Batt steps up to plate, awaits pitch

Tim Helmke
News Editor

The race for Idaho's Governor office is off and running.

Phil Batt, a UI alumnus, entered race in January and was on campus over the weekend. Batt, a Republican, was here to talk to students and local residents about issues facing him during his campaign.

Batt spoke at a luncheon held in the SUB Gold Galena Room organized by local supporters. He had just come from Potlatch where he and Senator Larry Craig spoke. They answered questions regarding natural resource use.

Jeff Malmen, Batt's campaign manager, stands as one principle Batt is running on. Batt wants to get young people involved in the decisions the state government is making. "We hope to involve many more young people since this is the first time in 24 years that we can really make a change for the future," said Malmen.

The budget was the next topic of discussion. Batt is pledged to streamlining the budget. "I know where the soft spots are. I know where the duplication is. I will deliver on my promises," said Batt.

The state budget has grown from $650 million in 1987 to over $1.2 billion today. Batt feels he can help to control the increases.

Batt, a farmer and small businessman from Wilder, continued by speaking on crime. He feels too often the victim is punished rather than the perpetrator. "We do not need to put up with the criminal behavior which has made people terrified," said Batt.

When asked about placing a student on to the State Board of Education, Batt was supportive of the idea. The idea was vetoed two years ago by Governor Andrus. "I see no reason why not. If the students want it, and can find a student willing to put in the time, they ought to have it," said Batt.

This idea was advocated at a statewide student summit last semester in Boise. It has also been promoted by the ASUI in years past.

Derrick Brown, former ASUI Vice President, said of Batt, "I think it is important that we have someone in the Governor's office that is at least sympathetic to student concerns here at the University of Idaho."

Batt is a 1948 graduate of the UI with a degree from the College of Agriculture. He married his wife, Jacque, in 1948 and they have three children and five grandchildren.

After serving two years in the Idaho House of Representatives, Batt served 14 years in the Idaho State Senate. He also served as Lieutenant Governor from 1978-1982. He was the Republican candidate in the gubernatorial election in 1982 but was defeated by 4,000 votes, about a one-percent margin.

Batt considers himself a strong fiscal conservative. According to his press packet, he believes the private sector can do nearly anything better than the government. He also believes Idaho's relative prosperity has been mainly due to a conservative legislature which has refrained from high taxation and overzealous regulation

Center survives funding threats

Tim Helmke
News Editor

The UI Women's Center was saved from the state budget chopping block late last week.

When the Idaho legislature Joint Finance and Appropriations Committee met Friday morning in Boise, they voted to continue funding the center without any discussion at all. The future of the center was in jeopardy after Daniel Whiting, ASUI student lobbyist, spoke to committee members on his own time to have the funding cut. He felt this was necessary because he feels the center is a "liberal political organization."

Whiting insisted he was not lobbying the state lawmakers on behalf of the ASUI but as a concerned taxpayer and university student. The Women's Center funding was approved as part of the $162.7 million for the state's higher education general budget for state colleges and universities. Area legislators were credited for saving the center and ensuring it wasn't brought up for discussion said Sue Hausbrouck, state budget analyst.

Whiting has been criticized by UI Vice President for Student Affairs Hal Godwin and ASUI

President John Marble. Godwin said the center is not a front for a liberal political group but does offer a wide range of programs for the student body such as rape education and working with the Student Health Center. Godwin was also concerned because he never received a formal complaint from Whiting, only informal remarks.

Marble has reprimanded Whiting, a former ASUI Senator, for his actions. Marble feels Whiting deviated from ASUI interests. Marble did not like what Whiting did and believes asking the state legislature to consider minor parts of the university is "ludicrous." Whiting ensured Marble he would not pursue the issue any further while serving in Boise as student lobbyist.

Whiting said last week his intent was not to cut the center funding but to stop them from spreading "liberal propaganda" at the expense of the state taxpayers. The center has provided space and phone lines to a homosexual student group and shown a film about gay black men.

Marble himself said he hasn't been concerned with the Women's Center although he Dan has some valid points but I don't agree with everything he said.

—John Marble

does not know much about it. "Dan has some valid points but I don't agree with everything he said," said Marble.

The JFAC decided the Women's Center should be reviewed by university officials and they were assured this would be done. Matin Peterson, the UI legislative lobbyist, said he informed the committee that the UI has begun reassessing the center just as it regularly reassesses other parts of campus. He told them this process was under way prior to any of the concerns were raised by Whiting.

Whiting has been criticized for his actions. Most believe he was out of line to discuss his personal views of the center even if he wasn't on ASUI time. They feel it makes it hard for state legislators to determine who Whiting is speaking on behalf of.

The Women's Center is funded through Student Advisory Services and totals about $50,000 in salaries and fringe benefits. Women's Center Director Betsy Thomas and a secretary are the only people who are on staff at the center.

Whiting helped launch the Vanguard, a conservative monthly newsletter, last year as a joint effort between students from UI and Washington State University. This newsletter was aimed to provide a more conservative view on news coverage.

Whiting, who is still lobbying in Boise, was unavailable for comment on the JFAC decision.

News Briefs

Cardiac presentation slated in Life Sciences

David R. Jones of the University of British Columbia in Vancouver will present "Cardiac Dynamics of Diapsids" Friday at 12:30 p.m. in Life Sciences Room 277. Jones is a professor and comparative physiologist from the Department of Zoology and has research interests in the area of adaptations to low oxygen environments.

Plant society speaker discusses area's past

The Idaho Native Plant Society, White Pine Chapter, will meet Thursday at 7:30 p.m. Bill Rember, UI paleobotanist, will present "Native Plants of Latah County, 15 Million Years Ago: the Clarkia Fossil Record." Rember has intensively studied certain Columbia Basin basalt flows, which have yielded high-quality fossils of trees found in the present-day Southeastern United States, and the rare metasequoia. He anticipates extending his studies throughout the Basin.

Also, the society will work in the design and planting of Northwestern America shrubs group in the university Arboretum, working in accord with Richard Naskali, Arboretum director.

The meeting is in the UI Forest, Wildlife and Range Sciences Room 200 at Sixth and Line St. For more information call 882-0567.

Indians may be eligible for graduate grant

The American Indian Graduate Center is accepting application requests from American Indian and Alaska native graduate students who will be pursuing masters and doctorates as full-time graduate students for the 1994-95 year. The AIGC program has been providing fellowship grants to Indian graduate students since 1969 and has aided over 3,000 students in the past 24 years. For the 1993-94 year, AIGC is assisting 575 students from 130 tribes who are working on graduate degrees at over 200 colleges throughout the United States.

To be eligible for consideration, an applicant must: (1) be an enrolled member of a federally recognized tribe or be at least one-fourth degree Indian; (2) be attending an accredited college or university in the U.S.; and (3) be a full-time graduate student admitted into in their first masters or first doctorate program as a full-time graduate student in any field of graduate study. The application deadline for 1994-95 is April 15, and applicants should have applied for campus-based aid for 1994-95 at their college financial aid office in February. Eligible applicants can request an application packet by contacting: AIGC, 4520 Montgomery Blvd. NE, Suite 1-B, Albuquerque, N.M., 87109-1291 or by phone at (505) 881-4584.

Greeks chosen for national service

National officials choose UI students to serve their respective fraternal organizations

Jill Pittmann
Staff Writer

Five UI students will soon take to the road - sharing the knowledge they have gained in their experience in the UI Greek system.

These students have been chosen to be consultants by the national offices of their respective chapters.

Brandie Beebe of Kappa Kappa Gamma, Russ Branham of Delta Tau Delta, Lisa Jolley of Alpha Gamma Delta, Tom Sheffield of Delta Chi and Scott Thomas of Sigma Alpha Epsilon have been chosen as consultants for their national organizations.

According to Linda Wilson, UI Greek advisor, the basic premise for these positions is to serve as an ambassador to chapters which are assigned to them.

BRANDIE BEEBE

Brandie Beebe was interviewed at Kappa Kappa Gamma national headquarters in Columbus, Ohio, and was chosen to be a traveling consultant. She will visit chapters to provide leadership training and to update programming ideas. Beebe has been an active member of her house for four years. She has also served as Panhellenic Sorority Relations Chairman as well as holding offices in campus organizations such as Blue Key and Order of Omega.

According to UI Kappa Kappa Gamma Chapter President Billie Jean Siddoway, "Brandie possesses leadership skills, loyalty, diplomacy and a talent for making friends easily. Our chapter is proud to have her representing us and the University of Idaho as a Traveling Consultant."

RUSS BRANHAM

Russ Branham visited Indianapolis, Ind., and Delta Tau Delta national headquarters for his interview before being chosen a Chapter Consultant. Branham was interviewed by Bill Costello, a former UI Greek assistant advisor. Branham is past chairman of the IFC Judicial Board. Last April he was named the Western Regional Greek Conference Co-Chair at a conference in San Francisco Calif. Only two students in the Western United States are selected to serve on the WRGC as student representatives on the Conference Executive Board, according to UI Greek Advisor Linda Wilson in the Delta Tau Delta Fraternity Magazine, The Rainbow. Wilson also stated, "This is a huge honor for the University of Idaho to claim Russ Branham as their own."

UI Delt Chapter President Mike Cox said Branham gives everything he has to all he does. "Russ has done more for our house than any other Delt I have been associated with. He has the ability to uplift everyone around him," said Cox.

LISA JOLLEY

Alpha Gamma Delta member Lisa Jolley was chosen as a Leadership Consultant by members of the International Council in Indianapolis, Ind. Current Leadership Consultant Jennifer Smentek said, "Lisa is articulate intelligent and presents herself very well. I know she will make an excellent representative of Alpha Gamma Delta and the people at International Headquarters are really looking forward to working with her."

Jolley was Panhellenic President of the UI in 1992-1993, and Philanthropy Chairman for her chapter. AGD chapter President, Brenda Hinnenkamp, said, "Lisa has the ability to make good decisions about various matters and will be a great asset to our fraternity. Lisa is a caring person and will be willing to help all of the chapters she visits in any way she can to preserve the excellence fostered within the Greek system."

TOM SHEFFIELD

Another person chosen as a consultant is Delta Chi member Tom Sheffield. Director of Chapter Development John Morgan at Delta Chi headquarters in Iowa City, Iowa said their consultants deal mainly with chapter, financial and risk management. They make sure fraternities are living up to the expectations set for them and check to see each undergraduate is having a good inner fraternal experience. "We are lucky to have a person like Tom on our staff," Morgan said. Sheffield has served the university as Interfraternity Council President, Delta Chi President and is currently an ASUI Senator.

One member of Delta Chi described Sheffield in how he, "has an excellent way of getting people motivated. He's like a Delta Chi Encyclopedia. He's extremely knowledgeable about Delta Chi history as well as its current policy."

SCOTT THOMAS

Scott Thomas will serve as a Sigma Alpha Epsilon Leadership Consultant. Thomas, according to Sean Loomam, Director of Chapter

Development at SAE National Headquarters, will have the opportunity to choose to serve on the east or west coast. He will visit chapters and help in areas of leadership development and educational programming. Loomam said, "We are looking forward to working with Scott and I am confident we will benefit from having him as one of our consultants."

Thomas has served his fraternity as Chapter President and Pledge Educator for two years. SAE President Brett Clevenger said, "Scott will do a great job for the national fraternity. They are lucky to be getting an individual like Scott on their staff." Thomas has been praised by various members of his house as a model member and well deserving of this position.

Five leadership consultants at one time, to the knowledge of people in this articles and others, is a record for the UI.

Wilson is confident these people will do an excellent job for their chapters as they are all strong leaders and are willing to help others succeed.

"They will have a busy year conducting chapter programming and traveling to various chapters. These consultants have the opportunity to leave each chapter a little better than they found it by providing suggestions, praise and friendship to each individual they encounter throughout their term as a consultant.

We are lucky to have such great representatives of our university helping others to excel as each of them have so obviously done," said Wilson.

It is possible there may still be more students to receive this type of position for the upcoming year. Wilson said there are at least two other UI students waiting to see if they will be chosen as consultants.

Two schools combine for medical program

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—Jefferson Medical College and Widener University, through its School of Management, are collaborating to offer combined MD/MBA and MD/MHA dual degrees. The program is one of only a half dozen available in the United States and the only program in which two universities are joining together to offer a dual degree. The MD will be awarded by Jefferson and the MBA or MHA by Widener.

"We are pleased to be able to work with Jefferson Medical College in offering this unique program," said Joseph A. DiAngelo, Jr., EdD, dean of the School of Management at Widener.

"The combination of Jefferson's excellence as a medical teaching institution, along with the strength of Widener's MBA program, offers today's medical student the rare opportunity to face the growing complexity of medical practice in an ever-changing and challenging health care market," DiAngelo said.

The program is geared to meet the needs of the large number of physicians whose career goals are in administrative medicine, whether in a hospital environment or in the growing number of health-maintenance or managed-care organizations.

Others with the dual degree may enter public service or careers in private industry, including pharmaceutical manufacturers, firms involved in biotechnology and other health-related fields.

According to Joseph S. Gonnella, MD, dean of Jefferson Medical College, "In the 1990s and beyond, every physician should not only be a clinician, scientist and teacher, but a manager as well."

The combined degree program offers an MD/MBA or an MD/MDH degree in health administration. Health policy and administration course work is incorporated into the Jefferson Medical College curriculum in the first and second years of medical school and through evening classes at Widener University.

The third year in the program is dedicated to the MBA or MHA requirements at Widener prior to the students undertaking their clinical rotations. An administrative residency for the MBA or MHA degree is required in the fifth year of the program, along with the completion of the final year of the Jefferson curriculum.

Students can also elect to complete the dedicated year of MBA or MHA course work after completing medical school.

Disadvantaged students at the UI have found the determination to not let their disabilities get them down.

Eight UI students have been selected for TRIO program recognition. The students are involved in UI programs that fall under the TRIO plans. Meredyth Goodwin, director of Student Support Services, said the TRIO recognition program honors students being helped by a variety of programs for disadvantaged students. She said originally there were three programs, Upward Bound, Talent Search and Student Support Services. Now there are several more, but all are still referred to as TRIO programs.

The federal government developed in the 1965 Higher Education Act a program to help disadvantaged students complete high school and college, said Goodwin. Since that time, three or four new programs have been added to the TRIO program but the name has remained the same.

The eight UI students being recognized and honored by the TRIO program this year are:

- Josh Hobbs, a freshman zoology and pre-medicine major, is from Coeur d'Alene. He is the son of Anita Hobbs of Coeur d'Alene and is a member of Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity. In his fraternity, Hobbs is serving as the chair of the public relations committee. He has also been a member of Educational Talent Search for two years and has also maintained a high level of academic achievement.

- Stacie Lynch, a senior anthropology major from Sweet, Idaho, has been busy with many courses in mathematics and engineering. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Lynch of Sweet. She plans to go into graduate study in anthropology and human factors. She is being honored for outstanding academics and personal achievements.

- David Close, a Fisheries Management major of Umatilla, Ore., after graduating from UI this spring, plans to go to graduate school at Oregon State University to study for a master of science in fisheries. He hopes to work in fishery management on the Umatilla Indian Reservation. He is being honored for outstanding personal and academic achievement during his university career.

- Amy Hernandez, of Clarkston, Wash., was a member of the Educational Talent Search and is the daughter of Brenda Hernandez of Clarkston, Wash. Amy is a freshman Spanish, social work and education major. She is active in MeCHA and Mujeres Unidas, two student organizations dealing with Chicano/Latino issues. She works at the veterinary medicine pharmacy library. Hernandez wants to attend the University of Guadalajara, Mexico, for a year. She is being honored for outstanding personal and academic achievement.

- Darin Stageberg, a senior social work and psychology major, intends to begin studying for his masters degree in rehabilitation counseling. He is from Milwaukee, Ore., and is being honored for his outstanding academic and personal achievement.

- Heather Zimmerman, of Clarkston, Wash., is enrolled in a UI secretarial/business program. She is the daughter of Joan Zimmerman of Clarkston and is being honored for her outstanding personal achievement.

- Phillip Allen, a history major, graduated in 1983 and has enjoyed taking classes here at UI. He is the son of Phillip Allen of Lapwai, Idaho, and the late Clarice Allen. Patricia Allen is his step-mom.

- Lisa Guzman, a single mother of three, is working toward a degree in psychology. She considers Moscow her hometown and is the daughter of Shirley Guzman of Seattle, Wash., and Oscar Guzman of Arlington, Texas. She is a 1982 high school graduate from Lapwai, Idaho.

Students start planning for summer

Summer job opportunities open up for college students across Northwest

Alissa Beier
Staff Writer

Summer is definitely coming and that is not such a bad thing. For college students here and everywhere, the upcoming warm weathered months also bring with them the repetitive and frustrating question: "What am I going to do for a job?"

Fear not, fellow students.

In Idaho and the entire Northwest, there are numerous places students can find employment. Some of the only determining factors are personality and incentive.

If you are more of the type who prefers the outdoors, there are dozens of national forests in Idaho and bordering states that are seeking workers. Such jobs could include biology, forestry, engineering and physical science aides as well as technicians for these national forests.

As far as national parks go, places such as the Grand Canyon, Glacier, Yellowstone and the Tetons employ students to work for the summer. They base hiring on eligibility and the number of laborers needed.

For those who enjoy being around children as well as the outdoors, there are a number of camps in the area. Some are religious, others are non-denominational co-ed and some are for the blind. There are numerous places for students to work as counselors or general staff.

Ski resorts such as Big Sky and Sun Valley also employ students for their tourist seasons of summer and winter.

If you really want to get away, there's always Alaska. Plenty of canneries, fishing companies and wilderness cruise ships eagerly await the summer to hire thousands of college students.

If you're a gambler, it might not be a bad idea to head to Nevada. Though most casinos require previous experience as dealers, other jobs can be obtained such as bartending or waitressing. The tips made from these jobs is probably one of the best ways to make a lot of money in a short amount of time.

Then again, if you're an older student, internships might be the best road to follow. Depending on a student's major, several opportunities are available if they're sought out ahead of time.

Students wishing to stay in the immediate local area can obtain jobs in places like the mall or even a few certain hotels. Applications for all these and other summer employment's can be picked up at the Career Services Center.

Anywhere students look, job opportunities can be available. It just depends on how hard one tries to look for it.

But then again, there's always summer school.

Ed Board needs econ brushup

It boils down to money.

The Idaho State Board of Education wants to increase the amount it will cost non-resident students to attend UI. The university administration is fighting the immediate increase for the sake of the student body.

Planning an education begins long before students sit at a non-descript desk at 8:30 a.m. the opening day of classes and become one of a few thousand non-descript students. Planning an education, for most students, begins with the reality of costs.

Many — or rather, most — students chose this university because it offers a quality education for a nominal fee. In comparison to other state and local universities, UI boasts a low and competitive price tag.

It has been suggested that non-resident tuition be raised to $7,000 per year from the current $3,900. In a memo sent to student leaders last week UI President Elisabeth Zinser stated she was not in agreement with the immediate boost in tuition. Hal Godwin, Vice President of Student Affairs and ASUI President John Marble agreed with Zinser.

They have just cause to disagree with the board.

Any student who has taken an introductory economics course, which is a core requirement for most, must know more students paying a lower price will yield more income than a few students paying a higher price. This is a basic economic fact.

The State Board of Education needs a "brushup" course in economics before it enacts an enormous fee which will drive students away.

Yet, it affects more than just economics if students are persuaded not to attend UI because of cost increases. The UI prides itself on support and education concerning cultural diversity. Cultural diversity encompasses welcoming students from other countries as well as other states.

The concept and practice of cultural diversity will be threatened if UI is forced to raise non-resident tuition rates by such a high factor in such a short amount of time. The Board is asking for non-residents to pay almost twice as much, 1.79 percent more, to continue pursuing their educational goals.

Soon, this decrease in both students and money will force an increase in resident student fees.

This is unreasonable and unfair to all students.

The Board's reasoning behind the increase is to come into accordance with other universities in the region.

Most students chose UI because it offers a quality education at a low price. Raising it drastically just to "keep up with the Jones'" is ludicrous.

Student lobbyist out of line

I used to think former ASUI Senator Daniel Whiting had more class, but I guess I was wrong.

Here's the scenario: I'm stumbling to my Friday aerobics class cursing every lame idea for a column that came to me. As usual, my column would be late and I'd have to pray the person who writes my paycheck, Chris, doesn't notice.

But then I picked up Friday's Argonaut, and found a column just waiting to happen. It seems Dan Whiting, a former member of the ASUI Senate and current student lobbyist tried to disallow the UI Women's Center from "spreading liberal propaganda at taxpayers' expense" by instead pushing his own political agenda.

For those who missed out on the excitement, let me bring you up to speed by giving the condensed version. Legislators in Boise were looking to trim a few items of fat from the UI budget.

Whiting decided that while the Women's Center wasn't fat, the meat might be a little rotten. So, he tried to convince members of the Joint Finance Appropriations Committee to slash funding to the clinic and justified it by saying he was basically sick and tired of the Women's Center pushing what he equated to some left-wing fanatical group.

Get real. Even if Whiting is correct in saying the Women's Center has some kind of agenda to push, Whiting is trying to inject his personal political beliefs into the situation and try to create a way for two wrongs to make a right.

Frankly, I'm disappointed in Dan. I've known him for several years through the Argonaut and the Senate and we would often debate politics. He was one of those smart conservatives I liked to argue with. For the most part, he kept his extreme conservative views out of his work and did his job. But that seems to be changing for the worse.

Whiting has a problem with money being used to push a liberal agenda. Well Dan, I don't remember walking down the street lately and being accosted by Women's Center employees who branded me with liberal bumper stickers and tried to push their beliefs on me. I do know that if I was ever raped, sexually assaulted or was pressured into some sexually uncomfortable situation, I'd be glad the Women's Center was around, even though I'm not a woman.

I have a friend who was raped and told me the center provided her with great emotional support when she was going through hell. Isn't that enough to justify funding?

Whiting has a problem with Women's Center's political views. To that I say, "fine." But last year, ASUI Productions used student fees to bring in renowned conservative William F. Buckley. And sev-

Sticking head in sand by not offering 'core' self-defense Violence is everywhere. Violence is never leaving. It's time to fight fire with fire.

A young man stopped to help a stranded car at 1 a.m. near the Moscow-Pullman airport. The stranded person greeted him with a gun in his face. When the Good Samaritan only had $17, the other shot him and left him for dead.

Near Spokane, a 25-year-old man stopped to help a woman holding a baby near her broken down station wagon. The baby was really a doll and two men were hiding behind the car. When he approached the woman in distress, the two men jumped him, and the woman leapt onto his back and proceeded to beat him with the doll. One of the men grabbed his wallet.

Fortunately, the victim was 6-foot-5 inches tall. He elbowed the woman in the mouth and turned on the man with the wallet. The victim slammed his assailant's head into the side of his truck. The man dropped his wallet and all three fled to the station wagon and escaped. Not everybody is 6-5.

Criminals know this. They like to prey on the weak, the old, the young, the inexperienced. Which, when you get right down to it, describes just about everybody on this campus. A slightly more intelligent criminal would've gotten away with the man's wallet.

In this world where the police are a reactive force, arriving on the scene after someone has dialed 911 or some alarm has gone off, it's time citizens learned how to take care of themselves. It's sad, but true. Police can't prevent crime anymore than someone can stop a sneeze by holding their finger under their nose. There are simply too many criminals, too little police, not enough time and lots of dark alleys.

Our justice system isn't going to stop violence either. We have convicts slipping out of jurisdictions and winding up in the Midwest, juveniles shooting people, getting caught, then being released because they're not dangerous. Repeat offenders hitting the streets because there's not enough beds behind bars. How many women have to be assaulted or raped? How many men? Violence is here, and it's not going away.

Which is precisely why this campus needs a change in policy. The UI prepares students for working in the real world, but as an institution, it is failing in one important element — survival.

This school must seriously consider, no, consider is too weak, UI must implement a self-defense course in its list of core classes.

Ju-jitsu, tai kwon do, karate, kung fu — it doesn't matter what it's called, we need it. Currently, UI doesn't even offer such a class, much less include one as a required core class.

Administrators and departments might argue such a class isn't necessary, or an additional core class would only clutter an already lengthy program. Anyone who claims there is not a compelling need for such a course is essentially sticking their heads in the sand while pulling their pants to their knees for good measure.

Nobody gets out of school in four years anyway. Even if it weren't a core class, simply having one would be fists in the faces of criminals. If UI can afford to have one-credit dance classes, it certainly can find someone to teach self defense.

The course wouldn't have to be limited to hand to hand combat. It could teach students to be aware of their surroundings, keep them up to date on new and ingenious methods of duping — like with a doll — and ways they can prevent and avoid violence.

For example, what do you do in a big city, like Spokane, which is easily big enough in this world?

You're walking down the street. Do you stare down a would-be thug? Do you blissfully ignore him? Do you glance at him, induce brief eye-contact just to let him know you know he is there? What do you do when someone is stranded on a lonely Idaho road? Pull out a shotgun and ask a little, old lady

Letters to the Editor

Degrade jazz by showing cows

How unfortunate that Virginia Wicks, Lionel Hampton's publicist, and the rest of the jazz great's entourage will now associate UI with unnecessary and tasteless animal research. That the cows have windows in their sides is cruel and outrageous enough, but to showcase them as impressive is just plain pathetic.

The jazz festival is already an internationally acclaimed event; why degrade it and the cows by playing such a perverse show and tell?

—Meyla C. Bianco

Editor's Note: While driving by, Virginia Wicks noticed the windows in the cows and requested a chance to see them closer. For some, the mundane life of Moscow isn't as boring as it appears to others.

UI also has responsibility

I partially agree with Susan Summers' letter in the March 1 Argonaut. Regina Coghlan was not forced to drink. She made the decision to alter her consciousness to an extreme degree. And yes, she is the one paying the price for her foolishness. However, UI is also responsible.

If a student wants to have sex or drink in the privacy of his or her own room, there is little that anyone can do to stop them. However, this is not even remotely close to what happened in Coghlan's case.

She attended a relatively large social function which was sponsored by an organization recognized by the university. The theme of the party was not based on moderate alcohol consumption, but on the assumed harmlessness and humor of alcohol abuse.

Two university paid Greek advisors were present at the party and exercised extreme negligence in stating the ridiculous claim that no one was drinking or intoxicated, even though at least one of them talked to Coghlan.

Given these facts, it is more than obvious the university is to be held partially responsible for Coghlan's accident.

Let us keep these things in mind. As a state institution, the university is morally and legally responsible for enforcing the law, which states that no one under the age of 21 is granted the right to drink.

It is obvious that prior to the Coghlan incident few, if any, fraternities attempted to enforce the law.

Given this, and the fact Greek organizations are recognized, sponsored and advised by the university, UI was obligated to set up an effective monitoring system that would stop or greatly deter underage alcohol consumption at Greek social functions.

By failing to do this, UI allowed and promoted a social environment that was conducive to underage alcohol consumption and abuse. Amazingly, the ignorance and negligence concerning alcohol issues continues.

As reported by the Argonaut, Student Advisory Services has received a federal grant of $100,000 for the creation of an alcohol prevention and education program.

With this type of money one would think a person with experience and education in the field of substance abuse would be hired to head such a program. Instead, Greek Advisor Chris Wuthrich was given the job.

This is the same Chris Wuthrich who lacked the ability (or honesty) to admit Coghlan and others at the "Fifty ways to lose your liver" party were drinking and intoxicated. This is the same Chris Wuthrich who is specifically named on the law suit being filed by Coghlan's attorneys.

It seems the university needs a lesson in elementary public relations. Wuthrich should have been reprimanded or fired for his lack of consciousness shown at the party, not promoted to the head of an essential alcohol education program.

I guess the best way to cover up departmental foul-up is by promoting the perpetrator of professional ineptitude to the position which he is least qualified to hold.

Ms. Summers, if you are worried about someone wasting your precious tax dollars, then why not take a hard look at the university you so adamantly defend.

—John Stanley

International column thrills

Just a note of appreciation for the international column which appeared for the second week March 1.

Both Jose Courrau and I are thrilled to bits, as our British friends like to say. From soccer to coffee, thus far, the range of topics is endless and with 80 countries to draw upon, we are never going to run out of feature stories.

I personally want to thank you for your foresight in running these columns on Tuesdays.

It has been quite a happy month for me, with the successful second annual International Afternoon of Culture, Costume and Cuisine and the tremendous coverage the Argonaut gave this IFA event.

And now the debut of the guest international column — a pretty exciting and positive step forward all the way around.

Again, please accept my sincere thank you for your cooperation and support.

Here's the real question: Who would not have stopped in either of the above instances?

A first-aid class should also be mandatory. Can anyone argue that CPR isn't an important skill everyone should own?

Now all we need to do is find an ASUI Senator who realizes the possibilities of a populace that is competent and capable of recognizing danger and dealing with it.

They have the power to do a little moving and shaking and break that administrative status quo.

What headline will UI students read tomorrow that makes them think in outrage, "That stuff just doesn't happen here!"

Because, you know, not every-body is 6-feet-5 inches tall.

Greeks must control abuse, degree of infraction irrelevant

Hello, is anyone really listening? Does anyone really care. Or is it all a publicity stunt?

As a member of Beta Theta Pi, we've heard it all year long, day in and day out. And I'll be one of the first to admit that I'm sick and tired of hearing about it.

After pondering all that has happened to my house, I've yet to figure out the rationale used when the IFC Judicial Board and the university sanctioned the Phi Kappa Tau fraternity. In no way am I anti-Greek toward the other house, I merely want to solve the problem.

Let's examine the differences between the rules and the regulations were violated. First, alcohol was provided by the chapter rather than individual guests. On August 19, 1993 — the date is impounded in my head — this was still allowed by the rules at the time.

Second, access was unrestricted. This rule was violated by both houses. Third, valid identification was not checked. Another rule violated by both houses. Lastly, distilled liquor — rather than beer, or wine — was served. This rule had not been adopted until after the incident involving Regena Coghlan.

Commentary
Matthew Andrew

Okay, my biggest problem is right here. The sanctions the two chapters received. Sponsor two alcohol education programs, have a chapter alumni officer monitor social programming until the end of the academic year with four social activities — two of which allow alcohol, write a letter to The Acropolis apologizing to the Greek community, sponsor four alcohol free functions to include all sororities on campus and provide a monthly summary of the chapter's progress to the IFC Judicial Board all makes up a rehashing of the sanctions.

I remind you of the violations by the two houses. Look at the sanctions. It would be impossible to list all of the sanctions and everything else that has happened to my house because there wouldn't be any space left for the rest of the commentary and I'm sure we all remember them quite well.

My only question is whether we really care what came from all that happened. Do we really believe this campus has an alcohol abuse problem or was/is the entire Coghlan incident merely some lever used for publicity? I surely hope not the latter, because if that is the case there certainly have been a lot of repercussions.

It is important to understand the Beta house does not live under rules. It is living under a set of standards and these standards are by no means a minimum, but rather a maximum. Being newly initiated, I've yet to see the charter that grants the house's existence. Nor will I get to for sometime.

The same thing could have happened to any of the houses that night or again on any other night. The situation can not be changed any.

Many people paved the way to bring forward the issue. The issue was not the fact that someone was paralyzed—this was the aftermath. The issue was alcohol abuse and must be viewed from merely this level.

Nothing has been done to correct the issue itself, many things were done at the time it all exploded, but without any decisive measures.

How can anyone justify punishment for the house by requiring them to hold a certain number of social functions, especially when two of the events allow alcohol?

It would seem to me that if an attempt to cut down the drinking that occurs on this campus, sanctions with merit would have been handed down to set the precedent that IFC and university rules will not be violated, and if they are, drastic repercussions will follow.

The only reason I say this, and I only need one reason, is too much can happen beyond anyone's control. I don't want to see any house go through the ordeal some of us have endured.

It may seem the Phi Tau event was small and trivial and no harm was done. This is irrelevant. I hope the entire Greek community would like to see all of this fall behind us.

However, we can't put it behind us if we keep breaking the rules we lay before us. This will go on merely to show that Gov. Cecil Andrus and Joe Parkinson are right, and I would hate for these two to be right.

If the Greeks want to maintain any control over their own issues then two events would have taken place. The "Bovill Run" would not have occurred and IFC would have taken the situation under its own direction. I don't believe there is anything that can be done now, but I would hope in the future we are smarter about this.

eral years ago, student fees were used to fund a speech by fanatical conservative David Horowitz.

Dan didn't seem to have a problem with using fees for that, nor do I believe he'd have a problem if we decided to bring in Rush Limbaugh as a speaker.

The point is, Whiting found a student group whose opinions he disagreed with, zeroed in on it and tried to put it in the poorhouse — out of existence. I'm not condoning everything the Women's Center does. Some former employees at the Argonaut who have done stories on rape and Women's Center stories, report that working with the center's director, Betsy Thomas, becomes a lesson in a very nasty kind of political correctness.

But I think the $50,000 spent to fund the center more than pays for itself. Whether Whiting agrees or not, nearly every campus I've ever heard of has some sort of Women's Center entity, including support for gays and lesbians and rape counseling. And yes, funding came from taxpayers. In fact, I've seen more radical programs funded by taxpayers.

Perhaps Whiting should spend less time going after the Women's Center and give a hearty conservative thanks he doesn't go to someplace like Ohio State or the University of Minnesota.

Fortunately, Whiting's plans didn't pan out. Legislators were smart enough to see the usefulness of such a program and decided Whiting was perhaps a bit right-of-center and pushing that ideology.

Vice-President of Student Affairs Hal Godwin admitted in Friday's Argonaut that perhaps Whiting's actions were out of line and hadn't made a formal complaint about the Women's Center. Further, he said the Women's Center deserves the modest funding it receives. Godwin deserves a round of applause for that.

So now it's up to the ASUI Senate and President John Marble. It's the opinion of this writer that if Whiting can't keep his political beliefs out of his job, perhaps he should be brought back to Moscow.

Roundtable tackles feminist theory

Georgia Johnson, professor of education, will speak at the University Roundtable Knowledge for the 90s tomorrow at 12:30 p.m. in the SUB Silver and Gold Room.

The topic is "Women's Ways of Knowing — Feminist Theory." It will cover questions about bridging the cultural gap in the classroom. Betsy Thomas, director of the Women's Center will moderate.

Johnson has worked in literacy and language development at Montana Tribal Schools and at the Salt Lake Indian Center. Her research includes narrative structures of Indian children, women students as meaning makers and emancipatory agendas in research.

Anyone interested in participating in the discussion is welcome to bring a sack lunch. Beverages will be available for purchase. The event is free and open to the public.

Pu tells of life as political refugee

In celebration of International Women's Day and Women's History Month, UI Amnesty International will present Maria Pu, a Quiche Indian and recently released prisoner of conscience from Guatemala, tonight at 7:00 in the SUB Borah Theater.

Pu, originally from a small village outside Santa Cruz, Calif., will discuss human rights and women's issues as they relate to the abuses in her own country. She will relate personal experiences surrounding her capture, her eventual release and her current status as a political refugee in the US.

Undiscovered talent available to all

ASUI Productions Open Mike Nights offer stage to amateurs

Tristan Trotter
Staff Writer

Have you been attending ASUI Production's Open Mike Nights? If not, you should know what you have been missing—a chance to see yourself on stage. Every person who braves that microphone is someone who had the guts to share the undiscovered talents lurking inside a previously inhibited soul.

Saturday night's performances were even better, as a group, than those of February 5.

The evening got off to a pounding, funky start, with the debut performance of Third From the Sun, a local alternative band featuring three high school students and one UI undergraduate.

This markedly talented four-some performed songs by groups like Tool, Candlebox and Belly, as well as an original tune a result of the band's collaborative song writing efforts that rivaled the other pieces in intensity and intrinsic musical value. The lead singer's rich, syrupy alto voice was stirring, with a quality not entirely unlike the vocals in Concrete Blond, but still hauntingly unique.

She was backed by a strong drummer, a highly talented bassist and some very fine guitar work.

Third From the Sun will be opening for another band at the Combine in Pullman on April 9. They are an act well worth catching, with definite possibilities for major future successes.

Other highlights included a trio of young men with a slightly mellower tone and the quirky charm of three guys who get together just for fun to goof around on the guitar, the bass and the piano and end up making music.

They performed a Led Zeppelin tune, then went on to do Jim Morrison proud with their acoustic rendition of "Riders on the Storm."

Toward the end of the evening, the audience was treated to a taste of the gospel when a highly talented pianist in a classy cowboy hat and a desire to share some really special sentiments with the audience took the stage.

It was a genuine treat. She performed an original jazz piece first. A "warm-up song" that was certainly more than warm—in fact, it burned up the keyboard.

After a few minutes of impressive piano work, she added her fabulously strong gospel voice with words that expressed her desire to move on in life, despite some recent difficult times—the need to get over life's speed bumps in order to find the smoother highway.

She also did a beautiful acappella version of Mariah Carey's "I'll Be There," dedicating it to her husband, seated in the back, who blushed behind his smile.

And of course, there was the infamous appearance of Open Mike favorite, Matt Foreman.

With a black spiky guitar whose clicking strings are almost as loud as the distorted notes and a voice reminiscent of greats like Alice Cooper and Queen on a bad day, he elicited the usual cheers and applause.

He also brought out the two young video tapers who obviously appreciate the importance of preserving this artist on film for the good of posterity.

Don't miss the next Open Mike Night. April 5 isn't far away. Plan to be there. You won't regret it.

Exchange program challenges heart

Mike Edwards
Contributing Writer

Those of you who have traveled abroad for any length of time know how hard it can be to leave the country. Not only do you have to get ready to go by making about a billion tedious preparations, but you also have to psych yourself up for the trip.

It's emotionally draining to leave for an extended period of time, especially if you have no idea what lies ahead of you. In addition, it becomes most fearful endeavor when you know you're leaving your loved ones behind and stepping off a plane onto a continent where you know almost no one.

These are just a few of the feelings I had to confront as I prepared to study for a semester in Graz, Austria, on the International Student Exchange Program.

I've always wanted to travel abroad. Because I am an international studies and German major, I guess I'm supposed to like traveling and visiting other cultures.

However, prior to this month, my only experience beyond the United States and Canada lay in a weeklong trip to Mexico, which was enough to whet my appetite for Mexican culture but not enough to satisfy it.

I spent four and a half years studying other cultures, but it seems meaningless now that reality is about to dawn upon me.

On February 28 I boarded a plane for Frankfurt, Germany, where I will hook up with a train to Graz.

I do not know what I will encounter when I enter the Frankfurt Flughafen (airport), although by the time you read this I will already be settled in at Karl-Franzens-Universität Graz.

It's so easy to be taken in by fears of the unknown—the fear of having no one to meet you at the airport, of having to speak a foreign language to get around (it helps that a lot of Frankfurters speak English), the anxiety staying in Frankfurt alone until my train leaves, the fear of finding my way to the Bahnhof, the train station and of getting to my apartment in Graz once I get there.

No textbook can teach survival skills when you're on your own.

I also don't look forward to the loneliness I face while I am away from Moscow, my adopted home.

Having gotten engaged to my fiancée, Jing Wang, in January of this year, I am not looking forward to spending the next five months away from her on a faraway continent.

I'm so grateful she supports my decision to study in Europe, but sometimes I wonder if the time apart will be worth it, even if visiting Europe has always been my dream.

When you read this, Europe will be a reality for me. Spending a summer in Washington, D.C., taught me an important lesson that will likely hold true in Europe—no matter how impressive a place is when you first visit it, as time passes it begins to lose its luster.

When I went to Washington, D.C., as an intern last summer, I was in awe after visiting the capitol, the senate office buildings and the monuments for the first time. After

Injuries have easy cures

Injuries are a common result of sports activities, organized and unorganized. Care may be up to the individual if not involved in organized team sports. A helpful way to know what to do is the RICE/DIETS approach. Always consult your physician first before trying to take care of an injury yourself.

R — Rest. Test the injured part. Rest may be required for a few days or 6 to 8 to 10 weeks.

I — Ice. This should be applied as soon as practical after an acute injury. The cold decreases swelling, spasm of muscles and inflammatory response. Ice should be applied for 30 minutes with 5-10 minute breaks in between. This should be continued for the first 48 hours.

C — Compression. Pressure in the form of cold elastic wraps applied with foam or felt over the injury is effective in reducing pain and swelling. This effect is additive with ice.

E — Elevation. Elevation of the injured part uses the effects of gravity in treating the acute injury. This is used in conjunction with the ice and compression applications.

D — Drugs. Acute injuries are appropriate for the use of anti-inflammatory drugs. These may be continued for 5-7 days in the form of aspirin or a choice of non-steroidal anti-inflammatory medications, such as Ibuprofen. These should be taken in higher doses than suggested on over-the-counter labels. These help to resolve inflammation and provide both direct and indirect relief from pain.

I — Incision. Incision, drainage and injection. These surgical modalities obviously are beyond the individual. At times, injection of corticosteroid and/or local anesthetic may be necessary for treatment of longer term problems; however, at times may be used sooner for things such as large collections of blood into the skin.

ET — Exercise Therapy. Rehabilitation in the form of exercise should begin 2-3 days after the acute injury or as soon as is practical. This stage may involve continued use of hot or cold packs, resistance to exercise and range of motion exercises.

S — Surgery. As we all know, there are injuries, even in low impact sports, which require surgical intervention. These include unstable fractures, compound fractures and sprains where there is complete disruption of ligaments.

Should you have injuries which you feel uncertain about the care or feel are beyond your scope, help is available at Student Health Services.

Women celebrated during March

Tristan Trotter
Staff Writer

If your chromosomal code starts and ends with the letter X, this month is for you.

March has been designated Women's History Month, and today, International Women's Day, officially ushers in 31 days of exciting, educational events at the UI.

Tomorrow at the Women's Center at 12:30 p.m., Elna Grahn of Moscow will speak to the Brown Bag Lunch Program's audience. As a young woman, Grahn became a member of the first women's corps to be affiliated with the army, which was established on May 14, 1942.

Originally called the Women's Auxiliary Army Corps, the group was not at first an official branch of the service. Within one year of service Auxiliary was dropped from the title, and the Wacs (the women gave the name to themselves, were granted official status and the insurance/financial privileges that it entailed.

Grahn assumed a leadership role immediately. In time, she became the commanding officer of 1900 Wacs, who affectionately referred to her as "Mother Superior."

"We know that there were women fighting in the armed service in the Civil War. But they had to do it by dressing as men," said

Grahn. This fact, Grahn indicated, made the eventual establishment of WAC as an official, legal entity in the armed forces an important victory in the historic fight for women's rights.

Grahn will discuss the changes made in policies at the UI and the evolution in general of women's roles throughout history.

"You had to quit (teaching) when you got married...A wife could do 'women's work' (secretarial, clerical, etc.), but they (a husband and wife) couldn't both be in the classroom," Grahn said.

Grahn's recently released book, In the Company of Wacs, will be available at Bookpeople. A book-signing and reception will follow.

Fast increases discipline, frees mind

Muslims around the world call this month Ramadan. It started February 12. Fasting is a practice common to many religions.

Islam establishes a lunar calendar where months are all either twenty-nine or thirty days long. The ninth month, Ramadan, is the month in which the first revelation of the Qur'an came to the Prophet Mohammad.

The fast of Ramadan has been prescribed in order to train Muslims in self-discipline and scrupulous obedience to God's commands. The fast of Ramadan involves total abstinence from all food, drink and marital relations throughout the daylight hours; not even water may be taken. However, the fast must be broken at sunset each day. It is also recommended to have a pre-dawn meal before resuming the fast the next day.

In addition to refraining from meeting these ordinarily-lawful necessities, Muslims also engage in increased devotional activity throughout this month. Fasting makes the Muslim disciplined, steadfast and resilient like a soldier who forgoes or postpones the satisfaction of his normal needs at the order of his Commander.

This trains him/her to be flexible and adaptable in his habits, capable of enduring hardship and not to take for granted the bounties of God which he normally enjoys.

Fasting also enables the Muslim to feel with the poor who daily experience hunger and to be active in compassion and charity.

Islam recognizes that physical needs and appetites, particularly those of food, drink and sex, are powerful factors in human life, tying man to dependence on and preoccupation with his bodily needs and desires. Hence the Muslim is asked for one month out of the year to do without the satisfaction of these needs by day in order to develop his spiritual nature.

The process of experiencing hunger, thirst and sexual abstinence takes a person's mind off physical satisfaction and the dominance of his animal needs and frees him to pursue spiritual goals and values during this period.

Ramadan gives Muslims an opportunity to devote themselves to God and to their spiritual development.

Visiting prof hosts writing workshop

Therese Ellison
Staff Writer

University of Idaho's Distinguished Visiting Writer series continues this month with a writing workshop the week of March 28. Kelly Cherry, of the University of Wisconsin at Madison, will hold the workshop Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, 7-9:30 p.m., with a special session Saturday morning from 9:30 a.m. to noon.

March 30, at 7:30 p.m., Cherry will present a reading of her work at the UI Law School Courtroom.

To qualify as a student for the workshop, a ten to twenty-page manuscript of fiction (a short story or a chapter of a novel) must be submitted by 5 p.m. on March 11, to Dr. Ron McFarland, director of creative writing, Department of English, University of Idaho, Moscow, Idaho, 83843.

The manuscript must be typed or word-processed (preferably not on a dot-matrix) and double-spaced. Work should include the writer's name, address, phone number and a self-addressed stamped envelope if the writer wishes the manuscript returned.

Both students and faculty are free to submit work, but the workshop's enrollment is limited to fifteen students from a field that generally numbers between twenty and thirty.

The format of the workshops vary from teacher to teacher. Some workshops center on work composed in class, others consist of critiquing work the students bring with them. Dr. McFarland suggests students might submit both a finished project and something in progress (within the ten to twenty-page guideline). "If they have maybe a ten or twelve-page story they feel confident about, they could also submit an eight-page, unfinished project and let us know that it is an in-progress work," said McFarland.

Dr. McFarland also reminds all prospective students to become familiar with the work of the visiting writer.

"It's partly a matter of courtesy," said McFarland, "and partly just a matter of good sense."

Cherry received her MFA degree from the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. In addition to work featured in Virginia Quarterly Review, Georgia Review, Mademoiselle, Redbook, Story and McCall's, Cherry is also the author six collections of poetry and five novels, including My Life and Dr. Joyce Brothers.

The Distinguished Visiting Writer program began in the Fall of 1978. It has hosted such notable writers as William Stafford, Anne Beattie, Pulitzer-Prize winners Gary Snyder and Stanley Kunitz and Derek Walcott, recipient of the Nobel Prize for Literature.

The next Visiting Writer will be Rick DeMarinis, who heads the Creative Writing Department at the University of Texas at El Paso. His workshop will be the week of April 19. Submissions are due by April 1. For information, contact McFarland at 885-6937.

working on the Hill for two months, however, the nation's capital soon slipped into normalcy and lost much of its grandeur. I wonder now whether Europe will be the same.

Making arrangements for studying abroad are also frustrating. I enjoyed buying a plane ticket, thinking about all the interesting places I could visit. However, most of my preparations took an immense amount of time.

Not only did I have to get a visa, but I had to pack, work to earn money for my trip, make financial arrangements with my bank and the university and obtain insurance. Anyone who has traveled extensively can relate to the frustration of having millions of minute details to take care of before departure. It can be very tiring and make you grumpy.

I appreciate the fact Jing was supportive of me when I was ready to collapse. Now I look forward to the moment when I step off the plane at the Frankfurt Flughafen and face a whole new set of problems — finding out how to get to Graz by train using choppy German.

UNFORTUNATELY, THIS IS WHERE PEOPLE ARE PUTTING TOO MANY RETIREMENT DOLLARS.

Every year, a lot of people make a huge mistake on their taxes. They don't take advantage of tax deferral and wind up sending Uncle Sam money they could be saving for retirement.

Fortunately, that's a mistake you can easily avoid with TIAA-CREF SRAs. SRAs not only ease your current tax bite, they offer a remarkably easy way to build retirement income—especially for the "extras" that your regular pension and Social Security benefits may not cover. Because your contributions are made in before-tax dollars, you pay less taxes now. And since all earnings on your SRA are tax-deferred as well, the money you don't send to Washington works even harder for you. Down the road, that can make a dramatic difference in your quality of life.

What else makes SRAs so special? A range of allocation choices—from the guaranteed security of TIAA to the diversified investment accounts of CREF's variable annuity—all backed by the nation's number one retirement system.

Why write off the chance for a more rewarding retirement? Call today and learn more about how TIAA-CREF SRAs can help you enjoy many happy returns.

Benefit now from tax deferral. Call our SRA hotline 1 800-842-2733, ext. 8016.

Men split at home, play Montana

The UI men's basketball team finished the Big Sky Conference in third place after a disappointing loss Saturday night to Idaho State.

The BSC tournament opens Thursday, after a coin flip, at Boise State University. Idaho will play in the first game against No. 6 Montana.

The game begins at 5:30 p.m. PST.

Tickets good for all five games of the tournament went on sale yesterday at the UI ticket office. Prices for the three day event are $39 for adult passes and $20.25 for UI students and children.

Lightfoot BSC player of week

Orlando Lightfoot, along with Idaho State's Jim Potter and Northern Arizona's Jason Word, has been named Big Sky Player of the Week.

Lightfoot, in last week's two games, scored 57 points to set a new BSC career scoring record. He has scored 2,048 points in three seasons with the Vandals to surpass the old mark of 2,019 set by Bruce Collins of Weber State. Lightfoot has averaged a school record 23 points per game and has scored 485 more points than any other three-season player.

In a win over Boise State Friday in the ASUI-Kibbie Dome 59-56, Lightfoot set the record with his 30 point game. In Saturday night's loss, he netted 27 points and 11 rebounds.

Women's tourney 'flips' off in Montana

In an odd way to choose where the women's Big Sky Conference Tournament is to be held, Montana won the coin toss over co-champion Boise State. A flip of the coin was used because both teams posted 12-2 conference seasons and 22-4 overall.

BSU got the right to call the coin and chose "tails." Instead, the coin came up heads. If BSU won the toss, then the men's tournament would have been moved up to Wednesday to make way for the women.

The winner of the tournament automatically receives a berth in the NCAA tournament.

However, with the impressive records of both UM and BSU, the BSC is likely to have two teams vying for the championship.

Orlando Lightfoot. The name has been synonymous with Idaho Vandal basketball throughout the past three seasons.

Friday night's game versus the Boise State Broncos was the epitome of his illustrious career at Idaho.

Before the largest crowd of the season (5,710), including his mother, Lightfoot scorched the Broncos with 30 points in a 59-56 victory. His 30 points not only helped the Vandals win, but also vaulted him into the record books of the Big Sky for scoring the most points out of any player in conference history.

Lightfoot's shot came with 40 seconds left and gave the Vandals (17-8, 9-4 Big Sky) a four point cushion at 58-54.

An eight-foot jump shot over the out-stretched arms of 7-foot BSU center John Coker gave him a total of 2,021 points, surpassing Weber State's Bruce Collins' 2,019. Remarkably, Lightfoot accomplished this feat in only three seasons, while Collins did it in four.

"It felt good," said Lightfoot. "I've had the box and ones (defensive strategy), all these types of zones — all these defenses geared towards me and I just overcame them. It shows how much I've accomplished in three years."

He didn't know he was near the record until he looked up in the stands during a time-out. He saw yellow pieces of paper with numbers on them that showed how much he had scored. It indicated he was two points shy.

His mother, Delois Appleberry, witnessed her son's first game since he played for Hiwassee Junior College.

"This is the ultimate," said Lightfoot.

Boise State forward Shambric Williams, who led the Broncos with 16 points, said he played a little soft once he got four fouls — which opened the door for Lightfoot.

Perhaps one of the most overlooked performances was Idaho's Frank Waters, who shut down the second leading scorer in the Big Sky, Coker.

Coker was held scoreless in the first half and finished the game with 7 points, 11 below his norm.

"I thought that it was Frank's best game of his career," said UI head coach Joe Cravens. "I've told him this whole weekend we're riding his coattail defensively. I've told him from the first time I met him that he doesn't have to score a point here to help us. He's got to rebound and defend, and that's exactly what he did tonight."

Coker said, "We didn't get the job done. We've had some tough times all year coming down the stretch. I thought they played good defense. I didn't do the things I can do to help out the team."

Another deciding factor was that BSU (13-12, 6-7) turned the ball over six consecutive times late in the second half, due to mental lapses and an aggressive Idaho defense.

"I'd like to say that's a great coaching move on my part," said Cravens.

Overall, there were 42 turnovers in the game, 23 committed by BSU.

The lead changed 10 times during the course of the game and no team led by more than 6 points.

"It was a very big win because Boise State has been playing some great ball lately," said Lightfoot. "Coach Cravens almost had a baby before this game."

UM slated first tourney opponent

The 1993-94 Big Sky men's basketball season has been one of the most unpredictable in recent memory.

Montana, after an incredible 13-0 start, stumbled in Big Sky regular season play, falling to 6-8. Part of their downfall can be accredited to starting forward Israel Evans quitting the team.

Idaho State, after an 10-18 season, wasn't expected to do much better this year. Predictions were wrong. ISU claimed second place in the Big Sky and a first-round bye in the tournament this week in Boise.

The upcoming Big Sky tournament begins Thursday and ends Saturday. The winner will test their fate in the NCAA tournament. The last Big Sky team to win an NCAA tournament game was Idaho in 1982, where they advanced to the Sweet 16 after defeating Iowa.

This year's Big Sky tournament will feature Idaho, Idaho State, Weber State, Montana, Montana State and Boise State.

Eastern Washington and Northern Arizona failed to qualify.

The following are thoughts and predictions on the 1994 Big Sky tournament:

IDAHO vs. MONTANA —

The Vandals, awarded a third place seeding, will face sixth seed Montana to open the tournament. Game time will be 5:30 p.m. The Grizzlies (19-8, 6-8), although they struggled throughout the Big Sky regular season, will still be a team to contend with. Idaho, meanwhile, will have to rebound from a disappointing loss to in-state rival Idaho State last weekend. The Vandals swept Montana this year. Seniors Jeremy Brandt, Orlando Lightfoot, Dan Serkin,

Halftime Andrew Longeteig

Frank Waters and Deon Watson are looking for their first ever NCAA tournament bid. Idaho's last appearance was in the 1989-90 season where they lost to Louisville. Idaho will have to take care of the ball and shoot free throws better than they have been in order to contend for the tournament title. Montana, lacking a true inside game, may have to rely on their three-point shooting to advance to the semifinal game. Prediction:

Tesar leads team at indoor finals

Matthew D. Andrew

Instead of running from the gun, the men were shot. The women at least showed up with an agenda. This past weekend the men's and women's track and field teams headed to Pocatello for the Big Sky Conference Indoor Championships. The men had a disappointing four athletes place in the top six positions. The women, on the other side of the coin, brought some winners with them. Boise State went on to win both men's and women's team titles. Tanya Tesar, who has lead the team all year long as well as last season, showed why. Tesar medaled in three competitions. She only competed in three events. Her best placing was the triple jump. Tesar was the defending champion when she flew 40-foot-9 during the 1992-3 season. She didn't do as well, but good enough for second. This year she

Idaho 64, Montana 60. The winner plays Idaho State Friday night. BOISE STATE vs. MONTANA STATE — Boise State is scary with their 12-3 home record. This year, Big Sky commissioner Ron Stephenson and Co. decided to once again to change the tournament hosting. Several years ago, the conference had a rotation system, so every program could have an opportunity to host. Then it was decided that the team that won the regular season title, would host for the next year. Now it comes down to financial reasons — Boise State was chosen to host the tournament because they historically produce good crowds. This could, although unlikely, translate into a second straight appearance in the NCAA's for BSU due to their home court prowess. Montana State (16-10, 8-6) will feel the pressure of the Pavilion and of BSU's excellent team defense. Prediction: Boise State 64, Montana State 53. The winner plays Weber State on Friday. IDAHO vs. IDAHO STATE — The Bengals earned a bye over the weekend with a close 66-63 triumph over Idaho. ISU forward Jim Potter will be playing in front of his home crowd, so look for another good game — but if Idaho's Waters plays more, it won't be quite as good as his recent 31-point effort against the Vandals. One advantage the Bengals will have is rest because of their first round bye. However, the players rarely feel fatigue during tournament play because of its importance. Idaho needs to contain at least three of "The Big Four" to be successful. Lightfoot needs so shoot well throughout the entire tournament. ISU's bench isn't good enough to get them to the NCAA's. Maybe we'll get a new set of referees this time. Prediction: Idaho 77, Idaho State 71. BOISE STATE vs. WEBER STATE — Weber State will be well rested and well prepared for the Broncos, yet will still be in a dogfight with the crowd favorite. The Wildcats' chemistry has helped them most in winning the Big Sky title. The team with the most rebounds should win this game. Weber State has two rebounders who average over nine per game in forwards Johnnie Moore and Kirk Smith. Boise State's only rebounding threat is 7-foot center John Coker, who averages eight per game. Prediction: Weber State 74, Boise State 63. IDAHO vs. WEBER STATE — Weber State hasn't been to the NCAA's since disco was cool. Idaho will hope to avenge six consecutive losses to the Wildcats. The Vandals match up to Weber State better than any team in the conference. This nationally televised game (ESPN) will be the most exciting of the tournament. It's up to you to decide the winner and possible NCAA national champion (odds for BSC team are about 1:5 trillion). Make a six hour trip and support your team. Go Vandals!

Women end season at BSU

The Lady Vandals ended the season with losses at the hands of the Idaho State Bengals and the Boise State Broncos. Friday night the Bengals squeaked by the Vandals 55-52 after being down by five points at half time. The Bengals did manage to keep Jennifer Clary down to a mere two points the entire game but it was not enough to keep her from breaking the UI scoring record. Clary finished the season with an average of 21.3 points per game to break the scoring record set by Mary Raese during the 1985-86 season of 20.6 points per game. Clary also broke the Big Sky record for free throw percentages both in a single year and career. She hit 90.5 percent of her free throws this season and 89 percent during her career. Kara Jenkins and Cathy Payne came off the bench to score 14 and 10 points respectively. Ari Skorpik shot three of five from behind the three point line and poured in 13 points for the Vandals. Jeri Hymas grabbed 11 rebounds and Karen Poncina pulled down eight for the Vandals to help rebound the Bengals 44 to 38. Nicole Davis, Bengal center, grabbed nine rebounds. Hymas also contributed four blocked shots, two steals and seven points for Idaho. For the Bengals, Meg Salness hit 16 points and Ty Taylor put in 10. Salness pulled down six rebounds while Taylor dished out three assists and had three steals. Clary, Jenkins and Poncina fouled out of the game. The Vandals racked up 25 fouls to ISU's 12. Idaho also had more turnovers than ISU, 22 to 17.

Idaho vs. Boise State

Sunday afternoon the Vandals took on the Broncos and were defeated 45-98. Boise (22-4 overall, 12-2 in conference) is ranked 17 in the Associated Press Top 25 poll. The Vandals, who finish the season at 3-22 overall and 2-12 in conference, were lead by Clary's 19 points. Poncina pulled down seven rebounds for the Vandals and Skorpik added four assists. Five Broncos finished the game with double figures in scoring and Lidiya Varbanova had a double double with 18 points and 10 rebounds. Tory Torrolova added 17 points, Heather Sower 14 points and Angie Evans and Michelle Schultz contributed 10 points apiece. The Vandals also committed 40 turnovers while Boise had 12. Boise managed 24 steals with Sower and Torrolova combining for nine steals. The Vandals broke the free throw percentage team record of 71.2 percent set by the 1991-92 team. Over the season Idaho hit 73.5 percent of their free throws.

Potter vaults ISU to second

Andrew Longeteig
Staff Writer

The Idaho State Bengals, after a lackluster 10-18 record last year, are near the top as they claimed second place and a first round bye in the Big Sky tournament with a 66-63 victory over Idaho on Saturday.

Idaho State (17-8, 10-4) was led by Boise native, Jim Potter's 31 points and 10 rebounds — 23 of his points came in the second half. Some of his scoring burst could be due to the fact Idaho's defensive specialist Frank Waters played only four minutes.

A putback by Potter off an ISU miss made it 64-61 with 34 seconds left.

"Terance (Fleming) drove the baseline, and my man crashed in on him," said Potter. "Somehow, luckily, he got the shot off and nobody blocked me out."

With 13 seconds remaining, Ben Johnson scored on a driving lay-in to make it 64-63. ISU's Terance Fleming was immediately fouled after the inbound pass and hit one of two free throws.

After a Leslie miss, Fleming added another free throw. Idaho's hail mary pass with 2 seconds left was intercepted.

The win snapped a 14-game losing streak to the Vandals. ISU hadn't beaten Idaho since the 1987 Big Sky tournament.

"It's probably the biggest win in 20 years for ISU basketball," said ecstatic Bengal head coach Herb Williams.

On a poignant note, this game marked the final home game for Vandal seniors Dan Serkin, Jeremy Brandt, Frank Waters, Orlando Lightfoot and Deon Watson.

Lightfoot, the hero of the previous night's win over Boise State, shot only 9-26 from the field, but finished with 27 points and 11 rebounds.

Watson redeemed himself from Friday, having one of his best games this season, scoring 19 points (9-14 from the field) and pulling down 15 rebounds. Against BSU he scored only 2 points.

Watson also recorded five blocked shots, one short of the Vandal school record.

Despite the loss, Idaho's defense held the Bengals' quick guards in check, as they combined for only 15 points and shot 3-18 from the field.

ISU shot only 35 percent in the game; however, they managed to take advantage of their free throw opportunities, hitting 15-26 compared the Vandals' 7-14.

Several Idaho coaches felt it was unfair Idaho State had an extra day to rest before the game while the Vandals played back-to-back. It is not easy to come off a Boise State victory and maintain the same level of intensity for the next night.

Idaho will be seeded third in the upcoming conference tournament and will play Montana.

gave a jump of 39-10.3/4. Along with Karen McCloskey, Tesar placed in the 55-meter hurdles. McCloskey bettered Tesar with a time of 8.35 seconds. This brought her third place. Tesar finished in sixth position at 8.43. Her final placing came in the long jump. Tesar finished fourth behind three women from BSU. She jumped 19-0. Freshman Angie Mathison also came through strong for the women. She ran in the 3,000 and 5,000 meters. In the 5k, Mathison ran fast enough for second place in 17 minutes, 31. 63 seconds. The 3k was also quite successful. She finished fourth in 10:07.75. Others placing in the top six for the UI were Traci Hanegan who finished fourth in the 200m at 24.99. Sheri Marlatt placed in the sixth position in the 400m at 57.19. Cindy Smith finished in a three way tie in the high jump at 5-5. Overall, the women finished sixth with 43 points. The best the men could come up with was a third place finish by Niels Kruller in the long jump. Kruller finished behind two men from BSU at 24-3.1/4. The next best was a fourth place finish by Bart Ons. Ons pole vaulted his way across the top of the bar at 15-11.3/4 while Frank Bruder placed fifth in the 3k in 8:33.13. Bruder also placed 10th in the 5k in 15:16.24 and teammate Jason Uhlman was right behind at 15:22.84. Jerry Trujillo finished sixth in the triple jump with a leap of 47-4.3/5 to round the men's side. Overall, they finished seventh with six team points.
