Work study increases to $1.1 million

Tim Helmke
News Editor

The University of Idaho received a huge boost from the Idaho state legislature Thursday morning.

The Joint Finance Appropriations Committee approved three measures involving the UI to include in next year's budget including a $590,000 increase in the base fund for state work study projects.

ASUI President John Marble said the JFAC met in the morning and voted to make these measures part of the budget which will be presented in late March or early April. The work study increase is from just over $510,000 to $1.1 million, said Marble.

"The UI receives about 20 percent of this money. It means more students will be able to work while receiving their education," said Marble.

In the past, the state legislature

JFAC had to work to set a base fund for the work study program. This new fund allows for a stronger base to establish future funding of the program.

"JFAC will now use the $1.1 million as a base instead of starting over every year. This will improve the whole effectiveness of the program which will help students all over the state," said Marble.

Marble has worked with ASUI Student Lobbyist Dan Whiting, who is in Boise, to get an increase in the work study funding. Marble has also met with state legislators to see an increase in program funding.

"Work study money is vital to many students who go to school here at the UI. I saw it as a need to ensure the money was available for them to work from," said Marble earlier this year.

This past year, a decrease was seen in the amount of money allocated to this program. Marble himself has met with state legislators and state officials to discuss an increase.

The Washington-Alaska-Montana-Idaho medical program also received another seat increasing the total to 16 people. This is the first increase in several years for the WAMI program.

The WAMI program allows students to stay in the area to be educated in medicine in the Pacific Northwest. The experiences in this medical program compare to other strong programs in the United States, said a WAMI staff member.

"One more seat allows more opportunity to students in and who want to be in the program, but also at the same time, JFAC approved another seat on WICHE," said Marble.

The Western Interstate Commission for Higher Education also was increased by one seat. This medical program now has six people in it from Idaho at the University of Utah.

The UI College of Forestry also received approval for funding a policy group, said Marble.

This funding is hinging on the reauthorization of the existence of that group.

"It all depends on the formation of the group to help define policy in the College of Forestry. This group will need to be founded before funding is finalized," said Marble.

These three decisions by JFAC will be included in the entire state budget to be presented in just over a month. The JFAC committee is responsible for compiling all of the individual parts which make up the state budget.

"It is usually a positive sign when it makes it past JFAC so hopes are high they will make it in the overall budget," said Marble.

Students who are applying for financial aid will possibly see the increase in work study amounts available this next school year. Dan Davenport, director of Student Financial Services, was unavailable for comment on these changes.

ATTENTION

Area boy scouts salute the American flag prior to the men's basketball game in the Kibbie Dome Wednesday night. These boys were part of a special evening for such groups as the Boy Scouts. The Vandals won the game against Sacramento State, 72-47, handing the Hornets yet another loss this season.

Festival to cause major traffic changes

In conjunction with the Lionel Hampton Jazz Festival next week, the University of Idaho Parking and Information Services will be blocking off select streets and parking lots to accommodate more than 150 buses.

"This is for the good of the university so we ask that people bear with our parking problems," said Dave Sexton, UI parking supervisor. "If everyone pitches in, it won't be bad."

Deakin Avenue, which runs in front of the Student Union Building will be closed from College Avenue to Sixth Street from 2-6 p.m. Feb. 25-26.

One block of Seventh Street, from the rear of the SUB to Elm Street, as well as the entire alley behind the SUB will be closed all week. Only service vehicles may use this area.

For the Feb. 22 Gala Concert in the University Auditorium, the parking lot west of the Administration Building will be blocked off after 5 p.m.

Parking lots near the SUB and Kibbie Dome will be the most affected during the festival.

The parking lot of the SUB and the lot next to the campus post office, east of the SUB, will be closed Feb. 23-26.

The blue permit parking lot furthest east on College Avenue will be closed for buses, but the other blue lots will be open.

At the Kibbie Dome, the unpaved lot, which is normally free parking, will be closed for bus parking. However, the paved lot closer to the dome will offer free parking during the day.

People should not leave their cars in the lot

Group preps for state

Tim Helmke
News Editor

University of Idaho students preparing to become professional business people have reason to celebrate this week.

It is National Business Professionals of America week and UI students have been celebrating by working to prepare for state competitions.

Business Professionals of America is a national network of students who combine their efforts to form the business leaders of tomorrow through their activities.

Mike Alexander, chapter president of the UI group, said the group offers an opportunity to the business people who may not learn some of the skills taught through Business Professionals of America.

"This group allows us to work together outside of the classroom setting to learn how things are done in the real business settings," said Alexander.

The UI Business Professionals of America group, 21 members strong, is preparing for state competitions in March in Boise. Members will compete in a variety of different events in the field of business.

"We will compete in areas such as office occupations, accounting, computer events, small businesses and entrepreneurs. Overall, these competitions will help us out," said Alexander.

Marty Yopp, associate professor of business education, serves as advisor to these business students. Yopp said at their Wednesday morning meeting the group is working to raise money for their various events.

Alexander said the group is planning a hot dog sale for Feb. 24. UI students and staff can let the Business Professionals of America know their order of a hot dog or a German sausage with all types of toppings.

Orders to pick-up or deliver these hot dogs can be made to 885-6556 from 6-10 p.m. on the day of the sale.

Rhonda James, a member of the business group, said she had been contacted by officials in the SUB to be people counters. These people sit by the doors of the building and count people coming and going. James said this is an easy and quick way to make a lot of money.

"We have an opportunity to compete as well as judge while we are there. This gives a feel for being on both sides," said Alexander.

The UI Business Professionals of America is also planning a trip to the national conference in May to San Francisco. Alexander said students enjoy these national meetings and the opportunity they offer to attendees.

"These national meetings open doors for people who attend them. Just being there gives a feel for what it is like to be in the areas of business," said Alexander.

No matter how competitions go, the UI can be proud of this group.

at night because it will be used for concert goers, said Sexton. Any cars which are not moved for the evening concerts will be towed.

Students or faculty who regularly park in lots which will be closed should start looking for parking in lots farther from campus, such as Guy Wicks Field lot or the Golf Clubhouse lot, said Sexton.

Bus traffic also will limit street parking throughout campus. Street parking on Blake Street by the Lionel Hampton School of Music Building will become a bus loading zone. Street parking in front of the Gauss Engineering Lab on Sixth Street also will be used.

Two loading zones will replace parking on Rayburn Street, one by Memorial Gym and the other by Renfrew Hall. Railroad Street east of the LDS Institute also will have a loading zone.

Because parking tickets will be issued, visitors should obtain parking permits from the Information Center in the North Campus Center, formerly Cavanaugh's Hotel. If a car is parked in a closed lot, it will be towed, Sexton said.

The shuttle bus between Moscow and Pullman will stop at Sixth Street and Deakin Feb. 25 rather than going up Deakin Street. This is the only day the shuttle will be affected.

Sexton said if anyone any questions about where lots are open, Parking Information Systems tries to keep tabs on which lots are filling up. Students are reminded that ticketing will be enforced. If students wish to avoid being ticketed, they should watch where they park or they may pay the price.

Student Tax Guide 94

QUICK QUIZ

Students... You can learn a lot about taxes by taking this little quiz!

1. Because you are a student, you don't have to have tax taken out of your pay.
(a) True
(b) False

2. If you are a candidate for a college degree, you may generally exclude from income that part of a scholarship or fellowship grant you received and used for,
(a) Tuition and fees required for enrollment or attendance.

(b) Fees, books, supplies and equipment required for your course.
(c) Room and board or personal items.

3. You cannot be claimed as a dependent by your parents if your gross income is $2,350 or more and if you are a full-time student who turned 24 in 1993.
(a) True
(b) False

4. Students should make and keep a copy of their tax return forms and Copy C of all Forms W-2 and any information filed with the return because,
(a) They can refer to them for future tax planning.
(b) They may need a copy when applying for financial aid.
(c) They may get a question from the IRS on what was reported on their return.

5. You worked two jobs last year, but got a W-2 form from only one employer. You don't have to report the income from the missing W-2.
(a) True
(b) False

6. We pay taxes to help our government raise income (called "revenue") to meet its expenses.
(a) True
(b) False

Answers:
1. (b) False; students are not automatically exempt from withholding. They must meet certain tests listed in Form W-4. Students should see their employers for a copy.
2. (a) and (b); different rules apply for grants received before August 17, 1986.
3. (a) True; however, at that point, a student may claim his fund and Medicare insurance to age, survivor and disability benefits when you become eligible for them.
4. (a), (b) and (c); these records should be kept for three years from the date the return was due or the date filed, or two years from the date the tax was paid, whichever is later.
5. (b) False; you must report all income from wages. Obtain a duplicate Form W-2 from the employer or contact the IRS.
6. (a) True; the revenue raised by taxes is used to provide as our national defense, conservation of our natural resources and public education. Part of the taxes also goes into the old fund and Medicare insurance to age, survivor and disability benefits when you become eligible for them.

Jazz Festival fills up local lodging

Jill Pittmann
Staff Writer

Once again the local hotels and restaurants are starting to fill and prepare for Moscow's annual music event of the year.

The Lionel Hampton Jazz Festival will be held in Moscow February 23-26. As everyone who has been in Moscow during the Festival in years past knows, it can be difficult to find good food and a place to stay during this week of activity.

A favorite restaurant for many of the people of Moscow is the Broiler in the University Inn. This dining establishment offers different specials each week night and on Friday and Saturday you'll find a prime rib and Seafood dinner special.

The Broiler also offers a Sunday morning brunch from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Sunday with special prices from 9-11. Reservations at the Broiler are highly recommended.

Other restaurants to try in Moscow are The Pantry, open 24 hours, which is also in the University Inn.

The Pantry has a different dinner special every night of the week with prime rib as the special every Friday.

If you are looking for a variety of food types, look no further than the Nobby Inn on Main Street, which is guaranteed to have something for the whole family. Finally, if you have a craving for Chinese food, try The Old Peking.

Since this week is busy in Moscow, you might find yourself traveling over the state line for a bite between concerts.

If this is the case and you're a Mexican food fan, stop in at Alex's Restaurante. Here you'll find an all-you-can-eat taco bar on Wednesday for lunch, live music in the lounge on Thursday, different drink specials every night of the week and on Sunday a family dinner special. Alex's doesn't accept dinner reservations.

The Hilltop in Pullman is, according to one employee, the only fine dining restaurant with a view. This restaurant is also convenient for people coming to the Jazz Festival from Spokane.

The Seasons, also in Pullman, is offering Jazz Music due to the New Orleans Mardi Gras, the Lionel Hampton Jazz Festival and the upcoming Moscow Mardi Gras. You can enjoy the music along with The Seasons' specialties, Cajun Prawns and Cuisine.

Reservations are recommended for both The Seasons and the Hilltop.

Another favorite local restaurant is Pete's Bar and Grill in Pullman. Here customers can find fresh seafood and meat specials.

One employee at Pete's said, "Since we have started our new menu, customers can come to Pete's and get almost anything they want except for Mexican and Chinese. It's a great place for families because there's such a wide variety of meal choices."

The local hotels are almost all full for the week of the Festival. At this time, The Hillcrest has vacancies for Wednesday and Thursday evenings.

The Mark IV only has certain rooms available for various nights during the week.

The Quality Inn in Pullman, next to the Sea Galley restaurant has openings only for Wednesday at this time. Manor Lodge and The University Inn are completely full for the week of the Festival.

Head start on the law

A new University of Idaho summer institute will provide a six-week "head start" on law school to 25 promising students with distinguished backgrounds.

Funded with a $46,000 grant from the Council on Legal Educational Opportunity and matching funds from other law schools in the Pacific Northwest, the program provides lodging, meals, travel and cost of instruction.

States involved include California, Oregon, Washington, Alaska, Hawaii and Idaho. This is the first time UI has been the host school. The program has previously been conducted in California.

According to Sheldon Vincenti, dean of the UI College of Law, the students will receive instruction in three first-year law school courses. These courses are aimed to show the students "what law school is like and help them identify and solve the problems they may face."

Jack Miller, associate professor of law, is serving as program director. Three other UI law faculty members will be instructors. The remaining faculty are from other regional law schools.

Miller said students for this year's summer institute have not yet been selected.

"That process will not be complete until late spring. Applications should be made to CLEO in Washington, D.C.," Miller said.

Completed application files will be forwarded to UI, where final selections will be made with input from other law schools in the region.

Intensive instruction in legal writing and analysis is a part of the program. After successfully completing the institute, the students will attend law schools throughout the region.

UI Law School officials are eager to see how the program goes here in Moscow.

Tingey retiring this summer after 40 years

Dr. Fred H. Tingey, a University of Idaho faculty member since 1954 and one of the founders of the UI's programs in Idaho Falls, is retiring this summer.

UI Provost Thomas O. Bell announced Tingey's retirement Monday.

"Fred had the vision for the University of Idaho Center for Higher Education at Idaho Falls and was the key player in its inception, development and continued growth. He has been the director of the center since 1979," Bell said.

"He has been a pioneer for education in eastern Idaho for 25 years. His retirement means the loss of a major visionary for the university and the state of Idaho."

Bell said a nationwide search for Tingey's successor will commence immediately. He expected a new director to be hired and on the job next fall.

A Utah native, Tingey first joined the UI Graduate Extension faculty in 1954 while employed at Idaho National Engineering Laboratory. He taught numerous courses in mathematics, statistics and management science in Idaho Falls.

Professionals at INEL approached the university about offering engineering courses in southeastern Idaho. So began a partnership that has grown ten-fold the past 40 years. Until 1970, only INEL employees could take the UI courses in mathematics, computer science, general studies engineering and business. In 1970, the doors were opened to the public.

In 1979, the UI negotiated with Idaho State University and site officials about sharing the responsibilities. The UI remained the provider of engineering and science courses.

A year later, the UI Foundation bought the Idaho Falls Center for Higher Education, a handsome building on the outskirts of Idaho Falls.

Today the UI offers some 90 of the more than 200 higher education courses delivered to nearly 3,000 students by a consortium that includes the UI, Idaho State University, Brigham Young University and Ricks College.

Tingey was instrumental in that growth and also has played a major role in the development of a second building at University Place, which was constructed with state funds and is jointly operated by UI and ISU.

That new facility, which includes 43 classrooms and 10 laboratories, recently was completed, and classes are being held there.

Tingey has extensive experience within the atomic energy industry. He worked in management at General Electric, Phillips Petroleum, Idaho Nuclear Corporation, Aerojet Nuclear and EG&G Idaho prior to joining the UI.

From 1966 to the present, Tingey has served on national nuclear materials committees and advisory panels. From 1980 to 1986, he was chairman of the certification board of the Institute of Nuclear Materials Management and was a member of the National Academy of Science Committee on Material Control and Safeguards.

Tingey earned his bachelor's degree in mathematics and physics at Utah State University. He then went to the University of Washington where he earned a master's in mathematics and a Ph.D. in mathematical statistics.

Tingey has also been an active member of the Idaho Falls community. He served on the Idaho Falls School board from 1970 to 1978 and was chairman of the group for six years.

He is on the Idaho Falls Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors. He serves on the board of the Idaho Falls Innovation Center and is a member of the Technical Advisory Committee for Eastern Idaho Vocational Technology Center.

"The University of Idaho has a significant presence in Idaho Falls because of the leadership and dedication of Fred Tingey," said Provost Bell.

Senate screws up future for retirees

Our Idaho State Senate made a big mistake. They've allowed themselves to live for the present.

Hopefully the House won't make the same mistake.

The Senate voted to give all state employees an across the board raise of six percent, which on the surface appears to be a great idea, especially since state employees haven't seen a substantial raise in three years. However, they voted to postpone the third installment of a four-installment retirement fund enhancement that affects state employees under the Percy and Optional Retirement Plans. Now state employees who are ready to retire may have to wait another year unless they can afford to lose those higher benefits.

The Senate should have listened to Gov. Cecil Andrus. His plan suggested giving state employees a 5.4 percent raise and implementing the third installment.

But the Senate decided to run with a live-for-the-moment attitude that gives money to employees right now. New employees aren't going to retire this year, or next year, and that gives the state legislature plenty of time to get their act together, so who cares if the installment is put off? Besides, they might fall into a different retirement plan.

That is not to mention city and county governments that lobbied against the enhancement and threatened higher property taxes if they had to pay their share. Where and when do they think they'll get the 18 percent that makes up their responsibilities, if not now?

The Senate's $23.7 million salary schedule enhancement plan will include money to be used to equalize salaries in comparable jobs throughout all state departments and bring them up to new scales that will be more competitive.

Andrus' similar proposed plan was only $22.2 million.

The fact is, six-tenths of a percent extra isn't much more to stuff into employees' pockets than Andrus' proposed 5.4 percent. Supposing a state employee made $30,000 a year, as an illustration, that employee would gain $1,800 a year for the six percent raise. At 5.4 percent, he would gain $1,620, a difference of only $180.

For someone earning a salary near that pay scale, they could have a significant raise plus a pension fund three-fourths finished for the whopping price of 50 cents a day. Evidently, some newer state employees aren't interested in losing a few cents to help out their retiring counterparts, and consequently, employees who have served the public for years are left hanging.

Idaho's Senators appear to be the same sort of idiots who leap before they look, count their chickens before they hatch or just "charge it." Andrus' 5.4 percent increase makes about a million dollars worth of more sense. Hopefully, the House will stay in caucus long enough to realize the Senate's folly, and get the retirement plan back on track.

—Chris Miller

Let body decay then find cure

The nation is aflutter. Bill Clinton is in the process of perfecting and presenting his brand new health care plan, this time new and improved, this time all-inclusive and non-discriminatory, but even still, this time, it is lazy, wasteful and sickeningly cyclical.

Every year far too many Americans die as a result of a heart attack. In fact, the most common death in the United States is just that — a heart attack. But instead of working to prevent this, our nation spends countless dollars factory farming and slaughtering animals, selling heart disease, cancer, a thousand other diseases, and then wrapping up the dollar exchange employing surgeons and laboratory scientists to unravel this brand new human pretzel.

If our goal as a nation is to facilitate waste, sickness and unnecessary medicine, then I vehemently support Clinton's health care proposal. All health care for that matter. We should all eat rotting flesh, chitlens and greasy pepperoni. Why not align the beef industry headquarters and hospitals in such a vertical business agreement so as to ease the transition from an omnivorous diet to intravenous tubes and cancer? If they were owned by the same corporation, think of the profits they'd make.

But if we would actually prefer to save money, lives and wasted resources, health care would emphasize prevention as opposed to our current system of self-induced sickness and then a search for treatment.

The average meat-eating male possesses a 50 percent chance of winning a brand new, all-expenses paid heart attack. However, by eliminating meat, eggs and dairy products from one's diet, that same man would have approximately a 4 percent chance of such a blessing.

A study conducted by Dr. Takeshi Hirayama of the National Cancer Research Institute in Tokyo, Japan showed that women who eat meat boast almost four times as many instances of breast cancer as compared to their vegan (one who consumes no animal products) counterparts.

A 21-year study at Loma Linda University in California has discovered that prostate cancer is more than three times as likely to afflict a meat-eating man than a vegan.

Most Americans consume far too much protein. More, in fact than the human computer could ever hope to process. Ample protein can be found in our regular assortment of fruits and vegetables. No mixing and matching is required. As long as we consume as many calories as required for our weights and measures (considering those calories aren't from simple sugars) we will find ourselves healthy and stamina-bolstered.

Or so say the following world-class athletes: Tony LaRussa,

Gorby visits new Moscow, decides to make it home

In a university town we expect people to move in and out of town rapidly. We expect to occasionally see celebrities passing through town, but they rarely go unnoticed.

Recently, Mikhail Gorbachev visited this lovely city — yes, the former Soviet leader was here in Moscow, U.S.A. trying to find the perfect retirement spot. And if he decides upon Moscow, U.S.A. as his retirement heaven and becomes bored in his sedentary life he'll offer to guest lecture here at our wonderful University of Idaho.

According to the Feb. 8, 1994 Sun, he was here to inspect our little city and determine whether or not it was an acceptable place to bring his family. Yes, he sneaked into Moscow right under our discerning eyes and keen noses.

When Gorbachev was walking the streets of Moscow, exploring his possible new home he was disguised. His raspberry colored birthmark on his semi-balding head was cosmetically covered. He was also camouflaged to look like any other "farmer from outside of town." He reportedly was wearing work boots and overalls to blend in with the locals. I'm from a farming community outside of town and I hope I don't wear overalls and work boots on a regular basis.

I Think... Huh? Katé Lyons-Holestine

He posed for a picture in a suit and tie at the "Welcome to Moscow" sign on the Moscow - Pullman highway near the Palouse Empire Mall. He must have done this as he was leaving town. It's interesting he wasn't spotted in such a high traffic area, not many tourists stop at that sign on the edge of a highway and in front of the mall for photos.

Gorbachev is apparently upset with the political unrest and social upheaval. He is afraid for his wife, Rasia's, safety. He wants to move his family out of the war torn republic to a quiet place where he and Raisa can retire in peace and solitude — here.

According to the Sun publication Gorbachev "wants to buy into the American dream of owning a home in a small town where everyone is friendly and safe." The story pointed out the initial reason the Russian politician was looking here in Idaho was our fair city is named Moscow.

Well, what about the other 11 cities across the country named Moscow? Why did they pick Moscow, Idaho?

The Sun also states local residents are "proud to have such a prominent figure hand-pick their quaint town for his new home."

If any local residents spoke to Gorbachev about his moving here I would like to meet them. Rumors like this don't lay dormant in Moscow, big rumors spread easily in this town.

If Micheal and Raisa are moving to Moscow, maybe we should throw them a down-home welcoming party like they do in the quiet old west. We could offer them the best Idaho has to offer. Maybe Gorbachev would feel better lecturing in classes here if we handed him an honorary degree in political science. Maybe Raisa would feel more comfortable and at home if we enrolled her in local quilting clubs. We could offer them a taste of Idaho with a years supply of Idaho russet potatoes, huckleberry jam, whole wheat bread and lentil soup. In order to fit in with the rest of us we could dress them in matching pairs of gold Vandal sweats, sloppy tee-shirts and hunter's orange caps.

If Micheal and Raisa do intend upon moving to Moscow we should do everything possible to make them feel comfortable.

Thanks for great afternoon

Would like to take this opportunity to thank all of the people who volunteered and made food for the International Symposium of Culture, Customs and Cuisine sponsored by the International Friendship Association on Feb. 5. The show went very well and during the presentation, the guests were served with a wide variety of international finger foods.

The following people contributed their time and effort and deserve a big thank-you with their names in the program: Regan, Ken; Crossin, United States; Dina, Yaghi, manager; Samir Shalabi, Pakistan; Per, Kazakhstan; Tarek, Iran; Karam, Egypt; Sam, Russia; No, Jordan; Sandrine, Canada; Kaparna and Pamela, India; Kiki, Lithuania; Adam, Turk; Kamran, Pakistan; Ghady, Arab; and Wania, Ukraine; South America.

Without their help and contribution, the event would not have been so successful. Thank you for your support.

Hall staff does confront alcohol

Read a recent letter by a concerned student who expressed frustration because of his perception that the Residence Hall Staff is silent toward confronting alcohol consumption. The amount of alcohol and anger that is often witnessed in the letter caused me to reflect on our response toward students who illegally consume alcohol. I cannot judge the accuracy of his statements, but believe he has a point. Illegal consumption of alcohol goes on daily in our residence halls.

The letter did not reflect our strong stance against consuming the illegal use of alcohol and drugs in our residence hall communities. We believe it is right to condemn the illegal or disruptive use of alcohol. There are Residence Halls on each floor of the residence hall communities who are charged with the responsibility of confronting illegal alcohol use. We condemn a number of people every day. When a student is confronted, we use the best means of education available.

Our education may begin by confronting the student and following up the confrontation with a letter or warning. We may choose to call the police and ask them to intervene. We may choose to use the Student Judicial system or attempt to process to develop a behavioral agreement, which if broken, will lead to the eviction of the student from our residences. All of these options can be used singularly or in combination to be used in the education process which stops the behavior from occurring in the future. We find that over 90 percent of the students who are notified through this method do not repeat their behavior. It is why we need to confront them about their behavior again.

Illegal consumption and illegal use of alcohol by students is a problem which can only be solved through education. Students must make a conscious decision to change their attitude and their actions. Each day I pause and remember that students residing in our living communities are all developing into future citizens of other communities in our state, nation and world. We choose to confront illegal use of alcohol simply because people are breaking the law. We confront disruptive behavior because it affects others. Each day, people make conscious decisions to break the law, simply by speeding or complying by drinking and driving. Not all are confronted because of the small nature of any enforcement or offenders. Not all are confronted because they choose to find ways to avoid responsibility for their actions. These are fair comparisons to our residence communities. The 11 Residence Communities are charged with the role of developing a living and learning environment which promotes good citizenship and develops the leaders of our world for the future. We believe all students must use their time to learn wisely and grow and develop as individuals and members of a greater society. Students are here to learn, respect and tolerate others who are different from themselves. Most often, our view of the residence halls are formed from our perception students don't learn and remain the same. I encourage a critical eyes to thoughtfully look at these communities as places where people are forming connections, learning about others, testing boundaries and developing ideas and relationships which will positively change the world.

Don't fill out surveys

This letter is in response to the recent survey mailed by Student Advisory Services to the 1,000 "random" students concerning alcohol and drug abuse. I am no, nor will I ever, respond to an "anonymous" survey conducted by any government agency including the University of Idaho. These surveys are distributed for the sole purpose of coming up with the numbers sponsors wish to use to implement further restrictions on our rights as citizens. If the numbers derived from the surveys do not correspond with what they wish to see they simply delete certain factors until those numbers do match.

Case in point is a survey done for the Bureau of Land Management by UI Professor Neil Rimby. His survey was to determine whether ranchers were paying enough for federal lands under current grazing fees. The survey demonstrated that ranchers were paying MORE to use federal lands by way of regulations and upkeep on that property than the equivalent for private land. The Secretary of the Interior, Bruce Babbitt, decided that wasn't what the Interior wanted to see so he dropped a few of the variables, like expense to transport the animals to the federal land then back, until the numbers correspond with the government's wish to raise grazing fees. "Figures don't lie, but liars figure."

The current survey the UI has distributed is in no way a valid scientific survey. You have one thousand college-age individuals who receive this. How many are going to say, "Cool. Let's see how much I can make it look like we party better than any other school." And then put in whatever number they want? This is a flagrant waste of tax-payers' money. With Clinton's retroactive taxes, few of us can afford any more waste.

Why not just ignore it, you say? Because Chris Wuthrich, who sent these surveys out, made sure to mention "we will conduct phone-call follow ups with those who have not returned the postcards" with your SIGNATURE that you've filled out the survey. In other words, "We're going to harass you until you fill this thing out."

I for one am sick of government, whether it be local, state, federal or university, sticking their noses into my personal affairs and wasting the money I have to pay them to do so.

—Mark K. Coen

Please fill out surveys

Last week randomly selected University of Idaho students received the CORE Alcohol and Drug Survey. The CORE survey is one component of a U.S. Department of Education grant the university received to provide alcohol and drug prevention education to students.

The CORE Survey findings will play an important role in the development of programs and services by Student Advisory Services. In order to obtain an accurate representation of the student body it is essential that we get a high return rate. I'm writing to remind students who received the survey to complete it and return it as soon as possible.

Anyone who has questions regarding the survey should contact Dr. Bruce M. Pitman or myself at Student Advisory Services.

GSA caution may paralyze

I've been here three years as a graduate student. On Feb. 7, I attended my first Graduate Student Association meeting. I was not surprised. It was disappointing.

A petition has been circulating among TAs requesting health benefits, reduced fees, better working conditions and better pay. Already, a strong 100-plus signatures have been collected. More students have become involved due to creative leadership and activity of the GSA executive board, especially President Michael Brennan, than at any point in recent memory.

Yet, at the Feb. 7 GSA meeting, progress was slowed. This occurred despite the sense of general agreement on the basic, important issues at hand. The reasons given were all valid points. In my opinion, however, they were not cause for slowing progress. I have been involved in student movements before, and I know the hardest step to take is the first one. The movements that always fail are the one that never take a first step. They never move!

One sentiment at the meeting was that we should be cautious and not take a misstep. The most cautious approach we could take, the safest approach we could take, the approach with no risk, is the one where we do nothing. That approach will bother nobody. Except us. Our status quo does not bother the faculty or administration. They have their own worries.

Now, I, too, would rather not take a misstep. But when a child learns to walk, the parents care not that the first step is in the perfect direction; rather, the parents are overjoyed that the child has taken a step, has moved, and that the child realizes her own potential. The feeling and the power of that self-realization of the ability to move is incredibly phenomenal, and its advantages far outweigh any disadvantages caused by any possible misdirection. I suggest that, collectively, we are the child. And the smiling faces of our parents that we will stumble and bumble (and we will stumble and bumble) our way towards (probably not in a straight line) are health benefits, reduced fees, improved working conditions, and better pay for all graduate assistants, and consequently, better education for all students. Let us approach this with the enthusiasm and try, try again attitude of a young child learning to walk. We will fall. But we'll get back up and continue walking (and then running) towards those smiling faces. We will learn to control our direction better. The first step is the most difficult. It requires overcoming all imaginable fears caused by the fear of the unknown. We can overcome those fears by taking a first step. As long as we keep discussing among ourselves why this step won't fix the problem, the longer the problem will remain unfixed.

The committee of five formed at the GSA meeting to work with the GSA executives to discuss and plan one or two steps ahead is a fine idea. However, that will be more important later on. Right now, let's just take a step and understand what that's like. Let's send the petitions as a show of our resolve in attempting to reverse the declining standards of living of graduate assistants and subsequent declining quality of education received by all students. Let us not be paralyzed by caution!

—Brian Kirby

Positively taking care of business

Tristan Trotter
Staff Writer

"It's beyond a jungle out there. But for a person with a positive mental attitude, things will go their way sooner or later."

This is the philosophy of Mike Rollins, who works one of the 5 p.m. to 2 a.m. shifts, five nights a week, on the custodial staff at the University of Idaho.

I caught him during the portion of his shift which includes the law building, as he relaxed in the lounge — on his "lunch break" at 8:00 p.m. Rollins is a tall, thin man with a commanding presence, and a commanding view of his life, career and future.

Mike Rollins was born in the Mojave Desert in a little town called Victorville, Calif., the son of a military man.

Living the Air Force life, Mike's father moved his family from state to state and country to country.

Rollins attended 18 different schools before he graduated from high school. England, California, New York, Illinois, Delaware, Holland and finally Texas compose the list of stations Mike called home, until he received his high school diploma in San Antonio.

After his tour of duty in Vietnam, Mike's father was stationed in Hawaii, which is where Mike went for his undergraduate education, at the University of Hawaii.

He started in engineering, but low grades and a prospectively poor career market led him to switch to business administration, in which he eventually got his degree.

Returning to the mainland, Rollins worked at various jobs, including in retail, project management, plastics manufacturing, quality control — all in the Eastern half of the United States.

In the meantime, his parents moved to Kendrick, Idaho, where his father retired. Several visits to this state planted seeds of possible relocation in Mike's mind.

So, when he was laid off, he says it was like a voice in his head advising, "Go west, young man; seek your fortune and fame." And he did.

After several transitional jobs, Rollins has finally settled into a full-time custodial position here. His time and energies, however, are not confined to that alone.

Mike Rollins is also the manager for Pine Terrace Apartments in Kendrick.

He is an independent loan broker, on line with institutions that deal with both small business loans and large commercial loans.

He also recently became a representative for a new health care product — an energizing/fat burning supplement — through a privately owned company.

In short, Mike Rollins is a very busy man, and he wouldn't have it any other way.

With two sisters living within three hundred miles, one in Seattle, the other in Lewiston and his parents still in Kendrick, Rollins has no desire to relocate again.

He loves Idaho for its hunting, fishing, camping and its people.

"When I came here for the first time, I knew I was in Idaho, because suddenly everyone I passed was waving at me. People in Idaho are just more friendly."

There is more to Mike Rollins than just the focused, bright, articulate man you encounter when you first meet him, though.

There is a lesson for us all to learn from Mike Rollins. A lesson he had to learn himself and for which he credits his current happiness.

"With all the things I'm doing, I'm pretty damn busy. But people pick up right away that I have a very positive attitude," Mike said. "It's how I see things — I have a great interest in personal growth."

He says he's always been positive but used to waver a lot.

"We're not your mother, so you can do everything your mother told you not to do," according to graduate student Kelsey Hartman.

Hartman and several other students from the University of Idaho are looking for "original performance art pieces from people who have not been able to explore their creativity as much as they would like."

"We are giving them a forum to show their work," said Hartman.

They are trying to attract English, theater, dance, art and music majors — and any other creative people — to write, perform or just be involved in this new performance art group.

The group is officially called "We're Not Your Mother" and they function on the premise that anything goes.

They are hoping to show the actual performances on March 25 and 26 at 10 p.m. in the Collette Theatre.

In addition to the show they are looking for a small live band to play an introduction and an intermission.

They are also hoping to find actual pieces of art — like paintings — to put into a gallery showing at the Collette during the same time. They are trying to create a place for everyone to showcase their talents. Whether they be painters, singers, actors or writers.

For more information, please contact Kelsey Hartman in the theatre department at 885-6465 or theatre arts department office at 885-5812.

Gramma Chloe's Chocolate Chip Cookies

I am not a cook, but I would know one if I sample his/her cookies. Check out the following cookie recipe.

- 1 cup shortening
- 3/4 cup brown sugar
- 3/4 cup white sugar
- 2 eggs
- 2 Tbsp. hot water
- 1 tsp. vanilla
- 2 1/2 cups flour
- 1 tsp. baking soda
- 1/2 tsp. salt
- 1 cup chocolate chips/chunks
- 1 cup chopped nuts

Cream shortening, brown sugar and white sugar. Mix in eggs, hot water and vanilla. Add in flour, baking soda and salt and mix thoroughly.

Blend in chocolate chips and chopped nuts.

Bake at 375 for 12-15 minutes, but watch them after 10, sometimes they get done early.

This recipe is one I borrowed from my grandmother.

I have eaten cookies made by many great cooks, even Mrs. Fields, but none can compare with Chloe Warner of Deary, Idaho.

I am lucky to call her Grandma. Many people in Deary call her that, but she really is mine.

If you think I might be the slightest bit prejudiced, go to the kitchen and make a batch of these cookies.

You will see what all 22 of her grandchildren and great-grandchildren have always known.

Nobody makes a better chocolate chip cookie than my gramma.

Butt out and lay off business

Dear Jason,

Last Saturday morning my mother called my apartment at 6 a.m. I don't mind early morning calls, the problem is that my boyfriend answered the phone. The phone is on his side of the bed, but my parents don't like the idea of us living together. After he handed the phone to me, my mother began yelling and threatening to cut off my weekly checks.

What should I do now?

—Distrust and Distracted

Jason would have to scold you for missing the perfect opportunity to tell your mother the way it is. Your mom needs to be reminded phone calls at 6 a.m. are totally unacceptable — she should really know better. Since the call was on mom's quarter, you should also have taken the opportunity to remind her that you are an adult now, free to make your own decisions.

The snag here would have been to phrase it in a such a way as to make it clear that even though you are an adult, you still expect — even demand your weekly checks. Perhaps your mom has forgotten that by giving birth to you she has assumed responsibility for your financial well-being for as long as you deem necessary.

Of course your whole disagreement would have been much more effective if you had thrown in a multitude of four letter expletives, often telling her where she could spend the cold season.

You also should have taken this opportunity to tell your Mother about all of the weekend trips you and your boyfriend have taken over the past couple of months, especially the overnight trips.

After explaining this to her in something just below an outright scream, Jason is sure she would understand your position on any further non-financial, early morning interruptions on her part. Good luck with laying down the guidelines for your new relationship with your mother, Jason

Dear Jason,

How do you rid yourself of those pesky relatives who constantly worry about your welfare. I had been planning to go home this weekend, just to get away from school, and my grandmother has called with daily updates on the weather conditions.

How do I kindly tell them to stay out of my business?

—Tired of Granny

You need to gently remind old granny that she is old, and needs to understand the way things work now. Tell her persistent phone calls about something as mundane as the weather really don't concern you and if they want you to come home at all, they better get with it and recognize you as an individual (except financially — see previous letter).

Remind Grandma she is lucky you are coming home at all. If you are really feeling lucky throw in something about you family having some gifts waiting upon your arrival. Take care, Jason

International friends share worlds

Saturday, February 19, 6 p.m.

Students from China, Hong Kong and Taiwan will present a Chinese Evening in the SUB Silver and Gold Room.

Sponsored jointly by the International Friendship Association and the Students' International Association, the goal of the event is to help understand Chinese culture.

The night will feature, among other things, food, music, a video presentation, shadow boxing (Tai Ji), Chinese painting and calligraphy.

Admission is free, however donations for food and other expenses will be appreciated.

Saturday, February 26, 2 p.m.

Women from Nagasaki Junior College, who are currently attending University of Idaho's American Language and Culture Program, will present a Japanese Tea Ceremony at the International Women's Association meeting.

University of Idaho foreign language instructor Irina Kappler-Crookston will host the meeting at her home at 990 Colt Road in the Frontier Addition.

Anyone requiring transportation should meet at the SUB parking lot at 1:50 p.m.

The IWA was established to aid international student wives adjust more easily to a strange language and culture. Women in the community serve as hostesses for the meetings to help ease newcomers' separation and loneliness. For more information on either of these events, please call the IFA office at 885-7841.

Clogs a blast from the past in shoe styles

Brandie Bebee

Contributing Writer

Clogs, the shoes of the 70's, have come back to life in the fashion world, and have become more trendy than ever.

The clog shoe was a fashion statement in the late 60s and early 70s.

Numerous people across America had a pair of these popular shoes. Now, 25 years later, clogs are back in style.

"Clogs are so cool, I wear mine all of the time," said Bobbie Thompson.

Thompson, 22, is a senior at the University of Idaho and a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma.

Thompson said that the majority of the women in her sorority have at least one pair of clogs.

According to Rod Matchette, an employee of Kinney's Shoe Store in Moscow, clogs are selling fast.

Clogs, like this four year old pair from Bergen, Norway, have recently come back on the fashion scene.

Matchette said they will sell all of the clogs they have in stock by summer.

Kinney's Shoe Store has been carrying clogs for a year now and Matchette believes they will continue to carry them for at least another year.

"Shoe trends change so fast, it is hard to say how long a shoe will be in style, however, I do believe clogs will be around for sometime," said Matchette.

In fact, Kinney's Shoe Store has clogs on sale for $15.

Coffeeshouse Preview

Vandal Café rocks with Moscow native

Dave Lewis
Staff Writer

Recording artist Eric Engerbretson will play a return ASUI Coffeeshouse performance tonight at 8 p.m., in the Vandal Café.

Engerbretson uses an acoustic guitar and his clear tenor voice to delight his audiences, both in America and in sixteen foreign countries.

Engerbretson plays a broad range of styles, including pop, rock, blues and jazz.

"Engerbretson is one of the most versatile and believably sincere performers I've ever seen," according to Mark LaMoreaux, The Kingpins.

His repertoire tonight will include classic songs, Engerbretson says, "I play some fifties and sixties songs, but I don't want people to think that is all I play. It isn't."

In fact, his new album, which will be released on the Whitestone label in May, features only original music.

Engerbretson is accompanied on the album by guitarist Phil Keaggy and Chick Corea's bass player John Patitucci.

A native of Moscow, Engerbretson began playing the guitar while a sixth grader at Lena Whitmore Elementary School.

Starting on his mother's guitar, Engerbretson soon progressed to playing in rock bands.

After graduating in 1980, Engerbretson moved to Seattle where he continued to work with bands.

In 1985 he moved to Denmark to begin his solo career.

Engerbretson worked in clubs and for a short time was a street musician, playing music on the street with the guitar case open, ready to catch money thrown by appreciative fans.

Not all of Engerbretson's fans in Denmark were street people.

"Eric's considerable and broad musical talent, which crosses both the years and a wide range of musical tastes, was immediately apparent. I was most impressed by his ability to relate to the audience," said Robert Fretz, First Secretary and Consul of the U.S. Embassy in Denmark.

"Eric deftly got the audience to participate wholeheartedly, all the more credible because Danes are by nature one of the shyest nationalities on earth. He poured his heart into his singing."

Engerbretson moved to Spokane in 1991, but soon after this ASUI Coffeeshouse engagement he will be going back overseas, touring Denmark in March.

His first date is the Opstand Festival, with 6,000 fans expected. The remainder of the month will be spent playing area colleges.

In May, Engerbretson will play in blues clubs in Italy.

In October, he will again be on the college circuit, this time in Holland.

Engerbretson has played many different styles of music since leaving Moscow, it will good to have him back at the ASUI Coffeeshouse again.

Self-critical review of Dave

Dave Lewis
Staff Writer

If you want a good rental video, pick Dave. It is very funny, heart-warming and made me stop trusting the government. Dave is one of the best movies I have seen in years.

"Dave" is played by Kevin Kline, who is wonderful as a stand-in for the George Bush look-a-like president of the United States.

Unlike the real president, who is stricken by a stroke early in the movie, the stand-in president has the same political perspective as Jimmy Stewart's character in Mr. Smith Goes to Washington. He is four square for the flag, motherhood, apple pie and certainly against special interests.

Especially those controlled by the White House Chief of Staff and chief villain played with diabolical-fine acting by Frank Langella.

Everybody loves the "new" president, even the First Lady played by Sigourney Weaver, after she finds out Dave is not her husband.

Look for Charles Grogan to help Dave save the country. He plays Dave's long time friend and accountant who is sure that Dave is going to get into big trouble if he doesn't get out of the White House fast.

Even if the good guys did win out in the end, I loved this movie. It features many real life Congressmen, most of the people from public television's McLaughlin Group and even Nina Tottenberg of NPR fame, all playing themselves.

Oliver Stone and Larry King are also in the movie playing themselves.

Stone is shown on King's show trying to prove that the "new" president is not the one did we elected.

It is ironic that Dave did more to convince me that elected government officials could get away with criminal conspiracy than Stone's movie JFK did.

When at the end of the movie, the ambulance carrying a stricken president arrives at the emergency room, it is 1963 at Parkland Memorial Hospital in Dallas all over again.

And, as Dave walks away from the presidency, we see his back-lit silhouette strolling over "the grassy knoll."

This is certainly a movie worth renting.

I am already looking forward to Dave II.

Tuna-noodle casserole

This is a favorite recipe of my father's. This is one of the meals I learned just by sitting in the kitchen and watching my parents (yes, both of them) cook.

8 oz. dry wide egg noodles (half a package)

1 Tbsp. butter / margarine

1 can tuna fish

1 can cream of celery or mushroom soup

8 oz. (2 cups) sharp cheddar cheese

6 oz. (soup can-full) milk

1 1/2 Tbsp. Miracle Whip

Spices, including salt, pepper, garlic, celery seed, onion powder, parsley and any others to taste

Boil noodles until desired consistency. Drain. Melt butter over warm noodles. Drain tuna and crumble into noodles. Set aside.

In small saucepan combine soup, spices, cheese and milk. Bring to a boil, lower heat and cook until cheese is melted.

(Beware of it burning to the bottom of the pan. Stir constantly.)

When cheese is thoroughly melted pour over noodles and tuna. Mix well. Add in Miracle Whip and mix again.

Pour into a baking dish (8 in. x 8 in.) and bake for 20 minutes at 350 degrees.

Serve hot with garlic bread and your choice of green vegetable.

If you have a favorite, cheap or mouth-watering recipe please bring it up to the Argonaut. The only limit to your creation is your imagination. Or feel free to try any of the recipes that appear and tell us what you think about it.

Now, however, since he discovered an author named Napoleon Hill and his book, Success With a Positive Mental Attitude (PMA, as he refers to it), Rollins has dedicated his life to not wavering.

Hill's book focuses on using your brain, being disciplined and maintaining a positive outlook on all aspects of life to find success.

"I think it should be required reading for all students," Rollins said, only half kidding.

He is concerned for today's college graduates.

"After graduation, what are you going to do? You need education for discipline, but that can't end when you get your diploma," Rollins emphatically states.

"You have to be as creative as you can and use your brain..."

Don't succumb to the masses and get stuck in a cubby hole with some insecure, 9-to-5 job. Do something with your life."

Having a positive mental attitude, Rollins maintains, is the only way to do this.

"The jobs that are lost today are lost forever," he asserts. "We've come into a new era...you either go for the ride, get passed by or get hit."

Rollins says he quotes Hill constantly in conversations with friends and co-workers.

He would like to pass on his knowledge and share the benefits of his experience with everyone.

And so, as Napoleon Hill says in his book and as Mike Rollins maintains in his daily life: "What the mind can conceive, it can achieve."

And furthermore, "Success only comes to those who try and keep on trying."

Sounds like a philosophy we could all stand to make part of our healthy mental and emotional diets.

Put all your messages in maps

Mike Dean of the Cartography/Geography Society explains the cartographic stationery to Steve Hayes.

Karin Kaasik
Staff Writer

Canyons, rivers and mountains of different parts of the U.S. and Canada are attractive even on maps. Topographical maps guide people through remote places not easily accessible otherwise.

"Topolopes" are envelopes made from recycled topographic maps of U.S. and Canadian government mapping agencies. They have been packaged, along with similar writing paper, as a project and fundraising activity of the University of Idaho Cartography/Geography Society.

Each package contains a mix of envelopes and writing paper; topographical maps on them depict various geographical areas like canyons, mountains, bodies of water, and settlements. The 40 item package includes ten of each: 8.5 x 11 sheets, 4.25 x 5.5 sheets, No. 10 envelopes, and 4 x 6 envelopes.

The topolopes were originally discovered by graduate student Mike Onzay 3 years ago. He used the money left over from the old Geography Club, and bought some stationery with the idea of using it to raise money for the registration fee of the American Association of Geographer's yearly conference, according to Russell Jones, the President of the Cartography/Geography Society. Since then, it has become a tradition.

"These were outdated topographical maps originally headed for the landfill, but were saved and cleverly recycled into something usable and of value. We didn't invent the idea of the topolope, but we thought it would be an appropriate, ecologically sound product which we as a club could endorse and sell," says secretary-treasurer Mike Dean. "We bought the stationery in bulk and packaged it ourselves in an effort to reduce the cost, making it even more attractive to potential buyers."

Compiling the packages was a sociable and fun event last October, with the participation of the Society members, their friends, and several staff members of the Geography Department.

Topolopes were sold individually the first year, one or two at a time. Selling them prepackaged, however, has proven much more efficient.

"The topolopes were sold during the Thanksgiving weekend this year in the Palouse Empire Mall, and we had a great response. People were buying them as Christmas presents for their 'uncle or niece who loves maps'. One lady bought six packages at once!", Jones said.

Now sales are focused in the SUB, mostly for the interest of students and professors. "A lot of people think it's a good idea," said Ron Hodge, financial adviser and member of the Society. "Our best sales are around noon and late afternoon, when people come from classes. We will have the table for several weeks, so people will recognize we are there," he said.

Appropriate for use in business correspondence among nature-related companies or government agencies, this map-depicting stationery is an interesting alternative to the standard mailing envelope. Pleasantly original, they are also popular for personal correspondence.

The different geographical areas portrayed build curiosity and present the challenge of identifying the region in which they are located.

"The areas depicted are from all over the United States and Canada. Every package has a random choice of different regions. Some we've seen include Oregon, Pennsylvania, Montana, British Columbia, Newfoundland and Quebec," said Dean.

The money earned by selling topolopes will help the members of the Society attend the annual meeting of the American Association of Geographers held in San Francisco in late March. This is a professional organization of geographers working in industry and universities. The yearly conference is for the exchange of knowledge; several professors from the UI Geography Department will present papers.

"It's a great place to find out what's going on in the field," said Jones.

Each member of the Society, who plans to participate in the conference will sell topolopes in the SUB. Topolopes will be sold in the SUB February 28 and March 7 and 8.

Off beaten path at Pete Ott lake

Through snow and unmarked roads, the group forged ahead

Dave Lewis
Staff Writer

Becoming a father doesn't automatically invest a man with the super-human skills sons expect dads to possess. Every dad wants to impress — or at least not embarrass — his son when doing those "father-son" things. Especially fishing. Because of this, and due to my sub-standard ability, I have lived with fishing guilt since my son was born.

The guilt started to ease somewhat, though, on the Pete Ott Lake fishing expedition. My son Chad couldn't believe we were finally going on a real fishing trip.

The genesis of the trip came one day when Bill, an experienced outdoorsman, invited me to go fishing to a remote mountain lake. The fishing there was reputed to be outstanding.

Bill, his wife Bonnie, along with Chad, my daughter Melanie, wife Pam and I camped en-route Friday night, planning to reach the lake Saturday.

Morning dawned clear and bright, a perfect day for an adventure. Leaving the river, we searched the maze of roads, looking for the one leading to the Pete Ott trailhead.

Chad was chief map reader, so designated because he most wanted our expedition to succeed. His enthusiasm was expected to keep the expedition from being aborted, at least not without good reason. As chief map reader his duty was to guess which road was most likely to lead to the trailhead and not to a locked gate.

Before long we were on a bumpy and water-barred road passing many side roads that might be the right road but then again might not. We couldn't be sure, because there were no signs. Our only guides were the map and our educated guesses.

As we rounded a curve, our resolve was tested by a large snow drift blocking the road. I secretly believed we had fought the good fight and had lost. However, Bill was driving, and he doesn't know the meaning of quit.

He drove up on the snow drift as far as he could, then backed up, to do it all again, this time going just an inch or two further. Back and forth we went, bouncing higher and gaining a little more with each try. All the while, from the back of the pick-up where we were riding, I could hear bloodcurdling screams emanating from the cab. The screamer was Melanie. She was sure we would bounce off the road any minute and be stuck there forever. She didn't seem willing to die in the wilderness without a fight.

Finally, we made it over the snow and were on our way again. We shouldn't have bothered. Just around the corner the road was completely covered with snow. We'd have to walk if we wanted to make it to the lake.

I thought we should be turning back because it was getting late, but Chad and Bill were already loading the lunches in the packs. They were intent on fishing. I was just glad we wouldn't starve on the trail.

Not wanting to be left behind, we all picked up our fishing gear, and set off up the snow covered road. It was about a mile, uphill and through the snow, to the trailhead. The sign there was plain enough, but the trail was covered by deep snow and was hard to follow. We followed blazes early surveyors had chopped into trees.

Chad, at seventeen, was so excited to finally get to fish Pete Ott that he couldn't wait. The snow was deep, but when it's summer it doesn't matter if your feet get wet. Besides, with a warm sun shining, nobody minded.

The trail followed a flat ridge that afforded a beautiful view of the rugged terrain surrounding Pete Ott Lake. At a point where we could see the lake in the canyon below, we stopped to eat our lunch. As we ate sandwiches and sipped Diet Coke, we decided to leave the trail and go straight down to the lake. The trail was hard to follow anyway, and we could already see the lake, so what could go wrong?

Cliffs! Just as it seemed we were going to make it after all, we found huge rock bluffs. I couldn't believe it. We were close enough to see fish jumping. It would be sheer torture to come this close and not get to catch those beautiful cutthroats.

Next week, Dave and his group attempt to find their way back from Pete Ott Lake, as night closes down and male machismo begets a lack of caution which throws the group into danger.

The Martin Surfacing 19th Annual Vandal Invitational Indoor on Friday will begin at 6:30 p.m. and the last event begins at 9p.m.

The event will have celebrities present including Dan O'Brien. Only 120 competitors have been invited. Also on hand will be Joe Kapkory who won the NCAA national cross country meet and Chris Pallakis, 18-foot pole vaulter, both from Washington State.

The second of the two meets will be on Saturday and will be the second half of a meet that was held last Saturday. The McDonald's Idaho All-Comers Indoor II will be held all day long.

Tickets for the event are $5 for adults and $3 for students. University of Idaho students will be allowed to enter free of charge. It would be a good idea to plan ahead and go early as seats will disappear quickly.

True freshman shines on court

Skorpik takes stage role for future years as she establishes herself

Bridget Lux
Staff Writer

Last year Ariana Skorpik was a member of three high school teams, each of which made it to the state tournament level.

Skorpik's soccer team placed fourth at the state level and the 4x100 relay team, which she was the lead leg, won the gold medal. Also, her basketball team finished third at the Washington State AAA Tournament, the largest in the state, for the second year in a row.

Faced with the decision of which sport to participate in at the college level, Skorpik chose basketball because of the advantages academically, she said. Like the University of Idaho, many schools do not have a women's soccer program at the varsity level.

So, Skorpik made the choice between basketball and soccer which ultimately led to her starting position on the Lady Vandal basketball team.

Skorpik, a 5-5 true freshman from Kamiakin High School, said the difference between high school practices and college practices are immense but she is willing to take on the challenge as her efforts have proved.

Practice now includes a lot more full court work, she said, including drills and running. On top of that, she lifts weights twice a week during the season and more in the off-season.

Laurie Turner, Lady Vandal Head Coach said Skorpik is a very quiet person who "leads by example."

The point guard position is a difficult position to play at the collegiate level, she said, but Skorpik is an "outstanding" player who can perform up to par.

"She is one of the most consistent players on the team, and that is why she is starting," Turner said.

Turner continued by saying defense was Skorpik's forte along with her ball handling abilities. "We'd like to see her score more," she said, so Turner has been working on plays which are designed to put figures into Skorpik's point column. She can drive the lane and she can definitely make the free throws.

Cheerleaders not all dumb blondes

Amy White
Staff Writer

To be on the University of Idaho men's or women's cheerleading squads takes everything... except being "blond and stupid". Dedication and physical strength, like any other sport, are two of the most important qualities a cheerleader must possess.

Tryouts begin at the end of April and are by no means a breeze for any of the applicants. The first day, the aspiring cheerleaders must attend a clinic where they are taught a cheer, three stunts, tumbling and jumps.

The next day they must appear in front of a panel of university cheerleading coaches from around the Northwest and perform what they learned the day before, and in addition, they must make up an original chant that is presented as well.

The judge's job is not easy, as there were 40 women that tried out last April, and only 12 made the squad. The try out is not a guarantee that the cheerleader will be on the squad all four years.

Each person has to go through the tense time every year, acting as if they were trying out for the first time.

The Vandals current squad consists of a freshman team with four women and three men. The leading squad is composed of six women and six men.

Just like any other sport, freshmen are usually not on the starting lineup, although they do sub in for the older cheerleaders. However, freshmen do have an equal chance at tryouts of making the leading squad.

You have to be able to look past all the stereotypes and keep in mind the reasons why you love the sport.

—Jenny Bishop
freshman cheerleader

The UI squad practice Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 3:30 to 5:30 at the ASUI-Kibbie Dome. This practice consists of learning stunts, cheers, chants, dances and of course perfecting them. There is also an optional practice on Tuesday and Thursday which consists on only stunts.

Not only do the cheerleaders have to attend practice regularly, but they are required to take a class through the university that must comprise of some type of physical activity.

Another requirement for the Idaho squad members is a camp during the summer. They are held by different associations, the National Cheerleaders Association, and Universal Spirit Association, to name a couple.

These camps usually last four days and are held all over the Northwest. Last year the squads went to Tacoma, Wash. for USA's camp. The Vandal squad is fortunate to have one USA staff member and one NCA staff member.

There has always been a stereotype that cheerleading is not hard work, and who ever started that rumor was mistaken. With this stereotype it is hard for many colleges to recruit men for their squads. However, the requirements for a male cheerleader are not easier to find nor acquire.

The male cheerleader must be in top physical condition and retain a mass amount of strength. Lifting a 125 pound woman with one hand high into the air and holding her there is no simple task.

On what it takes to be a cheerleader besides the physical aspects freshman Jenny Bishop says, "You have to be able to look past all the stereotypes and keep in mind the reasons why you love the sport." Bishop is by no means a "stupid blond". She maintains a 4.0 GPA and is an active member of Delta Gamma sorority and UI's honor society Phi Eta Sigma. Bishop has been a cheerleader for five years and takes it seriously and the rest of her teammates do as well.

Eagles to face tough competition

Vandals battling to stay in top three of Big Sky Conference

Andrew Longeteig
Staff Writer

Losing is never easy. After demolishing Sacramento State (1-22) Wednesday, the Vandals will face the Eastern Washington Eagles (0-9 Big Sky, 4-16 overall) Saturday night in Cheney, Wash.

Idaho (6-3, 14-7) is battling for first place with Montana State and Weber State, both 7-3 in the Big Sky.

After a surprisingly close game with the Vandals in early January, the Eagles are looking to beat the Vandals for the first time since 1986. Idaho has won 17 straight over the Eagles.

EWU will have to accomplish this, however, without their best player, Brad Sebree. He badly sprained his ankle in a loss to Northern Arizona, their very next game after playing Idaho.

In last month's 71-65 loss to the Vandals, Sebree scored 22 points, grabbed nine rebounds and dished out five assists. Before his absence, Sebree had a per game average of 16.4 points, three rebounds and three assists.

His services will be sorely missed as freshman Carl Crider takes his place, sporting a mediocre two points per game.

Besides containing Orlando Lightfoot, EWU will have to deal with Deon Watson's aggressive work on the boards. Watson is

F	Joshua Lewis	(7.6 ppg, 3.1 rpg)
F	Craig Stinnett	(10.3, 6.3)
C	Rick Swanwick	(8.7, 6.4)
G	Carl Crider	(1.8, 0.8)
G	Donald Smith	(2.5, 1.2)

averaging 10.3 rebounds per game.

"Everybody in the conference has went in there (Reese Court) and beat them and that's a game we can't afford to lose," says Watson. "We always have a tough time going to Eastern (Washington)."

Watson recently surpassed Dwight Morrison as the all-time rebounding leader in Vandal history with 811. He is the first player in University of Idaho history to exceed both 1,000 points and 800 rebounds.

The Vandals impressively kept their intensity up against SS, and only time will tell if they can maintain the same vigor versus the Eagles.

Commented Idaho head coach Joe Cravens, "I said from the first day of conditioning we'd be as good as our five seniors would allow us to be."

Those five seniors (Lightfoot, Watson, Frank Waters, Dan Serkin and Jeremy Brandt) have allowed the Vandals to be pretty darn good. They haven't, nevertheless, solved their inconsistent shooting.

Idaho is shooting at an uncharacteristic 43 percent clip. Cravens believes "it's more of a mental thing than a physical thing."

Opponents, on the other hand, are shooting 40 percent from the field against Idaho, much accredited to the front-line of Waters, Lightfoot and Watson.

Even more inconsistent than Idaho's field goal percentage is their free-throw shooting. They are hitting just 63 percent from the line after a horrid 9-21 showing against SS. On a lighter note, Ben Johnson is third in the Big Sky with an 80 percent mark from the charity stripe.

EWU has also just played SS and beat them 88-78 in Cheney Monday night. Sophomore forward Chris Artis, who mysteriously rode the bench against the Vandals in the previous game, scored 18 points and had 10 rebounds.

Even with the loss of Sebree, the Eagles had other players to step up in times of crisis. Since Sebree's injury, Joshua Lewis has raised his scoring average from six to 11.7 points per game. Additionally, his replacement, Crider went from scoring less than one point per game to six.

Although Sebree has been out, Cravens is still preparing for EWU as if he were in the starting lineup.

The Eagles have lost an embarrassing 34 straight road games. The last road victory came against NAU in 1991.

Hornets stung

Vandals overpower non-conference competitors 72-47 in Kibbie Dome

Andrew Longeteig
Staff Writer

Wednesday night's game between the University of Idaho Vandals and the Sacramento State Hornets was about as exciting as watching Boris Yeltsin ice fishing during a bitter Siberian winter.

The fact is, the Vandals pummeled the smaller and less athletic Hornets 72-47 before 2,072 dedicated ASUI-Kibbie Dome fans. Idaho already played SS earlier in the year and won 65-44.

"Our bench was playing good," said UI forward Kelly Walker. "I guess we wanted to rest some of the starters for the next game. Everybody contributed."

Three minutes into the game, SS stayed with Idaho play for play, as the score was knotted at four apiece.

That was as close as they would get.

Idaho (6-3 Big Sky, 14-7 overall) went on a 21-7 run that put the Hornets (1-22) behind 28-12, out of reach, and out of commission. Deon Watson dunked an errant Vandal shot at the 4:41 mark to establish an absurd 34-13 advantage.

Perhaps the most arousing moment in the first half was a Jordanesque dunk by Hornet freshman Michael (not Jordan — or is it a disguise?) Boyd to close the half with the Vandals leading 38-21.

The Vandals continued to show no mercy in the second half, establishing a 31 point lead after a 16-2 run. Sacramento scored only one field goal in the first nine minutes of the second half.

Idaho held the Hornets to a dismal 31 percent shooting. Forward Arthur Tate led the Hornets with 11 points on five of six shooting.

Eight players scored for the Vandals, as Orlando Lightfoot led the way with 17. Watson played his usual outstanding game, hitting six of seven field goals and grabbing seven rebounds, all on the offensive end.

120 competitors invited to Kibbie

Matthew D. Andrew
Sports Editor

The University of Idaho men's and women's track teams will hold quite an event on Friday night. The two teams will host the Martin Surfacing 19th Annual Vandal Invitational Indoor.

The event will be highlighted by many well-known appearances in the track world including Moscow's world champion decathlete Dan O'Brien, NCAA cross country champion from Washington State Joe Kapkory and Cougar's 18-foot pole vaulter Chris Pallakis.

The event begins at 6:30 p.m.

and will kickoff with the 55-meter hurdles.

Only 120 competitors have been invited to the one evening prestigious competition.

O'Brien can be seen in the 55-meter hurdles and the 55 dash where he has finished in 7.29 seconds. WSU's Frank Madu, Boise State University's Kerry Lawyer and Moscow USA's Steve Lewis will also be on hand in the 55-meter dash.

Two-time Vandal Indoor champion Sean Messiter of Club Northwest will line-up against NCAA cross country champion Kapkory in the 3,000 meters.

Kapkory ran a 8:05 in last year's event but ran a 7:54 earlier in the season. He will also run in the mile, which he won last year in a time of 4:04.

In the high jump, Vandal Indoor record holder, who leaped, flew, blasted off or whatever it is you would call it when one clears 7-8, one-half inches.

Six-time winner Brent Harken will lead a competitive group of jumpers in which eight have cleared seven feet.

Harken, a teacher from Spokane and member of the 4 Winds track club, saw his four-year reign end last year by none other than the

After school, basketball practice and finally homework, Skorpik has little time for any other activities. "I try to get some soccer in there when I can," she said.

Although she did not participate in intramural soccer this year, Skorpik is looking forward to it next fall, if she can fit it into her schedule.

As far as academics are concerned, Skorpik is an accounting major because she likes math, she said.

Back to her high school career, Skorpik led her team with 14.4 points per game and was named to the all-state team.

She was named to numerous other "teams" over the course of her high school career including All-Big Nine Conference 1st team and was a USA Today All American. She holds two school records, most three-pointers in a season, 60, and in a game, five.

Never letting up, Skorpik played basketball all summer with the Spokane Stars AAU team in the AAU National Tournament in Chattanooga, Tennessee.

The combination of coaches and experiences Skorpik received over the past few years helped her achieve the goals she has attained and gave her a "leg up" on the competition for the starting spot on the Vandal team.

As for this year's season at Idaho, Skorpik said, "We've improved a lot as a team."

Frustration comes with any team but especially with a team that is not doing so well. Frustration has been a part of this season, Skorpik said, but she hopes they can "come together for these last games."

Support from family and friends back home is a big help to Skorpik, she said. She also said she has two younger sisters who are "trying" to play basketball themselves.

She would, however, like to see more community and student support but realizes women's basketball is just not as popular as other things, namely men's basketball.

At the University of Montana, the Lady Griz play in front of an average home crowd of 4,241 fans. The Lady Vandals crowd is consistently less than 500 and has been under 150 people at home.

Granted, the Lady Griz are 22nd in the Associated Press Top 25 Poll, but maybe with a little support the Vandals could be up there as well.

Skorpik and the rest of the team will be playing tonight against Southern Utah at 7:00 p.m.

So make the hike up to the Memorial Gym and check out the talent the women's basketball team possesses.

Watson played only 18 minutes.

Lightfoot was especially disappointed at the outcome. "I was up big-time for the game; I just didn't play."

Sacramento was out rebounded by Idaho 53-31. Impressively, 23 of the Vandals' rebounds were offensive. This discrepancy was probably due to SS's resemblance to the Seven Dwarves. The Hornets' tallest player was 6-8 Vincent Stewart.

Watson compared the rematch to the previous game. "This time we played better defense. At half-time, down in Sacramento, it was kind of close."

Head coach Joe Cravens added, "Offensively, I felt one of the real negatives of the night was our free throw shooting (9-21). It's not going to win a whole lot of games."

Freshman Nate Gardner had his best game of the year, nailing an array of 15-foot jumpers and leading the Vandals with 11 rebounds. He finished with nine points in 24 minutes of play and also recorded a game-high three blocks, one of which was swatted to Bismarck, North Dakota.

The Hornets' lone victory came at home against Northern Arizona, 80-76.

SS is coached by former Vandal great Don Newman, who is now 4-44 lifetime at Sacramento State, a recent member of Division-I college basketball.

greatest athlete in the world, Dan O'Brien.

Also this weekend will be the McDonald's All-Comers Indoor II on Saturday in the ASUI-Kibbie Dome.

Leading the way for the men's team will be Niels Kruller who won both the long jump and the 200-meter. In both events, he managed to do better than he had previously done in the season. A jump of 24-1, three-quarter inches and a 21.88 showing were good enough.

Also paving the way for the Vandals were Pat McFadden, Ty Koellmann, Frank Bruder and Jerry Trujillo all added to the first place winnings the team took home.

McFadden won the high jump when he cleared 6-6, one quarter inches. Koellmann did the same when he placed higher than all others in the 800-meters, followed by Bruder in the mile.

Trujillo finished first in the triple jump when he amassed a distance of 46-5.

Leading the women is the woman who can, would but doesn't do it all, Tanya Tesar. In the last meet, Tesar managed to place in numerous events. Foremost was her first place finish in the triple jump by flying 37-1, three quarter inches. Tesar also managed to place in the 55-meter hurdles at second and a second place finish in the long jump.

The ladies can also count on Karen McCloskey who finished first in the 55-meter hurdles, and Laura Moore who seconded all in the mile. Robin Betz also helped out when she topped all in the 3,000 meters and Tara Hamilton placed first in the 800-meters.
