Protected from the chilly wind outside, freshmen Cory Booth and Shawna Guthrie take shelter in the University of Idaho Library glass encased study lounge to study for their upcoming Chemistry exam. As Finals approach, more students will be taking advantage of someplace warm and quiet to do their last-minute cramming.

Weaver lawyer co-defends Coghlan

Tim Helmke
Staff Writer

The man who successfully defended Randy Weaver on murder and conspiracy charges has been brought in as co-counsel for Regena Coghlan.

Gerry Spence told Coghlan's other attorney, John Etter of Portland, Ore., last week he would be willing to help in the cases if suits were filed. Possible suits would make defendants out of the University of Idaho, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Beta Theta Pi and Alpha Phi. Etter said there is a period of 180 days after an accident to serve notice that civil claims have been filed.

Etter said it is apparent Spence and his longtime partner, Ed Moriarity, would both take active roles in the suits. Etter praised the track record and reputation of the Spence, Moriarity & Schuster law firm of Jackson, Wyo. Spence successfully defended Weaver on the charges which stemmed from a 1992 standoff with federal officers in Naples, Idaho.

Spence has the trademark expression of "little people get little justice" and has also won other large suits. He successfully defended Imelda Marcos against embezzlement charges and has won personal injury suits against Ford Motor Company.

Etter met Spence through a mutual colleague while he was investigating the possibility of lawsuits. Spence told Etter at that point he might be interested in the public policy implications such charges would bring. Etter said he was seeking co-counsel in the cases because the defendants would each have their own attorneys.

Coghlan was paralyzed after she fell from the third-floor fire escape of the Alpha Phi house on Aug. 19 while intoxicated. She had apparently been to two fraternity houses where she had been served alcohol. The alcohol, which ranged from beer to mixed drinks to shots of whiskey, left Coghlan with a blood-alcohol content of .25 percent. That content is more than twice the legal limit for driving while intoxicated.

Etter did not say when possible suits would be filed but did say his office would work with Spence's office to ensure a thorough investigation was complete before any decisions would be reached. Possible defendants declined comment at this time when contacted.

Rock overturns Union Board decision

Darin Crisp
Contributing Writer

In the latest move in the Idaho Union/Student Union Building controversy, ASUI President Richard Rock released a memo to the Senate Wednesday night which overturned the Union Board's decision to honor the name "Idaho Union."

The board on Tuesday voted unanimously to use the name "Idaho Union — The Student Center" rather than "Student Union Building."

ASUI Senator Rob Blinzler, a non-voting observer, disagreed strongly with the board's move, declaring it contrary to the student body's wishes as determined by a recent poll taken on the last ASUI general ballot. Blinzler was one of the people responsible for placing the poll on the ballot.

Though it didn't have the power of regulation, it was designed to serve as a guideline for student opinion.

Blinzler said Wednesday though the board knew the name "Student Union Building" had collected 86 percent of those voting, the Union Board refused to recognize the validity of the poll. He claimed their reasoning was they felt they were an informed body, and they had a problem with the referendum process.

Help needed modeling international fashions

The International Friendship Association is planning an International Afternoon of Culture, Costume and Cuisine Feb. 5, 1994. This successful program was presented for the first time last spring. The show featured international fashions and dances from countries around the world, including the United States. The planning committee is inviting persons interested in modeling the various fashions to call Mary Blanton at 882-4703.

Idaho Center for the Book now established

A University of Idaho librarian has been named to Idaho Center for the Book at Boise State University. Idaho is the 27th state to be affiliated with the Library of Congress' National Center for the Book. The centers were first established by the Library of Congress in 1977 to promote reading, writing, creating and collecting of books. The Idaho Center will emphasize book-making arts and Idaho book history. It will be overseen by an advisory board of 14 voting members from throughout the state. Projects planned by the new center include a literary heritage map, which would site state authors, presses, publishers and printer; developing traveling book exhibits emphasizing Idaho authors and book-markers; establishing a rental library of films and videos relating to book arts.

Enrichment Program offers lifeguard class

The University of Idaho Enrichment Program is offering a lifeguard training class Saturdays, Dec. 4 and 11, from 8 a.m. - 1 p.m. and Sundays, Dec. 5 and 12, from 9 a.m. - noon. This class provides the necessary minimum skills training for a person to qualify as a pool lifeguard. For info, call Enrichment Program, 885-6486.

Hospice of Palouse will do gift wrapping

Gift wrapping is available daily at the Palouse Empire Mall and Wal-Mart through Dec. 24. The Hospice of the Palouse Gift Wrapping Booth Elves will gift-wrap all holiday treasures for a donation.

Number of abandoned pets increases over break

Natalie Shapiro
Contributing Writer

Abandoned pets too often meet their fate by starvation or disease, but a Pullman woman has dedicated her life to preventing such tragedies.

Yvonne Herman, of the Companion Animal Aid and Placement Society in Pullman, works as a coordinator for finding homes for abandoned and unwanted pets.

People call her with reports of pets that need a home. She then makes phone calls to try to place the pet.

"I will make 20 to 30 calls to place a pet," she explains.

Herman warns people who are considering giving a pet as a Christmas present to be cautious. She is against giving animals as pets, but has suggestions for those who insist.

"I suggest that the parent go with the child to see the animal, to see if the child wants it. It is more important for the child to love the pet than it is to be a surprise."

Herman also feels pets should have a monetary value on them so people will value them more.

"I'm getting calls constantly from young people with questions like 'Do you have any Siamese kittens that are six weeks old?' They want them for a gift, and would like the presents to be free."

The problem with this, she said, is because the monetary value is so low, the value for the pet is low.

Herman notes the irony of people who spend thousands of dollars on a vacation but don't want to pay $15 for a kitten.

"Cat's values are low. There's so many of them, and there is an over-population problem."

Herman said CAAPS has a spay and neuter program for low income families, in which they pay part of the fees involved. A grant from the Human Society of Spokane helps pay those fees.

Herman also explained the need for people to make provisions for their pets in their wills. Last month, when a woman was killed by her boyfriend, their two dogs were left at the trailer.

"One dog was taken by a neighbor; the other one was left, and jumped over the fence, and got hung on the fence."

The dog was retrieved and taken to the animal shelter. Herman's husband had to receive a release form from the jailed boyfriend for the dog to be placed in a home.

"There were no provisions for these dogs made ahead of time," Herman said.

Sue Trotter, manager of the Humane Society in Moscow, notes that although there is a problem with students abandoning pets when they leave in the winter, the problem is more severe in the spring. The good news is that last spring, pet abandonment dropped dramatically.

"Last spring, a lot more students called ahead of time to bring in pets," she noted.

Their capacity is only 70 cats and 20 dogs, so a waiting list is often needed.

"We'd like people to call two to three weeks before they plan on leaving," Trotter suggests.

Government revamps financial aid forms

Renewal forms make student life easier

Shari Ireton
Editor-in-Chief

Getting money for school has never been easier.

In a few weeks, the federal government will be sending continuing students who applied for financial aid last year a renewal form. This means University of Idaho students no longer need to pick up, fill out and send in forms from the UI Financial Aid Office.

"I hope that it should be easier to fill out," said Financial Aid Director Dan Davenport.

The renewal form will look like the student aid report, which in the past was sent to each applicant after the initial form had been sent in. The new renewal form will list information used on last year's application, but some items will need to be updated.

"There are some dated items that you can't correct because the question wasn't on last year's form," said Davenport. "Keep your eyes open for the arrows and look at every question."

The arrows, he said, will point to information the government needs the student to update, such as gross income.

Davenport also asks students to be aware that on the new form, they have to check "Yes" next to all the colleges they want their financial aid information sent to. Those institutions will not receive the information if that is not done.

The new application process is part of the government's plan to make financial aid more available to college students. Last year, they did away with the required fee for filing a financial aid application.

Students should expect to see the renewal forms in the mail in the next few weeks. If a continuing student has not received the form by Jan. 1 or a student is applying for financial aid for the first time, they must fill out the forms available at the Financial Aid Office in the SUB. Graduating students do not need to worry about the renewal forms.

Included with the renewal form will be the application for financial aid from UI. Davenport stressed the importance of students filling out the forms and getting them in the mail as soon as possible.

If students have any other questions concerning financial aid or the new forms, Help Tables will be set up Dec. 6 and 7 at the UI Library from 10 a.m. - 2 p.m.

Another new feature in the world of financial aid is the Office's new National Scholarship Search Data Base, also called the College Fund Finder. The system was purchased with help of the ASUI, UI Bookstore and Financial Aid. It allows students to build a data base of information, such as gender, age, sex, year in school and state of residency. The computer compiles the information and gives a list of all available scholarships to that student.

The compilation includes such information as award amount, deadlines, who sponsors the scholarship and requirements. Students can print out the information from the College Fund Finder and use the system for free.

Be on lookout for stolen Levis

Gregory H. Burton
Staff Writer

If someone finds a pair of Levi 501 jeans, size 31" 31", please call the Moscow Police Department or the Pi Beta Phi sorority.

Actually, not all of the week preceding Thanksgiving break was as slow for crime news as this report would imply.

The day before Camille Turner, a resident of the Pi Beta Phi sorority, reported her jeans stolen "mid-wash" from her house Nov. 19, police were very busy.

At 10:57 p.m. Nov. 18, police chased and apprehended a 19-year-old student who took off running after being spotted with a 32 oz. cup in his hand.

Garner Moody, of Snow Hall, was spotted by Reserve Officers Terry Haldeman, Tom Fidel and Officer Earnest Sanders on the corner of Seventh Street and Elm Street.

Moody threw the cup down, and ran across the street, over the bridge by Westpark Elementary School and past Married Student Housing. He was finally stopped at Paradise Creek and Line Street.

Police determined there had been beer in the cup, and when they caught Moody, they smelled alcohol on his breath.

Charged with minor in possession and resisting and obstructing the police,

Moody told the police he took off running, "because I had been drinking and my friend said you could run away from the cops."

Also on Nov. 18, three fire alarms were destroyed at the Wallace Complex, someone reported five or six rounds were fired from an automatic weapon behind Wallace Complex (this was unsubstantiated) and Scott Strickert, 19, who lives in Wallace Complex, was stopped while attempting to purchase beer at Safeway.

He was cited by Reserve Officer Will Krasselt, who also happens to be an employee of Safeway.

And finally on Nov. 18, Steven Haygood, a resident advisor for McConnell Hall reported seeing two male college-age students carrying a couch out of McConnell.

Haygood reported witnessing the two men meeting with a third person, and all three took the couch to either Gault or Upham Hall.

Police say to be on the watch for a cozy brown, four foot long, and two feet high couch stamped with "UI Property."

Geology workshop offers practical experience

The University of Idaho Department of Geology and Geological Engineering, College of Mines and Earth Resources and Conference Services is sponsoring a four-day workshop to be held Feb. 16 - 19 at the Holiday Inn Palo Verde in Tucson, Ariz.

"Structure Short Course For Exploration and Mining Geologists" is a practical review of the basics of structural geology, oriented toward mineral exploration and ore targeting.

Stereonet techniques are emphasized in solution of problems as they prove useful in data gathering and problem solution at all levels of exploration and mine geology programs.

Two places will be visited during field trip day to study faults and folds and their movement plans. Data gathered at field trip stops will be analyzed in exercises during the fourth day of the course, using techniques studied during the first two days. Participants should be prepared for some desert walking.

The course will be instructed by Dr. Rollan R. Reid. Reid has extensive experience in structural mapping in rocks of all kinds, but particularly in the crystallines. He brings to this course a background in consulting in the structural side of mineral exploration and mine geology in the United States, Canada, Australia and South America.

A $600 fee covers all material, refreshment breaks, a daily luncheon and a field trip. Enrollment is limited to the first 25 applicants. For information or to register, contact Conference Services, 885-6876.

Former UI president to be honored with Life tribute Saturday

The UI's new Life Sciences Building will be renamed Saturday in honor of Gibb. The ceremony is scheduled for 10:30 a.m. in Life Sciences South 280. The public is invited to participate in the tribute to Gibb, who served as president from 1977 to 1989.

Gibb was diagnosed with liver cancer earlier this year. He said recent tests have given doctors hope the cancer has stabilized and may be in remission.

A reception will follow the dedication ceremony and guests will have the opportunity to tour the Life Sciences Building, which was expanded and remodeled during Gibb's presidency.

The Idaho Board of Education approved the naming of the Richard D. Gibb Life Sciences Building Nov. 16.

Gibb, who attended the meeting, was recognized by the board for his dedicated leadership and service to the state of Idaho as a professor, university presidents and public servant.

IFC under new leadership

Tim Helmke
Staff Writer

With the end of the semester just around the corner, the University of Idaho Interfraternity Council is under new leadership.

New IFC officers were installed at the regular meeting Tuesday night held at Sigma Chi. The new officers were elected at the Nov. 16 meeting held at Sigma Alpha Epsilon. Each one discussed in their election speech how important IFC decisions will be now, more than ever, with the UI Greek system under fire.

Jon Smith, former chapter president of Theta Chi, takes over the IFC presidency from Shelby Leforgee. Smith was active in the Greek forums which took place prior to the State Board of Education decisions and is active in his chapter activities. UI Greek Advisor Linda Wilson said she believes Smith will bring some fresh, new life to IFC.

Willie Bell, member of Sigma Chi, took over as IFC Vice President from Steve Sutherland. Bell talked of how he would like to implement some of his ideas into making changes in the way IFC operates. Bell and the Panhellenic Vice President are responsible for running chapter presidents' meetings.

Chad Heimbigner, member of Sigma Nu, will serve in the IFC Secretary position for 1994. Heimbigner brings an active chapter record with him to the position and should offer some great insight, said Wilson of Heimbigner.

Former FarmHouse Chapter President Mike Conklin was elected as the new IFC Treasurer. He discussed in his speech some of the aspects of the IFC budget he would like to see worked out.

The new IFC Public Relations Chair is Devin Burns, member of Phi Gamma Delta. Burns takes the position from Pete Mundt, who had a tough challenge of public relations work this past semester. Burns said he would like to develop some new forms of PR in the Greek system and the community.

Don Maraska of Tau Kappa Epsilon brings other campus experience with him to the position of Fraternity/Sorority Relations Chair. He is a transfer student here at UI and has been active in other universities' Greek systems.

Jerry Johnson, member of Tau Kappa Epsilon, will serve as Greek Week Chair and will work to organize the event with the Panhellenic Council Chair. This annual event is held each spring and Johnson is eager to help plan the events.

Ian James and Jeremy Chase, IFC Rush Chair and Assistant Rush Chair respectively, were not affected by the elections. Elections for these positions will take place at a later time.

Wilson said with the people who will now serve as the leaders of IFC, the UI Greek system will make some advances in making changes to improve the system. She said she is excited about all of the new ideas and is eager to work with each of the officers to get objectives accomplished.

them issue," Blinzler said. As far as they are concerned, the masses aren't informed, he said. Their opinion, he said, is "It (the change) is in the interest of the students. They just don't realize it yet."

When contacted yesterday about the motion taken by the board, ASUI Senator Cade King, the official Senate observer of the board, said "They were looking at the professional side of the SUB (activities)."

King claimed it was a spontaneous motion started within the board itself, and was not on the official agenda for the meeting.

Robyn Gentry, Board Chair, concurs with King. According to her, one of the board members moved the board consider the motion to change to "Idaho Union." During discussion, several different reasons came out for doing this.

First, the board wanted to know why they should be faced with the threat of referendum action for every decision they make independently.

Currently, their routine decisions do not require Senate approval. It's a "why are we here?" question, said Gentry.

Second, the name "Idaho Union" sits at the entrance of the building anyway, and has for as long as anyone can remember. David Mucci claims it's been there at least a decade, though both Mucci and Gentry say they've been accused of just recently putting it in place.

Third, it's not the first name change put on the SUB. When it was started, it was called the "Blue Bucket" and was designed by the founder, Permeal French, as a gathering place for students who had no other place to go. After it was bought by the university, the name was changed.

Fourth, since this is a land grant university, the taxpayers have as much say in the naming as the students. Unlike the Boise State University SUB, which was built with student funds, this one was built and refurbished partly by tax monies.

Finally, said Gentry, it's time to change. This was a student generated idea, she said, and since "...other places in the University are going forward, we were just trying to, too."

Mucci produced a sheet of the current SUB letterhead, which goes to all the corporate sponsors, explaining most corporations spend big money trying to build up their recognition. They also spend big money on the school and they tend to spend more on a place that grabs their attention.

According to Mucci, the current gray, colorless, letterhead with the name "Student Union" rotated 45 degrees on the upper right corner just doesn't grab the attention he'd like in order to get business like Taco Bell concessions.

Gentry said the original proposal was just that — a proposal. They wanted to test market the idea before they went public with it.

"We were forced in a corner," said Gentry. When the idea came out of the development committee, she said, it was jumped by negative publicity before it ever had a chance to fly.

According to Gentry, Argonaut Associate Editor Chris Miller, interviewed her under the auspices of writing a news story, and surprised her with a negative editorial instead.

"I'd never have talked to him if I knew," said Gentry.

Both Mucci and Gentry claim the Argonaut's negative coverage is one of the primary reasons the students are against the move.

Mansion dresses up for holidays

The spirit of Christmas past will unfold at the McConnell Mansion Dec. 8 from 4 - 8 p.m.

A Christmas tree with vintage toys around its base, ribbon and paper streamers and paper chains will transform the parlors into a historic Christmas setting.

Filling the air with music will be cellos played by students of Bill and Linda Wharton, flute duets by Consuelo Weitz and Karen Hagen and a harp played by Linda Chapman. Everyone can join in singing Christmas carols and songs around the parlor piano.

In the back parlor and upstairs visitors can enjoy exhibits of toys made during and after World War II. These include board games based on world politics, ceramic dogs made in occupied Japan, a wind-up train and paper dolls.

Visitors can also browse through a 1954 Sears catalog to find out what was available to Christmas shoppers 40 years ago.

Downstairs, there is an exhibit of an unusual doll whose nationality can be altered with seven interchangeable heads and costumes.

This year's annual Christmas reception will also be the grand opening of the newly restored maid's bedroom.

The room has wall-to-ceiling wallpaper of the early 20th century design, and it is furnished to resemble a bedroom of a young woman from Scandinavia working for the second owners of the house, Dr. and Mrs., Adair, who owned the Mansion from 1901 to the 1930s.

According to the Director of the Latah County Historical Society, Mary Reed, "the service of these immigrants in Moscow households was quite common, and it provided a way for them to learn English and American customs. The relationship between employee and employer was most often friendly and supportive, and the young women usually serviced just a few years, leaving to get married and establish their own households."

The maid's room is interpreted in an informal manner with artifacts representing a modest young woman who keeps busy in her free time with embroidery, mending and other handwork.

Visitors are welcome to look in her closet and dresser drawers. Reed plays the role of the maid for third graders visiting the mansion, and she will impersonate the maid on Wednesday's open house.

"Visitors are especially attracted to this room," Reed said, "because of its intimacy and warmth and ability to make you think about the house as a place where real, ordinary people lived and worked."

When Reed gives tours to third graders acting the part of the maid, she sees how involved they become in the house's history when they enter the bedroom.

"Imagining rich people sitting in the parlor is pale compared to the maid who at the end of the day hangs up her everyday apron and then sits in her rocking chair darning a stocking or tating lace."

The next stage in the house's interpretation will be in the 1920s kitchen. Visitors are also welcome to inspect the wood-burning range and see evidence of the original lath and plaster construction which was revealed when the more recent paneling was removed. The Historical Society plans to have the kitchen restored and furnished by summer.

The Christmas open house is free of charge and open to the public. Call the Historical Society at 882-1004 for more information.

Palouse children invited to Christmas from McConnell Mansion era

Past Christmases in Latah County of hand-made presents, trees brought home on a sled from the woods and an orange — the only one you would see that year — in the bottom of your stocking will be presented to children Dec. 11 from 2 - 3 p.m. at the McConnell Mansion, 110 South Adams.

Children will also find out about celebrations in other countries, such as the candles worn by the eldest daughter in Sweden on St. Lucia's day, or Strega Nona, the old woman from Italy who endlessly travels the world in search of the Christ Child, distributing candy to all children.

Using the Victorian tree and the exhibit of vintage toys in the Mansion's parlor as examples, Mary Reed and Sue Emory will introduce children to the kinds of toys and other presents a family in the McConnell era might have enjoyed and everyone will be invited to share their own family holiday tradition.

Those who participate in the program can learn to make a traditional craft or decoration, such as the Swedish woven basket, yarn doll and a Mexican lantern.

The event is sponsored by the Latah County Historical Society and is open, free of charge, to all elementary school-aged children. Call the Historical Society, 882-1004 for more information.

Helicopter training takes off

If you have a high school diploma and can complete Basic Training, the U.S. Army just might have a flight suit your size.

The Army is offering qualified soldiers, both men and women, an opportunity to train as helicopter pilots through its Warrant Officer Flight Training Program.

Lt. Col. John C. Tarr, commander of the Seattle Army Recruiting Battalion, describes WOFT training as one of the most physically demanding, mentally exacting and emotionally draining educations a person can experience.

"The training has to be tough," Tarr said. "It provides the Army trained aviators who are capable of handling our awesome helicopter technology and firepower."

"The training is well worth the work required," he added, "because it is also one of the most exciting, rewarding challenges in today's Army."

Following Basic Training, the applicant who qualifies for WOFT will be assigned to the Army Aviation Center at Fort Rucker, Ala., and spend six weeks at the Warrant Officer Candidate School. Graduation from WOCS means appointment to the rank of Warrant Officer One and the beginning of $285,000 worth of training.

Flight school begins with the UH-1, Huey. Newly appointed Warrant Officers spend 20 weeks learning to fly the Huey. This training includes day and instrument flying with a dose of simulators thrown in. They then spend 16 - 20 weeks learning Army combat skills while flying in either the Huey, Blackhawk, cobra or Kiowa aircraft.

"We are proud of the increase in the number of women and minorities who are enrolling in the WOFT program," Tarr said. "The opportunity to become a Warrant Officer aviator is an expanding role for women, and you don't have to have any prior skills or experience. The Army gives you all the training you need."

Army Warrant Officers enjoy the same benefits as commissioned officers and will spend their entire career flying helicopters. Their initial salary is $1,467, in addition to a quarters and subsistence allowance each month.

For more information about the WOFT program, call 1-800-USA-ARMY.

Preregistration process leads to extra tuition

"Yes! My name came up first! Come Monday morning I'm going to be doing the dance of CONFIRMED, CONFIRMED, CONFIRMED!"

The ecstasy of nailing every class during your preregistration day is something usually experienced only once (maybe twice if the gods are looking upon you favorably), during a typical student's college career.

With the University of Idaho's current preregistration system, students line up at computer terminals according to their last names. The process for deciding whose last name is chosen for each weekday is a magical process likely chosen by merry elves, or perhaps evil trolls who are found frolicking through the arboretum bearing the infamous list to the Administration Building, where it is lost in the technological whirl of computers.

It doesn't have to be this way.

UI could easily change the system to reflect a student's status — the higher number of credits a student has taken moves him up into the week, with seniors more likely registering on Mondays. Students with less credits would register later in the week, with incoming students registering the following week.

Granted, the current system appears randomly fair, and deals Monday and Tuesday registrations occasionally to almost all students, but that in no way means it's the best way for the students of this university.

For example, what happens when a senior student's name begins with say, "Y," and Mr. Y's day to register is Friday. Mr. Y sweats for four days, hoping against hope the class he needs to graduate won't be filled up and the computer won't say to him in nasty green letters that might as well read, "ACCESS DENIED."

Mr. Y's shoulders sag; in the pit of his bowels he knew this would happen.

But wait! Mr. Y can go see the professor or department head or call his mom and get into the class. All is not lost. There are ways to deal with these kinds of problems.

But pestering a professor is not something a senior should even have to worry about — resumes and classifieds and unpaid loans don't need to fight for attention with a piddling class.

Then take this scenario which also occurs. Mr. Y holds Junior status and this spring semester he decides not to take a class he needs in favor of another. Fall comes. Mr. Y registers on Friday. The class in question is full. Mr. Y swears profusely. Spring comes. Hold up, something's wrong here. The last class Mr. Y needs to graduate is not listed in the time schedule. It's not offered because the professor who normally teaches it is on vacation in a foreign country on a catfishing expedition.

UI gets an extra semester of tuition.

This all could have been avoided had the registering system been set up to reflect credits taken, not last names.

Freshmen have an infinite number of class choices, thereby making it easier to fill up a schedule. The further you move along, the less choices. Hence, more difficulty in finding the classes to fit your particular puzzle. Why not remove the guesswork and try it by credits taken? If nothing else, it would trim administrative work from the person/computer who has the power to decide arbitrary fate.

Perot deserves attitude adjustment

I thoroughly enjoyed watching Al Gore slay Ross Perot on "Larry King Live" the other week.

Now, there are several reasons for this. First, I am an avid fan of Al Gore, and not just because his daughters are fine. I hope Gore succeeds Clinton and becomes the first great Democratic president since Bill Clinton pulled himself out of dismal polls and started leading the people like me who elected him.

Also, being a lukewarm supporter of NAFTA (despite my membership card for the Sierra Club and the Environmental Defense Fund), I liked seeing the pro-NAFTA message triumph.

But most of all, I simply despise Perot. I always have, and I probably always will. I didn't like him when he became the dark horse savior of the 1992 elections, I didn't like his idiotic charges of GOP dirty tricks, and I don't even like him as his organization "United We Stand" becomes "United We Fall."

In all fairness, I can see Perot's appeal. Perot was able to convince a lot of people he was the man to slice through the bull and fix America with a special size of crescent wrench. Bush, Clinton and the gang were seen as entirely too political. What America needed was a warrior to slay the government's red tape and bureaucracy.

Unfortunately, all you Perotistas, it's not that simple. Many Perot supporters claim what we need is a businessman to run the country as a business, and a man with a couple billion dollars and grandfatherly look was just the person. The dream was that what Perot could do for the business world, he could do for our country.

Well, our country is not a business, and unlike Perot's ability to dictate policy to his companies, doing that for the most powerful nation in the world requires a bit more skill. Yes, America is a bureaucracy. It's the nature of the beast. With the government responsible for everything from education to tracking hurricanes, it can't not be a bureaucracy, like it or not. Quite simply, Ross is not qualified to run the state of Idaho, let alone the entire nation.

Throughout his campaign, Perot took an attitude of "do it my way or else." As much as I may hate it sometimes, being president means compromising. It may even mean kissing up to Larry Craig or Jesse Helms. A non-flexible attitude may sound great on a TV talk show, but if Perot is fighting for some major policy,

Women's magazines sell super sex

Women's magazines represent one of the biggest money-making magazine genres in America. Why?

Sex. "No way, women aren't supposed to like sex," you say. "At least not blatantly, that is."

Well they do. If they didn't, there'd be millions of macho stud guys out there looking for something else to brag about. And women's magazines prove it.

Take a look on any cover of Cosmopolitan, Redbook, New Woman or even teen magazines like Ms. and Sassy. Now notice in the two most prominent parts of the cover (top left and top right under the masthead) certain words are continually used. "Sex." is used most often, along with its synonym, "making love." Adjectives usually are copiously applied, as in Super Sex, and Passionate Pleasure.

These "hot-spots," so to speak, often include detailed instruction, as in "How to make love to your man," or "How to achieve sexual ecstasy."

Standing in the UI Bookstore last month, anyone who cared to look saw that four of the five women's magazines on one rack displayed the word "sex" in large letters. 80 percent, that is.

If there isn't an article that recipes how to do sex, there's one about sex. Thirty everyday women share what they like most about sex (you know, the —Janice, 31, Accountant stuff).

And the thing is, these magazines (with the most important elements on the top of the contents stack) sell big time. Redbook has a circulation of about 4 million, Glamour, almost 2.5 million. Men's magazines can't touch those numbers.

Conversely, on the most recent issue of Playboy magazine, the most prominent content shown at the top of the cover is an interview with Rush Limbaugh. Playboy often prominently displays non-sexual material on its covers, showing that sex isn't always the most important element in the sale (though you're always sure it will be there, and don't even try to pretend it won't be.)

"Yeah, but... There's all those naked women who outshine any editorial content the filthy thing might contain," many argue.

So let's talk about content.

On the front page of all those women's magazines is a cover shot of a beautiful woman in a tight dress or some such other fashionably revealing attire. Often there's enough cleavage shown to drive a truck through. (Almost as much flesh as on the

Letters to the Editor

Gun control laws ineffective

Alain Cheever, a "reasonable person," states that Nick Brown has disregarded facts concerning gun control. But I want you to notice this: Mr. Brown provided statistical facts and quotes showing that localized gun control in New York and Washington, D.C. did not reduce crime, was ineffective, and that violent crime and murder did, in fact, increase in those areas at a greater rate than the rest of the nation.

Sarah Brady, the vehement advocate of gun control, would not have protected her husband, and has called the Brady Bill "useless," conceding that it will not have any effect on crime. It is too easy to see that waiting periods did nothing to save L.A. "Crime" isn't just killing.

As for acquaintance murders with a gun being the "weapon of convenience," in how many of these situations was alcohol a factor? Forget the stupid gun. Alcohol is not sold to kill, yet drunk driving claims more lives in one year than were lost during the entire Vietnam War. Abortion — a choice, civil right and weapon of convenience — now claims more than 1.5 million lives every year (that accounts for all of Idaho). Somewhere along the line saving lives ceased to be a political priority. Why?

The Second Amendment has nothing to do with hunting. The Founding Fathers feared a government that was too big — totalitarianism or monarchy — like the government from which they fled. Think for a moment: After enacting a nationwide ban, how would the government collect the guns? People aren't going to give them up because some little man in a big chair says to, so they will become a new class of criminals — who may never have broken a law until, in the stroke of a pen, they are instantly guilty without having a chance to be proven innocent (tossing due process to the pigs). So the government would have to take steps — probably incorporating a new police force to seek and collect; which sounds quite like the KGB, doesn't it? Walking into K-mart is suddenly like entering a Delta concourse; because, you know, big brother is watching. To think that a criminal would carry a gun through a check station is ludicrous. So the people must become reliant on the police (it wasn't the NRA shooting folks in Waco) and thus the government. In the stroke of a pen, a constitutional right becomes a crime. Law-abiding citizens become criminals whose freedom and privacy can be abridged at the convenience of an enhanced FBI. America is then a place where owning a .22 caliber target pistol is a felony, but paying someone to vacuum the brains of a fetus is a right.

So what happens now? Would you protest abortion, in which you pay doctors to kill efficiently? Would you support a movement to ban alcohol? If not, you need to consider why you support a ban on guns, because these two are use to claim 130 times more lives in one year.

Or is saving lives not really the intention?

—Marcus Valentine

Rumors hurt Sheikh election

I was personally appalled at all the mud slinging and malicious rumors about Ms. Amtul Sheikh promulgated by supporters of her opponent, prior to the recent ASUI election.

Although it is too late to rectify the situation, I would like to set the record straight on a statement that I felt was totally uncalled for. I refer to the chalk signs and hand made posters along the sidewalk near the Kibbie Dome parking lot stating "vote American not Arab."

First of all, Ms. Sheikh is of Pakistani decent. She was born in the United States of America, in Moscow, Idaho at that, and has lived in this community ever since.

If this does not constitute an American citizen, what does? Do we all have to be Native American Indians to be recognized as an American? Where would this leave the large majority of us who descend from immigrants?

I suppose that those who were instrumental in the creation of this propaganda believe that McDonald's is Scottish; but, what's in a name!

Alas, dirty politics seem to be the norm of the day, but should this extend to the voting process as well?

Many students including myself were not required to produce ID cards and sign before voting, and many of the graduate students were not even given the undergraduate ballot, barring them from voting in the ASUI election — like they were supposed to be allowed to do.

It seems to me that only a poor candidate would necessitate such unsportsmanlike support to ensure a winning position.

After all, it is only a horse with poor potential that induces backers to resort to foul play.

If attaining the lofty position of ASUI President entails stooping so low, I am glad that Ms. Sheikh did not make it, and that she can still walk with her head held high.

Letters to the Editor

Senator likes ASUI coverage

I would like to thank the staff at the Argonaut for starting an ASUI column.

In my first term as an ASUI senator, I have found it quite difficult to keep the students on the University of Idaho campus informed of ASUI issues. Although there are 13 senators, it is quite a task to represent over 10,000 students!

In the future, I hope we can expand the content of the ASUI Senate column to keep students informed on current bills awaiting introduction for discussion on the senate floor.

This will give our constituents a chance to review the content of the bills and let us know how they feel about issues BEFORE they come to the floor for a vote.

A current ASUI Senate column in the Argonaut greatly assists YOUR senators in keeping YOU informed.

Special thanks goes to Janna Dwelle, the Argonaut staff writer who covers ASUI Senate meetings.

Any student who has questions or comments about the ASUI Senate, please do not hesitate to contact the ASUI Office at 885-6331, or the ASUI Senate Office at 885-6944!

—Steve Stroschein

'Jews,' 'Honkies' for team name?

What is the problem with using terms familiar to Native Americans for team names and mascots? The problem is that it is disrespectful to Native Americans. Would it be acceptable to have a team called "the Honkies," or the "the Jews?" What if more derogatory terms for African-Americans and Asian-Americans were used as team names? Would there not be a public outcry? Society would not find them acceptable, and it would not tolerate their usage. Why is it tolerated to disrespect Native Americans? Don't you think we have had enough?

that attitude would probably land him enemies galore. And as Clinton has found out, when someone like Bob Dole or Richard Gephardt is your enemy, you're likely to drop a few pounds, which I guess has been good for him.

Perot also has an awful case of what I call Chronic Zinser Disorder. That is, he can say a tremendous amount without saying a word. I know that every politician does that to the hilt, but Perot is really bad at it. When journalists ask him to get specific on some of his policy ideas, he sloppily ducks the question by saying he would have to brush up on his facts and get back to them. Real smart, Ross. Then when reporters continue to ask questions and criticize him — basically doing their job — he lashes out and accuses them of some ridiculous plot.

Fortunately, the sun is going down on Perot. Perot did not lose the NAFTA debate because Gore is more handsome or more media-savvy or whatever. He lost because he's not very smart, at least not when it comes to politics.

But I suppose things could get worse. Rush Limbaugh could run for president.

cover of a romance novel, but delving too deeply into the explicitly passionate passages of these books targeted toward women might offend a few readers. Or for that matter, soap operas. Getting increasingly sexually explicit. Who are these shows targeted at?)

The most revealing pictures of women most men ever see on a regular basis is while standing in line to purchase a gallon of milk at the local supermarket. In every magazine rack there's cleavage and legs and the word "sex" spelled out in big letters right next to it. It's the women who buy it.

Inside, nearly every ad has a woman, wait, not just an ordinary woman, a beautiful, long-legged, big-breasted woman selling jeans, perfume, make-up, watches, all with a little tool called sex or sex appeal or sexuality.

In combination with the articles, sometimes about sex, health or fitness, women are often pictured naked. Cosmopolitan ran a breast cancer story a couple years back. The close-up photo showed a woman, arms thrown toward heaven, in a manner that exalted her breasts.

Then the hypocritical shout all men are sex fiends. They gloss over what they bought off the magazine rack (the very same thing their children, male or female may read, or better yet, just look at the pictures).

Within these pages they learn about what is important.

They see it in all its glory, a well muscled man laying next to a woman, her hair seductively spilled out over satin sheets.

Sex.
They read about how to do it, with words whose meanings are sometimes vague, but the idea remains.

Sex.
They see it selling important things designed to make you more important.

Sex.
It's not going away. It never will. As long as the feelings remain as powerful as they are, it's just going to increase. And since it's such a high demand, everybody, men and women, better get used to seeing it, and learn to deal with it. Because all of us are interested in it.

Arkansas mysteries will never be known

Bill Clinton is a liar. Most of America is well aware of this fact, since his presidential campaign saw him promise everything to everyone. But now, he and his wife are giving sleazy politicians a bad name.

For 15 months starting in 1984, Hillary Rodham Clinton was on retainer for Madison Savings and Loan Association, for a fee of $2,000 per month. She represented them in an insolvency hearing before the Arkansas State Securities Commission, whose members were all appointed by her husband, then Governor Bill Clinton.

The S&L eventually failed, at a cost to taxpayers of $50 million. The S&L had been kept alive due in part to a scheme cooked up by Hillary Clinton. She put the S&L into the brokerage business, a strategy approved by the State Securities commissioner, who was the brother of Governor Clinton's campaign manager. During this time, the Clintons were partners with the S&L owner, James McDougal and his wife, Susan, in Whitewater real estate ventures.

Whitewater development made payments on some of Governor

Clinton's personal bank loans, and McDougal's S&L made campaign loans and contributions to Clinton. The Clintons claimed the interest deductions on the loan payments on their tax return, but failed to report them as personal income.

Then in 1986 Susan McDougal, whose joint assets with her husband were in excess of $3 million, received a loan from the Small Business Association that only is given to the economically or socially disadvantaged (maybe just living in Arkansas makes you disadvantaged). Part of the SBA loan was used to buy land for the Clinton-McDougal Whitewater Development project.

David Hale, a former Arkansas judge, owner of the SBA agency that obtained the loan for Susan McDougal was indicted by a federal grand jury for SBA loan fraud. He has offered to testify against Bill Clinton for his role in the SBA loan that was used to bail out the S&L and Whitewater venture.

Deputy White House Counsel Vincent Foster, who committed suicide last July, fixed the Clintons' tax problems in December of 1992. He was a partner in Hillary

The Right Way Valorie Stricklin

Rodham Clinton's law firm, and was involved with Hillary in the Madison S&L, as was current associate attorney general of the United States, Webster Hubbell.

Surprise of all surprises, the Whitewater records now seem to be missing. The Clintons have said their tax trouble was due to their "passive involvement" in the Whitewater venture. Clinton campaign officials also denied Hillary Rodham Clinton had received pay for legal advice in the Madison S&L matter, and said she was not the attorney of record.

Published letters from Hillary Rodham Clinton's law firm to the Arkansas State Securities Commission prove otherwise. One states that further information could be obtained by contacting Hillary Rodham Clinton or Richard Massey of the Rose law firm.

The House Small Business Committee Chairman John LaFalce, (D-New York), has asked for a full report from the SBA and Republican representatives Toby Roth of Wisconsin and Jan Meyers of Kansas have called for a congressional investigation. Texas Democrat Henry Gonzalez, chairman of the House Banking Committee has announced an investigation into the Madison S&L.

Unfortunately, due to the powerful position the Clintons now hold, America may never know the truth about what really went on in Arkansas.

AIDS reaches across the world

AIDS awareness goal of the fifth annual international Day Without Art

Russ Woolsey Lifestyles Editor

Close to 100 people in the United States are dying from AIDS every day. No cures, remedies or drugs have been developed to stop the disease's progress. The only hope right now to stop the disease's rapid course is education.

On Dec. 1, communities and nations all across the world celebrated the fifth annual observance of a Day Without Art, which coincided with the World Health Organization's international World Aids Day.

More than 5,000 cultural institutions and AIDS service organizations participated in last year's Day Without Art. The activities ranged from panel discussions to the distribution of condoms.

This year in Tanzania, where AIDS has taken the greatest toll, they prayed. In France they celebrated the use of condoms. In Washington, D.C. the Clintons symbolically dimmed the White House lights for 15 minutes.

Here on the University of Idaho campus, black paper was used to cover photographs, paintings, sculptures and more. Each blanketed piece of art was then tagged with the Day Without Art logo and messages of AIDS awareness.

Jan Abramson of ASUI Productions said this was the second year the UI participated in World AIDS Day. Abramson said last year the UI was one of the few campuses in the United States that participated in a Day Without Art.

The AIDS service organization responsible for the Day Without Art concept was Visual Aids, a diverse group of artworkers based out of New York City who are concerned with AIDS.

A representative from Visual AIDS said the concept behind a Day Without Art is to promote AIDS awareness with art, an idea everyone can understand.

Here in Moscow many might feel they are secluded from the abrupt threat of the AIDS epidemic, but according to Mary Pluhda, head nurse at the County Health Department North Central District, this is just the type of attitude that promotes the spread of AIDS.

Pluhda said in Latah, Nez Perce, Idaho, and Clearwater counties, there are 18 people confirmed HIV positive and two people who now have AIDS. Since 1986 there have been 29 confirmed cases of HIV and 4 deaths.

She added in the month of October, 1,308 people were tested for the HIV virus in the state of Idaho. Out of those 1,308 people, five tested positive for HIV. Pluhda then said that five is about the average number of new HIV cases in Idaho every month.

People are still dying and people don't catch on. We need someone screaming this everyday.

Tish Ryan,
AIDS awareness advocate whose son died of AIDS.

Pluhda said she works with AIDS every day, not just on World AIDS Day. Though there are no cures she said, "We know how the virus is transmitted, so let's work on that premise."

And that is the premise that Tish Ryan of Moscow has been working with since her son died of AIDS last year. Ryan has worked with Pluhda on AIDS awareness in the Moscow area and most recently worked to promote the play Patchwork, which was about a family faced with a member who contracted AIDS.

Ryan said October was AIDS awareness month and that just one day seems insignificant to her.

She said not a lot has happened since her son died of AIDS, even in the young male homosexual community. "People are still dying and people still don't catch on. We need someone screaming this everyday."

Ryan said she will continue the fight against AIDS everyday of the year.

As of June in the United States there were 315,390 confirmed reports of HIV. Out of those, 88 percent were male and 51 percent were white Caucasians.

For more information about AIDS or to make an appointment for a HIV/AIDS test, contact Student Health Services at 885-6693. All records are kept confidential if tested.

Red Ribbons have become an international AIDS awareness symbol.

Bikers/Walkers surveyed

Karin Kaarik
Contributing Writers

The bicycle is one of the fastest growing forms of travel and one of the most purchased vehicles in the United States.

The University of Idaho recreation experts have started research looking at how much Idahoans bike and walk. "Bicycling is fun," confirms Nick Sanyal, a professor in the department of Resource Recreation and Tourism. Together with Bill McLaughlin, Jonathan Vlaming, Steve Siddoway and John Hunt, he will use a survey of 18,000 Idahoans to determine about how much they walk and bike, and to what level pedestrian travel is replacing motor vehicle travel in the state.

"We are going totally open, unbiased," says Sanyal. The state's recreation and tourism planning agencies need to know why people bike and walk and what they need.

"We'll get a picture of bikers' and walkers' needs," says Sanyal. And of course, they wonder if the state is providing all that keeps bikers and walkers (and their recreation dollars) in Idaho.

"Look at the streets — in Moscow people ride bikes even now in cold, rainy weather. Bicycles fit in with public transportation needs," says Sanyal.

The bikers'/walkers' survey is part of statewide recreation tourism plans. Agencies taking part and supporting the research include the Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation, Idaho Department of Commerce, USDA Forest Service, Idaho Travel Council, Bureau of Land Management, Bureau of Reclamation and the Boise Convention and Visitors Bureau. They are funding a larger series of recreation and tourism studies by these scientists. The Department of Transportation is providing $10,000 for the biking and walking survey, while the other agencies are paying $200,000 for the first part of the research. Until now, the agencies have produced tourism and recreation plans without the aid of such data.

Sanyal stresses the importance of knowing the demand and what resources are available.

"It's basic supply and demand," said Sanyal. "The biking/walking resources available are the supply and the surveys will give us the demand."

The final report of this research is due in March 1995 and will be available for agencies and public use.

Seasonal music plays at WSU

Washington State University will hold its "Concert of Season Music" at the Bryan Hall Auditorium Sunday, Dec. 5, featuring the Orchestra, University Singers, Madrigal Singers, Crimson Company and the Concert Choir.

L. Keating Johnson will direct the WSU Orchestra, beginning with two "Church Sonatas" by W.A. Mozart. These pieces will feature WSU senior and Pullman native Nancy Davis on organ. The orchestra will also feature faculty member Elisa Barston as the violin soloist on Camille Saint-Saens' "Introduction and Rondo Capriccioso." Faculty members Erich Lear and Christopher von Baeyer will join Barston for "Christmas Concerto" by Arcangelo Corelli.

The University Singers, under the direction of Lori Wiest, will present choral music of 20th-century composers and arrangers, beginning with "A La Nanita Nana," a traditional Spanish carol. They will also perform Gustav Holst's "Personent Hodie" and Steven Paulus' "Angels We Have Heard on High."

Wiest will also direct the Madrigal Singers as they perform arrangements by Edwin Fissinger. Arrangements include "When Christ Was Born of Mary Free," "Deck the Halls," and "We Wish You a Merry Christmas."

A Flute Quartet, under the direction of Ann Yasinitsky, will play an arrangement of selections from Tchaikovsky's "Nutcracker Suite."

WSU's well-known Crimson Company, directed by Roger Kelley, will sing traditional carols including "To Us is Born a Little Child" and "Have Yourself a Merry Little Christmas." They will also perform two carols arranged by famous Christmas arranger Alfred Burt, "Carolling" and "We'll Dress This House."

Paul Klemme will direct the Concert Choir in the Afro-American Christmas spirituals "Good News" and "Mary Had a Baby," in addition to the Nigerian carol "Bethlehemu," which features percussion accompaniment.

The concert will conclude with an audience sing-along of favorite Christmas carols. The concert begins at 3 p.m. and is open to the public without charge.

Other seasonal music playing in the area will be the Washington Idaho Symphony Chorale when it plays two performances.

The first of which will be given at Lewiston's Trinity Lutheran Church and on Dec. 6 at 8 p.m. and the second at the University of Idaho University Auditorium on Dec. 7 at 8 p.m.

The Chorale will begin this concert of seasonal music with two Spanish carols entitled "Riu, Riu, Chiu" and "A La Nanita Nana" accompanied by guitarists.

Joining the chorale for this year's concert will be the Moscow School District Women's Choir under the direction of Melissa Kleinert.

'Misanthrope' plays Hollywood

Tim Schreiner
Staff Writer

Neil Bartlett's revision of the play The Misanthrope is a beautiful contemporary set in the realm of tacky Hollywood-style pretense.

Originally written in 1666 by Moliere, the timely UI production brings to the present the pitfalls of honesty in the presence of fallible human nature. The Misanthrope (one who hates mankind) is frustrated by the inability of people to apply kind reason when love and emotion are at stake, and chastises himself for failing as well.

Alceste, as played by Don Horton, is tired of the "social morass that cannot distinguish the courteous from the crass." He is cynical about all humankind as social graces lead to polite pretense, prostituted acceptance and backstabbing. Horton said he likes Alceste's character "because he's honest, but in some ways the guiltiest of all."

The Misanthrope is set in the Hollywood home of Celimene, a rich young "available" actress. She is hosting a party full of actors, designers, agents and screen writers. Celimene, played by Anne Jensen, charmingly holds the attention of her suitors, but is heartless and hypocritical behind their backs.

Theatre Review

Alceste is incessantly frustrated by his need for Celimene's love as she powerfully criticizes him for his honesty. Throughout the play the audience is drawn to each single player, in need of redemption from human failure, but endlessly led to accept that each person is guilty of these "human" habits. There is no true antagonist or protagonist. The audience must accept the real need to find those qualities, both good and bad, peculiar to each person.

Charles Ney, the director of the play, said he chose this version because it is more applicable to the audience's own everyday lives.

"Our world is more centered around TV, media and film with all the glamour and phoniness," he said. "I think we all know some of these types and see it in ourselves."

The comedy finds its tragic foundation when it is realized that "everything runs smoothly oiled by self-interest." Honesty and morality lead to exile, self-indulgence leads to self-deceit. Celimene, in the end, is exposed by her "friend," Arsinoe, artfully played by Kelsey Hartman.

As noted by Acaste, one of Celimene's suitors as played by Eric Jacobsen, "the fan awaits the

Windham Hill at LCSC

The Modern Mandolin Quartet will appear in concert this evening as the third performance in the Artists Series Innovation season. The 8:00 p.m. concert at Lewiston High School Auditorium will feature seasonal and holiday music as well as the group's innovative arrangements of their traditional repertoire.

Modern Mandolin Quartet features the entire mandolin family of instruments in works never before attempted by such an ensemble. Members of the quartet bring a varied background of jazz, folk, and contemporary music to their inventive arrangement of music originally written for piano, guitar and orchestra. Members include founder Mike Marshall, a virtuoso on the guitar, violin and the mandolin. He composes and arranges many of the quartet's music. Although Marshall grew up with bluegrass as a whiz kid picker from Florida, he eventually branched out into jazz and classical and began transcribing works that weren't written for the instrument.

Dana Rath of San Francisco has studied extensively with mandolin virtuosos and plays second mandolin in most of the groups' arrangements. Paul Binkley has created some of the quartet's most exciting and intriguing arrangements from chamber pieces to orchestral music. He has performed as a soloist with the San Francisco Symphony, Opera, and Ballet. John Imholz anchors the low register of the Quartet with the mandocello, instrument with exceptional range and distinctive tone.

In addition to the evening concert, the Quartet will appear in a school concert for 1,000 fifth-grade students from the Valley. Students from Lewiston and Clarkston public and private schools will be joined by Lapwai, Asotin and Tammany students for the 10:00 a.m. concert. "The concerts for students are among the most exciting

Previews best part of 'My Life'

Jenifer Kooiman
Copy Editor

The teasers for Joel Rubin's My Life promised another great tear-jerker "from the maker of Ghost." Too bad the movie wasn't as good as the previews.

If you saw My Life and enjoyed it, maybe you'd better stop reading, as I plan to ruin it for you. I cry at movies occasionally, and expected to cry at this one. But while everyone around me was crying and sniffing, I sat dry-eyed, wondering when the big climax of this cheesy flick would arrive.

When I first left the theater, I wasn't disappointed. Sure, this is no Oscar-winner, and I'm certainly not going to buy the video, but it was OK. But the more I think about it, (maybe that's part of the problem), the less I liked it. My Life is a movie with only one thing going for it — Michael Keaton.

This movie was, in one word, predictable. Keaton plays Bob Jones, a rich Los Angeles PR schmoozer, and Nicole Kidman is his perfect-beyond-belief wife Gail. (I was having a little trouble with that — the image of Kidman in Malice whispering "Take me upstairs and f--- me" just doesn't match with this.) Bob is dying of cancer, and Gail is pregnant with their first child. Can you guess what's going to happen? Even the music was predictable. The score by John Barry sounds exactly like his scores for Indecent Proposal and Out of Africa.

Bob decides to make a videotape of himself for his unborn child, just in case he dies before the birth. In these tapes, Bob teaches his child to do everything from shaving to blocking out a basketball opponent. These little interludes are occasionally comic, showing Keaton at his best.

The other big subplot is Bob's bad relationship with his parents, who resent the fact that he changed his name from Ivanovich to Jones and moved away from Detroit. We see flashbacks of Bob as a child, doing the normal I-hate-you-Mom-and-Dad stuff.

Gail finally drags Bob to a Chinese healer who had healed one of her friends' fathers. Bob lays on a table in a stark room, listening to this healer say things like, "You

THEATRE

Philinte and Eliante, find that their love is based upon an equal trust. But it is sadly out of character amongst the overpowering troupe of dark emotion.

Jensen, a sophomore at the UI, said she enjoys playing Celimene but happily doesn't relate the character to her personal life.

Jensen also played Sally in A Lie of the Mind. She added that, "the verse didn't spark my attention at first, but in rehearsal and after a week of practicing the [French alexandrine] verse, I knew it would be fun."

The entire UI cast presents a valid angle to this timeless theme. The modern script is a well-done classic in its own right. Each player seemed honestly relaxed while unraveling the dramatic choreography, gestures and rhythmic verse.

Just as well, the stage layout visually represents the beautiful tackiness of the script. Created by Stephanie Miller, the pretentious Hollywood patio comes complete with a balcony, outdoor bar and working spa, evidence of a Hollywood-style success story.

Other players include Oronte, played by Ben Tollefson, who markedly typifies the up-and-coming star whose total existence is based upon material worth, without need for an inkling of true introspection. Also, Clitandre, played by V. Spencer Page, is able to pull truth out of confusion, but only to a negative end. Philinte is played by Andy Wyke and Eliante by Mary Finkelnburg.

According to the program, The Misanthrope troubles many with "the dark undertones and sour ending that is decidedly not farce nor hardly comic in the traditional sense of those terms." Due to its powerful insight into human nature, The Misanthrope leaves the audience with a numb feeling that these tendencies aren't so good, but cannot be helped. But, this strange mix of comedy and tragedy makes it an entertaining show for all.

The Misanthrope will continue to play through Dec. 5. Show time is at 8 p.m. with a 2 p.m. matinee on Sunday. Tickets are available at Ticket Express in the SUB. They cost $5 for UI students, $7 for senior citizens and $8 for adults. For more information, call Ticket Express at 885-7212.

manner. I half-expected him to break out and say, "Ohhhh ... a chicken make a lousy house pet." This magical oriental healing bit is built up to be way more than it turns out to be.

I must admit, Keaton was great — this is one of the most serious roles I've seen him in — but Kidman plays her character with emptiness. I'm trying to save you money, because I don't want to see you pay for what is basically an extended preview. Does Bob die? Does Bob reconcile with his parents? Does Gail give birth to a three-headed baby? I'm not going to ruin everything for you — but I wouldn't pay five bucks to find out the answers to these burning questions.

"The excitement of the students, many of whom are enjoying their first live performance in a concert setting, is contagious. The students know they are seeing something special and the performers also catch that enthusiasm." The appearance by Modern Mandolin Quartet is the second concert for students presented by the Artists Series in the Innovation season.

Tickets are $10.50 for adults and $7.50 for students and senior citizens. ## Snow in the mountains means skis on feet

Ski shops in Moscow offer wide variety of equipment for advanced to beginner

Russ Woolsey
Lifestyles Editor

Christmas is coming and the snow is starting to fly — two great reasons to be looking for new ski equipment.

Cross-country, telemarking and alpine skis and of course, snowboards, can be found at various shops around Moscow.

Gart Brothers, located at 121 5th Street, has the largest selection of downhill ski equipment in Moscow.

Rob Calkins of Gart Brothers said if skis, boots, poles, and binding are bought in a package then a discount somewhere in the neighborhood of 20 percent will be received.

Gart's carries several different lines of downhill skis including Rossignol, K2, Pre, Dynastar and Elan.

Prices for skis range from $359.99 for the all-terrain, all-around K2 5500 to the top of the line Dynastar Assault Verticals for $429.99 or the Rossignol 7XK for $449.00.

Gart's also carries a several snowboards including Sims and Kemper. They have touring and back country skis by Karhu and telemarking skis by Fisher.

One of Gart Brothers' competitors is Northwest Mountain

Sports, located at 1016 Pullman Road in Moscow and Gart's may not be able to match what Bruce Hoff said they have to offer, "service."

Northwest has a large line of skis including Salomon, Vilante and K2. When buying skis boots, poles, and bindings at Northwest Hoff said the buyer will receive a discount between 15 and 20 percent.

The price for a pair of K2 5500 at Northwest is $339.95 and for a pair of the Salomon Force 9 skis $525.

Northwest also boasts a free hot waxing with every purchase and rentals of all on hand equipment.

At Follet's Mountain Sports at 428 West 3rd Street a skier won't find a large selection of skis but will find a large selection of snowboards including the brands Laurak and Burton.

John Rauch of Follet's said this time of the year they are selling a lot of snowboards but not a lot of skis. He said many people like to demo the skis and wait further into the year to purchase them.

Follet's carries Salomon and Olin skis. A pair of Salomon Force 9 skis at Follet's go for $595 and a pair of Rossignol 4SZ skis go for $449.99.

New snowfall sets off chain reaction of resort openings

Russ Woolsey
Lifestyles Editor

Most ski areas in the Northwest have been blessed with several inches of new snow in the last several days. The national weather service is predicting more snow today through Saturday.

Most of the resorts in Idaho should have partial to full operations by Saturday. Schweizer, Silver Mountain, Ski Bluewood, Brundage, Bogus Basin and Sun Valley will all have lifts running and skiers on their mountains this weekend. For updated ski conditions contact one of the following numbers or contact the ASUI outdoor Program located in the basement of the SUB.

Ski Bluewood at (509)382-2877; Brundage at 634-5650; Silver Mountain at 783-1111; Schweizer at 263-9562; Bogus Basin at 342-2100; and SunValley 622-2095.

Blackpowder hunting

Idaho's rugged Bitterroots didn't exactly roll out the red carpet for a hungry Lewis and Clark party traveling West. In fact, the intrepid explorers found the long, heavily forested ridge dividing the Lochsa and North Fork of the Clearwater to be the most toilsome stretch of their journey, particularly in regard to securing fresh meat.

No, the party didn't starve, but scarcity of game forced the party to eat several horses and dig into their portable soup — the 19th century's version of freeze-dried food the men detested. Save a few measly grouse, the party didn't taste fresh meat during this harrowing leg of the journey. The only chance to bring down big game with their muzzleloading rifles came when one of the hunters missed a running bear and another's rifle failed when a single mule deer wandered by.

Fortunately, the party found game around the area of Kamiah and were able to continue their journey down the Clearwater and eventually to the Pacific.

Today, where Lewis and Clark left the miserable, gameless Bitterroots and descended into the bountiful Clearwater valley, modern hunters tread in footsteps of early explorers, stepping back centuries of time as they carry replicas of the blackpowder rifles that opened the West.

But unlike the first explorers,

Outdoors with . . .

a missed shot or wet powder doesn't relegate a hunting party to a horse steak dinner. Still, the challenge and adventure of blackpowder hunting has drawn record numbers of the frontstuffers into the woods this season — and for good reason.

First, thousands of hunters and target shooters are discovering that muzzleloaders are fun to shoot. There's something immensely satisfying about carefully measuring your own blackpowder, cutting a patch, seating the historic roundball over the powder just right — and then sending the whole mess flying through a billowing cloud of smoke. So satisfying that nationwide, muzzleloader hunting and target shooting is enjoying a popularity surge that may soon rival the growth of archery.

And while Blackpowder is a load of fun to shoot, it also offers a chance to pursue big game in a "primitive" fashion, using many of the same materials and methods the pioneers used. A long shot for most hunters is 100 yards, with 50 yards or less being preferred. Blackpowder offers those who shy away from hunting with a 'scoped rifle and want to "give the animals more of a chance" a perfect opportunity to enjoy the challenge of their philosophy.

In Idaho, and a few other states that have not yet opted for a "choose your weapon," those who own a charcoal burner also enjoy longer hunting seasons, less crowded hunting conditions, and a chance for "special" season opportunities such as hunting during the rut.

Of course there are a few romantics around who try and copy the mountain men and explorers to the letter. From their possibles bag to their fringed buckskin jackets and flintlocks, the traditionalists strive to recreate the days when a good dinner depended on dry powder and hunting skill.

To a lesser degree, all blackpowder hunters who trail elk in the Clearwater Valley keep our wilder roots and pioneer spirit alive. And when twilight falls, it is still possible to gaze back up that same, long timbered ridge made purple by the distance, and remember a time when dinner didn't come easy.

Mountaineers choke in first round

Dan Eckles
Staff Writer

The Idaho Vandal volleyball team must believe in the ancient saying, "There is a first time for everything."

The Vandals became the first Big Sky Conference member to host an NCAA tournament when they were awarded a first-round home match Sunday by the national selection committee.

Wednesday night the Vandals became the first Big Sky club to win an NCAA national playoff match when they drilled Southern Conference champion Appalachian State 15-5, 15-8, and 15-2.

The trek to Columbus, Ohio is next up on the agenda for Idaho as the Vandals (24-5) face the Big Ten runner-up Ohio State Buckeyes (23-5) Sunday at 11 a.m. PST. A win Sunday would vault Idaho into the Northwest Regional tournament Dec. 9-12 at a site yet to be determined.

"The win was very satisfying, but I think we need to look ahead. Our theme is not just happy to be here," Vandals coach Tom Hilbert said.

The 3,000 mile pilgrimage from Boone, N.C. turned out to be all for naught for Appalachian State as the Vandals proved to be too much for the Mountaineers.

Idaho turned in a school record .506 hitting performance compared to ASU's -.012. On this milestone evening a school record 1,010 frenzied Memorial Gym fans watched the mismatch, which took only 57 minutes to complete.

"We are not only more experienced and more athletic, but we are more mature. Things turned out like they probably should have," Hilbert said.

With the Vandals leading 9-5 in game one, Idaho's Brittany Van Haverbeke served six straight points to finish off the game.

ASU took advantage of some sloppy play by Idaho, ranked 5th in the final Northwest Region poll, to take an early 5-0 lead.

Idaho scored the next four points to get back to within one, but the Mountaineers put together a trio of points to grab a 7-4 advantage.

Idaho's Nancy Wicks, who was named the Big Sky's MVP for the second straight year on Tuesday, then stepped up to the service line and reeled off eight consecutive points putting UI up 12-7 and ahead for good.

With the score tied at one in game three, UI went on to score 14 of the next 15 points and send the Mountaineers back to the east coast.

Ken Cox seeks another national championship

Katé Lyons-Holestine
Sports Editor

His career at Idaho has been up and down. He was named a starter and then lost his position. He then earned his starting position at weak-side guard again during 1993 spring practice.

Ken Cox has answered the knock of opportunity for the second time.

Cox transferred to the University of Idaho from Riverside Community College in Riverside, Calif. There he held a starting position on the offensive line for two years. His team qualified for post-season action and claimed the 1990 Junior College National Championship title.

"I still get that feeling because I've won a national championship," Cox said. "We're almost there again and I'm going to get another chance at it. My coach previously said, 'You'll never get a chance like this again in your life' and here it is staring me in the face again."

Emotions are running high on the Idaho football team. They have conquered the goal of a first round victory and are moving in for the kill and a second round victory Saturday.

"It's an unbelievable feeling. I have another opportunity, I have to go for it," Cox said.

The Vandals are lucky enough to host this round on their home field, the Kibbie Dome.

and rougher than high school, but it isn't just like university level football.

"A JC does somewhat prepare you, rather than coming out of high school straight to college. But, JC does have that pace still of high performance, real fast movement and action," he added.

Cox seems to have adjusted to Idaho's game. Cox, along with teammates Jody Schnug, Mat Groshong, Jim Mills, Kyle Gary, David Griffin and head coach John L. Smith, is taking this post-season play one game at a time.

Boston University's defensive line is a bit smaller than Idaho's offensive line. This may give Idaho an advantage, but no team is worth looking past.

"Looking at them (defense) I think we can play above their level," Cox said. "I wouldn't say that being bigger than them gives us the upper edge. We've got to come to play as well as they do."

"We can score on anyone," Vandal center Groshong said.

Schnug and Mills agreed the Vandals just have to play their game.

The lowest output Idaho's offense has produced was against Utah, when the scored a respectable 28 points and recorded a victory.

The Vandals are hoping for a record crowd Saturday as it may be the final time this team performs in the Kibbie Dome.

Harriman not professional journalist

It's a sad fact of life that women's sports aren't given the consideration men's sports are.

The most inconsiderate interview I have witnessed is the one I beheld Sunday at the University of Idaho women's basketball game.

The Moscow/Pullman Daily News assigned the game to sports reporter Peter Harriman. After a very experienced Gonzaga team downed the Lady Vandals 88-62, head coach Laurie Turner came up to meet the press.

I was the first reporter to approach Turner and ask a few questions. While in the midst of answering one of these we were abruptly interrupted by Harriman who said, "Well, you got your a— kicked but ..."

That was enough for me.

He and I were the only two reporters standing there. I would prefer not to be considered Harriman's peer due to his tactics and apparent purpose. I would prefer to be considered polite and even professional in my appearance and attitude, not just another reporter like the one standing next to me.

He was rude, let alone unprofessional.

Turner seemed to brush the

Offense key to men's victory

Vandal offense improves but turnovers still abundant

Katé Lyons-Holestine
Sports Editor

Picking up the offense was the key to Vandal victory on the basketball court in the Kibbie Dome Monday night.

"The thing was to get better and we did," Vandal head coach Joe Cravens said.

As the University of Idaho cruised to a 81-54 victory over the Montana Tech Orediggers, they managed to miss a few of the speed bumps they've encountered early this season along the way.

The Vandal offense has improved, but one factor that kept haunting the Vandals was turnovers. Idaho committed 14 first-half turnovers. But the offense kicked into high gear in the second half and held onto the ball. Idaho committed only six turnovers during their second half scoring spree.

The Vandals' offense controlled the ball in the second half. They overlooked the quick, rushed jump shot and worked for the "great shot," Mark Leslie said.

Orlando Lightfoot, a forward, led the Vandals with 25 points, hitting four 3-pointers. It seemed Montana Tech couldn't stop Idaho's lead player.

"If they wanted to get Lightfoot the ball every time, they could," Montana Tech coach Rick Dressing said. "I think they knew that. We didn't have anybody to stop him."

"What we are teaching Orlando is going to make him a better player," Cravens said. "His whole concept of offense before this was, 'Go out, grab it and shoot it in.'"

Idaho held a 34-24 advantage at halftime, and ran away with the lead in the second half.

According to Cravens, Monday's second half could be the best basketball he's seen this season.

Idaho pushed the Orediggers to the point of fatigue in the second half, and after that the game belonged to the Vandals.

"Our whole game plan is based on wearing a team down," Leslie said.

"When they wear down we're still at the same level," he added.

Leslie and freshman Nate Gardner pitched in 11 points each for Idaho. Kelly Walker added 10.

Idaho out-rebounded Montana Tech 52-20. This strong performance was missing from Idaho's incident off, so I did. The question was directed toward her and she should have taken offense to it before I did, so I let it slide.

The second time he repeated the same phrase I was appalled. It was not only unprofessional, it was unnecessary.

After my stint as a college athlete and a year coaching high school, I understand how it feels to lose a game. A would-be professional rubbing salt into the fresh wounds of a coach who recently suffered a loss isn't comforting or considerate.

Harriman has been working for the Moscow/Pullman Daily News for eons. Maybe this gives him a relaxed attitude about the people he works with and for. It shouldn't.

Longevity in a position doesn't give someone a right or the opportunity to treat someone with less respect than they would otherwise be treated.

Harriman should rethink his personal image, if not for his sake for everyone else's comfort.

Nussmeier's unselfishness key to continued success

The 1993 Vandal football team is looking to conquer yet another niche of the I-AA playoff mountain.

The first triumph came at the hands of Northeast Louisiana last Saturday. The conditions were hostile both weather-wise and team-wise. The Vandals, however, historically thrive in threatening environments.

Monroe, La. was definitely dissimilar to the grandma-friendly Kibbie Dome. The field was outside and featured the uncomfortable combination of humidity and cold temperatures. Evidently, Idaho wasn't fazed as they escaped with a 34-31 victory.

Excluding the weather, many people do not realize some of the obstacles the Vandals overcame. First, Northeast Louisiana was ranked fourth in the I-AA polls. Secondly, their team includes five National Football League prospects. Third, this is their final year in the playoffs for they possess both the size and talent to move up to Division I next season.

Head Coach John L. Smith joked that they were an NFL team disguised in college uniforms.

They did, nevertheless, have more than enough mental errors. But the mark of a championship team is to bounce right back from setbacks and continue driving toward one goal: winning.

The most obvious example occurred between wide receiver Kyle Gary and Doug Nussmeier. On first down at the UI 23-yard line, Nussmeier went back to pass. Gary was alone at the 50 and dropped a sure touchdown. Two plays later, Nussmeier went right back to Gary for a 64-yard touchdown.

Defensively, the Vandals may

Fourth Quarter

have faced the best offense they have seen so far this year.

Northeast Louisiana was averaging nearly 40 points per game. Idaho, nonetheless, halted two key drives with a fumble recovery and an interception in the end zone by Miregi Huma.

With the win, the Vandals were awarded a home game versus Boston University. The Terriers are ranked sixth and, with Troy State, boast the only undefeated records in

I-AA.

BU has emerged from obscurity this season. Last year, they began the season with a not-so-good 0-6 mark, finishing with their eighth consecutive losing season. 1993 has been their best year in about, oh, 109 years. One-hundred and nine years!?

The key differences have been effectively using a notorious Clinton philosophy: change. They changed quarterbacks, as Greg Moore was replaced by Robert Dougherty, a 5-foot-9, 172-pounder who has drawn comparisons with ex-NFL passer Doug Flutie. In an early November issue of Sports Illustrated, Dougherty responded, "It's flattering, but I don't know how true it is. I play the way I always have, and if it's like Doug Flutie, then so be it."

The Terriers will have to contend with a team on a mission. Idaho's "Mission Very Possible" outlook has been fueled by the competitiveness of Nussmeier.

Nussmeier is considered to be one of the top two college quarterbacks in the country, along with Florida State's Charlie Ward. With his unselfishness, I seriously doubt he gives a flying ferret.

Nussmeier and the Vandals really have only one thing on their minds -- establish themselves as the first football champions at Idaho.

NCAA

The Vandals, who committed only four hitting errors all night, were perfect in game three, posting 15 kills without a hitting miscue.

"All the factors considered, Idaho is probably the best team we faced all year," Mountaineers coach Dave Markland said.

Mindy Rice, who propelled Idaho to the BSC tournament crown last weekend with her tourney MVP performance, was the star again Wednesday night. She hammered in 14 kills against only one error in 20 attempts. Wicks pummeled seven kills in nine attempts without an error.

Everybody got off the Idaho bench to see court time and reserves Louisa Kawulok, Heather Cross-Schroeder, and Tzvetelina Yanchulova combined for eight kills in the final game.

Dear Students,

I would like to thank the University of Idaho students for your loyalty and support during the 1993 football season.

Your attendance and enthusiasm gives Idaho one of the best home field advantages in the Big Sky Conference. It is now time to show the rest of America what the University of Idaho students can do.

Your attendance at Saturday's game against Boston University will help us in two ways. First of all, you will assist the team in winning the game. Secondly, a large crowd will help us in our pursuit of a third round game.

Please keep in mind that Saturday's game is an NCAA event and you will be charged $5.00 for admission.

The coaches and players would like to thank the Vandal students for their help. Your Vandal pride is second to none!

Go Vandals!

Sincerely,

John L. Smith
Head Football Coach
