Coghlan believed to be partyer

Editor's Note: Moscow City Attorney Gary Riedner was unavailable for comment on this story. Facts and quotes were compiled from various local media sources.

Tim Helmke
 News Editor

The whole of Regena Coghlan's eventful August evening at the University of Idaho takes yet another dramatic turn.

Coghlan considered herself an experienced partyer according to a diary entry she wrote on Aug. 17 of last year, two days prior to her fall from the third-floor fire escape at Alpha Phi. The diary entry, part of Moscow City Attorney Gary Riedner's investigative file on the case, reads, "I literally (as far as I know) have partied a lot harder than some of these girls. A lot harder. And the amount of pot I smoked, jeez."

This diary entry contradicts the 24 pages of Coghlan's testimony to investigators. This testimony suggests she was unaccustomed to drinking hard liquor, which was served at both fraternity parties she allegedly attended at Beta Theta Pi and Sigma Alpha Epsilon. The SAE party was themed "Jack Daniels' Birthday" and the Beta's celebrated "50 Ways to Lose Your Liver."

Coghlan's testimony states, "I was real hesitant to drink it, very hesitant to drink it because, well, Jack Daniels, you know, and I had already had a beer, so one of the sorority sisters said, 'Just drink it.'"

Later on in the interview, an investigator questioned Coghlan if, depressed about the death of her friend the night before, would consider trying to "hurt" herself when she fell. Coghlan, throughout the questioning, denied the suggestions, which exists in the Greek System. "I am not...suicidal," said Coghlan. Coghlan did admit to one Moscow police official that she was upset, at the time of the fall but "wasn't that upset though."

Riedner's file, consisting of all 746 pages worth, also suggests university officials and Moscow police overlooked students drinking in their midst. UI Greek Advisor Linda Wilson and UI Assistant Greek Advisor Chris Wuthrich visited the Beta house that evening after being invited by chapter officers. They reportedly saw nothing wrong at the house and also met Coghlan while there. Wilson and Wuthrich said they also believed Coghlan was not under the influence of alcohol when they met her.

Coghlan's testimony said most people were drinking at the Beta's as far as she could recall. "Most everyone was drinking," she said. Coghlan herself was served a pink-colored drink in a Styrofoam cup.

Moscow police were also seen within 20 feet of the SAE door where members were writing the letter "Y" on Coghlan's hand. This letter, Coghlan recalls, was "just in case the cops come, then they'll know your 21 and they won't really do anything about it."

Moscow police officials confirmed that they did in fact visit the SAE party after receiving several noise complaints. Without any probable cause to believe any laws were being violated, the officers could not enter the fraternity anymore than they could enter a private home.

They also mentioned Moscow officers issued 16 or 17 citations for alcohol violations on the evening Aug. 19, the night parties were going on all over campus.

Another part of the Riedner file includes a shopping list from the Beta party. It was for 24 half-gallons of hard liquor in almost equal portions of tequila, vodka, rum and Seagrams 7 as well as seven cases of beer and a gallon of gin. A total of 195 people were on guest lists for this Beta party, from the friends of Beta members to members of Delta Gamma as well as Alpha Phi.

If everyone would have attended the Beta party, there was theoretically enough alcohol on the shopping list for each guest to drink the equivalent of five shots of hard liquor. That would be enough alcohol to raise a 180-pound person's blood-alcohol level above the legal limit for operating a vehicle.

The city cases against the Beta's and SAE's ended in late December when both houses were placed on probation for serving alcohol to minors and ordered to keep alcohol off their premises. Coghlan has filed a claim with the state of Idaho (see story page 4).

New alcohol awareness brings change

A proposal arranged by the Ad-hoc Committee could effect every student enrolled in, and all people associated with, the University of Idaho.

The proposal suggests students who enroll at the UI should be provided with an environment conducive to learning and intellectual development. It is their opinion that alcohol abuse has become a significant impediment in the university's efforts of providing this type of environment. The statement explains the committee recognizes alcohol abuse as a serious problem to our society and it isn't unique to young people or to students.

Nevertheless, the committee believes one factor increasing this problem is having large numbers of students living together without, as the statement reads, "the benefit of adequate mature supervision or adequate mature role models."

The statement continues saying the Ad-hoc Committee applauds the efforts of the Residence Halls for better educating and training their advisors and students on issues ranging from cultural diversity to alcohol abuse. However, the committee claims to be concerned about the living and learning environments within the Greek System.

Although the committee recognizes the importance of the Greek System in the lives of many UI students, they believe many of the Greek houses on campus "have evolved house practices that virtually guarantee that their more mature members will have little or no influence on the living and learning of younger members." It is the opinion of this committee, according to this proposal that not expecting, and not requiring, older members to live in the houses is a major factor in the "blatant violation of alcohol consumption laws evident in some of these houses."

The Ad-hoc Committee recognizes that the alcohol problem is not new. Over two years ago, Vice President for Student Affairs Hal Godwin appointed an ad-hoc committee to examine the relationship between the university and the Greek System. The current committee highly endorses the recommendations made by the 1992 committee.

The recommendations for action include having deferred rush, which could lead to having rush in the spring semester rather than in the fall. Another option for deferred rush is continuing to hold rush in the fall, but deferring the residence of freshmen in the houses until they have completed one year of school.

Another recommendation made by the committee is to have live-in Resident Advisors. These advisors would be required to undergo training similar to that of an RA in the residence halls. One of the responsibilities of these advisors would be to assist the houses in maintaining and following university policies, as well as local and state laws.

The committee believes the issue of enforcement is secondary to attitude. The campus community needs to use their new awareness of alcohol abuse to create the changes needed to make the campus a better learning environment for students. The proposal states, "The faculty and student body must work together to develop and implement much more effective drug and alcohol educational programs for all members of the university community."

Alternative ways to file a 1993 income tax return in 1994

Want to have an electronic filer zap your tax return to the Internal Revenue Service?...Why not print out a 1040PC answer sheet with your home computer and mail it?...Or how about phoning in your tax return through TeleFile?

The IRS offers these alternatives to the traditional filing of tax forms. They are designed to make it easier for people to file tax returns. These returns will also be more accurate — a benefit for both taxpayers and the IRS. At tax time last year, over 12 million people used one of the alternatives.

Electronic filing, first tested in 1986, has been an operational part of the IRS processing system since 1988. IRS-accepted preparers and transmission services send their clients' tax filing data from their computers to the IRS.

Being the most widely used alternative, 12.3 million returns were received by the end of last year's filing season. Taxpayers who owe can file when they're ready, then send the payment by April 15 — with no penalty or interest.

Electronic filers expecting refunds should get their money within three weeks; even sooner for direct deposits into bank savings or checking accounts. For more details on electronic filing, call the IRS's recorded information telephone line, Tele-Tax, and listen to topic 252.

Computer-assisted tax filing has a new twist — print out a tax return answer sheet from your personal computer and mail it to the IRS. Unlike traditional forms, which may have many blank lines, the 1040PC program generates only the lines which have entries. The result is a three column list that fits on one or two pages.

Individuals and paid tax preparers can use standard computers, printers and one of many tax preparation software programs sold in computer stores to produce the 1040PC formats.

The form is not available from the IRS. For details, call Tele-Tax, and listen to topic 251.

TeleFile, filing by phone, is being used by certain single residents of nine U.S. cities who receive short form (Form 1040EZ) packages, TeleFilers call a toll-free number using a touch-tone phone and enter total wages, interest and tax withheld.

The IRS figures the adjusted gross income, the tax and any refund or tax due while the taxpayer is on the phone.

Most of these people then sign the Form 1040-TEL and mail it to the IRS along with their Form W-2, Wage and Tax Statement.

Refunds are sent in about three weeks and any tax due can be paid by the usual April 15 deadline.

Taxpayers who receive the TeleFile tax packages should carefully read the instructions included.

The IRS can be contacted at 1-800-829-4477 for more information on all these special filing processes.

Identify tax payment properly to ensure proper credit from IRS or it will be delayed

To avoid delays in giving you credit for tax payments, be sure your check or money order has the proper identification. Thousands of payments are sent to the IRS without the necessary identification and cannot be applied to taxpayers' accounts.

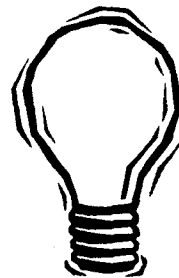

Help ensure that your payment will be credited to your account by properly showing the following on the payment:

- (1) Your taxpayer identification number (social security number), and your spouse's number if it is a joint return (or employer's identification number if applied),
- (2) The tax period (i.e., 1993, 09/93) and type of tax form associated with the payment (i.e., 1040, 941),

- (3) Current mailing address and daytime phone number, and
- (4) Name and taxpayer identification number on the tax account if paying on behalf of someone else (i.e., your child).

Other advice for making payments:

- When making out checks to the IRS, spell out "Internal Revenue Service."
- Never send cash or postage stamps when making a tax payment, regardless of the size of the payment.
- Make sure any check, money order or related payment is signed.
- Attach your payment to the front of the tax return. If the check is separated from the tax return or correspondence before the payment is recorded, the data included on the check will identify the payment.

Don't have a 1993 tax return? Here's where you can find some:

When you cannot find a certain tax form, check your local library. Many libraries stock the most often used tax forms, schedules and instructions. Some libraries also have a reproducible federal income tax forms package, Publication 1132, which contains the commonly used forms, from which you can make copies. The University of Idaho Library does have copies of these forms.

On Monday, Feb. 14, the Economic Development Administration, National Institute of Standards and Technology, U.S. Department of Commerce and the National Technological University will be sponsoring a live teleconference entitled Advanced Technology Program, National Standards and Technology: Public Meeting.

On October 19, 1993, NIST held a public meeting at its Gaithersburg, Md., headquarters, the intent of which was to share with industrial attendees significant changes in the Advanced Technology Program competitive process. The teleconference is a re-broadcast of that meeting.

Started in 1990, the at the National Institute of Standards and Technology promotes the economic growth and competitiveness of U.S. business and industry by accelerating the development and commercialization of promising, high-risk technologies with substantial potential for enhancing U.S. economic growth.

The program provides technology development through funding through cooperative research agreements to single businesses or industry-led joint ventures.

ATP management, therefore, felt it was important to maximize the dissemination of information discussed by Arati Prabhaker, director of NIST and George A. Uriano, director of ATP, at the public meeting. Many meaningful questions were raised by the industrial audience which will also be shared with you. ATP officials will be available during the broadcast to answer any questions from the viewing audience.

The Moscow-Latah County Economic Development Council, the University of Idaho College of Agricultural Cooperative Extension System and the North Central Idaho Business Technology Incubator will host the down-link reception of the telecast in the large conference room at the Incubator, 121 Sweet Avenue, on the UI campus. The conference will begin at 10 a.m. and conclude at 2 p.m. There is no charge to attend this conference, however, those planning to attend should call the Moscow-Latah County Economic Development Council at 883-4511.

Coghlan files claim with state

Jill Pittmann
Staff Writer

Attorneys for Regena Coghlan have filed a tort claim against the University of Idaho.

The claim states the university is responsible for the permanent injuries she acquired after a fall from her sorority house last fall.

The first step in suing a governmental agency in Idaho, this tort claim suggests Coghlan and members of her family have been "individually damaged in sums in excess of $500,000."

According to the filed claim, Coghlan is seeking damages for "pain and suffering, medical expenses, loss of earning capacity, permanent disability and loss of enjoyment of life."

The list of people involved in the claim includes Linda M. Wilson, UI Greek advisor and Chris Wuthrich, UI assistant Greek advisor and a program advisor for Student Advisory Services. Coghlan's accident occurred after she was allegedly served alcohol at two fraternities on campus.

Wilson and Wuthrich were present at one of the fraternities where they met Coghlan. Prior to this claim, the advisors said they saw no alcohol being served at the fraternity they visited and Coghlan did not appear drunk when they met her.

Wuthrich and Wilson were unavailable for comment at the time this article was written. Other UI officials were also unavailable.

Coghlan is represented by attorneys John C. Etter of Portland, Ore., Michael G. Brady of Boise, and Robert P. Schuster and Robert R. Rose III of the Jackson, Wyo., law firm which includes Gerry Spence, former attorney for Randy Weaver.

Etter has said Spence's firm will serve as counsel for Coghlan's legal claims.

Miren E. Artiach, deputy secretary of state, said the claim will be sent to the risk management division. She said the state has 90 days to decide whether to accept or deny the claim.

Coghlan can sue if the state decides not to pay her claim for damages. The tort claim doesn't keep her from attempting to sue other individuals or groups such as the two fraternities and the sorority.

Expansion to the north

Alissa L. Beier
Staff Writer

President Elisabeth A. Zinser has recently announced the expansion of University of Idaho services to the Coeur d' Alene area.

This expansion will increase the accessibility of graduate programs throughout the center.

Zinser stated: "Because of the security of national accreditation, new courses in the world of international business, and the continuing growth of professional development programs, the UI is in an ideal position to explore the development of business offerings in Coeur d' Alene."

This will have a direct effect in the enrollment of the College of Business and Economics.

The expansion will take place next fall in which one class one night a week will be taught by Ray Dacey.

The course will be held on Wednesday nights from 7-10 p.m. Dacey will spend two weeks teaching at UI then one week teaching at Coeur d' Alene.

The instruction will be composed of two-way video and two-way audio delivered by microwave to the UI center in Coeur d' Alene. This technology allows students in both classrooms to see and hear the lecture.

"Our objective is to see how the enrollment in the business field will increase by starting out with filling just one class," stated Byron Dangerfield, dean of Business and Economics.

Dangerfield hopes that within the next two years a new technology called compressed video will be used.

This technology will eliminate the need to schedule either microwave or satellite because it utilizes regular telephone lines.

It also provides two-way video and audio, but not as high a quality as other media.

This technology would then enable the professor to teach in one classroom, while students in another classroom 80 miles away can listen and view his lecture, thus increasing enrollment.

Through a TV screen the professor is able to see and hear both classrooms — and students can do the same.

As soon as this invention is perfected, education will not only broaden here, but with other countries as well. Currently though, the cost is expected to be $40,000 per unit.

"But it would be a wise investment," remarked Dangerfield. "Starting this fall, we begin paying for telecommunication, mileage expense and housing for the faculty member after the class at night."

In viewing the UI's services in Coeur d' Alene from 1963 to 1993, the course offerings have grown from just one to twelve degree programs.

It is apparent from President Zinser's statement and the plans of the College of Business and Economics, the number of offerings will increase dramatically in the near future.

And since the MBA program was suspended by UI in the 1980's, the demand for graduate education in the 90's is expected to bring with it positive results. The College of Business and Economics is considering a new specialized master's program for distance education at all UI centers, including Coeur d' Alene.

Currently, the UI has purchased 6,000 square feet at NIC Library for its UI Coeur d' Alene Center.

President Zinser expressed, "Hopefully this expansion will stress the importance of cooperation among education institutions in northern Idaho."

Census Bureau to check on local employment records

The U.S. Census Bureau will collect data on employment and unemployment from area residents the week of Feb. 13-19, according to Leo C. Schilling, director of the bureau's Seattle regional office. The local labor force data will contribute to the national employment and unemployment picture to be released March 4 by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Information supplied by individuals to the Census Bureau is kept confidential by law. Only statistical totals are published.

Students didn't receive discount

J. Richard Rock
Staff Writer

Due to an oversight students at the University of Idaho will have to wait one more year to benefit from money budgeted in the ASUI to subsidize Lionel Hampton Jazz Festival tickets.

Last Spring the ASUI budgeted to give $5,000 to the Lionel Hampton Jazz Festival in exchange for a student discount on tickets. The tickets, which went on sale beginning December 6, were supposed to be made available to students for eight dollars less than the normal ticket price of between $18 and $20. Instead, students have been paying the same rate as usual.

Claudia Dambra, Ticket Express Manager, stated "We really don't have answers as to why this happened. It was just a huge oversight."

Dr. Lynn J. Skinner, Executive Director of the Lionel Hampton Jazz Festival commented, "I feel very bad, this [reduced ticket prices for students] is something that I have wanted to do for a long time.

We will do the best we can to make it come out right for students."

ASUI President John Marble has been working with Skinner for the past week and a half to develop an acceptable solution to the situation. "We have been looking at several options," said Marble, "It looks as though we will probably use the funds to subsidize student tickets beginning next year, but we still need to work the details out."

Marble and Skinner had considered a special ticket run for students for this year's festival but decided against it after deciding there was not enough time to properly advertise and that it would not have been fair to students who had already purchased their tickets for the event which takes place later this month.

The idea to subsidize jazz festival tickets started with former ASUI Senator Kelly Rush. Rush had a meeting with Vice President for Student Affairs Hal Godwin and Skinner over a year ago where the idea was discussed.

Apparently Skinner had mentioned to Rush that he had always wanted to find a way to let students in at a reduced rate, but with the Festival budget already in the red he could not afford it.

"Dr. Skinner always felt bad that we had one of the top three jazz festivals in the world, but some students couldn't afford to go," said Rush who worked at the jazz festival one year in order to see some of the events.

It occurred to Rush, shortly after her meeting, that the ASUI may be in a position to help. As a member of the ASUI Finance committee last Spring, Rush worked to have the money included in the budget, and despite a tight fiscal situation she succeeded in having $5,000 allocated for the festival.

Rush is convinced, as well as others involved, that the oversight will be worked out and students will be able to enjoy the festival at the reduced rate beginning next year.

In the meantime, Marble intends to ask for the $5,000 back so the ASUI can benefit from the interest which flows into an endowment for the Dean Vettrus-ASUI Scholarship.

Takes TV blood, death to attract attention

Nobody really cares. They would like to think they do, but they don't. If it doesn't happen directly to their body, or one of their close friends or relatives it really doesn't matter much at all. It's nice, though, to feel for a few moments a heart felt emotion. Like when Americans saw the shelling of a Sarajevo market that killed 68 people and wounded about 200 others. We got to see up close in sharp focus people bleeding, dying, trying to, crying in terror, anger, loss. We saw fresh red blood, lots of it, then close-ups of survivors' faces. We saw men stack victims on wagons, pushing limbs back on when they slipped off, lifeless. We saw it all. For a brief moment, we said to ourselves, "That's enough. That's too much. No, we can't have that happening any more at all. We have to do something." Then we grabbed a snack and started watching a re-run of Cheers. Because Americans really don't care. It doesn't effect them. Most don't know where Bosnia is, what it has to do with Herzegovina, Serbs, Croats, Muslims, or better yet, what it has to do with Somalia and the PLO. Now the Clinton administration and France urged NATO to send a clear message to the Serbs sitting in the hills that such action will not be tolerated and air strikes may be sent their way. The Bosnian Serbs agreed to hand over their artillery to U.N. peacekeeping troops within in five days and end their siege of Sarajevo by Feb. 20. A smart move, really. A week and Feb. 20 is a long time from now. The Serbs haven't signed anything and most of the details rest on the general statement they will hand over their heavy weapons. "It's nonsense," said Senad Hamzic, a young man who has watched his city destroyed by the siege, in a Lewiston Morning Tribune story. "The Serbs are just trying to buy time. Then these new threats will be forgotten just like everything else." The young man realize that the rest of the world will move on; its collective attention span certainly lasts less than five days, and Feb. 20 is a world away. Then toss this stick in the spokes: Russia opposes air strikes. There's another disaster waiting for Russian-American relations. So far the 22-month war has killed more than 200,000 people. What makes 68 any more significant? A number of 200,068 looks much the same as the former. The difference this time, is we were able to see their deaths almost first hand. It wasn't watching a smart bomb home in on a building. It wasn't some tracer fire destroying a truck. It was real people, really dying. Too bad CNN wouldn't replay the film footage every night, though of course from a different angle, and stave-off disinterested minds. Something might be accomplished, otherwise. —Chris Miller

Olympic Experience opens to all

The hype and hoopla surrounding the Olympic Games will come to a peak tomorrow at the Opening Ceremonies of the 1994 Winter Olympics in Lillehammer, Norway. The torch will be lit and it will ignite emotions from people all over the world. Fiddles and dancing will highlight these Opening Ceremonies. For the next two and a half weeks, we will be exposed to a view into the heritage and culture of Norway. We will see how the people live, what they do and everything we never thought we should know. The Opening Ceremonies always seem glorious and stimulating as the Parade of nations puts each nation participating in the Olympics in the spotlight for just a moment. This allows some less prominent countries to be recognized and placed on a pedestal in front of all other nations. Nations such as the United States and Germany are then at the same level as these smaller countries. At least all countries are equal at one point in the Olympic experience. Where else does this equality occur? The athletes from all over the globe will convene and carry on the traditions of the Olympic games. Men and women alike will race down ski slopes, zoom down tracks in bobsleds and skate across the ice in all different forms. A total celebration of accomplishment and achievement will result from each event. Medals with chunks of gold, silver and bronze will be awarded at the completion of each event. Three competitors/teams in each event will leave Lillehammer with what they went for, others will leave disappointed. Competitors who come to Lillehammer will leave with experiences that may be more rewarding than a medal could ever be. The Olympic Experience can prove to be eventful and exciting for all of these athletes. Housing in the Olympic Village offers athletes an opportunity to meet people from all over the globe. Different cultures, different lifestyles and different backgrounds are all staying together in one area of Lillehammer. People from China, Russia, Great Britain and numerous other countries will all sleep, eat and interact with each other for almost three weeks. These experiences will educate people on how other athletes live and their cultural traditions.

Habits and lifestyles will reveal to others what it is like in their native lands. No where else is this type of opportunity open to people from all over the world. The Olympic Experience also offers athletes the chance to compete against their idols and inspirations. Young athletes can meet their idols and learn the ideals that will someday help them reach the level of performance older athletes have. Some have gone to Lillehammer specifically for

Valentine's Day requires insincere gestures of affection

I have many experiences not unlike others when it comes to relationships. I go out with someone, date for a while, end it. Typical. Perhaps some of you have also had the more specific experience of the "Valentine's Day Blues." What are the "Valentine's Day Blues," you might ask? When you find yourself spending Valentine's Day going to the library or slaving over a box of chocolates (which you bought for yourself, of course) you know you have reached it. Spending Valentine's Day alone isn't bad — looking back, some of most memorable Valentine's Day's have been spent without a significant other. In fact, last Valentine's Day I discovered its true meaning after a recent break-up. You see, people often band together on or around Valentine's Day when they realize no flowers, dates, or cards will be coming their way — at least not from anyone other than a friend. Within my circle of friends, none of us know for sure where Valentine's Day originally came from. While watching television the other night, it was suggested that St. Valentine was beheaded and the holiday was named after him. As I heard this, I could not help but think of how much sense that made. People really do lose their heads over this auspicious occasion. I suppose at one time Valentine's Day had some other significant meaning (mythological or religious), however, its meaning has been lost somewhere. Now, it appears to be a conspiracy formulated by the greeting card industry in order to boost sales during an otherwise lagging season. How many people are born in February? Hallmark would have to sell a lot of birthday cards to make up for the money they would lose if Valentine's Day didn't exist. Not to mention flower shops, candy companies and everyone else with the brains to dip into the trillion dollar Valentine conspiracy. Think about it, cards ranging from "condolences" to "I love you" are sold tenfold during this season. Who other than the likes of Hallmark benefit from this holiday?

• SEE V-DAY PAGE 8

V-DAY

I know, all of you happy-happy-joy-joy people in Disneyland relationships are saying you benefit from this day. Do you really benefit, or does it merely empty an already tightly squeezed pocket-book — all in the name of love? Please. People who are really in love do not need a specific day to express their feelings — anyone who does, needs to do some serious re-evaluating. Anniversaries, birthdays or any other day can be used for expressing feelings to the one you love. Why are people required to give to loved ones on this specific day? Anyone who doesn't think it's a requirement hasn't looked around stores lately — they push so hard with advertising people buy things just to keep the Hallmark Gods happy.

To me, Valentine's Day is for the weak of heart who need a specific day — a commercial, Hallmark-founded one at that — to express what should be long-acknowledged feelings. Isn't it more romantic to be surprised? Occasional flowers or a special dinner, as opposed to love being thrown in our faces for "one day only" with a special discount for each additional dozen roses purchased? Maybe Valentine's Day should be changed to "Love-for-the-Usually-Love-Impaired Day." Valentine's Day in its early years must have been great — homemade valentines and flowers picked from the garden... Now we have Valentine's Day popping up in stores before Christmas is over offering tasteful gifts like edible underwear. Isn't technology terrific?

OK, I admit this year I want to do something special on Valentine's Day, but for different reasons. Although I haven't followed the Hallmark Valentine's Day craze, Feb. 14 will be memorable. For me, it will be a celebration of the fact I have maintained a relationship through this dreaded day — not a proclamation of my eternal love. I might even spend it with my friends simply because I don't want to test Fate. Besides, they always buy the best chocolate. One thing is for sure. The next time I tell someone "I love you" it will not be sponsored by Hallmark, but my heart. Hopefully, that is how it will be for you too.

Kiwanis sponsor food drive today

I'd like to take this opportunity to inform students that the University of Idaho's newly formed Kiwanis Organization will be conducting its first food drive this weekend. Members and any interested parties will meet in the SUB Vandal Lounge Friday at 4:30 p.m. We will hand out collection bags to a series of neighborhoods within Moscow. We will then meet on Saturday at 1 p.m. in the Vandal Lounge to collect filled bags from the households. All help is welcome and any participation is appreciated.

Science needs 'tools of trade'

I wish to take issue with those parts of your editorial of Feb. 1 titled, "Higher Educators Need to Refocus," in which you imply that professors in the sciences spend the majority of their time trying to raise funds for graduate research and that undergraduate education is ignored. This may be a common mind-set among UI students, but it is simply not true. Unlike the usual case for education in the humanities, it is necessary in the sciences to provide modern, specialized instrumentation to our undergraduate and graduate students, as these are the tools of our trade. For the most part, this instrumentation is acquired through research grants, as the state provides minimal funds for this purpose. (Our department receives less than $10,000 per year for equipment from the state of Idaho, whereas we need at least $50,000 if we are to accommodate our students' needs effectively.)

Our majors, together with students from other disciplines, learn valuable research skills by having access to state-of-the-art instrumentation; this is one way by which undergraduate students in the sciences benefit directly from research grants. Furthermore, by no means do all of our grant proposals focus upon basic research projects for graduate students and faculty. For example, we have been working very hard for the past two and a half years to raise $100,000 to match a National Science Foundation grant for a $200,000 nuclear magnetic resonance spectrometer that will be used entirely for undergraduate instruction (predominately at the sophomore level). The whole process to acquire these funds effectively precluded any other proposals for instructional or research purposes that would have required matching funds from being written during this time.

You should understand that university professors are responsible not only for disseminating existing knowledge, but also for exploring, interpreting and teaching new theories and information. This responsibility cannot be fulfilled without research and scholarly activity. Funding for research in the sciences comes largely from federal agencies, with much smaller amounts from industry, private donors and state funds. The "cof-fers" that we are increasing are, of course, not for our personal benefit; they are for the benefit of you and your fellow students.

Finally, I must take issue with your remarkable statement that the "real science" departments bring in "millions of dollars from large corporations...for research." In practice, it is incredibly difficult to persuade any Idaho corporation to donate even a few thousand dollars to support either undergraduate or graduate education. Industry is extremely focused on how they spend their extra mural dollars and the few large corporations in Idaho have been approached by so many different groups from UI that they have been bled dry. Your editorial made it sound as if all science faculty have to do is to ask and a number of large corporations would send checks for hundreds of thousands of dollars. If this were only true!

Thanks for nice culture coverage

Many thanks to covering the second annual International Afternoon of Culture, Costume and Cuisine. What an absolute joy it was to open the Tuesday morning Argonaut and read the fine editorial by Katé Lyons-Holestine and to see the magnificent center-fold story and photographs by Tristan Trotter and Karin Yahr. The reporting was accurate and sensitive, written in a positive and caring manner.

Seeing the flags presented and observing the pride of the flag bearers as they presented their colors was a highlight of my life.

Yes, there is a great diversity on campus, which presents a unique opportunity to explore and learn more about each other. This program afforded an opportunity to do just that, through conversation at the tables and viewing the models and dancers.

IFA is a collaborative program of ASUI and the International Programs Office. The IFA office is located in the basement of the Student Union Building, or you may call 885-7841 to learn how you can become involved.

Thanks, Argonaut, for a job well done.

Ice skaters and skiers watch these idols perform and are amazed by the ease in which they perform. They all put in the same amount of time and energy in training, but the height of accomplishment comes with time and patience. The Olympic Experience frees people to workout and practice at the same time. This time and experience between the idol and the admirer — where else is this offered?

The global economy - freeing our markets, freeing our consciences.

University breeding ground for thought

Commentary
Ted Burton

I've convinced myself that the University of Idaho is merely a home-town proud big business get-up wrapped in the sleepy ivy vines and New England bricks of a real college.

You see, the primary goal of a university is supposed to be the fostering of a comfortable learning environment. It's the educational equivalent of a poofy chaise longue; a cross-legged chit-chat in front of a crumbling radiator; an alone time stroll through a natural, rustic setting.

The latter, no doubt, was the intention of creating our own woody arboretum.

This shrubby little woodland is a fraud. In attempting to shush and brush past the students' need for a peaceful retreat, our university created, not a chirp and wriggle-filled nuance of nature, but a cheap cardboard cut-out pasted against the outskirts of our acreage.

We humans have a difficult time with Nature. We've tried so hard to distance ourselves from its control we have forgotten our obligations. Of course with the present buck in population it would be oh-so corny to voice an objection to city expansions. However, insisting on the preservation — or even recreation — of small wildlife reserves (places where pine trees can drop their seeds as irresponsibly as all get out leaving over-crowding concerns to rodents and insects) is a pretty good idea.

But the University of Idaho would prefer to keep the knees of their bureaucratic slacks clean (ironed pleasantly. "Don't worry, friends, our little college students won't realize a thing. Let's just whisper) and they're content with offering nothing but an image of Nature to appease our need for an occasional picnic place.

O.K., here's the scandal: It seems that the UI poisons ground squirrels and badgers in order to protect the trees planted inside our arboretum.

A habitat has been created and then, as Nature sheds a few layers from outside on the porch: as she puckers into heart-shaped lips ready, willing and steaming proof of animal integration, our college kicks her off our property. Sure, animal teeth might make a quick meal of a birch tree. Nature approves — but we don't.

Also a swinging animal rights activist who works on campus, has offered to live-trap any large mammals posing a threat to Nature and to relocate them to the wildlife sanctuary baby-sat by Palouse Voice for Animals. However, the Arboretum Director declined.

What is the purpose of the Arboretum if not to create a shrine in honor of Nature? Perhaps it was designed to appease a few aging, white-tufted alumni who decided they would snip the university from their wills without one. So a makeshift habitat was created. One with trees and no animals.

A university should not be approached in the same minimalist, keep-the-waiting-room-clean-but-don't-waste-time-on-the-bathrooms mentality of a business.

A real college is not comprised of a few administrators cloaked in red tape but is, instead, a breeding ground of thought and controversy. Until students entirely manage the affairs of their own schools; until internal uprisings are considered cute and active by the administration; until each of us grabs our education by the ovaries, we're schooling in a factory.

always be working for the students and enlarging the horizons of effectiveness.

The name issue shows that the student body can make decisions favorable to students. The changes being made are important (and in my opinion, mostly positive). However, changing who makes the changes is more important. Those will be the real changes.

Answering Senator Wilson's challenge, one realistic way to increase voting: Have the Senate (after the formality of approving "Student Union") replace all signs of Idaho Union with signs of Student Union. Then have elected ASUI officials state, on the record, the following: "On the name issue we were essentially powerless between election day and Feb. 2. It was widespread acts of student expression all over this campus that decided this issue in favor of students. Such acts can decide bigger issues in favor of students in the future."

Yes, let it be widely known that normally apolitical students decided the name issue in favor of students. Let it be clearly known that such students all over this campus can decide important issues in their lives. Yes, tell them of this most important lesson from the name of controversy, and they will vote! They will vote!

—Brian Kirby

Letter to the Editor

Students decided name

In my first letter (2-1), I asserted that neither the Union Board, nor its parent, the Senate, had the power to name the SUB. This is why the referendum was non-binding. Instead, SUB Director David Mucci had the power. This is supported by the fact that it was when Mr. Mucci came forward on Feb. 2 and agreed to replace "Idaho Union" with "Student Union" that people considered the issue resolved. Clearly, it was Mr. Mucci's opinion that mattered most.

I applaud the senators who put the referendum on the ballot. But between election day and Feb. 2, when Mr. Mucci was forced by general student outcry to reconsider, the Union Board. The Senate had no real power whatsoever in deciding the name. I laugh when Senator Sean Wilson writes, (Argonaut 2-4), "it's high noon for a vote of the senate."

Before Feb. 2, a Senate vote would have meant nothing, and Mr. Wilson knows it. Now quoting Senator Wilson's letter, "Did nothing ever occur to anyone that is would be much easier for the Union Board to just roll over and call it the SUB? How about the senate which will probably have the final say on the idea of a name change?" The Union Board and Senate didn't matter. Again from Mr. Wilson's letter, "The Board of Regents and the President of the University must ratify the change. This can only be done with the consensus of the people who most frequently associate or use the building — students." Yeah right, Mr. Wilson. It took us three months to get our own SUB Director to listen to us. Senator Wilson attributes the power to name the building to the Union Board, the Senate, the Board of Regents, Elisabeth Zinser and lastly, the students.

Senator Wilson, stop attempting to confuse us about the true structure of power that has been in operation. The ASUI is effective only as far as the people with power will allow. Mr. Wilson writes that he works with the administration. Senator Wilson is supposed to work for the students. Without a strong, large, organized student support base, there will never be any option but to work with the administration. In this case, working with the administration and working for the administration are the same thing! With an active student body, we have the option of whether or not to work with the administration, but we'll

Krasner takes over Shakespeare

David Krasner, at right, and his cast rehearse As You Like It which is scheduled to open March 1 and run through March 6 in the Hartung Theatre. He has changed the casting to include more females, rather than an exclusively male cast. He has, by doing this, changed much of the meanings of the traditional Shakespearean comedy.

Director from New York adjusts to living in small town Moscow

Tristan Trotter
Staff Writer

This year the University of Idaho theatre department has acquired an Eastern flair — in the human form of David Krasner, one of the department's newest faculty members.

Soon this spring, we will receive the benefit of his expertise, as he makes his UI directing debut with As You Like It, which opens March 1 and runs through March 6.

Born in New York, N.Y., Krasner was involved with drama throughout high school, and acted in a great deal of community theatre as well.

He received his BFA from Carnegie Mellon University.

From there he launched a thirteen-year acting career in New York, including work on various T.V. commercials and a minor role on the soap opera, Guiding Light.

If any of you seasoned viewers remember the character Carnival Barker, a southern gentleman who occasionally appeared on that show, then you knew David Krasner long before the UI.

Krasner says that soap opera acting is a lucrative endeavor, but the glamour wears off pretty quickly.

"It was good money, but it was simply becoming a job, and I lost interest once my ego was satisfied," he said.

In addition to making television appearances, Krasner also graced the Off-Off Broadway stage several times, and even dabbled in the movies, securing a small part in the film, Ragtime.

True to the "struggling actor" persona, Krasner did work as a waiter — at a "wonderful Italian restaurant" — and, at the same time, started teaching at the American Academy of Dramatic Arts.

It was as a result of this first instructional position that Krasner would eventually decide to make teaching his focus.

In the meantime, though, he also wrote quite a bit: articles, book reviews, even three plays of his own. One, Lillie and Lou, was performed twice Off-Off Broadway and nominated for several awards.

Of the other two, one was self-produced, and the other a finalist for the Elmira College Play Writing Award.

Teaching is Krasner's passion. It took him five years to get two degrees, an MFA from Virginia Commonwealth University and a Ph.D. from Tufts in Boston. Now, after fifteen years of acting, Krasner says emphatically, "It's time to work."

He received four other offers besides UI's (from two California schools and two private institutions in the East).

UI had the best reputation: "It was the only one with a graduate program, and it had a strong acting focus, with an emphasis on the really practical classes."

Krasner says he also appreciates the UI's demand for research.

He feels it's important to bring the "cutting edge" to the classroom, and that students should learn from others' successes. "Because," he believes, "the arts change so quickly."

In an effort to bring this edge to his own classes, Krasner will be traveling at various times during the year to places as far away as Chicago, Gainesville, Pittsburgh, and even Germany for various conferences.

Krasner admits, though, that making the change from New York to Moscow was quite a culture shock. It took some adjustment to settle into the small town atmosphere.

He has taken advantage of our closeness to Pullman and Seattle, and says that he's quite satisfied with his experience thus far.

And speaking of change — Shakespeare is probably rolling over as he observes from the grave Krasner's work on As You Like It.

Shakespeare, as most of us know, is dominated by men — because the only actors in his time were male.

For the past few weeks I have been busy collecting the best and I hope most fun opening pickup lines on the University of Idaho campus. Apologies to anyone who is offended by them. If you were one of the inventive people I interviewed, thank you.

Please remember, these pickup lines are for amusement only and should not be used to start a conversation with a member of the opposite sex.

To do so will avoid any warranty either expressed or implied. I repeat, do not use these lines on your own. Unless you really want to or think one might work.

If a man wants to meet the woman who just caught his eye, he might confidently ask: "So, what are we having for breakfast?" or "When should I pick you up Friday night?"

He might instead try the clever poet routine by saying, "If I could rewrite the alphabet I'd be sure to put U and I together." or, "What's your favorite letter in the alphabet? Mine is U."

If the poor testosterone-laden lad has sufficient talent for recitation, he might use the following line, "I've been to Maine, to Spain, and to Spokane. Smoked dope, and met the pope. I've been to two bull shows and three county fairs, but quite honestly ma'am, your the prettiest thing I've ever seen."

Big men on campus try scintillation:

- "Are your feet tired? They should be, you have been running through my mind all night."
- "Was your dad a thief? Then who took the stars from the sky and put them in your eyes?"
- "You're so sweet it makes me want to brush my teeth."

VALENTINE'S 1994

Wearables win women's hearts not chocolate

Dave Lewis
Staff Writer

Just before Valentine's Day, many of us are searching for just the right gift.

Because it isn't easy to find an appropriate gift for a loved one, I asked several women what gift they would most enjoy on Valentine's Day.

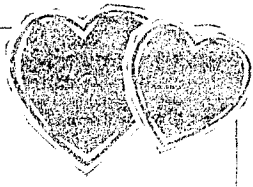

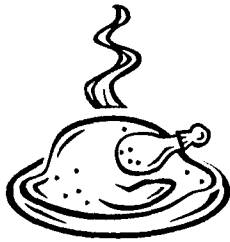

I shouldn't have been surprised when, of the women surveyed, only one wanted candy. She is, however, a sleek young woman with no need to count calories.

Many of the those surveyed professed a desire for flowers. Roses of any color are popular, with white roses, in the opinion of one woman, signifying true and long lasting love.

Another idea enjoying the popular support of the fairer sex is a dinner date. One group of women ganged up on gift-buying men by deciding the perfect Valentine's Day gift is a dinner featuring candles, flowers and including a bottle of wine.

Clothes are always appreciated by women. However, when shopping for the right gift, remember Melanie Griffith's words of wisdom from the movie, Working Girl.

You may remember as she tries on yet another gift of lingerie, she says to her boyfriend, "Just once I'd like to get something I could wear in public." Men, it seems, will always be men.

According to Lamont's sales associate Angela Sawyer, men who choose to ignore Griffith's hint should be less cowardly when shopping in the intimate apparel department.

She says, "Men, when they come in by themselves, usually start by looking through all the long fluffy robes. Next they discover maybe they don't want a long robe; a shorter one would be better. When I show them the shorter robes, they suddenly decide that something sleeveless is what they really wanted. I then guide them to the silky nighties with spaghetti straps. It is from there they casually glance over at the sexy teddies they were looking for all the time and buy one of those."

Child Care Center offers romance while fundraising

Charla Hoppins
Contributing Writer

Pullman will once again boast a fine Italian restaurant just in time for Valentine's Day.

Delicacies including clam-stuffed pasta shells to French chocolate truffles will be served along with candlelight.

Hermosa Child Care Center in Pullman will sponsor the Valentine's Day dinner, making the evening tax deductible.

"This maybe a fund raiser for the center, but it will be no spaghetti feast!" said director Patrick Knowles, himself a former professional chef and baker. "The setting will be romantic and the food will be the best quality."

Main courses include homemade ravioli with choice of sauce, clam-stuffed pasta shells, and Romano chicken.

Desserts will include a large variety of delicacies, such as chocolate cheesecake and French chocolate truffles.

The dinner, which also includes fresh Italian bread, desert and coffee, will be held at St. Thomas More, NE 820 B Street, in Pullman, with wine available at $3 per glass. Reservations are required.

There is enough room for eight couples at both 6 p.m. and at 7:30 p.m. Tickets cost $15 per person

Open Mike amazes audience

Tristan Trotter
Staff Writer

They took the stage. Three guys with a definitely mischievous glint in their eyes. One had a guitar. One had a hat. One had a voice. It was the perfect combination (for what, I don't know). But they certainly had something to say...sing...well, I haven't yet determined exactly what they did. But it was unique.

It was Saturday evening in the Vandal Cafe — Open Mike Nite. I wasn't entirely sure what to expect (ever notice every critic says that?), but what I got really made for an unusual and strangely entertaining experience.

The first act that evening, described above, was a group with a name I'm not sure I can put in the paper (and I know I couldn't spell it anyway) and was made up of University of Idaho student Dax McMenamin (the voice) and two University of Oregon students, Jeff Hagerstrand (the guitar) and J. T. Billeter (the hat). The group's vocal/guitar creations fell somewhere between music and shouting, and bordered on the obscene. It was all in the name of art...I think.

Next on stage was Sam Lyman, a mandolin player who is part of several music groups in Moscow, including the Idaho Old Time Fiddlers.

He did some amazing picking, and managed to pull Irish, folk, and Greatful Deadish tunes all out of the same instrument.

Open Mike Night Review

Steve Cornwell and Hans Foss were close on Lyman's heels, sharing some original electric guitar music with the Open Mike audience. Admittedly "living room" performers, the duo's appearance constituted Steve and Hans' first stage experience.

Christine Lewis took the mike next and brought a little bit of Scotland to the cafe with several traditional tunes and some poetry. A couple songs called for audience participation, but the timid crowd seemed hesitant to add their voices to Christine's own lyrical tones. Washington State University student Todd Walter, an Open Mike veteran, accompanied himself on the guitar, bringing several original works to the program. Relaxed and comfortable, he quipped with the audience between numbers.

Particularly impressive was the next performer, Clark Carpenter, who turned the little brown piano next to the stage into an exciting voice for the blues.

An avid Muddy Waters fan, Clark told me he'd been playing since the first grade, but only had about five years of lessons — he taught himself the blues.

Hopefully, Clark will not make this, his first Open Mike experience, the last.

The next performer, I was told by Jed Denner, the ASUI Coffeehouse committee member in charge that evening, has a cult following. He is Matt Foreman — and let it suffice to say he has his own style. Led Zeppelin, AC/DC and Elton John were all paid tribute through the whine of Matt's guitar and his unique vocal work — a tribute that no one else but Mr. Foreman could have paid.

But when the chips fell, he was the only one who attracted two young video tapers, who told me they'd come just to capture Matt on film ... Hmmm ... If you've never been to an Open Mike at the UI, it's worth it just to experience this young artist ... I think.

The last performer, however, was the highlight for me. He is the news director at KUOI, Eric Cannavaro, and he told me after he had performed that when he walked up to the piano that night, he had no idea what he was going to do. Well, he could have fooled me. Eric's piece was one he composed himself.

Dear Jason

Jason exempt from true love

Dear Jason,

I've been an avid reader of your column ever since it started a few weeks ago. I'm intrigued with your complex and thoughtful answers. The fact is Jason, I'm in love with you.

You can call me a "starry eyed" college girl, looking for Mr. Right, but I'm not. In fact, I'm simply a pragmatic, "down-to-earth" girl, with nothing but good intentions.

What should I do Jason? I think I've been struck by Cupid's arrow.

—Your Valentine

Struck through the brain apparently. Before anybody goes and starts falling in love with Jason, perhaps I should reveal a little about myself. I have been shoved around from house to house ever since I can remember, and due to the electro-shock therapy, that hasn't been that long. I always seemed to have loving parents, but they kept disappearing.

I have never been in love, nor will I ever be. I know that nobody is as good as dear old Mom, rest her soul. I'm very flattered, but I am afraid that I would be no good for you. Things might be fine for a while, but eventually we would go for that walk near a lake and you too would join my previous foster parents. I don't like doing those things. OK? Well, maybe a little, its just something I have to do. I know you'll understand.

Well enough about me, I hope to see you around.

Dear Jason,

A couple of years ago I had my nose pierced to be different. Now everyone has their nose pierced. I am stuck with this hole in my nose, what should I do now?

-Violated in Moscow

Jason has always been a big fan of body piercing. I admire you for doing something just "to be different." People who have rational reasons for doing things drive me crazy. Everyone is out just to prove a point. I admire your mindless quest to be different. Body piercing is great because it is something you can do on the spur of the moment, but will last a lifetime.

As for what you should do now, Jason would have to suggest something even more attention getting. How about piercing the skin under your neck? Jason has never seen this done, but hey there is a first time for everything. Don't bother going to a "licensed" body piercer, do it yourself. Cleanliness and painlessness are overrated. If you do it yourself, no matter how bad the infection is, you have done a job that you and your family will be proud of for years to come.

Braaten laces music, poetry with touch of rock

Halo DeWitt
Lifestyles Editor

Cathy Braaten will perform a mix of blues and soul poetry, laced with rock and roll tonight at 8 p.m. in the Student Union Building Ballroom.

Braaten started in the music business well after she earned her college degree in public relations and advertising. In college she was an entertainment buyer similar to the staff in the ASUI Productions office.

After college, she started a career in journalism. According to Braaten, singing was something she always wanted to do and eventually she decided to go for it.

"I didn't want to get to age 50, look back and think, 'Gee I wish I had done that,'" she said. So she decided to see what she could do with it and "just started playing." She had already sent some of her songs to Nashville and won song writing awards.

She says that her voice is her main instrument and that her guitar is only secondary. Her voice is definitely a rich and resonating instrument. Her songs mirror an intensely personal reflection of her experiences that touch emotional chords in others.

In a couple of weeks, Braaten will release her first full-length CD titled "Ride the Fader" on Channel 8 records out of Minneapolis, Minn.

She has been in the Pacific Northwest for about a week and a half and has been touring all over Washington, Idaho and Oregon.

Tickets are $3 for undergraduates and $5 general admission. Tickets are available at Ticket Express and at the door.

Cathy Braaten will perform a mix of blues, soul, poetry and rock and roll tonight in the Student Union Ballroom. In two weeks, she will release her first full length CD.

- "Your dad must have been a jeweler, because he put diamonds in you're eyes."
- Or my favorite of this group, "Do you want to jog together? Your pace or mine?"

The response of a somewhat dejected woman I interviewed was, "How should I know? Nobody ever tried to pick me up."

The antithetical perspective a male shows the ultimate in self confidence, he said, "I don't like pick up lines, they are all clichés. Besides that, I don't need them."

Another male student's attitude is best described as clueless. His best line is "Can I buy you a beer?"

Some opening lines are not greeted with the desired response, however.

A young woman related this anecdote. "A guy I know always comes on to girls by saying they have a cute butt."

One girl was so embarrassed that she left the room walking sideways so he wouldn't check her out while watching her leave."

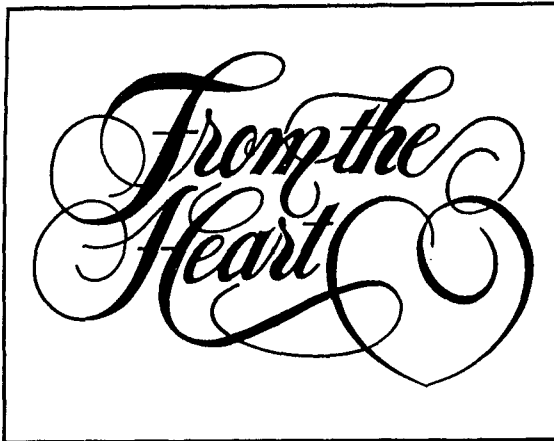

Another "ice breaker" obviously requiring nerve is a classic. A boy wets his thumb on his tongue, then touches the girl of choice on the shoulder then says, "Oh, let me help you out of those wet clothes."

Women at the UI are not above using innovative opening lines, either.

A woman I talked with says she sometimes tells a man she is interested in that her friends bet she wouldn't have the nerve to talk to him. And she just won the money.

To my judgmental reaction she replied, "I know it's a lie, but they lie to us, so I can lie to them."

Peels of laughter came from the group of women as one of them recycled a man's line by saying, "I think those clothes would look better on my bedroom floor."

A classmate tells of a girl saying, "That guy over there is hitting on me. If he keeps it up can I kiss you so he'll think I'm with you?"

A woman reported her personal favorite lines, "I'm seeing double and feeling single so why don't we get together?" and "Your not so bad looking when I'm drunk."

"Didn't you used to have long hair?" actually worked for one UI student. He married the girl last summer.

It has been fun to collect these lines, however there have been some problems.

One woman, when asked if she had any good pick up lines answered, "I can't tell you, well to tell the truth, I won't tell you."

Another female UI student obviously didn't understand the question I posed to her. I asked, "Have you heard any really good pick up lines?"

She answered, "Yes I have, but that certainly isn't one of them."

Krasner, however, has decided to change roles, switch relationships, and manipulate the circumstances of As You Like It.

It has now become the woman's play he feels it is inherently written to be with commentary on intelligence, independence and a woman's ability to live her own life, free of male domination.

Complete with dancing, a live band and original songs by Loreena McKennitt, the show should prove to be a real revel. Plan to support

UI theatre by coming to see As You Like It on March 1 and take advantage of the experience of our new faculty member: David Krasner.

Tickets are $5 for UI students, $7 for senior citizens and $8 for adults from Ticket Express.

Dynamic and moving, it had the energy of Billy Joel—harnessed by the grace of George Winston.

Mostly, though, it was Eric. A first year graduate student, Cannavaro has been playing for seven to eight years, but doesn't read or write a note of music.

Impressive, considering the intricacies of his musical creation. So if you don't come to see Matt (and I can't imagine you'd pass up the opportunity), come to the next Open Mike Nite in hopes that Eric Cannavaro will make another appearance.

Actually, Open Mike Nite is worth your time for the sheer fun of it. "It's a chance for people to perform who would never get to do it anywhere else," says Jan Abramson, ASUI Productions program coordinator. Jed Dennler shared her sentiments. "It's always pretty good...if nothing else, it's darn interesting." The next Open Mike is March 5. I encourage you to show up and support these stylistic performers. It's all in the name of art...I think...(insert smile here).

HEARTS

Sawyer remembers only one brave man who walked directly to the teddies. She wishes more men were courageous. She also admits however, that thong panties have caused even more embarrassment for men buying intimate apparel than teddies.

When asked what she wanted for Valentine's Day, Sawyer said, "A boyfriend would be nice."

A former sales associate at The Bon, Melanie Lewis, says women have conflicting attitudes about "their" department.

One day, just before Christmas an obviously distraught woman complained to Lewis about a man being allowed to shop in intimate apparel.

The customer was so offended by the man's mere presence, she promised not to shop in the store again.

Later the same day, another woman came in needing a bra of a specific design. When asked to describe the bra, she calmly unbuttoned her blouse and exhibited it. With a show instead of telling, Lewis knew exactly which bra she wanted. It is no wonder men feel uneasy shopping for intimate apparel.

Women's outer wear is a safer gift idea. A sweater, blouse or scarf is usually a good gift choice. You can increase your odds of success if you know what colors go together. If you don't understand color fashion, you might benefit from my gift buying experience.

When shopping for my wife, I take the skirt, pants or whatever with me when shopping for another garment to "go" with them. The sales people are paid to know what colors look good and will help if given a chance.

The best way to see the Grand Canyon is early, before the rest of the tourists arrive. No photo or video can fully capture its grandeur. For someone from Estonia, seeing the natural wonders of the United States, fulfills unexpected dreams. Ten miles across, "as the crow flies" the Grand Canyon attracts thousands of visitors each year.

Camera can't capture Canyon

The full moon was creating mysterious shadows over the desert landscape. Creature-like trees with twisted, branching trunks provided an ideal birth for shadows, establishing an atmosphere not belonging to this world.

We arrived in this special place, Joshua Tree National Monument, late at night, and were now hurrying from the road and car to find a spot in the back country for our tent. This night we could set the tent under a Joshua tree.

Even in daylight, Joshua trees retain their wondrous look. What attracts one person can annoy another. An early California explorer, John C. Fremont, on his first trip across the Mojave Desert, wrote about Joshua trees that "their stiff and ungraceful forms make them to the traveler the most repulsive tree in the vegetable kingdom".

Indeed, the look of the tree is very distinctive in the vegetable world, as it takes interesting shapes. The name Joshua tree was bestowed by Mormons, traveling from Utah to California, to whom its limbs resembled the arms of the prophet Joshua leading them westward.

Traveling through the Monument, it was a challenge to see how many different shapes of the tree we could find. On rare occasions, we found trees that had long, undivided trunks. Later, we read that trees with no branches have never blossomed, as they branch only after flowering. The flowered tree then forks into two or more limbs just below the old bud. Directions of branching are random, thus creating the distinctive, unpredictable forms.

Strange-looking Joshua trees in Joshua Tree National Monument, cacti and indigenous desert palms in Anza-Borrego Desert State Park and the world's tallest trees in Redwoods National Park — we had seen all these within the last 10 days of our trip to California. This abundance of new places made us even more ambitious.

Southern California is a spacious area to drive. Interstate 40 cuts through the Mojave Desert, where mountainous stretches vary with valleys or plateaus. Half of the time we drove along a 2000-foot-high plateau with snowy mountain peaks in the background of desert scenery. Rare Joshua trees, typical of

I had studied about these places in my geography classes at high school. I knew the lowest point in America, 282 feet, is in Death Valley; and the Grand Canyon was the largest canyon in the world; and was jealous of the people who could see it.

Mojave desert, emerged out from the landscape.

Especially empty and dead are the surroundings of Death Valley. A sign on the road at Shoshone informed us of "next services in 72 miles." Such signs cannot be found in Estonia, where six or seven miles of road without any human marks are rare.

I had studied about these places in my geography classes at high school. I knew that the lowest point in America, 282 feet, is in Death Valley; and the Grand Canyon was the largest canyon in the world; and was jealous of the people who could see it.

Death Valley holds different points of interest. Diversity of landscape is widespread in this area, which ranges from snowcapped mountains to wind-formed sand dunes. The lowest point itself, called Badwater, is a flat area covered with a layer of salt. The image of being 282 feet under sea level makes it an amazing and individual place.

The mountains of Death Valley still hold gold, even after surviving several gold-mining booms. Hope of becoming rich has always helped people to overcome harsh conditions; at the beginning of the century, life must have been hard in Death Valley, where water is scarce and summer temperatures are 120 degrees Fahrenheit.

In summer, visitors keep away from Death Valley; this time of the year it was too crowded for our liking. All the camping grounds were full, so a parking lot had been opened for campers to set their tents. This was our last warm night.

We took a scenic drive through Death Valley, crossed the Daylight Pass in the Funeral Mountains, and found ourselves in the state of Nevada. Nevada is the sixth state I have visited during my half-year stay here. After spending an hour driving through the congested heart of Las Vegas, I saw my seventh state, Arizona, in the same day.

Remembering hot Vegas and warm nights in the desert, I became worried when we noticed white roadsides near the Grand Canyon. It was snow. Having arrived in Grand Canyon late at night, we faced sub-freezing temperatures and six-inch-deep snow. Nevertheless, because of numerous campers, we had difficulties finding a place at the campground within the snowy forest. One has to see the Grand Canyon to appreciate it. No photograph or video can give the real measure of this powerful piece of nature. Having had enough of snow-sleeping, we got up at dawn and packed our gear. We thought we were smart to start viewing the canyon before the hordes of tourists and motor-homers. Only a couple of photographers had been ready at this hour in the freezing but gorgeous scenery, waiting for the special moment of sunrise.

The red-pink-blue sky gave place to the first sun rays. We witnessed the canyon changing color and moods. We took the scenic West Rim Drive that follows the rim for eight miles. The Colorado River can be seen only from Hopi, Mojave, and Pima Points. The distance across the canyon "as the crow flies" is 10 miles, according to the Park's Guide.

For hiking in the canyon back country permits are required. Permits can be obtained four months earlier through mail or in person, with a specific night-by-night itinerary.

I am starting to believe these tough requirements and preparations are worthwhile to undertake. Maybe it would be a real challenge. Definitely it provides a degree of solitude, wildness, and silence that is hard to find in the 'upper' part of the National Park.

We left Grand Canyon at noon to head back to Moscow. The aim of our trip was to get introduced to various areas in the western states. Now we know what we would choose for thorough exploring next time.

BSC battle held in Kibbie for lead

Men's Basketball returns to the Kibbie Dome for this weekend.

The Vandals spent last week on the road and was suppose to play the game to determine who was to be the sole leader of the Big Sky Conference. They did that, won, and was sole leader-for about 24 hours. However, they were anticipated to beat Boise State, experienced a disappointing loss and the conference entered into a four way race for the conference.

Tonight at 6 p.m., the University of Idaho will host the Montana State University Bobcats. The Bobcats are one of four teams tied for the top of the BSC. Earlier in the season, the Vandals beat MSU at the buzzer by two points.

Tomorrow night, the Vandals will play the University of Montana Grizzlies. Idaho upset the Grizzlies at home which snapped their undefeated 13 game win streak. Tip-off time is 7 p.m.

KUOI brings play-by-play to students

Katé Lyons-Holestine
Editor-In-Chief

Tuning in to the University of Idaho's student radio station, KUOI, can sometimes cause bewilderment and astonishment. But, this year, the station has taken on the ongoing endeavor of covering the UI Lady Vandals basketball season.

Turning your radio dial to FM 89.3 on most evenings the Lady Vandals take to the court can assure you complete play-by-play action coverage. Shea Meehan, KUOI Director, and Ryan Patano, Gem of the Mountains editor, bring you the action as it unfolds.

"KUOI felt some women's sports at the UI needed to be carried on the radio," Meehan said. "It provides an alternative to listening to men's sports which are broadcast more than women's."

"I think any exposure Lady's sports can get on the radio will help the program and the low attendance numbers," Patano added. "Maybe having the games on the radio will stimulate outside interest."

Women's sports aren't widely broadcast by radio stations. KUOI is currently contracted with the UI Athletic Department to put Lady Vandal basketball on the air.

"Currently the contract is free because no one else will bid on it. You figure the football and men's basketball contracts here are big money," Meehan said.

KUOI is scheduled to broadcast live all home games, and a select number of Big Sky Conference road games. This weekend, listeners will have a chance to follow the women's team as they take on Montana and Montana State. The pair will also follow the team to Idaho State and Boise State. They attempted to cover the Eastern Washington game in Cheney, Wash., but problems arose and the station was unable to broadcast.

In order to accomplish the broadcasting of a game to listeners, a remote system must be taken to the action. KUOI uses a six channel Yamaha mixer, microphones, headsets, a telephone interface and a compressor.

"Last but not least to receive our return air feed we use a receiver or if we're out of range from the station there are ways we can send a signal back through the telephone lines to listen to ourselves as we broadcast," Meehan said.

The equipment weighs about 150 pounds and must be taken from the station to the game for each broadcast.

UM, MSU determined not to become road kill

Andrew Longeteig
Staff Writer

After a wild road trip in southern Idaho last weekend, the men's basketball team will host two opponents that are seeking to avenge their previous defeats. These two teams are Montana State, who will play Friday, and Montana who will play the following night. To say these games are significant is a silly, dim-witted and absurd understatement.

The Montana State Bobcats (13-6, 5-2 Big Sky) are currently sharing the throne with Idaho, Weber State and Idaho State atop the Big Sky Conference after a close victory over chief rival Montana, 80-79. MSU has now won four straight games.

About three weeks ago, Idaho (12-6, 5-2) barely defeated the Bobcats in Bozeman 82-80. This was the first step in their eventual sweep of the infamous "Montana Road Trip."

The Bobcats' current tie for first-place marks the first time they have been there since the 1986-7 season; where they eventually won the Big Sky regular season title.

"This road trip is an important one for our basketball team," says MSU head coach Mick Durham. "Idaho is an outstanding team. They have three very impressive road wins, and that will really help them in the league race. With [Ben] Johnson and [Mark] Leslie outside, [Frank] Waters and [Deon] Watson inside, and Lightfoot anywhere, they are a difficult team to defend."

Idaho may have to impose their defensive talents on MSU sophomore Nico Harrison. Against Montana, the forward scored 28 points and raised his Big Sky field goal percentage to 64 percent. He was named Co-Big Sky Conference Player of the Week.

The Bobcats are an extremely well-rounded

Rugby gears up for warm weather

The team, 4-1 fall semester, looks forward to playing much stronger Canadian teams

Amy White
Staff Writer

The men's rugby team is about to begin their spring season regardless of the weather. Even though this foreign sport is not directly sponsored by the university, they still manage to have a rather large and successful team.

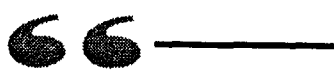

Rugby is a game very similar to football, except they are only allowed to pass backwards. Although it sounds strange to many American football lovers, there is a growing interest in the sport all over Moscow.

The field they play on is slightly wider and longer than a regular football field. The object is to get what is called a "try," which is basically a touchdown. And, yes, there is a kick allowed when the ball is entered into the try zone. However, there is no stationary spot where the kicker kicks from, rather the ball is lanced from where it is placed.

Rugby is not a game of inches and yards but a game of possession. With this in mind, the players have no intentional need of being violent. There are no blockers, as a result there are usually no broken bones after a game. Of course there are a few bruises and scratches, but no need for a waiting ambulance. In football someone commonly is seriously injured and taken from the field in an ambulance.

Moscow's club team is coached by Jason Stenezl, who has played on the team in the past. There are 30 to 45 players, depending on who shows up for games. The age range for the team is anywhere from 18-year-old freshmen to players who are 31. The team practices every Tuesday and Thursday on Guy Wicks Field.

The team plays in two seasons — fall and spring. They have also divided the play into two divisions: collegiate teams and men's

It doesn't take any particular size, you've just got to love the game.

-Mark Dobrilovic

clubs from various different places in the Northwest.

The fall season last semester was successful for the team. The team posted a record of four wins and one loss. They also played in a tournament in Boise which was a round robin format with several other teams, unfortunately they only came up with one win.

Canada has a very strong rugby program — much stronger than the United States. Therefore, the competition for the Moscow team is extremely tough. In April, they will be playing some difficult teams from Canada in a Spokane tournament.

Mark Dobrilovic is on the rugby team and commented on what it takes to be a rugby player, "it doesn't take any particular size you've just got to love the game!" He began playing rugby in California where the interest and amount of rugby at University of California at Irvine of rugby is about the same as it is in Moscow.

The rugby team, because it is not directly sponsored by the university, must take care of its own expenses. The team is able and has taken advantage of its resources to get funding. The ASUI Recreation Advisory Board appropriates money to teams that are in need. The team has used this channel to get some of its fees reduced.

The team also does certain fund raising work to raise money. Whatever cannot be raised and what is not allocated must be paid for by team members.

As soon as the cold weather lifts, the rugby season will be underway with an anxious and competitive team coming out of Moscow.

Ladies hunt out Bobcats

Bridget Lux
Staff Writer

This weekend the University of Idaho Lady Vandals travel to Montana to take on the Lady 'Cats of Montana State University and the Lady Griz of University of Montana. These games begin the second half of Big Sky Conference play.

Earlier this season, Idaho was defeated by both Montana teams, but the Vandals hope to avenge these losses and come away from Montana with a couple wins.

The starting lineup for the Vandals will undoubtedly include senior Jennifer Clary who averages 21.6 points per game and shoots almost 89 percent from the line. Clary's scoring average puts her 14th in the nation in scoring while her foul shooting is 10th in the nation. During her last visit with the Montana schools, she scored a combined 45 points to lead Idaho.

Idaho's ball handling point guard, Ari Skorpik, will also be starting for the Vandals averaging five points and three assists per game.

In the past few weeks, senior Karen Poncina moved through the line up and eventually found herself starting and pulling in the rebounds. Against Big Sky teams, she is averaging 11.6 rebounds per game compared to her previous mark of three rebounds per game in non-conference play. The final starter may be either Jeri Hymas or Amy Deterding. Deterding is averaging over nine points and seven rebounds per game while Hymas strength lies in her blocks. Hymas averages one plus blocks, six points and five rebounds per game.

Idaho v. Montana State

In their previous meeting, Idaho and MSU (5-2 in conference, 10-8 overall) went into overtime as the Lady 'Cats defeated the Vandals 77-73. Tonight, the Vandals (1-6 in conference, 1-16 overall) are in Bozeman looking for a victory.

MSU, like the Vandals, has one major scoring threat, Cass Bauer. All-American candidate Bauer, a 6-foot-4 senior center, is one of few female basketball players who averages double figures in two areas. She averages 21.1 points, 10 rebounds and a blocked shot per game. Bauer scored 40 points in her previous meeting with the Vandals. She is the strength of the Lady 'Cats but she is not alone.

Angel Nickelson, a 5-9 junior forward, and Steph Spencer, a 5-10 senior guard, contribute both points and rebounds to MSU's game. Nickelson averages over 10 points and five rebounds per game, but in the earlier match-up with the Vandals, she managed 15 points and seven rebounds. Spencer averages eight points and pulls down three rebounds per game.

The remaining starters for MSU include a 5-10 sophomore forward, Brooke Svendsen, and a 5-8 freshman guard, Shanon Smith. Both average around three points and two rebounds per game.

Idaho v. University of Montana

A 14 point spread was the outcome of their earlier meeting, but the Vandals hope to surprise the Lady Griz Saturday night.

While UM (6-1 in conference,

16-3 overall) has won 25 consecutive home games, the Vandals are preparing for their balanced offensive attack. The Lady Griz also moved up to No. 22 in the Associated Press poll after defeating in-state rival, MSU 74-58 at home.

The starting line up for the Lady Griz includes Kelly Pilcher, who was named Big Sky Athlete of the Week this past week for the second time this season.

Pilcher averages 10.3 points, seven assists, three steals and three rebounds per game. Pilcher nearly doubled her scoring average against Idaho earlier in the season by pouring in 19 points along with seven steals.

Along with Pilcher, Ann Lake and Kristy Langton are pouring in double figures as well for MSU. Lake, a 6-0 senior forward, averages 14.7 points and nine rebounds per game while Langton makes 11.2 points and pulls down six rebounds per game. Both players hit 12 points in their game against Idaho.

Sherri Brooks, a 5-9 sophomore guard, and Trish Olson, a 6-2 senior center, round out the starting five for Montana with averages of eight and four points per game respectively.

UM and BSU (17-3 overall), which stands at No. 21 in the AP Poll mark the first time two BSC teams have been named in the AP Top 25 Poll. Also, this may be the first season that two BSC teams advance to the NCAA Championships.

Tip off for both games is 6:30 p.m.

Saga continues

Matthew Andrew
Sports Editor

The on-going saga of the Tonya Harding-Nancy Kerrigan story continues and will continue into next week. The recent happening of the incident has Harding suing the U.S. Olympic Committee.

Harding has filed suit against the USOC asking for $20 million and sought to have a hearing that could prevent her skating in the Olympics blocked. According to the Spokesman-Review, "Harding has vowed she would go to the Olympics, win a gold medal and 'hang it on my wall forever.'"

The law suit that has been filed by Harding and her attorney disputes that she has complied with all rules and regulations governing the U.S. Figure Skating Association and should be allowed to compete in the Winter games. Attorney for Harding, Robert Weaver, said the suit seeks to block disciplinary hearing set for Feb. 15. He expected a hearing to be held Thursday.

The USFSA panel concludes that it has found what they call reasonable grounds exist to believe that Harding was involved in or knew of the incident and has begun disciplinary measures itself. These proceedings will not affect Harding's status as an Olympian.

The USOC scheduled a hearing to determine if Harding's role violated Olympic ethics.

The USOC was notified by Gillooly that he is willing to testify before the panel. Gillooly plead guilty to a charge of racketeering in connection with the incident. He has agreed to serve two years in prison and pay $100,000 fine as part of a plea bargain.

A long-held policy of having teammates practice together will still be adhered. Kerrigan and Harding will share ice time for practicing, however, they will not be rooming with one another. Much is not clear, except the fact that come this weekend, Harding will be an Olympian.

With the uncertainty of Harding's appearance in the Olympics, the USFSA has asked alternate Michelle Kwan to go to Lillehammer, Norway, for the Winter Games. Kwan is a 13-year-old who has only dreamt of the idea of seeing herself on videotape skating in the games.

As an alternate, Kwan will not be allowed to live in the Olympic Village or practice in the Amphitheater where the competition will take place. Instead, she will be on her own for living and training — under the guidance of her coach Frank Carroll — until Harding's status is finalized.

At last month's U.S. championships, where Kerrigan was assaulted, Kwan finished second to Harding. Once, it was clear from doctors and a panel reviewing Kerrigan's physical and mental conditions, Kwan was moved to the alternate position.

Harding is scheduled to arrive in Norway on Wednesday.

A grand jury in Multnomah County, Ore., is weighing evidence to see if the contention by Jeff Gillooly, Harding's ex-husband, that she gave the go-ahead for the attack on Kerrigan is true. The grand jury's term expires March 31, but has been extended twice.

team. Seven players are averaging at least seven points per game. MSU's weakness, however, may be their rebounding. They have only one player who averages over four rebounds per game (Dwayne Michaels, 7.2).

Meanwhile, Idaho's rebounding has been exceptional this season, although they were out rebounded for only the second time this season by Idaho State last week.

Montana State is 12-2 when scoring at least 80 points. If Idaho controls the inside game and defends the outside shot, MSU could be in trouble. MSU's deep bench, on the other hand, could pose problems for Idaho.

It will be Dome-Dreaded-Dome for MSU. They haven't won at Idaho since the 1987-88 season. This year they are 10-1 at home and 2-4 on the road. Idaho is 6-1 on their home floor.

The game will be televised live on Prime Sports Northwest. Tip-off time is at 7:05 PST.

Idaho v. Montana

After a 13-0 start, the Montana Grizzly basketball team has been deprived of their zoo peanuts, sporting a less than mediocre 3-4 Big Sky record.

All four of their losses, however, have been by a minuscule total of 13 points. Additionally, those defeats came against the first place quadra of Idaho, ISU, MSU and Weber State.

"I don't think our record is indicative of how we've competed night-after-night in league," comments Grizzly head coach Blaine Taylor. "We could easily have a better record, but we don't."

Taylor, a Montana graduate, boasts a 60-19 overall record in his three seasons at Montana.

Idaho's 74-71 victory over Montana last month in Missoula was perhaps the best Big Sky game this season. The Vandals were down eight points with only 26 seconds remaining and went on to remarkably outscore Montana 13-2 for the win, much in part to the clutch shooting of guard Mark Leslie.

Leslie, a junior, has been hands down the best clutch performer this season for Idaho. He has countless hit game-tying or go-ahead three-pointers with less than five seconds on the clock. He should help out the Vandals come tournament time.

Adds Taylor, "You see Idaho at 5-2, and you see an unprecedented first half of conference. I have never seen the standings this packed together."

Saturday's game time is at 7:05 PST.

While following the Vandals, the pair have broadcast from the radio box in Memorial Gym, the sidelines of the court in the Kibbie Dome and this weekend the two will enter new waters.

"It's not KUOI's first year doing this broadcast, but it's the first year Ryan and I have," Meehan said. "Ryan and I are still learning basketball play-by-play and each game is a new experience for us."

"Once we get started and rolling it's always fun," Patano said. "It's a nice change from print. It's nice to be able to say what you want instead of translating it into nice concise sentences."

Meehan and Patano aren't the only ones pleased with the program. Listeners have voiced an interest in hearing the broadcast.

"A lot of really dedicated fans seem to like it," Meehan said. "I don't know if we'll be back next season to do it. It depends upon much more than just women's basketball, like whether or not I'm sane enough to do it again."

Dedicated fans, Meehan and Patano like the women's basketball coverage, but it is a lower listenership program for KUOI.

"It gives us a little added diversity. We have music programming on about 85 percent of the time, 10 percent is spent on news. Sports helps round out our programming schedule."

CLOSE TO HOME JOHN McPHERSON

"Could we have separate checks? On one put me, the woman down there in the weird glasses, and that kid at the other end putting the straw in his ear. On another, the guy with the bad hairpiece, the woman. ..."

CLOSE TO HOME JOHN McPHERSON

Bob would go to any lengths to get that promotion.
