A safe way to save lives, give blood

By DOUG TAYLOR
Assistant Editor

Over the years, the American Red Cross has heard all manner of excuses for not giving blood. Some of the more prominent ones now are fears about contracting the AIDS virus or anxiety about needles.

So accustomed have Red Cross people become to these excuses that many offices have a top-20 list of excuses that people make to avoid giving blood.

To counter these excuses, blood drive representatives offer a simple but strong argument — giving blood saves lives.

With this in mind, the University of Idaho blood drive kicks off the spring campaign this week in the SUB's Appaloosa Room. The UI blood drive is one of many across the Pacific Northwest that will try to raise 40,000 units by year's end.

Sponsored primarily by the American Red Cross' Snake River Region office in Boise and with partial funding by the ASUI, the UI blood drive runs from 12-4 p.m. on Wednesday and Thursday and 8-11 a.m. on Friday.

As in past blood drives, there is a sign-up sheet for interested donors at the SUB information desk. Scott Windley, who is co-chairman of the UI blood drive along with Sean Syverson, said that many time slots are still available.

Windley is hoping the event is as successful as the blood drive during the fall semester where 375 units were collected.

"We needed to collect 360 units of blood last semester, and we ended up with 375," Windley said. "This semester we're pushing for 330 units."

Windley, who is pursuing a master's degree in architecture, said there are some minimal requirements for people interested in giving blood.

"People need to weigh at least 110 pounds, and we have a scale on hand to check," Windley said. "People also need to eat a good meal at least four hours before giving blood. If they haven't done these things, they can't give."

Other requirements stipulate that donors must be between the ages of 17 and 70 and also be in good health.

One of the most common misconceptions regarding a blood drive is the risk of acquiring AIDS through tainted needles. This shouldn't be a concern, however, because all needles are sterile and used only once before being discarded. No needle is

Workshop teaches to solve conflicts peacefully

By DAVID JACKSON
Staff Writer

In an age where the popularity of lawyers ranks right up there with that of politicians, one has to admire a workshop where law students are taught how to avoid the courtroom.

That was the goal of the Conflict Resolution Training Workshop held last weekend at the University of Idaho College of Law. Law students, as well as education students, business students, and natural resources students learned how to avoid litigation and solve conflicts by more peaceful means.

"Our main goal was to shift emphasis from a litigation based approach to alternatives such as an adversarial system," said Frances Thompson, the coordinator of the workshop. "We want to stress collaborative problem solving."

Experts from four areas, family/child custody, education, environmental/natural resources and business taught techniques for conflict management that involved mediation and arbitration, rather than litigation.

"Mediation is where both parties are in complete control," Thompson explained. "They control the final outcome, including any final written agreements. Arbitration is where a third party, not necessarily neutral, steps in to help."

An example of the techniques used by the workshop is called the assisted problem-solving practice. The steps involved in that practice include cooling off, stating the problem, brainstorming for solutions, considering the consequences of those possible solutions, trying a solution and analyzing the outcome of that solution.

Thompson feels these ideas are useful to all people involved in person to person conflicts, not just lawyers.

"These mediation skills can be applied in a variety of settings," she stated. "Obviously the court connected ones are for lawyers, but there are also applications in education as an example."

Heidi Stoner, a UI senior in accounting, was a participant in the education workshop. She explained how Donna Johnson, an elementary school teacher from Lewiston, made the transition from general applications to specific examples in education.

"She used examples like teachers dealing with conflicts between students and teaching students how to deal with problems without going to teachers," she said.

Thompson, a Moscow family practitioner, feels the profession of arbitrators, while once confined to big cities, is now filtering down to smaller areas.

"There are many associations, such as the American Arbitration Association, dedicated solely to this practice," she explained. Ten years ago, this was a relatively new field. This is definitely the way disputes will be decided in the future."

Stoner agreed with Thompson, citing the versatility of the methods taught at the workshop.

"You could use these methods to solve any conflict between people," she said. "Husbands and wives, parents and kids; everybody can benefit."

Thompson said 108 people attended some or all of the workshop, which went from Friday through Sunday. She felt the workshop, which was sponsored by the UI College of Law and the Martin Institute for Peace Studies and Conflict Resolution among others, was "incredibly well received."

Mediation used to solve salary disputes

By GREG BURTON
Staff Writer

So often these days when one hears of arbitration or mediation and think solely of the $40 million ballplayer squeezing another dollar out of some fan's hotdog budget.

What was evidenced this weekend during a seminar for alternative dispute resolution is mediation as an almost altruistic endeavor for lawyers and laypersons alike.

But even as a wealth of conflict resolution training was distributed at the University of Idaho Law School, conflict remained between university administrators, deans, the Idaho Board of Education and even students.

Even Idaho Governor Cecil Andrus threw his cap into the battle against state legislators determined to trim education budgets throughout the state. Andrus interjected some of his own mediation when he demanded university administration costs be better accounted for.

"These costs are excessive and lack proper controls and accountability," said Andrus.

And accountability has been a factor in university disputes over educators salaries, and the Idaho Board of Education has begun to pull its weight as a mediating body.

Acting Law School Dean Smith lost a conflict resolution himself earlier this month when the board, compelled by member, and Moscow Attorney Roy Mosman, voted down a proposed $8,000 pay raise for Smith.

Smith had already received some of the proposed increases in

Recall petition for Rock dropped

By JEFF KAPOSTASY
Staff Writer

ASUI President Richard Rock no longer has to worry about anyone trying to recall him.

In a move that went largely unnoticed, John Goettsche dropped the recall petition when Rock decided to drop the referendum seeking student input on the Non-Discrimination Committee.

Goettsche said that several weeks ago, Rock agreed to stop opposing the work of the Non-Discrimination Committee if Goettsche would drop the recall petition.

The committee was working to update the Statement of Student Rights to forbid discrimination based on sexual preference. Although Rock never explicitly opposed the Committee's work, Goettsche said Rock was definitely "dragging his feet" and being of no help to the committee.

"Rock was playing political shellgames," Goettsche said. "The referendum was a classic example of this."

But Rock said he was prepared to drop the referendum regardless of the recall petition. Since the Faculty Council was set to amend the Student Code of Conduct disallowing discrimination based on sexual preference, Rock said the referendum became a basically moot issue.

"I was curious if he (Goettsche) would drop the petition if I dropped the referendum," Rock said. "He said that he would."

Goettsche and five other students are currently working to amend the student constitution to include similar protection for homosexuals.

Rock does not regret proposing the referendum. He said he was trying to help the committee, and was not dragging his feet.

"The student government is there to represent the people," Rock said. "The best way to do that is through the ballot box."

"If he wanted students to have a vote, give them a vote," responded Goettsche. "Not some referendum on the work of the committee."

This may be the last chapter in the battle between those who say Rock discriminates homosexuals, and Rock, who said he never has. With various UI organizations working to add sexual preference protection, the controversy may soon be just an unpleasant memory for both sides.

Goettsche said he is glad Rock took a step back.

"I got him to quit being so aggressive. He was stalling, and people were getting hurt."

"I suppose I backed down a ever used on two different individuals.

Besides this practice, there are also lifestyle questionnaires that try to select people whose habits haven't placed them at risk for diseases such as AIDS.

"When people get there, they answer a set of questions on a form," Syverson said. "After that, there are nurses who ask them a specific set of questions. The final step is that when people go to actually give blood, they answer some final questions."

Syverson said that privacy is one of the top considerations in the questioning process.

"If a person sees a question and says 'that applies to me,' that person can leave unnoticed without people making judgements about his personal habits," Syverson said. "We try to keep everything private."

When considering the importance of giving blood, Windley thought it all boiled down to common sense.

"People can die when they could have survived," he said.

Augmenting Windley's thoughts were some statistics from the office of Dolores Dugan, who is the donor resource department consultant with the Red Cross office in Boise.

These statistics revealed the blood supply has to be constantly renewed because the components of blood only have a limited lifespan. Perhaps a more telling fact is that while only 4 percent of the U.S. population gives blood, there is a need for a unit of blood every 12 seconds.

Terror in Guatemala truth or fiction?

By NATALIE SHAPIRO
Staff Writer

Coalition for Central America members hosted a reception Tuesday evening at a photo exhibit showing the harsh daily lives of the communities of population in resistance in Guatemala.

The exhibit is displayed in the University of Idaho SUB Vandal Lounge through April 1. It was created by the national Network in Solidarity with the People of Guatemala and is presented locally by the CCA and Students in Support of Central America.

According to the coalition, the photos and captions tell the story of everyday life in the CPRs, which are a collection of indigenous Maya natives living in the jungles of western and northern Guatemala while on the run from frequent military sweeps.

The introduction to the exhibit stated "In the heart of the Guatemalan rainforest live peasant communities who have been fleeing official military repression for ten years. They are refugees within their own land; they are hiding and rely on the land, hard work and ingenuity for survival."

According to the exhibit, in the 1960's and 1970's, the Guatemalan government encouraged peasants to colonize El Peten to relieve pressure for land reform. The peasants moved to the forests to farm, organizing into cooperatives. The military perceived this as subversion, and began attacking the cooperatives.

Asked how the photos might affect the safety of the CPRs, coalition member Kenton Bird replied "publicity makes it more difficult for the Guatemalan military to attack as pictures can be taken of them too. The Guatemalan government is concerned about their image." Added Audrianna Jones, co-coordinator of the coalition, "the CPRs are constantly moving."

Not everyone agreed with the exhibit's statements. Mario Paiz, a Guatemalan native, felt the information is biased. "CPR is just another name changed from guerrillas. Five years ago, they were called the Popular Army of the Poor, or Armed Revolutionaries. They were communist-based groups."

George Garry, program coordinator for NISGUA in Washington D.C., retorted this wasn't true. "There are probably a couple thousand guerrillas that took up arms because of a lack of results of organizing that they saw to form other political parties," he explained, "but the CPRs are an unarmed group of people who want to peacefully make changes."

Paiz explained the Mayan people have been mistreated by both the military and the guerrillas. "First, the communists arrived (to the Mayan villages) and ask for food, which they pay for. If they don't give food, they will be killed. But the indigenous are afraid because the military would find out. The true Mayans were caught in the middle of this."

Paiz said the Guatemalan government is in favor of cooperatives. "If people are united, people are stronger, and won't give money to communists.

"This guy's just totally reactionary," scoffed Garry. He explained that there is a 80 to 90 percent poverty rate, most of the Mayans work on land used to grow export-based crops rather than subsistence food. Workers aren't paid much, and they are inadequately protected from pesticides. "So, they started realizing that they should band together and get a decent wage, not get exploited."

"The military is afraid of anybody organizing, and the people were organizing into church study groups to study why they are poor. CPRs were formed in the early 1980's when the military came into highland villages and massacred tens of thousands of people, totally destroyed 440 villages," Garry stated.

Garry disagreed with Paiz's statement on cooperatives. "Upon decimating villages, they (military) rounded up survivors, bringing them to relocation camps," he explained, "after three months of brainwashing, they were placed in model villages, which is an oxymoron, because they are actually anti-model village."

Paiz gave recent accounts of the military forces indigenous people to serve on patrols to hunt guerrillas. He explained that in the camps, different groups of Mayans weren't used to living together. "Indigenous people patrolled themselves, rather than the military doing it, for the indigenous peoples' safety."

previous salary, which will be deducted later. Smith seemed relieved to have the matter settled, but acknowledged the greater tax on his time and energy fulfilling the dean's duties seemed unfair.

Mosman has also led the charge against salary increases for the new agriculture and engineering deans, who have yet to be hired. It has been customary in the past for UI to promote new openings for college deans at 10 percent higher than the previous dean's salary.

Smith may have thought he found a friend when earlier this month Andrus appointed UI Law School graduate Curtis Eaton to the education board, but Eaton purports an allegiance to all of Idaho's schools.

"We have to recognize that all of the institutions around this state have strengths," said Eaton, who also attended Idaho State University.

little," Rock said. "Maybe not backed down, but I didn't want to re-ignite or fan the flames."

Despite making headlines when the recall petition started,

Goettsche never reached the amount of signatures needed to get the recall election process in motion. If enough signatures had been generated, a two-thirds majority vote would have been needed to remove Rock from office.

Let's not be in too much of a rush to praise Limbaugh

What reeks of stupidity, and makes you more nauseous than Star Trek?

Why, it's Rush Limbaugh, of course! Yes, indeed the man who earns his vast riches by bashing the hell out of anyone who dares to disagree.

Easy, Mr. Rush. Before you label the Argonaut a leftist, radical, subversive journal used by the UI's secret Communist regime to brainwash students, a few things need to be said.

First of all, you are a very entertaining performer. People prudent enough to know you are not a conservative commentator but a reject from MTV's late-night comedy hour are allowed and able to laugh until tears roll down the face.

Speaking of laughs—Rush, did you once write for the Vanguard?

Unfortunately, some people are catching the Rush bug in a big way, as is evident by the number of people tuning into your radio and television shows. Now some do it for comic relief. But others actually believe in what you are saying. Ohmygosh! What a scary thought.

Smart Democrats like Mario Cooohmoe, as you so creatively label him have been smart enough to laugh in your face.

But you should also be considered a zit on the face of Republicans, kind of like David Duke. Instead of showing the brilliance and wit of such renowned conservatives as George Will, William Buckley and Bob Dole, you instead choose to spend your time belittling those who disagree.

So this message goes out to those who tune into Rush for profound political information and insightful observation and commentary: Next time, tune into the Rocky and Bullwinkle Show. More specifically, watch the "Fractured Fairytales" part of the show. You are sure to find a few similarities to Rush Limburger's cheese-whiz show, and at least as much useful political stuff to challenge your friends with.

Perhaps the funniest thing about you Rush is your "I-am-a-God, you-are-scum" outlook on life. Reading and listening to your profound views, one cannot help but think you are really a member of the People for the Contribution of Leftist Ideas Through the Use of Broadcasting in the Form of Overweight Conservatives (PCLITUBFOC). If this is true, than you are brilliant, because liberals come away from your show knowing they chose the right political path.

Rush, you must be very happy. With Clinton in the White House and Democrats ruling the House and Senate, you've got a meal ticket for the next four years. Now, you've got plenty of stuff to have puffy-cheeked temper tantrums about.

I'm dying.

But I'm resolved to the fact. Oh yes, I fought it resolutely for years, but the overwhelming tide of recent trends has drained my energy to fight any longer.

You could call me the Muhammad Ali of death, happy and awe inspiring, yet senseless just the same.

I refuse to talk to doctors, as Dostyevsky put it, out of pure spite.

My condition, in the grand paradox that is this world in which we live, gets worse every day. Particularly so with every new discovery of medical science.

What you may have guessed is I'm dying of heart disease brought on by the extensive use of margarine.

Of course I switched to margarine in the early 1970s, when the expanse of knowledge led me to the belief that I would soon die from severe artery coagulation due to my proclivity to douse bread (as well as potatoes, or anything else associated with eating) with heaps of butter.

As you can imagine, I switched to margarine just about as quick as you can say Blue Bonnet.

Honoring the couriers of spring

Anyone who doubts spring has arrived should open the window and give a listen. The songs of our feathered friends are filling the air like an outdoor symphony.

Do you think winter is still alive? Ask the nearest bluebird and he'll set you straight.

Through the years humans have had a burning fascination with birds. In fact, we were so profoundly envious of their gift of flight that we invented ways to sail through the skies, albeit on wings of metal.

We coined the phrase "eat like a bird" to describe someone who eats lightly, though on the basis of body weight birds probably consume enough to feed a family of four.

Comparatively speaking, that is.

Although at times we may think life is "for the birds," they have managed to find a niche in our literature like few other creatures.

Poe, in his search for the lost

Lenore, gave us a prescient raven. Coleridge tied an albatross around the neck of his ancient mariner.

More recently, Richard Bach wrote about a seagull named Jonathan Livingston, holding a mirror to our modern consciousness in the process.

The Marx Brothers served us a steaming bowl of Duck Soup, Bogart searched for a Maltese Falcon that couldn't fly and Hitchcock chilled us all with the prospect of massive avian retaliation.

Hmm. Could it be that the robins we see roosting around campus are not as harmless as they appear?

Is there anyone whose burden hasn't lightened each March when the air hangs thick with the songs of larks and thrushes?

No matter how green the grass, nor how warm the morning breeze, spring arrives only when the back fence and budding branches are lined with feathered migrants busily scouting for the prime nesting spots.

I have always been awed by migratory birds. Like biological calendars, many make the annual journey from near the Arctic tundra to Central America and back. They see more of the world in a single year than I may ever see in a lifetime.

The best may be yet to come. Within the next few weeks an occasional flock of geese may be seen — and heard — passing over the Palouse. Like a promise, one will be able to hear the harmonies of a distant flock. As the melody grows, expectant eyes

Remeber, women cannot inseminate themselves alone

Editor;

In response to Corgatelli's barely lucid commentary on the use of RU486, I was initially impressed by his lack of compassion. Can there still be men out there who are glad to think of the discomfort and worry that faces every woman about to undergo a pregnancy termination; as if she deserves to be "punished" this way for her oversight or, worse yet, rape? He fails to address the fact that no woman has yet contrived to inseminate herself ALONE.

The more important aspects which he seems content to overlook involve the other uses of a chemical which has been proven effective against illnesses from which men may also suffer: cancer. What about its use in the case of blighted ova; in what might be called "incomplete fertilization" takes place and a woman is impregnated with a growth of cells without the possibility of life. Without RU486, this mass of cells must expel itself following what can be a distressful waiting period, or the same surgery as an abortion must be undertaken. One wonders how Corgatelli might feel if a daughter, sister, wife or aunt was suffering that way, and the only obstruction to her relief was the disproportionate conservative outcry which kept the medicine from her.

Finally, in the face of his misogynist, self-righteous and invasive assertion that women somehow deserve this suffering, I wonder how he would feel if somehow men were forced to undergo the comparable transurethral resection of prostate (TURP) procedure every time they engaged in reproductively irresponsible behavior. You know the one, Corgatelli, where they dilate the urethra, and sort of bore it out, colloquially called the roto-rooter? Stay out of my doctor's office, sir, unless you want someone invading into yours.

—Leslie Gregory

Don't get lost in fundamental fantasyland

Editor;

When you can't deny your opponents' facts or refute their logic, call them names! When those who know the Bible show you that God not only ordered men to kill innocent babies but also did so himself, scream "Out of context!" or "Incorrectly translated!" Or claim that the Bible says the exact opposite of what it actually says. These are the tactics of the religious right when you show them the Book they claim to believe in.

In the Old Testament (Hebrew) religion there was no real life after death. There were a few hints in that direction, but it is only in the latest book in the O.T. that there is an explicit belief in bodily resurrection (Daniel 12:2). At the time of Jesus conservative Jews, the Sadducees, still did not believe in life after death. And the Old Time religion is the belief of many Jews—and non-Jews—today.

But the religious right claim that they know the TRUTH because the Bible tells them so. The Bible tells them nothing of the kind. Not only are there many different ideas about morality, mortality, etc., in the various parts of the Bible; the Bible itself is not inerrant or infallible. In fact, it has more holes than Swiss cheese. A reward of $1,000 has been offered for several years all over the continent to anyone who can put the Genealogy and Nativity stories together into one consistent account. A similar offer is outstanding for putting together the Resurrection stories. These offers have been blessed by a Christian clergyman and endorsed by a Bible scholar who cataloged the variant readings of the New Testament manuscripts in the British Museum Library, the Vatican Library, etc. But no one has claimed either reward. You can't beat the Bible.

Fundamentalism is the most widespread form of mental illness among us today. Bible-thumpers rob the gullible of billions every year. It is truly sad to see this plague in institutions of higher learning. The best way to combat it is to read the Bible in its historical and literary context. That way you won't get lost in the fantasyland of fundamentalism. And the mind you save may be your own.

will begin to scan the horizon for telltale specks.

Once visual contact is made, a small prayer will be whispered — a plea that the geese may see fit to fly close enough so the whistle of their wings can be heard.

The sight of a migrating flock of birds peppering the skies is an equinoctial treat, something nature lovers can dream about during their rocking chair years.

Everyone knows geese fly in formation, but does anyone really know why?

Someone explained it to me long ago, but I have since forgotten. To me, the wonder is not in the "why," but in the simple fact that they do — that they manage to lend their own geometry to the sky.

Scientists give us one possible explanation based on aerodynamics; poets choose to give us another based on anthropomorphism.

In the eyes of the birds themselves, both explanations may be equally valid.

That's not all.

As well as suffering with my obviously swelled and droopy excuse for a heart, my body is full of cancer. I can't pinpoint any exact location, but evidence shows that certain sugar substitutes involved in the production of diet soda cause cancer.

I'm doomed. The sheer irony of it all is I hate diet pop.

Personally I would rather eat great gobs of sugar, but the corporate plot to convert the world's water supply into silly canned beverages, combined with the amazingly hypnotic word, "diet," has crushed the will of my family and friends, and worst of all my wife.

By the rules of cohabitation diet pop is now the only available beverage in my house. Right now executives at Coke are designing a way to provide their products right through our faucet. Don't expect Pepsi to be far behind.

But what I'm really trying to get at, is at this very moment huge portions of my body are poised to fall off, replete with cancer.

And it's not the cancer that really bothers me, it's this dang prostate thing.

What the hell is it, and why on earth is everybody having trouble with it all of a sudden?

Seems to me 20 years ago nobody had prostate trouble, let alone knew what one was.

A typical conversation with a doctor 20 years ago went:

Doctor: "Well Harry the problem seems to be your prostate."

Patient: "Damn, I knew I shouldn't have eaten that meatloaf."

These days a typical conversation at the local watering hole goes:

"What'll it be Frank?"

"Just a diet soda Ralph, my prostate is killing me."

"You too?"

So there is no need to mourn for me. I have prepared myself for death, and even relish it's coming. There seems to be nothing I can do to stop it, and now that I know what I know about prostates I'm almost willing.

So off to the store I go to buy more margarine and diet pop. And if that doesn't do the trick before my prostate goes bonkers, Dr. Kevorkian is just a smile away.

Maybe he has prostate trouble too?

'Mommy I'm so thirsty'

Editor:

"Mommy, I'm so thirsty. I want a drink," was the cry of Susanne Pestroysan's four-year-old daughter as the two lay trapped under collapsed concrete and steel. December 1988 marks history with the worst earthquake in the Soviet Armenia. Beside them lay Susanna's sister-in-law, one of the 55,000 casualties resulting from the disaster. "Mommy I'm thirsty," the cry went on for eight days! Finally survival had precedence over the pleasant things in life. Remembering that blood is sometimes helpful in prolonging life, Susanne cut open a finger so her daughter's dehydration wouldn't persist. Over the eight-day period the mother cut fingers to keep her baby alive.

Life is a precious thing to give. Yet today in America the cost of life is too high. Couples aren't willing to pay the consequences of their actions, and the selfishness of abortion persists at a high rate. Statistics show that an abortion happens every 20 seconds. "Well I am 'pro choice!'" is the cry of the Radical Left. This logic is wrong. Ms. Pestroysan made a choice when she risked her life to see her child live, go to school, see the crumble of the Soviet Union, get married, and grow up. The word "choice" means a number of options, or a variety from which to choose. There is no option in abortion. The child dies, the mother often experiences guilt.

As vice president of the new UI Students for Life, I'm excited to see this group move. A man once said, "A journey begins with a single step." UI Students for Life can and will take this step and make a difference. We're a group about education, awareness and compassion. Children are indeed calling out "Mommy, I'm ready to live." We want to meet that call. If you want to join us please "give us a try" at our weekly meetings every Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the SUB.

Banquet honors Big Sky basketball champions

■ Awards go to five starters of regular season champs

The University of Idaho men's basketball team was honored Saturday night at the annual event at the University Inn in Moscow.

The five available honors were distributed evenly to the 1992-93 starting line up.

Topping the list was a repeat performance by forward Orlando Lightfoot. The 6-7 junior from Chattanooga, TN., received his second straight Gus Johnson award which is given in honor of former Vandal great and NBA player Gus Johnson. In Johnson's one season at Idaho in 1962 he averaged 19.0 points and 20.3 rebounds a game. Lightfoot, who averaged 8.6 boards a game this year, was given the award which signifies the top rebounder and/or defensive player on the team.

Most improved honors went to senior Chauncey McBride. The 6-5 forward from Topeka, KN., upped his scoring averaged from 3.7 points a game last year to 7.1 an outing this year to grab the Ronald White Award. He also improved to 5.5 rebounds a game, up from 2.7 last season. His season was highlighted by a 19 point, 15 rebound performance against Idaho State, a game in which his father was in attendance for the first time.

Marvin Ricks was named the Jay Gano most inspirational player as selected by his teammates. Ricks, a 6-0 senior from Atlanta, GA., became the all-time 3-point holder at Idaho as he drained 104 treys in his one-and-a-half years as a Vandal. Ricks also finished eighth in the league in scoring with a 15.0 average and second in the conference in 3-point field goal percentage.

This year's Oz Thompson Award, given to the player who best inspires sportsmanship, scholarship and leadership went to point guard Ricky Wilson. The 6-0 senior from New Jersey finished second in the league with a 5.5 assist average and also places second on Idaho's single season assist list with 174 this past season.

Junior center Deon Watson pulled down the George Green Award which is given to the team's most unselfish player. Watson finished the season third on the team in scoring with 8.5 points a game and was second in rebounding with 6.8 a game off the glass.

Seattle's weather outshines its hoops

While embarking on a road trip for the Emerald City this past Friday, it was evident that the quality of basketball that my four cronies and myself would see had potential for excitement.

The 1993 NCAA Tournament, now down to the Final Four, has seen a fair share of both mild and major upsets. There was Santa Clara beating up on the respectless Arizona Wildcats in round one, the Western Kentucky Hilltoppers ending Seton Hall's season in the second round and an inspired California Golden Bear team dropping the dynasty of Duke, also on the second day.

But what had begun as a 64 team free-for-all had been whittled down to the Regional Finals, otherwise known as the "Sweet 16", to keep the tournament lingo consistent.

Upon arriving in Seattle there was hope that the games would somehow match the weather. With the sun shining and the temperature somewhere in the mid-50's it was a shame that the roof on the Kingdome wasn't as removable as Mariner managers are.

The first confrontation featured the "Fab 5" of No. 1 seeded Michigan taking on the Colonials of George Washington. Out of Washington D.C., GWU had snuck into the field of 16 by beating No. 5 New Mexico and then pasting Southern University. Michigan hadn't exactly been wiping out its opponents as it needed overtime to "bearly" get by the Bruins of UCLA in second round action.

Loren Roberts

Most of the 24,196 on hand were quite familiar with the "Super Sophomore" of Michigan but very few knew of GWU's fine freshman. Yinka Dare (pronounced Dinka Dar-AY), a seven footer from Nigeria, has been the go-to-guy for the Colonials all season. But with the defensive aggressiveness of Webber, Dare was held to zero points in the Wolverines 72-64 victory. The win was another ugly one for Michigan but was enough for a shot in the "elite eight."

The second game pitted the Vanderbilt Commodores against the Temple Owls. Comedian Bill Cosby, dressed in a dashing maroon jacket, shook hands with fans and chatted with Raider running back Marcus Allen before sitting at press row to watch the game. Cosby, an alumnus of the Philadelphia based university, felt confident of his No. 7 seed team as he continually raised his fist triumphantly after each Owl basket. Temple survived a late Commodore run and moved into the finals against Michigan.

Despite a commendable effort by Temple on Sunday, another sloppy Michigan win sent the Wolverines on to the Final Four for the second straight year. Michigan shouldn't be singled out because most of the play at the tournament was sloppy (i.e. GWU had seven airballs including one from the free throw line) but just the fact of watching big time teams compete was satisfaction in itself.

But not as satisfying as the time outside the Kingdome.

Forde 1st for season

By Loren Roberts
Sports Editor

The University of Idaho women's tennis team was into that shutout thing last week.

On Friday the women ventured over to Pullman to face the Washington State University Cougars and weren't treated too kindly by their Palouse rivals. WSU swept past Idaho 9-0 as the Vandals could only win one set out of possible 19.

Leah Smith, who is now playing at the No. 11 position due to Vandal senior Melanie Forde being lost for the remainder of the season with torn ligaments in her knee, was defeated by Katherine Costain 2-6, 2-6. Smith's performance was similar to the rest of the team's as the other five Vandals lost by a combined score of 160-12. Sophomore Michelle Borgen made the most of her loss as she came the closest for Idaho to a win with a 1-6, 4-6 defeat.

Saturday the women came back to Moscow to play in the Kibbie Dome as they faced the University of Portland Pilots and returned the favor that WSU had given them. No singles player dropped a set as Idaho rolled to a 9-0 victory over the Was Cougars. Costain, the 1992-93 singles runner-up, bounced back to form on Friday before she was flipped by her opponent with a 6-0, 6-0 win. The other five seeds, including a 6-0, 6-1 win by freshman Erin Cicero, mounted a 60-15 advantage over their weaker counterparts. Doubles was much of the same for UP as only Emily Walpole and Mikiel Yandi dropped a set as the Vandals went 3-0 in the dual play.

The Idaho men saw a close match over the weekend as they snuck by WSU in Pullman last Thursday by a score of 5-1. No. 1 seed Magnus Orrod won a three set thriller over Brian Broske 7-7, 6-7, 7-5 to help the Vandals to a 4-2 advantage in singles play. WSU needed a sweep in doubles play to beat Idaho but only came away with two wins as Greg Eastman and Orrod pulled off a 9-7 victory to secure the win.

The women now stand 4-2 overall and have a 1-1 conference record on the season while the men own a 3-4 mark and are 1-2 in league play.

Bike rodeo a success

The fifth annual Mountain Bike Rodeo was held this past Sunday and according to facilities and special events coordinator Jeff Kuhl the good weather made it a success.

"The event went exceptionally well," Kuhl said. "The people who participated in it were really happy with how it went."

The three stage trek was held at the UI Animal Science Farms and consisted of 19 participants. Entrants raced against the clock rather than each other on the muddy course.

Topping the list for the men was Dale Kromarek. He was followed by Allen Worst, Matthew Morrison, Brian Johnson and Troy Sylte. All five are Idaho students.

For the women Maryann Rockey came in first place as she was the only female entrant to finish the course.

Of the competitors only three were not students and that is something Kuhl would like to change for next year.

"We didn't get anybody in the youth category but we're going to try to get some in there next year," Kuhl said.

Campus Recreation would like to thank Terry Uravich of Northwestern Mountain Sports who provided the prizes for the race.

UI baseball club secures first win

By DOUG TAYLOR
Assistant Editor

With the skies finally permitting play, the University of Idaho baseball club was able to look at an actual baseball diamond last weekend.

It's too bad Eastern Washington University rained on the Vandals' parade.

The Eagles took two of three from the Vandals, splitting a Saturday doubleheader before taking a 9-3 win on Sunday. The losses left Idaho with a 1-6 record heading into this weekend's play with Boise St.

Although Idaho was able to claim its first win of the year, the team's overall play left coach Daryl Reierson grumbling. Particularly galling to Reierson was his team's defensive work in the field where they committed 14 errors in the three games.

"Pitching and hitting haven't been too bad considering the number of rainouts we have had this year," Reierson said. "Our fielding is what is hurting us right now, and I can't understand it. We are doing some really stupid things out in the field, and I don't know why because we have good athletes on this team."

Despite Reierson's compliments about his pitching staff, he must have been wincing during Saturday's first game with the Eagles.

Eastern jumped all over UI pitcher Marc Trivelpiece and gave him an old-fashioned beating as he gave up 14 runs in 4 1/3 innings, 12 of which were earned. John Konrad came in and limited the damage for the last 2 2/3 innings, but the Eagles still walked away with a 16-9 win.

Vandals' hitters Mike Cole, Dan Broyles and Rick Gleasman kept matters interesting as each collected two hits during the seven inning contest. Gleasman made the most impact as he collected two hits in three attempts, including a double and two RBI's while Broyles drilled a solo home run, his second of the year.

Reierson said his decision to stay with Trivelpiece was done out of necessity.

"We needed him to stay in there because we just didn't have too many other guys to throw," Reierson said. "I was proud of him for gutting it out."

Rebounding from the first loss, Idaho responded with an 18-3 lashing of the Eagles that was called after five innings because of the 10-run rule.

Many of the Vandals' runs resulted from the graciousness of EWU as Eagles pitchers gave up 15 walks. On the other side of the coin was the Vandals' Bruce Shirley, who struck out six in the complete game victory.

Scott Hochberger and Aaron Anderson provided the offensive support as Hochberger drilled three singles and Anderson added two more with two RBI's. The pair was also efficient in the baserunning department as each scored four runs for the Vandals. Reierson said the damage could have been worse had the Vandals not left so many men on base.

"We scored 18 times, but we still left 11 guys on base," Reierson said. "It's also one of those games where you can't measure your hitters because of the pitching on the other team."

When Reierson mentioned poor fielding, he might have had Sunday's game in mind as Vandal generosity in the field led to the Eagles win.

Pitching on one day's rest, Konrad went 6 2/3 innings and gave up seven runs, only four of which were earned. Nate Diaz went the last 2 1/3 for Idaho, but his fielders made it hard on him by committing three errors.

Matching Shirley's performance from Saturday was EWU pitcher Shane Bird as he gave up just six hits in nine innings.

The only Vandals batters who got to Bird were Hochberger and Shannon Jeffries as each garnered two hits. A double by Cole proved to be the only UI extra-base hit.

Reierson said he knows what he will be emphasizing this week in practice.

"We're going to take a lot of groundballs this week," he said. "We will try to work on the field also and get it into shape after all that rain, but fielding is going to be big this week."

Rock and country to blast in Beasley this weekend

'Prince of Thieves' superstar rocks WSU Sunday

By LANAE EMPEY
Staff Writer

Canadian rock star Bryan Adams will be "Waking Up the Neighbours" April 4 at 7:30 p.m. in the Beasley Performing Arts Coliseum in Pullman.

Adams, whose reputation skyrocketed with the release of the movie Robin Hood, Prince of Thieves, containing his smash ballad "(Everything I Do) I Do It For You," is considered one of the hottest stage performers in rock today.

He has traveled from Japan to Istanbul, Turkey, making history with Istanbul's first outdoor rock concert. Also part of his European tour, Adams packed London's Wembley Stadium, capacity 65,000. In Canada, his recent outdoor tour smashed attendance record at almost every location.

The show is part of a series aimed toward an appearance at Farm Aid on April 24 in Ames, Iowa.

In April 1989, Adams appeared to an estimated 750 million worldwide viewers on the satellite telecast of the World Music Video Awards from Moscow.

Diamond Rio brings history making country to Pullman

By LANAE EMPEY
Staff Writer

Grammy nominee Diamond Rio will perform April 3 at 8 p.m. in the Beasley Performing Arts Coliseum in Pullman. Approximately 200-300 tickets are still available, according to the Beasley Ticket Office.

Diamond Rio has made and is still making history with their debut. Its debut single "Meet in the Middle" reached number one, a first in country group history. "Norma Jean Riley" also hit number one and "Mirror Mirror," "Mama, Don't Forget to Pray for Me" and "Nowhere Bound" all hit in the top five. The band's first album is now nearing platinum status.

Only two albums into their career, Diamond Rio was named the Academy of Country Music's "1991 Top Vocal Group" and the Country Music Association's "Vocal Group of the Year." It also received two Grammy nominations for vocal performance ("Meet in the Middle") and instrumental performance ("Poultry Promenade.")

Lots of events planned for parents

By HALO DEWITT
Staff Writer

The parents are coming! The parents are coming! Luckily, however, most only come on planned weekends like this coming one.

The weekend of April 2 and 3 is filled with activities to keep the parents occupied and the students distracted.

The Student Union Building Borah Theatre will be showing movies both evenings. The student Marketing Association is sponsoring a comedy night on Friday. Saturday morning the Phi Delta Theta Turtle Derby will start. Saturday evening is the Blue Key Talent Show. All day Saturday at Guy Wick's Field there will be a professional kite flying demonstration.

The movies being shown in the Borah Theatre are Ferris Bueller's Day Off and The Princess Bride. They play at 7 p.m. and 9:15 p.m. respectively. On Saturday, the show times will be reversed.

The Student Marketing Association Comedy Night features Don Parkins, Bob Bailey III, and Chris Warren. They will perform in the SUB Ballroom at 8 p.m.

Connie and Bill Lester will give kite flying demonstrations for a full day at Guy Wick's Field. They have been flying kites for 11 years and Bill is considered a master kite builder. Most of their kites are geometric shapes but they do have a pair of jogging legs. They fly kite trains where many small kites are flown in a string. They have gotten as many as 609 kites on one train before. They fly both single and double line kites but are most proud of the single line kites they build themselves.

Connie Lester said, "Kites aren't what they used to be." She also said that mostly they hope for wind.

The Phi Delta Theta Turtle Derby will begin at 10:30 a.m. The proceeds will go to benefit the Idaho Center for Developmental Disabilities. Money will be raised through tee-shirt sales, betting, and donations. The sorority queen contestants will do skits and the turtles will race. Prizes will be awarded to the person bringing in the most money and a Turtle Derby Queen will be crowned. Everyone is welcome to help the Phi Delta Theta men raise money for a worthy cause.

The derby will take place at the Phi Delta Theta house located at 804 Elm St.

Saturday night at 8 p.m. in the SUB Ballroom is the Blue Key Talent Show. There will be seven acts in all and each will be judged. Geoff Young, a professional comedian, will emcee the event, call out winning numbers for door prizes and liven up the space between competitors. Colleen Chess, Vice President of the Blue Key organization, said it promises to be "great entertainment for the entire family." Door prizes of various sizes will be awarded all evening, including one big door prize at the end. Admission is free to all.

Other events over the weekend include:

✓Both Friday and Saturday there will be an auction show at the Prichard Art Gallery from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m.

✓Friday at 3 p.m. is the Honors Convocation in Memorial Gym. Classes at 2:30 p.m. are canceled so that those invited can attend.

✓Saturday at 10 a.m. is the Beta Theta Pi 4-Man Scramble Golf Tournament at the ASUI Golf Course.

✓Saturday from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. is the Phi Kappa Phi Honor Sorority Honor Presentation in the SUB Silver and Gold Room.

✓Saturday from 3:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. is the Alpha Lambda Delta Freshman Honorary Reception in the Appaloosa Room.

✓Also in the area is the Palouse Patchers Quilt Show out at the Latah County Fair Grounds. The show runs Saturday, April 3, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Sunday, April 4, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Sex/Love expert to discuss relationships

By LANAE EMPEY
Staff Writer

Unraveling the "crossed wires" between the genders, Carol Cassell, a certified health and sexuality educator, will discuss the differences between men and women in the Student Union Building Ballroom April 2, at 9:30 a.m.

In "Crossed Wires and Mixed Messages: The Love/Sex Dilemma," Cassell plans to cover "the need for reconciliation for men and women," she said. This look at men's and women's relationships in the 1990's includes date rape and sexual harassment, all of which are not always "evilly intended."

Carol Cassell

She hopes to teach women to be more direct and men to be less threatened, she said. In many ways, we are all the same, she added. For example, we all need to be loved. However, there are distinct differences between men and women.

Cassell explained some of the difference may be physical, as in the case of the warrior theory. Physically, a man may be designed to be a warrior. However, in today's age he cannot be, which can be frustrating.

The new age has also introduced a new aspect of male female relationships — friendship. "Friendship between men and women could break down the obstacles of sex-role stereotyping and could become the basis of a wonderful new way for the sexes to deal with each other — as equals," Cassell said.

This new relationship brings a new view of the genders that was Conservative to speak

If all the barbecues, friendly introductions, and fawning parents have you dreading this Family Weekend, try a conservative weekend.

Take your folks to see William F. Buckley Saturday at 4 p.m. in the Student Union Building Ballroom.

If your parents are the kind of people who always have something to say political, you couldn't ask for more. This is the UI debut for the conservative writer, publisher and activist.

Buckley is a syndicated columnist, founder and editor of the conservative magazine National Review, and host of the PBS show Firing Line. Admission is free.

The Best of Both Worlds.

There's a branch of the military where you can enjoy the benefits of civilian life while you serve your country, the Army National Guard. Army Guard members know what it means to be part of an elite group. They can feel the difference that training, discipline and trial by fire make in life.

Best of all members of the Army National Guard have the opportunity to spend most of their time at home with family and friends. Many serve right in their own communities, a weekend a month and two weeks a year.

If you crave the action only the military can give you but still want a civilian lifestyle, there's only one place.

unavailable before. "Clearly, women learn something from men that they cannot learn from other women, namely, what it is like to be a man. And men learn something from women they cannot learn from other men, namely, what it is like to be a woman," Cassell said.

Cassell, an independent researcher, author and lecturer, has presented seminars and training workshops nationwide to help parents, teachers and professionals in assisting adolescents to develop healthy, positive goals for sexual expression.

She serves as consultant to 60 Minutes and an award winning Home Box Office Special, "Talking to Kids about Sex."

Articles about her research have appeared in several professional journals including Journal of School Health and Journal of Sex Research.

Parents, educators and health professionals can learn more about how to address sex with children in a 7 p.m. meeting, "Talking to Kids about Sex," April 1 in the Moscow Jr. High multipurpose room.

In Decemeber, "Live, Live, Live," was released in Japan only and promptly went gold.

Adams rang in 1990 Japanese style at the 70,000-seat Tokyo Dome in two New Year's eve shows. Also that year he participated in Roger Waters' historic presentation of Pink Floyd's "The Wall," at the fallen Berlin Wall. He was named Best Male Artist of the 1980s by the Canadian Recording Industry Association.

"Any way you cut it," critics say, "Bryan Adams is a refreshing phenomenon in modern music. Fellow musicians respect him. Fans adore him. And the music he pours his heart into means as much to him today as when he first strapped on a guitar."

Tickets are $18.50 and can be purchased at Beasley Coliseum or from all G&B Select-a-Seat outlets. According to the Beasley Coliseum Ticket Office, approximately 2,000 seats are still available.

The members, each with differing backgrounds, have come together to maintain a level of musical sophistication which continues to set them apart. Three members grew up playing bluegrass, one was in rock, another has a jazz background and only one has a traditional country background.

Tickets are $16 and can be purchased at Beasley Coliseum or any G&B Select-A-Seat outlets.
