Research takes back seat to teaching

Darin Crisp
Staff Writer

The age-old tradition of "publish or perish" may soon be out: teach and flourish may be in, with a vote last Tuesday by the full faculty to approve a plan to allow professors who excel at teaching to use their skill in lieu of other research.

In a story reported by the Moscow-Pullman Daily News, the full faculty narrowly approved the amendment, sponsored by mathematics professor William Voxman, by a vote of 105-97. University of Idaho President Elisabeth Zinser was quoted as saying she would not veto the amendment, but would require a full explanation to be included if the amendment is implemented.

Dr. Philip Deutchman, professor of physics, was in support of the amendment when contacted Thursday evening. According to him, the amendment "opens the door to fuller scholarship." It allows those who wish, the opportunity to study the world of ideas.

"I'm in favor of it," he said. Voxman, in an interview Thursday evening, said the amendment was not in any way an attempt to weaken the research tradition at the UI. Rather, he said, it was an attempt to effectively have both research and teaching at the university.

Voxman's amendment called for change in the current tenure requirement, where research published in a refereed journal is the only scholarship recognized for tenure. His change allowed people whose scholarship is demonstrated in the classroom to receive credit for that contribution, and allowed them to receive equal rewards.

The Daily News had an error in its story, Voxman said. The instructor does not have the choice to achieve tenure by teaching or by research. It's actually up to the department to strategically locate their effective researchers and teachers under differing criteria, so those who excel at either can be recognized for it.

The amendment does not change the safety net provided to professors whose ideas don't match those of established powers. Rather, he said, it helps ensure that those who teach best stay on to instruct further generations of students.

Dr. Roy Atwood, School of Communication, said he, too, was for the amendment.

It would, according to him, recognize the university is made up of a variety of disciplines, with different expectations, and a variety of means of reporting their work. There did appear to be a clear division, he said, down the line between the physical sciences/engineering disciplines, and the social sciences/art disciplines.

"We're not trying to force them into our image," he said, but added that the so-called "hard" sciences are attempting to force the softer disciplines into their mold.

At the time of this writing, no one who voted against the amendment was available for comment.

Rock, Sheikh, senators bid fond farewell

Katé Lyons-Holestine
Sports Editor

After three-and-one-half years in office, Amtul Sheikh moved to adjourn her final meeting as an ASUI Senator.

She thanked her family and friends in the Senate for making her term enjoyable and fruitful. President Richard Rock mentioned her in his final statement to the Senate. He noted his admiration of time and commitment shown to the ASUI and her projects and undertakings there. Other senators expressed the same sentiments.

After the meeting new senators were sworn in, along with the new ASUI President and Vice President. Richard Rock stepped down to John Marble and Derrick Brown handed the gavel to Allison Lindholm.

Rock thanked the student body in general for trusting him with the position.

Sean Wilson referred to Rock as the man with the big shadow and said, "Thank you and I think you're the ideal model of what an ASUI President should be."

The Senate's business of the evening began at 6 p.m. in a pre-meeting. They discussed the bills to be addressed during the regular meeting.

A bill was introduced to change the title of the Assistant to the President to Chief of Staff. The person who is appointed to the position would act as an assistant to the ASUI President.

The name change was argued for to bring more professionalism to the position.

"All we've done is change the name and give them the duties of running the cabinet meetings," Rock said.

Many Senators agreed with the bill, but many others disagreed.

Sen. Rob Blinzler disagreed with the bill, stating it seemed to be "tailored for Derrick Brown."

After about 30 minutes of discussion, Sen. Mike Smith suggested the bill be delayed and brought up at the next ASUI Senate meeting to see if the position was actually necessary. Rock didn't appoint an assistant during his term.

The Chief of Staff will be paid $30 per pay period and will replace the assistant position in the budget. This bill was sent back to committee.

At the present time only one position is open to the student at large to apply for, the Attorney General position. This position must be advertised before it is filled.

"But, that should be changed here shortly," Rock said.

The Senate also entertained a bill that would give all ASUI members the opportunity to write a bill. This bill must be introduced to the Senate by a sponsoring Senate member.

"I talked to my living groups and they liked it," Senator Kristin Bennett said. "It gives more people a chance to be directly involved."

Gold parking lots, meters still patrolled

Enforcement of meter violations and permit requirements for gold parking lots and illegal parking violations in all lots will continue as normal during the holiday break. Due to the light usage, however, Parking and Information Services is suspending the requirements for permits in red and blue lots. This will be in effect from 5 p.m. Dec. 17 until 7:30 a.m. Jan. 10.

Book swap set for finals week in SUB

Since its introduction during the spring semester of 1993, the University of Idaho Book Swap has been working to get off the ground. Next week, UI students can take full advantage of the program and put it on the road to success.

During finals week, students may drop books at the Student Union Building information desk and list the price they would like to sell them for. From Jan. 9 - 11, the books are sold to new students with the profits going to the former owner.

"This is a resource that is dependent upon students' participation," said Sean Wilson, ASUI Senator and Book Swap organizer. "It is only as big as the participants make it."

According to book swap recruiters, book swaps have been successful on other college campuses, including North Idaho College and Utah State.

For more information about the Book swap, call 885-6944.

Deerfield offers opportunity to study early American history, material culture

This spring, six college undergraduates from across the nation will be chosen to attend the Historic Deerfield Fellowship Program in Early American History and Material Culture.

For the 39th year, a select group of students will live in Deerfield, Mass. from mid-June to mid-August while participating in an intensive examination of early American history, architecture, decorative arts, museum interpretation and museum operation.

Kenneth Hafertepe, director of Academic Programs at Historic Deerfield, will direct the 1994 program. He will share teaching responsibilities with visiting lecturers as well as the curators and other professional museum staff of Historic Deerfield Inc., a museum of New England history and art.

Historic Deerfield preserves and interprets 13 historic houses which date from the 18th and early 19th centuries. Inside are important collections of furniture, silver, ceramics, textiles, paintings and prints which are used to teach the history of everyday life in Deerfield as well as the history as American decorative arts.

Fellows will also make field trips to other museums, including Old Sturbridge Village, Plymouth Plantation, Colonial Williamsburg and the Winterthur Museum, where they will meet with museum staff members for in-depth discussions of their interpretive philosophies. They will also undertake a research project utilizing the rich museum and library collections of Historic Deerfield.

Each applicant appointed to the program is awarded a fellowship which covers tuition, books and visits to other museums. The fee for room and board for nine weeks is $1,750. Financial aid for room and board is available for students with demonstrated need. Applicants to the program must be undergraduate students of sophomore, junior or senior standing in a college or university as of Jan. 1, 1994. Completed applications will be reviewed after April 1, 1994.

Participants in the Summer Fellowship Program during the last 38 years have come from over 100 colleges and universities across the country. Undergraduate majors have included anthropology, art history, history, literature, folklore and American studies. Many Fellows have subsequently pursued graduate study, attending the Winterthur Program in Early American Civilization, the Cooperstown Program in History Museum Studies and graduate programs in history and art history. Former Deerfield Fellows now hold positions at such institutions as the Bayou Bend Collection, the Museum of Fine Arts, Houston; the College of William and Mary, Historic Hudson Valley, Monticello, the Pierpont Morgan Library and the Wadsworth Atheneum.

Deerfield Village, now over 300 years old, was the site of Native Americans for centuries before the arrival of English settlers in the 1660s. For 50 years, Deerfield was situated in a no-man's land between British and French colonies and amidst dispossessed Native

Anderson, Sheikh win scholarships

Paying next semester's education fees will be a bit easier for two University of Idaho students.

After an extensive search by the ASUI Academics Board, Amy Anderson and Amtul-Mannan Sheikh have been announced as the recipients of the George R. Dafoe Memorial scholarship.

"Both Amy and Amtul exhibited outstanding service records on campus as well as remarkable leadership qualities," said Academics Board Chair Kelly Stephens.

"These traits are fundamental in receiving the Dafoe scholarship and Amy and Amtul certainly fit the bill," Stephens said.

The $1,000 leadership endowment scholarship is named for George Dafoe, the Student Union Building business manager during the 1980s. After his recent death, UI students established a memorial scholarship recognizing his accomplishments on campus.

"I knew George Dafoe when he worked in the SUB," said Anderson, a former ASUI president.

"His door was always open for students," she said. "I feel especially honored in receiving this scholarship" "I am thrilled to receive this scholarship," said Sheikh. "It feels wonderful to be recognized by your peers."

Sheikh has been involved in a number of campus activities, including three years on the ASUI Senate.

Woman justice speaks to grads

Linda Copple Trout, the first woman justice on the Idaho Supreme Court, will be speaking at the College of Letters and Science December Graduation Reception Dec. 16 at 7 p.m. in the University Auditorium.

Trout received a B.A. in English in 1973 and a Juris Doctorate degree in 1977 from the UI.

Refreshments will be served and anyone who is interested is encouraged to attend.

Coghlan heads top stories of semester

Tim Helmke
Staff Writer

Now that the 1993 fall semester here at the University of Idaho is about to come to an end, here is a review of the top stories that came our way since August.

• Regena Coghlan, a 19-year-old pledge at Alpha Phi sorority, fell from a third-floor fire escape and was paralyzed. Coghlan had allegedly been to parties at Sigma Alpha Epsilon and Beta Theta Pi where she was allegedly served alcohol. These two fraternities were then placed on probation from the UI Interfraternity Council. Coghlan is recovering at her home in Spokane, Wash., and may plan to file suits against the two fraternities, Alpha Phi and UI. Coghlan will be represented by Gerry Spence and John Etter.

• The Idaho State Board of Education took steps to curb the alcohol abuse on state-run campuses. Board Secretary Joe Parkinson proposed an alcohol ban but it was rejected for a policy which encourages student involvement in decision making. A student candlelight march was held in September to show the state board that this was the best solution. The board adopted a policy in November which restricts drinking to private rooms for those of age and prohibits all public consumption.

• The Student Union Building name came under fire and was attempted to be switched to Idaho Union. New Union Director David Mucci and Union Board Chair Robyn Gentry worked to get the name changed and finally succeeded in late November. The Union board made the decision to change it and was overturned by former ASUI President Richard Rock. The board has the right to change the name, though, and so the SUB is now Idaho Union — The Student Center. Along with the new name comes several remodeling ideas. Kentucky Fried Chicken, Taco Bell and Pizza Hut may take over the area currently occupied by the Blue Bucket. The SUB Ballroom will be remodeled into the International Ballroom with national flags hung to decorate.

• Megan Heber, the former UI student who gave birth to a child in her residence hall room, was sentenced to five years for her part in the child's death. Heber had placed the baby in a plastic bag after giving birth and then put it in the garbage shoot in Theophilous Tower. Heber may be up for parole in just one year.

• The UI Faculty Council added homosexuals to their list of people they cannot discriminate against. Faculty representatives brought out the views of their co-workers and developed a policy which they feel is more acceptable by the staff and faculty.

• ASUI Senator John Marble defeated fellow ASUI Senator Amtul Sheikh in the race for ASUI President for 1994. Marble received 48.7 percent of the vote, outdistancing Sheikh who received 43.9 percent. Allison Lindholm ran unopposed for ASUI Vice President and received 1081 votes. UI students who were elected to the ASUI Senate are: Laura West, Sean Wilson, Jeremy Winter, Brent Merrick, Ian James and Scott Wimer. Richard Rock served out his term and was replaced at the formal inauguration ceremony of Marble on Dec. 8.

• Homecoming 1993 was celebrated the weekend of November 13 with snow making a grand entrance just in time for the parade. Denise Hopkins, member of Gamma Phi Beta, was crowned Homecoming Queen and Mike Smith,

Toys-for-Tots plays Santa

Tim Helmke
Staff Writer

"Oh, you'd better watch out, you'd better not cry, you'd better not pout, I'm telling you why, Santa Claus is coming to town."

For some people across the area, this may not be a reality, but to kids everywhere, Santa Claus is as real as it gets.

Most kids will get up Christmas morning to a stash of goodies left behind by good ol' Saint Nick. But there will be other less fortunate children who may not wake up to new toys and games, and this is where special programs such as Toys for Tots steps in.

The toys that are donated to the local charity of Toys for Tots will stay in the community, which makes it unique in that sense. Organizers emphasize this as part of their toy drive to encourage some people to donate a new toy.

The toys donated in the Toys for Tots drive must be new and can be dropped off at numerous businesses in town. These collection points in Moscow include: Kits Camera and Lamonts, both in the Palouse Empire Mall; Payless Drug in the Moscow Mall; the Registrar's Office and the Navy Building on the University of Idaho campus; K-Mart, Wal-Mart, First Security Bank, West One Bank, Rosauers, Furniture Center, Tidyman's, Hardee's and Tri-State.

The Marine Corps Reserve have operated this program for 46 years and have brightened the lives of over 100 million children.

Toys for Tots began in 1947, when Lieutenant Colonel Hendricks, a Marine Reservist, made a choice to help the children in the Los Angeles area. The community and the nation caught on to the idea and it developed quickly into a charity that helps many people to have a better Christmas.

Anyone interested in donating money rather than a toy to the drive can do so by mailing a check made out to "The Marine Corps Reserve Toys for Tots." These checks can then be mailed to: North Palouse Area Food and Clothing Bank, P.O. Box 372, Garfield, Wash., 99130.

Christmas trees boost environment

Although the timber industry has recently been under fire by environmentalists in northern Idaho, real Christmas trees are an environmental boost, according to a University of Idaho forestry associate.

People who want to be environmentally responsible should not feel guilty about using real, non-plastic Christmas trees, said Yvonne Carree, extension forestry associate at the UI.

"Real trees are a renewable and recyclable resource," she said. "They're beautiful, wonderfully fragrant and also a big plus for the environment."

Growers who plant and care for Christmas trees are helping to purify the air we breathe, Carree pointed out.

"The United States has one million acres of Christmas tree plantations, and the trees growing there provide the daily oxygen requirements for 18 million people. When a tree is cut down, two or three new trees are planted," Carree said.

"This arrangement is environmentally sound because young, vigorously growing trees are more efficient than old trees in absorbing carbon dioxide and producing oxygen," Carree said.

She said live Christmas trees provide habitat for wildlife, improve soil stability, and protect water quality.

When the holidays are over, Christmas trees can be recycled, Carree said. She suggested these uses for ex-Christmas trees:

- Put your Christmas tree in the garden where birds can use it as a winter shelter and a feeding station.

- Remove the branches and grind them up for use as mulch.

- Sink the tree in your pond to provide refuge and feeding areas for fish.

"You can recycle a real tree," Carree said. "Unlike an artificial tree, it contains no non-biodegradable plastics or metal."

As prospective Christmas trees tend to live in asphalt lots since the end of November, Carree also provided some hints for finding a fresh tree.

Gently bend a needle or two of the Christmas tree you are considering buying. If the needle breaks, that tree has failed the freshness test recommended by UI specialists.

"The moisture in fresh trees keeps the needles pliable," said Carree. "Also, the stump of a fresh tree will tend to be sticky with sap other than smooth and dry."

A dry tree will release a shower of needles when it is thumped. Just lift the tree a couple inches off the ground and bring it down abruptly on the stump end.

"A fresh tree will not have an abundance of needles falling off," Carree said.

To keep your Christmas tree in good condition during the holidays, Carree urges you to try these moisture-saving procedures:

- When you get your tree home, make a fresh diagonal cut at the end of the stump. This will aid in the uptake of water.

- Place the tree away from heat sources.

- Make sure there is plenty of water in the tree stand.

Will consumers benefit from using additive products that are supposed to extend the life of Christmas trees?

"Probably the biggest benefit the user receives is being reminded to add water to the tree stand," Carree said.

Residents sculpt in McCall

As the spring semester kicks off to a start, three Moscow residents could be creating ice sculptures in McCall.

Held mid-week during the fabulous McCall Winter Carnival, the Annual Idaho Snow Sculpting Championship brings together artists and snow sculptors from throughout the state of Idaho to compete for three days transforming blocks of snow into works of art.

The sculptures do not compete with Carnival sculptures, but in a separate competition with strict rules: only three people may work on each sculpture; no color, armatures or power tools may be used and the sculptures must be completed within the allotted three-day time period. One snow block measuring 5' by 5' by 9' is provided for each team.

While in McCall, condominium accommodations and all meals are provided for the competitors at no extra cost to them. There are a few parties, also. Past competitors have said being a part of this competition and all of the McCall Carnival proceedings was an outstanding experience.

Previous Championship winners have earned an opportunity to compete nationally and internationally.

An Idaho team has won the National and represented the United States at the 1988 Olympics in Calgary.

Teams from Idaho have competed in Switzerland and Finland and for the past two years in Sapporo, Japan.

The top three sculptures will share in prize money totaling $1,000 and the field is limited to 15 teams.

Last year McCall hosted teams from Sandpoint, Council, Boise, Cascade, Idaho Falls, Kamiah, Donnelly, Bonners Ferry and Kooskia.

Cities are encouraged to send a team of three, aged 18 or older, to McCall for this statewide event.

For further information or to request an application form, call Hal or Jane Sager at (208) 643-2728.

American tribes. In 1704, French soldiers and their Indian allies attacked Deerfield, killing nearly 50 settlers and taking more than 100 hostages to Canada. In times of peace, however, the fertile lands watered by the Deerfield River yielded great harvests of corn.

In the 1870s, as the Indian Wars raged on western plains, memories of their ancestor's own battles against natives inspired the creation of the Pocumtuck Valley Memorial Association and the opening of the Memorial Hall Museum. Historic Deerfield was established in 1952 by Mr. and Mrs. Henry N. Flynt, who sought "to promote the causes of education and appreciation of the rich heritage of the original colonies." The Flynts restored and opened to the public 12 historic house museums, 10 of which stand on their original sites, and assembled a major collection of Early America decorative arts.

Students should request a brochure and application by writing Dr. Kenneth Hafertepe, Director of Academic programs, Historic Deerfield, Inc., Deerfield, MA 01342.

Beer seems important part of Greek holidays

The University of Idaho is a learning institution — or so I thought.

Many freshman at the UI learn to drink cheap beer, regularly pray to the porcelain God, sometimes stay on the road after a couple beers and earn the lowest GPA of their educational career.

This school year has been wrought with accidents, arrests and problems related to alcohol consumption. The boys and girls in living groups and parties held by them have been at the root of many of the problems.

A terrible accident at a sorority which everyone can recall brought about an uproar for alcohol rules on the UI campus. President Elisabeth Zinser chose to not recognize two fraternities involved with incidents leading up to the accident.

The State Board of Education sent a special committee to the UI campus to hear input from students and the community on the subject. They took everything under advisement and made some minor changes to the alcohol policy already in effect.

Since that time, even with the dark cloud hanging over them many students have thwarted the illegality of guzzling a couple brewskies and have partaken of the devil drink anyway.

Recently the Phi Taus sponsored a party, which mimicked the Bovill Run. The Bovill Run is a traditional party night which begins in Moscow and ends in the tiny town of Bovill. On the way to Bovill the travelers visit every bar between here and there. On the way home it is traditional to visit every one of those bars again.

At the Phi Tau house people invited to the party "traveled" from room to room for drinks.

This is a definite twist on the original, but why would they hold a drinking party obviously named for another drinking function, knowing what the penalties of being caught could be?

Things are no better at the other end of the block.

Tuesday, while walking, I swear I saw a Christmas tree adorned with beer cans of all sorts in the window of the Alpha Tau Omega house.

What kind of message does this send? Walking one block up the hill you can see the Beta's Christmas tree. It is decorated with the traditional lights and a gold garland. Maybe they've learned their lesson.

If the Greek system really gave a hoot about the public's perception of them, they would be doing everything possible to improve their image. The Phi Taus would have thrown a get-together with a juice bar, chips and movies. The ATOs might hang traditional red and green bulbs along with silver tinsel on their tree.

Maybe this is all too boring for Greek life. Drinking has been touted as the "cool" thing to do. Peer pressure is the reason behind it. Earlier this semester many people said it was expected they drink at parties.

If they must give in to this kind of peer pressure, will they join a mass suicide if their fraternity or sorority president does?

These boys and girls who attended and sponsored the party and decorated the tree are missing vital portions of common sense natural to most humans. If they want to lose the stigma of being drinking institutions they should jump on the wagon.

Don't get me wrong, I have many friends who belong to the Greek system. It only takes one incident to bring down the reputations of many.

I will begin calling these people men and women when they begin to act with the responsibility expected of adults.

—Katé Lyons-Holestine

Letter from the President

President Zinser sends holiday wishes

The holiday season is here, and I wish for you an especially meaningful one whether you celebrate Christmas, Hanukkah or another holiday in our rich mosaic of cultures and religions. Each year we cycle around once again into the holidays as if on a spiral staircase to become better and better people for the inspiration of the last season and the experiences of the year past.

The holidays bring special moments of warmth and magic that strengthen our ties with loved ones and friends. They invite us to renew our faith and commitments. They offer time to reflect upon our responsibilities and ambitions to make a difference in the world around us.

Thinking about our colleagues and institutions is an important part of the holiday spirit, too. We celebrate our collective achievements. We express our deep gratitude for the wisdom and support, hard work and goodwill of our colleagues. We fill our reservoirs of energy to continue to meet our goals and obligations to advance our institutions for the good of humankind.

Happy holidays! May this season be full of special moments — moments worthy to take their places among your most cherished memories.

—Elisabeth Zinser, UI President

Life a series of good news, bad news

Two years ago, a friend and past colleague of mine, Steve Corda, wrote a column here at the Argonaut. And although his stuff often crossed the line of bizarre and headed full speed to absurd, he never failed to stumble upon a good column idea.

One of his columns came at the end of his time with the Arg. It was a sort of good news, bad news column, where his "I like so-and-sos" were balanced with the "I don't likes."

Assuming I can get another picture to replace my cheesy, "Call Jeff for a good time," photo to run next to my verse, I'm hoping that whoever fills the spot of Associate Editor will renew my contract. Who knows. Maybe I'll get corporate use of the Argonaut truck to trash and throw empty bottles in. But just in case I don't, I would like to take a shot at Corda's idea:

I am happy I work at the Argonaut.

I am not happy for the folks who bitch and moan to me personally about how lousy the Argonaut is instead of doing something constructive to better it.

I am happy to be a Democrat.

I am not happy that because I'm a Democrat, people assume I'm out to raise taxes, spend more on social security and put the deficit into the ozone layer.

I am happy Bill Clinton and Al Gore run the country.

I am not happy Clinton has fallen down on his promises and hasn't been more of a true leader. But I certainly don't regret not voting for Bush

I'll Tell You Why
Jeff Kapostasy

I am happy to live here in Moscow. I am not happy that Moscow is growing and so is the crime rate.

I am happy that I kicked a serious clinical depression that haunted me last year. There's no dislike for that one.

I am happy I work with the people I do.

I am not happy that soon, I may never see them again.

I am happy that Idaho is so beautiful.
 I am not happy that the beauty is being clearcut, polluted and otherwise degraded, and people are fooled into thinking it's all the loony environmentalists' fault loggers are out of work.
 I am happy I drive a Honda Accord that is built like a Rolex. Let no one tell you American cars are even half as good as Japanese cars.
 I am not happy the University gives me no place to park it.
 I am happy people still listen to The Beatles, Stones and Zeppelin.
 I am not happy that Z-Fun and KHTR degrade the airwaves.
 I am happy I come from a great family.
 I am not happy I will be giving up my freedom in May to move back home with three dogs, no food and a Buick Reatta with a bad transmission.
 I am happy Rush Limbaugh is not running for public office.
 I am not happy so many otherwise sane people wish that he would.
 I am happy that right now, a loving couple is experiencing the joy of sex.
 I am not happy they might not be protecting themselves.
 I am happy to be heterosexual.
 I am not happy that because I support gay rights, people assume I'm gay and criticize me in the name of God.
 I am happy to be pro-choice.
 I am not happy there are people who are pro-choice, but will not tolerate the pro-life point of view. And vice-versa.
 I am happy I can play guitar better than some people.
 And not happy I can't play it as good as others.
 I am happy to be religious.
 I am not happy I can't decide to which extent.

Sheikh thanks supporters

I would like to take this opportunity to thank all the people who supported and voted for me during my campaign for ASUI president. I want them all to know how much I appreciated everything they did.
 I have had a great time being an ASUI Senator for three and a half years and was fortunate enough to accomplish many things during my terms. I had the chance to work with many great people: Dr. Elisabeth Zinser, Dr. Hal Godwin, Dr. Bruce Pitman, Alice Pope Barbut, Kathy Barnard, Jim Bauer, Jim Rennie, David Mucci, Debbie Huffman, Jan Abramson, Joann Trail, Gleanne Wray, and many more. . . I would like to thank them for all the help and advice they have given me over the years.
 I had the pleasure of serving many students and want them to know I enjoyed it. I would like to thank my living groups, Farmhouse, Gamma Phi Beta, Targhee hall, and off-campus. I enjoyed the interaction between us and they always let me know how they felt on issues concerning the university.

During my campaign for president I was lucky enough to have many people help me and they were very appreciated: my family, Mike Smith, Rob Blinzler, Nicole Dowding, Tom Sheffield, John Tesnohlidek, Mike Conklin, Denise Hopkins, Walter Saunders, Heidi Adkins, Zahrah Sheikh, Mrs. Grace Wicks, Tariq Khraishi, and others. These people really kept me going. They were there when I needed them and I could readily call on them.

Special thanks to all the students who voted for me and showed me their support. It meant a lot to me. Thank you once again!

Stricklin judges Earth Firsters

I have a few things to say to Valorie Stricklin in response to her (droll) commentary, "Earth First'ers juvenile delinquents."

Valorie, don't you think you're goin' a little over your head (even standing on a soap box) when you say that Earth First! people are a menace to society? I'd like to tell you that you have one or two salient points in your article, which you systematically undermine throughout the entire thing with ignorant premises. Let's start with the ridiculous shall, we?

None of my Earth First! friends have names like "running deer." I'm still trying to figure out where you pulled that one out of. Heh. And I would wager a guess (drop a nasty line if I'm wrong) that you're not intimate friends with any of these "delinquents."

Furthermore, I get a sense that you really don't did people who eschew a middle class capitalistic lifestyle because you make these wacky statements about an entire group of people who eschew a middle class capitalistic lifestyle because you make these wacky statements about an entire group of people, like: "...don't know how to do anything but protest..." and "they don't have anything of their own..." and (this is my favorite) "their smelly, nasty, no plumbing level." Really. This one makes me chuckle every time. Here not only are you assuming a helluva lot about a big group of citizens, but you're also making a whopper of a judgment call.

Here's some more intriguing stuff. You set up this nice dichotomy between the entire community of Dixie: Bourgeois, Norman Rockwell, (just plain good folk) and Earth Firsters "old hippie" dirty, ambitionless scum (was what you were really saying), as well as creating these mysterious allusions to "smoke." I assume you refer to marijuana? As though it were a prerequisite for an Earth First'er to partake in sinister drug habits in order to join? This is, once again, assuming a lot and making a judgment call.

I think you seriously need to reevaluate your motivations for writing this article, and acquire a little more honest material on the subject, before you try to write a political piece with any sort of authority. Nobody will really take you seriously, even if there is a glimmer of good sense in what you say.

Letters to the Editor

Embarrassed by narrow minds

This letter is written in response to the poorly thought out article, "Earth First?ers juvenile delinquents," presented to us by Valorie Sreicklin.

I would like to begin by making it perfectly clear that I am in no way affiliated with the Earth First! organization. I would also like to let it be known, up front, that this letter is in no way a personal attack on Valorie.

In fact she is of such little relevance to the point of this response that I will from here forward refer to her as the writer.

I suppose the best place to start is at the beginning. Referring to Earth First! members as overgrown children, martyrs, or hippies is mere name calling in itself. I consider this sort of journalism to be petty and of no use in such a forum, as a university publication. Besides name calling the writer exposed us to a pile of generalizations and stereo types that are frankly not true.

For example, the idea of someone moving across the country, with no idea about the issue, as mere hippie reinforcements sounds like an extreme case of hyperparanoia to me.

I also feel that enduring the weather, media ridicule and local harassment for months on end is a far cry from a media stunt.

Earth First! has in fact been around since 1981; where was our writer then? Cheering on her elementary school's football team no doubt. My point is that the Earth First! is not new, and should not be misconstrued as a hippie whim by an amateur journalist. Destruction of property is considered a very last resort by such organizations, and is by no means something they advertise as an organizational strategy.

The idea of having "things," which seems so important to our writer is no more than an egocentric, materialistic view of the world.

In fact, I would be willing to bet not one single Earth First! member feels the slightest bit of envy towards loggers or their families. I am sure that the last goal of the movement is to bring anyone down to their "smelly, nasty, no plumbing level, which I might add is more petty name calling. In fact, it would surprise me if they wanted loggers for company at all.

Radical environmentalists do not want to punish anyone, as our writer would have you believe, they only see what is wrong with current practices and realize what needs to be done.

Yes, it is true that logging jobs will be lost, but it is my feeling efforts in retraining should be the hot topic, because sooner or later those jobs will be gone anyway, either by complete deforestation or by scaling back the industry. Personally, I would rather see it happen sooner than later.

Our writer completely misinterpreted the issue regarding the buffalo. The point is not that there are places that humans should not live. The point is that humans should not live anywhere in such a manner that their mere presence threatens the existence, on whole, co-existing species.

No one is asking that anything be undone. People are only asking that we slow down and seriously look at our world with compassion. Instead, the common and exploitive views, much like those held by our writer, are slowly but surely destroying the earth.

I am embarrassed to be associated, as a human, to those of such narrow minds and small ideas, as our writer. If anyone has a chip on their shoulder, I believe it is you, Valorie.

Celebrating human rights day

University of Idaho Amnesty International Chapter brings awareness to students

Russ Woolsey
Lifestyles Editor

In 1961 a British lawyer named Peter Benenson became outraged when the Portuguese government imprisoned two students for raising their glasses to toast freedom.

Benenson published an article in the London Observer announcing a year-long "Appeal for Amnesty," and Amnesty International was born.

Today Amnesty International has grown to include 150 countries around the world with a membership exceeding 700,000.

Armed with stamps, envelopes and addresses of current United States and international representatives, the University of Idaho Amnesty International chapter has been waging its own private war against human rights for three years now. Today they will be celebrating Human Rights Day with information booths presenting facts about current human rights abuses documented around the world.

Holly Custard, president and founder of the UI Amnesty International chapter, said they are currently fighting for the release of six prisoners. Custard said there are about 15 current members of the UI chapter who meet on the first Monday of every month in the SUB.

An off-campus based Amnesty International group also exists in Moscow. Charlot Mohan said the Moscow Amnesty International group has been slow because of the holiday season and will be contributing to the UI information booths set up in the SUB and at the Beanery.

The off-campus Amnesty group has been together for almost 15 years and Mohan said all are welcomed to their meetings, which take place on the fourth Wednesday of every month at the Beanery, located on the corner of Main and Sixth. Currently they are working for the release of an imprisoned Egyptian man.

Today on the University of Idaho campus, the University chapter will have many petitions waiting to be signed for the campaign against international "disappearances," including the six prisoners UI Amnesty is working towards.

Amnesty seeks the release of people imprisoned for their beliefs, color, sex, race, religion, language or ethnic origin, provided they haven't ever used or advocated the use of violence.

"Disappearances" are the main concern of Amnesty and are people who have been taken into custody, and whose whereabouts and fate are unknown. Witnesses have usually seen them being detained but authorities deny holding them.

"Disappearances" cause agony for victims and their relatives. In most cases, the victims are completely cut off from the world and placed outside the protection of law. They are often tortured and many are never seen again.

The United Nations has condemned "disappearances" as grave violations of human rights and has said their systematic practice is of the nature of a crime against humanity.

Amnesty International's 1992 Annual Report documented the killing of suspected government opponents, members of targeted ethnic groups or people living in opposition strongholds in some 45 countries during last year.

The report also documented that at least 1,270 people in 20 countries "disappeared" after being arrested by security forces in 1991, and that at least 29 countries individuals who were earlier reported to have "disappeared" have yet to be accounted for sufficiently.

Now, the Amnesty International base office located in London, which has over 250 people recruited from 25 countries, is calling on students and universities all over the world as their key to a successful campaign against human rights violations.

The "four goals," as outlined from Amnesty, include first — Find the "Disappeared." Second — Save those at risk. Third — Stop "Disappearances" and political killings. Fourth — Bring perpetrators to justice.

General information will also be available for students at information tables set up at the SUB and at the Beanery.

Banners will also be displayed across from the library showing the names of the "disappearances" that Amnesty is working towards.

Information pyramids will be on display at tables in the University Cafeteria, Vandal Cafe and Satellite SUB.

New Clearwater forest supervisor speaks

Russ Woolsey
Lifestyles Editor

The new supervisor of the Clearwater National Forest, James L. Caswell, will meet conservationists and other members of the public in an open meeting at 7:30 p.m. on Monday at the Moscow Community Center.

Dennis Baird of the Moscow-based Sierra Club said Caswell has a huge job in front of him, including finding a way to include public interest and views. Baird said Caswell will talk for about 30 minutes and then will be open for questions from the audience.

Caswell will discuss the U.S. Forest Service development of ecosystem management and how it applies to the Clearwater. He will also discuss the process to revise the Clearwater's Forest Plan.

The meeting will be an opportunity for people in the Palouse to meet the new forest supervisor.

Caswell joined the 1.6 million acre Clearwater in September, working in the Orofino office. He was supervisor of the Targhee National Forest before moving north.

Ecosystem management includes large scale planning, which goes beyond site-specific projects and include planning for social and biological needs as well as commodity extraction.

The meeting is sponsored by the Idaho Conservation League and the Palouse Group of the Sierra Club.

The meeting is free and open to all who wish to participate.

of the nature of a crime against humanity.

Amnesty International's 1992 Annual Report documented the killing of suspected government opponents, members of targeted ethnic groups or people living in opposition strongholds in some 45 countries during last year.

The report also documented that at least 1,270 people in 20 countries "disappeared" after being arrested by security forces in 1991, and that at least 29 countries individuals who were earlier reported to have "disappeared" have yet to be accounted for sufficiently.

Now, the Amnesty International base office located in London, which has over 250 people recruited from 25 countries, is calling on students and universities all over the world as their key to a successful campaign against human rights violations.

The "four goals," as outlined from Amnesty, include first — Find the "Disappeared." Second — Save those at risk. Third — Stop "Disappearances" and political killings. Fourth — Bring perpetrators to justice.

General information will also be available for students at information tables set up at the SUB and at the Beanery.

Banners will also be displayed across from the library showing the names of the "disappearances" that Amnesty is working towards.

Information pyramids will be on display at tables in the University Cafeteria, Vandal Cafe and Satellite SUB.

New Clearwater forest supervisor speaks

Russ Woolsey
Lifestyles Editor

The new supervisor of the Clearwater National Forest, James L. Caswell, will meet conservationists and other members of the public in an open meeting at 7:30 p.m. on Monday at the Moscow Community Center.

Dennis Baird of the Moscow-based Sierra Club said Caswell has a huge job in front of him, including finding a way to include public interest and views. Baird said Caswell will talk for about 30 minutes and then will be open for questions from the audience.

Caswell will discuss the U.S. Forest Service development of ecosystem management and how it applies to the Clearwater. He will also discuss the process to revise the Clearwater's Forest Plan.

The meeting will be an opportunity for people on the Palouse to meet the new forest supervisor.

Caswell joined the 1.6 million acre Clearwater in September, working in the Orofino office. He was supervisor of the Targhee National Forest before moving north.

Ecosystem management includes large scale planning, which goes beyond site-specific projects and include planning for social and biological needs as well as commodity extraction.

The meeting is sponsored by the Idaho Conservation League and the Palouse Group of the Sierra Club.

The meeting is free and open to all who wish to participate.

Sweetwater pours onto Palouse

Russ Woolsey
Lifestyles Editor

• Dead week was put on hold Wednesday night at the Cavern in Pullman when Seattle's Sweetwater and Sacramento's Pao fed a hungry crowd of students a blaring meal of melodious pie.

Few remembered they played and even fewer remember their name when Sweetwater first poured their liquid music on the Palouse three years ago at Greenstock (but who goes to Greenstock for just the music anyway?)

Since then they have played venues all across the west, including a show in Lewiston when they played at a flop music festival this fall.

Sweetwater's sound is definitely a product of the Seattle music machine. They cut loose on long guitar riffs with beckoning vocals from lead singer Adam Czeisler, whose particular theatrics personified none other than Jim Morrison.

Sweetwater played many cuts from their debut album Sweetwater, which can be found at area music stores. They closed out the show with Neil Young's "Cinnamon

Concert Review

Girl" and a version of Blondie's "Call Me," which gave credit to a long forgotten tune.

Sweetwater was loud, giving their music an alive sound. It sounded much better than the studio recording partly because of Czeislers flamboyance, including his invite to room 514 of the Holiday Inn (sorry I missed it), and lead guitarist Dudley Taft's long, maybe improvised, licks on his Gibson.

I give them a year to shine or fade away with riff-raff.

Opening for Sweetwater was Sacramento's Pao with their "Tribal Music."

Lead singer Brion Burkett and guitarist Dave Chavez inspired their music into great jams and vocal harmonies. Burkett set the stage for Sweetwater's theatrical Czeisler as he stroked the microphone like it was his own. Burkett quivered and shook, making me think he was going to do the Devo flip and a David Byrne "same as it ever was" routine, as he wailed "Fuck You" over and over into a tangled display of vulgar improvisation.

I liked these guys and though they weren't turned up as loud as Sweetwater, thought the crowd was simply un-hip and contemptuous as they talked in their social circles, ignoring an impressive display of four guys with spirit.

Pao recently went into the recording studio and should have a new CD by the beginning of next year.

Be on the look out for concert dates all over the Northwest and of course, in California.

When tall tales fly like sparks from a campfire and waft into that black void where lies and ill-conceived legends are lost forever, there is danger of missing a good story.

Everyone has heard about the time someone's uncle shot and missed a deer that, at first, he thought was an elk because its antlers were so huge and ... or about the power company people (usually a relative) who were diving below the dam for some repair work and had to leave because the catfish down in the murky, churning, unfathomable depths were so large that they imperiled their lives — and so on.

But every so often, a semi-$10,000 and the understanding that its recipient will hold 12 community readings during the two-year term to share his art with Idaho's people.

"Clay Morgan has been an integral part of Idaho's literary community for years and one of its finest writers," Gov. Andrus said. "It comes as no surprise that the distinguished panel of nationally-known poets and writers would be drawn to Clay's superb writings."

Morgan was recommended for this award by panelists Molly Gloss, Jump Off Creek (Houghton Mifflin); Diana Kappel-Smith, Desert Time (Little, Brown and Company); Tom Spanbauer, The Man Who Fell in Love With the Moon, (Atlantic Monthly Press); Primus St. John, Dreamer, (Carnegie Mellon Press); and current Idaho writer-in-residence Daryl Jones, Someone Going Home Late (Texas Tech University Press).

These panelists read the anonymous submissions of 26 writer-in-residence applicants, then at an open meeting in Sun Valley in May 1993, recommended the works that now can be revealed as those of writer Clay Morgan. This recommendation was forwarded to the governor by the Idaho Commission on the Arts.

Morgan has published novels, short stories, essays, articles and book reviews. His novel, Santiago, and The Drinking Party (Viking Press) won the 1992 Pacific Northwest Booksellers Award.

In manuscript form it earned Morgan an Idaho Commission on the Arts Fellowship in 1986. His first novel, Aura (Confluence Press) won the Idaho Fiction Competition in 1984.

He has produced over 50 commentaries for National Public Radio, including a series on fires and fire fighting, for which he strapped a tape recorder to his chest and narrated a parachute jump into an Idaho wilderness fire. His most recent publication is Boise: The City and the People, with photographer Steve Bly.

Morgan has a history of commitment to literature that includes teaching writing to students from first grade through college in the Poet in the Schools program.

"I've identified with Idaho so much, for so long," Morgan, a fourth-generation Idahoan said, "that it's a thrill to have Idaho identified with me. I think the whole thing is wonderful and I'm excited about the next two years and spreading the words," he added.

Cougars stomp Idaho

Impatience key to WAZZU victory

Katé Lyons-Holestine
Sports Editor

PULLMAN, Wash. — Patience was the necessary ingredient that seemed missing from the Vandals' court game.

The Washington State Cougars snuffed the University of Idaho's big gun and grabbed a 70-51 victory on Freil Court Tuesday.

Washington won the initial tip-off and controlled the game from the beginning. With the help of two 6-foot-9 players to overwhelm Orlando Lightfoot, Washington held Idaho's top scorer to only two points at the half.

"We knew they would try to take him out of the offense," head coach Joe Cravens said. "They just fed us up with their pressure physically and mentally."

"I thought our defense was the story of the game," WAZZU coach Kelvin Sampson said. "We didn't let Idaho run their offense."

Mark Leslie stole the ball and went all the way to bring Idaho to within five, trailing 13-8.

"He's (Leslie) getting better. He's getting more accustomed to what we want from him," Cravens said.

The undefeated Washington Cougars played a much faster game than Idaho has seen this season. But Idaho didn't seem to try to slow the game down on their end of the court.

"We need to dictate the tempo of the game, not have it dictated to us," Idaho guard Benji Johnson said.

The bad blood between the two teams showed through when Mark Hendrickson dropped the ball on Deon Watson's head after a play.

Young defense key against Penguins

The defense won the game. Huh? The Vandal defense? The one that was ridiculed by a Spokane sportswriter that there was no "D" in Idaho? Yes, it's true, and for the Vandals to be victorious tomorrow, their defense will have to maintain their recent level of performance.

Since allowing 52 points in a loss to Montana, the defense was given a much-needed wake-up call. Since that time, they have allowed 14, 16, 31 (against a superb offense), and 14 points. Last week, however, was some of the best Vandal team defense I have witnessed in my eight years of watching Vandal football.

Every defensive player seemed to contribute some outstanding play during the game. Some of the most noteworthy were freshman defensive linemen Barry Mitchell and Ryan Phillips, and, as usual, the entire linebacking corps. Mitchell appeared to forget his freshmen status and play like an All-American senior. He had countless hurries on Boston University quarterback Rob "I guess I don't play like Flutie" Dougherty and recorded two sacks, one sack that simultaneously made Dougherty personally meet the friendly turf and the friendly medical trainer.

Phillips may have even played better than his fellow counterpart. He earned nine tackles and sacked Dougherty four times. The relentless pursuit by the defensive front made it much easier on the Vandal secondary. In the span of four plays in the third quarter, BU used three quarterbacks. All three suffered some sort of injury during those four plays thanks to our loving, thoughtful defensive line.

The linebackers, meanwhile, were up to their usual stellar fashion. Duke Garrett, Jason Shelt, and Avery Slaughter combined for 30 tackles, many on BU leading rusher Zach Burwell, who was held to only 79 yards.

The only scores the Terriers managed were late fourth quarter touchdowns, one came after recovering an onside kick. Excluding the last two minutes, the Vandal defense appeared to be more focused than at any other previous instance during the season.

A defensive performance like this can beat any team, even perennial I-AA powerhouse Youngstown State.

The Penguins (I don't know where they came up with that name either) play some defense of their own, allowing only 16.2 points per game.

They, too, have excellent linebackers in senior Alfred Hill and sophomore Leon Jones. Jones, at a rather small 6'0" and 200 lbs., leads the team in tackles at 152 and has picked off four passes on the season. Hill leads the team with six sacks.

Youngstown State (11-2) arguably has the best running game in all of I-AA. They are led by two fireplug seniors in Tamron Smith (5'9" 217) and

Ready to take it to the court

Matt Andrew
Staff Writer

Being one of the two returning starters and a captain for the Lady Vandal basketball team places a lot of responsibility upon one's shoulders, especially when you are the leading scorer from the previous year's squad.

Yet, that is just what Jennifer Clary is.

Entering her last year of eligibility, Clary has set herself a list of personal goals that are not in any way easy.

She would like to see herself on the All-Big Sky Conference first team, a step up from her Honorable Mention.

However, if all goes well, she'd really enjoy seeing her name as a District All-American. Not an easy task.

However, Jennifer is ready to take it to the court — with her statistics.

Scoring a total of 442 points on the 1992-93 season put her at the top of the team's scoring machine. Even more, that averaged out to be 16.4 pts. per game to place her third in the Big Sky.

Clary has already broken into the UI record books — both records related to her outstanding three-point shot. She holds the single most three-pointers in a season, 50, averaging 1.9 per game, placing her second on the list for the conference.

Secondly, she tops the record books for the most three-pointers in a season at 69 for her two seasons at Idaho.

By that time Idaho had built up 11 turnovers. Idaho totaled 25 turnovers for the game while Washington held themselves to 17.

Washington shot 50 percent in the first half and 59 in the second. Idaho was held under 40 percent both halves.

Idaho finally found themselves in double scoring figures with three minutes remaining in the first half.

Idaho and Washington each scored 34 points in the second half, but Idaho wasn't able to overcome the 36-17 deficit they fell into in the first half.

Tony Harris led the Cougars with 26 points. Johnson aided Idaho with 12 points and Watson and Leslie both chipped in eight.

Idaho is now 3-2 for the season WSU boasts a 6-0 record.

Ever been ranked nationally? Of course she has. Last season she went to the free throw line 86 times to nail it 76 of those.

That comes out to be an .884 percent.

That was good enough to be one of the best in all of NCAA Division I basketball. To be exact, fifth in the country overall.

For a period last year, she was at the number one spot in the country with a 90.6 percent.

On the court, Jennifer is a constant perimeter threat. She had a 366 field goal percentage last year. She had seven 20-point games, and four times she has hit shots late in the game to lift the team to victory, including the winner Boise State. It has been said that she is the Lady Vandal offense.

"This year I want to play consistently and improve my defense drastically," remarked Clary about her goals for on the court.

She has proved herself on the court thus far. In game against Nebraska, she had back-to-back three-pointers, a Clary special. The team has played four games — 3 regular season — and she has managed to hit 20-plus points each game, including her high of 30 points against the University of the Pacific at the Safeco/University Inn Classic where she was named to the All-Tournament team.

With such honors already, the season has just begun, there is no question what her role will be.

Even as much of a dominant figure on the court that she is, she still does get frustrated while she practices.

believable local legend sparks up and is passed around for years. What makes some tales hang around to be accepted as near-gospel truth while others disappear into the night is something for a sociologist to study. However, I would venture that the lasting campfire legends are rooted in truth, but somehow, get "spiced up" when fire turns to coals and the beer runs low.

Given the fact that there is rarely a shred of truth in most fishermen anyway, it's not surprising that one of the best local tales is shared around campfires along the Clearwater. About ten or more years ago, perhaps even in the 70s, an enormous steelhead of unheard-of proportions returned to the Clearwater. Most local tails claim that this behemoth was in the mid 40s (although in some dim bars, late at night, an old salt will loudly and emphatically proclaim that the Fish of Fish tipped 50 pounds.)

This mutant of a fish, no doubt the mother of all metalheads shows up at the Ahsaka hatchery about mid-season.

They pick all the hotshots and Oakie drifters out of The Fish's gaping maw, pluck the drift rigs and leaders from its back and, in an act of goodwill, truck the fish back down the river to give someone a chance at the new world record.

Word gets out and pretty soon, anglers are lining the shore of the Clearwater, hoping to catch the cousin of Jaws. Well, a few people get spooled, a half-dozen break rods, and just about everyone gets the jarring bite of their life. But nobody catches The Fish.

A couple of weeks later, the hatchery boys find ol' Scarback finning in the holding ponds again. This time he's full of lures. So they truck it back down river and release it.

More anglers line the shore, and soon, a crowd larger and more expectant than the crowds that flocked at Galilee swarm to the banks of the Clearwater, casting for the new world record.

When The Fish shows up for the third time, the hatchery brass just figure nobody will ever land it because of its' enormous bulk and power. And so they spawn The Fish and allow it to spend its' final days peacefully swimming in the holding tanks.
