallace said in a UI news release. "A mid-year analysis indicates we must take more stringent cost-saving steps in order to close the fiscal year with a balanced budget."

Although UI administrators said academics should remain unchanged, class sections may be larger and there may be less of them to choose from.

"We may not be able to meet requests to fund extra class sections," Provost Thomas Bell said. "Because of this, class sections could get bigger."

"Critical instruction will be protected," said Robert Fenning, assistant vice-president of Budget and Planning. "The money that needs to be cut can be shifted out of general education into other resources."

Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus cut the one percent in an attempt to balance the state budget last fall. In addition, enrollment pressures and higher utility costs brought about by the harsh weather have left a $690,000 budget scar.

Whether or not the university will get the money back next year is uncertain. Bell said the request for the money is in the budget, and the legislature is expected to be "sympathetic to higher education."

Besides larger class sizes, other university activities will be affected as well. Construction on several buildings and the buying of new equipment has been postponed. There is also a hiring freeze and several vacant positions in the staff and faculty will go unfilled.

Neither Fenning nor Bell could name specific class sections that have been affected. The fiscal year ends June 30.

Pro-lifers march for human rights and peace

By SHARI IRETON
News Editor

Fighting the bitter cold Saturday afternoon, a group of Pro-Lifers marched for human rights to Friendship Square.

Carrying signs that read "Please stop killing our children" and "The unborn are worthy to be born," the marchers were protesting the Jan. 22 anniversary of the Supreme Court's 1973 decision legalizing abortion.

Les Kish, the president of Moscow's Right to Life, said the pro-lifers "act as the good conscious for all...who are afraid of the issue."

Kish also said people expect pro-lifers to clothe, feed and care for all of the unwanted children. "Identifying a problem doesn't make us solely responsible for solving it," he said.

According to another speaker, Pete Becker, there are five counties in Idaho still performing abortions, and Latah County is one of them. The pro-lifers on the Palouse are working for "counseling, helping and fighting" for their cause.

Becker said that there is a myth that pro-lifers "don't care about the babies that are born." He added that for every pro-life chapter in the nation, there is a pregnancy aid chapter, although they may not be affiliated with the pro-life cause.

Richard Backes, assistant registrar for Washington State University, said while the Supreme Court can make abortion legal, they can't make it moral.

"We are standing up for morality" he said to the group gathered at the square.

The pro-lifers are worried about the Freedom of Choice Act that will be voted on by Congress this month. The Act will provide that women can get abortions through all nine months of a pregnancy and will prohibit the 24 hour waiting period.

"What options will we be left with if we have the FOCA?" asked Kish.

According to Betsy Thomas, the president of local the National Organization for Women, FOCA will simply uphold Roe v. Wade. "It will put into law what the Supreme Court already ruled in 1973," she said.

Thomas said "women are going to opt for abortions until there is an alternative choice for birth control," one that is 100 percent effective. She also pointed out that women will keep on getting abortions, legal or not, and hopes that it remains legal.

of purging is styled similarly to systems at Idaho State and Boise State universities. Officials at both schools warned UI problems would exist with the start of the purging system. Those officials also reported to Telin that they now have successful programs now that the bugs have been worked out.

Telin said students like Hodge have made the new system a "real learning experience." Telin noted most students had an excuse for not paying their bills, ranging from students never receiving their bills to students not knowing they would be purged.

Telin said during the fall 1992 semester his office worked to get students to update their addresses but there were many that did not. "It is hard to communicate with those students who do not update their addresses," Telin said.

As of Jan. 13, 440 people had registered late. These 440 people are made up of students who were purged as well as students who had not pre-registered at all. Telin said they had "inadvertently purged" some students who had paid and then put them back on the system.

Telin agrees that the purging system has its faults but feels they will work themselves out over time. "If anything positive has come out of this new system, it has been the large number of students who have updated their addresses. With corrections like that made, maybe next semester things will run a lot smoother with purging," said Telin.

Day in the life of law student gives insight

By GREG BURTON
Staff Writer

Tuesday, January 12.
6:00 am. The alarm sounds. Leah gets out of bed and puts on her running clothes.

6:45 am. After jogging with her sister, Leah showers and dresses for the day. "What I am doing is really not a big deal. I know it sounds overwhelming, but I do it because I want to. I made this choice."

The choice Leah made was to be a mother and full time, second year Law student. This is a day in Leah's life.

7:15 am. Leah finishes drying her hair and begins fixing breakfast for her and her two boys - 10 year-old Aaron and 8 year-old Dain.

7:30 am. Leah wakes her children and directs them to the bathroom. After washing and changing the boys are ready to eat, but only after Leah's pleas to put down the Nintendo do they appear in the kitchen. "Sometimes I wish I had more time for them, but they are well adjusted and happy, and that is all anyone can hope for."

8:00 am. "The boys are supposed to do their chores in the morning, but sometimes there isn't enough time and we all rush out of the house at one time." This is one of those days.

8:30 am. Aaron and Dain are off to Russell Elementary with a note of caution to those that would betray them, "My mother will sue you!"

Leah arrives to her first class, Community Property with Professor Elizabeth Brandt is Leah's first class today. Leah feels prepared for a Socratic discourse on Stranger v. Stranger, but she is relieved when Professor Brandt does not call on her.

9:30 am. A one hour break allows Leah to review for her next class at her carrel in the basement of the Law Library.

The odyssey began six years ago for Leah when she moved back to Moscow, her birthplace, after a divorce. In 1987 she entered the University of Idaho, and graduated in 1991 with honors in English. That same year Leah entered Law School.

10:30 am. Professional Responsibility with Professor Myron Schreck is Leah's second class, and they discuss legal ethics.

11:30 am. "We are studying treaties beginning in 1787. This is Colson's specialty and he really makes it interesting." This is Indian Law with Professor Dennis Colson, a UI graduate.

12:30 pm. Leah spends the next two hours reading in the library. Her carrel in the library is not enclosed and can be somewhat noisy, but this is only review of what she had read last night in preparation for discussion.

2:30 pm. Leah's last class of the day is Lawyering Process with Professor Ken Gallant and Professor Maureen Laflin. "We learn the skills that most practices want from young lawyers in this class. We learn how to generate a summons, and depositions, the unglamorous side of law."

3:40 pm. Aaron and Dain have already arrived home. Leah fixes sandwiches. "They don't like the food at school so they're pretty hungry when they get home." Leah mentions something about hurricane aftermaths and begins to pick up the house.

4:30 pm. "When you really think about it, it's 14 pairs of underwear, 14 pairs of pants, 14 pairs of socks, and 14 pairs of shirts a week, at least, and that doesn't include myself." Leah begins the laundry. Dain is encouraged to practice the violin, but he refuses.

5:30 pm. Leah begins to open a book, but the boys begin to fight and she gets up to settle things. Dain is once again asked to practice and this time he relents. Aaron turns on the television.

6:30 pm. The Castagne family sits down to dinner. Leah brings a book to read at the table during this respite of activity from two normal young boys. "I'm going to be a doctor," says Dain. Aaron eats as fast as he can, finishes, and returns to the television with Dain following, but they both return to pick up their dishes when reminded to. Leah cleans up the kitchen and tells the boys to begin their homework.

7:30 pm. Aaron wants help with his math and Leah works through several problems with him. "In a way it's like we are all growing and learning together. I think they learn good habits from watching me study, and we can each share in our own accomplishments."

8:30 pm. Leah tells Aaron and Dain to get ready for bed. Mild groans emanate from willful boys.

9:00 pm. With her children in bed Leah sits down and earnestly begins to study for tomorrow's classes. "It's because of them that this is all worth it. Each day they teach me something new, and I know why I am here."

11:00 pm. Leah goes to bed. Just one day in the life of Leah Castagne.

Homosexuals aren't detriments to military order & discipline

While the military may be dedicated to discipline, it is not dedicated to protecting its gay men and women. At least this is what it looks like in the recent killing of a 22-year-old sailor, Allen Schindler.

Schindler was killed Oct. 27, a month after he told his captain he was gay and asked for a discharge. Schindler's ship, the Belleau Wood, was ported in Japan when he was killed. Schindler's skull was crushed, all but two of his ribs were broken, most of his vital organs were damaged and his genitals were lacerated.

Schindler's supporters say he was being harassed by shipmates because he was gay. Gay rights groups say he was the victim of gay-bashing. "The concern has been that we as gay men and lesbians are a detriment to military order and discipline. But it seems to me the reverse is true," former Col. Margarethe Cammermeyer told the Associated Press. Cammermeyer, who served in the military for 26 years, was discharged from the Washington state Army National Guard last year after disclosing that she is a lesbian.

While the military is supposed to be an organization of discipline, an organization of honor and an organization of protection, the soldiers that committed the crime against Schindler weren't acting in duty. It could be that the two officers that committed the crime are bad apples, or it could be that the U.S. military isn't willing to protect its gays and lesbians. It seems the military has found the easiest answer in dealing with homosexuals...simply discharge them.

According to the AP report, in the last 10 years more than 15,000 men and women have been discharged for being homosexual. Some of the people that have been discharged are taking action.

Cammermeyer, the former Veterans Administration nurse of the year, has sued in federal court claiming the military ban against gays is unconstitutional.

It is unconstitutional. The military is discriminating against people because of their sexual preferences — not because they could not perform their duties. Being a homosexual does not mean the person cannot shoot a gun, or run a mile or follow orders, and it certainly does not mean the person is any less able to protect our country than anyone else.

When the military discriminates against homosexuals they are forgetting the basics of the military: to serve and protect.

Cammermeyer may be receiving some support from President-elect Bill Clinton, who has said he opposes the ban on homosexuals in the military.

As Martin Niemoeller said: "In Germany they came first for the Communists, and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a Communist. Then they came for the Jews, and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a Jew. Then they came for the trade unionists, and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a trade unionist. Then they came for the Catholics, and I didn't speak up because I was a Protestant. Then they came for me, and by that time no one was left to speak up."

KUOI news director defends actions against Rock

The controversy surrounding Richard Rock's ASUI presidency has caused unpleasant publicity. Many have suggested the stories be dropped — none more vigorously than supporters of the embattled ASUI president. "What if he did fire (former ASUI Attorney General Thomas) Talboy because Talboy is gay. So what?" several Rock allies have asked.

One reason we covered the Rock-Talboy controversy is that the removal may have been illegal. Monique Lillard, acting assistant dean of the College of Law, said Talboy's removal may have been unconstitutional.

"Talboy's rights to speech and association may have been violated if he was constructively discharged because of his attempts to secure legal protections for gays and lesbians and/or because of his support of politically active groups," Lillard told KUOI. Lillard is no lightweight on litigation. Before coming to Idaho she handled numerous employment discrimination cases for a law firm in Los Angeles. She's an expert on the subject.

Another reason we have pursued this story is because there is a consensus on campus that discrimination is mean-spirited, even un-American. Last month Rock himself said that

Guilt is no way to prevent suicide

You have to feel sorry for some people, no matter how foolish they may be.

Pity, for example, the poor and misguided souls who write to media pop psychologist Ann Landers and then try to find profound meaning in her response.

When Landers discusses the proper etiquette for baby showers, she can be harmlessly superficial, entertaining and even funny. But when she delves into topics more weighty than the correct fork to use at formal dinners, she is a dangerous person indeed. One woman recently wrote to Landers and described the way she felt about her brother's suicide.

"I am still having trouble understanding what could have been so wrong in my baby brother's life that he would do such a thing," she wrote. "He was young, healthy and on the verge of receiving his Ph.D., and he had so much going for him.... I know my brother loved his family, but he couldn't have been thinking of us when he did this.

"I am thankful that my father, who died four years ago, was spared this tragedy.... I will always love (my brother), but sometimes I am so angry at what he did to himself and to us that it almost blocks out that love....

"God knows how many friends and family members my brother could have called but didn't. Suicide is not the answer to life's problems, and it devastates the ones you leave behind."

Although no one I know has committed suicide, I do know people who have tried. I've even thought about it myself, though the disappointments and injustices of life have never outweighed my basic desire to live.

In fact, only the most cold and compassionless people can look at the state of affairs in the world today and at sometime or other not get depressed to the point of considering, sadly, to end it all.

But when I read the letter to Landers, I saw something beyond the words of a woman grieving over the death of a loved one. I saw selfishness and egocentricity. I saw a woman who believes the well-being of the family should outweigh the desires and personal happiness of its members.

"(He) had so much going for him," she wrote. Obviously he didn't think so, else he wouldn't have taken his own life. Happy, healthy people who have a lot going for them don't kill themselves for no reason.

Perhaps the victim had a more troubling life than his sister is willing to admit. Maybe the nominal happiness offered by being young and healthy didn't balance the somberness and drudgery of everyday life. Maybe the man contemplated the question: "To be or not to be," then chose the latter as his best option.

Or maybe he did call out to his family for help, but they failed to hear his plea.

"I know my brother loved his family, but he couldn't have been thinking of us when he did this." What a sick, self-serving attitude to have. Of course he wasn't thinking of the family, he was thinking of himself.

The woman fails to understand that an individual is not necessarily happy just because the best interests of the family are being served. Think of how the suicide rate would skyrocket if everyone sacrificed their personal happiness and well-being for the good of the family.

Instead of learning emotional independence, we'd all be inextricably tied to the moods of our parents, our spouses and our siblings. While empathizing with the troubles of loved ones is an admirable trait, it should not rule our lives to the point where we can't be happy just because someone we know is sad.

In her response Landers did not lambaste the woman for being selfish. She did not bring up the possibility that the woman's brother — out of a noble concern for his family — may have put off suicide for years, until his desperation proved too great.

Instead she wrote feel-good pabulum about how she gives her "heartfelt condolences" to the woman. She skipped over any discussion of how hollow and meaningless life can be, and that preventing a suicide involves much more than making the possible victim feel guilty about the family and friends who will be left behind.

If you want a person to live, you shouldn't use shame as a way to do it.

"It may help you to know," Landers advised, "you have written a letter that is sure to save some lives." Unfortunately, it may lead to the loss of others.

Landers ended her column by including the address of a national suicide prevention organization in Denver. Unfortunately she included no telephone number.

For the record, the telephone number of the Crisis Line here on the Palouse is 332-1505. The number for the National Suicide Hotline is 1-800-621-4000.

"discrimination on any basis is abhorable, including sexual orientation." When allegations of discrimination arise, journalists have an obligation to present the university community with the facts.

As journalists it is our responsibility to search for truth. Rock has repeatedly questioned the veracity of his accusers, never hesitating to cast doubt on their integrity. In the past he's threatened to sue Women's Center Director Betsy Thomas for slander. He's asserted that Activities Board Secretary Meachell LaSalle is lying. Either Betsy Thomas or Meachell LaSalle are lying, or Rock is. It's that simple.

Rock wrote last month that when truth and falsehood grapple, "truth will always win." Sadly, even in America, truth does not always triumph. But a free press and an independent media greatly increase the odds that justice will conquer injustice. We owe it to our listeners, to Rock and to ourselves to find the truth. There are dozens of questions unanswered, scores of inconsistencies unexplained. To help the president, questions are submitted to him in writing, and he's been offered 10 minutes of uncensored air time to present his side, an offer he has ignored. His written statements and those of his backers have been presented in their entirety.

The most important reason the campus media is covering this controversy is that it's our job. We're supposed to be watchdogs for the student body, not lap dogs for the bureaucrats and politicians.

The attorney general was supposed to be a watchdog — it's in the job description. But when Talbot questioned Rock's handling of the current crisis, Rock immediately accused him of "violating his ethical duty" to ensure rules are obeyed. Rock swiftly sought Talbot's resignation.

The ASUI Senate is also supposed to be a watchdog. That august body has been a disappointment thus far, abandoning deliberation for cheerleading at their "emergency" meeting. It should be noted several senators are new, and that this controversy flared just before final exams. Unfortunate timing made deliberation difficult. Justification aside, the senate's silence has been deafening.

That leaves one powerful watchdog: the student media. By seeking to unilaterally force newsroom policy changes, Rock is moving to crush dissent and suppress truthful stories that cause him embarrassment. He is trampling on the first amendment to advance his own agenda.

Theoretically there is one final watchdog: students. Thousands of students who could force Rock from office through a recall campaign. A former ASUI Senator has already raised this possibility publicly. If Rock continues to challenge free speech he could face the biggest watchdog of them all.

Asian donor needed for Adam Hamman

Editor:
You do not know Adam Hamman, but he needs your help. Please help us tell his story so that he may receive the gift of life. Adam, a 4-year-old adopted Korean orphan has recently been diagnosed with aplastic anemia, a rare but extremely serious blood disorder. His only chance for survival is a bone marrow transplant. A most likely bone marrow match for Adam would be with an Asian donor. Unfortunately, a suitable match cannot be found with those persons already registered in the National Bone Marrow Registry.

Will you encourage anyone of Asian heritage, who is between the ages of 18 and 55 to enroll as a bone marrow donor? The procedure for enrolling is simple (contact your local American Red Cross and donate a few teaspoonsful of blood) and is of no cost to the donor. Friends of Adam in Ohio are reaching out to the generosity of people across the United States. Please respond to his need. You may save Adam's life. Linda Smith, Hancock County Red Cross (419-422-9322) will be happy to respond to any questions.

Nielsen takes Bible out of context

Editor:
Once again Ralph Nielsen is out to destroy the Bible. His ravings must have an answer, so here it is. Ralph claims that God does not love children and that God even kills them without mercy. Ralph even searched his Bible and came up with a few good verses about how God hates children. As most of you know, one could go through the Bible and find many, many verses about how God loves children (both the born and the unborn). But Ralph has raised a good question here. What about those verses he dug up? Well, if I were to go and dig at random some verses and stick them together I bet some almighty message would come out of it, given of course that I disregarded the context of each verse as Ralph does. Matt 27:5 "Judas went and hanged himself." Luke 10:37 "Go thou and do likewise." John 13:27 "And what you do do quickly." As you can see, people like Ralph and myself (and anyone who wants to) can find little hidden messages that most of us thought the Bible never even contained. So what do we do about it? For those of you who actually read these petty little theological bickerings, I would suggest getting a Bible and reading it for yourself. Don't listen to Ralph or even me. The only opinion that you should trust most is your own. What does the Bible say to you?
—Josh Peterson

'Single White Female' in Moscow

Editor:
Recently my friends experienced a "Single White Female" type scenario. I wanted to tell what happened to them so it wouldn't happen to someone else, like you readers. My girlfriend (for story sake "Jean") and her friend ("Terry") recently rented a bedroom to a grad student ("Mary"). She is very friendly. She is the kind of person who can talk to you for hours about everything. This seems just fine to all of you because it was. She was not the problem, Terry was. After only hours after Mary had moved in, Terry had established herself as the "mother figure." At first it wasn't so bad but after a week or so it started to get out of control. Terry always wanted to know who Mary called and how long she talked. Then she started listening to Jean's calls too. Shortly after she began tampering with my exotic animal. She claimed we had been teasing her rat so she took it out on my snake, rather than confronting us. She knew it she tapped the glass cage it could hit the side of the cage and break it's nose, killing it. It was no lie to say she already hated me and my snake, but it was not us who harassed her rat. It was the neighbor. She denies ever torturing the animal, but we know she did because my animal has never attacked anyone, ever! The only way it would have attacked anyone is if it was harassed. It didn't stop there. Several other things got on everyone's nerves. Several confrontations on her problems occurred but nothing changed. If anything her habits got worst. She blamed this activity on a chemical imbalance. But we all knew she wasn't taking her medication. She had reason to believe God was going to cure her, but that's another story altogether. Terry's temper increased each time we saw her. Terry also began telling stories to Jean and Mary about the other. The stories were lies so she could break up Jean and Mary's quick friendship. Terry's idea of having a new roommate was so she could have another friend. Since this didn't happen, she was jealous. After all this Jean and Mary couldn't take it anymore. At 10 O'clock Monday night, Terry came in after a date. Jean and Mary wanted to talk about how things had to change. Terry didn't want to talk or listen. After a heated exchange, Terry ran out the door, telling them she had already talked to their landlord and was moving out Saturday. The next morning, Jean was on the phone when it went dead. Jean and Mary went upstairs to use the neighbors phone to call the phone company to see what happened. Terry apparently called early the previous morning to have the phone disconnected. This really pissed off Jean and Mary. This meant that Terry was going to move, three days into the month, and had no intentions on telling Jean and Mary till it was over. On their way back downstairs they saw Terry was there, with a friend, already going through the kitchen looking for "her stuff." Another heated exchange occurred and once again she left. She apparently told her friend stories about "what really happened," which contributed to the argument. We changed the locks shortly after so that she would not disturb our things until we could all be there to watch her move out. This went over well and she moved out. Later that day, they found out Terry didn't talk to the landlord and they had to come up with the remainder of the rent. Jean and Mary live much happier now. We're not sure what's going to happen to Terry, but we do want to wish her and her future roommates the best of luck. The moral of this story is that you have to be careful who you choose to live with. It might look good on the surface, but you need to look deeper than that before you jump in.

Vandals get defensive in league sweep of UM and MSU

By LOREN ROBERTS
Sports Editor

It wasn't the largest point total accumulated in one weekend by the Idaho Vandal men's basketball team, but you won't find the team taking offense to the outcome.

Idaho, which had been averaging 76 points a game prior to this past weekend, emphasized defense in defeating the University of Montana Friday night, 60-50, and Montana State University Saturday night, 63-46, in its Big Sky openers.

"(This weekend) we wanted to go 2-0 and improve," forward Orlando Lightfoot, who totaled 48 points in the two game span said. "I'd say we improved on guarding for long periods of time."

Against the two-time defending conference champion Grizzlies, Idaho held UM to an ice cold 37 percent field goal percentage, and a 7-0 run late in the second half pushed Idaho to its eighth win in a row over the Griz in Moscow.

"We've been doing that all year," UM head coach Blaine Taylor said of his team's inability to win games down the stretch. "A young team just doesn't know how to take control (of a game) yet."

The Grizzlies, who start five new faces this season and are without guard Gary Kane, needed production from starters Travis DeCuire and Jeremy Lake to compete with the more experienced Vandals. The two-guard tandem, which had been averaging a combined 21 points this year, were held in check on 2-for-14 shooting. DeCuire finished with two points and Lake dropped in just four.

"I thought our front line kids played well," Taylor said. "We had been getting production from our perimeter players but not tonight."

In the first 20 minutes, Lightfoot hit two 3-pointers in an 8-0 Vandal run to put Idaho up top 27-16 with 4:15 remaining before the intermission. UM countered right back, though, as the Griz ripped off an 8-0 run of its own behind four points from forward Matt Kempfert. A 3-pointer by

Idaho guard Andre Whitney put the Vandals up by the narrow margin of 30-24 at halftime.

UM's key in staying on Idaho's heels was due to the Grizzlies holding a 26-16 rebounding advantage.

"I think we showed a lot of character in the second half just in rebounding," Lightfoot said. "If we'd have let them (UM) rebound in the second half like they did in the first we would have lost the game."

Lightfoot, who finished with a game-high 23 points, scored Idaho's first four of the second half, but a 7-0 UM run brought the Grizzlies to within one. Marvin Ricks found his shooting touch in the second half, though, in hitting three 3-pointers to secure Idaho's first conference win of the season in front of 4,700 fans.

In spite of falling to a tough Idaho team that gave the Grizzlies chances to take the game away from them, Taylor was pleased with the effort his young squad showed, especially on defense and rebounding.

"I really challenged our kids with rebounding," Taylor said of his team which slipped to 0-2 in conference after falling to Eastern Washington the following night. "I thought they played well all night, but the reason there is a scoreboard is to make points."

UM finished with a 42-27 advantage on the boards—the first time this season Idaho has been outrebounded.

"If I looked at those stats I'd say I didn't know what happened," head coach Larry Eustachy said of rebound deficiency on Idaho's part. "They're (UM) mentally tough, physical and a well coached team. We were just outphysicaled."

Center Josh Lachuer led UM with 14 points on 7-of-7 shooting from the field: Kempfert had 12 points while pulling down a game-high 10 rebounds.

Saturday night Eustachy notched his 50th win as Idaho's head coach as the Vandals again recorded a strong defensive effort in winning its sixth game in a row, and nine of the last 10.

Forward Dan Serkin, who's parents flew up for the games from East St. Louis after getting word that he'd see extensive minutes, came off the bench to score seven points and snare five rebounds. Both were season highs for the 6-7 junior college

"Every game feels like the first game," Serkin said with a laugh. "Luckily when I got in I made some good passes and played physical."

MSU, which is without all-league guard Johnny Mack who's lost for the season with a knee injury, turned to forward Art Menefee to pick up the scoring deficit. The lone senior on the starting roster mustered just 13 points as the Vandals centered on the 6-6 shooter.

"Menefee is our go to guy but we need more people to step up," MSU head coach Mick Durham said. "You're not going to win many games scoring 46 points."

Idaho held the 'Cat's floor shooting to a mere 30-percent in the first half to take a 26-20 lead. The Vandal defense constantly forced MSU to run the shot clock down to under 0:10 and then attempt desperation 3-pointers.

Tempo slows down in Vandal wins

■ New Fri.-Sat. schedule may affect pace

By LOREN ROBERTS
Sports Editor

For as long as can be remembered, the Idaho Vandal men's basketball team played its league games on a Thursday night-Saturday night rotation in order to give the two competing squads a short rest in between games. This season the schedule has been changed and all of Idaho's conference match-ups will be on consecutive nights with the exception of a road game at Weber State on Thursday, Jan. 28.

The new system, which Idaho head coach Larry Eustachy feels plays no significant difference determining the production of the teams within the Big Sky, gives athletes the opportunity to have more time for academics in cutting down on travel time.

Although the quality of basketball shouldn't change due to the new policy, Montana State head coach Mick Durham feels that slower paced games will be seen on Saturdays as a result of tiredness.

"I think you're going to see a slower tempo on Saturday nights like you did tonight, and there will be more zone defenses," Durham said.

With that philosophy being considered, then both of Idaho's games this past weekend appeared that they were being played on a Saturday night. Fast break points were few and far between and field goal percentage for Idaho, Montana and MSU averaged out to a lackluster 39 percent in Idaho's two wins.

Eustachy, though, even after the home sweep, is still weary about his teams ability to win games while shooting poorly.

"When I sit down on the bench I want to know that no matter how bad we shoot the ball, we'll still have a chance to win. I don't have that feeling right now."

Montana schools drop Lady Vandals to 4-9

By DOUG TAYLOR
Staff Writer

The state of Montana didn't prove to be hospitable in its role as host to the University of Idaho women's basketball team.

Bumpy roads continued for Idaho's Lady Vandals as the team lost games to the University of Montana and Montana State University this past weekend.

The two losses dropped the Lady Vandals to 0-2 in the Big Sky Conference, 4-9 overall for the 1992-93 season. The Bobcats and Grizzlies also extended an Idaho losing streak that is now at five games.

The dual curse of double-digit turnover figures and getting out-rebounded continued to haunt the Lady Vandals in their games against the Grizzlies and the Bobcats.

On Friday, the Lady Vandals traveled to Missoula for a meeting with last year's conference champions, and the Grizzlies showed no signs of losing their stranglehold on the top spot.

Montana raced out to a 43-21 halftime lead and continued their attack in the second half for a 77-59 victory.

Kristy Langton, a 5-10 freshman forward, led a balanced Grizzly scoring attack with 13 points and seven rebounds. Kelly Pilcher and leading scorer Ann Lake combined for 20 points, seven assists and five steals.

Balanced scoring is nothing new for the Grizzlies as ten players played 10 or more minutes in the game and eight players scored six or more points.

The five steals from Lake and Pilcher were part of 11 team steals that played a part in 23 Idaho turnovers. Idaho, meanwhile, collected just two steals, and the Grizzlies were forced into just five turnovers.

Idaho was outrebounded by only a 48-45 margin, but the measure of difference occurred on the offensive boards as Montana collected 21 rebounds while Idaho had just 10.

Idaho coach Laurie Turner thought her team's slow start in the first half was a major factor in the loss.

"We started flat like this team has done on more than one occasion this season," Turner said. "The first few possessions we were fine, but then we started turning the ball over, and we got ourselves in a big hole."

Kortnie Edwards and Jennifer Clary led Idaho's effort with 16 and 15 points, respectively. Edwards also snared seven rebounds for the Lady Vandals. Karen Poncina chipped in 10 points and a team-high eight boards.

"This was probably the best game of the year from Karen and Kortnie," Turner said. "Our inside game was really strong."

Brenda Kuehlthau, the Lady Vandals second-leading scorer, was not a factor against the Grizzlies as she scored only three points before fouling out midway through the second half.

Montana coach Robin Selvig said his team's effort against the Lady Vandals might have been the best against any opponent so far this year.

"I would definitely say this was one of our better efforts," said Selvig, whose team moved to 2-0 in BSC play and 10-3 overall. "We played about as well as we could. We got after them and put pressure on them."

Despite the relative ease with which his team won, Selvig said that Idaho is a contender for post-season play.

"I think Idaho is going to be a good club and have a legitimate shot at the Big Sky tournament," Selvig said. "They are struggling at the moment, but that is only because they have been on the road for so long. After so many straight road games, any club would be fatigued."

Turner disagreed with Selvig. "In my mind, that's an excuse because at this level, you live to play games, whether on the road or at home," Turner said. "With the kinds of mistakes we're making right now, it really doesn't matter whether we are on the road or at home."

Still, Selvig's earlier comments might have some validity as Idaho's last home game came on Dec. 5. When they return to Memorial Gym for a Jan. 21 game with EWU, the team will have been on the road for well over a month.

Idaho played its 11th straight road game in Bozeman Saturday night, and it marked the first true collapse of the season for the Lady Vandals.

The Bobcats ran around, through and over the Lady Vandals in assuming a 23-4 lead in the first half, which turned into a 29-10 lead at halftime.

It marked the eighth time that the Lady Vandals have trailed at halftime this year, and in those eight games, they are 1-7.

The second half resembled the first 20 minutes as UI was outscored 45-35 to let the Bobcats claim a 74-45 win that moved MSU to 2-0 in conference play and 8-5 overall.

Kuehlthau shook off her sub-par performance from Friday to lead the Lady Vandals in scoring with 16 points. She also had seven rebounds for Idaho.

Cass Bauer, the Bobcats leading scorer with nearly 16 points a contest, topped her season-scoring average by igniting for 19 points on 9-of-15 shooting. Brooke Svendsen contributed 13 points on 3-of-4 shooting from

"I feel more secure about our team defensive-wise," Eustachy said. "Their (MSU's) lack of experience minute-wise showed up tonight."

MSU had its best chance to take the lead early in the second half as guards Kwesi Coleman and Scott Halter both hit 3-pointers in pulling the Bobcats to within two, 32-30. But Serkin's 3-point play sparked a 14-3 Idaho run and put the game out of reach for MSU.

"I thought the key stretch was when we were down seven and Marvin Ricks gets fouled and makes all three foul shots," Durham said. "That broke our back."

Lightfoot led all scorers with 25 points and grabbed 10 rebounds, his third double-double of the season.

IDAHO INFO-- The two wins give the University of Idaho basketball program 997 wins in the school's 87-and-a-half year basketball history. If the Vandals win the next two contests against Eastern Washington and Weber State, No. 1,000 could come at Northern Arizona on Jan. 30... Idaho is now 34-2 at home under Eustachy and have a 15-game home winning streak.

Idaho squad honored

By DOUG TAYLOR
Staff Writer

The University of Idaho took time Thursday to honor Tom Hilbert's Big Sky champion volleyball team that made it to the NCAA tournament for the first time in school history.

The 24-7 season that Hilbert's squad enjoyed this year was the best in school history and gave Hilbert his first conference championship.

Five awards were given at the team's annual banquet, which was held at Moscow's University Inn-Best Western.

Team members voted on the most inspirational award, and the award was won by senior outside hitter Heather McEwen.

The other four awards were voted on by Hilbert and his coaching staff.

Amie Hanks, a first-team all-conference setter and MVP of the Big Sky tournament, was voted the most improved player on the squad. Hanks wasn't even a starter part of the time last year as a junior.

McEwen landed another award in winning the team's most valuable player award.

Jessica Puckett, who managed a 4.0 GPA while playing volleyball this year, won the Kathy Clark scholar-athlete award. The 6-1 Puckett was a starting outside hitter for the Vandals this year.

The Amanda Gammage

sportsmanship-dedication award went to Leah Smith. According to Hilbert, the 5-9 Deary, Idaho native unselfishly decided to redshirt this season in order to break up the abundant class of outside hitters on the team. Hilbert said Smith, however, was still an integral part of the team by attending all practices.

In other volleyball news, it was learned that Lynn Hyllind has made a verbal commitment to attend Idaho next fall.

Hyllind, a setter from Vancouver B.C., will probably receive some playing time in her first year because walk-on setter Kim Johnson has apparently left the team.

Hilbert said that Johnson cited needs for more study time in explaining why she left the team. Johnson, a 5-11 freshman who hails from Encinitas, Calif., is still at UI and will be pursuing her degree here.

Dee Porter has been rumored to be the probable successor to Hanks at setter while Tzvetelina Yanchulova and Mindy Rice are two players who will be competing for McEwen's starting position.

As a team, the Bobcats shot only 45 percent but held the Lady Vandals to just 33 percent shooting.

Idaho paved the way for the MSU run by committing 24 turnovers and getting outrebounded 42-35.

Turner said Idaho wasn't mentally into this contest.

"The first half against Montana St. was probably the worst half of basketball we have played this year," Turner said. "We had no chemistry on the floor, and nobody wanted the ball."

Although Turner downplayed her team's struggles with their extended road schedule, she said the friendly confines of Memorial will be a factor in Thursday's 7 p.m. match-up with the Eagles. "Anytime you're at home, there is a comfort zone, and so teams naturally tend to do better at home," Turner said.

Turner had clear plans on what the team would do in preparation for the Eagles this week.

"If there is one area we're really struggling in right now it is taking care of the basketball," Turner said. "We are going to work on that in practice."

Native Americans perform historic dances

By JASON UHLMAN
Contributing Writer

The Apache Crown, the Southwest Eagle, the Hoop, and the Zuni Butterfly are just a few of the dances the world renowned American Indian Dance Theatre will perform at the Beasley Coliseum in Pullman Feb. 2.

With a cast of 22 dancers, a dazzling display of color, dancing skill, and deep rooted spirituality, the American Indian Dance Theatre portrays the living culture of yesterday's American Indian by displaying a vitality that is present today.

The show features a brand new performance, the Northwest Dance Suite, which adds another dimension to the quality and magnitude of the production.

The spectacular finale puts the performers head to head in brilliant color trying to out do one another in the competitive Fancy Dance.

The Company was formed in 1987 and already has an impressive list of achievements. A few include a major television special, performances in Paris, Italy, Morocco, Scotland and Algeria, extensive touring throughout the United States and Canada, and a Grammy nomination for the original cast album. The Grammy nomination is a first for Native American music.

The American Indian Dance Theatre Program and the 15 tribes that compose its members offer a unique opportunity to see the ritualistic splendor of dances taken from each of the tribes. The tribal Dances are choreographed both separately and together without losing integrity and meaning.

The show is being sponsored by Festival Dance and Performing Arts as part of its Great Performances Series.

"The mixing of authentic and theatrical dancing is such a unique opportunity for the different tribes that it is very powerful," said Joann Muneta, executive director of Festival Dance and Performing Arts. "It is quite a moving experience to watch."

Tickets for the 7:30 performance are available at Beasley Coliseum in Pullman, Ticket Express at the UI Student Union Building, Albertson's in Lewiston and all G&B outlets in Spokane and Couer d'Alene. Prices range from $6 to $20. Classes and groups of 20 or more are encouraged to call Festival Dance at 883-3267 for special group rates.

Individuals who would like to see more of the American Indian Dance Theatre should watch local PBS television listings for an upcoming special in the spring of 1993.

Comedy night at UI

By HALO DEWITT
Staff Writer

Lisa-Gay Tremblay and Buzz Sutherland will appear Friday, Jan. 22 at 7:30 p.m. at A Night of Comedy in the University Of Idaho Administration Auditorium.

Tremblay's act, which starts off the evening of comedy, plays on life's little quirks. She has performed her stand-up act on VH-1's "Standup Spotlight" and the "Showtime Comedy Club Network." She was also the first woman to appear at the Montreal "Just for Laughs Festival."

Sutherland has appeared on MTV's "Half Hour Comedy Hour," "Comedy on the Road" and "Caroline's Comedy Hour."

He has also hosted a radio show and a television show. Sutherland has been in the stand-up business for six years and he is featured at approximately 100 colleges a year.

According to Sutherland, he got into comedy shortly after he graduated from the University of Missouri at Columbia. During college he worked as a bartender in a comedy club, and, due to shortage of jobs, continued to tend bar after graduation. He said, in a phone interview, that he considered himself funnier than the people performing in the club night after night, so he started to put an act together.

Then one night, according to Sutherland, his boss asked him if he would like to fill in for a comedian who could not be there. He saw his chance, he said, and agreed to perform. After that he became a regular on the comedy scene.

Sutherland said he does his own jokes, which are "an exaggeration of personal experiences." He said his act is a "home-spun" combination of visually expressive humor as well as verbal humor. His act is based on his own family and the "life without Mom and Dad" experience, Sutherland said.

He will perform in Spokane and all over the Northwest before he arrives in Moscow. He also said he will average about two shows a day, performing in Moscow and all over the Northwest until he leaves the area to tour the Midwest colleges Feb. 3.

Tickets for the Lisa-Gay Tremblay and Buzz Sutherland show went on sale Jan. 15 in the UI Ticket Express office. The cost is $3 for UI Undergraduates and $5 general admission. The event is sponsored by ASUI Productions.

Jazz greats toot trumpets at Feb. festival

By LANAE EMPEY
Staff Writer

Music which used to live only in dark, smokey nightclubs, is coming into the open in full swing Feb. 23-24 during the annual Lionel Hampton/Chevron Jazz Festival in the Kibbie Dome.

Jazz giants like the late Dizzy Gillespie, Wyton Marsalis, the Hank Jones Trio and Lionel Hampton, himself, have flocked to UI for 26 years to participate in the four-day long festival. This year, Lou Rawls, Clark Terry, Benny Powell, Herb Ellis and Junior Mance are only a few of the jazz all-stars performing.

As a pre-festival attraction, the UI Symphony Orchestra will be playing with Hampton in a Gala Concert, Feb. 23 at 8 p.m. in the University Auditorium. Hampton will play his own "King David Suite."

Kicking off the festival will be the Pepsi International World Jazz Concert, Feb. 24 at 7 p.m. in the Kibbie Dome. Hampton, vibes, and the Lionel Hampton Quartet will perform. Also performing is the Gene Harris Quartet featuring: Gene Harris (piano), Ron Eschete (guitar), Paul Humphrey (drums) and Luther Hughes (bass).

Solo artists from all over the world will perform including: Arturo Sandoval from Cuba (trumpet), Claudio Roditi from Brazil (trumpet), Brian Bromberg (bass), Igor Butman (tenor saxophone), and Andrei Kitaev (piano), all from Russia, and Dee Daniels (vocals).

Feb. 25, also at 7 p.m. is the Delta Airlines Special Guest Concert. Joining Hampton and his quartet will be Marian McPartland (piano) and Herb Ellis (guitar). The Ray Brown Trio featuring: Ray Brown (bass), Benny Green (piano) and Jeff Hamilton (drums), will be one of two groups. The other, Straight Ahead, features: Cynthia Dewberry (vocals and flute), Regina Carter (violin and vocals), Marion Hayden-Banfield (bass and vocals), and Gayelynn McKinney (drums and vocals). Vanessa Rubins (vocals), and Brian Bromberg (bass), will also perform.

Winning groups, the UI Jazz Choir and guest artist will perform at 4:45 p.m. Feb. 26, at the Vocal Winners Concert in the Kibbie Dome.

The All-Star Concert will begin at 8 p.m. that evening. The concert will include: Hampton (vibes), Lou Rawls (vocals), Clark Terry (trumpet), Harry "Sweets" Edison (trumpet), James Moody (tenor saxophone), Al Grey (trombone) Slide Hampton, (trombone), Benny Powell (trombone), Herb Ellis (guitar), Milt Hinton (bass), Junior Mance (piano), and Grady Tate (drums).

The final day of the festival will have two concerts. At 4:45 p.m., the winning groups, UI Jazz Band I with guest artist will present the Instrumental Winners Concert.

Hampton and his New York Big Band with special giants of jazz will conclude the festival at 8 p.m. in the GTE Giants of Jazz Concert in the Kibbie Dome.

Tickets for all four nights are available, according to UI Ticket Manager, Claudia Dambra. Ticket prices range from $16-$25, depending on seating area. The $16 tickets are in areas mostly filled with visiting large musical groups. The $25 tickets are for the Feb. 24 concert. The best tickets for the average viewer are the $18 tickets, Dambra said.

Passes for $60 and $68 are available for all four nights.

Artfully brief...

■ Ridenbaugh Gallery invites all undergraduates at the University of Idaho to participate in the Undergraduate Juried Exhibition to be held Feb. 18 to March 2.

"Any kind of art can be submitted in the exhibition, from sculptures and pottery to paintings or photos," said Lorena Herrington, who works for Prichard Gallery.

Prichard Gallery is connected with Ridenbaugh Gallery to work not only with the public, but UI students as well. "In the past, this exhibition has mainly dealt with hanging art, but will accept all types of art this year," Herrington said.

Works entered into the competition must be submitted Feb. 9-11 between 1 and 5:30 p.m. The show's opening reception will be Feb. 19 from 4 to 7 p.m., where prizes for winning pieces will be awarded. Each submitted piece requires a $1 entry fee.

■ Ridenbaugh Gallery will also host the Second Annual Idaho High School Art Exhibition from Jan. 19 to Feb. 4. The exhibition creates a chance for high school students around Idaho to display their art work.

Last year's exhibit resulted in increased freshmen enrollment in the UI art program and a greater interaction by area teachers in terms of visits by groups of high school students to the galleries and classes.

First Interstate Bank of Idaho contributed $600 for awards this year. The UI Department of Art sponsors the exhibition. Ridenbaugh Gallery hours are 1 to 5 p.m. Monday, Tuesday and Thursday, 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Wednesday and Friday, and 12 to 5 p.m. Saturday.
