Women's Center may be victim

J. Richard Rock
Staff Writer

The UI Women's Center may be forced to shut down due to a lack of funding.

Barring any last minute compromise, the Joint Finance and Appropriations Committee, which develops the budget for the state of Idaho and appropriates money to the university, is expected to remove all funds from the Women's Center sometime this morning.

UI student Daniel Whiting has spent part of the last week informing legislators of Women's Center activities which he believes are ideological in nature and politically motivated. "They are going way beyond their legitimate mission on campus," said Whiting.

"It is wrong to force tax payers to support causes they strongly oppose, and the courts have determined that taxes are a form of support," contended Whiting.

As examples of what he believes to be "beyond their legitimate mission," Whiting cited past incidences where the Women's Center provided a phone line to the Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Alliance and sponsored an Earth Day event at which participants discussed "the spiritual relationship between women and the earth. Whiting also points to the Women's Center newsletter which, in one issue, equated conservative Christians with the Aryan Nations and the Ku Klux Klan. In addition, Whiting alleges that the Women's Center has "advocated against" the Idaho Citizen's Alliance Initiative, a proposal which would forbid special designations in the law for individuals based on their sexual preference.

Some members of the legislature appear to be convinced the

The UI Women's Center sits in the middle of campus and may soon sit empty if funding is cut by the Idaho Joint Finance and Appropriations Committee in Boise today.

Women's Center has gone too far. According to Whiting, as many as thirteen members of JFAC, both Democrat and Republican, men and women, are prepared to strike nearly $41,000 in salaries and an associated $4,000 in operating expenses from the budget. Only eleven votes are required to do so.

Betsy Thomas, director of the Women's Center, was unaware that JFAC was even considering amending the budget to strike the funds. "I would just like to know what it is about," said Thomas, "I would like to know what it's amended to." She was unavailable for further comment.

A compromise may avert total funding cuts. According to Whiting, he has been speaking with at least two legislators about the possibility of allowing the funding to remain as long as a "strong message" was sent. This message could take the form of a budgetary rider, which would stipulate how specific funds could be used. "There is still a majority prepared to cut it, but if the Women's Center complies with legislative intent then their funding would not be jeopardized," said Whiting.

"I have no problem with the Women's Center being on campus as long as they are not pushing their political agenda," said Whiting.

Whiting stated he would even support the right of a group to advocate the issues he believes to be political, as long as they did not receive any tax dollars to do so.

The University Catalog describes the role of the Women's Center as "the focal point for women's concerns at the university and in the community.

Non-residents could soon pay big bucks

Katé Lyons-Holestine
Editor-in-Chief

The last thing most students want to hear is their tuition costs are going to increase. It's the last thing the administration wants to tell students.

In light of the proposed increases in resident and non-resident student tuition and fee increases President Elisabeth Zinser, Provost Tom Bell, Vice President for Financial Affairs Jerry Wallace and Vice President for Student Affairs Hal Godwin will listen to concerns raised by students at an open hearing March 24.

The fee increase proposal would immediately impact non-resident students. The proposal is consistent with the regents' policy and the Statewide Plan for Higher Education developed by the Idaho State Board of Higher Education.

The UI wants to resist the increases proposed by the State Board because the increases are felt to be too high to be conducive to increasing non-resident enrollment and it is unfair to non-resident students who have already chosen the UI.

According to a memo sent by Zinser, "this (increase) would create financial hardship upon non-resident students such that many current students may need to interrupt or terminate their enrollment at the UI."

"The administration has looked at the Boards' proposal and said, 'no we're not going to react to it like that, instead we're going to look at it and do what's fair for students and have the least impact on their cost of education," ASUI President John Marble said.

Beginning in the fall of 1992 the UI implemented a phased, multi-year approach to raising non-resident student fees. This allowed continuing students' fees to increase incrementally from $1950 to $2650 over a period of five years.

"There's no sticker shock there," Godwin said. "A dramatic increase in non-resident fees will lead to a drastic decrease in non-resident students and a change in the character of the student body."

"It's much more realistic to give a projection to a student already enrolled so that they can budget for changes," Marble said.

The Board's recommendation was to raise the non-resident students fees to be comparable with surrounding states. That would mean immediately raising the fees to $7000.

"If the immediate increase is approved we're going to lose the daily interaction with people from Oregon, Washington, Alaska. We'll lose perspectives, the cosmopolitan outlook of our campus and the international student enrollment," Marble added. "Consequently it's almost an effort to limit enrollment growth by discouraging non-resident students."

If the UI were to increase non-resident student fees to the proposed $7000, administrators project two major impacts.

According to a memo sent by Zinser, the UI would experience a decrease in the "number of new non-resident students, along with a net reduction in tuition and fee revenues from non-residents to the university." More importantly would be the impacts felt by those non-resident students already enrolled at the UI. "Although our proposed multi-year schedule for continuing student non-resident

Christian institute offers a winter break

The Idaho Institute of Christian Education offers "Winter Break 94" tomorrow from 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Campus Christian Center. The theme of the day is "Who Do You Say That I Am?" Dr. Bruce Wollenberg, director of the Campus Christian Center, will discuss "Current Research on Jesus of Nazareth" and Dr. John Grabner of the Moscow First United Methodist Church will present "The Early Church's Worship of Jesus the Christ."

A fee of $10 includes a light breakfast and lunch. Everyone is welcome to attend.

Electrical engineer to speak this afternoon

Dr. Numan Sadi Dogan of Washington State University will offer an Electrical Engineering Research Colloquium today at 3:30 p.m. in Janssen Engineering Building Room 26. The presentation is entitled "High Temperature Electronics: Myth or Reality?"

Free tax assistance available until April

Volunteer Income Tax Assistance provides free tax help in the community. Volunteers help those with basic tax returns, particularly elderly, handicapped and non-English speaking taxpayers. There is no charge.

VITA offers assistance Thursdays from 6 to 8 p.m. and Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the University of Idaho Law School Room 105.

MS-DOS class teaches computer basics

The UI Enrichment Program is sponsoring an "MS-DOS Introduction" course on Mondays and Tuesdays, March 1 through March 8 from 6:30-8:30 p.m. There will be four sessions in all. For more information call the Enrichment Program at 885-6486.

Pomp and circumstance attire can be ordered

The UI Alumni Office will be accepting orders for cap and gowns for graduation Wednesday through Friday. The office is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Peer advisors reminded of Sunday meeting

Those UI students who were chosen as peer advisors are reminded to attend a meeting Sunday at 3 p.m. in the SUB Appaloosa Room. These meetings are important for training and information.

Shamrocks show sign of research support

The Muscular Dystrophy Association is promoting its annual "Shamrocks Against Dystrophy." Look for green or gold shamrocks throughout the Moscow-Pullman area at participating taverns, supermarkets, restaurants and retailers.

Be part of the festivities by donating $1 or $5 for a shamrock you customize which will be displayed in the establishment. The one-month promotion will give hope and happiness to area adults and children affected by muscle diseases through research and service programs.

Media Fair taking place in SUB all day today

Demonstrations and exhibits of new microcomputer systems and programs to enhance educational technology is part of the 1994 UI Media Fair today from 10:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. in the SUB Ballroom. The event is planned to promote use of educational technology to improve effectiveness of teaching and learning.

Students depict life through a video camera

UI students Denise Hopkins and Chad Parsons are compiling a feature video to be presented at the Family Weekend Breakfast during Family Weekend Saturday, April 9. The video will depict the life, activities and highlights of UI students.

To get involved, look for Hopkins and Parsons around campus while they film the video. Filming will continue until March 11. The cost of the Parents' Association Breakfast April 9 is $6.

The UI Enrichment Program is offering "Horse Care and Management Series" this Wednesday. For times and more information call the Enrichment Program at 885-6486.

Employment trends to be monitored next week

The U.S. Census Bureau will collect data on employment, income and migration from area residents the week of March 13-19, according to Leo C. Schilling, director of the bureau's Seattle regional office.

The additional data on income and migration will be used to provide a comprehensive study of poverty, median family income and year-to-year mobility of the nation's population.

Information supplied by individuals to the Census Bureau is kept confidential by law. Only statistical totals are published.

Hake to head seminar today in Life Sciences

At the next UI Department of Biological Sciences seminar Friday, Sarah Hake, Ph.D., of the USDA Plant Gene Expression Center, will present "How the Meristem Works: Genes and Maize Mutants." The seminar will be held today from 12:30 to 1:30 p.m. in Life Sciences Room 277.

Indians may be eligible for scholarship, grant

The American Indian Graduate Center is accepting application requests from American Indian and Alaska native graduate students who will be pursuing masters and doctorates as full-time graduate students for the 1994-95 year. The AIGC program has been providing fellowship grants to Indian graduate students since 1969 and has aided over 3,000 students in the past 24 years. For the 1993-94 year, AIGC is assisting 575 students from 130 tribes who are working on graduate degrees at over 200 colleges throughout the United States.

To be eligible for consideration, an applicant must: (1) be an enrolled member of a federally recognized tribe or be at least one-fourth degree Indian; (2) be attending an accredited college or university in the U.S.; and, (3) be a full-time graduate student admitted into their first masters or first doctorate program as a full-time graduate student in any field of graduate study. The application deadline for 1994-95 is April 15, and applicants should have applied for campus-based aid for 1994-95 at their college financial aid office in February. Eligible applicants can request an application packet by contacting: AIGC, 4520 Montgomery Blvd. NE, Suite 1-B, Albuquerque, N.M., 87109-1291 or by phone at (505) 881-4584.

Send back drug and alcohol form reminder

UI graduate and undergraduate students who received a drug and alcohol survey from the Student Advisory Services office in early February, please return it to the office as soon as possible. Results of these surveys are important for future educational programs so they are of great importance.

Youth dance helps kids celebrate spring

Moscow Parks and Recreation will sponsor the Latah County Alliance for Youth as they hold their "Spring Fling" teen dance tonight. The dance will be held at the Eggan Youth Center at 1515 East "D" Street from 7 to 11 p.m. Music will be provided by KHTR-FM. Admission is $2.

Summer session book to hit shelves Tuesday

The UI Summer Session Bulletin will be available Tuesday. For information call the Summer Programs and Extended Learning Office at 885-6237.

Spring Break almost upon students, staff

Spring Break will start at 5 p.m. next Friday. There are no classes the following week. Classes resume March 21.

Phi Kappa Tau suffers for policy violations

Tim Helmke
News Editor

The party is over, but repercussions have just begun.

Phi Kappa Tau fraternity has been sanctioned by their own national organization, the UI and the Interfraternity Council stemming from alcohol policy violations. The fraternity held an in-house "Bovill Run" Nov. 29, 1993 and admitted to several policy violations.

At a IFC Judiciary Board hearing Sunday afternoon, Phi Tau President Aaron Johnson represented the fraternity and said the procedures were fair. Johnson said he was a little bothered in the three month delay between the actual event and the IFC hearing.

IFC Judiciary Board Chair Brett E. Shelton said Phi Tau members admitted to having a party where:

- Alcohol was provided by the chapter rather than individual guests.
- Access was unrestricted.
- Valid identification was not checked.
- Distilled liquor—rather than beer or wine—was served.

Under the joint alcohol policy passed by IFC and Panhellenic Council last semester, chapter functions involving alcohol must follow those established guidelines. The Phi Tau party fell under this policy but they did not register the party with IFC as was required.

Under the policy, chapters are required to make the function "Bring Your Own Beverage," access is to be restricted, identification is to be verified of party guests and distilled liquor is not to be served as well as abide by other specifics.

The Phi Tau party was not monitored by the Social Event Monitoring Committee as this group was not yet formed. Under the SEMCO program, Greek parties are monitored to ensure alcohol policies are being adhered to.

Under the sanctions handed down to Phi Kappa Tau, they are required to:

- Sponsor two alcohol education programs, which are advertised and open to the public by May 20.

- Have a chapter alumni officer monitor social programming until the end of the academic year with four social activities—two of which allow alcohol.

- Write a letter to The Acropolis apologizing to the UI Greek community for events on Nov. 29.

women and men in a changing world."

The Women's Center also provides services such as lunch programs, presentations, discussions and a library containing books and research on women's issues.

Leslie Gregory, receptionist-interviewer for the Women's Center, estimated between five and fifteen people use the center on any given day. "It's pretty big," Gregory commented.

Hal Godwin, Vice President for Student

Affairs, is concerned that the issue would detract from other university concerns. "I think it is a shame, it's ridiculous. Instead of discussing issues of higher education, there is the potential that JFAC will be discussing the Women's Center," said Godwin.

Godwin also commented that he did not believe Whiting, who is also the ASUI's student lobbyist, was acting appropriately.

"I contend that he is doing it on time that students are paying him for," said

Godwin.

Whiting denies using time or student resources to provoke the issue. "I never used any ASUI funds or resources and I made sure that legislators were aware that I was not representing the ASUI on this matter," said Whiting.

ASUI President John Marble was unaware Whiting had been discussing the Center with legislators.

"I was first informed of this last night [Wednesday]. He was certainly not acting on behalf of the student government," Marble said.

Marble has since asked Whiting to not pursue the issue while in the employ of the ASUI. "I don't want external issues to affect our ability to be heard in Boise," said Marble.

JFAC was expected to vote on the portion of the budget containing the Women's Center funding yesterday, but due to the volume of business will likely consider it before 10 p.m. MST this morning.

"I want it to be clear that whether or not you agree with the positions the Women's Center is taking on political issues, there are many tax payers that do not agree and are being forced, through taxes, to support them," said Whiting. "It would be similar to the state funding churches, it shouldn't happen."

Whiting stated he was "voluntarily complying with a request by the ASUI President not to discuss the issue any further while he remained the student lobbyist."

Faculty Council argues alcohol policy recommendations

Tim Helmke
News Editor

The gap between students and faculty at the UI seems to be coming together.

At the UI Faculty Council meeting Tuesday afternoon, the council discussed a statement from the ad-hoc committee on alcohol policy prior to sending it back to committee for reworking. Don Blacketter, an assistant professor of Mechanical Engineering, served as head of that committee and broke open the discussion of the statement.

Blacketter began by saying he was not a Greek when he was in college but has made an effort to educate himself on the UI Greek system. He felt this necessary to make the decisions the committee aimed to make.

"I came here five years ago and knew nothing about the Greek system. I have since then familiarized myself with the Greek system and consider myself a Greek 'fan,'" said Blacketter.

Blacketter said the committee came up with four basic recommendations to the alcohol policy statement: (1) to increase the maturity level in the Greek houses through such means as deferred Rush, (2) to encourage live-in advisors for all Greek chapters, (3) to take actions to enforce the appropriate policies concerning alcohol, and (4) educate students on these alcohol policies.

With these policies changes being announced, Faculty Council Chair Molly Stock invited several people to the table to speak about the proposed recommendations. Vice President for Student Affairs Hal Godwin, Panhellenic Council President Missy Wilson and Interfraternity Council President Jon Smith all came to the table.

Godwin opened his comments by saying how important the relationship between the faculty and the students is. He thanked the council for the opportunities they were attempting to make in bridging the gap between the two groups.

"The students need faculty guidance and any efforts made to better the relationship between them is a positive sign," said Godwin.

Godwin said the Greeks are nervous about delaying Rush for several reasons. He said a Greek Alumni Council has been set up and has worked to discuss the possibility of a delayed Rush. He said this group expressed some concern of economic problems stemming from an "awkward wobbling" in the Greek system.

President Elisabeth Zinser told Greek representatives at the Greek Forum last fall the discussion on the issue of deferring Rush would be deferred.

Faculty Council member Mario Reyes also expressed a concern on the economic impact deferring Rush would have on the Greek system. He said this should be something looked into before any decisions are made.

Godwin touched on the other parts of the ad-hoc committee recommendations by saying they are asking for cultural change. He said this was not acceptable as it is "tough to legislate cultural change."

Wilson then spoke to the council on what actions the Greek system has taken to clear up some problem areas. She said the council has some valid concerns but reassured them there are changes occurring.

"We could be working in conjunction and are working in the same direction to see what we like to get accomplished. It should be a combined set of goals," said Wilson.

Wilson explained how the new alcohol policy was developed through a joint effort between IFC and Panhellenic. She also discussed how the Social Event Monitoring Committee works and how it can affect Greek functions.

Smith said the Greeks should be taken seriously for the efforts they have taken in regards to the problems areas. He said the Greek system was standing by the policies and working on them.

"We are constantly working on the alcohol policy to ensure it is the most effective and beneficial policy," said Smith.

Wilson also added that some changes in

The perception of August 1993 is not the reality of March of 1994. The Greeks are taking large strides to deal with the problems.

—John Marble
ASUI President

Rush and the week following Rush are currently being considered. These changes would make these days a 'dry period.' Rush is already a 'dry' function and Greek officers would like to see the week after Rush the same.

Faculty Council member Mickey Gunter expressed some concern the committee recommendation was too Greek oriented. He said statistics show the Greeks have higher grade point averages and higher retention rates.

Council members Megan Russell, Larry Makus and William Swagerty also spoke their concerns the recommendation was too Greek oriented.

Russell was the most adamant as she claimed the wording of the policy recommendation made it sound as if there were no alcohol policy violations in the residence halls. She invited all council members to tour these halls some Friday or Saturday night with her to see what really goes on.

Makus then wondered if it would be wise to recommend some of the Greek monitoring ideas should be used in the residence hall policy enforcement. He said he thought the Greeks were doing fine dealing with the problems themselves. Makus also said he is not convinced the alcohol problem is strictly a Greek problem.

Swagerty said he is a fan of deferred Rush as he said it was successful when he went through it in college. He was against the policy recommendations because he feels they are a violation of individual civil liberties.

"I have always been a huge fan of William Penn who spoke out for individual's rights and I cannot vote to approve this policy," said Swagerty.

Swagerty and Reyes both mentioned the policy should be rewritten as to be more general and to incorporate all students rather than just the Greeks.

ASUI President John Marble also sat in on the discussion and said the whole Greek system is being judged on one bad event. He said the council cannot legislate responsibility and only the individuals can change. Marble said the council recommendations do not deal with the problems and were unfairly singling out the Greeks.

"The perception of August 1993 is not the reality of March of 1994. The Greeks are taking large strides to deal with the problems," said Marble.

The council voted to send the recommendation back to the ad-hoc committee. Two authors of the policy were frustrated with the council's vague request to make the recommendations into general resolutions. Blacketter said a resolution stating more should be done to combat alcohol abuse is a waste of time because that is already obvious.

tuition involves annual increases averaging 9.8 percent/year, these recent recommendations would necessitate further adjustments which would average 15.8 percent/year."

"If implemented it's going to do two things. It will reduce the number of students coming here and I doubt the increase in student fees would make up for the decrease in students coming here," Marble said. "Consequently we're going to see less dollars we can work with and it will bring a reduction in programs and hurt the quality of education."

The Fiscal Year 1995 student fee description also employs an increase in full-time resident undergraduate fees. These students will experience an 8.63 percent increase in tuition and fees. The full-time undergraduate base fee increase reflects a $38 increase in the matriculation fee, a $17.50 increase in the activity fee and a $6 increase in facility fees. The total increase is $61.50.

These increases will raise an estimated $1,732,300 for the university's operation.

The UI's philosophy behind increasing the fees include enhancing instruction, protecting existing facilities, sustaining library services and improving student access to technology in the classrooms.

A hearing open to the public is scheduled for March 24 at 3 p.m. in the Student Union Building Gold Room.

Anyone interested is welcome and encouraged to attend. Written and oral responses to the proposed increase may be addressed to Godwin until March 30 to be included in student input on the decision.

The exhibit will be open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Graduate students will compete in the following divisions: arts/music/architecture; engineering and computer science; natural, physical and agricultural science; and education, social sciences and humanities.

Prizes will be awarded in each division. Rules for entering research or projects are available by calling Tom Hennigan at 885-7576. Abstracts for posters and exhibit descriptions are due by March 11. An awards banquet also will be held April 8.

The Gay/Lesbian/Bisexual Association will meet every Friday at 6:30 p.m. Call 335-4311 for more information on these meetings.

Information for Club Calendar is due by noon Mondays and Thursdays.

KICKERS

Several UI students celebrate the spring weather with a game of hacky-sack outside the University Classroom Center earlier this week. Students all over campus can be seen taking part in sports associated with warmer weather. Spring is around the corner and students look forward to leaving Moscow next Friday for Spring Break. Only mid-terms stand in their way.

Retreat results in changes for 1994 Fall Greek Rush

Jennifer McFarland
Copy Editor

The UI Panhellenic and Interfraternity Councils met last Saturday at the Quality Inn in Pullman to discuss Rush changes for 1994 Greek Rush.

Panhellenic and IFC Chairs, Annie Czarniecki and Ian James, and their assistants, Jessica Hillman and Jeremy Chase, organized and lead the retreat. Linda Wilson and Chris Wuthrich, Greek advisors, also helped with the workshops.

Members of Panhellenic Council, Interfraternity Council, Panhellenic Rush Counselors and representatives of UI Greek chapters attended the retreat.

The main goal of the Rush Retreat was confronting the challenges and fears the Greek system faces during Rush. "Challenges are positive conquests for us to make," said Linda Wilson. The main challenge Greeks face is keeping Rush numbers high.

Marian McDonnell Horton, director of New Student Services, gave chapter representatives ideas for recruitment to try to curb low numbers campus-wide and within the Greek community.

Horton stated the best college recruiters are current college students. The best things a student can do to help recruit new students is be informed, honest and alleviate fear by putting yourself in their shoes.

The IFC general Rush meeting included several proposals to make men's Rush more structured. Among the proposals were Rushees staying in the residence halls the first night of Rush. A second proposal included matching rushees and fraternities through a computer system on the second night of Rush. Fraternities and rushees would be placed together on the basis of mutual interest. These proposals faced strong opposition from all but two or three houses.

"The Rush proposals were introduced solely as suggestions to the fraternity Rush Chairs," Jeremy Chase said, "ultimately, it's the decision of the fraternity Rush Chair's to make changes to fall Rush."

Fraternity Rush will, however, face changes next year. Traditionally, during men's Rush there are two bar-b-ques where rushees meet people from fraternities. Next year, one of these bar-b-ques will be eliminated and substituted with a meeting on the Administration lawn the second day of Rush.

At this meeting, IFC representatives from each chapter will give tours of fraternities. Rushees will have the option of stopping off at any house during the tours. Jim Paterson, co-Rush Chair for Alpha Kappa Lambda, said the tours will give Rushees the opportunity to check out all of the chapters on campus — an opportunity which has not always been offered.

Men's work week begins Aug. 15. Men's Rush week is Aug. 22-25. Men who do not register early can register the first day of Rush.

Panhellenic Council also discussed changes for the 1994 Panhellenic Rush. Of the seven proposals, four changes passed and are to be applied to next year's Rush.

Women's Rush will be more casual next year. Clothing for the first three days of Rush will be school clothing. The first day of Rush, women can wear jean-shorts and a t-shirt. Skits are only allowed one day of Rush.

The third day of women's Rush has been changed from Meal Day to a relaxed, open house type games and relaxed conversation. In the past, this day consisted of an appetizer, lunch and desert.

Women's Rush will no longer include any outside decorations. Last year, all outside decorations except for Preference Night were eliminated. The elimination of all outside decorations puts UI in line with all National Panhellenic Council Rush Guidelines, said Annie Czarniecki.

Changing Meal Day and eliminating all outside decorations enabled the 1994 Rush budget to be lowered from $2900 to $2700 per house.

Czarniecki said she was happy with cooperation and acceptance of the changes to women's Rush.

Registration for women's Rush is required before July 29. Sorority women will return to Moscow Aug. 14 to begin preparing for Rush. Rushees check-in on Aug. 19. The final day of Rush is Aug. 24.

Readers get new technological key

The entire computer switch-over to a Macintosh system early last fall gave the Argonaut the technological capability to stop riding tri-cycles and leap onto 21-speed mountain bikes equipped with suspension forks and explore new terrain.

That technology got this paper where it is today — a great-looking paper that's user-friendly. Now our readers can share our technological capabilities in an active way where passive reading will meet defenestration.

Now we're on the Net.

Internet, that is. From a suggestion from one of our readers, Benjamin Bretz, we've opened an Argonaut account that will allow readers to write letters to the editor without wasting any paper. Readers who have opinions to share, problems to expose or simple cutting criticism to offer can do so at their slightest whims.

Organizations sending press releases may also use the account, though we require two stipulations: Always leave a phone number for verification and additional information purposes and specify exactly what the electronic mail in question is intended for. If the Argonaut receives a letter to the editor or a press release from a campus club for a meeting, please make the intended usage conspicuous, especially since this account will have multiple users and uses.

The account is argonaut@uidaho.edu and can be accessed via most UI computers through Internet or E-mail programs. The address will always be found in our letters policy.

Admittedly, one downside to our new gaggle of computers is the technology itself. A fast and solid goal of the Argonaut this year has been to produce the best-looking paper around. At the cost of that goal, however, we've allowed ourselves in a roundabout way to de-emphasize the quality of our "gray" areas under the shine of blinding technology.

Realizing this, the Argonaut staff will attempt wholeheartedly to bring its readers the entire package without allowing any slippage.

In turn, we will rely on our readers to do several things: Keep us in line with what students want to read, provide other students with different takes on issues through letters to the editor and offer constructive criticism and suggestions, like Mr. Bretz, to help us produce the best paper possible.

—Chris Miller

Who will be next media 'goat'?

Well, the battle is finally over, the long and cold three-way fight between Nancy Kerrigan, Tonya Harding and the media. It's been almost three months now since America started being constantly tormented with the saga of Kerrigan in her quest for the gold medal, with the media painting Tonya Harding as a manipulative little wench, acting in her selfishness to get the gold for herself.

Although there is no substantial evidence that links Harding directly to the attack, the media seem to portray Harding as if she had hit her fellow teammate in the knee. It has been a one-way story the entire time and when put into its most basic elements, it comes out as: Nancy good, Tonya bad.

The attack on Kerrigan seemed to be a blessing to the media, not only could they tear Harding's life to shreds, but also give the American public a reason to watch the Winter Olympics. Americans turned on their TV's to watch the soap opera unfold before their eyes, a real soap. Nancy, a brave young woman, who worked her way up from the bottom to compete for her greatest dream.

Meanwhile, Harding's home is staked out by the media, she is followed everywhere — it was a terrible invasion of privacy. To make matters worse, a group of reporters broke into Harding's private electronic mail account and read various pieces of her private E-Mail. To many this should seem a blatant misuse of the media power. What destroys the life of one person, they push another into the spotlight of American sympathy.

I feel sorry for Tonya Harding, who's private life was thrown onto millions of TV screens across America and beyond, while Nancy Kerrigan bathed in the media's portrayal of her as a victim of a brutal attack. Harding took her life seriously and was not about to have her life destroyed under the media's scalpel. Harding did not want her life ruined like so many other public figures before her, for who would want to become the next Michael Jackson and have their life crucified before the eyes of the American public?

Harding seemed to have had enough of the media, so she decided to play opposite roles. Pictures appearing in national magazines such as Newsweek and Time show Harding ducking beneath the wall of TV cameras that had come to watch her practice. Images of Harding's family walking out of their house wielding a camcorder and wearing T-Shirts that had the words "No Comment" printed on them in large letters.

Harding was put under constant pressure to answer questions about herself and her life. But eventually the questions turned to her knowledge of the attack and her relationship with her ex-husband. I believe Harding did the right thing when

Everywhere rape is an insidious, always lurking problem

His hot breath raced across my neck, I began to sweat.

No, it wasn't a rehearsal for an Aarid XX Dry antiperspirant commercial. It was rape.

A situation thousands of people are thrust into daily against their will.

Rape, sexual assault and other related crimes happen every day, all around us. It happens to men, women and children. It happens in the Student Union Building, it happens in the residence halls, it happens at fraternities. Friends violate friends, strangers assault strangers and parents victimize children.

Contrary to popular belief no one asks for it to happen to them. No matter what a person wears, says or looks like, they don't deserve to be assaulted.

Having survived rape I believe I've grown stronger, yet more coarse toward people in general. I trust fewer people and I'm skeptical of everyone.

Commentary
Katé Lyons-Holestine

The feelings of people who have been violated are innumerable and range across the whole spectrum of emotional blueprints with which we are equipped. Some people become withdrawn from society. My best friend, my husband, stood beside me throughout my entire emotional tantrum. My roommate accused me of lying to get attention and have people feel sorry for me, his roommate accused me of lying to trap him by feeling sorry.

I call myself a survivor — not a victim. Being a victim calls for sympathy, being a survivor expresses strength and stamina. I would rather be considered strong than as someone who demands attention because something went wrong once.

I don't want sympathy from anyone. The people who need sympathy are those who commit the crime. They are angry, confused and don't understand the difference between right and wrong. But, this doesn't excuse them. If I knew who had violated me I would never be able to forgive them. Not knowing makes it even worse, there is no one to blame — except myself.

Blaming oneself is easy and common after being raped. Friends often times turn away from you because they don't understand or don't know how to help. I felt my family would want to make decisions for me and have me move home because I was now "troubled." I was wrong, they only wanted to help.

Keeping the fact I was raped a secret is also common among survivors, for the same reasons as blaming oneself. I thought letting people know would lower me in their estimation.

When I returned to UI in 1991 I was prompted to share my experience with classes here on campus by Marie Lassey, an associate professor of sociology. The first two talks I gave were very helpful to myself and other students, the third and final one I agreed to give was the worst experience of my life. Before I had relayed my experience to the class a young woman began heatedly arguing with me about reporting the crime and stopping it from happening again. I reported the crime. People who don't listen and make rash judgments are the people who don't understand.

Being well educated is a common desire of many Americans, but knowing about things which happen around you everyday is also important. Awareness of sexual crimes is the battle we, as a society, are waging now.

Primarily women need to be aware of threatening situations and learn to avoid them. This is a fact, but shouldn't be a reality. A woman in today's society should feel safe walking down the street at 2 p.m. Women shouldn't need to worry

Manage selves before pregnant

Julie Lafferty, in the Feb. 15 issue, reminds us that as human beings, we have a responsibility to "manage ourselves wisely." Wise management for her means population control through abortion.

She would surely agree that wise management of our reproductive resources would extend to managing all reproductive activity, either through abstinence, not an unrealistic option; it happens all the time, or birth control. I suggest the time to "manage ourselves wisely" is before getting pregnant. An unwanted pregnancy is more than evidence of a lack of managerial skills, it is stupid, except in cases of rape or incest.

Abortion is costly, painful and can lead to sterilization and occasional death. It almost always leaves deep emotional scars. For example, "post-abortion traumatic syndrome," something Planned Parenthood won't discuss with you, but which you ought to look into anyway.

The abortion issue is not about reproductive rights. It's about political power. What Julie doesn't realize is she is the one being managed (manipulated?) by doctrinaire feminists whose only concern is the advancement of their political agenda.

As she requested, no Biblical quotes, or whining about immortality. She may have meant "immorality."

—Ralph W. Hahn

Violence flows two ways

There's been a lot of talk lately about bias crime. Imagine having your private property damaged or your daughter's life threatened because of your opinions or lifestyle.

July 1992: When you order supplies for a political group you belong to, another "neighbor" accepts delivery of the package in front of a witness, then tells you she never received any package (you end up having to buy more).

Oct. '92: You are at a peaceful demonstration and a car deliberately swerves towards the curb where a friend of yours and her young children are standing.

'92-'93: The Daily Evergreen weekly "loses" every single announcement of your group's meetings for a whole school year and counting. Sept. '93: A slogan on your WSU dorm door is repeatedly vandalized and when you replace it, a gang of women living on your floor knock on your door one night. They threaten you with bodily harm if you ever put the sign up again. Since spring semester '94 this happens two more times, while various WSU committees whisper about the matter of your safety, but do nothing.

Spring '93: Somebody leaves offensive notes on your windshield because of your lifestyle, whether you're parked in front of a house or in Dissmore's parking lot. Spring '93: At another peaceful demonstration, opponents hurl racial slurs at your three hispanic fellow-demonstrators.

Nov. '93: Your car and a friend's new truck are severely scratched ("keyed") at different times in the same NW 120 Ann St. parking lot in Pullman because of your bumper stickers. On a previous day, your antenna was bent down and broken.

Nov.-Dec. '93: Knowing that a certain number of noise complaints will get you kicked out of your apartment, a neighbor is filing complaints about you to your landlord even when you haven't been home.

Funny how you're not supposed to think Pro-Lifers ever get hurt. Yet violence against these peaceful citizens seems to be the most common form of opposition.

Recently, the Idaho Statesman reported that "hate crimes" against people for their race and sexual preference doubled in Idaho from 1991-92 (6/4/93). Meanwhile, crimes against people for their religion quadrupled, without headlines or the formation of flamboyant coalitions. A Pro-Life minister was shot and killed in Huntsville, Ala.,

(World 9/18/93). The office of a female Pro-Life professor of feminist philosophy at College of St. Catherine, Minn., was twice severely vandalized and her son threatened in Oct. 1993. The WSU student Pro-Life organization's office and bulletin board is vandalized weekly, once with a photo of Jesus sexually engaged with two naked women.

Whether you are a Christian, Pro-Life, or both, you are a member of an increasingly persecuted and deliberately ignored victim group. Further, every slanted new article and every unfair political cartoon ridiculing your cultural religious values is a hate crime. Bigotry is bigotry.

We're keeping track of these hate crimes. If you are experiencing harassment like this or know someone who is or has, please report it to Pullman Human Life at 332-0289. Also, the Community Relations Service of the U.S. Department of Justice Hate Hotline: 1-800-347-HATE.

President Pullman Human Life

He was God before Earth

In reference to a Feb. 1 letter by Zeke Abdul:

I really enjoyed your myths, Zeke! But did you read in the Holy Qur'an, 4:150-152, that you must believe all the prophets? You are an unbeliever if you pick and choose which prophet you will believe. Therefore, you must believe all the words that Jesus said just as much as you believe the words that Mohammed said. Also read 4:163, 6:84-85, and 23:23, where the Qur'an clearly states that all prophets are inspired, righteous and sent by God.

You know by 7:204 that the Qur'an is to be listened to attentively, and by 6:19 that it is revealed by inspiration. Zeke, you have no choice but to believe that it is revealed by inspiration. Why should you take strong "exception" to Jesus being called the Son of God or even God? Remember, Mohammed said that Jesus was inspired and righteous and Jesus himself said that he was God.

Zeke, if you died, would you cease to exist? Or course you don't believe that. You, just like all Muslims and Christians, believe in life after death. Life, not in your body, but in your spirit! When your body dies, your spirit simply leaves your body. Your spirit man keeps right on living. If I could see into the spiritual realm, I could look into your body and see the real you; your human spirit. If we could travel back in time to see Jesus in the flesh and if we could look into his body and see his spirit, who would we see? A human spirit who called himself Jesus? No! No! No!

We as human beings are a triune being. We are a spirit being, we live in a body and possess a soul. Genesis 1 says we are created in God's image. Why should it stretch you to believe God, in whose image we are created, is a triune being? The Qur'an 5:47 says "It was We who revealed the law to Moses." In 5:49, "In their footsteps We sent Jesus the son of Mary, confirming the Law... We sent him the gospel..." Did you ever wonder why the Qur'an use the word "we" in reference to God?"

It is because God, a triune being, did these things: God the Father, God the Son and God the Holy Spirit. Now back to my question. Who was the Spirit inside the body of Jesus? Was it a human spirit such as you or I have inside our body? No! It was God! God loved us so much He sent part of Himself to take the form of man. He caused Mary to get pregnant while a virgin. You see, God the Holy Spirit created the baby Jesus, not the spirit inside the baby. For every other human born on Earth, he created a human spirit. For Jesus, He was the spirit! There was no earthly father! There was no sex! There was just God inside a human baby boy.

According to 4:151, even Mohammed believed in the virgin birth, since he is saying here the Jews slandered Mary by saying she was unchaste. God didn't beget a son the way we think, because he provided himself a body to come to Earth to be the supreme sacrifice for sin. No, the Jews didn't kill him. He laid down his own life and went to hell for your sin!

He was God before the earth was made and He is God now. He is the only man who died, went to hell and was raised up with a supernatural body to become the executioner of His own will (the New Testament)! No wonder He said, "I am the way, the truth and the life: no man cometh unto the Father but by me." Of course, He could say that He is the only way to heaven! He created heaven!

—Lyle E. Cooper

Argonaut content boring

Could this be the dawning of the age of the McArgonaut? Or better yet, perhaps we should all begin referring to the UI student newspaper at the Argonaut Lite, since it seems to have half the news content it used to.

Granted, UI is not the most exciting place to be, but surely there are some stories out there worth covering.

Reading a half dozen articles about new construction on campus would be far more edifying than what we are treated to now. How many people care about staff writers' favorite recipes, advice from "Dear Jason," taking a quick quiz on taxes or the "Love Corner?" How about having a regular section that lists recent divorces, separations and romantic spats? Something like that would at least hold a reader's attention past the first paragraph (unlike most of the commentaries found on the opinion page).

And as long as I have my dander up, what is the deal with the lead story in the Feb. 11 issue? It is tragic that the university newspaper must rely on facts and quotes that "were compiled from various local media sources" to cover one of the biggest stories to hit campus this year.

Perhaps the Argonaut is not really "The Students' Voice" after all.

The Argonaut has finally done the impossible and made the Daily News look respectable in comparison. Congratulations.

she walked away from the interview with Connie Chung. Harding was there to talk about her skating, but instead Chung battered her with question after question concerning her involvement with the attack on fellow teammate Nancy Kerrigan. Not only has she had to put up with constant attacks, she also has to deal with the trauma of being the punch line of jokes on national shows.

Of course, some sympathy has to be given to Kerrigan too, she survived a nasty attack. She recovered against the odds and took to the ice in an almost magical performance, earning a silver medal. Harding, on the other hand, is shown whining to the judges for a second chance, which was approved.

The announcers seemed to blame every mistake in the Canadian skater's routine on Harding, claiming the skater "didn't have enough time to prepare." Eventually, Harding skated and came out with mediocre scores.

It takes a tough person to survive the abuse Harding has taken and still have the courage to compete in the Olympics. I can think of no one in the history of the Olympic games that has been harassed so much. It is a wonder that Tonya kept her faith in her quest — it is a terrible thing for someone to take apart your life based on unproven facts. In America we go by the rule that everyone is "innocent until proven guilty." But for Harding, this rule did not apply, and she became the scapegoat for the problems of world.

I wonder sometimes if the American public gets a rise out of destroying a young child's hero. It is only a matter of time before the next scapegoat rises and the old one is left to rot. Who will be the next? Will it be Clinton with his National Health Care Policy, Oliver North in his run for Congress or maybe Whitney Houston for rigging the American Music Awards in her favor?

We shall wait and see, but it won't be long until the media shifts its attention, only to destroy another person, only then will we forget Tonya Harding.

Letters to the Editor

Gays should quit whining

Dear Jeff, I first of all wanted to thank you for being sensitive and caring towards you friend who is a homosexual. While I disagree with you on the point of homosexuality being genetic, I would like to address another problem I considered as I read your article. The fact is the world is full of people who hate others because they are different. There will never be enough laws to stop people from hating, so what can you do about it? Do you hate them back? It seems many homosexuals do that. They hate all Christians because they don't approve of the homosexual lifestyle. They hate heterosexuals because a few of them go around gay bashing. What is up with that? Can you justify your hatred because someone else hates you?

I would ask this question of your friend: When was the last time he was beaten or whipped for being a homosexual? Start facing the fact that life is often not fair. Take a tip from those who have risen above their circumstances and overcome them like Collin Powell. When he joined the army he was discriminated against because he was black. Did he become bitter and complain? No, he did his job and proved beyond a shadow of doubt that he could not only do his job, but could do it better than anyone else, as was shown by his being appointed the very highest position in the military. Powell gives credit to God for his success in the military and trusted in God for his reward. God knows what we go through and can use any hatred or discrimination we have had to endure to help others through our care and understanding.

If you really cared about your friend, maybe you would help him to learn to relate to other people better. There is an escape to a life of loneliness and rejection and it has little to do with being a homosexual. If he were to begin by restoring his relationship with God through Jesus Christ, I'm convinced he could be happier. I was once lonely and felt rejected myself and have found restoration through Jesus Christ.

about their safety after dark or in a bar or while walking to their car.

Men must understand that it's not playing "hard to get" when a woman says "No." She means she wants the action currently happening to end. Flirting isn't an open invitation to sex and a date paid for by a man isn't a direct link to sex either.

Sex is supposed to be a special moment shared by two people who love one another and are responsible enough to deal with the consequences.

Sex isn't an act which should be used as a stress reliever or to please one person.

College campuses need to take more aggressive strides in educating students as to what rape is, what is isn't, how to avoid it and where to go for help.

Many campuses offer self-defense classes for incoming freshmen and many others employ more aggressive safety standards than the UI. It's time for the UI to be a leader, the one to step out in front of the pack and make the much needed changes first.

Senior Jill Lewis' vocal recital tonight

Jill Terhaar Lewis, a UI vocal/education major, will be giving her senior recital tonight in the Lionel Hampton School of Music Auditorium at 8 p.m. From Green Creek, Idaho, Lewis will be graduating next May, after completing her student teaching. Tonight's program will include some German lieder by Brahms, a piece from Handel's Messiah, and some French art songs. The recital will be one night only, and is free to UI students, faculty and the general public. Refreshments will be served following the performance.

As You Like It - as I liked it

"It is more a carnival than drama, more circus than story...it is the way we are when we are in love."

This is the essence of Shakespeare's light-hearted story about women and freedom and falling in, under, out of and around love. Truly, a truer truth was never truthed.

For those of you who thought Shakespeare had to be a laborious endeavor — put your fears aside, and take advantage of tonight, tomorrow night and Sunday's performances, which will close the run of the show.

The story, as told by David Krasner, becomes one of an exiled duchess' daughter and her cousin who find freedom in the forest among a band of women, also exiled from the kingdom by the ruthless Duchess Fredricka.

Disguised as a young man and his shepherdess sister, Rosalind and Celia find love in Orlando and his brother Oliver, amidst a series of mishaps and chaotic events. These events include the love affairs of a half dozen other characters, culminating at the end in a mass wedding, complete with glitter, ivy leaves and flowered head wreaths.

The costuming (Patricia Martin) and light, Americanized accents juxtaposed a modern element with the traditional Shakespearean language. Fredrika, played wickedly and wonderfully by Gretchen Hoskins, is consistently decked out in sexy leopard skin, slinky hose, and gaudy black hats.

Her co-hort, Charles the wrestler (Ben Tollefson), is equally repulsive in his equally sexy leopard skin tights and black spandex bloomers.

Oliver, Orlando's initially evil brother (Andrew Wyke), appears in the first scene dressed in an evil black suit. And Touchstone, the court jester portrayed marvelously by Ed Hughes, is decorated in screaming patchwork pants, a Reggae-like cap and Converse tennis shoes.

The cast was generally superb. Britt Heisel presented an endearing Rosalind — particularly in her portrayal of a young man.

Her choices were not highly original: the swagger; one foot up on the step, elbow resting on knee; the gruff, self-conscious chuckle in the face of embarrassment. But Heisel has a definite presence, the sweet charm of which surpasses the ingenuity of the physical movements.

Jesse Petrick, as Orlando, was a convincing smitten youth — ardently attaching love poems to trees and moping about, heart-sick and cupid-struck. Celia, played by Mary Finkelnburg, seems to have been written as a rather simple, shallow character — but Finkelnburg had a definite repore with Heisel, making Rosalind and Celia a believable, even charming, pair.

Hughes was a spastic pleasure to watch as Touchstone. His rubbery, acrobatic carriage and speech patterns brought a jollity to the stage that commanded our amused attention. Unfortunately, his speech was so rapid a couple times his stinging wit is lost.

I had perhaps the most fun with the characters of Phoebe and Silvius, portrayed delightfully by Demaree Harvey and Brad Rohman, respectively. Silvius is a poor shepherd with an appropriately sheepish countenance and a leather hat with ear flaps,

Café brings homey artist back

"Folk music sticks around because of its longevity. It comes from the heart and it stays there."

Dan Maher is a self-educated authority on matters of the folk heart.

Raised on radio, a lover of the spoken word, Maher is an entertainer in the most essential sense of the word: he loves the audience and he loves the music.

These elements make this singer/guitarist from Pullman a sheer pleasure to watch — an experience available in the Vandal Cafe tonight, when Maher performs for the ASUI Coffeehouse audience.

Maher, visually impaired since birth, attended public school in Spokane as part of a program designed to mainstream students with special needs into the regular classroom.

At home, a great deal of his time as a child was spent in front of the radio, and through the years, his love of music has grown exponentially with the increasing impact it has had on society. In particular, he is a lover of folk.

Fascinated with history, Maher has an impressive degree of knowledge of folk music's origin, growth and role transitions.

In the 60s, rock and roll "bottomed out," as a result of several significant events, including the Payola scandal, in which DJ's started taking bribes from musicians to get their music aired.

The failure of several major record labels and Elvis' legendary exit from the arts and subsequent entrance into the army also aided in the crash of rock.

"What you got on the radio after that was this Philadelphia, ultra-white scene — it was like pop, with a bad lounge, jazz sound," Maher says, obviously not impressed with the resulting product.

Maher refers to what happened next as the "Folk Scare," or "Folk Revival."

"You had (the debut of) groups like Peter Paul and Mary, the Kingston Trio, the Limelighters." And the industry backed these new sounds, Maher said, because rock and roll was out. As a member of the listening audience, Maher himself became an avid fan.

"Folk music is very 'singable.' It's all lyrics," he explained, listing as examples songs like "Michael Row Your Boat Ashore," and "Tom Dooly."

As time passed, so did musical trends. The Folk Revival was followed by the British Rock Invasion, which gave way to rock with a psychedelic overtone, which became even harder, until folk music was pushed into the "small concert halls and living rooms" of the world, where it's been ever since.

This, Maher asserts, is where it really belongs.

Maher himself didn't actually start playing a lot of folk until after college. During his college career in the 70s at WSU, where he majored in communications, he stuck to James Taylor and Gordon Lightfoot — "What everyone was playing at the time" — because hard core folk wasn't as "pretty." But something wasn't clicking for him musically.

"I asked myself, 'what's missing?' Then I realized — people aren't singing along." Maher didn't like the fact that his performances were based solely on what he alone was playing and singing — they lacked unity.

So he started encouraging audiences to join in, using a lot of Celtic bar songs because they made particularly good sing-a-long's.

Maher has been entertaining crowds with his participatory, energetic folk style ever since.

Maher's career has not been without its difficulties, though. In 1983, after having secured jobs at Rico's, a bar in Pullman, as a performer, and at KPBX public radio in Spokane, producing a weekly program called Inland Folk, Maher realized that his career had consumed his life, to the exclusion of some other very important things, including love.

Coffeehouse

He spent about three-and-a-half years away from the performance circuit, sorting things out and self-examining.

Three-and-a-half years was all it took.

"You can't stop," Maher says. "You need to know when you do something well, and once you know, you have to work with it."

Maher has certainly discovered the secret to working with his own talent. Today, he is a regular musical feature at Rico's, he airs Inland Folk on Saturday mornings with NPR at WSU and he works as an adviser in the AWSU Office of Activities and Recreational Sports.

Maher has also produced two albums: Winter Whisky, available on tape and CD, and Winter Whiskey II, which is available on tape now and will be out on CD towards the end of this year.

Winter Whiskey III is in the making, and further down the road, Maher hopes to produce an album of road songs, as well as one that incorporates the spoken word as a kind of segue into each song.

Dan Maher is an experience and a half — both musically and as a human being. He loves to tease his audience and invites them to feed it right back.

Rights group battles initiative

Tristan Trotter
Staff Writer

The Latah/Nez Perce Voices for Human Rights vows to educate and inform the public about the truths behind homosexuality.

"We want to help people learn to live together in peaceful ways," said Liz Brandt. Brandt, of the UI Law School, spoke at the Moscow Community center Tuesday.

Voices for Human Rights is a non-profit organization formed last January in reaction to the Idaho Citizen's Alliance Anti-gay initiative. The group does not only promote education about homosexuality, however. They also work to promote and preserve basic human rights for all people. Voices' immediate concern, however, is keeping the ICA's initiative off of the 1994 Idaho ballot. Tuesday's meeting was designed to provide members, supporters and the general public with the information and tools needed in this fight.

The keynote speaker, Rev. Meg Riley, a Unitarian Universalist Association minister and Director of the Office of Lesbian and Gay Concerns in Boston, presented the audience with a credible, personal experience-based look at the issue and information on how to accomplish change in our own community.

The ICA's Anti-gay initiative basically sets forth three provisions. First, it prevents the establishment of minority rights for homosexuals. Second, it forbids the promotion in public schools of homosexuality as normal or acceptable behavior and generally prevents discussion of homosexuality among certain age groups. Finally, it keeps public funds from being expended for the purpose of "promoting, making acceptable or expressing approval of homosexuality." The initiative also attempts to make provisions for constitutionality and specifies that no agency shall "forbid...the consideration of private sexual behaviors as non-job factors."

Riley's talk focused on the Religious Right, an organization with driving force behind the ICA's legislation, and legislation like it across the nation. The Religious Right was born in the 1950's, as the Old Right.

This group, which lasted into the 1960's, worked mainly against communism, socialism and unionism, waging a moralistic war against societal surfacing of these phenomena. The Religious Right makes an argument against homosexuality based on a literal interpretation of the Bible, and uses it to influence governmental decisions.

Riley was careful to stress the difference between the Religious Right and religious fundamentalism in general. Fundamentalists, she said, "...believe in a literal interpretation of the Bible, but they may not necessarily have a political agenda (as is the case with the Religious Right)."

A religious leader herself, Riley says the RR claims to be a defender of Christianity, but that it is not the kind of Christianity with which most of us are familiar. It is concerned, she maintains, with authority and control, and uses homophobia as a tool, because it is an issue which carries with it a lot of confusion for many Americans.

However, according to Riley, the RR is "a many-headed dragon." She believes they are not concerned with just homosexuality and the discrimination against it; she warns that if we allow homophobia to function as a stun-gun to the fight against discrimination, we allow fear to rule our sensibilities.

Riley illustrated her sense of the RR's view on traditional values with a flow

Dear Jason,

I have a serious problem with my best friend's ex-boyfriend, Neanderthal. For some reason he has gone psycho on me. He is so paranoid that he imagines I'm out to get him. He is acting like the F.B.I. and collecting information on me. Thank God he hasn't located the nude photos from my freshman year.

What can I do about this? I really, really need your help.

—Desperate Victim

This is perhaps Jason's most perplexing question yet. Since Jason abhors violence in any form, simply "doing away" with him is certainly not the answer I would condone. Since Jason also never endorses bodily mutilation, Jason would never suggest cutting off his nose, so he would get the point to leave you alone. Although many Neanderthals are afraid of fire, Jason could not and would not suggest setting this deranged man on fire, although the idea had occurred to me. This leaves me in a difficult situation — what to do with Neanderthal.

I first want to state, for the slow readers that it is inherently obvious "Desperate" has had relations with "Neanderthal" during his association with the roommate, hence his current stalking behavior. Of course, Jason sees nothing wrong with this, after all, everyone must look out for themselves these days.

who is incurably in love with the feisty, buxom Phoebe.

Harvey is clearly in her element on stage — it is easy to be carried away by her magnetic personality. She and Rohman complement each other consistently in each of their hilarious exchanges.

The musical element of the show was another highlight for me. Watch for the lovely, haunting, yet playful and sexy dance performed by Harvey, Erin O'Neil, Lisa Hamilton and Darcy Hughes which invokes the forest in the middle of the first act.

I was drawn to the simple, sensual choreography by Kelsey

Hartman and the look on each woman's face conveying they knew something we did not.

The only problem with Krasner's casting changes lies in Shakespeare's original script which dealt with some feminist issues already, eliminating the male element in some instances also eliminates the issue.

However, UI's version, although not able to reach fathoms of depth, provides a chance for the audience to sit back and just have a good time. And after all, as the director's notes so aptly maintain: the theater is "a place...for our amusement and our pleasure."

Maher especially enjoys a concert audience, which he calls the "filet mignon" of audiences, because he can do so many different things within that context.

He provides his listeners with a very wide range of folk, including a lot of Celtic and Scottish music, as well as his own brand of conversation and wit.

Tonight, Maher's performance will begin with a half an hour of children's music, after which the young members of the crowd will be provided with movies (and baby-sitters) elsewhere, so the remainder of the evening will be left for the uninterrupted listening pleasure of the adults.

Maher says that performing for children requires a great deal of honesty. "They can tell when you're leading them on...It's all a matter of relaxation"

Making the leap from this kind of technique to the style he uses with mature crowds entails a real transition, he says. But Maher is up for the challenge.

Tonight's ASUI Coffeehouse performance begins at 7 p.m. in the Vandal Cafe, free of charge.

Proceeds To Benefit Our Area Youth Programs

Louisiana visits Moscow

Halo Dewitt
Lifestyles Editor

Seventeen years ago when Cope Gale, Jr. returned to the Northwest from three years of service in the Vista Volunteer program in New Orleans, La., he discovered he missed something.

Mardi Gras.

So here in Moscow, Idaho he created his own Mardi Gras celebration. It started with a kazoo parade on the sidewalk in downtown Moscow. With the parade came a band and a big party, according to Nick Bode, a member of the Mardi Gras committee.

Bode speculates that the traditional black and white colors came from an annual event in France. The nobility used to get together with the peasants. Everyone wore black and white so no class distinctions could be made. Somehow, he said, it got incorporated into the Moscow celebration.

The parade and party got bigger when the UI got involved. The floats came in when a design class was assigned to make "monstrous floats" for class, according to Bode.

The most exciting thing about Mardi Gras in Moscow is it is growing exponentially. This year the ball is in seven different locations. Bode said they are still trying to find other locations for people to go. Next year, he said, they are going to have to find more space. By about 8 or 9 p.m. there is a line out the door at most locations. The committee has also had to turn away several bands this year.

The money raised by Mardi Gras goes to help area youth groups.

Bode said in the past they have helped the Moscow Youth Center committee and the Special Olympics. The committee puts out requests each year. When they come in they are evaluated and decided upon.

"We are not locked into any particular group. It is purely on a need basis," said Bode.

African group dances to WSU

Dave Lewis
Staff Writer

The infectious rhythms and colorful choreography of West African culture will be on stage at Washington State University Sunday.

Adefua, an African music and dance company, will perform at 4 p.m. at the WSU Compton Union Building Ballroom.

Adeyemi and Afua Harris, with their four children and six talented friends, will share the music and dance of Senegal, Nigeria, Ghana, Zaire, Guinea and Haiti.

Performing since the 1960's, drummer Adeyemi Harris and dancer Afua Harris founded Adefua in 1986. Before that time, both performed with the New York city based Babatunde Olatunji Drums of Passion from Nigeria.

In 1987 the Harris's left New York to relocate in Seattle, where they have since become one of the leading performers of African arts in the Northwest.

Adefua won the 1990 Pacific Northwest Black Community Festival Culture Heritage Award. The group also performed at the closing ceremonies of the Goodwill Games, the International Black Dance Companies Conference and the Duke Ellington Winter Solstice Celebration Concert.

As accomplished as they are, Adefua is more than a performance group. Through school appearances, workshops, participatory demonstrations, youth projects and other activities, the members of Adefua share their cultural heritage and pride in their African history.

Heather McNair said of Adefua, "I knew that I might learn something about the African ways, songs and dances, but I never dreamed that I would enjoy so much, every minute of the performance."

Dance critic Rob Hill states his opinion about the group this way, "...it's clear that what is happening on stage is first and foremost a group of extremely talented people having way too much fun. And it rubs off on the audience. If there is an overt message to the performance, it's probably a very simple one: regardless of your race, this is part of your heritage, because it is part of American culture."

A free demonstration performance will be held at the UI Administration Auditorium Monday at 7 p.m.

Tickets for the Sunday performance are on sale at The Pearl and WSU Activities Office in Pullman, Bookpeople, UI Ticket Express in Moscow and at the door. Admission will be $7 for adults and $4 for children and students.

chart, which began with "White Male God" (which she claims is the RR's version of God). One step lower on the ladder is "White Male," followed by "White Female," with "White Kids" at the bottom. In a separate hierarchy, is the "Colored" version of the same chart, with identical gender specifications — also flowing under the "White Male God."

The homosexual community, Riley says, does not fit into the RR's flow chart of traditional values. And so, initiatives like that proposed by the ICA become flag-ship causes for the Religious Right.

It is, Riley is sorry to point out, an increasingly common public battle: 16 states now face school voucher initiatives to lower school funding — they are vouchers proposed by the RR in its attempt to Christianize schools; eight states are currently dealing with similar anti-gay initiatives to the one now on its way to Idaho's ballot.

In these "increasingly scary times," as Riley describes them, the question becomes, "How do we prevent discrimination in general within our government, schools, communities and religious organizations?" Riley's solution tree was heavy with fruit ripe for the harvest.

She prefaced her suggestions with a warning about what methods not to use: in particular, inflammatory and hate-based propaganda. Riley used a poster featuring figures like Hitler and a Klux Klan member with a caption proclaiming "Never Again," as an example of negative, shock-value promotion. Such tactics seem to proclaim that every person who stands in opposition aspires to Nazism or the doctrines of group like the Aryan Nations. This is unfair, and untrue.

"Never fight with a jerk," Riley advises, "because someone walking down the hall might not know who's the jerk."

This is what should be done instead:

1) Coalitions need to be built in communities or people need to join pre-existing ones, like Voices for Human Rights to educate, inform and lead organizational battles against discrimination.

"People of faith need to share that faith," Riley stressed. It is important the public know Christianity is not supposed to be based on fear, authority and persecution of differences.

We need to be visible — to "take the moral high ground," Riley says. "It's all about who controls language...Refuse to give up language about morality and salvation. Instead, re-frame it."

2) Build self esteem among the population. If people feel good about themselves, they are immune to the manipulation of negative authority/power figures.

3) Most importantly, fight against hate. "Through the eyes of hate," Riley warned, "anyone can look hateable."

Riley said students have a special role in the battle against discrimination. "Students have been in the forefront of every struggle," she said, specifying Oregon's recent fight against a similar initiative and more historical war demonstrations such as Vietnam. "Unfortunately, they [students] sometimes get frustrated, because they have to bang down doors for attention."

Riley urged students not to give up hope. She is encouraged by statistics which indicate a decline in homophobia among the youth of today. "These students need to take charge...to be active in getting other students to vote and take part in the struggle."

The best offense, Riley says, is being visible. If you're interested in joining, contact Elizabeth Brandt, 883-3257, or write Latah/Nez Perce Voices for Human Rights, PO Box 8862, Moscow, Idaho 83843.

Weapons such as these are affected by the newly enacted Brady law, which requires a five-day waiting period before delivery of handguns can be made. Only licensed gun dealers, manufacturers and importers are required to file potential purchases with the Idaho State Department of Law Enforcement. The law was enacted Feb. 27.

Brady Law enforces five-day wait

Darin Crisp
Assistant Editor

The new Brady Law imposes yet one more obstacle in the path of a would-be handgun buyer.

This, the first major legislation to stem from the Reagan shooting, provides for up to a five day waiting period before a purchaser can receive a weapon. During this time, law enforcement officials will be conducting background checks to find out if the purchaser has a past criminal history or resides in a place where handguns are outlawed.

The bill grew out of the fear of violence in large cities and was proposed by Sarah Brady, wife of former Reagan Press Secretary Jim Brady, who was permanently disabled in the attack by John Hinckley, Jr., in 1981.

Gun dealers in the Moscow area were ambivalent about the law. They don't know how, or if, the law is going to affect them.

Handgun opponents weren't thrilled by the law as it stands, either, but agree it is a start.

The first two weeks in January were high volume months in handgun sales, according to Tri-State Distributors sporting goods employee Jon Campbell.

However, he thought sales would slow down because everybody in the market will have bought one by Feb. 27.

This sentiment was echoed by Darrell Tonn, owner of Husky Sport Shop, who also said he expected a real slack period after things cooled down. It was anybody's guess, though, he said, about how the waiting period is going to effect sales over the next 90 to 120 days.

Campbell, personally, didn't think the waiting period was going to be a real help in impulse crimes, anyway.

"Get a baseball bat or a knife from the kitchen and do the same thing," he said.

Colleague Devin Stampfli concurred, adding that at-risk people won't come to a dealer, but will instead use personal contacts and want ads to get their weapons.

Tonn agreed with this assessment. "It'll just make more hoops for the legal guy to jump through," he added.

Alan Lifton of the UI School of Communication holds a mildly opposing view. He's not against all firearms, and even does some hunting, but believes the only real use of handguns is to kill people.

He feels if a case could be made to use them for hunting, or to put food on the table, he could see them being legal. His feeling, though, is they were designed for personal protection against people, and being available, they contribute greatly to the problem.

Living and working in New York City when he was a young man, he worked the 6 p.m. to 6 a.m. shift at a gas station. Early one morning he noticed three young men, in their late teens, walking up to the register. One asked him to change a dollar bill for quarters, and when he looked up, he was staring down the barrel of a pistol.

"One was pointing a gun right at my face," he said. All he could do was stand there. He gave them what they asked for, saying "Take the money. Just don't shoot me."

"I was lucky. They whacked me around a little and left. . . It (getting shot) could have happened like that," he said, "Nobody should have to put up with that."

Phil Deutchman, from the UI

“I think we've neglected our domestic priorities too long. I think we have to heal our society. This is just a beginning.”
—Phil Deutchman
UI Physics Professor

Physics Department, comes out strongly against handgun ownership.

"The evidence shows handguns are instrumental in violent crime in the big cities," he said, recognizing that in this rural area it doesn't affect the population much. He explained he thought the Brady Law was just a drop in the bucket, but added, "it'll help focus on what causes crime."

"I think we've neglected our domestic priorities too long. I think we have to heal our society. This is just a beginning," said Deutchman.

According to Deutchman, the root causes of the violence, which are reflected by the use of handguns, can be found in the overwhelming poverty and high unemployment among youth in the large cities.

According to a questionnaire distributed to gun dealers by the Department of the Treasury, Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, the Brady Bill only affects licensed dealers, manufacturers and importers. Private sales are not covered under the requirements.

The law enforcement agency is not required to respond. The dealer must wait five days after filing the information before releasing the weapon to the buyer; however, if the police respond favorably before the five day limit, the seller may choose to release the weapon early.

Moscow Police Chief William F. Brown, Jr. said Tuesday the Idaho State Department of Law Enforcement in Boise will be entirely responsible for doing background checks. His department should not be affected. Dealers will have access through a WATTS line, where they will report their potential sale and obtain clearance.

Funding for this is covered under emergency sources currently, with further funding to be allocated by the legislature. With the National Rifle Association raising questions of the legality of the possible funding measures, the legislature has placed the question on hold right now until the differences between the NRA and the DLE are fixed.

Exceptions to the waiting period include sales to law enforcement, holders of state permits or where there exists an officially verified statement of need based on a threat to the buyer's life. Other exceptions include transfers of weapons approved by ATF and transfers where a waiting period is not practical.

Men finish regular season tomorrow

The men's basketball team finishes up regular season play tonight and tomorrow when they tip-off against intrastate rivals Boise State University and Idaho State University.

The Vandals host BSU tonight in the ASUI-Kibbie Dome. The team lost a close game on the road earlier in the season under difficult circumstances. Tonight's game can be seen live on KTVB with play beginning at 7:05 p.m.

The student section wearing the most Vandal black wins eight large Domino's pizzas. Wear black everything, including hair.

Saturday night the Vandals look to hopefully take second place in the Big Sky with the ISU game, the Bengals are currently sharing the position with the Vandals.

Game time is 7:05 p.m. and also can be seen live on KTRV.

BSU and ISU will both play Eastern Washington (5-19, 0-12). ISU visited Cheney, Wash., last night. BSU will play Sunday.

Big Sky tourney tickets on sale

Tickets for the 1994 Big Sky Conference West One Bank Men's Basketball Tournament are now on sale in the Idaho Ticket office. Prices for the three-day adult passes are $39, while UI students and children can get tournament passes for $20.25. For information call (208) 885-6466.

Daniel named BSC athlete of week

Tennis player Chris Daniel was named the Big Sky Conference/Cenex Land O' Lakes Athlete of the Week this week for his play in the Eastern Washington Winter Invitational.

Daniel, seeded No. 5 in singles, was the only Vandal to win all of his matches in the tournament. He won in straight-sets against both the University of Montana and EWU in singles play. He then teamed with Keith Bradbury at No. 2 doubles and they won both matches.

Men look to buck Boise Broncos

Andrew Longeteig
Staff Writer

The Boise State men's basketball team is impeccable on their home floor. On the road, however, they are about as effective as water thrown on a grease fire.

BSU boasts a stellar 12-3 home record, which is never unusual. Excluding neutral sites, they are a miserable 0-7 on the road, a trend the Idaho Vandals hope continues as the in-state rivals clash tonight in the Kibbie Dome. Game time is 7:05 p.m.

In their previous meeting, the Broncos (13-11, 6-6 Big Sky) nipped the Vandals (16-8, 8-4) 67-64 in Boise. In that game, BSU shot 53 percent from the floor compared to UI's 37 percent.

Tonight's game will mark the 51st meeting between the two teams with Idaho leading the series 26-24.

"They're playing very good," commented Idaho head coach Joe Cravens, "They're the best coached team in the league."

BSU's head coach Bobby Dye needs only one more victory to tie former Weber State coach Neil McCarthy. Dye has guided BSU to 93 wins in 11 seasons. However, he is only 11-13 against the Vandals.

Idaho is coming off a tough loss to Weber State last week and is looking to defeat BSU and ISU this weekend to earn second-place in the Big Sky and a first round bye in the Big Sky tournament to be held in Boise, March 10-12. If Idaho happens to lose both games, they could fall as far as fifth place in the league standings.

Meanwhile, the Broncos are riding a three-game winning streak, their longest this season, and need to defeat either Idaho or Eastern Washington in order to be invited to their own party.

One of Cravens' main concerns is BSU's Goliath 7-foot center John Coker. Coker is the second leading scorer in the Big Sky, averaging 18 points per game. He recently set the BSU record for blocked shots in a season with 60, currently the 10th highest total in conference history.

Coker will have to do battle with perhaps the most intimidating front line in the Big Sky in Deon Watson, Orlando Lightfoot and Frank Waters.

Watson has been the most consistent Vandal player this year. He averages 12.7 points per game and a Big Sky leading 10.3 rebounds per game.

Lightfoot has been the most prolific scorer in the Big Sky this season, averaging 25 points per game along with 7.9 rebounds per game. He needs only 29 points to become the all-time leading scorer in Big Sky history, surpassing Weber State's Bruce Collins.

Frank Waters—thy name is defense—Waters has been one of the most unnoticed Vandals this season, but is worthy of some

Minus last season's seniors, Hilbert looks for depth lost from last year's BSC championship team

Katé Lyons-Holestine
Editor-In-Chief

After finishing its most successful season to date, the Vandal women's volleyball team is back in action training for the upcoming 1994 Big Sky Conference season.

The team began spring training last week with nine players.

"Every year is different," head coach Tom Hilbert said, "The last two years we've had a lot of people in the off season."

Currently they are practicing with nine players, three of whom are walk-ons. Senior Leah Smith is absent from the spring practice sessions, she is an active player on the Uzi tennis team.

"If one of those players gets hurt, we're in trouble," Hilbert said.

Some may see Idaho as a troubled team anyhow. The Vandals lost four stand-out seniors from the 1993 Big Sky Championship team. Heather Cross-Schroeder, Dee Porter, Jessica Puckett and Nancy Wicks graduated from Idaho's volleyball program.

"Hopefully we will supplement with five new bodies," Hilbert said, "And, coming in with that group will be a lot of athleticism."

Hilbert is looking toward returning players Brittany Van Haverbeke, Mindy Rice, Lisa Stoltz, Tzvetelina Yanchulova, Louisa Kawulok and Lynn Hyland to improve and continue from last season's finish.

"This is not a rebuilding year, we have four seniors, 1995 will be a rebuilding year. This is a transitional year. We don't have the overall balance and some things we won't do as well," Hilbert said.

The depth from the bench the Vandals possessed last season will also be missing next fall. The players Hilbert counted on to rotate into the game and step in and make the key plays will be on the court.

"Offensively we will try things this spring which will make us more complex and fun to watch," Hilbert said, "We were simple last year because Dee had never set before."

Replacing Porter on the court will be sophomore Lynn Hyland.

"Lynn can give us more than Dee. Her ball handling is

Tracksters run for big one

Matthew Andrew
Sports Editor

Running from the sound of a gun to save your life isn't always the best way to spend a weekend. Unless you are competing in a track and field event.

Luckily enough, the stakes are not that high, but for the athletes at the Big Sky Conference Track and Field Championships it isn't exactly a walk in the park either.

Today and tomorrow the UI men's and women's teams will send their finest 20 athletes to the meet to compete with the best in the BSC. The meet will be held in Pocatello, Idaho, at the Idaho State 200-meter banked board track in Holt Arena.

Last season, the teams did not fare as well as one would have hoped. The men finished in sixth place, nudging out Idaho State by two points. Northern Arizona is looking to stay on top of its seven year stint in first place. The last team to beat NAU was UI in 1984, NAU place second. NAU has consistently beat out their opponents. Last year they beat out the second place Boise State by a margin of 44 team points.

In the women's division, Idaho placed seventh. They beat out Montana for last place by 1.5 points. Once again, NAU rides the top. They were far ahead of their closest competitor, Weber State, by 34.5 points.

There are three ways an athlete may qualify for the meet. First, an athlete may make the listed qualifying time. Second, they may have one of the top 12 declared marks. This is used when 12 athletes have made the specified qualifying time. There is a small exception to the rules. Lastly, if an athlete has not met the above two criteria an athlete may compete in an event by using one of two wild cards given each team. These cards can only be used if there are more than 12 people in the event. A team, as a strategic move, is placed where the coach thinks she can earn the team points.

NAU appears to have another strong-hold at the championships. The men have seven competitors with the top two times within the BSC in half of the 16 events. Teams that appear to make a close contention are ISU and Boise State.

Five of the 14 events on the women's side have NAU within the top three. The women seem to have more teams that will provide for a closer meet.

Niels Kruller, who holds the fourth best time in the conference, will make a run for the gold in the 200m, where he will be the lone UI competitor. Big Sky qualifying time was 22.00 seconds, and Kruller ran a 21.88. He has strong competition as three athletes are tied in second place. The top time is 21.41 by Raymond Nelson, NAU.

Kruller will also compete in the long jump. He set his best mark two weeks ago at 24-feet-1, 3/4 inch. This was good enough to place him third amongst competitors. The second place qualifier only jumped a quarter inch farther.

Last season's 800m champion, Ty Koellman, won with 1 minute, 52.50 mark. Thus far this season, Koellman has ran 1:54.46 as his best time, making the standard by .54. The best time in the conference is 1:50.57.

One to watch on the women's side is Tanya Tesar. She is the returning champion in the triple jump. Her championship leap was 40-foot-9. Her best mark this season is 38-5. The best mark in the BSC is 40-2, three quarter inch.

Tesar also has qualified for two other events. Along with UI's top placer in the 55m hurdles, Karen McCloskey at 8.36, Tesar will run with her best mark being 8.61. Emily Wise also qualified with 8.63. The qualifying time is 8.70. McCloskey's time is forth amongst other competitors.

Season swings into play

BOISE — The club baseball club team swung their spring season into action with three games their opening weekend.

Idaho split Saturday's doubleheader with Boise State's club team 4-13, 10-7. Sunday the Idaho team grabbed a big 24-9 victory over Boise.

Matt Slova pitched through the tough doubleheader, and Idaho fell behind with lack luster bats.

Ryan Williams shot a two-run homer over the fence for Idaho. Shannon Jeffries connected for three hits in four at-bats. He was the only Idaho player with more than one single in the game, he posted two singles and a double.

In game two, Mike Cole was on the pitching mound for Idaho. He pitched for six innings and finished with the win, he allowed three earned runs with two strike-outs and a pair of walks. He only allowed six hits.

Ryan Williams led the Idaho offense with another homer in the second game of the doubleheader. Dave Smith was 3-4 at the plate, knocking in two runs.

"Everyone contributed this game with a hit. The team played a well-rounded offense scoring eight runs in the first inning," Reiersen added.

Bob Demontigny pitched throughout the entire third game Sunday. He recorded the win from the mound.

Seven Idaho starters recorded more than one hit each. Rob Kinnear swung for 4-5, scoring five times with six rbi's, a pair of homers — one of which was a grand slam. Eric Olsen hit 2-4 with a solo home run.

The UI team recorded five home runs over the three-game weekend.

This weekend the club will be competing in a round robin tournament at Cheney, Wash. They will meet teams from Eastern Washington and Montana State. Action will start at 10 a.m. against EWU and the Montana State game will follow directly.

appreciates the actions of both Phi Kappa Tau International and the IFC Judicial Board.

"We will not condone the actions of the fraternity," Pitman said. "The university is placing Phi Kappa Tau on probation effective immediately, and that probation will remain in effect until the fraternity hires a live-in advisor."

Phi Tau's violations were reported to IFC by a sorority member, said Craig Doan. He is the chair of the fraternity's governing board.

The fraternity has about 30 people living in-house of which a majority are over the age of 21, said Johnson.

Phi Kappa Tau was one of the first UI fraternities to work out their revised alcohol policies last semester to prevent students under the legal age to consume alcohol.

The fraternity had considered at one point to limit alcohol consumption to those people of age to private places in the house as well as a total ban of alcohol from chapter property.

excellent. She's a younger player and constantly concerned with proving herself to coaches and players. She just needs to relax," Hilbert said.

Hyland had limited playing time last season, but Hilbert was impressed.

"I'm excited to see her in competitive situations," Hilbert said.

Blocking, defense and serving are the coaching staffs' main concerns with the new team. Idaho lost its top three servers at the end of the 1993 season, but Hyland and Yanchulova will add talent there.

"Last year we put six studs out there who could block," Hilbert said. "We'll be different, it's very hard to say what we will be like."

Kawulok is one player Hilbert looks to be a strength at the net. Last season, although her playing time was limited because she was a red-shirt, her hitting percentage was .417.

"She needs to be under some pressure," Hilbert added.

This weekend Idaho fans will have a chance to see how the new team is pulling together.

The first of four tournaments they will be competing in this spring begins tomorrow at 10 a.m. in Memorial Gym. Boise State, Montana, North Idaho College and a club team from Lewiston will all be in attendance.

attention. Although he averages only 2.5 points and 4.4 rebounds, the 6-10 Waters does the little things for the Vandals.

He alters opponents' shots, grabs key offensive rebounds, sets some mean screens and clogs up the middle on the defensive end.

Vandal fans are strongly encouraged to wear black clothing in support of their team and in support of the cause of receiving eight free pizzas from Domino's.

Idaho vs. Idaho State

The Idaho State Bengals have been one of the most pleasant surprises in the Big Sky this season. Their 8-4 Big Sky record has befuddled many pre-season predictors, including myself.

Head coach Herb Williams has led them from the rank, lower end of the Big Sky, to the sweet scents of success. They are currently tied with Idaho for second place.

This will end up being the first winning season for ISU since 1988, and only the third time in twelve years.

ISU is looking to sweep their road trip consisting of Idaho and Eastern Washington in order to earn a bye in next week's conference tournament in Boise.

The Bengals have what is known as, "The Big Four." This quadra consists of guards Lorenzo Watkins and Terance Fleming and forwards Donell Morgan and Jim Potter.

"They have four of the top players in the league," says Cravens. "They're very explosive. Their guards can make something out of nothing."

"The Big Four" average 66.7 points per game. ISU as a whole scores 83.5 points per game. Williams had a difficult time shuffling his bench to try to find a consistent sixth-man.

Potter, from Boise, a Bishop Kelly graduate, leads the team in scoring with a 17.9 average. He is additionally one of the top rebounders in the league, averaging 9.5 points per contest.

Let's hope Idaho gets out-rebounded. Huh? The Bengals are 3-3 when out-rebounding their opponents and a stunning 5-1 when they are out-rebounded.

An important advantage for ISU, according to Cravens, is that they get days off prior to the Idaho game. The Vandals could be tired after playing BSU the previous night.

The Vandals defeated the Bengals in the last matchup, a 91-87 overtime thriller.

Idaho leads the overall series 55-30 and has won 14 consecutive games over ISU.

UI plays ISU in the Kibbie Dome on Saturday. Game time is 7:05 p.m. and will be shown live on KTRV.

Season finalé

Women's basketball travels in hopes of a pair of in-state rival victories to finish 'out of the basement'

Bridget Lux

Staff Writer

The Lady Vandals have one more weekend to lift themselves out of the basement in the Big Sky Conference standings.

With a Friday night game at Idaho State and a Sunday afternoon game at Boise State, the Vandals, 3-20 overall and 2-10 in the Big Sky Conference, have a chance to pull themselves out of a last place tie with ISU. The game with ISU will be broadcast on Prime Sports Northwest at 6:00 p.m.

In their previous meeting with the Bengals, the Vandals posted their first win of the season, 67-52, but Idaho could not keep up with BSU the following night and lost 55-46.

Lately, the starting line-up for the Vandals has been consistent with Jennifer Clary, Ari Skorpik, Shannan Anderson, Jeri Hymas and Karen Poncina taking the positions.

Clary is still in the running for two school records—points per game and free throw percentage—and has actually boosted her shooting up from 21.6 points per game last week to 22.2 points per game this week and she has increased her free throw percentage from 89.5 to 91 in the same time span.

Over the past weekend against Northern Arizona and Weber State, Clary poured in a total of 58 points. Idaho defeated NAU 68-60 but lost to Weber State 59-66.

Idaho's point guard, Skorpik, is a consistent strength for the Vandals with her ball handling skills, 2.8 assists and 4.8 points per game.

The Vandal's starting forwards, Anderson and Hymas, hit 3.6 and 6.0 points per game respectively. Anderson also pulls down 3.3 boards while Hymas grabs 4.7 rebounds and blocks 1.7 shots per game.

Poncina, a 6-foot-2 senior center, has been pulling down the rebounds, nearly eight per game, while putting in the points, 5.6 per game. In the past two games, Poncina grabbed 19 boards and made 11 points.

Amy Deterding, a senior forward, pours in eight points and pulls down 6.3 rebounds a game for the Vandals.

For Idaho State, 5-19 overall and 2-10 in conference, the probable starters include Niki Lee, Ty Taylor, Meg Salness, Julie Barner and Nicole Davis.

Lee, a 5-8 senior guard, pours in 7.4 points and dishes out 2.4 assists per game to contribute to the Bengals' offense.

Another solid player and senior guard, Taylor averages 6.4 points, 3.2 rebounds, 3.9 assists and 2.3 steals for ISU.

Barner, a 6-0 senior forward, is ISU's leading scorer with 10.5 points per game. She also pulls down 5.2 rebounds per game.

The remaining two starters for ISU, Salness and Davis, are both freshmen with promising futures. Salness hits 10.3 points and pulls down 5.6 rebounds per game for the Bengals while Davis is ISU's leading rebounder with 7.4 per game. Davis also contributes 6.7 points and 1.7 blocked shots to the Bengal's game.

Currently the Bengals are on a four game losing streak after a rough weekend in Montana. Overall, the Vandals lead the all-time series with ISU, 22-3.

Idaho vs. Boise State

Sunday, the Vandals take on a completely different team as they travel to Boise to face the Broncos. In the previous meeting between Idaho and Boise State, the Broncos came away from Moscow with a 55-46 win over the Vandals. BSU was ranked 17th in the Associated Press poll before losing to Montana last weekend.

BSU's starting line-up consists of Tricia Bader, Angie Evans, Tory Torrolova, Heather Sower and Lidiya Varbanova.

Varbanova, BSU's leading scorer and rebounder averaging 17.2 points and 6.8 rebounds per game, was leading the nation in field goal percentage last week by shooting 67.9 percent. She is now shooting at 65.9 percent.

The Bronco's 5-4 junior guard, Bader, contributes 10.6 points, 4.9 assists and 3.9 rebounds a game for BSU.

Evans also scores in double figures averaging 11.1 points per game, including 32 3-pointers on the season. She pulls down 4.2 boards as well.

BSU's starting forwards, Torrolova and Sower, are solid players with scoring averages of 9.8 and 8.2 points respectively. Torrolova, a 6-3 junior, is also a threat from three-point range with 24 on the season and her and Sower combined pull down 11.4 rebounds per game.

Michelle Schultz, a 5-9 sophomore guard, comes off the bench for the Broncos and brings scoring and rebounding strength with her. She hits about 7.8 points and grabs 5.0 rebounds per game for BSU.

The Broncos, 21-4 overall, 11-2 BSC, split their games. They lost to the University of Montana and then defeated Montana State University.

Sunday's tip-off will be at 1:00 p.m. at the BSU Pavilion.

Together the Vandals could break the free throw percentage mark as they are shooting at 73.8 percent from the line and need to hold that percentage for only two more games.

The Anatomy of the Citibank Classic card: a body of services and peace of mind for students, now with No Annual Fee.

For years, scientists could only theorize about the Citibank Classic Visa® card, unable to actually observe anything below its epidermal surface (i.e. the plastic). Surely the highly intelligent services were evidence of an advanced brain. But with the latest advances in x-ray technology, and when the light could catch the various parts just so, it was confirmed: the Scientists theorize that the mind of the Citibank Classic Visa cardmember (Fig. A) is secure because it receives superior service; the mind of the non-Citibank Classic Visa cardmember (Fig. B) is not secure because—could it be?—it has a screw loose?

Citibank Classic Visa card is head to toe more evolved than ever imagined. ¶ At its backbone are 3 services to cover the purchases you make on the card. Starting at the Lower Costal Spine, we see Citibank Price Protection can assure you of the best price. All you have to do is discover the same item advertised in print for less, within 60 days, and Citibank will refund the difference up to $150! Along the Oops-It-Slipped Disc, Buyers Security™ can cover those purchases against accidental damage, fire or theft, for 90 days from the date of purchase¹; and Citibank Lifetime Warranty™ allows one to extend the warranty for the expected service life of eligible products up to 12 years². So if you ever buy a walkman, a stereo, whatever, it will be reassuring to know that Citibank can bend and be flexible while still lending support. ¶ The backbone is then connected to the cranium or headbone. Look at the bottom of the page. The Citibank Photocard has the head of the cardholder, as well as his or her own signature, right on the front. That way, it will help prevent fraud. It will also make a good form of ID, since you get to choose your own photo. ¶ But what about the Nervous System? The fact is, it doesn't have one, not in the spinal cord nor in the brain. What it has is the Very Calm System. Because even if your credit card gets stolen, or gets lost, an involuntary muscle called the Extendus Anewcardeus activates the Lost Wallet™ Service which can replace your card usually within 24 hours. ¶ As suspected, there's another involuntary muscle: the heart—a beating and caring heart, big enough to give students special discounts and savings. You'll receive a $20 Airfare Discount on domestic flights³, savings on mail order purchases, sports equipment, magazines and music; a low variable interest rate of 15.4%⁴; and, No Annual Fee. (In other words, the card itself doesn't cost a forelimb and a hindlimb.) ¶ Naturally the heart of the Citibank Visa card pumps life and personalized customer service into all its parts, 24 hours a day. So no matter what the question you might have concerning your card, you need only call the 800 number. You'll find Citibank has a neck they are eager to stick out for you. They will always lend an ear. Or a hand. They will keep an eye out for you. They will put their best foot forward. Etc. ¶ So call to apply. You don't need a job or a cosigner.

And call if you'd like your photo added to your regular Citibank Classic Visa card. The number is 1-800-CITIBANK (1-800-248-4226), extension 19. ¶ If we take an overview of the whole body of services that make up the Citibank Classic Visa card, and consider that it will facilitate building a credit history, then you must shake a leg, flex your index finger and call today.

Not just Visa. Citibank Visa.

Monarch Notes® Version: With your purchases covered, no annual fee, and a low rate, the Citibank Classic Visa card will go easy on your Nervous System. Call 1-800-CITIBANK (1-800-248-4226), extension 19.

¹Certain conditions and exclusions apply. Please refer to your Summary of Additional Program Information. Buyers Security is underwritten by The Zurich International UK Limited. ²Certain restrictions and limitations apply. Underwritten by the New Hampshire Insurance Company. Service life expectancy varies by product and is at least the minimum based on retail industry data. Details of coverage are available in your Summary of Additional Program Information. ³Offer expires 6/30/94. Minimum ticket purchase price is $100. Rebates are for Citibank student cardmembers on tickets issued by ISE Flights only. ⁴The Annual Percentage Rate (APR) for purchases is 15.4% as of 1/94 and may vary quarterly. The APR for cash advances is 19.8%. If a finance charge is imposed, the minimum is 50 cents. There is an additional finance charge for each cash advance transaction equal to 2% of the amount of each cash advance transaction; however, it will not be less than $2.00 or greater than $10.00.
