Greeks pass new alcohol policy

Tim Helmke
Staff Writer

A new 16-part alcohol policy was passed after three hours of discussion during a joint meeting of the University of Idaho Panhellenic and Interfraternity Councils last week.

The meeting was held last Wednesday in a joint effort between the two councils, which are the regulating bodies of the Greek system. Discussions were held over each policy line.

Panhellenic Council President Lisa Jolley attended the meeting and left with a feeling of satisfaction. Jolley, who was out of town over the weekend in preparation to meet with the State Board of Education yesterday, told the Moscow-Pullman Daily News, "Hopefully, (the public) will like it and see that we're taking a proactive stance instead of waiting around for someone to tell us what to do."

The first part of the proposed plan was to change the limit to 12 beers and 8 wine coolers for an of-age person to bring into a party. They will also be able to bring in one (1) 750 ml bottle of wine or champagne. The restriction of no grain alcohol or hard liquor was kept intact in the final policy. UI Greek Advisor Linda Wilson was optimistic about the proposal being passed before the meeting was held.

"I know that these two groups (IFC and Panhellenic) realize something needs to be done and they know how to get it done," said Wilson.

The word "party" or any form of it was consumption is required and each person of age must wear a highly identifiable wrist band.

"No social event where alcohol is present will be larger than four chapters in attendance. In addition, each chapter's guest list is limited to 20 people," said another line of the policy. Each person on the guest list will be listed with a member's name. Cox said each member is then responsible for their guest.

Monitors for social events will be either hired or appointed to watch over the event. These monitors will not be consuming alcohol at the event and will be on duty to prevent uninvited and/or intoxicated guests from entering, leaving alone, etc. These monitors must also provide an escort or a ride home upon request of any guest.

A policy amendment requires each Greek house to sponsor at least one alcohol awareness program per year. During this program, chapter officers are supposed to go over alcohol and its effects on people, said Cox.

The new UI IFC/Panhellenic Alcohol Policy will be reviewed in December and will be revised then if needed. Jolley said the policy will stay, but the groups want to replaced throughout the policy with "social event." Adrian Cox, an IFC Representative and member of Alpha Kappa Lambda, said these changes were made as "social event" is a broader term and can be perceived in a different manner.

At least two days prior to each social event between chapters, each chapter must provide a typed, laminated list of members to the host chapter's social chairman. The lists are to be laminated so the names and information can be protected from being ripped or dampened. Cox explained this will keep the list in better form to be reused again or in case something goes wrong related to the party. Valid identification for alcohol

“Hopefully, (the public) will like it (the policy) and see that we're taking a proactive stance instead of waiting around for someone to tell us what to do.”

Research program offers biomedical opportunities for minority students

The National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases in Bethesda, Md., is offering an Introduction to Biomedical Research Program to acquaint minority students with career opportunities in biomedical research.

"This program offers minority students from across the country an in-depth and intense four-day introduction," said Vincent A. Thomas, program director.

NIAID, a component of the National Institute of Health, focuses on investigations on the causes of allergic, immunologic and infectious diseases and development of better means to prevent, diagnose and treat these illnesses. NIAID support scientists conduct scientific studies on various diseases, including AIDS, tuberculosis, hay fever, hives, Lyme disease, tropical diseases and sexually transmitted diseases.

Approximately 55 students will be selected for the 1994 program, scheduled for Feb. 6-10. They will attend a series of lectures by NIH scientists and will tour the NIH Clinical Center, one of the world's largest research hospitals. They will have face-to-face discussions with scientists about current research initiatives and advances as well as career concerns. All participants will be provided with expenses and round-trip transportation to the Bethesda campus.

The students also will have the opportunity to apply for summer positions in the NIAID division of Intramural Research. These jobs provide opportunities to increase students' knowledge and understanding of biomedical research, career paths and the types of positions available at NIH.

Applicants must have a 3.0 or better GPA and be recommended by the deans and faculty members of their schools. Selection is based on these recommendations and the students' personal and academic achievements.

For an application packet, contact NIAID at 9000 Rockville Pike, Building 31, Room 7A10, Bethesda, Md. 20892 or call (301) 496-4846. Applications also may be obtained from the college or university dean or representatives for NIH programs such as Minority Access to Research Careers or Minority Biomedical Research symposium.

The completed application packet must be received at NIAID no later than Dec. 3, 1993. Applicants will be notified by letter about final selections of participants after Dec. 17, 1993.

ASUI Senate approves funds for KUOI

Maggie Smith deejays at KUOI yesterday. The ASUI Senate approved funds to help the station broadcast to the Palouse.

Janna Dwelle

Staff Writer

With financial help from the ASUI Senate, KUOI radio station may soon have enough wattage to broadcast to the entire Moscow-Pullman area. Last Wednesday the Senate voted to allocate $2,250 from the general reserve fund to hire a broadcast consultant for the station.

According to Shea Meehan, KUOI station manager, the station has been hoping since 1987 to increase its power output from the present 45 watts to 100. They currently seek to raise it even further to 400.

ASUI Senator Steve Stroschein, who co-authored the senate bill, said the higher power would enable the station to reach an estimated 50,000 listeners, up from the 20,000 who can currently tune in.

KUOI plans to hire Doug Vernier, a broadcast consultant from Iowa. Vernier explained in a letter that his tasks would include studying the power density for possible hazards, constructing a coverage map to determine the population and area the station would reach and preparing a construction permit ready for filing.

Vernier also plans to offer advice in the matter of technical interference with Q6, the Northwest News Channel. Last spring the television station formally objected to KUOI's proposed power increase, claiming it "would create interference to the off-air reception of KHQ Channel 6 . . . which would negatively impact our viewers in the Moscow, Idaho area."

Meehan says the problem can be circumvented. KUOI might have the proposed wattage to avoid interference and Q6 would compensate by purchasing a new antenna for the station.

ASUI Senator John Marble, co-author of the senate bill, said KUOI's present 50-watt license could be revoked entirely if a bigger station wanted to move into the area.

Boise's KBSU station suffered a forced take-over last year for similar reasons.

"If we're at a high enough power to reach our community and justify [the station's] existence, that won't happen," Marble said.

ASUI President Richard Rock supported the bill

"We have a lot invested in KUOI, and it would be a shame if another competitor took our license out from under us," Rock said.

When the bill came before the Senate, Senator Tom Sheffield cast the only dissenting vote.

He voiced concern over taking so much money out of the general reserve.

However, John Marble said the station's increased range would increase their ability to underwrite and get advertising by as much as 75 percent.

"We'll see the consultant paid off for," he said.

UI law school consultant runs for city council

A University of Idaho College of Law consultant has announced his candidacy for Moscow City Council.

As a City Council member, Duncan Palmatier seeks to provide vision to Moscow's current growth. Spurred by rapid changes Moscow is undergoing, Palmatier said he "had to get involved."

"It is vital that the city council immediately come to grips with the financial and quality-of-life problems stemming from today's unprecedented and unexpected growth, or else we will soon find ourselves looking like Los Angeles," Palmatier said.

As a Southern California native, Palmatier knows what unwise development can do to a

—Duncan Palmatier, City Council candidate

Everyone thought the town would maintain its pleasing character despite the boom, so limits were enforced. They were wrong. I want to get people in Moscow involved in the city's difficult decisions coping with today's dizzying expansion," Palmatier said.

Palmatier argues for the importance of preserving open space, green space, tree-lined streets and crucial vistas like Moscow Mountain and Paradise Ridge. He does not want to stop all development, which would be "unrealistic and possibly detrimental," he said. Instead he wants all development to bear the costs it will bring to the city for services, infrastructure and

Student EMT's juggle fighting fires, homework

Gregory H. Burton

Staff Writer

There is a common feeling for the self sacrifice endured by students in the struggle for an education, one in which a semester filled with 20 credits would elicit communal sympathy groans.

But add on a part-time job and mix in a little full-time volunteer ambulance service and fire fighting, and you have a singularly insane group of wonderful individuals.

The city of Moscow has six University of Idaho students working full-time saving homes and lives. They provide emergency service for the city and for all of the UI campus, free of charge.

Chris Rodgers, 21, has been a volunteer fire fighter since he was 18 and became an Emergency Medical Technician with the Moscow Ambulance service two years ago. Six months ago, while inside a house consumed by fire, his hat melted on top of his head.

"I definitely want to continue as an EMT after I graduate, no matter where I am," said Rodgers.

The Captain of the Moscow Fire Department Ambulance service is John Huntington, who is a senior in bacteriology. He is also the student crazy enough to take 20 credits.

Huntington, besides responding to fire and emergency calls, supervises training, serves as the community relations coordinator and assists in the day to day business for the department, and like most of the student volunteers, he works part-time to earn enough money to survive.

Kelly Cross, 22, who has been with the ambulance service for two years and is also a volunteer fire fighter, has held part time jobs at Gritman Medical Center and the Parks and Recreation Department. Huntington works in the Gritman Medical Center Laboratory.

Cross plans to graduate this May in telecommunications. Rodgers is majoring in Cartography at the School of Mines. Aaron Proctor, a sophomore in Biology, Matt Ottinger, a senior in Architecture, and David Bobeck, a Biology student, are the other three student EMTs.

One of the pluses for working for the department is the opportunity to live for free at either of the two fire stations serving Moscow, but this benefit is attached to the added duty of responding to emergencies.

"If you live at the station you are expected to respond to all of the silent calls, like dumpster fires and if the EMTs on call don't respond fast enough to the regular alarms, we go out in their place," said Cross. "But with an entire crew right out of the station we can respond to code blues (for patients in critical condition) in two and a half minutes."

Living at the station is optional for the EMTs but there is not enough room for everybody and only the room is free. They pay for their own food and expenses.

The EMTs work on a schedule of one week on, 24 hours a day, and three weeks off. Cross said he responds to about eight ambulance calls a month and four to five fire calls a week.

The city of Moscow provides the training for the EMTs, who are required to go through at least 50 hours of classroom training and 10 hours of clinical training. After completion of the course, prospective applicants must pass the Idaho Board of Medicine's required exam. The city pays the $100 fee for the test.

Huntington and Rodgers have also trained for advanced EMT status, which involves expertise in defibrillation for cardiac patients, and what Huntington calls, "airways," used for patients who need assistance to breathe.

This summer Huntington and Cross competed against fire departments across the state in a hose-coupling contest.

"It's a two person timed event where you have to assemble three lengths of hose to a hydrant, and turn on the water. If everything goes right the nozzle is attached to the end of the hose just as the water comes pouring out," said Rodgers. "Nampa has won for the last three or four years but John and I beat them by three seconds."

They also beat everybody else to win the Idaho championship. Nampa and many of the other departments in the competition are paid professionals.

In April, during the same fire in which Rodgers had his helmet melt, he also found and carried a man out of the flames.

"That was probably the scariest fire I've been in," Rodgers said. And another example of the unassuming risks taken by the EMT's.

The man was later pronounced dead at Gritman.

Next time you see an ambulance in transit or hear a fire engine barrel down your street, stop to consider not only are these people risking their lives and saving others, not only are they saving the Moscow community tens of thousands of dollars, but more than likely several of them have tests to study for when they get back home.

Racing cars makes grade

Ariel Plywaski

Staff Writer

Mechanical Engineering students had a day at the races last Tuesday in the Kibbie Dome.

ME 424 students raced cars powered by two rubber bands and weighed down with a liter of water, head to head, for a grade. The cars were made mostly of balsa wood, copper tubing and plastic liter bottles to carry the water. Each team had to successfully complete each leg of the race, one for distance and one for speed. The team with the most points got the A.

The winners of the style contest were the supertankers, for their batmobile, made out of balsa wood and painted black with a yellow bat. Close in color was the Grim Reaper. Other designs were the superslide, which hoped to use potential energy from the full liter of water to get power. However, their design was bulky and did not do well in the speed race.

John Gershenson, the teaching assistant for the class, said this project was intended to get people working together as a team for future projects. ME 424 is a senior design class which has contracted out to different companies to take on projects for their final.

"This race is intended to get the teams rolling before their actual projects begin," Gershenson said.

schools. Towards that end he recommends new development be assessed up-front "impact fees" so the community will be assured any new growth will pay its own way.

"The system today is giving a free-ride to new developments at the expense of current taxpayers since property taxes from these new building will not arrive for years," Palmatier said.

"If elected I promise to devote my full energies to developing a city plan that can deal with the terrific growth taking place and making certain that we abide by the policies and regulations that will make the plan work," Palmatier said.

Palmatier also wants to encourage greater citizen participation in city government. He suggested city council meeting be televised on public-access cable with telephone hook-ups so citizens can play a more active part in Moscow's city government.

Palmatier is also a physics student. He is a parishioner at St. Mary's Church and has participated in Moscow's community theater.

He is a lawyer and has practiced in New York and California.

see what parts work for the UI and which parts don't fit.

These new policies go into effect a week before the State Board of Education meets at the UI. Jolley and other university faculty and students were in Boise yesterday to discuss with the Board the changes in alcohol policy on the UI campus.

Representatives from the national/international offices of UI fraternities and sororities will be on campus next week prior to the Board meeting.

They will meet with UI President Elisabeth Zinser and other faculty to discuss the proposed State Board idea to bankrupt Greek houses. This would open the land under the houses for the UI to buy and turn into residence halls. Zinser's goal is to work out a plan to present to the Board in which the positive aspects of the Greek system are presented as well as solutions to the problems facing them.

The B.S. in degrees just isn't enough anymore

College graduates are no longer marketable. Simply put, strolling from school and into a job just isn't going to happen.

For those college students who are too naive to pay attention to the real world — the world outside the bounds of a part-time, recreational job, that is — the job market isn't begging for degree-wielding neophytes. What employers are looking for, however, is practical job experience.

The students working two jobs and are barely paying the bills are going to be a good leap ahead of any student who is riding the educational wave on their parents charge card.

Students who are living it up now will pay for it later when they realize jobs are snapped up by those who work.

To an employer, any consistent work in itself proves the person sitting on the other side of the desk (assuming the graduate was granted an interview) is familiar with the concept of work. Job-hopping from restaurant to convenience store to restaurant doesn't put forth the same meaning as a long-term employee, and offers little to most employers.

But the best thing a student can do to fill a resume's glaring void areas has nothing to do with a bold, italicized and underlined Grade Point Average, but instead begins with field-related experience.

The best thing a student can do to fill a resume's glaring void has nothing to do with a bold, italicized and underlined Grade Point Average.

Despite growing bureaucracy and garbled laws which make the attempt to cover every possible contingency in a chaotic world, things are getting more efficient. Hiring two or three people to do what a single person can do in this world of back-pocket computers is as dead as the dodo bird. Many big companies are scaling back, and while jobs are out there, graduates have to go after them with the backing of experience.

But there is an answer. Opportunities within the university abound, and students just need the initiative to find them. Professors often know who to talk to — if the student takes the time to ask while their adviser is signing the remove-the-computer-block form for pre-registration. Nearly every department posts internship information and some of them actually pay well enough that students who are paying their own way can squeak by.

Case in point is the third floor of the Student Union Building. KUOI, the Gem of the Mountains yearbook, and the Argonaut offer three realms of experience for communication majors, but only a small percentage of communication majors find the time to take advantage of the opportunities a semester or two will give them. Even a single semester of experience holds an edge.

Even though college degrees are held in high esteem, students need to realize it's a relative thing. Most of the applications mailed are going to others who have accomplished the same thing, and know a degree alone isn't that big of a deal.

After all, everyone knows some idiot whose Bachelor of Science degree is crammed full of B.S.

Gun Control: A Head-to-Head Commentary

Blame goes to accessibility of automatic weapons

Shari Ireton

Car jacking, robbery and drive by shootings. What do these have in common? The use of hand guns and automatic weapons.

Why are these crimes occurring more frequently and in more cities? We can blame the erosion of family values or lack of funds for police departments, but a lot of the blame can be placed on the easy accessibility of life threatening weapons.

Growing up in a small southern Idaho town, I never gave much thought to any type of guns, except shotguns and rifles which my family and friends used for hunting. I'd seen Terminator and Lethal Weapon, but their action-packed scenes are just movies, right?

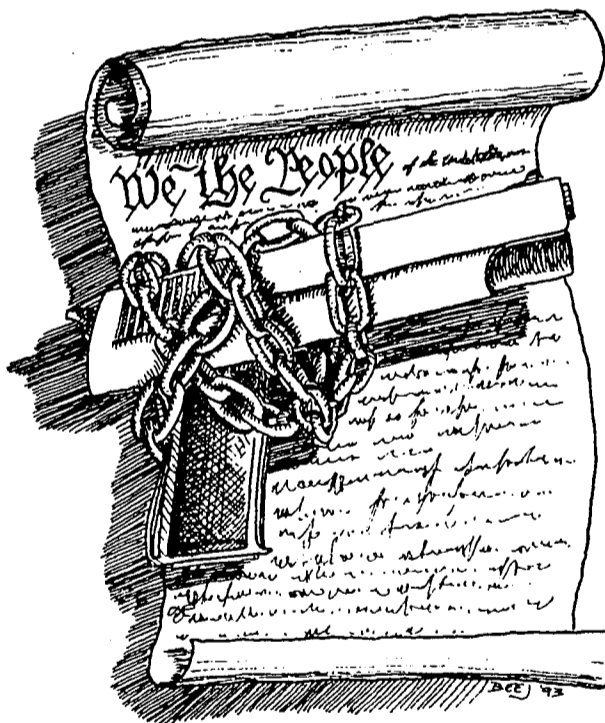

Then I spent the summer in Washington DC and my views changed. Every nightly news broadcast had stories about shootings, gang fights, robberies or car jacking, and almost all included the mention of a hand gun or automatic weapon. I started wondering just how easy it was to obtain one of these weapons, knowing even getting a hunting license in Idaho requires some paper work.

If you have connections on the street, you can get one in a matter of hours. If you are near a gun and ammunition store, you can purchase one in a matter of minutes. In fact, I was surprised at the lack of waiting periods and check systems enforced by many states, including Idaho. In this state there are no systematic check systems or waiting periods and anything goes, shotguns, rifles, handguns and semi-automatic guns.

While Idaho may not be the crime capitol of the world, no regulations can often be a temptation. Handguns are easily concealed and carried by their owners. It does not take a genius to figure out how to load and fire one, including children and the criminally insane. There is little danger to the person firing (unless they are pointing it at themselves) and it takes only one shot to take a human life.

Automatics are worse. While after the third shot in a round your aim is inaccurate, you can easily mow down a few hundred people with one sweep. They are quick and a shot takes just the pull of a trigger, making them the popular choice of weapon for drive-by shooting incidents.

•SEE HANDGUNS PAGE 7

Career criminals do not obtain handguns legally

Valorie Stricklin

The constitution of the United States gives Americans the right to keep and bear arms. Some people argue what the Founding Fathers were trying to guarantee was to out-right always have a militia. Since most liberals have a good idea of what would happen to them if they marched out West to take our guns, they're trying to regulate us to death instead.

They say we need a waiting period on gun sales because guns are killing too many people. I don't think anyone can argue a bullet discharged from a gun will kill when it hits a person in the right spot. I think if we're going to put waiting periods on guns, we might as well put waiting periods on all other inanimate objects that kill. We would need waiting periods on tire irons, baseball bats, axes and pool cues. After all, how often are these objects employed in the name of murder?

My point is, a waiting period on handguns will not solve America's violence problem. If I came home and found my husband in bed with someone else, the lack of a handgun wouldn't prevent his demise. I could just as easily kill him with my copy of the Student Bible. Or I could shove his head through the television.

The lack of legal handguns will not stop career criminals, either. I doubt many of America's drug dealers and hit men obtained their weapons legally, and I don't think many would respect a waiting period. Gun control and waiting periods will only take guns out of the hands of law-abiding citizens and leave them defenseless in the face of criminals. Contrary to popular belief, a warning shot fired into the air is enough to scare off most muggers or burglars. Some people also say carrying a gun will only let the criminal take it from the victim and use it against them. In reality, this happens in one out of every 100 instances.

Another favorite tactic of the liberals is to paint a picture of an innocent child playing with a gun and suddenly it goes off. Simple education combined with responsible gun ownership will eliminate these senseless tragedies.

Gun owners should keep unloaded weapons in a locked case, with the ammunition kept in a separate locked cabinet.

Hate mongers brave in above-the-brow activism

Commentary
Gregory H. Burton

The good news is, hate mongers are moving out of Idaho. The bad news is, they're only going as far as Montana.

Preaching their own brand of ethnic cleansing, the Idaho ingrates have been appearing in greater numbers all over the state. In Billings they call themselves the Montana Quest.

In their quest you can expect them to chase you all the way down under.

No, not to Australia, but to the grave.

In a marvelous display of bravery, and above the brow political activism, a group of ex-skinned potato heads desecrated several Jewish gravestones in Billings two weeks ago.

This is exactly the type of forthright in-your-face democracy our country was founded on.

The skilled frontal assault came two days before Rosh Hashanah, which begins the 10 High Holy Days for the people of Israel, ending in Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement.

And of course the Jewish influx into Billings would prompt this type of don't-tread-on-me backlash. The 90 or so Jews in Billings have begun to integrate the community far too forcibly. You can only take so many kosher pickles before you go bonkers.

One headstone, "In Loving Memory of our Sweet Miriam," must have been especially threatening to the hate aficionados.

Loving memory of anybody, excepting the Furur, must enrage a group of people so blinded by hate they rely on the reflection of their baldness to tell themselves apart.

But it is these kinds of balls-out demonstrations of ignorance that send up signals to the rest of us, enabling our quick detection of hate.

It's when we can't so easily discern the hiding places of hate mongers, that we must begin to worry.

Unfortunately, on this campus this is the case. Don't be fooled into thinking just because somebody isn't spray-painting swastikas on your door they accept multi-cultural diversity. Read between the lines when somebody preaches separatism based on God's word, dismissing thousands of lines imploring you to love your neighbor.

Stop and think a little longer when someone tells you a great new joke about the nigger and the jap. I would convict you just as heartily for listening as for telling.

These promulgators of hate based on difference thrive on the listening, and they grow louder when the response is silence.

So hooray for the exhibitors of hate in Billings. Thank you for adjusting our honing mechanisms to your new home. Thank you to your fathers who chose pointy white robes instead of pointy white heads.

We look forward to keeping track of your inane habits.

Shame on those of you who remain silent in the wake of hate mongers. Your silence is as damnable as their vocalization.

And finally my apologies for the pain and heartbreak suffered by the families struck by the gravesite tampering. My apology for all the stupid white trash in this world.

Shalom.

Undefended fundamentalism is 'double bunk'

Christian fundamentalists never cease to claim that the Bible is the inerrant Word of God. But when they are challenged to prove it, they duck the issue every time.

This is true not only for local fundamentalists, but also for their bigwigs, like Gleason Archer and Josh McDowell. Archer is the author of Encyclopedia of Bible Difficulties, which would be better named A Partial Attempt to Rationalize Bible Contradictions. McDowell is the author of several books, of which the best known is Evidence That Demands a Verdict, but ought to be called A Verdict That Demands Evidence.

These two gentlemen were challenged last February to discuss their claims in a public forum with Farrell Till, the publisher of The Skeptical Inquirer, and a former minister of the Church of Christ. Archer replied that he would debate biblical inerrancy only with someone who already believes in it, or were a Muslim debater, or were "a seeker after truth." As of late this summer, Josh McDowell has not yet replied to Farrell Till.

Fundamentalism has always been bunk, but when its promoters refuse to defend it, it becomes double bunk.

Help fight for indigenous peoples' human rights

Amnesty International will act on Oct. 12, 1993, for indigenous peoples' human rights, as a part of our Day of Action "My Brother, My Sister... My Family." We will meet from 6 to 8 p.m. at the North Campus Center (formerly Cavanaugh's).

We will have a presentation by Magda Lopez discussing human rights in Guatemala and another by Enrique Diez discussing the Indigenous Nation of Bolivia.

There will also be letters written for human rights, various indigenous foods, and games for children. All concerned individuals and families are invited to share in our Day of Action and help protect indigenous peoples around the world from future abuse. A donation of $2 is requested at the door.

Amnesty International is an independent worldwide movement working impartially for the release of all prisoners of conscience, fair and prompt trials for political prisoners and an end to torture and executions. It is funded by donations from its members and supporters throughout the world. Amnesty International is in the midst of a campaign focusing on human rights violations against the indigenous peoples of the world.

For any questions or comments, feel free to contact me at 883-5540. Thank you.

If a loaded weapon must be kept, it should be hidden and locked in a secure place.

Children also need to be taught guns are nothing to play with. Teaching a child to shoot and care for a gun is necessary, for it takes much of the mystery away from guns. A child who has the proper respect for weapons is much less likely to accidentally shoot someone. All children need to realize is guns can kill, whether that is the intent or not.

The lesson was brought home for me when I saw an animal shot and killed. One minute it was standing there minding its own business, and the next it was laying on the ground. To this day I can't look at a gun without going cold all over.

Gun control is just another way for liberals to deny us our freedom. Gun ownership is as American as apple pie and the Statue of Liberty, and our right to do so can not be taken away from us.

The main problem with the two types of weapons described above is they are designed for one purpose: to kill humans. Policemen certainly don't use them to shoot pigeons. If we can't outlaw them, let's put so many restrictions on them only Reverend Johnson down the street could own a Saturday Night Special. Keep them out of the hands of people with the wrong intention.

I have no problem with shotguns or rifles. While they may be just as easy to use to take another person's life, they are intended for hunting (animals, that is).

I'm an avid defender of the Bill of Rights — I have to be as a journalist. But no where does it say Americans are entitled to take a human life. Anyone who supports keeping handguns legal is saying we do have that right.

Go on, vote for that congressman who supports the NRA, and when your nine-year-old son is shot by a classmate with a 9 mm Beretta, you might just change your mind.

The right to bear arms is guaranteed. The right to take life isn't.

I doubt many of America's drug dealers and hit men obtained their weapons legally.

In this state there are no systematic check systems or waiting periods and anything goes, shotguns, rifles, handguns, and semi-automatic guns.

What do we call the Satellite SUB now?

I enjoyed reading Jeff Kapostasy's "I'll Tell You Why" column in the Sept. 21 issue of the Argonaut. I, too, have noticed these "proposed" changes already taking place. I can't help but wonder if the instigator of this name-change idea just wants his/her mark on society.

The SUB name is more than just letters and words—it is also tradition! Gee, I just had an idea...

why not change the name "Greek Row" to "Roman Row," and have all the names of the houses changed accordingly? Boy, wouldn't that be neat! I wonder what will be "proposed" next. Tax the students?

Oh, and Jeff, you forgot something... what do we call the Satellite SUB now?

—Doug Thompson

It's about time the Greek System started paying up

It's about time the Greek system starts paying for all the stupid things it's done through the years. All I can say is that it's a miracle the powers that be didn't crack down sooner. And as far as I'm concerned, it would be nearly impossible to crack down too hard.

As a graduate student who has studied here for the past 6 years, I've seen much crazy stuff happen, and some of it has been of a serious nature.

And most of it, yes, most of the bad stuff, has stemmed from the Greek system. From the violent snowball fight a few years ago to drunk sorority girls tumbling up the stairs to their house to what happened with the Alpha Phi pledge. The Greek system is crap, and I think people are starting to wake up and smell the rotten stench coming from the Greek houses.

I hear a lot of nonsense about how great the Greek system is for community. That's bull. Oh sure, houses do their little philanthropies, but how many houses actually are interested in helping the community?

Not one, from what I've seen. Hey you Greeks... how about sacrificing some of your drunken Saturday night antics to do something worthwhile?

You can't argue with a few facts. Beer cans litter Greek row every weekend. There is sexist language in many Fraternity songs. And the general cockiness that seeps out of every house is truly nauseating.

Nearly every girl I've ever known to join a sorority became a conceited bitch. Every guy who joined a frat began acting like God's gift to the world. I got news for you: you ain't.

Trust me, Greeks: There are a lot of people who feel the same way I do. Some are even members of the Greek system who are quite disappointed to find brother and sisterhood takes a back seat to getting trashed every weekend.

I know this stuff happens in the dorms, too. But it's about time the Greeks clean up their act. Or better yet, maybe the government will do it for you.

I don't think you are capable to do it yourself.

Volunteers hand deliver doorhangers

More than 250 volunteers for the Idaho Conservation League set out last Saturday to hand deliver more than 40,000 doorhangers in Moscow, Coeur d'Alene, Sandpoint, Prichard, Coeur, St. Maries, Boise, Kuna, Meridan and Star.

The doorhangers carry a message asking the people of Idaho to write Congressman Larry LaRocco about the problems facing the national forests.

The doorhangers distributed make this task easy for residents. The doorhanger has a detachable postcard complete with a message to LaRocco.

John McCarthy of the ICL said, "This is a part of a larger campaign that will involve tabloids; the idea is to draw attention to the remaining roadless (wilderness)."

The ICL has done their part and is now calling on the communities targeted by the campaign to mail in the postcards and show their support.

'Salmon' bridges the music gap

Tim Schreiner

Staff Writer

Anymore, people can accurately forecast the weather, anticipate what will happen in the latest action thriller and foresee that midterms are coming along all too soon.

But this weekend Leftover Salmon will play the zaniest of unpredictable blends of music to distill the ponderous midterm ogre.

The last time Leftover Salmon was here, they played at John's Alley on the last day of school in the Spring of '93. People were dancing on tables and the bar to find grooving room.

"Salmon," from Boulder, Colorado, will play at the Moscow Social Club this Friday night, with Moscow's own Big Time Adam bringing up the guard. The Social Club's doors will open at 7 p.m., and the show starts at 8 p.m.

One of Leftover Salmon's basic intentions is to "bridge the gap" between two unrelated thoughts and between largely unrelated musical styles.

They have been known to play original hits such as a rap version of "Kraft Macaroni and Cheese" and a bluegrass version of Pink Floyd's "Braindamage"—not what anyone would consider typical.

The Salmon's basic influence is reportedly "polyethnic Cajun slamgrass," according to a recent Colorado Daily article.

This is a wacky blend of bluegrass, blues, rock, reggae, zydeco, classical, Tex-Mex, bluecheese yodel music, and....get the picture?

At their disposal is a proper mix of electric mandolin, bass, fiddle, keyboards, flute, drums, guitar, banjo and accordion. The Salmon's guitarist, Vince Herman, is recently quoted as saying, "We're bozos all the way...all the time, doing everything."

Word is, the stage show is quite an exhibit as well. Rob Galloway, Salmon bassist, said in a recent publication to the audience, "Every night we start playing and you start dancing. OK, tonight you start dancing and we'll start playing."

He said everybody started dancing to no music. "It was the funniest thing I've ever seen."

According to Leftover Salmon's publicist, Ambrosia Healy, they're "on a roll these days, consistently selling out rooms around the country. We sell the best venue in town, the Fox Theater at 700 capacity, at least two times a month," Healy said.

File Photo

Healy also said "These days the Salmon is migrating furiously upstream, hoping to spawn a following in lakes and rivers far and wide."

All of the members in the band have made professional recordings in some type of definable music.

Leftover Salmon includes; Vince Herman, who has played guitar since the early 60's, Drew Emmitt on mandolin and vocals, (he has also studied nine other instruments), and Mark Vann, winner of the 1989 Telluride Bluegrass Festival banjo contest, who plays the banjo.

Also, Rob Galloway is the Salmon's bass player, and has played with the likes of Carole King, Navarro and Magic Music. Joachim (Joe) Jogerst plays the keyboard and accordion, with some ribbons under his belt as well, and on rhythm guitar is Michael Wooten, who has also done some professional recording and interior decoration consulting for Texas chinchilla ranches.

Tickets for the show are $6 in advance and $8 at the door and can be purchased at; Bookpeople, Guitar's Friend, John's Alley and at Pteradactyl Records in Pullman.

Comedy Troupe

'The Best of Second City' sets free laughter at University Auditorium Friday night

Halo DeWitt

Staff Writer

It is almost midterms and high time for some comedy to cause ripples of laughter across the University of Idaho campus.

This Friday at 7:30 p.m. in the Administration Auditorium, those laughs will be set free to fill the night air by The Second City comedy troupe from Chicago.

Most of the original Saturday Night Live crew was once part of the Second City troupe.

Those members include Dan Aykroyd, John Belushi, and Gilda Radner. Other names from the troupe are Alan Alda, Ed Asner, Shelley Long and Elaine May.

Canada's SCTV is a televised version of the Second City troupe.

The Second City started in 1959 and has been successful ever since. The troupe has toured since its inception but has not limited that travel to just the United States. They have also been to England and Canada.

The Second City troupe is comprised of improvisational comedians, very few props and costumes and original music to punctuate scenes. Their focus is life in this day and age and what fun they can have lampooning it.

The touring company coming to the UI includes Jennifer Bill, Mark Dalbis, Rachel Dratch, Joe Dempsey, Jon Glaser and Jeff Rogers. The pianist accompanying them is Chad Krueger and their stage manager is Michael Broh.

According to Karen Brightman, The Second City road manager, after one to two years, actors in the touring company move to resident theaters. There are two theaters in Chicago, one in Toronto and one in Detroit that opened in September.

The touring companies perform what is called "The Best of Second City" which is scenes from shows of the last 33 years. There are two acts in each show and approximately 2 scenes in each act are improvisational scenes from the audience.

Tickets for Friday's performance are $3 for students with a Vandal Card and $7 for all others. Tickets are available at Ticket Express in the Student Union Building or at the door the night of the performance.

A Pilgrim's guide to feeding on elk meat

Outdoors With... Nick Brown

After Robert Redford was knocked to the ground, he shot an elk over his horse in the movie Jeremiah Johnson, Will Geer (Johnson's mountain man mentor) let out a whoop and shouted "Yee, got 'im Pilgrim. Come on, we got us an elk to skin."

Later, when Johnson (Redford) and Bear Claw (Geer) finished loading elk meat on their horses, Bear Claw turned to Johnson and said "Can't understand them city folk eatin' beef when they could be up here, feedin' on elk."

I have to agree with Bear Claw. Elk meat, when properly cared for, is excellent fare. However, a growing number of modern hunters don't have the skills Johnson and Bear Claw possessed. In fact, not knowing the basics of meat care threatens to erode self-reliance, the endangered human virtue which separates hunter from city dweller (whose meat always comes packaged in a Styrofoam container).

This is unfortunate because proper meat care is simple. Hopefully, you'll never pull Johnson's greenhorn stunt and shoot over your horse. On the other hand, leading your elk-laden pack horse off the mountain, wondering aloud why more city slickers ain't feedin' on elk gives a feeling of self-sufficiency many people can't claim.

Due to space limitations, I can't detail the gutting and skinning process, but I can tell you your objective, once you've killed an elk or deer, is to get the meat cooled as quickly as possible. Hunt close to an experienced hunter if you're not sure how to gut, skin, and quarter big game.

Some mistakes made when dressing an animal include: not removing the windpipe well into the throat, not splitting the pelvis and removing the anus, or accidentally cutting an intestine or paunch. The latter will ruin meat and cannot be washed off.

To avoid this, point the animals head downhill when gutting. Tie the hind legs to a tree or brush to keep the animal from slipping. This will reduce pressure on the abdominal wall and will help avoid puncturing an intestine. If any intestinal contents come into contact with meat, don't try washing off tainted meat. Cut the infected portion off and butcher without aging.

Elk and deer should be skinned in warm weather. As the animal is skinned and quartered, lay the meat on brush or logs to cool and glaze. Now is the time to cut off blood shot meat and as much fat as possible. Most complaints

October recognizes arts

Governor Cecil D. Andrus proclaimed October "Idaho Arts and Humanities Month" as part of a nationwide initiative to recognize availability and importance of the arts and humanities to all Americans.

The dedicated month has the endorsement of President Clinton, who has declared October National Arts and Humanities Month. During the 30-day period, the White House plans to sponsor one major cultural event per week.

The nationwide effort was launched by the National Cultural Alliance, a coalition of 42 national arts and humanities organizations representing more than 23,000 cultural organizations throughout the country. The theme for the Alliance's public awareness campaign is "The Arts and Humanities: There is something in it for you." Over the next few months, television and print ads will encourage citizens to take advantage of a myriad of cultural opportunities.

Governor Andrus' proclamation cites the vital role humanities play in the state's well-being and urges citizens to take part in the celebration. To improve citizen access to arts information, the Idaho Commission on the Arts has installed a toll-free line: 1-800-ARTFUND.

Theater presents comedy

The Idaho Theater for Youth will be in Moscow Oct. 22 presenting No Fish in the House, a comic romp through family life.

The play, by Tom Willmorth, is filled with slapstick humor, pratfalls and quick verbal wit, in which the Idaho Theater for Youth has given a contemporary spin.

In addition, the actors of No Fish in the House portray a true "commedia del arte" which is the use of half masks made of leather. The masks were made by local artist Micki Panttaja, and give a unique flavor to the play.

Director David Lee-Painter calls No Fish in the House a "Circus with a plot. a fast-paced and zany

An exhibit entitled "Earth Visions" will be on display at the Lewis-Clark Center for Arts and History until Oct. 22.

"Earth Visions" explores themes including recycling, wildlife, agriculture and other issues concerning the environment.

The multi-media show will include an exhibit titled "We are all principal responsible parties: Future visions of a superfund site."

This exhibit encompasses the final projects of 20 University of Idaho students after they completed a course in experimental art, ecology and architecture.

These UI students visited the former Bunker Hill smelter in Kellogg, Idaho and then constructed their future visions of the site. The project received recognition through funding by the National Endowment for the Arts.

Additional displays will be featured, including aerial photography by Mark Abrahamson of Stanwood, Wash., silver print montage by Jan Boles of Caldwell, Idaho, oil paintings by Romey Stuckart of Hope, Idaho, and acrylic paintings by Lori McNee Watson of Sun Valley, Idaho.

The environmental theme of the gallery exhibit compliments the 13th annual Lewis-Clark State College International Exchange Conference "Sustainable Development in the Pacific Rim."

The conference will be held Oct. 12-15 and will focus on how with Pacific Rim countries can meet their present needs without jeopardizing the needs of future generations.

The artists features regularly exhibit their work in shows and galleries throughout the United States and are well-known for their interests and development of art with environmental themes.

about "gamey" tasting meat can be traced to tainted and blood shot meat being left on carcass too long. Fat, while desirable on beef cattle, can give elk and deer meat a strong taste.

Once glazed, put the quarters in a high quality game bag and secure tightly. Buy quality, heavy duty cotton bags that will protect your precious meat. Never put a game bag over a gutted animal, leaving the head exposed. Blow flies will crawl down the nostrils, laying eggs in the body cavity. Blow fly eggs should be scraped off immediately.

Additionally, avoid getting the meat dirty or wet. Dirty or wet meat offers a prolific breeding ground for bacteria. Carrying a small tarp will help keep meat clean when gutting and quartering.

Finally, meat can be preserved a long time in warm weather by allowing it to cool in the evening air. Wrap the meat in a tarp and then a sleeping bag, and place the bundle in the shade during the day. When you get home, hang the meat at 34-40 degrees for three days or so. This allows the meat enough time to "tenderize". Good luck Pilgrim!

Vandals cruise to sixth straight win

Dan Eckles

Staff Writer

The Eagles weren't soaring very high Friday night after the University of Idaho Vandals crushed Eastern Washington in consecutive games 15-7, 15-10, and 15-4 in Big Sky Conference volleyball action.

The win was the sixth straight for the Vandals (9-4, 3-0 Big Sky), who have not lost since falling to the University of California-Santa Barbara over three weeks ago. The triumph was the eighth in the last 11 meetings for the Vandals over the Eagles.

"The scores do not reflect Eastern's ability," Idaho coach Tom Hilbert said. "I believe they are going to be in the top four (in conference) and I am not looking forward to playing them at their place."

The two clubs traded points in the early going of Game One as Eastern Washington scored to get within 8-7, but the Vandals reeled off seven unanswered points to take the opener.

Eastern Washington (6-5, 1-2 Big Sky), which has not played at home yet this season, looked to be in control of the second game, leading 10-5. Idaho coach Tom Hilbert then brought in Lisa Stoltz to serve. The junior from Newburg, Ore. proved her worth, serving nine points and giving Idaho a 14-10 advantage.

Game three was never close. The Vandals jumped to an 8-0 lead to open the game and cruised to the 15-4 win.

"We finished tonight. It's more than us just scoring points. It's stopping the opponent and wearing them down," Hilbert said.

Hitting percentage was the tell-tale statistic in the clash as the Eagles committed 27 errors to the Vandals' 10. Idaho hit .390, .447, and .406 in the three games while Eastern Washington could muster only .058, .137, and .214.

"Our priority was to stop Carly Killen on the outside and we did that real well," Hilbert said after his club forced Killen into a .042 hitting performance.

Friday night's list of stars is long for the Vandals, who were led by All-American candidate Nancy Wicks.

Wicks pounded nine kills in 15 attempts without an error. The performance propelled her to recognition as the Big Sky Conference co-player of the week along with Montana's Karen Goff.

Head coach Tom Hilbert takes time to explain game strategy during a time out. Hilbert tucked his 75th win as a Vandal coach under his belt this weekend.

Mindy Rice, who posted 15 kills, and Brittany Van Haverbeke, who hit .583, had big nights as well. Jessica Puckett tallied a game-high 18 kills, giving the senior 1,041 in her Idaho career, fourth on the all-time list. Setter Dee Porter dished out 48 assists. The Vandals broke a team record with 24 blocks Friday night. This marked the fourth time this season Idaho has stuffed an opponent 20 times or more during a match.

Division I falls to undefeated Vandals

Vandals top the I-AA polls at 4-0 after victory

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah - The University of Utah played somewhat conservatively Saturday. They waited until the final two minutes of regulation time to complete their first scoring drive.

The University of Idaho Vandals capitalized on the slow moving offense on the other side of the line of scrimmage and continued their undefeated streak. The Vandals toppled the Division I team 28-17 to further their perfect record.

The UI defense once again turned in a promising performance. The Vandal defense held Utah from scoring a touchdown until, literally, the last possible minute.

Utah quarterback Harold Lusk connected with Jamal Anderson for Utah's first touchdown with one minute, 35 seconds left to play.

"The defense came of age," UI head coach John L. Smith said. "They (Utah) held the ball most of the first half, but they kept them out of the end zone."

Anderson, a 244-pound fullback, amassed 104 yards rushing for the Utes.

The UI defense stopped the Utah offense short on four scoring drives in the first half. Utah settled for two field goals, missing on two attempts.

The Vandals first drive of the game went 80 yards, straight to the end zone.

They were really trying to give us alot of defensive looks... Defense is Defense.

-Sherriden May

Sherriden May startled the Utes' defense. His sixth carry of the game culminated in a touchdown. The Vandals were up 7-0 after Mike Hollis made the point afterward.

"They (Utah) were really trying to give us a lot of defensive looks," May said. "Defense is defense."

UI quarterback Doug Nussmeier connected with Keith Neal for a 58-yard touchdown reception in the second quarter.

According to the half-time stats, the Vandals used their time of possession more effectively. Utah's offense had more than 20 minutes to score in the first half compared to Idaho's 8:32.

Vandals impressive at Cougar Classic

Andrew Longteig
Staff Writer

The University of Idaho tennis team reached six different finals over the weekend at the Washington State University Cougar Classic. For both the men and the women there were eight seeded matches in singles and four in doubles.

The excellent performance of UI might have been overshadowed by the Washington State women, who won championships in all twelve matches. In No. 3 doubles, the UI team of Niden Yancy and Courtney Denler lost to Jodi Robinson and Narelle Hall of WSU 6-1, 6-1.

The men, meanwhile, fared much better. They reached the finals in five of the eight matches. The only champion, however, emerged in the No. 6 singles bracket. Ryan Slaton breezed through the tournament with scores of 6-0, 6-0; 6-4, 6-2. He finally defeated Shotah Burkhardt of Montana for the championship 6-4, 6-3.

Slaton said, "I just tried to play some consistent tennis and just make less mistakes than my opponent. I tried to stay mentally focused and stay pumped up and I came out on top."

In singles, Mark Hadley lost a three-setter to Cougar Brian Brost 3-6, 6-4, 7-5. Lall was defeated by MSU's Filip Palasz in straight sets, 6-3, 6-4.

The Hadley-Niren Lall combo had their way with their doubles opponents until they faced MSU's Steve Camac and Marco Zelenovic. The Camac-Zelenovic power game was too much as they won 6-3, 5-7, 6-4.

Hadley, a New Zealand native, added, "We didn't play well. That's the first tournament I've played in five months. It was good to come out and play as well as anyone else out there.

I just tried to play some consistent tennis and just make fewer mistakes than my opponent. I tried to stay mentally focused and pumped up and I came out on top.

—Ryan Slaton

The guys and girls got to play in the same tournament, instead of being separated. There seemed to be a lot more team unity.”

A second semester sophomore, Hadley stepped up to the competition and established himself as the number one player at Idaho.

In other championship action, Slaton and Doug Anderson lost 6-3, 6-4 to Frances Lussler and James Corcoran of MSU in No. 3 doubles. In No. 4 doubles Mat Mehren and Tom Richey, UI, were defeated by Mike Waatja and Kyle Hanson, also of MSU, 7-5, 7-6. Montana State swept all four men's doubles championships.

Vandal Head Coach Dave Scott was impressed with his team.

"The ladies - I'm definitely pleased with what I saw. It definitely shows what areas we need to work in. Generally, I'm pleased with how well they competed. Mark (Hadley) had a great tournament - he rose to the occasion; Ryan (Slaton) had a great tournament. From top to bottom everyone's playing a little more solid. Washington State did a great job," he com-

The UI women were impressive, but the WAZZU women took the finals.

Utah totaled 289 yards of offense at the half with only six points, UI had a mere 189 yards and the lead.

The Vandals assembled their third successful scoring drive at the end of the third quarter. Nussmeier connected with Andy Gilroy to give the Vandals a 21-9 edge at the opening of the fourth quarter.

May totaled a 101 yards rushing. He is now Idaho's all-time scoring leader with a career 38 touchdowns.

Nussmeier consistently connected with his receiving corps to progress down field. He finally scored on a five yard run.

Vandals scored the two-point conversion. This was swiftly reversed by the officials.

A penalty was called on the Vandals. Hollis was called in to score the extra point.

Nussmeier was the Vandal's second leading rusher with 84 yards. Neal and Dwight McKinzie led the Vandal receivers with 73 and 72 yards respectively.

Idaho is now ranked No.1 on the I-AA poll. This is the first time Idaho has topped the list since Smith took the head coaching duties at UI.

"The only thing that matters is how we rank ourselves. We take them one at a time," Smith said.

1993 Anchorsplash a success

Matt Andrew

Staff Writer

On Saturday, Oct. 2, the Delta Gamma sorority held their annual Anchorsplash to raise money for Sight Conservation and Aid to the Blind.

The Anchorsplash is made up of five different swimming events. Four of the events are relay and the fifth is a synchronized swimming.

The first event was the 100 Medley Relay. This event has each swimmer swimming one length and one of the following strokes: breast, back, butterfly, or free. As all of the relays were, this is broken down into three heats and strictly the fastest time wins. Third place went to Theta Chi with Pi Kappa Alpha taking second. First place went to Beta Theta Pi.

The event following was the Sweatshirt Relay. In this event, each swimmer was to wear the sweatshirt previously swam in. The swimmer was pulled from the water and an exchange of the sweatshirt was made. The key was to have a quick exchange. The Betas finished first in their heat before any other team began their fourth lap. They then went on to take first place in this event with the Kappa Sigmas taking the number two spot, followed by Farmhouse in third.

Despite the on-site reconstruction of the Tasmanian Yahoo, all went well. The original idea was to have each swimmer in an inner tube paddling and yelling "Yahoo" all the way down. Instead, kickboards were used and to prevent the swimmers from drinking chlorinated water, the yahoo was eliminated. The Kappa Sigs followed their second place finish with a third place finish in the Tasmanian Yahoo. Beta Theta Pi extended its winning streak to 3-0 and the Phi Delta Theta fraternity placed second.

With a perfect record on the line, the Betas were not going to let the beach ball in the Beach Ball Relay stand in their way. The object of this event was to push a beach ball down the length of the pool and exchange it. Through the thick and thin of it, the Betas came out on top, the Phi Kappa Tau fraternity took second and the Kappa Sigma fraternity continued its chase by capturing third.

The final event was the Synchronized Swimming. Each team had to put together a little skit that took place in the water, others had introductions that took place to lead them to the water. Most, if not all, were created on the scene in the wading pool, and some were done to music. Although the Betas were standing with a perfect score of 40 points they needed to do well to be sure to beat out the Kappa Sigma fraternity. With parts borrowed from the Three Amigos and a cheer from the classic Bugs Bunny cartoons, the Beta Theta Pi fraternity sealed their victory with a score of 30 pts. They ended the Anchorsplash with a perfect 70. The Kappa Sigma fraternity took second, and the Delta Sigma Phi fraternity ended up in third.

This was not all of the Beta's good luck for the day. Halfway through the competition, the Delta Gamma sorority announced its 1993 Anchorman. The lucky man was Shan Han, a Beta pledge.

All in all, it was a good day for the Betas and the DGs. The Delta Gamma sorority collected about $700 for its charity and a fun atmosphere for all who participated.

Randy Atwood looks on as fellow "noon ball" players battle over a rebound. Students and faculty have been gathering at Memorial Gym to play basketball over the lunch hour for years. It has become a University of Idaho tradition. Players of all skill levels and athletic abilities participate. Play begins around 11:30 a.m. and ends at 1 p.m. sharp.

Vandals are looking for 12th man

Are your fantasies filled with your game-saving tackle on the two-yard line as time runs out?

Is your Saturday filled with thoughts of what could have been done better in the Dome?

Have you dreamed of playing football for John L. Smith and the Vandals?

Well, now is your chance to become a Vandal for a day.

University of Idaho Athletics has teamed up with Intramural Sports and Campus Recreation to sponsor a 12th man contest.

"The football team came to us with the idea of a 12th man contest," Intramural Director Michael Barth said. "They asked Intramurals to screen for possible players."

To "team up with the Vandals" and become the twelfth man, contestants must complete a skills test and meet eligibility requirements.

"They must meet eligibility requirements set up by the NCAA, the Big Sky and the UI," Barth said.

The rules and regulations of the contest list requirements for each participant. The tryouts will be held in the Kibbie Dome on Oct. 9. They will begin at 2 p.m.

"They may even be able to score a touchdown if the ball is loose," Barth added.

The chosen three will play on Vandal kick-off special teams positions.

"They will play in kick-off coverage and only kick-off coverage," Barth said.

The entry deadline is Oct. 7 at 5 p.m. For more information call 885-6381.

INTERNATIONAL EXCHANGE CONFERENCE 1993

13th annual International Exchange Conference

SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT IN THE PACIFIC RIM

OCTOBER 13-15, 1993

Lewis-Clark State College, Lewiston, Idaho

FRANK CHURCH MEMORIAL LECTURE

7 p.m., Thursday, October 14
Ramada Inn, Lewiston

Dr. Martin, who has led development of global environmental programs and the establishment of new international population programs, will speak about both endeavors in "A River Runs Through It." He will address international issues related to the environment that must be understood and addressed at every level if we are all to become responsible global citizens.

Dr. Dan Martin
Director, World Environment and Resources Program
MacArthur Foundation

Dr. Paul Ehrlich
Professor of Population Studies, Center for Conservation Biology

'POPULATION AND THE ENVIRONMENT:WHERE WE STAND NOW'

7 p.m., Wednesday, October 13
Williams Conference Center, LCSC

Dr. Ehrlich will present an outline of the population-resource-environment crisis with an emphasis on the interactions among various driving forces. He will explain why he believes the most serious problems in the world are in places like the United States and Japan, and will explain why China and India soon may overtake rich nations in causing global environmental deterioration. He also will outline a series of steps that could create a sustainable world.
