Attorney David Nevin spoke at the UI Law School Courtroom Thursday about his defense in the Randy Weaver trial.

Randy Weaver

Government evidence lawyer's dream, Weaver's lawyer said

Melinda Branscum

Contributing Writer

A defense lawyer in the Randy Weaver trial spoke about the trial Thursday in the University of Idaho Law School Courtroom.

Weaver's story began last summer when what was called "a surveillance mission" turned into an 11-day siege in Naples, ending in the deaths of three people and one dog. The deaths resulted from a gunfight between Weaver, who was charged with making and selling illegal weapons, and U.S. federal agents who were watching his cabin.

Questions arose as to which side started the shooting, and it was discovered one of the officers fired the first shot which killed Weaver's dog.

David Nevin, Kevin Harris's defense attorney, discussed his reasons for taking the case. Harris, a friend of the Weaver family, was charged with the shooting death of William F. Degan, a federal agent.

Nevin spoke of his doubts about handling the case. Nevin said Weaver is a "jerk," a "racist" and a "separatist." He has "repugnant beliefs and wants to tell you these beliefs." Yet when Nevin first visited Weaver's North Idaho "shack," he "just had a feeling about it." The deeper he dug into the case, through about 15,000 pages of information, the more his feeling grew, Nevin said.

"You have a understanding and a feeling about something, then have the courage to act on it," Nevin said.

Nevin learned the "surveillance mission" was known to federal marshals as "Operation Northern Exposure." The operation lasted over 18 months and cost millions of dollars. Two $130,000 cameras were installed, for example to watch the family. The government had bought the lot next to the Weavers' and was planning on placing a man there, along with five two-men teams hidden in the woods, to befriend and later arrest Weaver.

Beitelspacher defends program cuts

Ariel Plywaski

Staff Writer

Gubernatorial candidate Ron Beitelspacher was not afraid to say what he thought Thursday night in the monthly membership meeting sponsored by the Paradise Valley Chapter of the Idaho Public Employees Association.

The IPEA, an organization of state-employed people, is not endorsing his campaign but hopes to bring more candidates to campus before the campaign is over.

According to Harvey Hewitt of Grangeville, Beitelspacher cut off the funding to the outdoor program in 1988. Beitelspacher explained the Outdoor Program equipment was being used for inventory in an Outfitting venture, in other outfitting businesses in Idaho.

In response to Hewitt's accusation, Beitelspacher said Hewitt's comments were "so much bull—." Beitelspacher explained in small towns like Riggins, people had made the transition from logging to the tourist industry, and those small business owners could not compete with the University of Idaho. "(Student) Fees are used to provide things for students, not to start a business," Beitelspacher said.

Hewitt asked why Beitelspacher had not offset the loss of the outfitter's program with student internships.

Beitelspacher said he had never promised more money to the outdoor program and had told the Outfitters Board they needed to cut back on their funding. "Outfitters have a large overhead, and it isn't fair to use taxpayer's money to start up your own outfitting program," Beitelspacher said.

Beitelspacher also answered a question concerning the amount of money to be spent on prisons, saying the taxpayers should not have to buy "hotel rooms for prisoners." Beitelspacher recommended more highway work crews, with electronic shock collars, but he also expressed concern with people being imprisoned for bouncing checks. "We should find ways to help people in trouble, but once they break the rules, we shouldn't waste our time and resources making their stay in prison comfortable," Beitelspacher said.

Beitelspacher works as a lineman for the power company, and is originally from Grangeville. He was elected to the Idaho State Senate in 1980, and was on several

Residency rules remain same

Darin Crisp
Staff Writer

An attempt by ASUI officers to have the new residency requirements for education declared unconstitutional has failed for now.

ASUI Attorney General Thane Twigg and ASUI President Richard Rock drafted a letter starting the process last spring.

After the Idaho Attorney General's office sent it back without inspection because a state officer was not involved, it was resubmitted by Idaho State Senator Gary Schneider.

In a letter to Schneider dated Aug. 19, Deputy Attorney General Bradley Hall said the statute as it was amended does not create any irrebuttable presumption (a kind of legal Catch-22). The letter was not entered as an official opinion, but as guidance.

The new requirements say residency will be recognized for those people living in Idaho 12 months or longer, if they came for other than the purpose of going to school.

Rock and Twigg drafted the letter because they believed the wording of the statute was unclear, and an irrebuttable presumption did exist.

"How do you prove what your intent was?" said Twigg. "We are arguing that the language makes it unconstitutionally hard to get residency."

Twigg said the language makes it possible for individuals in similar circumstances to receive different treatment.

Hall, who is also Idaho Board of Education Chief Legal Officer, said tests for residency include submitting proof of tax and registration payments on vehicles, trailers and property, filing of state income taxes, holding a full-time job or equivalent, registering to vote and purchasing property.

None of the tests are affected by the language of the amendment.

"The other tests are still O.K.," said Twigg. He said his intent was to get rid of the language stating, "...for purposes other than education."

Though the alleged unconstitutionality of the law was not upheld, Rock said at least the Attorney General's office did uphold the right of the student to provide evidence proving residency.

The statute was initially considered as far back as 1970, said Hall. Discussion concerning the amendment to the established statute started around 1991 in response to the much stricter regulations concerning residency in surrounding states.

Hall said as the Idaho amendment went through, he thought the state of Oregon was enacting an even stricter law regarding residency.

He said normally, legislation passed becomes effective in July. In this case legislators wanted to ensure the people in the process of meeting residency under the old requirements received fair treatment, so they pushed the effective date back to Jan. 15, 1993.

Tidyman's to double size, new store opens Nov. 15

Stacy McGuire
Staff Writer

With construction growing nearer to completion, Tidyman's Warehouse Foods of Moscow is preparing for the opening of a new warehouse store located at 638 Blaine St.

Opening Nov. 15, the new store will be more than double the size of the current warehouse, expanding from 19,000 to 43,000 square feet.

"This (the current warehouse) is just too small," said Warehouse Manager Stan Scott. "We need to upgrade in order to stay ahead of the market."

The new warehouse will offer a variety of new services not currently available at the present Tidyman's. Among those new services are a full service bakery, deli, meat and seafood.

The new warehouse will also have an espresso bar, floral boutique and pharmacy. They also boast having the largest selection of frozen food on the Palouse. There also will be a Globalized Credit Union located at the warehouse.

Tidyman's slogan for the new store is Northwest Fresh. "Which means what we buy one day, we will sell that day," said Scott.

Assistant store manager Roger Berardacci said the warehouse was planning a door-to-door walk announcing the opening of the new store closer to its opening.

The Moscow Tidyman's was opened in 1970. The chain runs through Idaho, Washington and Montana.

committees, but he said he did the most good on the appropriations committee.

There, Beitelspacher said he influenced the amount of money that flowed through programs, and created some good programs.

Beitelspacher said he was running to "make a difference," and he saw other legislators and senators who were there to get reelected. "They aren't there to take care of the people that count," Beitelspacher said.

Beitelspacher said he could "take the heat" on controversial issues.

"I stood up to people like Andrus and Echohawk, and I've attended hearings on abortion. I believe in telling it like it is," Beitelspacher said.

The controversial issues in Idaho have been recent fights between environmentalists and loggers.

Ron Beitelspacher

Beitelspacher said this is mostly due to changes sweeping through Idaho.

"Everywhere it is changing, and people are concerned about the future," Beitelspacher said.

"Why didn't they just ask him to come down?" Nevin asked.

Nevin's trial theme is a quote by George Washington, "Government is not reason; it is force. Like fire it is a dangerous servant and a fearful master."

Nevin said Americans give "too much power to the police. We as a society view police in a different way." Nevin contends the government was wrong to begin the shooting and was doing everything in its power to cover its tracks.

"Government is not reason, it's force... when the chips are down and they have the power to use it they will," Nevin said.

In the end, the prosecution played right into the defense's hands, Nevin said.

"The government's evidence came in so good for us, it was a defense lawyer's dream. We couldn't have made things any better."

Weaver and Harris were acquitted of all charges.

Nevin said he never felt better than when he walked down those steps knowing that he had helped free a man who was not actually guilty.

"Most of the time it is logical for your client to be guilty because he is guilty," Nevin said.

Tougher decisions for Zinser still to come

University of Idaho President Elisabeth Zinser has named three administrative positions destined for the cost-cutting guillotine and deserves applause for not sending employees into the job-hunting jungle.

The Idaho Board of Education ordered the four state-funded institutions to relocate money from administrative areas and into teaching. UI plans to transfer $2 million over five years, with 80 percent coming from central administration. Zinser responded to an impatient and nearly irate board finance committee by naming the three positions which totaled $186,477.

Vice President for University Relations and Development, currently held by Harry Peterson, will cut $107,709 in the trimming effort. Peterson had already intended to resign his position in June 1994.

The two other positions named are for a facilities management administrative secretary and a payroll officer, totaling an additional $78,768. The payroll officer position is also currently vacant.

There are two ways to look at Zinser's cost-cutting effort. In one view, Zinser did the right thing by saving as many jobs as she could before she will be forced to cut not simply positions, but the people who do the jobs. And that makes for some extremely difficult decisions.

On the other hand, Zinser may have acted too quickly in her decision making process and may pick up more duties than she can effectively handle when she adds Peterson's workload to her own.

She may have taken the easier road under the board's pressure and may find the remainder of the distance to $2 million a steep and rutted path.

Zinser plans to name at least three other positions Thursday and Friday at the board meeting in Boise. Among those may be the position of UI communications director Terry Maurer, who announced his resignation last week, and the cutting of the vacant position would help keep other jobs intact.

This shift in emphasis to teaching—both by the administrative cuts and the UI Faculty Council which is currently trying to shift unfair emphasis toward research-gear faculty to faculty who focus on students and teaching—is a strong step toward the true goal of higher education and any attempt to achieve it should be supported, despite the difficulty of the path.

'Just Say No' to sexual paranoia

The Way It Is Shari Ireton

Clinton has yet again thrown a wrench into the conservative clockwork agenda.

His administration recently announced their new plan to prevent pregnancy and sexually transmitted diseases among adolescents and it has the Right Wing screaming. Part of the decision includes revising the famous 12-year old Republican slogan of "Just Say No" to pre-marital sex by adding "But if you do say 'yes' be sure to use a condom." The Democrat administration hopes this message will place an emphasis on birth control and disease prevention for teen-agers.

While some of this may sound great to those of us who have recently left those crowded high school hallways within the last few years, the conservatives, as usual, are thinking the worst. Critics of Clinton's new plan say the campaign will not only encourage sexual activity among 12 to 19-year-old students, but also increase the rate of teen abortions. They also claim the emphasis of the government for safe teen sex will do little to prevent pregnancies or STDs.

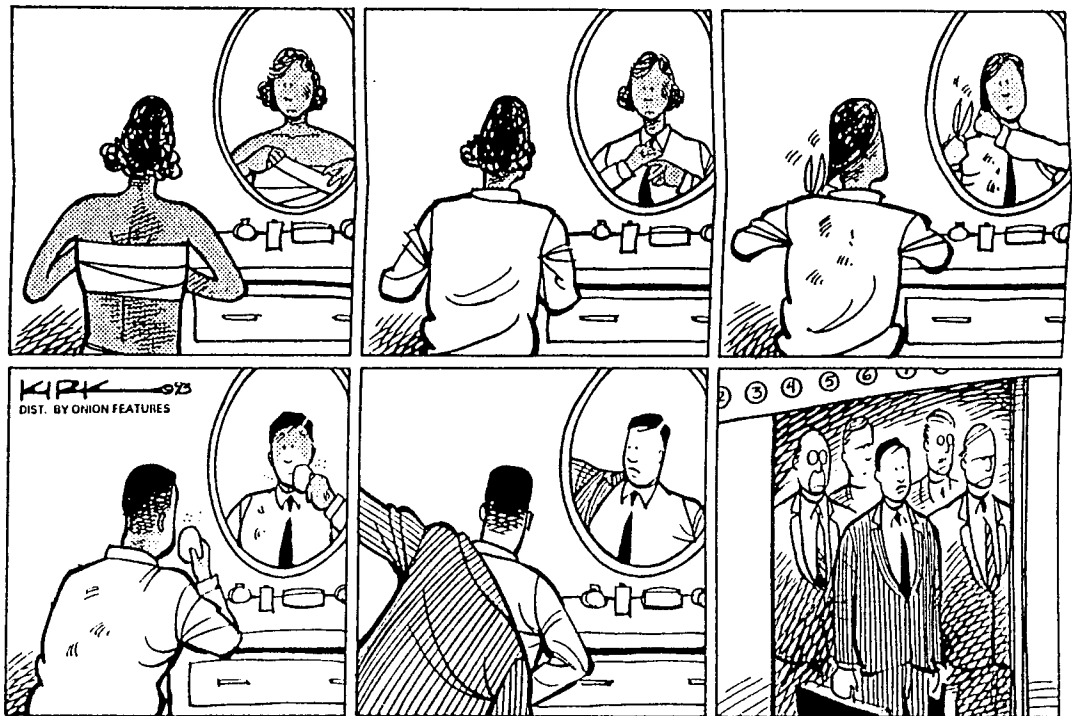

Keep in mind a survey conducted in 1990 by the Centers for Disease Control states nearly three-fourths of all high school students say they have had sex before graduation.

Now look back on those glorious pre-college years. Do you remember your friends' tales of steamy back seats and sneaking out through their bedroom window on Saturday nights? Do you honestly think that, short of a tight chastity belt or being chained to a wall (which I'm sure was on the mind of many a father), they could have been kept from doing the "dirty deed?" We both know the answer is "no."

I have come to the conclusion, like it or not, it will be nearly impossible to keep teens from experimenting with the biggest temptation of their life. I have also decided if they are going to do it, why not keep them safe?

And, how on earth could the promotion of the use of condoms increase teen-age abortions? If they are using those little raincoats, then they are also keeping the proverbial bun out of the

Cops don't spend all their time eating sprinkled doughnuts

There's a very disturbing frame of mind present in this country today.

Blame it on the Rodney King hoopla, their alleged love for circular pastries or the last time you were pulled over for speeding. Whatever the reason, police officers have become the enemy instead of the knight in shining blue.

It's not something tangible you can put your finger on, but it's an attitude which has seeped into our mainstream way of thinking and shows no sign of going away anytime soon. Police officers are now looked upon with dread, distrust and general disgust instead of as a friend in time in trouble, a father figure to admire.

We seem only to hear about the bad things. Rodney King gets nailed to the street by a couple of cops that come to represent the attitude of the entire

I'll Tell You Why Jeff Kapostasy

Los Angeles Police Department. Rap and rock songs alike shout every obscenity in the book (and even a few which are not) at police officers, further spreading the negative attitude.

Plus, there's the stuff which happens every day. On your way to work, you ignore every speedlimit and are greeted by that feeling of dread in seeing the flashing blue and red in the rearview mirror. Or you get questioned for something you are not guilty of.

Accord promises first peace in 500 years

Palestinian Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat has been making enemies in the Middle East for some 30-odd years now, but it comes as some surprise that more and more they are Palestinian and less and less Israeli.

Surprise, surprise.

The peoples of these two tribes have been killing one another long before the time of the New Testament, which is either a rather long time if you are Christian, or about sometime in the middle of last week if you are an anthropologist.

So it comes with much astonishment on Sunday Shimon Peres, the Israeli foreign minister, and Arafat, leader of the much maligned PLO, came to informal agreements for Palestinian self-rule in Israel.

Ever since Europeans decided

to carve a chunk of prime beach front property smack out of the middle of the Arab world, the people of Palestine have been without a country.

This act, (which made about as much sense as New Zealand telling the United States to convert Rhode Island into a Ugandan homeland, and then having us agree) rested largely on Europe's intention to secure an ally in a normally hostile region.

Of course it had nothing to do with oil, or airstrips where friendly jets could peacefully rest and offer shade to American servicemen who really were there as horticultural specialists.

But anyway, Peres and Arafat agreed in principle to allow Palestinian sovereignty in the city of Jericho and the Gaza Strip Province. Right-wing factions of both Israel and the PLO immediately began lining up in protest.

Then again, what did you expect.

The conversion to independence will be an easy one for Palestine for several reasons. First of all, they already have a flag - a beautiful appendage with cobalt blue highlights. Secondly, they have lots of military experience, which will come in handy in their chosen venue.

This summer, while I was in attendance at an International Friendship Association banquet, a man stood up to give a presentation on his country.

People from India and China and Costa Rica and all over the world sat and listened to this man wax eloquent about a land he felt more attachment to than wood or stone. It was a feeling greater than the enjoyment we shared over baklava and tempera vegetables, which were excellent, by the way. This man stood as no man I had ever seen and said, "I am from Palestine."

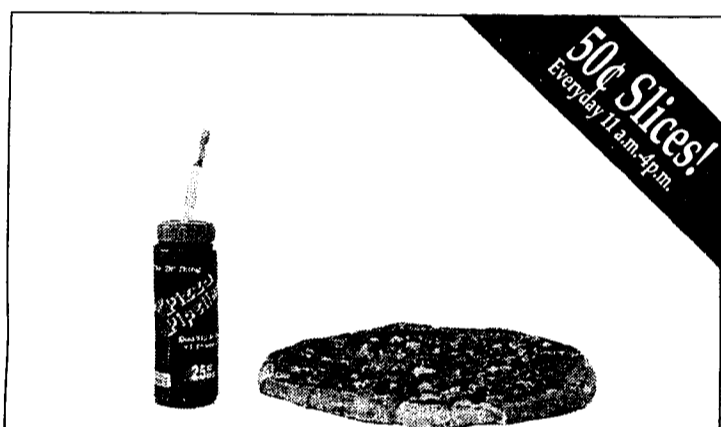

The irony seemed to be lost in the cracks of our many languages, but I have never forgotten what he said. I still see him around campus, and although I never shared my feelings with him, his bravado inspired me.

If he reads this, I would like to extend my heartfelt congratulation to him and his compatriots. The process of the current negotiations will indeed be a long one and in no way is an end to the fighting, but it is a step towards humanity.

But do not believe for a minute that if these agreements fail, Palestine will cease to be a nation in the hearts and souls of the people of a tribe with more history than the dirt you and I trample every day.

Because without borders and constitutions, without a seat in the United Nations, or without a McDonalds or a Walmart, one man in Idaho speaks for all his people when he says, "I am from Palestine." That, my folks, means forever.

This attitude is also very present right here at UI. Students usually place cops just above shower scum on the totem pole of life forms. Students are constantly getting busted for under age consumption, loud music or DUI. And that doesn't even begin to take into account Moscow PD's reaction to the infamous snowball fight every winter. Students loathe cops. Many students react to getting busted by saying the cops were out of line or are generally a bunch of beer-bellied slobs.

That is, until one of us breaks down on the way up to Spokane, gets our car stolen or hears a prowler in the kitchen as we hide in the closet dialing 911 as quietly as possible.

This attitude of hatred toward cops is, in my opinion, complete crap. Between having to deal with the danger of the job and all the nonsense they have to put up with, cops should have a salary at least as large as Elisabeth Zinser's.

There are a couple of reasons cops should be respected as well as greatly rewarded. First of all, according to a recent study, police work is second only to firefighting in dangerous work. Police in big cities are often outnumbered and can't even begin to put a dent in the crime rate. Plus, police carry around pistols and night sticks while their opponents often sport Uzis and baseball bats.

In addition to the obvious danger, there's also the tremendous wear and tear of being exposed to society's gruesome underbelly day after day. Cops are constantly confronted with images of abuse and violence, hate and neglect.

Although it shouldn't serve as the end-all example of police work, sitting down and watching Cops at least gives normal citizens a taste of all the garbage these guys have to put up with. It's amazing to me the rotten things people do and how police can remain sane. And of course, the arrested always claim they are innocent and try to make the cop look like the bad guy.

Unfortunately, many cops don't remain sane. Depression, alcoholism and suicide are very high among police, as is the turn-over rate for cops that can't hack the pressure and boil over. It's very sad.

Cops are restrained by the Constitution. Police must follow stringent restraints when arresting the bad guys. Too stringent if you ask me, but that's another column.

Cops deserve the utmost respect from society, and almost none of the bad reputation they get. If you think your life would be simpler without that police cruiser silently roaming the night streets, think twice, my friend.

Moscow Mountain Madness pedals and runs Saturday

A grueling 12-mile race will be held at Moscow Mountain this Saturday, sponsored by the local running club, the Paradise Roadrunners. Racers will have choice of running or cycling the course that leads past razanaks along the spine of the mountain.

Moscow Mountain Madness is fast becoming a fall tradition on the island. It's earning a reputation as one of the most entertaining and challenging race events in the Northwest.

Mountain bikers now dominate the race that used to be just runners. The race begins four miles north of Moscow at Hwy 20. The starting point will be located at race day. The race will end at the old razanak ski resort at the foot of the mountain. Shuttle service will be provided to and from the finish for those who do not have transportation.

The bike race will begin at 9:45 a.m. and the foot race will start at 9 a.m. Registration will begin at 7:30 a.m. on race day. Registration costs $20 with a long sleeve t-shirt, and $8 without.

To register or help volunteer call Lorena Stauber at 482-1133.

Dirt Fishermen hook the crowd at the Combine last weekend

Chris Farnsworth

Staff Writer

The Dirt Fishermen, an alternative band based in Boise, played to an appreciative crowd of about 100 at the Combine in Pullman on Saturday, September 4.

Opening acts Buttercup and Sicko were well-received. Sicko won loud applause for their thrash cover of the Indigo Girls' "Closer to Fine." After a brief pause for technical difficulties (can anyone find an outlet?), the Fishermen began their set.

Singer/guitarist Gina Gregerson expressed appreciation for the crowd after the first song.

"Wow, applause. We were in Spokane last night and it really sucked." Someone yelled back, "Spokane always sucks!"

Earth First! activists were also at the concert, armed with pamphlets and bumper-stickers. Gregerson said, "Just wanted you to know, there's some good people back there, doing an important job."

Gregerson and singer K.T. Shanafelt led the Fishermen through a rousing hour-long set. The crowd stayed on its feet until the end, speaker-diving and lifting one another into the air.

far I have seen only one person try it on the Clearwater.

While I can't vouch for the drift fly's fall effectiveness (yet), I fished the South Fork of the Clearwater the last weekend of the spring season and hooked two dark steelhead on flies. We were fishing flies on 6 inch droppers above eggs. The fish hit the fly over the corky set up both times.

If you try this set-up, don't tip the fly with bait until Oct. 15. The water above Memorial Bridge is closed to bait fishing until that time. Until then, consider fishing below Memorial Bridge at the Snake/Clearwater confluence or Mill hole. Fishermen backtrolling lighted plugs at night have been catching chrome bright A runs.

Since dove hunting has been lousy, the elk aren't bugling yet, and grouse hunting is still in question, it looks like I'll see you on the lower Clearwater.

Vandal Volleyball kicks season off at the Cougar Challenge

Dan Eckles

Staff Writer

The University of Idaho Volleyball team got mixed reviews over the Labor Day weekend in their season opening at the Washington State University Cougar Challenge volleyball tournament.

The Vandals lost a 5 game heartbreaker in their tournament opener Friday afternoon to the Western Athletic Conference member Wyoming Cowgirls 16-14, 5-15, 16-14, 12-15, and 15-8.

Friday night featured the border battle between PAC-10 foe Washington State and Idaho, which saw the Cougars drop the Vandals 16-14, 15-12, and 15-11.

Saturday The Vandals found their winning form and ripped the Iowa State Cyclones of the Big-8 7-15, 15-5, 15-4, and 15-3.

The Wyoming match was like a roller coaster as both clubs traded momentum throughout the match. After losing game one the Vandals stormed back to drill the Cowgirls 15-5 in the second clash. Idaho looked to be taking control of the match leading 14-8 in the third game, but the Cowgirls tossed a shutout the rest of the way en-route to 16-14 win.

The Vandals did not fold fighting back to tie the match at 2 games apiece with a 15-12 triumph in game four, before falling in the fifth.

Idaho hit just .061 and .091 in the crucial third and fifth games. Wyoming held a .244 to .207 hitting edge overall and pounded down 16 blocks to Idaho's 7.

Nancy Wicks led the Vandals with 15 kills in 25 attempts for a .480 hitting clip. Jessica Puckett also added 15 kills for the Vandals.

Against Washington State the Vandals jumped out to 14-10 advantage in game one, but again the well went dry for Idaho as the Cougars reeled off the game's final six points and claimed the victory.

The Cougars fell behind in games two and three as well, but their combination of 5-foot 11-inch middle blocker Carrie Gilley, who hammered out 18 kills and a .519 hitting percentage in the match, and 6-5 outside hitter Becky Howlett, who hammered 16 kills, was too much for the Vandals.

Mindy Rice was the star for Idaho Friday night with 17 kills.

Argonaut sports diversifying

Women have been branching out from the tradition child rearing, house keeping roles they held. Today women are fighter pilots in the Army defending our country, college professors, newspaper editors and housewives.

The majority at the very conservative University of Idaho is just as apprehensive as the rest of the world about accepting women who break the mold. Yes, believe it or not, the UI offers degrees in liberal arts, but liberal is not the mind set of many students.

I have had the pleasure of being associated with the UI since early childhood, growing up a mere 14 miles away.

Here I am now, the Sports Editor of the UI Argonaut.

Why is this so important? For beginners, I'm female. A woman isn't the traditional or, as I have learned, accepted head of a sports department.

The staff writers whom I work with (all men) don't seem to have any arguments with the way I operate the sports department of the Argonaut.

Many of the people I glean stories from are appreciative of the coverage. The coaches I deal with from the UI Sports Department haven't voiced any complaints.

But a handful of readers are very critical of the Argonaut Sports section.

I was sitting in the library lounge late last week and overheard some casual "reader response" concerning the quality and contents of the Argonaut sports section in particular.

The Score Katé Lyons-Holestine

In a direct quote I wrote down while listening, one man said, "Why don't they get a guy who knows about sports to write?"

They continued to comment on the absence of football from Tuesday's edition. But, so far this fall, excepting today's edition, every copy of the Argonaut has had some mention or a photo of UI football.

Sports are no harder to write than news.

Jean Grammar returns to Hammer and Cycle

Grammar and Lee expected to be tops in women's and men's competitions

Andrew Longteig
Staff Writer

Any logical human being would refuse the opportunity to run five kilometers, hop on a bicycle and trek 30 kilometers, then run another five.

Nevertheless, insane individuals like Jean Grammar, or perhaps remarkably gifted ones, enjoy and excel at this grueling competition called a duathlon.

Who, in their right or even wrong minds would attempt such an event?

Grammar justifies, "It's something you do for yourself."

Many would consider the event a two sport event. Consequently, the name biathlon comes to mind. But, the biathlon is an olympic event that involves cross country skiing and rifle marksmanship.

Grammar, 41, has claimed the Hammer and Cycle Duathlon victory during the previous two schedulings of the event. The Hammer and Cycle was not run in 1992. The third annual race is scheduled in Moscow on September 19.

Additionally, Grammar has also taken first at the annual duathlon in Post Falls. These tournaments attract some of the best multi-sport talent of the northwest.

Grammar lives in Pullman and has been competing in multi-event sports for six years.

"Basically, have fun and do the best you can." Grammar, although she occasionally gets intense, says, "It's better to stay relaxed."

Grammar has been bicycling and running for much of her life, and after noticing a duathlon race scheduled locally, she willingly entered - and won. This race was the Post Falls Biathlon.

"I was expected not to do anything (at the race), and I was shocked I came in first," Grammar said.

Her diet is satisfied by eating forkloads of pasta, and she isn't reluctant to sneak in some goodies into her digestive tract every once in a while.

In terms of training, Grammar runs year-round. During the summer she runs five days a week, five miles per day and bikes an exasperating 150 miles per week. She conditions herself in the winter by both cross-country and downhill skiing. These activities attributed to her toned 5'7", 125-pound frame.

Other than competing and conditioning herself, she has no major activities other than gardening and camping with her family.

Grammar is a human being after all. She does get tired. She says the first run and the bike part of the race are fine and make her "feel good." On the other hand, she describes her legs as "concrete."

"But you just persevere and know that it is going to end," Grammar said.

Eric Lee of Pullman is the men's race favorite. A graduate student at WSU in Pharmacology and Toxicology, Lee has won two Northwest duathlon races. Lee finished first in the Chehalis Duathlon and the Aquaman Duathlon in Richland this summer.

"I was expected not to do anything (at the race), and I was shocked I came in first."

—Jean Grammar
Two-time winner, Hammer and Cycle

Lee is a first-time competitor in the Hammer and Cycle Duathlon.

The final entry deadline for the Hammer and Cycle Duathlon is Sept. 17.

This year's competition will draw some of the Northwest's top multi-sport athletes, but this year's Hammer and Cycle's concentration is on the newly organized team competition.

Team competition includes male, female and mixed teams from the University of Idaho and Washington State University living groups and departments.

A pre-race meeting is scheduled for Sept. 18 at 4 p.m. in the SUB Borah Theater. All persons interested in competing are urged to attend this meeting. If unable to attend the pre-race meeting, race packets, including a map, will be distributed at 6 a.m. Sept. 19 at the race start site. For more information call 885-6381.

The race will begin and end near the UI outdoor track area. The awards ceremony will take place on the track following the race.

In fact sports are probably easier. Events are always scheduled, very little happens on the spur of the moment and players and coaches are always eager to be quoted or photographed.

I hope I have brought some changes to the Argonaut sports section. That was my goal when applying for this position.

Most paper's sports sections are devoted to men's sports. There is the occasional story about the local college and the prep schools, but the majority of the page is centered on men's professional sports.

The Argonaut has been narrowly focused on the men's football and basketball programs for the past few years.

Coverage of these important athletic programs at the UI will not be discontinued. My goal is to cover these programs in addition to expanding coverage of the UI volleyball, track and field, tennis and intramural sports to list a few.

This change is not because I am a woman and want to see more women's sports, it is because I feel all sports deserve equal coverage.

25th consecutive win, capturing the tournament crown.

Saturday afternoon the Vandals served as a brick wall for Iowa State, which dropped the Vandals in game one, but could do nothing correct after the first game. Iowa State broke a 4-4 tie in game one with five straight points, going on to win 15-7, but the Cyclones hit .024, .111, and .103 in the final three games.

"We were just really flat coming in and it took a little while to get going," said Rice, who along with teammate Nancy Wicks was named to the all-tournament squad.

"We came out testing the waters. We have a tendency to do that sometimes. We say how hard do we have to play to win and when you do that you usually lose," Vandals coach Tom Hilbert said.

"I was happy with our ability to refocus after the first game," Hilbert said. "ISU is not near the opponent the other two (Wyoming and Washington State) are, but I am real happy with the tourney and we are getting the opportunity to play tough people."

the Idaho win. The Vandals hit .260 in the match, including a .436 mark in game four, compared to Iowa State's .123. Idaho had 20 blocks compared to the Cyclones 0. Idaho also posted seven aces while Iowa State had 2.

Idaho, which had problems putting games away against Wyoming and Washington State, had no problems Saturday, jumping out to leads of 9-3, 9-1, and 13-2 in games two, three, and four respectively.

The Vandals are now 2-2 in pre-season action. They take on the Lewis-Clark Warriors tonight in Memorial Gym at 7:30 p.m.

oven. If the 14-year-old girls aren't walking into math nine months pregnant, why on Earth would this increase abortions? It's just another example of the thinking of panicked, illogical conservatives who want to keep everything naughty out of their children's lives.

"Wake up, Honey! It's three a.m.! Do you know where Junior is, what he's doing and who he's doing it with?"

You could also look at this proposal from a financial point of view. Say you spend an average 89 cents a year in taxes to pay for a Sheik Elite for some kid down the block to use with his girlfriend.

Take away the prophylactic, the girlfriend is pregnant and now you are paying over $2,000 in taxes to cover medical costs of prenatal care and delivery. Add on top of those costs a few thousand every year for health and welfare (how do you expect a 15-year-old girl to finish high school and hold down a job?)

Or maybe she doesn't get pregnant, but instead one of them contracts syphilis, gonorrhea or, worse, AIDS. The hospital bills would add up to thousands in medical bills paid for by, you guessed it, the good ol' taxpayer.

We have to stop this hysterical treatment of our nation's teens. We treat them like young adults, yet we expect them to act like 3-year-old children. If we could for once use a little foresight in educating our children, maybe the consequences wouldn't be so bad.

Conservatives, stop your griping and do your part! Try a little education before they leave the house at night and prevent them from contracting nasty diseases or getting "knocked up" by telling them about Trojans. Or just shut up and leave it up to the government.

Either way, just remember, if you say "yes," be sure to use a condom!

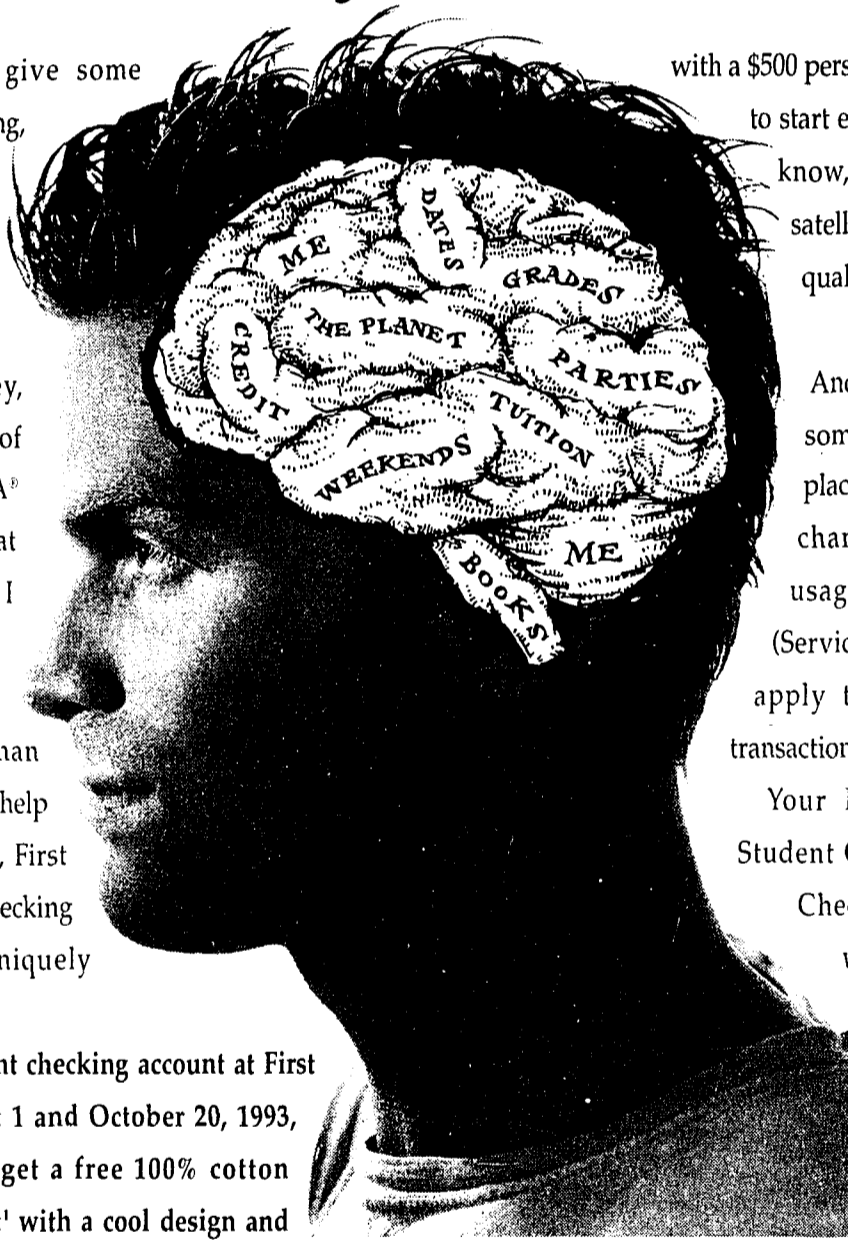

Introducing The Student Checking Account Designed Specifically For The Way Students Think.

Take a moment and give some thought to what you think: passing, flunking, does my apartment get cable?, relationships - does he or doesn't she?, global warming, cool checks, MTV, Is grunge for me?, money, money, money, the mysterious powers of chocolate, will I ever own a VISA® card?, where's the free stuff?, that ozone thing, tuition's due when?, I need an ATM?

Obviously, there's a lot more going on in your mind than your professors might think. To help alleviate some of your concerns, First Security Bank offers a student checking account tailored to fit your uniquely hectic lifestyle.

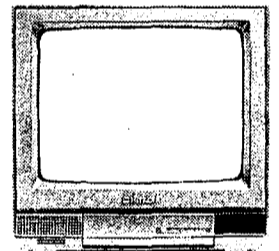

When you open a student checking account at First Security Bank between August 1 and October 20, 1993, you'll get a free 100% cotton T-shirt¹ with a cool design and the name of your college. (And while you're there, enter to win a 13-inch Hitachi TV.²)

In addition to a free T-shirt, you'll get a First Security Cash Card that gives you 24-hour access to your money. The card is free and allows unlimited usage at any of our 125 ATM locations in Utah and Idaho. You also get your first fifty checks free. And you can write ten checks a month without a service charge. Plus you can apply for your own VISA card with a $500 personal line of credit³. Which is a great way to start establishing credit for your future — you know, spouse, kids, house, two-car garage, satellite dish, etc... Plus, when you apply and qualify, you'll get a free VISA Banking Card.

It's a VISA card that works like a check. And it can be pretty handy when you find something you really, really want and the place won't accept a check. Your first ten no-charge transactions each month include usage of this card. (Service charges may apply to some ATM transactions.)

Your First Security Student Checking Account also includes free Check Safekeeping so you don't have to worry about canceled checks. A detailed statement will be sent to you each month to help you balance your account. And if you need a copy of a particular check, we'll provide up to three copies each month at no charge.

So there you have it. The First Security Bank free T-shirt, maybe a free TV too, fifty free checks, VISA Credit Card, free VISA Student Banking Card, free Cash Card with 24-hour access, free Check Safekeeping, Student Checking Account. Definitely an offer worth thinking about. First Security Bank.

The only bank currently giving 110% to college students.
