First year law students, Sunday Rossberg and Therese Stanger, take time out from studying for a law degree to enjoy the sun yesterday morning. Law students were required to start classes August 18 with orientations and workshops. The rest of the students started school Monday.

Alpha Phi pledge paralyzed after two-story fall Thursday

Greg Burton
Staff Writer

A University of Idaho freshman was paralyzed from the waist down following a midnight fall off a third story fire escape Thursday night.

After a night of celebration during Greek Rush, Rejena A. Coghlan, 18, and several friends returned to the Alpha Phi sorority where Coghlan had pledged on Wednesday. Campus Police Commander Jake Kershnik said Coghlan was drunk enough to require assistance to bed, and was apparently confused with the surroundings of her new home.

At approximately 11:30 p.m. friends from the Alpha Phi sorority found Coghlan lying below the fire escape on the north side of the house where she had landed on a wooden divider which separates the lawn from a porch.

Coghlan was rushed to Gritman Medical Center, arriving just after midnight, where she was treated by Dr. Lon Miller. After four hours in the emergency room she was flown to Sacred Heart Hospital in Spokane.

Police indicate a blood alcohol test was administered at Gritman. Police have yet to release the results of the test.

As of Monday Coghlan was in satisfactory condition at Deconess Medical Center in Spokane, where she was transferred Friday morning. Nursing Supervisor Gladys Smith said Coghlan is being treated in the Deconess neurological unit.

When Alpha Phi members called for the Moscow ambulance service Coghlan was already unable to move her legs.

"When we arrived she was back upstairs in the house," said Mark Johnson who is an Emergency Medical Technician and arrived with the ambulance team.

Unaware of the extent of Coghlan's injuries, fellow sorority members allegedly moved her back into the house from where she fell, carried her upstairs and then called the ambulance.

Kershnik said Coghlan was highly intoxicated.

"At this point we are pursuing several leads with regard to her having been served underage, but most of our thoughts are with her and her family," Kershnik said.

Coghlan sustained fractures to three vertebrae in her fall, but only one of the fractures reached the spinal cord.

"As with all spinal cord injuries it may be months before anyone knows the permanence of her paralysis," said Dr. Jon Andrews, a neurologist from Spokane.

A graduate of Spokane's Lewis and Clark High School, Coghlan had yet to attend classes at UI, and was waiting for Sunday to move most of her belongings from Spokane to Moscow. Her mother, Pam Clarke, and other family members have been holding vigil at Deaconess.

"We are waiting and hoping for the best, but her injuries are very serious," Clarke said. Clarke also said she was unhappy at the seeming lack of university rules and regulations. There were 25 alcohol and noise related citations issued by the Moscow Police over the weekend, traditionally one of the most rowdy periods on campus.

Members of the Greek community have responded in disbelief. Pan Hellenic Advisor Linda Wilson advised houses late Friday afternoon to suspend all drinking on campus for at least the next two weeks, telling students who wish to drink to take it off campus.

Alpha Phi members have refused to comment, instead directing calls to UI Dean of Students Bruce Pitman, who continues to express regret coupled with support for Alpha Phi members.

“At this point we are pursuing several leads with regard to her having been served underage, but most of our thoughts are with her and her family.”

Career Services help UI grads find jobs

The University of Idaho Career Services Office will hold several workshops, orientations and mock interviews this semester to prepare students for job hunting.

Dan Blanco, Career Services Director, said, "Unfortunately, there appears to be little improvement in the job market for new graduates since last year, which itself was nothing to write home about. It is, therefore, critical that students take advantage of every opportunity to improve their job-finding skills through the range of services the UI offers."

The following are some upcoming services from Career Services: "Deciding on a Career" will be presented Aug. 30 in UCC 309 at 3:30 p.m.

The Career Services Interview Schedule will be available Sept. 1. Also on that day, there will be a student orientation at the Career Services Office at 9:30 a.m. and 5 p.m.

A Resume Writing workshop will be held Sept. 2 at 3:30 p.m. There will also be Career Services student orientation that day at 9:30 a.m.

For more information, call 885-6121.

Blue Key needs updated information

The University of Idaho Registrar Office wants to remind all students that correct addresses and telephone numbers will not be in the student directory (Blue Key) if they are not updated on the on-line registration/address update system.

Students can access the registration/address update system via DIAL PREREG and enter their UI student identification number and personal identification number, the cursor will move to the bottom of the screen. If updating address, enter an X. The new address information is typed on the update lines and entered. An E must be entered to exit.

The address update system is available throughout the year (not just during preregistration). To comply with the UI Student Records Policy, addresses are to be updated/changed by students, not departments or colleges.

Students who wish to restrict access to local and/or permanent address should submit a written request to the Registrar's Office. For more information please call 885-6731.

Cooperative Education helps clarify job goals

The University of Idaho Cooperative Education Office is gearing up for the new school year by holding orientations which will assist students in getting jobs.

This academic program offers students an opportunity to participate in paid work experiences to help clarify career and academic goals. Such experiences also reinforce and expand classroom learning with practical job experiences.

The majority of opportunities are outside the Moscow area with employers in Idaho, throughout the US and in some international locations.

The following are days and times when these orientations will be held:

-A Cooperative Education Orientation will be held today from 12:30 p.m. - 1:15 p.m. in ED 106.

-A Cooperative Education Orientation will be held Aug. 31 in ED 106 at 12:30 p.m.

For more information, call 885-5822.

Library opening kicks off fall semester

With the Grand Opening of the new University of Idaho library held yesterday, new hours have been set.

Regular Fall hours are: Monday thru Friday, 8 a.m. - Midnight. Saturday 9 a.m. - Midnight and Sunday 10 a.m. - Midnight. The library will be closed Sept. 6 to observe the Labor Day holiday.

For more information, please call 885-6559.

Registration opens for youth sports

The Moscow Department of Parks and Recreation is currently taking registration for many youth sports. Registration is available for the following sports on these dates: soccer and flag football, Sept. 3. Registration will be located at the Eggen Youth Center, 1515 D St. in Moscow. Jena Richardson of the department said they are also looking for volunteer coaches for those sports, plus paid officials.

The department would also like to remind students that the Ghormely Park swimming pool will be open through Aug. 29.

For more information, call 882-0240.

Lecturer discusses White House history

A historical perspective of the White House is provided during a free public lecture Thursday at the University of Idaho.

"The White House: A Mirror of the Public Experience," is presented by James McDaniel, associate director of the Pacific Northwest Region of the national Park Service and White House liaison.

His talk begins at 7:30 p.m. in Room 10 of the College of Forestry, Wildlife and Range Sciences. A reception for McDaniel will be held at the McConnell Mansion at Second and Adams in Moscow after his presentation.

During his public lecture, McDaniel will discuss the history of the White House and its importance in American culture.

Low numbers result in sorority decolonization

Tim Helmke

Staff Writer

Just days after Formal Sorority Rush, Alpha Xi Delta is facing the possibility of being pulled from the University of Idaho forever.

Alpha Xi Delta national headquarters informed Chris Wuthrich, UI Assistant Greek Advisor, the colony has been pulled indefinitely. Wuthrich also mentioned the national headquarters staff has notified the chapter and the UI that Alpha Xi Delta may not return to UI.

According to Wuthrich, Alpha Xi Delta pulled the colony due to low numbers of members after a year and a half of being on campus. Wuthrich said the national office waited until formal rush was over to make the decision to pull the colonization.

Linda Wilson, UI Greek Advisor, said no final decision has been made with the national offices and more contact will be made with them in the first few weeks of class.

"We are working to get a decision finalized so the women of Alpha Xi Delta know what they can do," said Wilson.

Local members of Alpha Xi Delta have chosen to continue to function as a viable part of the UI Greek system and campus. Stacey Lincoln, member of Alpha Xi Delta, commented the colony is working to see what options are open to them until a final decision is made.

Lincoln added several of the bids extended to rushees during formal rush had been accepted and those women had moved into the house. Lincoln also said this colony views themselves as a group of individuals who share common interests and goals.

Alpha Xi Delta had occupied the Sweet Avenue House which is now being used by UI as a Panhellenic House for overflow from other sorority houses. Alpha Xi Delta members are living in the house until everything is finalized.

Alpha Xi Delta has been on the UI campus for two and a half years in one form or another. They started out as Lambda Sigma Iota as a local sorority without any national support and began working to gain national support from a sorority. There were then seven sororities here on campus as two others, Kappa Alpha Theta and Alpha Chi Omega, had just folded their UI chapters. Wilson began to work to balance the inequity of fraternities and sororities by building LSI up.

LSI functioned until the spring semester of 1992 when they chose Alpha Xi Delta for national support. They were not allowed to participate in formal rush in the fall due to late notice and they had not yet been acknowledged by the UI Panhellenic Council. They gained recognition in the fall semester and were able to function as any other sorority.

Alpha Xi Delta members were allowed to participate in formal rush for 1993 and were expected to meet the quota of 29 girls this year. Wuthrich said Alpha Xi Delta did not make quota while all other chapters did, influencing the decision by the national headquarters.

New Ag Dean settles score

Lineback defends hiring policy

Ariel Plywaski

Contributing Writers

Although the new Dean of Agriculture started work last Monday after a rocky beginning, he remains enthusiastic about the job.

The hiring of Dean David Lineback this summer stirred up public concern about an informal hiring policy at the University of Idaho. The "spousal accommodation" policy was brought up as a result of Lineback's inquiry about job opportunities for his wife Pat.

"The answer was 'yes,' there was a position open in the College of Education, and so she applied and was hired," Lineback said. His wife, the former administrative officer for North Carolina State's graduate school, has been hired as an assistant by University of Idaho College of Education Dean N. Dale Gentry.

"I can understand how people were upset about the hiring, but I think the university handled this in an appropriate manner," said Lineback.

Lineback's hiring prompted President Elisabeth Zinser and the Staff Affairs Committee to formalize their policy on spousal accommodation.

"The issue arises a lot these days in a working family, what decision to make professionally if your spouse is offered a job somewhere, and you have a good job in another part of the country," Lineback said. "How do you hire the best you can get, and still be sensitive to people's needs? Pat was hired because she was the best person for the job. She didn't have to find a job here right away, but it would have been difficult if she hadn't found a job."

Dealing with scandal and budget cuts, new dean David Lineback remains optimistic.

a new occurrence. Nine years ago Gordon and Dene Thomas applied separately for a professorship in Compositional Theory.

"There were two positions open, and our qualifications were similar," Gordon said. Gordon said he and his wife applied for the jobs separately, and it wasn't until late in the interview process that it was discovered they were married.

"When we found that we could get jobs at the same institution, that cinched it for UI," Gordon said. The other job offers they received were for two different institutions in two different cities. Gordon said.

"We were lucky to have a choice we could both live with," Gordon said.

In addition to the issue of spousal accommodation, Lineback has also had to deal with cutbacks Zinser announced each department would have to make.

"I'm not pessimistic, I'm excited," Lineback said. Lineback said he wants to pull together teaching and research so they can mutually benefit from each other.

Bookstore extends hours to meet demand

• First days of school most hectic to buy new books

Teah Jones

Contributing Writer

The rush is on!

Hurry and be sure not to miss out!

It is, after all, the place to be. No, it's not the local bar with that hip new band, its the bookstore.

Once again, the University of Idaho Bookstore is bracing for a multitude of eager college students rushing to buy anything that may aide their success in upcoming classes.

To help relieve congestion, the store will be extending its hours and will be open today and tomorrow from 7:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. After Wednesday it will return to regular hours which are 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., Monday through Friday and 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturdays.

Peg Godwin, the Bookstore's new manager, will be on hand along with numerous other bookstore employees to see that things are running smoothly and students are receiving as much help and advice as possible.

Godwin, who has previously headed the UI book department for 15 years, warns that students should be very careful when selecting their books.

"Try to avoid times when the bookstore is likely to be very busy," Godwin suggested, adding

The UI Bookstore remained busy throughout the weekend, awaiting the rush of the first day of school. Vendors outside the bookstore sold subscriptions to local newspapers. Peg Godwin, the new manager, warned students that the busiest days were yesterday and today. Student can take back books two weeks from the date of purchase with receipt.

the first few days of classes are the most hectic.

Godwin also advises students to pay close attention to section numbers posted next to their respective books since each section has its own book specifically chosen by the class instructor.

In addition to student textbooks, the store also peddles many other items as well, such as Vandal souvenirs and clothing, computer hardware and software, art and architecture supplies as well as notebooks and folders.

According to Godwin, the store will also special order books and computer software. Godwin said all computer supplies are academically priced, meaning a computer program normally worth $500 can be sold to students for as low as $135.

"The company reasons that if students become attracted to their products during their college career, they will continue to use them as they join the work force," Godwin commented.

Godwin said the store will buy back books at the end of the semester from Saturday, Dec. 11 to Saturday, Dec. 18.

Student Health Services provide broad range of medical care for full, part time students

Kim Bledsoe

Staff Writer

Students can find health care at reasonable rates at University of Idaho Student Health Services.

Staffed with four clinicians, two medical assistants and a nurse, Student Health Services provides general care and preventive care as well as problem-oriented care such as abnormal medical conditions or psychological problems.

"Student Health is affordable and state of the art," said Dr. Susan Gelletly.

The four main clinicians at Student Health include Dr. Donald Chin M.D., who is also the director. Dr. Chin is trained and certified in family practice. Gelletly is trained in internal medicine and general medical care for adolescents and adults. Samuel Monger is a general practitioner and Kathy Hanson is a nurse practitioner.

Full-time students are automatically eligible for care at Student Health Services since a $30.50 per semester eligibility fee is included in student registration fees. Part-time students are also eligible after paying a comparable $30.50 fee each semester. In addition, students' spouses or children can also become eligible after paying the student fees.

Student Health Services has within its doors a pharmacy, laboratory, X-ray lab and a full-time nutritionist and counselor.

No appointment is necessary; a person can walk in and wait for the next available clinician. Student Health Services also offers care at substantially lower rates. Students can choose to either bill their accounts or pay directly. Health insurance is provided through the university, or students can bill their own insurance company.

The staff at Student Health Services offer state of the art care.

Prescription drugs as well as over-the-counter drugs are also available at lower cost, including birth control, allergy medicines and pain relievers.

Gelletly said the Health Services provides preventive care such as immunizations against the flu, measles, mumps and rubella and Tetanus shots.

"What people don't realize is that they are at highest risk during their college years," Gelletly said.

Information and help stopping addictions such as tobacco and alcohol is also available. A new program will start this semester called "Stop Tobacco" which will educate tobacco users and help them quit the habit through support groups.

The Health Services is always developing the Women's Health Care program, since "women need so much more health care than others," said Gelletly. Gelletly reminds women that they should have a yearly physical which can be provided at Student Health Services.

'92-'93 UI crime follows national trend

Gregory H. Burton
Staff Writer

The new school year brings the imminence of scandal as well as the eventuality of learning.

As 9000 students crowd into 6 small-town Moscow miles, crime is only one of many measures to rise.

Last year saw a leveling of crime frequency. However, following nationwide trends the severity of campus crime reached frightening proportions.

Last October University of Idaho student Megan Heber became the first UI student charged with an on-campus murder since May of 1970.

On Oct. 4, Heber gave birth to a baby, alone in her Theophilous Tower residence hall room. Heber told Sgt. Neil Odenborg of the Moscow Police she placed her hands on her newborn's chest and throat attempting to wipe him off. After some time the baby no longer responded and she dumped it into the trash where janitors later discovered the body.

In interviews with the police Heber stated she hated the baby, but her sanity as well as competency have been the most debatable aspect of the current litigation.

Heber has remained free on bail, and has even landed steady work while awaiting her fate. The wait, however, may outlast another entire school year.

Another display of the rise in violent behavior, UI football player Shawn "Duke" Garrett was arrested for brandishing a handgun Feb. 15 in front of Xenon nightclub.

On a Friday evening pandemonium broke out on Main St. when several smaller squirmishes inside the nightclub were combined after Xenon owner Barry Tassler and his hired security squad booted the differing confederates outside.

Garrett was reported to have been squabbling with a Washington State University football player over a woman when the WSU player hit him. As the crowd spilled outside Garrett apparently went to the trunk of his car to extract a gun when police, who reported seeing a handgun in his possession, knocked him to the ground and took him into custody.

Several people were reported to Gritman Medical Center with injuries, and two people besides Garrett were charged in the incident. Garrett was eventually convicted for disturbing the peace. The handgun was never found.

Computer labs make $500,000 upgrades

Ariel Plywaski
Contributing Writer

Cutting-edge technology has become available to all University of Idaho students. Over 100 new computers have brought up-to-date four general access student labs and a brand new graduate student lab.

Over the summer, Computer Services purchased 13 Macintosh Centris 650 8MB with CD-ROMs, 10 Macintosh Centris 660AV 8MB with CD-ROMs and 104 486/33 8MB PCs as part of a five-year plan to improve student computer labs.

"The Centris 660s are so new that they're not even on the market yet," said Kari Dickinson, Customer Support Manager.

"The possibilities of this machine are very high, but we won't be using them much at the UI for quite a while," said Tony Pischel, another Help-Desk specialist, referring to the lack of software written for the 660. "It's Star Trek, and it's here."

New color scanners were also purchased along with six HP4si laser printers and two color ink-jet printer. Dickinson said digitizers would also be made available to students. A digitizer functions as a pad and pencil, which will translate everything to the computer screen, where it can be worked on.

"We're really excited about how much we can do with the small amount we're charging each student," said Dickinson. Each full-time student paid a $28 per-semester fee, which was included in the registration fee, and part-time students paid $2 per credit. Every piece of equipment purchased from this $500,000 fund will display the "Purchased by Students" label.

The largest project was upgrading the former English Writing Lab in Psychology 12. This lab now contains 60 PCs ready to run such programs as Windows products including Word, WordPerfect, Quattro Pro, Excel, Harvard Graphics, Lotus Freelance, Corel Draw and Pagemaker. The lab also contains one color scanner with text recognition software.

Boxes, emptied of $500,000 of new computer equipment, were piled all over campus before school started. Many labs were renovated with everything from laser printers to several color scanners.

Admin 221 is now a Macintosh training lab, and Admin 225 is a PC training lab. Both are available for open student use when classes are not scheduled. The Mac Lab contains two flatbed digitizers, one color printer and one color scanner, as well as graphic software such as Aldus PageMaker and Adobe Illustrator.

Opening this fall is a graduate student lab, paid entirely by graduate student fees. Located in the North Campus Center, this lab contains nine PCs, three Macs, a laser printer, a color printer and a color scanner.

With all the new machines students will need help learning new systems. To help with this, a Help-Desk has been created to provide students with a single point of contact within Computer Services. Students who have any questions about computers can call 885-A-PAL (885-2725).

"We want students to take advantage of the technology they have, and we don't want anyone falling through the cracks," said Joyce Davidson, also a Help-Desk specialist. To make sure of this, they have created a computer tracking system, which keeps track of each question.

Tom Bell, UI Provost, retires with fond memories

University of Idaho Provost Thomas O. Bell, an Idaho native with four decades of service in public and higher education, announced earlier this month he will retire effective Oct. 1, 1994.

"I'm now in my 40th year of service in public education, research and development center and universities," said Bell. "More than three-fourths of that time has been in administrative position. I now want to pursue some other avenues."

Bell joined the UI in 1966 and for the next three years worked in the UI Bureau of Education Research and Service and as associate dean of the College of Education.

In 1969, Bell left UI to take a position as a field specialist working in the Southwest Pacific for the Northwest Regional Education Laboratory.

Bell returned to the UI in 1971 and worked as director of the Division of Teacher Education and associate dean.

He was named dean of the College of Education in 1989, and became vice president for academic affairs and research in 1984. In 1991, that position was given the new title of provost.

"I have no regrets about my tenure here," he said. "I know I will leave next year with many, many fond memories. This is a wonderful place and an outstanding university. I know the people of Idaho have a great amount of pride in the University of Idaho. I consider it an honor for a kid from Inkom, Idaho, to conclude his academic career as provost of the University of Idaho."

UI President Elisabeth Zinser praised Bell's wide and varied service to the university and to education in general.

"His achievements cannot be overstated. His service to Idaho as a senior educational statesman places him among the most distinguished of Idahoans, and his influence has been felt nationally and internationally as well. Within the higher education community, Dr. Bell is respected as an academic statesman of the first order," she said.

Zinser also said she will miss Bell "as a constant source of wisdom and inspiration."

Zinser said a search committee for Bell's successor will be appointed this fall.

"The extraordinary significance of this position for any university goes without saying," she said. "The national search for the next person to assume the academic leadership role at this university must be developed with great care, consistent with its importance within the institution."

New SUB manager stresses interaction with students

Tim Helmke

Staff Writer

People all over campus are new to the University of Idaho but none could be more excited than Dave Mucci, the new Student Union Building General Manager.

Mucci comes to UI from Ohio State University where he was the director of student centers which served the 54,000 students who attend OSU. After ten years at OSU as director, he decided a smaller campus and student population were what he wanted.

"I now have the opportunity to interact with the students which I had not had a chance to at OSU and I am excited to have that opportunity," said Mucci.

Mucci said Idaho is a change of scenery for him. He views his new place of living as a "great exploration" as the scenes of the Palouse have impressed him and he is inspired by the beauty it offers as well.

With the smaller number of students which the UI SUB serves, Mucci said the interaction between the students and himself is important.

"I feel that I can make an impact on the students lives whom we serve. The SUB plays a very important role on this campus and it is our job to make sure that things run smoothly," said Mucci.

Mucci also mentioned he wishes to work closely with student organizations and student government to ensure all of their needs are met.

"Student organizations are offering a great means of support for whom they serve and I want to make sure that all of their needs and concerns are filled."

Mucci brings several of new ideas with him which he feels would liven up the SUB and help serve the students more effectively.

"I am currently working closely with Jim Rennie and Robyn Gentry to get goals set and wheels set in motion to better equip the SUB to serve students better," said Mucci.

Rennie is the ASUI Program Coordinator and Gentry is serving as the SUB Board

Chairperson as a student.

Some of the new ideas Mucci has are to provide the students with some areas of fitness and wellness as well as revitalize some of the existing areas.

Mucci would like to see some of the recreational facilities offered in a more accessible area of the SUB as well as offer some new ones.

"Wellness and fitness are important in a student's life and the facilities now are not as easy to use as they can be," said Mucci.

Some of the areas Mucci would like to see revitalized are the food services and study areas that are offered on the main floor. He mentioned he would like to see the food services as more noticeable and attractive to college-aged people.

"Developing upon some of the ideas which I have generated with others here at UI, I can see the SUB being a strong central structure more than just a building," said Mucci.

Mucci also mentioned he is open to the suggestions which the students have as he believes the SUB is more for student input than for administration choices only.

"The students play an instrumental role in decision making everywhere on campus and the SUB is one of the most important places to have that voice heard," said Mucci.

Study areas in the SUP are a focus which Mucci is working on to get some new things started. He said educational stimulation is important and the study areas of the SUB aren't quite as user friendly as they could be.

"Study areas need to be more exciting and attractive to the students so that the educational stimulation can be assured," said Mucci.

Mucci said some operational changes of the SUB are in the works as well. He mentioned he would recommend changes to be made so it fits the student needs for time accessible rather than worrying about others needs. Mucci also mentioned that he would like to work to get the operations of the SUB as a priority of his office.

Not intimidated by man nor statue, David Mucci brings fresh ideas for the SUB.

CRIME

March a pipe bomb destroyed the interior of an unoccupied car, and another ripped a toilet seat from the wall of a bathroom in Gault Hall.

No motives have been presented for either of the bombings, but Sgt. Odenborg has indicated on several occasions he has definite suspects. His investigation remains open.

The pipe bomb craze took a deadly twist in late April when two WSU football players accidentally discharged a pipe bomb in their car while driving in Pullman. Harvey Waldron died from his injuries several hours later, and Payam Sadat lost his left hand. Police determined the bombings were unrelated.

The two men had more pipe manufacturing supplies in their apartments, and apparently had been following instructions from a how-to book in building bombs. No pipe bombs have detonated on the Idaho campus since this tragedy.

Several rapes or sexual assaults were reported on campus last year. However for differing reasons most cases were not prosecuted. Two women after originating charges decided against the pursuance of litigation. However one women not only proceeded with charges, but saw the case through to the end.

On April 14, Edward Harness, president of Tau Kappa Epsilon Fraternity was charged after a student reported he had battered her while walking her home.

"This is hardly a way to reward someone for a good deed," said Harness two days later. "These charges are unfounded and that will come out in due time. I'm more than happy to go to court to show my innocence."

In court Harness admitted pushing the women to the ground and was convicted.

Three residence halls receive summer facelift

Over the summer the University of Idaho housing department was busy renovating three residence halls, and is hoping to have the $411,000 project completed by the end of September.

The Wallace Complex basement received a $195,000 facelift with renovations including a convenience store operated by Marriot, office space for the Residence Hall Association and improvements in fire safety and air circulation which will benefit the entire building.

Over 3,200 square feet was renovated, most of it being study area, with help from Art and Architecture students who "made a significant effect in helping the design team," said UI housing director Roger Oettli.

Although the new furniture has not yet arrived, all construction has been completed, and a grand opening of the convenience store is planned for the second week of September.

Another major renovation project took place at the Gault-Upham residence halls to upgrade the "exiting and egress system." The project initially began in 1990 to upgrade emergency exiting and lighting to meet uniformed building and fire codes.

"All the requirements haven't been met, but we're moving in that direction," Oettli said.

Housing hopes to have the project completed by Sept. 20.

"It's a real challenge trying to get everything done in 90 days," Oettli said. "We're working with a short construction time table."

Theophilus Tower's $17,000 "door access project" is currently underway. The new system enables residents to obtain access into the building by using their student identification cards. Electronic locks "read" the identification cards and verify whether or not a person has permission to enter the building.

Oettli said Theophilus will be a "good test" to determine whether or not other residence hall entries will be equipped with electronic doors.

Oettli is also focusing on installing new fire alarm systems at Theophilus.

"I'm excited, I think we're on the right track," Oettli said. "It's just going to cost some dollars to get there."

Hi-Tech Argonaut puts heat on staff

The Argonaut has changed.

So radically it probably took you a second to reassure yourself you were still holding a copy of the same student newspaper you picked up last spring. Like a roommate who comes back from summer vacation with a new haircut and style, the Argonaut has left the candy-striped barber shop behind to ages long past, and has sprinted into a new world with the help of a radically different operating system. The system includes two things: a flock of new Apple Macintosh computers and the people who will get to use them.

In past years, the Argonaut has been stumbling along using crude and out-dated equipment trying to pass messages to students with tools comparative to words drawn on a patch of dirt with a dull stick. But now, the Argonaut has suddenly found itself flung into the future with new top-of-the-line technology.

The most notable feature of the Argonaut is the general layout of the paper. The masthead is new and has an illustration of our faithful administration building. Section heads look snappy, graphics are sharp and readers no longer will have to deal with acres of monotonous gray. The new Macintosh computers will eventually allow us to design and layout a paper using full pagination, meaning every news story, advertisement, illustration, graph or doodle (and oh yes, we can now add doodles) can be assembled together on one computer, shown completely on a full-size monitor.

We are no longer limited by our tools, and now must put up or shut up.

We now have the equipment necessary to allow us to produce a paper that is easier to read, more consistent, informative and pleasing to look at. Section editors will no longer have a brilliant design/story idea vetoed by the clock on the wall that screams, "Nice idea buddy, but I'm sorry to say it will take way too long to do."

We are no longer limited by our tools, and now must put up or shut up.

And this challenge, so to speak, is exciting. Instead of running Argonaut operation backwards, section editors will get the chance to devote their time to snaring bigger and better stories, finding interesting ones, and most importantly, helping their writers get the experience they deserve by passing-on hints that'll make Argonaut stories get noticed by employers when they're sitting among a stack of resumes.

But the Macintosh computers aren't the only things new up on the third floor of the Student Union Building. There's an attitude floating around up here and its infectious. We're not sure if it was caused by a virus that came in with the new computers or was released from vials by David Gebhardt, our Student Media Manager, and we really don't care because its a good attitude and it goes by the name of Excitement.

Whatever other new things you've noticed on campus (like the lack of a smokestack by the power plant, for instance) everyone at the Argonaut wants you to notice your newspaper. It'll never drop below 16 pages, and like our computers, it'll be user friendly.

The Argonaut is now riding the leading wave of newspaper technology, is out of excuses and ready to deliver.

Coming home to the Midwest

The Way it Is Shari Ireton

"...There's no place like home. There's no place like home..."

—Dorothy, The Wizard of Oz

It is good to be home! To once again smell the clean Palouse air and see the stars at night is definitely a wonderful feeling. For many students, Moscow is still new and may not be considered home—yet. Give it time, get settled in and it will.

While some of you may not see what is so great about the Inland Empire, you need to look at it from my perspective. I've just spent three months in an eastern city and coming back to Idaho was like taking a long, hot shower after a hard day's work. While I wasn't mugged, knifed or even car-jacked, I still felt assaulted in many ways.

My sense of smell, which was tuned to dusty fields and stands of pine trees, had to adjust to diesel exhaust, rotting garbage and hot asphalt. My ears had to get accustomed to blaring horns, endless traffic and mid-night construction. And if that wasn't bad enough, it took a while for my eyes to replace images of sunsets, starry nights and the shadowy country side with high rises, endless rows of street lamps and edifices constructed from every stone and metal known to man.

Don't get me wrong, I think there are many wonderful things about a booming metropolis. Let's face it, Moscow isn't exactly the place where you can hang out in an internationally known museum looking at Picasso's and Monet's, go to the zoo or even just spend all day at the mall (without working there!) But, before all you out-of-state, city slickers get too homesick, here are some tips to help enjoy these first few weeks.

College: Don't believe the good things

College graduates are always lying about how great college is. But since it's the beginning of the year and I'm not quite keen on lying so early in the semester, I am forced to be honest.

At times, college is about as much fun as sitting next to a tobacco-chewin' old man who doesn't believe in deodorant or breath mints for 49 hours on a bus.

Such honesty is hard for a pseudo-journalist such as myself to produce. After all, I'm used to spending my time thinking of new ways to kick the failed Zinser Regime in the head, or figure out ways I can further ruin the lives of ASUI senators.

But I feel such honesty is needed in order to help-out our fledgling freshmen. The new crop of smiling faces anticipates the day when they can get out of the house forever, and are surprised to learn that their parents have similar sentiments. ("Son/honey...let me help you with those bags.") So they get out of their cars, smiling, unpack smiling, walk around trying to look like they know what's going on, smiling, and then collapse in a corner and try to figure out what the hell they are doing here.

College is not how it appears in those glossy brochures trying to lure you and your money here. Looking at those things, you'd think college is a lot of fun and good times. Maybe. But there's just as many times you wish you knew Dr. Kevorkian just a little better.

So to help you learn what college is really all about, I will gleefully shatter the fairy tales that UI's public relations department tries to fool you into.

MYTH 1: "College is a great way to experience diverse cultures and gain a greater understanding of human nature."

FACT: You will instead gain a greater understanding

The night sky. If you're used to the bright lights of the city, this one may amaze you. Grab some friends and head out to Robinson Lake Park, lay on the grass and look up. Our Idaho skies resemble nothing of the Apocalyptic neon orange which seems to be the trademark of any highly populated area.

The outdoors. While roller coasters, Roller Blades and rock 'n' roll concerts are a lot of fun, they tend to lack one major component...nature. Get in a car or take your bike to Spring Valley Reservoir (about a half hour drive on the Troy Highway) and take a walk around the water. It'll do wonders for stress, headaches, frustration and all else which ails the college student...it's the Palouse-Cure-For-All! If that's not challenging enough, try Elk River Falls, Boyer Beach or one of the many hide-a-ways on Lake Couer d'Alene.

The local cuisine. Okay, okay. So we don't have Taco Bell (the most often heard complaint from students here) but we certainly aren't lacking on choices. We do have some of the cheap and easy places, be we also have international flavors from such countries as Greece, Italy, Mexico and China, to name a few. Plus, with all the coupon books handed out over the weekend, many of these places are pretty easy on the student check book.

There are also tons of outdoor activities and a night life that can keep you busy. In fact, I can guarantee while it will be good to go back home at Christmas, a part of you will miss this small town nestled in Northern Idaho. I will warn you right now, however, your friends and acquaintances back home will be a little confused about just exactly where Idaho is. All summer long, when telling people where I attended school, the first response would be "Gosh, I hope your family wasn't affected by the floods." When I would point out that I was from Idaho, not Iowa, their next comment would be "Well, you know...the Mid-west is all the same." In fact, when I was visiting Dallas, one woman commented she had never even heard of this state.

Give it time, new students, and you too will be defending the Gem State when we are slammed for growing potatoes and being racist. By December you will be calling Moscow home, too.

MYTH

of much more relevant things, such as where a case of Keystone beer is on sale and what time the liquor store next to Jeff's Foods closes on Friday night. OK, you may learn more about human nature, but then you'll be mighty sorry. In fact, I recommend you avoid any deep questions such as human nature. You're likely to actually gain knowledge, which is clearly against what this institution tries to accomplish.

MYTH 2: "The University of Idaho has a stunning variety of classes to choose from."

FACT: These classes are either made up to fill out the college catalogue or else they are obviously thinking of another school. The Really Interesting Classes are always full. And that's a fact. But closed classes are not limited to fun classes. The bounty of closed classes extends far into those that are useless but are required for freshman in order to graduate. If you doubt me, try to get into the intro music appreciation class, or English 104 after pre-registration. You'd have better luck trying to convince UI President Zinser student fees are too high.

I remember when I first got here. Ignorant to the fact that I was able to pre-register for any classes, I stumbled into the Kibbie Dome and was only able to get into about three classes. When I politely inquired to a Dean in an expensive suit what to do to get into more classes, his response was, "I guess you've got a problem," and smiled at me with that annoying smile so common in college administrators. I felt like smacking him upside the head. Fortunately, the wonderful folks in the school of communication were able to pull a few strings, thank God. But generally, to many of the bureaucrats, you are indeed a number.

MYTH 3: "If you don't like a class, you can always drop it."

FACT: Well, technically this is true, just as it is technically true you can become a wealthy Amway salesman. Do you remember the first time you picked up one of those nifty Rubric's Cubes? You sweated, swore and finally smashed it against a hard surface.

This frustration is mild compared to trying to drop a class here, especially later in the semester. I know many a student who has just taken the failing grade instead of completing the maze of trying to get out of the class.

This may sound loony to freshman, but those who have actually succeeded know of what I speak. Not only do you need precisely 1,287 signatures on your note card, but you also are ran all over campus trying to catch people who generally avoid their office hours at all costs. You are also forced to swallow the embarrassment of telling your teacher you are dropping his class and must get his signature. At this point, the teacher is usually graceful or gives you the you-never-would-have-made-it-in-my-class-anyway look, which is much more common.

So now, as you finish reading my most encouraging column and set out to your classes, no matter how bad things get and how much you feel like giving up, keep this in mind: factory work ain't so bad.

Letters to the Editor

Wolves, grizzlies, salmon igniting forest issues

To the Editor:

The wet summer cooled Idaho forest fires, much to the dismay of firefighters, but the issues in our public forest continue to burn hot.

Wolves, grizzly bears, salmon, wilderness and logging are some of the front burner issues, in case you've been away or in case you've been inside with the air conditioner on.

Here's a brief update on some of the environmental issues from the Idaho Conservation League (ICL), in hopes the students at the University of Idaho make their voices heard to protect and preserve our wild lands and wild creatures.

Rep. Larry LaRocco will hold a hearing in Lewiston Aug. 26 on his proposed Wilderness Bill, which would classify 1.2 million acres wilderness. The hearing is with invited, representative speakers from various groups. People can attend, with signs or other theatrical devices, to show support for Wilderness in Idaho.

The ICL position on LaRocco's bill is to push for more classified Wilderness than it proposes and for greater protection of critical ecosystems outside Wilderness.

The ongoing Wilderness preservation protest of the Cove/Mallard timber sales in the Salmon River Breaks gets hotter all the time as arrests of protesters escalates. The protest is to preserve the linkage between central Idaho wilderness, to stop logging, to stop road building and to keep the wilderness wild.

The protest is organized by the loosely organized Earth First! Some renegades spikes trees and trashed road building equipment; other renegades have resorted to beating up a protester. Both extremes should be condemned. The core of forest activists have remained cool in an often tense situation. Their effort to increase public awareness and to encourage public involvement in our National Forests is working and deserves respect, even if it is easy to complain about some of their methods.

Wolves are back and a hearing on the future of wolves in central Idaho will be held in Lewiston Aug. 31, sponsored by the Fish and Wildlife Service. Anyone may speak.

An informational meeting on wolves and the wolf recovery plan will be held at 7 p.m. Aug. 24 at the Moscow Community Center, with Suzanne Laverty of the Wolf Recovery Foundation from Boise. The ICL position is to support increased efforts in research that could aid the natural return of wolves, with full protection of the Endangered Species Act.

Grizzly bears may also return to Idaho, if the recovery plan gets beyond local politics and supports the great bears.

One proposal would put a half-dozen grizzly in north-central Idaho wilderness but Clearwater County officials fear grizzly bears and bears being another argument for wilderness protection.

The Clearwater country offers the best bear habitat, because of its high moisture levels. Grizzly bears should once again roam from the Middle Fork of the Salmon to the St. Joe.

The Grizzly Bear Legislative Oversight Committee will meet at 7 p.m. Aug. 23 in Orofino and Aug. 24 in Grangeville.

The struggle continues to free the Snake River salmon of the dams that block passage of smolts to the sea.

Letters to your Congressional Representatives are needed and are tremendously useful on all of these issues.

Please call me (882-1010) for more information or to get involved. An organizational meeting to direct forest activist's efforts will be held in September, with specifics to follow. Keep Idaho Wild.

—John McCarthy

Changing agriculture, changing lifestyles

• Rapeseed delivers its unimaginable potential to the UI and the Palouse

Editors Note:

The following is the first part in a three part series of articles about rapeseed and its many uses.

Russ Woolsey
Lifestyles Editor

While driving through the Palouse this summer students may have noticed an increase in the fields of bright yellow flowers that dot the country side. fields that offer more potential beauty, than the inherent beauty they already possess...

Imagine a candy bar that has far fewer calories than a traditional candy bar, and almost no saturated fat.

Imagine a fuel that could be used for large machinery, boats and cars that would be renewable, and would significantly decrease the US dependency on foreign oil. This oil would also be biodegradable and, if spilled on the ground, plants could thrive on it.

Imagine a plastic that could replace polystyrene and most other petroleum based plastics that is renewable and would biodegrade.

Now stop imagining because these unimaginable products will soon be a reality and the University of Idaho is leading the way in the research of the wonder commodity that is responsible for all of these products... rapeseed.

Rapeseed was first cultivated in the Mediterranean for its oil which was used for burning in lamps. Since the days of early rapeseed cultivation, the uses for its oil has taken huge strides, for industrial and food value purposes.

Rapeseed first increased as a crop with the advent of the steam engine as a high quality lubricating oil. During World War II rapeseed, which is known international-

Today Brassica is used in many different industries because of its sustain ability, and adaptability as a crop. The products in use today include cosmetics, for make-up, to hydraulic fluid and transmission fluid for cars. Still other strains of Brassica are used to make table mustard, and as a low fat replacement for cocoa butter.

Fly Fishing for trout

Fishing in North Idaho is only a short fly-cast away

My rather harsh introduction to Palouse trout fishing came a few years ago when two friends arrived on my door step one balmy spring afternoon with three dozen Mormon crickets. They claimed they were on a mission to save these pet store insects from the belly of some tropical reptile and give them a much more dignified death via the needle-like jaws of some out-sized local brook trout.

Since this brookie "hawg hole" was only a long flycast or two from Moscow, I reasoned that it couldn't possibly harbor any trout large enough to attack a #12 Adams let alone the Iguana sized crickets in my friend's jar. I declined and went to softball practice. I've regretted that decision ever since.

Later that evening, when I returned from the diamond, I stopped by Bill and Rhett's house. Sure enough, they were busy dicing up some spuds to go with their fish dinner. I almost couldn't bring myself to look in the fish cleaning sink. Four butter-fat brook trout filled the bottom of the stainless half sink shining like some precious gems washed clean in a miners pan. I was sick. No, these brookies wouldn't turn any heads at Henry's Lake but they certainly outclassed the sardines typical of many north Idaho streams.

Since that day, I've learned to take the local trout streams a little more serious. While it's doubtful that any of our local waters will make the cover of Fly Fisherman magazine, if you're willing to do some exploring you'll find some decent trout fishing. I think that half the fun of fishing around here is

Renegade Saints, Big Time Adam to give music offering at SUB

Russ Woolsey

Lifestyles Editor

Moscow has been blessed several times by the Renegade Saints, and will be blessed once again this Saturday at the SUB Ballroom when the Saints come to deliver their holy sounds.

Though they have played in Moscow and Pullman several times before, this will be the first time that they have played on campus, a treat for those under twenty-one who haven't had the Saints experience.

The Renegade Saints have an impressive musical following that extends all over the Northwest and have played with such notable musicians as Bob Dylan and bands such as Little Women.

The Saints play extended vocal harmonies, improvised tunes with the thumping Hammond B-3 in the background to pull it all together.

They are noted for their patented "Bohemian Boogie Grind" stemming from the long guitar jams by guitarists Alan Toribio, and John Shipe, which can be heard by your heart and felt with your feet. Toribio leads into the music often with licks on the guitar comparable to Stevie Ray Vaughan, or Santana, but the lead changes over often to co-lead man John Shipe.

Shipe compliments this match made on stage guitar section with his slide and improvisational style which has been compared to Duane Allman or David Gillmore.

Bass guitar player Dave Coey said, "When we first got the gig we were stoked," referring to Saturday's show which was going to be held outside on campus. Coey went on to say, "(Now) it will still be fun, it just won't be out in the sun."

The Saints recently picked up a new drummer, Michael Carlton, who replaced the former Saint Matt Reynolds, who went on to pursue the tamer life.

Carlton came from the band Native Sun Tails, and Coey said he offers a jamming beat to the band. Carlton has been playing with the Saints now for several months including a three week tour in July.

Be listening for new tunes from the Saints that will add to almost one hundred original tunes in their repertoire. These new tunes will include the cut "The Waning Moon" which Coey said was a "slow rocker at mid-tempo." Coey said, "Another tune we might pop-out is a 'Go West'."

Playing with the Renegade Saints, will be local band Big Time Adam.

Big Time Adam has been touring all summer from the Seattle area to Hood River, Ore. They recently finished recording their album Pudge in the Tri-Cities, which is due for release soon. Jeff Terada, of Big Time Adam, said to be looking for a CD release party in the area soon.

The bands are set to play at 8 p.m. in the SUB Ballroom, with no admission charged. Those under eighteen years of age will not be admitted.

Five bands to jam CougFest 1993

Rebecca Lucas

Staff Writer

The 3rd Annual Associated Students of Washington State University and Washington State University will sponsor CougFest '93, featuring five Northwest bands this Saturday, from 4 - 9 p.m. at the intramural field next to Martin Stadium in Pullman.

CougFest 1993 is a concert to start the first semester of the new school year with some fun. "I think this is a great opportunity for students to meet each other and start the year off on a positive note," said Heather Metcalf, ASWSU President.

The concert is free to everyone in the area who would like to attend. There is space to dance and mingle with friends students haven't seen since last school year.

Western Family, who will open the concert is a local band from Pullman, who plays alternative music. They will be joined by another alternative band, Green Tribe, also from Pullman.

Inflatable Soule, a folk-rock band from Seattle will also be playing at CougFest this year. With a unique celtic sound, The Paperboys from Vancouver, B.C., will be there to share their music.

Jumbalassy, a reggae band from Bellingham, will close the show. CougFest 1993 will be the bands second appearance at the event. Jumbalassy won best Northwest Ethnic group in 1991 Nama Awards.

Each band will play for approximately 45 minutes.

If concert goers get hungry there will be food available to purchase from local teriyaki, pizza and Greek restaurants. Alcoholic beverages will not be allowed at the event.

In case of rain CougFest will be held in the second floor ballroom of the Compton Union Building. Admission to the concert is free, so come out and enjoy, rain or shine.

Jumbalassy, from Bellingham, Wash., will be playing with four other bands Saturday, 4 - 9 p.m.

Throwing Frisbee

The Ultimate way of life

Russ Woolsey

Lifestyles Editor

Most students on the Palouse consider Frisbee a throw away sport, a game only taken seriously when playing an hour long round of golf on campus. The others consider playing disc the act of throwing a Frisbee to "Fido" on a hot summer day, or for many it is considered a nice alternative to lawn darts.

But to a group of devoted Frisbee players on the Palouse playing disc is a way of life; the Ultimate life. No dogs (at least on the field), no bikinis, no beer being consumed in the hand that is not holding the disc (until after the game), and no weak hearted players for this ultimate of sports.

Ultimate Frisbee is a team sport played with seven players to a team. The object of the game is to catch the disc in the opposing teams end-zone, and it doesn't matter how the disc is thrown to that end-zone or if the player catching the disc is standing or diving.

Traditionally ultimate has no referee or judge to call fouls; whose to say if the calls made by a referee are right or not anyway? In Ultimate the calls are made by the players in a spirited fashion. This is a style unique to Brad Hall and Joe Pallen of the Moscow/Pullman team, The Flying Lentils, practice at Washington State University August 19.

Ultimate that makes the game friendly and playable.

Here on the Palouse a Moscow/Pullman team plays three times a week, twice in Pullman and once in Moscow, called The Flying Lentils. The team is a motley assembly of Washington State University students and University of Idaho students that can be found at local pubs after practices during the week.

The Flying Lentils have traveled to several Ultimate events this summer that have included playing in a tournaments from Helena to Seattle. In past years the team has played in events as far away as Calgary, Canada.

This year the first annual "Pee in the Wheat" tournament was held here in Moscow at Mountain View Park. The tournament brought players from West Glacier and Seattle to play in the two day event sponsored by area business and students.

Ultimate has been an organized sport for over a decade, looked over by the Ultimate Players Association(UPA). It was first organized as a collegiate sport at Cornell University and has since expanded to include club teams, or teams not affiliated with a university. The UPA newsletter is published at UPA headquarters on Colorado Springs, Colo. In the last several years New York has won the UPA national championship, beating California teams in the last couple years. The championship games are usually televised on network television.

Other Ultimate teams do compete through the Intramural Sports program on campus and will begin playing this fall in the Kibbie Dome. The rules are different from the UPA.

For information about Intramural Ultimate contact the Intramural Office located in the Memorial Gym, at 885-6381.

Poetry contest offers $1,000 prize money

The Sparrowgrass Poetry Forum Inc. is sponsoring a new poetry contest this fall called "Awards of Poetic Excellence."

Prizes totaling $1,000 will be awarded to selected poems, including a $500 grand prize.

Poets may only enter one poem, twenty lines or less, on any subject, in any style. The contest closes Nov. 30, 1993. Poems entered in the contest also will be considered for publication in the Summer 1994 edition of Treasured Poems of America. Prize winners will be notified by November 30, 1993.

Sparrowgrass is dedicated to encouraging and rewarding the "undiscovered" poets. The contest is especially for new and unpublished poets, and welcomes poetry of all styles and themes.

driving the logging roads, spotting deer, elk, and bear and drinking in the incredible scenery.

You'll probably enjoy fishing more if you do the exploring yourself, so I'll leave that up to you. To begin your adventure of prospecting for north Idaho's piscatorial gems purchase a good map. I like the Clearwater National Forest visitors map, available at finer mom and pop establishments throughout the region for the price of a pitcher of cheap beer. Throw in a copy of the 1993 fishing regulations with the map and you'll have a decent travel guide. If you're not into checking out new areas and would like to plan your trip around some proven waters check the special regulations waters at the back of the regional sections.

As a general rule, you'll have to drive a bit further and into the mountains if you want to fish for cutthroat and dolly varden. Brookies and rainbow can be found in the day trip streams closer to Moscow and offer possibilities for both bait and fly fishermen. This time of year, crickets and grasshoppers are tough to beat when fished on light line in the low, clear water. If you are new to the area you might try driving east out of Moscow on Highway 8.

When you get to the first stop sign in Bovill, hang a right for some rainbow and brook trout action around Elk River. A left turn will lead you toward the St. Maries River drainage and the possibility of catching Idaho's state fish - the West slope cutthroat trout.

With the three day weekend coming up September 4-6th you can range a little further on an overnight trip and enjoy some outstanding fishing on the upper Lochsa River, Kelly Creek, or the St. Joe. These waters are primarily catch and release fishing for cutthroat with single, barbless hooks. I fished some of the St. Joe tributaries recently and did well casting for 6-10 inch native cuts using a #14 olive humpy. Kelly Creek has been running a little high but is gin clear and fly casters have been doing well on 10-17 inch cuts using elk hair caddis. I probably head up there before archery elk season gets under way.

Finally, at the risk of sounding like your mother, watch out for logging trucks when you head out exploring for area trout, don't forget the bug spray, and pick some crickets up on the way out of town.

RAPSEED

edible Canola oil. Canada currently grow 9.75 million acres of Canola. The word Canola comes from the CANadian Oil Association, who exports most of the Canola oil that is consumed in the US. Today most of the oil seed Brassica grown in the world comes from the European Economic Community (EEC), and Canada, although substantial amount is also grown in the far east.

Though most of the rapeseed is grown abroad, the United States has become increasingly involved in research in this crop. Specifically the UI leads the entire country in research for rapeseed in many different areas.

The UI has been researching Brassica for the last 13 years and has the only crushing plant to make biodiesel from Brassica oil seeds in the US. The UI has expertise in all aspects of the crop including entomology, pathology, breeding and genetics.

Currently Jack Brown, assistant Professor of plant science who is also known as the "Guru of Rapeseed" by co-faculty, said that the UI is conducting extensive research on rapeseed is to help the Pacific North west become a significant producer of Brassica.

The focus of the UI research is to increase the efficiency of the plant and to develop Canola, and other forms of Brassica that is suitable for specific uses in either the food industry or for industrial purposes.

Brown went on to say the Pacific Northwest has the perfect climate for the production of rapeseed, and claims the only significant obstacles the crop has right now is the availability of adapted strains of rapeseed, the legislation that exists and the traditions the farmers have in the area.

"When rapeseed is grown, in rotation with traditional local crops, such as wheat, peas, barley and lentils, the yield of all crops grown can be increased, dramatically."

John Fellman, assistant professor of plant physiology, said, "We're changing the face of American agriculture; putting money back into farmers pockets."

O'Brien defends World Championship

University of Idaho athlete Dan O'Brien won his second straight World Track and Field Championships decathlon title last Friday in Stuttgart, Germany.

O'Brien, who managed to sweep the title with a pulled groin, had set a world record of 8,891 points a month after the Olympics. Last Friday he finished with 8,817 points, which is not bad considering the grueling 10-events lasted two days.

Doug Nussmeier, senior starting quarterback, (13) takes a final look over his offense before taking a snap in last week's Vandal practice scrimmage. The Vandals had two practice scrimmages last week.

Vandals expected to take Big Sky Conference despite inexperience

Katé Lyons-Holestine

Sports Editor

Great expectations are what everyone holds for the University of Idaho football team this season. With their first practice scrimmage under their belts, the new and the old are congealing into one sound unit.

This year the Vandals are the youngest team head coach John L. Smith has ever coached. Eight seniors return along with 18 incoming freshman. After finishing with a 6-1 Big Sky record last season, the Vandals are expected to be contenders for the Big Sky championship again this fall.

"Everyone has picked us to win the league," coach Smith said, "but that's nothing new to us."

Smith likes the pressure, he realizes how tough it will be to repeat a Big Sky Championship, but he believes the tension has a positive effect on his players.

"It's good for us, we operate better under pressure," Smith said.

With only a few returning veterans, Smith has looked toward younger players and transfers from the junior college level to make big contributions to the Vandal line-up.

"We have a lot of big questions this year," Smith said. "For one, who's going to be our quarterback? Doug Nussmeier, we know that."

Nussmeier earned many kudos last season. He was chosen as the Big Sky Offensive MVP, a Senior bowl selection and a member of the Big Sky All-Academic team. To add to this list of accomplishments Nussmeier had the second highest total offense in US collegiate football last year with 312.5 yards.

"The offensive front is still a question mark, because we only have two veterans," Smith said.

Paul Burke, Matt Groshong and Jody Schnug are all possible candidates for the front line. Schnug has started for the Vandals for three years and received second team All-American honors last season. Groshong will bring strength and four years of playing experience to the UI offensive line. Burke returned to the UI roster this summer after confusion over his eligibility status was ironed out.

The youngest and most inexperienced players will be the Vandals' receiving corps.

"Alan Allen is the only one to come back with experience. The others will have to raise their game to his," Smith said.

Sherriden May, a first team all-Big Sky selection last season, returns as the Vandals No. 1 running back.

The defensive secondary are all young and inexperienced. "We have only one veteran and he is a true sophomore, he didn't red shirt," Smith added.

Miregi Huma, is the only starting player from last year's roster to return to the Vandal line-up.

"We need a good secondary as much as everyone throws the ball in this league," Smith said. "Our defensive front will be really good. They're young and inexperienced, but they'll be good, they just need time."

In addition to returning players and freshman standouts, Smith is counting on junior college transfers to start the season. Smith will be relying on Keith Neil, Kyle Gary and Tim Treyhan.

The Vandals have stayed healthy thus far into the season, and Smith hopes to keep the freshman in red shirt roles to save their eligibility.

"But, if we get dinged up they'll have to play," Smith said.

The Vandals also rely on Smith's experience and dedication. In his fifth year at the helm of the Vandals, Smith is the winningest coaches in UI history with an overall record of 33-15 and plans on continuing his tradition with demands of hard work and team loyalty.

The Vandals kick off the season Sept. 2 at Stephen F. Austin, Texas. This game will be broadcast live on Pacific Sports Northwest, Channel 40, at 5 p.m.

O'Brien's pole vault leads to victory in Germany

Relying on two events, one which cost him an entrance to the 1992 Olympic Track and Field competition, Dan O'Brien has managed another World Track and Field Championship.

O'Brien finished the meet with a new meet record of 8,817 points.

O'Brien's coach, Mike Keller, had boasted earlier in the week that despite the groin injury O'Brien was dealing with O'Brien expected to do well at the competition.

At the end of the first day of competition, O'Brien found himself in control of a meager four-point lead over Paul Meier, the German home-town favorite. But, on the second day of competition he sported his best performance ever in the pole vault - 17 feet and 3/4 inches. Ironically, his poor pole vault showing in 1992 excluded him from the Olympics.

O'Brien started the competition well with two victories. He boasted the best time in the 100 meters at 10.57 seconds and won the long jump on his first attempt.

O'Brien did have some pitfalls. He finished a disappointing fifth in the shot put and second in the 400 behind Meier.

As Friday's events pulled to a close O'Brien was confident behind his 97-point lead amassed early in the second day of competition.

With the final event, the 1500 meters, O'Brien was holding a comfortable lead though he finished second in the event behind Eduard Hamalainen of Germany. Hamalainen needed to finish the event 14 seconds ahead of O'Brien, but O'Brien was on his heels at the finish line.

Lady Spikers look to another great season

Lady Vandals return 8 letter winners from '92 team

The Vandal Volleyball Team finished their best season ever last year.

This year they return eight letter winners: Heather Cross-Schroeder, Dee Porter, Jessica Puckett, Mindy Rice, Lisa Stoltz, Brittany Van Haverbeke, Nancy Wicks, and Tzvetelina Yanchulova. Two redshirts come back: Louisa Kawulok and Leah Smith. Two newcomers come on board: Lynne Hyland and Kathy Oleksow.

Taking second in regular season play, the 1992 team went on to win the post-season Big Sky Tournament. To the disappointment of themselves and fans, they lost the first round of NCAA play-offs to the University of California -Santa Barbara.

Middle Blocker Nancy Wicks was voted 1992 Big Sky MVP; Wicks and Amie Hanks were chosen First Team All Big Sky Conference; Hanks was also chosen MVP for All-Tournament Big Sky Conference Championships. Setter/Outside Hitter Dee Porter was chosen Second Team All Conference. Outside Hitter Tzvetelina Yanchulova was voted Co-Freshman Of The Year. Tom Hilbert, in his fifth year of coaching here at UI, was voted Big Sky Conference Coach Of The Year.

Hilbert stays as Coach, with Melissa Stokes in her second year as Assistant Coach. Amie Hanks comes on as student assistant, after playing a great season last year.

Few losing coaches can afford the depth of feeling for their teams that Tom Hilbert has for the 1993 Vandal Volleyball Team.

But Hilbert isn't a loser, and neither are his players.

The tough team took second in the Big Sky last fall returns four seasoned, hard starters and a load of ambitious upcoming players Hilbert says the turnout "makes this the toughest year I've ever had to decide where to play people."

Bringing back memories of last year's preseason meeting with their coach, this year they vowed to go all the way and a little bit more.

According to Hilbert, "This year they said they wanted to be the first Big Sky team to win a first round game in NCAA territory."

Do they have the guts to go for it?

According to their coach, they do.

"Our biggest problem is going to be keeping the team focused into November," Hilbert said. He listed the coaching staff's goals as keeping things on a learning basis. This keeps everybody honed to a cutting edge.

His team's plan is to stay intense right through to the end. "We want to peak in the last month," he said.

The Vandals only have two shortcomings: they have inexperienced setters, and their passing requires work. Other than that Hilbert sees an outstanding team shaping up.

"We've had some great practices, with long rallies. The players are in great shape, and there's a lot of inter squad competition (for starting positions)."

The Vandal's first scrimmage is at Orofino Sept. 1. Their first game starts at noon Sept. 3 against University of Wyoming at the Cougar Challenge in Pullman.

Hilbert also made a pitch for a new concept the Vandal Volleyball Team is trying out this season "We're trying season tickets for the first time. These tickets will give up to 13 passes (total) in any combination into any game the holder wants to attend." Only $25, these tickets allow extra flexibility when boosting the Volleyball organization, and if they perform like last year, it'll be worth the cash to get out and give them support.

“This (is) the toughest year I've ever had to decide where to play people.

Golf Scramble

Dan O'Brien tees-off UI golf course's 60th anniversary

Darin Crisp

Staff Writer

The University of Idaho Golf Course will celebrate 60 years of service to the community with the Dan O'Brien Golf Scramble Saturday.

Sponsored by Inland Cellular and ASUI Auxiliary Services, the scramble will also welcome O'Brien back from competing in the Decathlon World Championships in Stuttgart, Germany. Proceeds from the tourney will be donated on O'Brien's behalf to the UI Men's Track and Field fund, to be used for travel, recruiting and equipment.

Designed around scramble format, where everybody on a team drives off the tee and then plays from where the best ball lies. Competing through 18 holes, 36 four man teams will play the UI Golf Course. Both pre-organized teams and individual players will be accepted. Single players will be assigned to teams on the field.

According to Jeff Eisenbarth, Director of Auxiliary Services, the golf course was originally designed by architect Francis L. James—for whom the current clubhouse is named—and built in 1933. When it first opened, it was a nine hole course on 150 acres, and followed the low areas, where the valley holes are presently located. It was redesigned in 1968 to the present eighteen hole configuration, and the pro's home was converted to the present James Clubhouse in 1972.

A brainstorm of Chip Damato, of Inland Cellular in Clarkston, the purpose for this scramble is to provide a fun fund raiser. With the assistance of Diana Adkisson, also of Inland Cellular, Damato approached O'Brien's coach, Mike Keller with the proposal to set up a new fund-raiser for the track team.

"We just wanted to help out the community, and since we have a pretty good relationship with Dan, we decided to go with it," Damato said. Damato, an ex-baseball player for Lewis-Clark State College, has organized the even to help foster a central community feeling. He and Adkisson decided to go with the idea of a golf tournament.

"We decided to go with a golf program, because our company has a lot of golfers," Damato said. "We wanted something fun and exciting that we could do next year, too."

Damato said his company plans to make this an annual event, if things go well. "Our idea is to do this in Moscow about this time, because all the extra people will be around then."

"Eventually, we'd like to get a series started," he said.

The entry fee is $40 per person, due by tomorrow. Forms are available at the Francis L. James Memorial Clubhouse and may be either mailed in or dropped off at the Pro's Bench. Phone registrations aren't being accepted.

Applicants must be 18 or older. No more than one person per team may have a handicap lower than 10. Sign in starts at 10:30 a.m., and first tee-off is scheduled for noon.

Speaking for the tournament committee, Tournament Director Norma Fuentes-Scott said the original prize for the pre-tourney hole-in-one contest has been changed to a pair of Horizon airline tickets. She added, however, the prize for the first hole-in-one on the #5 hole is still a 1993 Toyota 4x4 pickup, sponsored by James Toyota. Questions or concerns can be addressed to Fuentes-Scott, 883-1101.
