Cultural Diversity Week

Artwork unveiled at opening ceremony of annual celebration of cultures

Janna Dwelle
Staff Writer

This week, University of Idaho students celebrate the broad mix of cultures found in the community of Moscow.

The third annual Cultural Diversity Week kicked off yesterday with an opening ceremony in the Vandal Lounge.

The ceremony provided the public with its first chance to view a new piece of artwork which will hang in the Student Union Building.

ASUI Senator Amtul Sheikh, chair of this year's cultural diversity committee, said the committee decided not to spend money bringing in a speaker this year. She explained a speaker only stays for one evening, while the artwork will remain as "a lasting legacy for the university."

Students and community members will find ample opportunity to explore other cultures throughout the week by participating in activities sponsored by the ASUI and the Division of Student Affairs.

Today from 5-8 p.m., students can visit the Diversity Fair in the SUB ballroom. The event will feature food, crafts and entertainment from various societies.

Thursday evening the Ballroom will accommodate an interactive experience called the World Game. According to Sheikh, a great map will be spread on the ballroom floor, and participants will form "countries." The "citizens" of each country will have to deal with problems such as economics and food distribution as well as cultural and language barriers.

Friday night will feature a performance of sitar and tabla by Indian Sub-Continent musicians in the Borah Theater, and Saturday night offers a free "International Dance" in the ballroom.

Walter Saunders, president of RAACE (Recognizing African American Concerns and Education), expressed support for the week's activities.

"Cultural Diversity Week is a good opportunity for all of us to learn something about each other," Saunders said. "We're taught there's only one way to do things, when there's actually millions of ways and millions of combinations ... this is a step in the right direction."

RAACE will sponsor one of several workshops offered this week. According to Saunders, "Black Like Me" will consist of

Greek advisor present at Beta party

Tim Helmke
Staff Writer

Old information has come to the front burner and brings two new players into the Regena Coghlan spotlight.

The top story in the Oct. 30 issue of The Spokesman-Review reported University of Idaho Greek Advisor Linda Wilson and Assistant Greek Advisor Chris Wuthrich were both present at the Beta Theta Pi party entitled "50 Ways to Lose Your Liver" on the evening of Aug. 19.

This was one of the two parties at which Coghlan supposedly was served alcohol prior to her fall from the fire escape at the Alpha Phi house.

This information was first reported on KHQ-TV (Channel 6) the week after Coghlan's fall and is "old news," said Wilson.

Wilson and Wuthrich were at the party on an invitation from Matt Meyers, chapter president of Beta. The two only entered the foyer area of the house and did not tour the property, said Wilson.

Wilson told state and local investigators of the case she did not see any alcohol while she was at the party. She said alcohol may have been present at the party but she did not see it in any form.

"I was there with Chris on a friendly visit to the chapter. We were not there looking for alcohol. Our intent was not to monitor alcohol distribution or consumption; it was a friendly visit," said Wilson.

Wilson said she and Wuthrich were at the party for 15 minutes at the most and during that time talked with Coghlan for "at the most thirty seconds." Wilson also said she did not get the impression from Coghlan "at all" that she had been drinking.

According to the state investigation, Coghlan apparently drank four beers and one or two shots of whiskey at the Sigma Alpha Epsilon "Jack Daniels' Birthday" party.

Wilson said she gave Coghlan a hug and congratulated her on pledging Alpha Phi and chatted with her a little more.

Wilson said Coghlan appeared to be happy but did not appear intoxicated in any form.

ECO to discuss career opportunities

Helen Harshbarger
News Editor

"Career Opportunities in the Environmental Field" will be the subject of a visit to the University of Idaho by The Environmental Careers Organization Monday.

Liam Kernell, Program Coordinator for ECO's Pacific Northwest office in Seattle, will be at UI talking to students, alumni, faculty about the growing environmental career field and how students can make a difference by becoming environmental professionals.

Kernell will present free Environmental Career workshops, open to all members of the campus community.

Each year ECO visits college and universities in the Pacific

'How do I get experience without a job, and how do I get a job without experience?'

Northwest to talk to students and recent graduates about what kinds of jobs are available in the environmental files.

"In our workshops, we also advise students on what they should be doing to make themselves more marketable to environmental employers," Kernell said. "The environment is one of the hottest issues right now, therefore competition for environmental jobs is fierce."

"That's where ECO can help—not only in helping students develop strategies for starting their environmental careers, but also by letting them know about exclusive educational and professional opportunities available through ECO," Kernell said.

"Nowadays the most common question college graduates ask is, 'How do I get experience without a job, and how do I get a job without experience?' Part of our mission of is to fill that gap by helping aspiring, entry-level environmental professional get their foot in the door by placing them into short- and long-term paid positions with environmental employers," Kernell said.

Libertarian party

Survey shows views more Libertarian than liberal

Darin Crisp
Staff Writer

Preliminary results from a survey of students at University of Idaho show more students lean toward the libertarian side of the political continuum than liberal.

Joe Knight, a national Libertarian party representative raising support and party consciousness, said the trend is something he's seen in past months. This makes the third Idaho campus he's covered. He plans to go to Washington State University and four other campuses.

Amy Wilson, a student who placed on the liberal side of the Libertarian portion of the chart, said she disagrees with the survey and thinks it's a dishonest marketing device. Knight responded by claiming the poll of 10 questions was lifted from a poll of 100 questions circulated by the National Libertarian Party. According to Knight, the short version was chosen to give the same results the larger version did.

Wilson, who continued to claim she disagreed with many stands of the Libertarian party, insisted the poll was "extremely polarized," and Knight finally admitted it was a marketing device.

Troy Millard, on the other hand, didn't have much of an opinion of the validity of the poll, but the nine-year Air Force veteran claims the poll placed him where he believes he's stood for the last four or five years.

Millard said his views correspond with the stand of the Libertarian party. For instance, he believes the drug problem in the United States could be cut by 80 percent by legalizing the drugs. He also believes admitting homosexuals into the military is not a problem.

Knight described the Libertarian party as a mixture of viewpoints like any other party. He described three factions in the party: Constitutionalists, Anarchists and Objectivists.

Constitutionalists believe in interpreting the Constitution literally. Anarchists want no government involvement. Objectivists are followers of Ayn Rand. Rand, a novelist in the 1950's, proposed an intellectually oriented liberalism.

According to Knight, the party is gaining strength, having elected members into office up to state legislature level, notably in Alaska.

Bicycle complaints increase

Despite efforts to curtail illegally parked bicycles by issuing warning notices, Environmental Health & Safety has responded to an increasing number of complaints and concerns related to this problem.

Beginning Monday, bicycles left locked to handrails or guardrails on building access ramps will be subject to removal. The university will not be responsible to damage to property due to removal.

Items removed may be reclaimed during working hours from Commander, Campus Subdivision, Moscow Police Department, Third and Line Streets.

Bicycles parked on building access ramps are an obstacle to wheelchair users and others who need to use the railing for safety. In addition to access ramps, bicycles cannot be parked next to stairway handrails, on stairwell landing, in hallways, inside buildings or any other location where they might obstruct or impede the safe use of university facilities.

To avoid problems, students should use bicycle parking spaces which have been installed to accommodate bicycle users.

Alpha Kappa Lambda takes campus by storm

Tim Helmke
Staff Writer

Three years ago this fall, one University of Idaho fraternity was recolonized on campus has taken the Greek system by storm ever since.

Alpha Kappa Lambda recolonized in the fall semester of 1990 and played a dominant role in numerous campus activities. The group of men received their charter making them an official AKL chapter in April 1992. AKL moved into the house on New Greek Row in the fall of 1991 which had been vacated when the Alpha Chi Omega sorority pulled off the campus. Prior to moving into the house, members and pledges of AKL lived in the residence halls and off campus.

AKL has made its presence known on campus by placing first in such activities as: ASUI Blood Drive, Homecoming (Overall Champions '91 and '92), Songfest and Co-Rec Softball with Delta Delta Delta. Rob Finch, AKL chapter president, was crowned the first-ever Homecoming King during festivities last fall.

AKL is also active with community service projects in which they are involved. Their national philanthropy is Cystic Fibrosis for which they hold an annual ski-a-thon to raise money. Local philanthropic efforts for AKL include: Latah County Friends Unlimited, Adopt-a-Highway, Moscow Parks and Recreation, AAU Basketball and Robinson Lake. These events are scheduled throughout the year so AKL members are always involved in some sort of philanthropic event.

ASUI President Richard Rock is currently an AKL pledge and chose Greek life after four years in the residence halls. Rock has enjoyed his experiences at AKL and looks forward to what Greek life and AKL has to offer him in the future. Rock represents the type of student involvement on campus which AKL is involved in.

Other campus groups which AKL members and pledges are involved in are: ASUI Senate, ASUI Homecoming Committee, Air Force ROTC, Navy ROTC, Army ROTC, IFC Executive Council, IFC Judiciary Counsel, IFC Judiciary Board, Blue Key, Order of Omega and Vandaleers.

AKL is one of only two national fraternities which are non-secretive. AKL and Delta Upsilon open their meetings and rituals for anyone to witness.

AKL has a scholastic program in which they have a study table and tutoring offered to their pledges and members in a variety of subjects. The number of hours vary based on previous grade performances. Members also tutor pledges in the classes they may have taken or are knowledgeable about.

AKL recently voted in a new National President in August at the annual Conclave where all chapters meet to discuss AKL issues. William Porter took office soon after being voted in and he has direct ties to Idaho's AKL chapter. Porter's son, David, is a member of the Alpha Phi chapter of AKL.

AKL currently has 52 people living in-house, 23 of whom are pledges. There are also numerous out-of-house members who stay active in chapter operations and activities.

AKL holds a competition between women from sororities and residence halls to serve as Sweetheart of AKL for a year. Laura Hanson, Delta Gamma member, is the current Sweetheart and spends time at the AKL house studying and participating in chapter activities.

No matter what may come their way, AKL is always ready to take a challenge head on and put forth the best effort possible.

"Regena did not appear to have been drinking and I did not smell any alcohol on her breath while I was in close proximity of her," said Wilson.

"I am not an expert on alcohol by any means or on testing sobriety but she appeared to be a very sober person."

Coghlan told officials she had been served a mixed drink at the Betas prior to meeting Wilson and Wuthrich. In total, Coghlan drank more than a half dozen beers and drinks at the two parties.

Coghlan had a blood-alcohol level of .25 percent at the time of her apparent fall from the third floor fire escape which has left her paralyzed from the waist down, according to police.

Coghlan's attorney John Etter released a copy of the state and local investigation reports to the Spokesman.

In the article Etter stopped short of saying Wilson and Wuthrich being present at the party suggests UI shares the responsibility for Coghlan's fall.

However, Etter told the Spokesman, "It raises serious questions about their participation in activities that, on paper and by regulation and rule should not occur."

Bruce Pitman, UI dean of students and supervisor for Wilson and Wuthrich, was unable for comment. He did tell the Spokesman it was unlikely the university would look further into the involvement of the two at the party.

"They were shown what the fraternity wanted them to see," Pitman told the paper. He declined to elaborate on this comment.

Numerous members of the Greek system feel Wilson and Wuthrich are being targeted unfairly in the case and have expressed their concerns to the two. Wilson said she appreciates the support she has received and said she feels the old news should not have resurfaced in the fashion it did but accepts it as part of her job.

Admitting dreaded 'L' word opens closet door

It would have been interesting to see the looks on the faces of Susan Baumgartner's English 104 classes on Oct. 7.

On this day, Susan decided she had just about enough. The closet was dark and uncomfortable. She'd been passing for a "normal" person long enough, and she wanted people to know the truth.

So in a stroke of courage and honesty, she admitted to being a lesbian. Yes, the dreaded "L" word, the kind of person some people think should be locked in a closet for life.

But she won't be. And good for Susan Baumgartner.

It's a shame we live in a society that forced Susan into the closet in the first place, but that's the way it is and will probably continue to be. Unfortunately, some people will never accept homosexuality. They talk behind their back, they look down on them as weird, and if you are the Idaho Citizens Alliance, you try to pass hateful initiatives which attempt to tell people how they should run their lives.

According to the front-page story in last Friday's Argonaut, it was the ICA that pushed her out of the closet—she felt it was her only defense. She said coming out and letting people know she's a lesbian will hopefully convince people to not sign the ICA's anti-gay initiative. She has faith that people will judge her on her teaching abilities and qualities as a person, not the gender she is attracted to.

Some people still cling to some very nutty ideas about what homosexuals are. Some chose to believe all lesbians look and dress like guys, or are all man-hating, foaming-at-the-mouth feminists.

Susan Baumgartner throws a monkey wrench directly into this ignorant notion.

Most homosexuals don't go around making passes at straights, nor do they go around trying to tell people their way of thinking is the right way and to hell with everyone else. They simply want to be treated with dignity and respect, to be able to worship God without being called a hypocrite, and be able to teach here without worrying someone's going to try to have them removed because of their sexual orientation.

So far, the response seems to be fairly positive. No students have run yelling and screaming to their advisors to switch English classes. There are no known petitions circulating to get her fired.

For the first time in her life, Susan can stop pretending to be something she is not. She can now step out into a world which will hopefully welcome her with open arms, just as we would hopefully do with anyone else. It's a new world for her, and she deserves the best of luck in it.

Reading someone's diary rapes owner

Coming Up For Air
Chris Miller

Everybody has seen diaries with those cute little padlocks protecting privately cherished thoughts and memories. The locks aren't really designed to stop serious thought-stealers from breaking their flimsy cases and pillaging the contents.

The locks have nothing to do with physical security — they represent a moral clamp designed to prevent idle hands from finding passage for curious eyes. "This is private stuff, none of your business, someone else's mind," a person's conscience warns when it sees that lock.

Now, it seems like our incorrigible congressmen have gotten the better of their consciences.

In an entertainment fiasco, the Senate debated yesterday whether to force Senator Bob Packwood, (R-Ore.) to turn over his personal diaries. The Senate ethics committee hopes to obtain evidence about the possible violation of criminal laws. It has been nearly a year since Packwood was accused of making unwanted sexual advances to more than two dozen female aides, lobbyists and associates and then trying to intimidate them from revealing their stories.

Packwood's diaries most likely contain all the ingredients of any juicy diary with literary merit — dreams, observations, intrigue, gossip and perhaps, lengthy expositions detailing important sexual encounters with illicit members of the opposite sex — or at least illicit encounters, that is.

If the ethics committee is interested in reading porn, they can find it on magazine racks made for publication (who knows, it may be written more smoothly than Packwood's).

But all that really isn't the point. Diaries have long been lauded as private. Period. To look into someone's diary is no less than to rape the owner. However, this violation is worse than "mere" physical molestation. It is a rape of the mind.

Who would not feel frightened and vulnerable if anyone could simply snoop through your mind and ravish your thoughts?

The Senate doesn't really want to; they just can't control themselves, the consummate gluttons that they are. Packwood needs a bigger padlock — perhaps an electrified one would do the job. Maybe this is an exercise designed to prove congressmen have no consciences. Could be.

However, many senators are sympathetic to Packwood's claim to a constitutional right to privacy. They don't ever want to be forced to open up their own private papers, and consequently, hesitate to stick their hands into a 61-year-old's affairs. But that's not to say they're not interested.

Whether Packwood advanced on females, the violation of the sanctity of his diary is not justifiable, despite the symbolic retribution.

Reminder to those who have forgotten First Amendment

"Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press..."

—The First Amendment

I just thought some of you could use a small reminder that, as far as I know, the above statement is still in effect.

I discovered at a student press conference in Dallas, Texas last week some people have written off the Bill of Rights. Student newspapers all over the country are being censored by faculty, administration, publication boards and student governments.

These entities like to think of the student paper as their "public relations" magazine, whose sole purpose is to glorify the university and its wonderful aspects.

However, when something controversial or negative happens on a campus, they shudder to think of what that "rag" will print. Some try to censor before publication and others try to take action against the paper afterwards.

The Way It Is

I heard many "Anti-First Amendment" horror stories, including when the student body president of a southern university had stolen over 2,000 issues of the paper at distribution sites simply because of unfavorable publicity.

Then there were the editors at countless papers who had been fired or threatened to be fired after writing editorials or news stories about faculty and administration.

Another one was when student organizations and campus officials had tried to suppress crime reports from the campus paper to avoid bad press for some groups.

My favorite story was the football team who took every issue of the paper they could find on campus and piled them in front of the Editor-in-chief's office.

While these all may sound humorous and even tempting to those of you who may not agree

Coverage good, no endorsement

I commend the student media at the University of Idaho for their excellent coverage of the Moscow city election campaign.

The candidate forums on KUOI, hosted by Leigh Robartes, have provided a great opportunity for people who don't go to meetings to question the candidates.

Leigh was well prepared and scrupulously fair; the questions were excellent; and the answers have been interesting and revealing.

The Argonaut provided excellent front-page coverage in its Oct. 22 issue of the deadline to register to vote.

Shari Ireton's editorial in that same issue made a strong argument for why UI students should register and vote in the city election.

I would like to respond to one point in the editorial. It states: "Sometimes elections will pass citizens right on by, until they realize there is a new person in the mayor's office. By then, it's too late...."

That statement might be misunderstood to be an endorsement of the current mayor, which I don't believe the writer intended.

I hope that there will be a new person in the mayor's office in January, and I hope she will be elected with the support of UI students.

Pam Palmer demonstrated her interest in student opinions by setting up an information table on campus two weeks ago. She will look for other ways to involve students in decisions of city government that affect them. I urge readers in the Argonaut to vote for Pam Palmer today.

—Kenton Bird

Editor's note: The Argonaut regrets any confusion caused by unclear wording in the Oct. 22 main opinion. It was not intended to be an endorsement of any candidate in this year's election.

What's wrong with asking?

In response to Jeff Kapostasy's commentary, "Intellects really Satan's helpers": I know Mr. Kapostasy is trying to show humor by bringing out classroom situations that we have all experienced; listening to the same student ask question after question, or interject comments during lectures.

I agree with him to a certain extent, but being a non-traditional student, I am offended at his comment, "Non-traditional students have the nasty reputation of making up a majority of these students." He then continues to say, "But in all fairness, many of these students are you normal, everyday, general-purpose annoyers."

Does Mr. Kapostasy realize the average age of a UI student is 25, which qualifies them as non-traditional? That's probably not much older than he is. I am sorry that Mr. Kapostasy has such a narrow-minded view of non-traditional students. Does he really think because one or two older students speak up in class with questions he considers "stupid and annoying," then they represent all in their age group?

What's wrong with asking questions anyway; isn't that how people learn? What seems like a dumb question for one, may seem like a good question for another. It's better to interrupt the teacher with a question than to talk among one another. I find that much more annoying than questions.

For a person who contributes editorials as often as Mr. Kapostasy does, one would think he would be a little more open minded.

Gays can change sex preference

As one of Susan Baumgartner's former students, I would like everyone to know that she is a terrific person and an excellent instructor as well.

If courage is to be admired, she definitely has it. There is no reason, in my mind, as to why she shouldn't be treated with the same love and respect as any other person. This is what I believe God would intend.

A sensitive issue such as homosexuality needs to be discussed sensitively. I believe Susan knows me well enough to know that I will try to do that. She is absolutely correct when she says that we lie when we pretend to be something that we are not. It is also true that people lie when they say they cannot change. People can change their lives — this includes homosexuals as well. Susan can change to a permanent heterosexual lifestyle if she wants to. Many other former homosexuals have done so. Whether Susan wants to is entirely her choice.

This leads me to the next point that needs to be discussed. Recently we have discovered that certain people have a genetic predisposition towards being gay. The gay community is now using this as proof that homosexuality is not a chosen lifestyle. They are wrong. We know that certain people also have a genetic predisposition towards alcoholism. Some people can become instantly addicted after only one drink. Yet as a society, we frown upon alcoholism and demand treatment and self-control.

I as well as millions of other men have a genetic predisposition toward procreation. Yet this does not justify us cheating on our wives by having multiple sex partners. Again, society demands self-control. Having a genetic predisposition does not legitimize homosexual behavior. I wish that life were more fair, but I know it isn't.

Finally, Susan mentioned that there were LDS denominations at the Seattle Gay Pride Parade. Being LDS myself, I would like to let her know that the LDS church does not condone homosexual behavior.

It is a very serious sin. As far as sexual relations are concerned, the only type that is accepted by our Heavenly Father is between a man and a woman who are legally and lawfully married.

I suspect that Susan will not accept my reasoning. Even though I may be whistling wind as far as she is concerned, (as well as many other people for that matter) I wish to say with all humility that she needs to repent.

—Scott Holland

Polls should be accessible to all

In response to the Argonaut's Oct. 29 editorial, "Moscow ignoring student voting population."

I agree with Katé Lyons-Holestine that there should be at least one polling place on campus for all citywide elections.

Having all precincts vote at the Latah County Fairgrounds forces not only students but other residents to drive across town to vote.

Whenever possible, polling places should be located in places voters can reach by bicycle or on foot.

Fortunately, there is an alternative to driving to the polls today.

A free shuttle bus service will leave the Student Union Building hourly from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. It will return to the SUB on the following half hour.

The vehicle and driver are being provided as a public service by Link Transportation Systems.

Some people do care about student involvement in Moscow City Government.

If I am elected mayor, I will continue to seek student opinions about issues such as law enforcement, bicycle paths and better relations between the university and the rest of the community. You can help by riding the bus to the Fairgrounds today and voting for Pam Palmer for mayor.

Burton justifies Beavis bashing

This letter is in response to Greg Burton's Oct. 19 commentary in the Argonaut.

Mr. Burton, what's your point? What are you trying to tell me? The headline of the commentary is ambiguous, and as I read on, I realize that your "point" is that certain television programs "automatically prompt communal outrage and despair," and maybe we should blame them for the "downfall of society."

However, my opinion is that

with all that we print, just remember the above cases were all considered illegal. Why? Because they violated the paper's right to the freedom of speech (not to mention grand theft).

Even at this paper we have felt the pressure from certain campus entities to control what we print. The Argonaut believe everyone has a right to be heard, but we have the right to print the news. As long as it is legal and ethical, you are using "television programming audacity" and the Ohio incident to justify your bashing of the television program "Beavis and Butthead."

What's your problem, Greg? Too offensive for you? Then don't watch the dame program. Or better yet, don't watch television, period, as it might corrupt you. But don't burn your television set. You five-year-old might be watching and get some ideas...

I have seen "Beavis and Butthead" twice (as I have no cable where I live). I enjoyed it thoroughly. Who shouldn't? My point is this, Ma Burton: If you don't like "Beavis and Butthead," don't watch, and you should be more clear in writing as to what you think corrupts the society of today.

the news will be printed. We often find there is always at least one person who will be unhappy, but our job is not to glorify or write fluff stories to keep the campus happy. We are being paid to inform students and we try to do that job to the best of our abilities.

And as long as there is a constitution to protect us, we will continue doing so.

Snaut too much for Moscow

University of Idaho student Robb Brennan is handed a large bone by Snaut on Halloween night at Moscow Social Club.

Handful of people receive the Snaut experience on Halloween

Russ Woolsey
Lifestyles Editor

The Bedheads, Beast of the Plow and Snaut played to a handful of people on Halloween night at the Moscow Social Club.

Beast of the Plow and Snaut came from Spokane to give Moscow a dose of their rage and theatrics, but Moscow didn't even extend the arm to receive a sharp injection of culture that was alive and well Halloween night.

After Beast of the Plow with spikes and proper Halloween attire played a fast and angry set to maybe 20 people, Snaut took the stage with torches of fire lighting the fog infested stage which gave the setting an Eric, almost full moon setting.

The crowd multiplied rapidly to maybe 30 people when Snaut started their first tune with their lead singer popping unexpectedly out of a trunk on the stage with a chainsaw in hand.

The music was fast and boisterous complete with horns, and extra percussion to ensure nobody left without their ears ringing.

Their theatrics climaxed after dog food was thrown into the crowd (and then thrown back), and then band member Tub spilled his shaving cream load onto an unexpected "Swiss-woman."

The lack of people didn't seem to affect Snaut's performance except for maybe the duration. Snaut vowed at the end of the show to play in Moscow again.

Viewing was difficult with all the fog, but gave a different feeling to Snaut band members.

Nightmare before Christmas holiday treat

Tim Schreiner
Staff Writer

A Tim Burton film, The Nightmare Before Christmas, is an animated film of stop motion and puppetry. Burton's imagination comes through in both the story line and the pictures. He seems to have mastered the surrealism of cartooning where there seem to be no limits to perspective, color and character.

Jack Skellington, the Halloween pumpkin king, is simply bored with the same old job of making Halloween a success every year, and leaves "Halloween town" to find happiness. He finds a doorway to "Christmas town," full of color and excitement, and attempts to take the place of Santa Claus and improve the holiday.

Jack comes to realize, with perhaps a mix of Thanksgiving demeanor as well, that instead of making Halloween more like Christmas, he should have more gratitude for the fact that he is the Halloween pumpkin king and good at it.

The role of sense-maker goes to a sickly scarecrow-woman, who finds meaning in the simplicity of love and caring. In the end, all is well and everyone is happy to be who and where they are, as is expected but fully appropriate for the show.

"Kiss" won the best costume award in the Halloween costume contest held at Xenon last Sunday night. Several awards were given to various costumes.

'Bump in the night' just right

Tim Schreiner
Staff Writer

Xenon's annual "Bump in the Night" party was a top-act for Halloween monster-mashers on Sunday night.

Andy Rockenfield, area manager for Xenon, said, "It went real well, everyone was full of energy and had a great time." Rockenfield said there was a really fantastic creativity with the costumes this year.

The winners for the costume contest in the "best group" category went to a look-alike of the make-up clad rock band, Kiss. The "best couple" winners went to a woman dressed as a chef with a push cart, and the main course was the head of a man hidden under the serving tray.

Rockenfield said "people were identified by costume, and not by name" for the contest. The overall winners for the costume contest were a couple dressed as a cordless phone and handset. The numbers on the cordless phone lit up when pushed, and the handset would ring once a number was dialed.

"People just came to party, and that's what they did," Rockenfield said. He added that identification at the front door wasn't too different from any other night. "You just have to be extra careful," he said. "We make sure to check the people in more ways than just matching a picture to their face."

Know the proper piscatory fashion when fall fishing

Outdoors with...
Nick Brown

If you dunk jigs for Clearwater steelhead and keep up on piscatory fashion, you're probably aware of the B run behemoths preference for scantily clad jigs.

To understand this phenomena, put yourself in the steelhead's position: you've just negotiated a harrowing 500-mile gauntlet through a host of dams and miles of gilnet. By the time you're resting in cool Idaho waters, you're a survivor. You've passed on the finest cured salmon clusters, rejected the most elegant fly patterns, spurned succulent sand shrimp, and smirked at innumerable combinations of yarn, corkies, Sammies, and Spin-N-Glows slathered with garlic scent, herring oil, Grandpa's Secret, anise oil, spit, and Secret Steelhead Slay Juice.

Now you're in Idaho water, resting in a boulder strewn run below the stream of your origin. The 23rd jig of the morning—a real lulu the size of a downrigger weight dressed with enough feathers to fill a pillow—has just drifted past your battered snout. Enormous Louisiana Tiger Prawns tumble by. A hairy bucktail jig as wide as a man's beard dredges past on 14 pound test that glows luminously in the crystal fall water.

To tie your own jigs, you'll need a vice (to hold the jig while you're tying feathers on it) and bobbin (thread dispenser). Vice grips make a good streamside substitute for the clumsier bench model. When your fishing buddy is on to a hot color but won't share, pull out the vice, take a page from the purist's notebook and match the hatch. For materials, experiment with bucktail or marabou. Red, black, chartreuse, pink/white, orange/brown, and pink/purple work well.

The ability to tie a #16 Adams is not prerequisite for whipping up a batch of jigs; some solid wrapping and a half hitch topped off with quality head cement will do the trick. You'll need a solid jig when lure-weary steelhead tear into your tiny jigs with relish.

Think the world would be better if you were running the show?
Here's your chance.

"Too bad the only people who know how to run the country are busy driving cabs and cutting hair."

'Moshing' to "Fields of Joy" only in Seattle

Russ Woolsey
Lifestyles Editor

Lenny Kravitz played to a sold-out crowd in the only place in the world where the crowd "moshes" to slow songs Saturday night in Seattle, at the Seattle Center Arena.

Kravitz took the stage after Blind Melon played a grim, but powerful, 30 minutes with his idle's song in the background, "Are you Experienced."

Stage performances can be good, great and then there is a Lenny Kravitz stage performance.

Dressed in a skin-tight, patched leather 70's suit, with dreadlocks hanging to mid-back, Kravitz jammed into the first song "Come on and Love Me" from his new album on the Virgin label, Are You Gonna Go My Way.

The first song set a precedence for dred-shaking musical discourse as Kravitz and band shook their bones to get the crowd inspired.

By the third song, "Fields of Joy", from Kravitz's second album Mama Said, the crowd frenzied into a mosh-pit with the power of a Pearl Jam concert.

Moshing to "Fields of Joy?" Only in Seattle.

The flower-inspired crowd in 60's and 70's bell bottom attire were "joyfully" controlled by Kravitz. He didn't settle the crowd down until midway through the show when he broke out his acoustic guitar for a powerful rendition of the song "Sister" from Are You Gonna Go My Way.

Kravitz's style and powerfully dynamic voice led the crowd into many "sing-alongs" as he preached his word about love in the song "Come on and Love Me" from his latest album. During the song, Kravitz left the stage to mingle with the crowd, touching hands while the lyrics sung by the crowd filled the room.

Kravitz ended the concert with "Believe," a song which has gained popularity from the "spacey" video played relentlessly ly on MTV.

After introducing and thanking his motley band, who had enough hair on their heads to cover all the shiny heads to the Aryan Nations compound on Hayden Lake, Kravitz left the stage only to return for two encores. The last was the title cut of Are You Gonna Go My Way, which only stirred the crowd into a frenzy rather than settling it into a conclusion.

Kravitz grew up in the wealthy suburbs of Manhattan and then moved to the lower side of Brooklyn as a teenager.

He has since released three albums; Mama Said, Let Love Rule and his latest, Are You Gonna Go My Way.

With five matches remaining, the University of Idaho Vandals have a chance to post their second straight 20-win season after sweeping the Montana schools last weekend in Big Sky Conference volleyball action.

Halloween weekend was a nightmare for Montana, which fell to the Vandals 15-8, 10-15, 12-15, and 9-15.

Saturday, Idaho crushed Montana State 15-3, 15-13, and 15-4 in Big Sky Conference Volleyball Action.

Friday night marked the first time since 1984 that the Vandals have swept Montana. The Vandals finished 26-14 that year, second in the Big Sky to Portland State, while the Grizzlies managed only a 14-21 record nine years ago.

The Grizzlies took advantage of a sluggish UI effort in the early going as the Vandals appeared unfocused, committing eight errors and only 15 kills in 42 tries.

Montana broke a 5-5 tie in game one with four straight points and gave up only three the rest of the way, cruising to a 15-8 win.

Memorial Gym was as silent as an empty padded cell when the Vandals (16-5, 9-0 Big Sky) fell behind 6-1 to start game two, but the Idaho spikers shed their goat costumes and fought back with eight unanswered points.

The Grizzlies (16-7, 7-2 Big Sky) clawed their way back with the help of a pair of Jennifer Moran aces, narrowing the margin to 10-9, before dropping 15-10.

Montana tried to take control of the match, jumping to a 7-1 advantage in game three, but it was deja vu "all over again" as the Grizzly faithful watched the lead disappear thanks to eight more unanswered points by the Vandals.

University of Montana pulled out a carbon copy of its own by getting back to within 10-9, but UI scored the next four points to cinch the win.

Montana still didn't die, holding a slim 9-8 edge midway through game four, but Idaho reeled off the final seven points of the game, taking the match and the season series.

Vandals victorious in final road game

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. — Before the game even began, things were looking bad for the Vandals. After winning the coin toss and electing to receive, a personal foul was called on the Vandals before the initial kick-off took place.

At that point, the Lumberjacks attempted an onside kick and their strategy paid off as they gained control of the ball. The Lumberjacks marched it straight down the field to score the first touchdown of the game.

The Northern Arizona Lumberjacks didn't have the stamina to dominate the field and the University of Idaho took over. The UI destroyed the Lumberjacks 34-27 in Big Sky Conference football action Saturday.

"It was a great ballgame, a heck of a ballgame," Vandal head coach John L. Smith said. "We expected it (the onside kick). I felt like we gave that one away."

The UI took advantage of the Lumberjacks' first mistake. Brian Galbreath fumbled on the UI 40-yard line and Brian Strandley recovered for the Vandals.

"We came after them," Smith said. "Our linebackers flew around."

Jake Greenslitt and Josh Fetter both recorded a quarterback sack as they managed to catch NAU quarterback Jeff Lewis behind the line of scrimmage.

Spencer Folau totaled six unassisted tackles against the Lumberjacks.

"The coaches got on me last week because I didn't come out to play last week," Folau said.

Ahmani Johnson, Jason Shelt and Wind Henderson all added five unassisted tackles to the UI defensive assault.

UI quarterback Doug

Nussmeier found an open spot to scramble in the Vandals' first touchdown from ten yards out.

Nussmeier combined with Alan Allen for two touchdowns against the Lumberjacks. In the second quarter Nussmeier and Allen combined for a 78-yard touchdown pass to boost the Vandal lead to 14-7. Allen also scored in the closing seconds of the half on a 29-yard pass from Nussmeier.

Allen led the Vandal receiving corps with two receptions for two touchdowns and a total of 107 yards.

The Vandals held a 21-10 advantage at the half.

Sherriden May's rushing total was far below his average, but he still managed to score a touchdown for the Vandals.

Late in the third quarter he scored on a one-yard rush.

May only carried the ball twice for a total of two yards. May was the second leading UI receiver with 54 yards on three catches.

Vandal freshman Joel Thomas started in May's position, as May is nursing strained muscle injuries. Thomas found all the open spots as he led the UI in rushing with 22 carries for 161 yards.

"The line did a great job today," Thomas said.

"I told Sherriden, 'We owe you to make the call.' We wanted him healthy for next week and he decided to do it," Smith said. "Joel Thomas came in and did a great job."

Vandal place kicker Mike Hollis broke a personal record against the Lumberjacks. He hit a 56-yard field goal in the top of the fourth quarter to put the Vandals up 34-20. Earlier in the season, at the Vandals' first home game against the Southwest Texas Bobcats, Hollis nailed a 55-yard field goal.

WSU drops Black Widows

The Washington State University women's rugby team didn't let the Black Widows win this weekend.

After a close first half WSU pulled away and trounced the Black Widows 28-7.

"We've never beaten them," Black Widow player Joan Lish said. "We thought we might come close this weekend."

WSU scored the first goal of the game, but the UI answered back quickly.

"We scored on a play initiated by Kim Gortez-Reaves. The scored was made by Kirsten Cornell," Lish said.

Jen Hopkins kicked the two-point conversion.

"In the second half we showed some strong defense," Lish said. "They had a lot of opportunities to score and didn't capitalize."

The Black Widows return to action Saturday in Portland.

UI soccer shuts out Mounties

LAGRANDE, Ore. — The University of Idaho soccer club wasted no time as they rolled over the LaGrande Mounties 8-0 Sunday.

Center midfielder Mohamed Jabbes scored on an assist from Lenford O'Garro just six minutes into the game. Steve Williams then scored on a direct free kick halfway through the first period to give UI a 2-0 lead.

The UI offense overpowered the Mounties' defense in the second half. Williams scored another goal early in the half. O'Garro followed with a goal on a header delivered by Chris Gill only three minutes later.

Jayson Transtrum scored on an assist by Williams and Gill scored a solo goal. Late in the game Transtrum added another goal off an assist from Amy Simpson. Owen Vassell wrapped up the scored on another assist from Williams.

The UI club team improves to 5-2-3 for the season.

Idaho will host the Mounties Saturday on Guy Wicks Field at 1 p.m. Sunday they take on Washington State University at 10 a.m. in Pullman.

"Montana is a great team. I am proud of our players because they competed, they could have layed down and died," Idaho head coach Tom Hilbert said.

Big Sky Conference Player-of-the-Week Brittany Van Haverbeke led the Idaho show Friday with a 571 hitting performance.

Tzvetelina Yanchulova, who had struggled in recent outings, came off the bench in a big way, drilling nine kills in only 14 tries and hitting .500.

Mindy Rice started slowly with only three kills and six errors, but the junior outside hitter found her swing and pounded 15 kills against only three errors the rest of the way. Setter Dee Porter contributed 57 assists and 18 digs against a Montana defense that posted 32 blocks.

"They gave Dee (Porter) a lot of locking looks and she did a good job. She only has a year of setting experience and I get on her case when I shouldn't," Hilbert said.

On Saturday Idaho had little trouble handing Montana State its ninth league loss in as many tries.

The Bobcats were helpless in the opening game as Idaho hit a phenomenal .542 with 15 kills against only two errors in 24 attempts.

Idaho finished with a .346 hitting night while MSU could muster only a .065 effort.

Redshirt freshman Louisa Kawulok came off the bench to hammer six kills without an error in nine tries in game three.

Nancy Wicks had a game-high 12 kills to help the Vandal cause.

The Vandals return to action this Friday in Cheney, where they take on the Eastern Washington Eagles.

Vandal basketball opens in less than three weeks

Basketball at the University of Idaho is just around the corner.

The Lady Vandals' home opener against Simon Fraser is scheduled for Nov. 19. The Lady Vandals finished fourth in the Big Sky as the lost in the first round of the Big Sky Championships last season.

The men's team, headed by first year coach Joe Cravens, is loaded with experience. Orlando Lightfoot returns to the Vandals' court, he was named the 1993 Big Sky Conference Player of the Year. The men tip off the home season Nov. 17.

12th Man contest yields new Vandal players

The Vandals will be seeing playing time from three new players in the three final home games this season.

The Vandal 12th Man Competition has produced three new Vandal football players.

Interested football buffs were invited to take part in a contest sponsored by the UI Athletic Department and UI Intramural Sports Oct. 9 in the Kibbie Dome.

Ryan Adelman, Brett Hullinger and Eli Ercoline were the three lucky contestants.

Adelman will play in the Vandals' final home against Boise State. Hullinger drew the UI homecoming game against Lehigh and Ercoline will play this week against Montana in the Kibbie Dome.

These three will play on the Vandals' kick off team. Every time the Vandals kick off these three will be on the field playing in their respective games.

Contestants were put to the test, taking part in agility testing, a bench press test, a 50-yard dash, and more.

Porter sets UI volleyball dig record last week

Vandal spiker Dee Porter became the University of Idaho's career leader in digs last week.

Porter surpasses former Vandal stand-out Karen Thompson as she recorded her 1,001st dig against San Diego State Oct. 23. She is the second player in UI history to accumulate more than 1,000 digs and only the 13th in Big Sky Conference history.
