Transfer exam changes in near future

Tim Helmke
News Editor

The days of an essay exam standing between some transfer students and graduation will soon be over.

In the past, students who transferred to the UI were required to take the Writing Proficiency Exam from the English Department in order to graduate regardless of credits at their former school. Now transfer students have to be proficient in writing to obtain a degree but all of them will not be required to take the exam.

D'Wayne Hodgkin, UI assistant director of writing, said changes were made after recommendations from the UI Faculty Council and the English Department under the guidance of Director of Writing Jennie Nelson. Hodgkin said a new plan has been developed for transfer students. A certain standard still has to be attained, but no exam is required for all transfer students.

Under the new plan which goes into effect at the start of the summer session, transfer students with six or more writing/composition credits accepted by the UI Registrar's Office will not have to take an exam or any other class. For those students with four or five writing/composition credits, UI will offer a new test, the English Transfer Exam. For those students with three credits or less in writing/composition, they will be required to take English 104.

Hodgkin estimated there are currently 600 transfer students who have not taken the transfer exam.

"We have sent a letter to these students advising them of the changes and encouraging them to decide what will be best for them," said Hodgkin.

The last Writing Proficiency Exam will be given March 31 at various sites around the region. Hodgkin said he encourages all current transfer students to decide what is UI students choose to park in the free lot adjacent to the Kibbie Dome leaving the blue permit lot nearly empty. Students choose the free lot for a variety of reasons with lack of money as the top reason. Others say they park for free rather than pay for a permit which does not guarantee a parking space.

Greeks to host high school visitation

Tim Helmke
News Editor

Over 120 high school seniors will be on the UI campus this weekend to view what college life is like.

The UI Interfraternity and Panhellenic Councils are sponsoring a High School Visitation Weekend Friday and Saturday. The weekend is designed to give these high school students an opportunity to learn about the UI directly from officials and students.

Participants will be housed in Greek chapter houses Friday night. UI Greek Advisor Linda Wilson said there are also several parents who will accompany students for the weekend and events are planned for them as well. Wilson said 124 students have registered and 30 parents will be here. She said they are expecting more to sign up over the week including Friday.

"We have set up an event so that these high school students can see for themselves what college is all about. We have planned a full slate of activities for them to learn about which may impact their decisions for the future," said Wilson.

The students will register

Friday afternoon and be taken to their host Greek chapter houses. Wilson said these students will be distributed amongst all the houses. They will then all meet in the Student Union Building Borah Theater for a welcome and an introduction to what they will experience over the weekend.

A progressive dinner involving all the Greek chapters will take place Friday night and the students will have an opportunity to get to know some members of the chapters they will visit, said Wilson. The students will then take part in the T.G.I.F. activities in the SUB.

"We are also taking advantage of the All-Campus Week activities going on so the students can really get involved in the weekend," said Wilson.

Saturday morning will be a busy time for students and the parents. Wilson said there is a full load of presentations scheduled for the morning on a wide variety of topics after breakfast. The breakfast will be highlighted by keynote speaker Terry Armstrong.

Presentations to the parents will be headed up by Dean of Student Bruce Pitman. A set of "infomercials" will be presented to the parents on issues and programs aimed to the college students of today.

We have set up an event so that these high school students can see for themselves what college is all about.

The high school students will see a more packed set of presentations from UI officials and students. Vice President for Student Affairs Hal Godwin and ASUI President John Marble will give the opening remarks and the welcome. This will be followed by a set of presentations from Judy Wallins on academic assistance, Rodney Dunn on financial aid, Pam Farmer and Tami Cann on student/alumni relations, ASUI Program Advisor Jan Abramson on ASUI programs and activities, UI Program Coordinator Jim Rennie on leadership programs, and IFC

President Jon Smith and Panhellenic President Missy Wilson on Greek life.

The students will also have an opportunity to pre-register for Fall Rush from IFC Rush Chair Ian James and Panhellenic Rush Chair Annie Czarniecki. This will not bind them to go through Rush but allows them a chance to show university staff they are interested in participating in Rush.

The students will then have lunch at their host chapters and then go on campus tours. The Greek chapters will then hold open houses for tours and students can visit those chapters they may not have seen in the other activities.

Babysitting techniques part of new course

The UI Enrichment Program is offering "I'm Taking Care—A Babysitter's Course" for children ages 11-13. There are six sessions in all. Call the Enrichment Program at 885-6486 for more information.

Dance moves put to music in swing class

The UI Enrichment Program is offering "Swing It!" a dance class with 5 sessions, from last Sunday through April 17 from 7-8 p.m. Call the Enrichment Program at 885-6486 for more information.

Enrichment Program offers turf care class

The UI Enrichment Program is offering "Turf Establishment and Maintenance" Wednesday from 6-8 p.m. Call the Enrichment Program at 885-6486 for more information.

Indians may apply for graduate study grant

The American Indian Graduate Center is accepting application requests from American Indian and Alaska native students who will be pursuing masters and doctorates as full-time graduate students for the 1994-95 year. The AIGC program has provided fellowship grants to Indian graduate students since 1969 and has aided over 3,000 students in the past 24 years. For the 1993-94 year, AIGC is assisting 575 students from 130 tribes who are working on graduate degrees at over 200 colleges throughout the United States.

To be eligible for consideration, an applicant must: (1) be an enrolled member of a federally recognized tribe or be at least one-fourth degree Indian; (2) be attending an accredited college or university in the U.S.; (3) be a full-time graduate student admitted into in their first masters or first doctorate program as a full-time graduate student in any field of graduate study. The application deadline for 1994-95 is April 15 and applicants should have applied for campus-based aid for 1994-95 at their college financial aid office in February. Eligible applicants can request an application packet by contacting: AIGC, 4520 Montgomery Blvd. NE, Suite 1-B, Albuquerque, N.M., 87109-1291 or by phone at (505) 881-4584.

Alpha Zeta sponsors open forum with deans

Alpha Zeta is sponsoring "Meet the Deans" tonight in Agricultural Sciences Room 62 at 5:30 p.m. Refreshments will be served and everyone is welcome to attend.

Beginning spinners start learning the processes

The UI Enrichment Program is offering "Spinning for Beginners" on Tuesdays from today through April 12 from 7:30-9:30 p.m. Contact the Enrichment Program at 885-6486 for more information.

Reminder on decision concerning Convocation

In the spring of 1987, the UI Faculty Council gave standing authority for classes to be dismissed to allow members of the university community to attend the annual Honors Convocation. The 1994 convocation will be Friday, April 8 at 3 p.m. in Memorial Gymnasium to honor the achievements of outstanding students. All faculty members and administrators are reminded this is a university-wide event for all members of the university community. Departments are reminded to not schedule any other events for that time.

Homecoming reunion plans being made now

Plans for an Argonaut Alumni Reunion are currently underway at the UI College of Letters and Science. The event is scheduled to be held during UI's 1994 Homecoming, Oct. 20-22.

Festivities will honor UI alumni who were employed at the student newspaper, the Argonaut, during their college years. Some of the alumni who will assist with the planning of the event include: Richard Stanto, a 1934 graduate; Allen Derr, a Boise attorney; Dean Judd, a 1958 graduate; Gary Randall, a law professor at Gonzaga University in Spokane, Wash.; Rod Gramer, news director at KTVB in Boise; Orval Hansen, president of the Columbia Institute; and Kenton Bird, an instructor at UI. All Argonaut alumni are invited to attend the reunion next fall.

The reunion will coincide with the 96th year of publication for the Argonaut and is being coordinated by the UI College of Letters and Science.

Hotel accommodations for alumni planning to attend the reunion can be made at the University Inn, Mark IV and Super 8.

For more information on the reunion's schedule of activities, please contact Shari Ireton at the UI College of Letters and Science, 885-6426.

Peace Corps officials to be on campus this week

The Peace Corps will have information tables on the UI campus Wednesday and Thursday. These tables will be on the first floor of the Forestry Building from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The Peace Corps will also be making presentations on these days. "The Peace Corps Experience" will be Wednesday from 12:30-1:30 p.m. in Forestry Dept. Room 14 and Thursday from noon to 1 p.m. in Agricultural Science Building Room 62. "An Evening with Returned

News Briefs

Volunteers" will be Thursday from 7-9 p.m. in the SUB Ballroom.

The Peace Corps will then interview interested people for Fall/Winter 1994 openings April 6. To schedule a time, call Jonathan at 1-800-426-1022. Completed applications can be brought to the interview.

Computer course offers look into spreadsheets

The UI Enrichment Program is offering "Excel Spreadsheet with Windows" on Mondays from yesterday through April 18 from 6:30-8:30 p.m. There will be five sessions in all. Contact the Enrichment Program at 885-6486 for more information.

Photo contest part of '94 International Week

Entries are being accepted for the 1994 International Week Photo contest.

This year's theme, "UI Family of Nations," is based on the United Nations Year of the Family. All entries are to be based on a family theme and may have been taken anywhere and can be black and white or color.

They must be a minimum of eight by ten inches, mounted or matted and ready to hang during International Week, April 3-9. Entries are due at the University Programs/ASUI Productions office in the SUB by 5 p.m. March 31.

Judging will be done Friday, April 1 and selected photos will be displayed in the SUB Gallery, adjacent to the Vandal Lounge. Cash prizes will be given.

Entry instructions are available from International Programs in Morrill Hall Room 216 or the SUB Information Desk. For more information call 885-8984.

Free tax assistance available until April

Volunteer Income Tax Assistance provides free tax help in the community. Volunteers help those with basic tax returns, particularly elderly, handicapped and non-English speaking taxpayers. There is no charge for this service.

VITA offers assistance Thursdays from 6 to 8 p.m. and Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the University of Idaho Law School Room 105.

Food drive closes up today for Alpha Zeta

Alpha Zeta is collecting food for the needy as this year's community service project. There will be boxes provided in the following buildings: Forestry, Morrill Hall, Food Science, Family and Consumer Sciences and West One Bank. Donations would be greatly appreciated. The drive runs through today.

Speaker to focus on hazardous waste

Margrit von Braun, associate professor of chemical engineering, presents "Issues in Hazardous Waste in America" at the Electrical Engineering Research Colloquium March 24 at 3:30 p.m. in Janssen Engineering Building Room 26.

Grades to be made available to students

Midterm grades will be available for pick-up in the basement of Administration Annex this week.

Professor looks into hate-crimes

PULLMAN— By compiling a state-by-state inventory of "hate-crimes" statutes and gathering social indicator data, a Washington State University sociologist is trying to determine the social forces that shape the adoption of "hate-crimes" legislation in the United States.

From her point of view, Valerie Jenness said three things are sociologically significant: First, why are we seeing increased legislative action now? Second, when communities respond to violence motivated by bigotry, why do they prohibit some form of violence and not others? Third, why is legal protection offered to some groups and not others.

The answers are not clearly spelled out.

Every indicator, however, suggests that violence born of hatred, bias or prejudice — based on the actual or perceived race, color, religion, national origin, ethnicity, gender or sexual orientation of an individual or group of individuals — is increasing exponentially in this country and abroad, Jenness said.

While no accurate statistics are currently available on the number of hate-motivated crimes committed in the U.S. each year, reports of "hate crimes" continue to grow and along with them highly politicized public debate and the call that "somebody do something."

Measures have been taken at the federal and state levels to curb hate-motivated violence through the sponsorship of new legislation.

Advocates of "hate-crime" legislation point out that the principle of additional punishment for certain types of "hate crimes" is well established in law. For example, the murderer of a police officer suffers a greater penalty than someone who kills a civilian.

Given that the criminalization of hate constitutes a fairly recent development in legal and criminal history, Jenness said it is not surprising that the social sciences have devoted little scholarly attention to understanding the adoption of "hate-crimes" legislation in the United States.

In the last 15 to 20 years "hate-crimes" legislation has generated new categories of violent crime in the country. Take the 1989 case in Wisconsin in which after watching the movie Mississippi Burning, a film about Ku Klux Klan terror in the 1960's, a group of young black men in Kenosha spotted a 14-year-old white best for them before the test is given so they are not hurt by the new standards.

"Transfer students who are anticipating graduation in May and have not passed the exam need to pass this semester," said Hodgkin.

Students go to the English Department office in Brink Hall to sign-up for the test March 29 and 30. When they register, they are told where to show up for the exam and are also given a reading from which they will be asked to write on.

When the students go in for the exam on March 31, they should take the reading with them. They will then be given a list of questions from which they choose on to write on.

"They have three hours to brainstorm, write a rough draft and polish it up before turning it in," said Hodgkin.

The exam will be given at the Moscow UI campus and sites in Twin Falls, Idaho Falls, Boise and Coeur d'Alene. Hodgkin said the exam has also been given in other areas but was unsure if they would be used again this time around.

Hodgin said the exam is not a valid way to test transfer students. He said when the exam was first introduced at the UI over 25 years ago, the test was valid because other colleges and universities had low standards of writing.

"The test was first established to protect the integrity of the school's image. Since they have revised curriculums at other state institutions, the old exam is no longer needed," said Hodgkin.

Hodgin said the English Department has recommended to other departments to add an upper-division writing intensive course for their discipline of study. Hodgkin said this was suggested to stay within their own department because the English Department is not adequately manned to teach more courses.

"If departments add one of these such courses, it will help to ensure transfer students are up to the standards we set upon all of our graduates," said Hodgkin.

Junior high students observe ASUI Senate

The ASUI Senate had several young visitors at the last meeting. Kellogg Middle School's student government leaders, accompanied by their teacher and advisor, David Dose. Dose is a former ASUI Vice-President and brought his group to observe "government action." Dose recounted his experiences with the ASUI and felt his students could "benefit from seeing how the ASUI works as an example of government."

Zinser made surprise visit to Senate meeting

UI President Elisabeth Zinser made a surprise visit to the last meeting. Zinser dropped by during the meeting to speak privately with the visiting student leaders. Zinser spent nearly 10 minutes discussing with visitor's responsibilities involve as well as encouraging them to continue serving others.

Darakty appointed to run ASUI elections

The ASUI Senate immediately considered a bill by ASUI President John Marble which appointed Damon Darakty as chair the Student Issues Board. This board is responsible for running ASUI elections. The Senate was convinced to suspend the normal process for appointment, which includes an interview by the Senate Government Operations and Appointments committee, when it was pointed out that ASUI elections are approaching quickly and the chair needs time to prepare and organize for the elections.

"It is critical that we get someone in this position with elections coming up," said ASUI Senate Pro Tem Tom Sheffield, who also has worked with Darakty on the committee, "I think he will do a good job."

Moeller fills position to assist Marble in duties

ASUI President John Marble has tapped Brad Moeller to be his Chief of Staff. The Chief of Staff position, formerly called the Assistant to the President, acts as liaison between the President and the ASUI boards and committees. In addition, the position runs weekly staff meetings and may attend meetings on behalf of Marble. The Senate will consider the bill to confirm Moeller at tomorrow's meeting.

Crabbe expected to fill new ASUI PR position

ASUI President John Marble has appointed Joni Crabbe to be the ASUI Public Relations Coordinator.

The PR Coordinator position, created last year, has been redesigned and includes responsibility for creating press releases for ASUI officers.

In addition, the position works to maintain records for the ASUI. Crabbe will go before the Government Operations and Appointments committee and is expected to be voted on by the Senate tomorrow night.

Brydon nominated to fill Faculty Council seat

Jenny Brydon has been nominated by ASUI President John Marble to fill the vacant student position on the UI Faculty Council. The position, which includes voting rights, is responsible for representing student views to the faculty.

Recent issues dealt with by the council have included the UI's alcohol policy and final schedules. If approved by the Senate, Brydon would join current undergraduate Faculty Council member Megan Russell.

Fee increase request sent to State Board

The ASUI has officially requested a fee increase for next year. A resolution sponsored by ASUI Senator Ian James, which requests the State Board of Education increase the ASUI semester fees from $32.75 to $34.25, passed with no debate and without objection. Citing the ASUI's unique mission on campus, the resolution suggests that the ASUI must request the increase in order to continue providing services for the students. The $1.50 increase is identical to an increase that was approved last year. The university is expected to include the request in its' final request to the Board for approval in April.

Marble submits budget with $342 surplus

How do you eliminate a $38,000 budget deficit? ASUI President John Marble submitted a budget for fiscal year 1995 to the ASUI Finance Committee which reversed the ASUI budget deficit last year to a projected $342 surplus.

"Balancing the budget was one of my campaign promises and I intend to keep it," said Marble. "We must be fiscally responsible, running a deficit year after year was not wise."

The ASUI has budgeted for a deficit for each of the past three years. Marble's budget now heads to the Finance Committee before it will come to the entire Senate for approval. Marble expects the final budget to be approved in time to meet the requirements outlined in the ASUI Rules and Regulations.

Wednesday meeting up next for ASUI Senate

The next ASUI Senate meeting will be tomorrow night at 7 p.m. in the SUB Gold Room. The meeting is open to the public and there is a time for individuals to address the Senate during Open Forum.

Safety committee takes steps to address lights

The ASUI Safety Committee is beginning to make a difference according to one ASUI Senator.

"Things are moving along much faster than I had ever expected," said ASUI Senator Laura West at the last Senate meeting.

One of the main concerns of the committee is lighting on campus, especially the lights that go out as people walk under them.

"Lights are being fixed as we speak," said West.

If anyone is interested in working with the Safety Committee contact the ASUI Office at 885-6331.

Elections coming up for ASUI positions

ASUI elections for the spring semester will be held April 13. There are several open ASUI Senate seats and board positions.

Petitions are available in the ASUI Office on the main floor of the Student Union Building.

Plans made for a new summer Argonaut

ASUI President John Marble reported to the Senate plans are being made to print the Argonaut during the summer session.

The newspaper would come out once a week and cover the events going on around the UI campus.

Marble said the papers would be fairly small running between eight and twelve pages. He said the staff would be small and would be able to do other activities in the summer.

Summer courses heat up

Summer can be an exciting time and a great opportunity to get a few classes out of the way. Students can register simply and conveniently through on-line registration, walk-in or mail-in. Advance registration began yesterday.

Here are a few reasons why students should attend summer school at UI:

- Choose from over 600 courses, including over 26 core courses. Choose from regular or one of a kind courses students cannot get during the regular academic year.
- Students can practically earn a semester's credits in just eleven weeks.
- Class size is smaller which means more contact between students and instructors.
- Summer session has a very flexible calendar to allow students to earn credits and still have time to work and enjoy a summer vacation.

- Lighten the fall or spring course load and take courses that are hard to schedule.
- Improve grade point average.
- Take steps to graduate early or on time.

Make the most of this summer and get a head start on a bright future. Pick up a copy of the Summer Bulletin today and begin planning a summer schedule.

Bulletins can be picked up at the following locations: Registrar's Office, Administration Building, Education Building, Satellite SUB, Library, Bookstore, Student Union Building, Information Center and the Summer Programs Office in the Continuing Education Building.

For more information, call the Summer Programs Office at 885-6237.

Research agreement reached

The UI, British Nuclear Fuels and the Idaho Research Foundation have agreed to conduct collaborative research in supercritical fluid extraction. The agreement will support research being conducted by Dr. Chien Wai, UI professor of chemistry.

Supercritical fluid extraction is the process used to extract caffeine from coffee beans to make decaffeinated coffee. Wai has expanded the technology to develop a method applicable to hazardous waste clean-up.

Using special compounds called chelating agents that bind to metals, Wai has been able to extract hazardous materials from water to soil. The process could lead to practical applications in hazardous waste clean-up, nuclear fuel reprocessing and nuclear waste management.

"We are very excited to be embarking on this project with British Nuclear Fuels," said Laurence Bonar, Director of Licensing at the Idaho Research Foundation. "It will ensure a serious effort will be made to develop this very promising technology for industrial use."

Bonar noted that BNFL is an international leader in the nuclear fuel reprocessing business and conducts an active research program in that area.

The collaborative agreement allows BNFL to send one senior researcher to work in Wai's lab. BNFL will also provide financial support for a UI graduate student to work on the research.

The British company will support the research by providing laboratory equipment, supplies and chemicals.

Bob Holmes, the head of BNFL Company Research Laboratory, said, "We are delighted that we have the opportunity to work with Dr. Chien Wai, an acknowledged world expert in supercritical fluid extraction. We are also excited at the prospect of being able to convert this elegant idea into a process that can be used to clean-up toxic, lethal and radioactive waste using an environmentally benign extractant-like carbon dioxide."

Final details of BNFL's financial support are still being worked out, but support is expected to be in excess of $150,000 a year. The joint research work will begin this summer.

The Idaho Research Foundation has agreed to grant BNFL a license to the patents on Wai's SCFE inventions and any new inventions that might result from the collaborative research effort at the UI. The agreement allows BNFL to apply this very promising "clean" technology on an industrial scale to some very difficult problems.

BNFL has a U.S. subsidiary, BNFL Inc., and the license commits BNFL to make the SCFE technology available for nuclear applications in the United States. The Idaho Research Foundation retains the rights to license hazardous waste clean-up applications in the United States.

Volunteers help KUID-TV

A total of 52 people helped Idaho Public Television, a non-profit broadcasting entity, during the past month.

They were supervised by Assistant Development Director Pam Peterson. Several of the groups who provide assistance are from the UI community.

A big round of thanks from the Idaho Public Television staff goes out to:

- McCoy Hall (3 members)
- Mariaetta Lou's Class of American Language and Culture (9 members)
- Phi Gamma Delta (14 members)
- Gamma Phi Beta (8 members)

There is a need for more volunteers to help with fundraising on a regular basis. Those interested in helping out should contact Peterson at 885-6723 for more information or to sign-up.

Athlete graduation rate increases

Alissa Beier
Staff Writer

Student athletes are presently graduating at an exceedingly higher rate than those students without athletic scholarships.

Based on a report required by National Collegiate Athletic Association, 54 percent of student athletes who received scholarships graduated in 1993, only 43 percent of all UI students graduated that same year.

Hal Godwin, vice president for student affairs and UI's faculty representative, said the progress in these growing percentages can be attributed to several factors.

"The coaching staff and athletic administration really support the academic lives of the athletes," stated Godwin.

He also said the athletic department has enlarged their academic support system, thus increasing the number of tutors, advisors and other academic assistance.

For the remaining 46 percent of student athletes who did not graduate after their scholarship ended, post scholarship aid was funded to them from the direct profit of UI logo sales.

This year the profit yielded $20,000 and is currently being divided between 10 student athletes.

"We feel obligated to continue contributing to them," said Godwin. "These athletes have done a lot to contribute to this school."

The fourth year of this NCAA report has also shown another surprising statistic. The graduation rate for male student athletes was 42 percent, while their female counterparts had a 70 percent graduation rate.

Assistant athletic director at UI,

Kathy Clark, has her own theory for the reasoning behind these statistics.

"I think it mainly has to do with each of their personal goals in the future," Clark stated. "Male student athletes tend to focus more on sports because they have a better chance of playing professionally, whereas there really isn't this same opportunity for women."

"The women seem to be more focused on their career first and sport second," Clark added.

Although it's not true that these student athletes get special academic help that is not offered to every student, it is true they have some of the same challenging majors.

Within the last 4 to 5 years, the most popular majors of both male and female student athletes have been: business management and administration, communication and engineering.

youth, and one of them yelled, "There goes a white boy. Go get him." They beat the boy so badly, he was left with permanent brain damage. Subsequently, one of the black men was convicted and sentenced to two years in prison for the beating.

The court also punished him for his intent. Citing a Wisconsin law that permits increased penalties for "hate-crimes," the judge tacked on two additional years of jail time.

"The 'Hate-Crimes' Statistics Act of 1991," Jenness said, "was an important moment in the history of hate-motivated violence insofar as it required that the FBI collect data on officially recognized crimes."

By 1991, every state in the U.S. except Alaska, Nebraska, Utah and Wyoming had adopted a criminal or civil statute to address the problem of hate violence. What constitutes a "hate-crime," however, varies immensely from state to state.

Jenness said, "Legislation runs the gamut from broad to scant coverage, including both criminal penalties and civil remedies."

California and Iowa have opted to pass comprehensive statutes to protect the civil rights of a range of constituencies, rather than lobbying for a series of separate laws designed to protect individual groups.

In contrast, Delaware and Hawaii have chosen to prohibit only one form of hate-motivated violence, while also attending to civil liberties-related concerns and remaining sensitive to the socio-political particularities of the state.

The WSU sociologist is especially interested in how gender is being treated by the law and those supporting and opposing "hate-crimes" legislation.

She said, "One of the most debatable issues is whether or not gender should be treated like race, religion and sexual orientation."

Jenness notes that at the national level, U.S. Senator Joseph R. Biden, Jr. (D-Del.), chair of the Judiciary Committee, has sponsored federal legislation called the Violence Against Women Act. If passed, this legislation would render all sorts of crime that we now might call "violence against women" equivalent to other "hate-crimes."

It would, in essence, permit women to bring civil suits for attacks against them because of their gender, just like existing laws provide remedies for attacks motivated by racial or religious discrimination.

Similarly, as of 1992, only 10 states had adopted "hate-crimes" legislation that include provisions to gender.

In the process of addressing these types of questions, Jenness hopes to contribute to the understanding of why some activities and people are subject to formal social control, especially when gender is involved, while other activities and people are not.

Mondays

UI Students for Life, a pro-life action group, meets every Monday at 6:15 p.m. in the SUB EE-DA-HO Room. For more information call 885-8081.

Tuesdays

The UI men's rugby club is looking for experienced and novice players for the 1994 season. Practice is in the Kibbie Dome Tuesdays and Thursdays at 6:30 p.m. For more information contact Mark Dobrilovic at 883-2876.

There will be a UI Greek Week Meeting tonight at 6:30 p.m. at Pi Beta Phi. These meetings are worth points for the competition so chapters are encouraged to send a representative.

Attorneys claim Heber receiving improper treatment in Boise

Judge to hear motion in mid-April, may reduce sentence if Heber's claims are true

Tim Helmke
News Editor

Former UI student Megan Heber's attorneys have asked a judge to reduce her sentence on a manslaughter charge.

Attorneys Tim Gresback and Allen Bowles allege Heber is not receiving the proper treatment as outlined by Idaho 2nd District Judge John Bengston at her November sentencing. They allege prison officials are keeping her drugged instead of giving her mental treatment.

Heber plead guilty to involuntary manslaughter for killing her newborn son in her residence hall room, then throwing his body down a trash chute at Theophilus Tower in the 1992 fall semester.

Bengston ordered Heber to be placed in a mental institution or to undergo psychological treatment as part of her sentence Nov. 23.

Her attorneys argue that if she is not receiving the proper treatment, the five year sentence is too harsh and Bengston should reconsider the length of the sentence.

The attorneys presented an affidavit from Heber in Boise to support their motion for a reduced sentence. She stated the only form of treatment she has received since she was first taken to Boise in November has been with drugs. Heber said in the affidavit she was prescribed anti-depressant and anti-anxiety drugs the first day by the chief psychologist of the prison.

Heber also said in the affidavit she has not met for any counseling or therapy for more than 10 minutes. Her attorneys feel this is also a part of the treatment which is not meeting what Bengston ordered in his sentencing of Heber.

The affidavit Heber sent said the only one-on-one counseling she has received in Boise is from a Boise State University masters student, not a certified professional.

At the sentencing session last fall, Bengston said if prison officials do not give Heber proper treatment then he would consider reevaluating the sentence he gave.

Heber, who could be up for parole as early as this November, repeatedly attempted suicide prior to her sentencing. Bengston recognized her psychological problems and encouraged her attorneys to file the reduced-sentence motion.

Conditions for Heber were so extreme she said in the affidavit that she began to experience "dissociative episodes" while working as a janitor. She met with officials about these problems and they asked her to promise she would not try to hurt herself. Heber could not give that promise to the officials and later tried to hurt herself.

According to the affidavit, Heber had been placed in a detention cell in the women's area of the prison where she repeatedly banged her head into the concrete wall. Prison officials moved her to the infirmary where she was given 75 milligrams of Thorazine — a drug which knocked her out.

Heber insists the doctors just keep increasing her medication instead of giving her the proper counseling as suggested by Bengston. Bengston is scheduled to hear the motion from Heber's attorneys April 11.

Alumnus fills position

Edward J. McBride, an alumnus of the UI, is returning to the university to become director of gift planning.

McBride, who has been the associate director of major and planned giving at Washington State University since 1989, assumes his duties at UI Monday.

"We're delighted to welcome Ed back to his alma mater. He brings with him a wealth of experience, and we look forward to his leadership in our planned giving program," said Linda Davidson, executive director of the UI Foundation.

As Director of Gift Planning, McBride will be responsible for outlining opportunities for people to make planned investments in education that can benefit them and the university.

McBride earned his bachelor's degree in business from UI in 1964 and finished a law degree at UI in 1972. From 1972 through 1988, he was a partner in the Nuxoll, McBride & Libey law firm in Colfax, Wash. During his tenure at WSU, the WSU Foundation's trust portfolio increased from $6 million to $16 million.

In fiscal 1993, McBride was directly involved in more than $8 million in major and planned gifts to WSU.

McBride was raised on a farm near Pottlatch, Idaho. McBride and his wife Connie, a Colfax teacher and UI alumna, live in Colfax.

Equipment donations

Micron Computer, Inc., has donated equipment valued at $10,090 to the Idaho Falls University of Idaho/Idaho State University, announced Linda Davidson, UI executive development director.

The equipment includes five top-end PCs, said Fred Rose, Idaho Falls building manager. There are 486 machines with built-in CD ROM players, a large memory capacity and basic software built-in. They will be distributed to various rooms in the higher education center to be used by students in science laboratories and classrooms.

"The donation is particularly welcome in view of the fact that these are top-end computers," said Rose. "This allows us to provide our students access to state of the art computing capabilities."

Chase Mart, president of Micron at Boise, said, "Micron is always pleased to be able to participate in furthering education improvements in the state."

This latest gift brings to $440,000 the total cash and in-kind donations to the Idaho Falls Higher Education Center.

Income tax benefits

Did you work during 1993 and did your family earn less than $23,050? Did a child live with you for at least half the year?

If so, you may be eligible for up to $2,364 from the Earned Income Credit. It is a federal benefit for both married and single parents who worked either full or part-time during part or all of the year.

These people can get their Earned Income Credit by taking just two simple steps: 1) Filing a Form 1040 or 1040A federal income tax return (1040EZ may not be used); 2) Filling out "Schedule EIC" and attaching it to their tax return.

There is an important step that can make filing for the EIC even easier. Families need only fill out the front sheet of the "Schedule EIC" form and the IRS will calculate the detailed figures.

If eligible, filers will either owe less in taxes — or the government will mail you a check. You can still get the Earned Income Credit even if you do not owe income tax.

Most families with small children at home could use extra dollars toward their support. An average of $940 of tax refunds per claimant were returned to those Idaho families who filed the appropriate tax forms in 1993. These benefits may be there for your family.

State officials and educators are usually surprised by the significant amount of EIC money currently unclaimed by families who are unaware of the fact they are entitled to tax benefits.

The IRS estimates that about 14.3 percent of persons eligible for EIC benefits are not filing for them. Many of these low and moderate income families live in rural areas.

The Earned Income Credit is a tax credit for working families with low to moderate adjusted gross income of less than $23,050 in 1993, who have at least one child living at home more than half the year.

Congress may change benefit provisions each year. For 1993 however, the maximum basic EIC for families with one child is $1,434. In addition, one may also get a health insurance benefit of up to $65 if they paid health insurance premiums that covered at least one child. Finally, they can get an extra credit worth as much as $388 for a child born in 1993.

Eligible working families can benefit from the credit even if they owe no federal income tax or have no income tax withheld from their paychecks. If a family does owe income tax, the EIC reduces the amount of taxes owed.

A family's EIC payments do not count as income in determining its eligibility or benefits levels for AFDC, Medicaid, food stamps, public or subsidized housing or Social Security Insurance.

UI, Turner wronged with reassignment

Change may prove profitable for the UI women's basketball team as it searches for a new head coach. When head coach Laurie Turner was reassigned within the athletic department last week, no one was surprised.

Rumors had been circulating over the past few months that if the team didn't finish with a .500 record Turner would probably be removed.

The young Vandal squad finished with a disappointing 3-22 season record and many players and administrators were not surprised at Turner's removal from the head coaching position.

New blood always adds life to an organization. But, old blood can add experience and proven leadership. You can't escape the fact the Lady Vandals finished the season on a disappointing note at the bottom of the Big Sky Conference standings at 2-12, but was it Turner's poor coaching that caused this?

Turner has proven herself a leader, taking many teams to the Big Sky finals and watching two of her teams finish as Big Sky Conference runners-up in 1989 and '90.

The team lost its first 15 games of the season.

As fans know, the Lady Vandals had more freshman and sophomores filling the roster than experienced collegiate players. Idaho did boast Jennifer Clary, the Big Sky women's leading scorer, but one player cannot carry an entire team to victory. That's why it's called a team, they must work together to reach the goal of winning.

Turner, and any coach, is just as much a part of the team as the players. She was battling with finding the right combination on the court all season. She had half a handful of experienced players to mix with a multitude of new players and hoped they would gel on the court.

Now the Vandals aren't only rebuilding a team that has lost leaders on the court, it will also be rebuilding the leadership from the sidelines.

Turner should not be blamed for the poor season, neither should her players. Chalk it up to a bad start that just didn't improve, but don't place blame.

Any coach knows a full squad of new players will probably not fare as well as a regimen of experienced athletes. By removing Turner they have taken away the biggest asset the women's team has — an experienced coach.

The sporting world is obsessed with winning and losing, mainly because it pivots on that fact, but leadership is an important factor. Turner has proven herself as an asset with Idaho teams in the past and with her winning record at other institutions. Turner's replacement should be no less qualified or profitable for the Vandals.

Sexes entertained differently

Over the weekend, I came to the conclusion that guys and girls are different.

Now I don't mean that different parts of the body protrude in different places. I mean there are internal differences that aren't visible to the naked eye.

I know all you loyal readers are now saying, "Da. Why can't Jeff write a good politically informative column about, say, how the Whitewater thing has affected Bill and Hillary's sex life." Patience, my loyal ones. My brain is still covered in the cold spring break sand of the Oregon Coast and is not capable of doing such a large task. Plus, I can't figure out Whitewater myself, let alone try to explain it to you. But stay tuned.

Anyway, back to this revelation. It came Sunday on the couch. I was putting off studying using the excuse it would be rude to study in front of my girlfriend. So I sat there slumped over the couch with a half empty bottle of Corona resting skillfully on my bare stomach. As I did that incredibly male thing of surfing though all my cable channels in record time, I came across a very young Sean Connery in an expensive suit. YEE-HAW!!! It's a James Bond

I'll Tell You Why Jeff Kapostasy

Weekend on TBS! My mind worked frantically to figure out which one this was and settled in for an hour or so of The Ultimate Man.

My girlfriend responded by picking up an old issue of GQ and inquired, quite annoyed, if this particular movie wasn't on just a little while ago. This is blasphemy as far as I'm concerned.

After all, James Bond is the man every man secretly aspires to be. He is the quintessential masculine man. After all, how many guys do you know who can shoot all the bad guys, rescue government secrets, stop a world war, outrun gunmen in a Aston Martin and then join a lovely lady for a vodka martini, shaken not stirred?

No girl I've ever met has ever really enjoyed 007. On the other hand, I have yet to meet a girl that didn't come away from Pretty Woman without sighing wistfully — hoping that some loaded, hunky guy would swoop them away with love and a stretch limo. Like a good many men, I found this movie repulsive, or maybe I was just jealous. For men, James Bond represents a true man that has since faded to make way for a lesser breed.

Playboy is another point of contention between the battle of the sexes. The female editor of the Argonaut and I are supposed to do a head-to-head commentary about this fine publication since she thinks Playboy is a disgusting and morally reprehensible piece of garbage. Obviously she hasn't seen Hustler or perhaps Jugs.

In talking about Playboy, I'm going to avoid the cliché and admit whole-heartedly that I look

Clintons better white water rafters than cover-up artists

It seems no one knows what really went on with the Whitewater scandal, not even the President, who doesn't seem to remember much of anything lately. So I did some extensive investigating of my own to get to the heart of what turns out to have been an extensive cover-up.

I flew to Arkansas over spring break using impressive Argonaut travel funds appropriated by the ASUI Senate for such extensive research and investigative reporting and managed to learn that "Whitewater" refers to Whitewater Development Corp., a small company created to develop Arkansas tourism beyond the standard 3-hour chicken processing plant tours, which, in 1978, had supported nearly 69 percent of Arkansas's tourism industry.

The Clintons joined their longtime ping-pong partners, James and Susan McDougal, in investing in the corporation. McDougal then bought Madison Guaranty, a small S & L, at which Whitewater kept a small purchase expense account.

Coming Up For Air Chris Miller

Whitewater became a service oriented rafting outfit that was intended to provide the thrill of white water rafting on par with Grand Canyon excursions, complete with picnic lunches with fried chicken and Hillary cookies, all on the White River in Northern Arkansas. The corporation got off to a rocky start after three separate incidences involving senior citizens from Florida, a mallard and a pet crocodile that all got into a little spat over a small portion of Class IV riffles below a hydroelectric dam.

The duck drowned and a senior citizen was charged with indecent exposure.

Letters to the Editor

Men need their own center

I read the article on the Women's Center being dropped and I have done a lot of thinking on the issue lately. First, the Women's Center "provides a warm, comfortable place where people can explore what it means to be women and men in a changing world."

I think they threw in the "men" in that statement without just cause. I know a lot of men on this campus and I don't know one who has been in the Women's Center. Heck, the name will keep any self-respecting farm boy out of there. I feel uncomfortable walking through a women's clothing store. I have to state repeatedly the red teddy is for my girlfriend, not for me. What I'm saying is that it is a women's center, and they have the need for it, but don't try to rationalize having it by saying that men go there too.

Men need their own center. Something like an auto shop with satellite TV, recliners and remote controls, lots of power tools to play with to find our inner self. VCR tapes of all the good shows, past monumental football games, super bowls, the USC-UCLA game about three years ago with Todd Marinovich's best performance of his career. High school championship games, and for those of you men of legal age, who can drink responsibly, plenty of Lucky Lager to help you remember all those old commercials you like to sing along with.

I think the Men's Center should become a reality. Our budget would be much less than the Women's Center. Think about it, one old guy in overalls who could show all the young bucks how all the machinery worked, a bartender/counselor who could pour the Lucky Lager (we could get a license and be a self-supporting organization). He could console the poor guys who gave up their girlfriends for a better cause (4th and inches) and run the remote for the main TV/satellite. Two full time employees and the initial equipment/building cost is all it would take. That could be minimal — most men would be able to feel more "into" the Men's Center if they could help build it. Think of the services it could offer: lists of psycho women to stay away from (much like the potential rapist lists), lists of women who aren't psycho and like to have fun and respect a good Ingersol-Rand 1/2-inch drive air wrench.

This letter may be vaguely humorous, but I really think that women need the Women's Center and men need something themselves.

—Al Middleton

Who will Whiting fight next?

I read with interest the article written by J. Richard Rock, titled, "Women's Center May Be Victim." I could not believe the actions ASUI Lobbyist Daniel Whiting was trying to take.

Mr. Whiting states the Women's Center's activities are "ideological in nature and politically motivated." I find that ironic because wasn't Mr. Whiting supporting his own ideologies by trying to have the Women's Center funding removed, or am I to guess that Mr. Whiting took a poll and gathered opinion across the whole campus before making his remarks to the Joint Finance Appropriations Committee?

The article includes a brief paragraph on the fact the Women's Center "also provides services such as lunch programs, presentations" It does not go into detail that these programs are thought provoking and span a wide variety of topics; from nutrition to experiences of international women in the United States.

The Women's Center allows male and female students, staff and faculty to sit down at their noon-time programs and discuss different issues. The center offers a warm place to chat and take a break from classes.

The Center's employees also do workshops and training sessions for living groups and organizations on issues affecting college campuses everywhere; date rape, harassment and other topics. What a great service!

Mr. Whiting says he did not use student time to lobby against funding for the Women's Center. Does this mean he lobbied legislators on JFAC on Saturdays and Sundays, and after 5 p.m., Monday-Friday?

I am so happy to hear that Mr. Whiting is not going to pursue the issue any further while he is the ASUI Lobbyist — considering the damage is already done and the vote taken. How noble of him.

I just have two questions: 1) What program on campus will he fight against next, and 2) When is he going to resign as the ASUI Lobbyist?

—Amtul Sheikh

Whiting needs to resign

This has gone on far enough. Two years ago, when the GLBA was first getting started at UI, a young man — then an ASUI Senator — began poking around and harassing the staff at the Women's Center.

He believed since he and several others of his acquaintance disagreed with the support the Women's Center was giving the newly-formed support group — in addition to his general problem with the Women's Center operations as a whole — that the Women's Center was grossly overstepping its bounds and that it should be removed from campus. This was what was stated and evidently is what he has made his life's work. This man is Daniel Whiting.

In other states, there are any number of community based organizations to assist the needy, the abused and the disenfranchised. Specifically in urban areas, where most universities are located, these programs and opportunities are readily available.

If students are unable to access needed resources on campus, there are outlets in the community. In Moscow, this is just not the case. We do have several very fine community service organizations which do exist, but it is not nearly enough to address the problems that occur.

The Women's Center provides many resources that are otherwise not available to those who it serves. Idaho pays the salaries for three staff members, two full time and one part time, who provide educational programming — a wonderful service, since the last time I checked we were a university that exists to promote the FREE EXCHANGE OF IDEAS — outreach, advocacy and referral services.

Another service they provide is a lounge area for men and women to gather and interact in an informal manner. Are these unreasonable things? They also allow other groups to use their lounge area as a meeting space. Is this overstepping their bounds?

More to the point, Daniel Whiting was appointed as the ASUI Lobbyist in Boise. His job is to represent the interests of the students to the legislature. He has taken it upon himself to lobby for the removal of funding for the Women's Center instead.

This effort was unsuccessful, but the damage has been done. In typical misogynist/homophobic fashion, Whiting has turned a successful, valid, necessary program into a target for the "conservatively correct."

What are you afraid of, Dan? That women might actually grow and learn and through Women's Center outreach programs? That people in need of help might get it? Are you so threatened by these people that rather than approaching the situation calmly and rationally, you have to resort to back room politicking to achieve your selfish ends?

Whiting has stated he was acting on his own and did not use any ASUI funds for his personal vendetta. How then, Daniel, did you travel to Boise in the first place? Who is paying for you to stay there? Are you not, by your very presence in the capitol, serving as an example and a representative of ALL of the students of UI? I believe that is what we are paying you for.

Every time you step out of your living situation, you are serving as an example of all UI students. If we should have the right to withhold our student fees from those activities with which we disagree, what about withholding our student fees from the ASUI?

Barring that, perhaps it would be reasonable to request that our funds be used in a more responsible manner, to support those who will represent us responsibly in all their dealings with the legislature while they are on our payroll.

It seems Whiting is incapable of this. Therefore, as one of his employers, I would like to request his resignation and direct the ASUI President to find another lobbyist.

Letters to the Editor

Jesus born Jew, died Jew

Just a few comments on Lyle E. Cooper's effusions of March 4. Jesus of Nazareth was born a Jew, he lived a Jew and he died a Jew. As a Jew, he never claimed to be God: That would be blasphemy. He never claimed to be part of a trinity: that would be absurdity. The word "spirit" in the Bible simply means "breath" or "wind." It does not mean "soul," which was a later theological idea borrowed from the Persian religion. In the Old Testament religion there was no resurrection, no hell and the only way to get to heaven was while you were still alive. If Mr. Lyle would read his Bible carefully, he will find that Paul and John did not believe in the virgin birth theory. If Jesus was a descendent of David through Joseph (Matthew and Luke), then Joseph was his father. In later centuries, after the Christian religion had been invented and established, some Jews made up the story that Jesus was the illegitimate son of a Roman soldier. It is this story

Mohammed denied in the Qur'an 4:156, which Lyle cited as evidence for the virgin birth myth. The gospels are not eyewitness accounts. They were written in Greek, not in the Aramaic language Jesus spoke. They were written several generations after the events they allege to have occurred. And the names of the gospels do not appear on the earliest manuscripts; these were also invented later by the Christian church. If you read the first four verses of the gospel ascribed to Luke, you will see there were various gospels floating around in those days and the writer didn't think too highly of them. He certainly didn't claim them to be divine and inerrant. Mr. Abdul is correct when he states the Bible has many errors and contradictions. This has been known to both Christians and Jews for centuries. And the monthly journal, Biblical Errancy, began publication in Jan. 1983 and is still going strong. It also prints letters from the opposition — how many Christians magazines do that? It was the Christian church that made a god out of the Jew, Jesus. This was a practice common at that time. All the Roman emperors, beginning with Julius Caesar, were also gods. And they were all born of virgins, too! There are eyewitness accounts of their souls rising to heaven from the funeral pyre. Mr. Lyle ends his letter with the claim Jesus created heaven. I always thought God did — read the first verse of the first book in the Bible: Genesis 1:1.

House sanctions confused

Mr. Andrew, I am writing this letter so that you are able to sleep at night. I have just finished reading your column in the Argonaut and have noticed that you are very confused on the issue and also very unversed on the facts. I have also noticed you have been unsuccessful at remedying either of these problems. I will handle this one issue at a time, first by justifying the actions of the IFC Judicial board. This may seem pointless to someone who was involved with the hearings concerning the Phi Kappa Tau fraternity. However, for those of you who were not involved, I think you deserve to know how J-Board rationalizes its decisions. J-Board is working to try to remedy problems on your campus. I will try to make this as simple as possible for those of you who are unaware of the different sanctions that were placed on all three fraternities. You seem most concerned that the IFC J-Board did not take the alcohol events away from the Phi Taus, instead they asked that they have a specific amount of dry functions. Let me explain the rationale behind this, it's very simple. J-Board felt that punitive actions were not the way to go with these matters any longer. They obviously had not worked in the past, so why not try something different, something EDUCATIONAL? Instead of taking them away from the problem, why not let them discover the ability to have fun without alcohol, thus the alcohol-free events. Also, let them learn to manage alcohol, don't take it away, thus the alumni monitored events. Second, two comments you made led me to believe you are unversed in the facts. I will help you sort out these inconsistencies. First, "distilled liquor — rather than beer or wine — was served. This rule had not been adopted until after the incident involving Regena Coghlan." You are drastically mistaken, take a look at either the Beta Theta Pi or the SAE National Alcohol Policy. Second, "Nothing has been done to correct the issue itself." If you ask any Greek member they will help you out with this one. As a matter of fact, I would be willing to bet that many of them would be insulted. If you don't have the resources to ask a fellow fraternity member, call me and I'll bring you a copy of the new alcohol policy and the guidelines to SEMco. One of the things you point out, Mr. Andrew, is the fact your fraternity was placed on so many sanctions that "it would be impossible to list all of the sanctions and everything else that has happened to our house." It seems as though you are a little bitter about this. I must admit your fraternity was given many sanctions, but I'm sure we could list them easily in the column provided for your article. —Russell Branham Former IFC J-Board Chair Delta Tau Delta

UNFORTUNATELY, THIS IS WHERE PEOPLE ARE PUTTING TOO MANY RETIREMENT DOLLARS.

Every year, a lot of people make a huge mistake on their taxes. They don't take advantage of tax deferral and wind up sending Uncle Sam money they could be saving for retirement. Fortunately, that's a mistake you can easily avoid with TIAA-CREF SRAs. SRAs not only ease your current tax-bite, they offer a remarkably easy way to build retirement income—especially for the "extras" that your regular pension and Social Security benefits may not cover. Because your contributions are made in before-tax dollars, you pay less taxes now. And since all earnings on your SRA are tax-deferred as well, the money you don't send to Washington works even harder for you. Down the road, that can make a dramatic difference in your quality of life. What else makes SRAs so special? A range of allocation choices—from the guaranteed security of TIAA to the diversified investment accounts of CREF's variable annuity—all backed by the nation's number one retirement system. Why write off the chance for a more rewarding retirement? Call today and learn more about how TIAA-CREF SRAs can help you enjoy many happy returns.

Benefit now from tax deferral. Call our SRA hotline 1 800-842-2733, ext. 8016.

Ensuring the future for those who shape it.™

CREF certificates are distributed by TIAA-CREF Individual and Institutional Services. For more complete information, including charges and expenses, call 1 800-842-2733, ext. 8016 for a prospectus. Read the prospectus carefully before you invest or send money.

Unfortunately, the Clintons lost $69,000 in 1980 when they realized the White River could not handle extensive rafting trips due to a lack of rain in the Midwest that dried the river and fried chicken with equal tenacity. Two-hour portages around dams also proved difficult for rafters, which is where Hillary comes in.

She defended the corporation against several lawsuits alleging twisted ankles and denture-crushing cookies. Whitewater won all cases, though some mystery remains regarding funds slipped into the Clinton campaign treasury behind the smoke screen of the possibly contrived duck incident.

The big question is whether Clinton or his wife tried to keep Madison afloat to help their friend, James McDougal, who contributed to campaign funds.

In reality, Madison Shanty was simply a small corrugated metal shed that held rafting supplies. Here's where it gets juicy. Seeing the imminent collapse of the rafting corporation, Clinton pressured David Hale, a municipal judge appointed by Clinton, into accepting a Small Business Administration loan by hinting at taking back a 16-person rubber raft with a hot-tub in the center and small juice bar he had loaned to him.

In rage, Hale promptly accused Clinton of forcing him to obtain a $300,000 government-backed loan that was slipped into Clinton campaign fund in small bills, mostly fives and tens.

The money really was the price of the rubber raft and three kayaking paddles, which was sold in secret to Hale behind Clinton's back by Hillary, who needed the money to invest in the commodities market, after she was advised by a lawyer-fiend for Tyson Foods Inc., of Springdale, Ark., the largest poultry producer

Whitewater won all cases, though some mystery remains regarding funds slipped into the Clinton campaign treasury behind the smoke screen of the possibly contrived duck incident.

Hillary lost big, making only $100,000 dollars, and with the loss of the 16-person raft, Whitewater sank, pulling Madison down with it.

Now, the U.S. Treasury must pay nearly $50 million to satisfy claims of insured rafters who lost money when their Madison-stored boats collapsed. Divers failed to recover any money, though children in June frequently snorkel and find spare change.

Knowing this, the White House tried to cover up the incident fearing public embarrassment on the level of "didn't inhale," or worse yet, chicken and misspelled raft jokes about a river that runs muddy-brown nine months out of the year.

Unfortunately, the Clintons are better white water rafters than damage-control artists, and the cover up is likely to drown the flailing administration in backwater rumors and unfounded suspicion of sour chicken and flat water.

at the pictures. Every guy who ever felt raging hormones (read: every man) has managed to stumble onto the Playmate of the Month.

But it honestly is a good magazine. The interviews with everyone from Yasser Arafat to Michael Jordan are all top-notch and world famous. The fiction has seen some of the finest writers to walk — from John Updike to Stephen King. Even my mom admits to reading a couple articles despite finding the pictures really dumb.

When any girl begins hazing me about my perverted sexual deviance of liking beautiful women, I remind them of the last Danielle Steel or Judith Krantz novel sitting half-read on the coffee table. Call me uneducated, but I find it hard to believe that the book, Hollywood Husbands offers an academic discussion of the socio-economic status of married males in the Los Angeles area.

From my observation, many girls like a little bit of trash in their life, but they're not as likely as males to go into a hidden corner of a video store to find it.

Speaking of video stores, going into one to rent a movie with a your significant other can quickly become an endurance test that may very well end the date before it even begins. The girl goes into the video store with high hopes of renting a warm and fuzzy comedy only to see her boyfriend gleefully approach her with the latest Steven Segal movie.

Fortunately, there are plenty of activities both males and females can enjoy with relative peace — like seeing who can drink more at Blue Monday or who can insult one another better. I think one humor columnist summed it up neatly: "Men and women are very equal ... but the wife would never leave the baby on top of the car."

International flags precede week

Bagpipes and flags lead into "Family of Nations" International Week will kick off Monday, April 4, at 11:45 a.m.

The International Week Flag Processional will begin at the UI Student Union Building Ballroom and proceed to the Administration Building, where President Elisabeth Zinser will offer a greeting speech.

Following Zinser's comments, the processional will move down Hello Walk on the Administration Building lawn before returning to the SUB.

Leading the processional will be UI faculty members Ken Gordon and Sam Scripter, both on bagpipes.

The recently dedicated International flags will follow, as well as students from West Park Elementary School.

All are welcome to join this, and other events scheduled for the UI Family of Nations International Week, April 4-10.

For information, call the ASUI programs office at 885-6951.

'Mother' breaks rules of mothers

"You can do everything your mother told you not to do," according to Kelsey Hartman.

Hartman is the producer of the performance art group We're Not Your Mother.

They have been practicing their talents for some time and now they are ready to take the stage in rebellion of a line uttered by almost every mother, "Wash your hands and don't touch that."

This week's shows include 14 different performances all written and performed by UI students. Their first performance is set for Friday and Saturday night at 10 p.m.

Along with the stage performance in the Collette Theatre will be an art gallery showing in the U-Hut. The group is planning to perform at least once a semester.

The performance and the showing are free to everyone. The house will open at 9:30 p.m.

For more information contact Hartman at the Theatre Dept.

Symposium covers water rights

Dave Lewis
Staff Writer

The 1994 William Edgar Borah Outlawry of War Foundation's program "Water and International Conflict" will begin at 7 p.m. in the Administration Auditorium Wednesday.

Also called the Borah Symposium, the program endeavors to continue the work of Idaho Senator William E. Borah.

Water is very important politically in much of the world. The speakers at the Borah Symposium will give their listeners a comprehensive look at the problems associated with water, water rights and some of the possible solutions to those problems.

Speaking at this symposium are Dr. Thomas Naff, Dr. Barbara Sundberg and Jacques R. Baudot. Douglas Grant will serve as moderator.

Naff is Professor of Asian and Middle Eastern Studies at the University of Pennsylvania. He earned doctorates from the School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London and the University of California at Berkeley.

Naff has taught and published on a wide range of Middle Eastern subjects covering the period from the advent of Islam to the current crisis. He was Director of the University of Pennsylvania Middle East Center and founder and Director of the Middle East Research Institute. He is also the founder of International Tele-Education (Intel-Ed). Since 1984, he has directed international research projects on Middle East water issues.

Sundberg is a Professor of Political Science at St. Anselm College in Manchester, N.H. She received her doctorate from Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy at Tufts University. She has been a Fulbright Scholar and an International affairs officer with the United Nations.

Sundberg has acted as special advisor and consultant to the United Nations International Negotiating Committee on Global Warming. Her special interests include comparative politics of the Third World with a focus on the Middle East and the environment.

Baudot is United Nations Coordinator of the World Summit for Social Development. His first degree in humanities was from the University of Dijon in France.

He studied economics and public law at the Institute of Political Studies in Paris. His United Nations career began in 1969 in Geneva and continued after a move to New York, where he has been stationed since 1974.

Baudot has worked in the Development Analysis Branch of the International Economic and Social Affairs Department and the Office of Program Planning, Budget and Finance. He has a quarter of a century experience in international conflict resolution.

Grant is Professor of Law at UI. He received a UI Outstanding Faculty Award in 1985 and Phi Kappa Phi Distinguished Faculty Award in 1990.

Grant is the author of many articles on water law and a seven volume treatise entitled Water and Water Rights published in 1991.

Senator Borah, who served in the United States Senate from 1907 until his death in 1940, worked tirelessly toward the goal of world peace. In 1923, Sen. Borah introduced legislation designed to outlaw war and to create a "judicial substitute for war." Toward that end, in 1928 the United States Senate voted to ratify the Pact of Paris, a treaty with Japan and Germany among others, promising to prevent war by judicial means. However, no enforcement provisions were included, so the Pact of Paris was too idealistic to be applied. Nevertheless, Sen. Borah was undaunted and continued to advocate the abolition of war.

In 1929, Salmon O. Levinson established the William Edgar Borah Outlawry of War Foundation at UI to honor and continue the work of Sen. Borah. Over the years, many well known people have addressed the symposium including the late Sen. Frank Church, Congressman Les Aspin, Justice Thurgood Marshall and UI alumnus Philip Habib among others.

The public is encouraged to attend. No admission will be charged.

BLUBERRIES AND CREAM

The Prichard Art Gallery in downtown Moscow hosts art from four Idaho artists. The works of Thia Konig, Diane Ronayne, Camille Thom and Olaf Moller will be displayed at the Prichard through March 27. The next Prichard showing will be the poster designs for the Moscow Renaissance Fair.

Women fight ultimate battle of equality

Tristan Trotter
Staff Writer

March — In like a lion? Make that LIONESS. March is Women's History Month, and last Tuesday, International Women's Day, a local pioneer in the struggle for women's equality shared her story with the Brown Bag Lunch program audience at the UI Women's Center.

Elna Grahn, of Moscow, served on the pilot team of women who entered the Women's Auxiliary Army Corps, the first female corp in that branch of the armed forces.

On May 14, 1942, the army passed a bill establishing the WAAC — it was a victory in the fight for women's rights in the army that began in the early 1900's with WWI. Until May 14, the only official roles women played in the army were in privately contracted clerical positions.

Unofficially, however, women took part in the war effort on the home front. Grahn said as a child she remembers her parlor being filled with local women gathered to make up care packages for the men overseas. But the effort was disorganized, and lacked an effective outlet. That's when negotiation for an official women's corps began.

In the 1930's, when WWII started in Europe, an actual bill entered the legislative process. Ten years passed before the proposal was taken seriously. With the combined efforts of some very effective women and some forward-thinking men, plus Pearl Harbor's effect in 1941, the legislation passed and the WAAC took shape.

One of the major proponents of the bill, General Marshall told her, "... of the one hundred bills I've pushed through, this one was harder to push than all the rest of them combined."

In July, 1942, Grahn was sworn into the corps, and in the same month she reported with her class for duty.

The WAAC was, by definition, auxiliary — supplementary — so the women did not receive the insurance and benefits granted to official men's corps. Grahn recalled an incident in December of 1942, when a ship carrying five Wacs sank, en route to Africa.

Because the women did not receive benefits, the army would not compensate them for the loss of property. In the end, General Marshall dipped into his own pocket to cover losses. Fortunately, the army agreed to drop the second 'A' in WAAC a year after the corps' formation and women were granted official status and all of the insurance therein.

Grahn's original position, as of December 1942, was with the Pentagon in the schools development program. But her assignment was interrupted by orders for her to act as "liaison officer" for a special experiment involving the training of women for combat

UNO

World organization celebrates 50 years

In 1945, right after the Second World War, a group of countries joined together with the goal of creating an organization to promote understanding among nations, to work for peace and help prevent the type of disasters generated by the war. That day the United Nations Organization was born.

Next year marks the 50th anniversary of the UNO. We will celebrate the survival of this organization, in a world that seems to walk away from equity, fairness and peace. We must celebrate the existence of the UNO because it represents the hopes for a better understanding among nations and a sustainable, monitored peace worldwide.

Although the UN is not free of mistakes, manipulation and deception, it has been a forum through which the world has learned about the sufferings and successes of many countries. This situation has permitted the evolution of the role of the UN in world issues through time from a mere discussion role to a direct participation in solving crises and conflicts and leading peace negotiations.

We are aware of the limitations of the UN. For instance, the world powers have the right to veto any resolution that is not convenient for their interests because they provide a big part of the funding. In 50 years, we have seen how the UN has been manipulated to serve particular interests and not those of the affected parties. Another limitation arises in the invitation policy. In order to become involved in a conflict the UN must be invited into the country by the government.

There are several similar situations that limit the role of the UN. Perhaps the most important limitation faced by the UN, however, is the will of all the countries to work together in peace.

We can do a quick comparison between the situation in the world 50 years ago and the situation now. What has changed? Racism, discrimination, poverty, hunger and therefore wars, are still the main topics in our everyday life. These issues do not go away. It does not matter where you live or where you come from, there are only a few places in the planet where you can hide from some of these problems. There is not one place where you can be free of all of them.

All the technological evolution we have seen in 50 years has not provided the answers for the basic problems in the world. Some of us can say that we live in a more sophisticated society, but are we more civilized than 50 years ago? Until now, a certain balance in military power of some countries have kept us safe from another global confrontation.

We lived a "cold war" that was close "hot" on several occasions. The world stayed away from a global disaster because of threats of annihilation, not because of reason and understanding.

A new world order is being decided these days. Governments, especially the world powers, are making crucial decisions. Are they going to come out with a new excuse to create new "enemies"? What will be the role of the UN in a new world order? Some experts have suggested the UN will have a role of more direct involvement, of international law enforcer. Some others think its role will remain the same. We must make sure we work together for a long lasting peace on the planet. Perhaps the next 50 years is the time to put our hearts into accepting and respecting our differences and building on our similarities.

We all live together in the same planet — nobody is moving elsewhere — we might as well make the best of it. Hate, inequality, discrimination, torture, racism, poverty, hunger and war are global threats we cannot ignore — the next time we look around, they may be at our door. Happy birthday UN, and good luck to the world!

Four-day celebration honors women in history

Tristan Trotter
Staff Writer

Women's History Month doesn't end until March 31, and neither do the events which celebrate it. In Lewiston, on the Lewis Clark State College campus, "I change myself, I change the world" is the flagship phrase for this month's series of scheduled lectures and activities.

Yesterday, a presentation called "Hostile Hallways: Sexual Harassment in American Schools" headed up the week's events. Louis Regelin, president of the American Association of University Women in Idaho presented the results of a 1993 AAUW student poll on the sexual harassment issue and Lori Gaskill, affirmative action officer at LCSC, offered information on how to stop harassment in communities.

The celebration continues today, with social science adjunct faculty member Carole Smolinski's review of Catherine Mackinnon's Only Words. The talk will take place at noon, in Room 105 of the LCSC Library.

Later this evening at 7 p.m., in Room 100 of Merriweather Lewis Hall, a presentation called "Have We Come a Long Way, Baby?" will be sponsored by Women in Communication.

The event will include a showing of the video "Still Killing Us Softly" and a discussion afterwards.

Closing the four-day celebration of women and women's issues will be Washington 3rd Legislative District Representative Lisa Brown. She will discuss "Economic Empowerment of Women," at 7 p.m. in the Clearwater Room. Brown has given priority in her legislative career to child care, welfare reform, tax reform and transportation. Elected in 1992, Brown has served as vice-chair of the House of Transportation Committee, is a member of the Human Services and Revenue Committees and is an Associate Professor of Economics at Eastern Washington University in Cheney, Wash.

Brown's discussion, co-sponsored by the American Association of Businesswomen, will be followed by a reception and music by Ner Rojas.

Child care will be available during the evening presentations in the Stutler-Toth Room on the main floor of the College Union Building.

Flying abroad proves stressful

Mike Edwards
Contributing Writer

Spending time in Europe can be great, but it is not always fun getting to one's destination.

Spending a semester in Graz, Austria, I decided that the easiest and most economical way to get there was via Frankfurt, Germany.

I began my journey in Post Falls, Idaho, where my parents live and I grew up. Driving home from Moscow, I transferred my possessions to my sister's basement in Coeur d'Alene and left half my wardrobe at home.

The rest of my belongings went with me in one suitcase and two large duffel bags. These bags were to be my closest companions on the trip from Frankfurt to Graz.

My parents drove me to the airport on Sunday morning. After a fond farewell and a lecture about what to do when I returned from playing in Europe, I said goodbye and boarded a small plane to Seattle. I waited four hours in Seattle; four of the most boring hours I have spent in my life.

The plane to Vancouver, B.C., was one of the most fragile commuter jets I have ever flown on. Each row had only three seats and a narrow aisle divided the plane where a fourth seat should have been. I would have feared for my life had the commute not been a short 45 minutes.

Vancouver's airport, although more run down than Sea-Tac, is much more international than airports in the states. Perhaps the omni-presence of French culture in Canada gives it an air de mystique.

I felt like a foreigner — I even had trouble getting into the country because I didn't know I had to fill out a customs declaration. I, being an Idahoan, always drive to Canada and never have to go through the rigors of "international" travel.

Waiting at the Lufthansa gate in the airport was also an experience. Everyone around me seemed to speak German and I wondered whether any non-German speakers were traveling to Frankfurt. I felt as if I were in an embassy, a little sea of "Germanness" amidst a sea of English and French.

The most suspenseful portion of my trip lay in the one and a half hours I remained at the Lufthansa gate, anxiously waiting to board my first truly international flight.

Listening to German only whet my appetite, and that hour and a half was one of the loneliness moments I ever experienced. Friends and family in Idaho were far behind me, yet I was not quite a part of the new world I would be entering (I guess "old world" would be more appropriate).

The flight was nice and long at the same time. I enjoyed the free beer and mineral water. If you look at it from another perspective, I paid $1300 for the beer and got a complimentary flight (Seattle-Frankfurt costs about $550, and Seattle-Frankfurt-Shanghai-Moscow-Seattle costs $1300).

Meeting new and interesting people stands as one of greatest joys a traveler can have. I met several interesting people in the air and on the ground in Germany. Rita and Ludwig Bauer of Hannover sat next to me for the duration of the flight.

Returning from a two-week trip to "Hawaii," the two told me of their journey and of their life in Hannover. I spoke to them in a mixture of German and English, which was a great experience after speaking English for 23 years.

I have never seen anyone headbang to classical music, but Ludwig, a fan of the opera, somehow managed. I felt subdued. By the end of the trip Rita and I were ready to strangle a three-year-old brat who whined and screamed the entire flight and fell asleep during the final thirty minutes.

I also enjoyed talking to a Hungarian lady named Rosa, who

Infection may be deadly

Chlamydia has not received the media coverage AIDS and herpes have, so many people are not aware of this serious sexually transmitted infection. Called the silent infection, chlamydia often has no symptoms. However, unlike AIDS or herpes, chlamydia can be eliminated by treatment with antibiotics.

Chlamydia is an epidemic among reproductive-age adults in the United States. More than three million cases occur annually. The highest rate of incidence is among 19- to 25-year-olds.

In the Moscow-Lewiston-Clarkston area, the incidence of chlamydia is estimated at 10 to 20 percent. The University of Idaho Student Health Center reports that one in 10 students tested for chlamydia have the infection, often without symptoms.

Chlamydia affects both men and women, regardless of sexual orientation, and is easily spread through sexual contact. Though rarely fatal among adults, complications are serious. Complications include sterility or infertility in women and men, an arthritis syndrome and ectopic or tubal pregnancy in women. One in seven American women between 20 and 40 years of age suffer from pelvic inflammatory disease (PID), often the result of chlamydia. A pregnant woman may pass chlamydia to her infant during childbirth. This can cause serious eye infections or pneumonia to the infant.

Symptoms of chlamydia they range from mild to serious. Men infected with chlamydia may experience painful urination, a watery discharge from the penis or a dull aching or swelling of the testicles. Symptoms in women may include vaginal discharge, more painful or heavier menstruation, bleeding between periods, lower abdominal pain or painful urination. The rectal area of men or women may become irritated and bleed.

Without symptoms, chlamydia may go undetected for 10 to 15 years. Lab tests are needed to identify chlamydia. Nurse practitioners and physicians are not always able to detect an infection during an exam. Since chlamydia testing is not routine, one must request a chlamydia test. An infection can be detected 7 to 21 days after exposure.

If a lab test is positive for chlamydia, tests for other sexually transmitted diseases are recommended. One study showed that more than 30 percent of men infected with chlamydia also had a situations.

In January, the group of women chosen for the project entered an intensive training program in the "range" department: they were not allowed to handle guns or ammunition, but were instructed in the tracking of enemy planes. In six weeks, the commanding general conducted an inspection. He pulled out a stop watch and timed the women on a tracking mission.

The Wacs matched the best times achieved by past men's corp. The skeptical general could not believe his stop watch. He wanted proof the women had accomplished the time legitimately. Upon his order, the corps repeated the mission with another plane. The times proved true again.

Experiments proved consistently, in tasks requiring finesse and patience, the women performed better. They had better intuition of the desired target than men. Unfortunately, attitudes similar to the inspecting general's were widespread.

Grahn related when she was being oriented for the Pentagon job by one of her commanding generals, he informed her she would need a rudimentary understanding of math — he was unaware Grahn already had a background (in fact, a degree) in mathematics. The officer launched into a math lesson.

"He drew a three-sided figure and said, 'Okay — any three-sided figure is called a triangle.'" Grahn was biting her tongue. "We mostly deal in right triangles. Did you know that if you square the measurements of two sides of a right triangle, the result equals two times one side, times the other side?"

After a few more questions, she was unable to hold back. "Oh," she said, "you mean the Theorem of Pythagoras?" and then, "Will it be enough to know the laws of sines, cosines and tangents?" The general was aghast. A witness to the incident later told her when she'd left, he laughed and said to the general, "Hell, Mahoney — she's forgotten more math than you ever knew!"

When Grahn's class entered command and staff school, there were nine Wacs in a class of 220 men. When the grades were totaled, Grahn was in the top third; two of her fellow Wac classmates also made an impressive showing. Grahn said, chuckling, "After that, they stopped posting grades."

Grahn extended credit to the open-minded male officers who contributed to the WAC cause, admitting "the tone set at the top is the determining factor."

Elna Grahn became commander of 1900 Wacs. She was the first woman to serve on a general court martial. She was given command of a station called Southpost, where she made major changes and improvements — unafraid of the dangers in speaking too loud against the establishment. After 15 years of taping and transcribing her memories, Grahn's story is now available in her book In the Company of Wacs.

Grahn is a very real example of a woman who worked hard for the status she and the rest of the WAC finally received. She gained confidence from supporting commanding officers along the way and believes that "a feeling of confidence" is what allows one to take action, to reach beyond pre-existing standards and forge new territory in women's rights.

Conditions have obviously not made a complete turnabout to equality. Grahn sees the women in combat issue as proof that status quo and gender bias still keep a tight reign on progress. "To me," she said, "it all comes down to the job you can do. If (women) are better at a job, they should be doing it ... they should not be immune." Physical capacity, she says, should be the only limitation — just as it is for men.

Poster chosen, royalty sought

Just around the corner: that's where the 1994 Moscow Renaissance Fair is waiting. Already, plans are in the making and promotion is on the rise for the two-day celebration of spring.

Katie Scott, 8, a second grader at West Park Elementary, created this year's winning poster. Scott, who would someday like to teach art, submitted a colorful illustration of spring: flowers, trees, balloons and birds were among her springtime representations. It was chosen from among sixty other entries submitted by children ages 5 through 12. Scott will receive a $50 U.S. Savings Bond for her design.

Other winners included Kaiyu Ward, 5, Moscow; Bunny Zhang, 6, Moscow; Sarah Jokendall, 7, Moscow; Jamie Patten, 8, Moscow; Kristin Guy and Rachel Dugger, 9, Moscow; Katie Button, 10, Moscow; Michael Papillon and Adriane Munn, 11, Moscow; and Lindsay Palmer, 12, Moscow. Jackie Norris, an 11-year-old from Pullman, is the artist behind the 1994 fair program cover.

A certificate for free ice cream, a Moscow Renaissance Fair button and a free balloon at the fair all go to each participant.

Choosing winners was difficult, according to Lisa Cochran-Krane, fair president, "... because all of the posters together make up what the fair is all about — a celebration of spring."

Something else to keep in mind: nominations are now being taken for this year's Renaissance Fair king and queen. The rules are different, however. Nominees must be 13 to 18-years-old and have a record of "selfless service to their communities," specifies Cochran-Krane. These records should include community service and volunteerism: characteristics which "epitomize the spirit of the fair."

"This signifies the beginning of the fair's second 20 years," says Cochran-Krane, "and we think there is no better way to celebrate that than through the youth of our community."

The Renaissance Fair king and queen mingle with fairgoers throughout the two days' activities, fully costumed and receive the benefit of a royal view of the entertainment from special thrones of honor.

Please send brief letters of nomination to P.O. Box 8848, Moscow, Idaho, 83843 by April 1. For more information regarding nominees for king and queen, call (208) 882-8345.

The 1994 Moscow Renaissance Fair will be held April 30-May 1, at East City Park in Moscow. The fair is a collage of foods and hand-crafted wares on sale by non-profit organizations, a children's activity area and free, high quality entertainment.

Francisco and Thomas made my journey in Frankfurt memorable. After I retrieved my luggage from the baggage claim, changed dollars into DM and bought an all-day rail pass in Frankfurt, I took an elevator to the subway in the airport. Francisco, a Venezuelan who lives in Frankfurt, helped me pack my 100-pound luggage to the Hauptbahnhof, the main train station.

When we climbed out of the train onto the platform at the station, Francisco happened to meet his good friend Thomas. Both were streetwise and dressed as if they were ready for jungle warfare. Having heard stories of tourists being robbed by "Samaritans," I could not help but be suspicious of my new-found friends.

It was quite a coincidence that both found each other at that moment. My fears heightened when Thomas said that the baggage check-in area of the station was "in a bad area of Frankfurt" where "a lot of people get robbed."

Fortunately, both were very nice people, and they helped me check my baggage into the station security area. Then they showed me some of the nice areas of Frankfurt, disappearing after I gathered my faculties.

I never saw them again. Yes, meeting people can be a fulfilling aspect of a journey abroad.

gonorrhoea infection.

Chlamydia is an obligatory intracellular parasite. In the body, it acts like bacteria and can be treated and eliminated with common antibiotics. Because natural immunity does not develop after a chlamydia infection, one can become infected repeatedly with each new exposure. When one member of a couple is infected, both partners should be treated. Many practitioners recommend a repeat chlamydia test after antibiotic treatment to be sure the treatment was successful.

Tests and treatment for chlamydia are available at the Student Health Center and at public and private clinics and can help reduce the risk of this silent infection. Like most sexually transmitted infections, condoms and other barrier methods of contraception help prevent the transmission and reduce the spread of chlamydia.

Lightfoot, seniors leave their mark

The 1993-94 senior class of the Idaho Vandal basketball team will be sorely missed. The seniors include: guard Jeremy Brandt, forwards Orlando Lightfoot, Dan Serkin and Deon Watson, and center Frank Waters.

Watson became the all-time leading rebounder in Vandal history with 877, almost 100 more than the second-place Dwight Morrison. He also tied former Vandal Kelvin Smith as the leading shot blocker at Idaho with 133. Watson was also recently selected to the All-Big Sky Conference first team.

Waters was perhaps one of the best post defenders in the Big Sky this season and both Brandt and Serkin repeatedly gave the Vandals solid minutes off the bench.

Lightfoot became one of the more decorative players in Big Sky history.

1993-94 Highlights:

- 1994 Big Sky Outstanding Player
- First Team All-Big Sky Selection
- Big Sky scoring champ (25.4 ppg)
- Recorded a school-record 50 points vs. Gonzaga
- Eight games with 30 or more points
- Scored in double figures in all but one game
- Named Big Sky Player of the Week three times

Career Highlights:

- All-time leading scorer in Big Sky with 2,102 points
- Achieved eight UI scoring records
- Big Sky Most Outstanding Player in 1993 and 1994
- First team All-Big Sky selection three times
- Sports Illustrated Player of the Week twice
- Big Sky Player of the Week 10 times
- Four games with 40 or more points
- Scored in double figures in 86 of 91 games
- Big Sky career record for 3-pointers (168)
- Third in UI history with 766 rebounds

Trinidad's only Winter Olympic sport brings back stories from this year's games in Lillehammer

Matthew Andrew
Sports Editor

The Winter Olympics may be over, but the memories will linger in the athletes' hearts forever.

Those same memories and rewards that possess an Olympian to return. This time, however, it will be in Japan.

For Gregory Sun, Founder, President, Secretary, Chief Architect and everything else except for the other half of the team — and the Trinidad and Tobago bobsled team Japan is exactly what he plans to do.

Leading into the Olympics, things did not go as well as planned or even hoped.

It started off with preparations in Cortina, Italy, which is second only to Lake Placid as one of the biggest death traps as far as tracks are concerned. Sanctions by the International Olympic Committee require that each team accumulate a certain number of points, 20, and race a certain number of times, 5. For the Trinidad team, this will be their fifth race.

Training with a hurt back since August, the injury only proceeded to get worse with a crash in Italy and then another crash on the same run. Along with this, Sun was physically in bad condition. His peak was too early, December, and he was unable to maintain strength until mid February. He did have one successful preparation for the Olympics — mental preparation.

While in Cortina, the Trinidad had their fastest time ever — under a minute. They would soon realize that this wouldn't be their fastest.

Heading into the Olympics, Sun had more experience behind the wheel — the wheel is actually, a set of bungee cords that control the sled.

Sun arrived at the extravaganza a week ahead of other Olympians and remained in the Olympic Village alone — literally. But through it all he had fun spending his time with the media.

Notable press agencies and staff seized the opportunity to begin their coverage. Interviews were conducted by Swiss television, radio and news, Deutsch Press Agency which is equivalent to the Universal Press Agency (UPI) and Associated Press (AP) and distributed the story to 31 newspapers. Of course Greg Gumbel got his chance.

The German magazine Der Spiegel conducted the best interview. It just so happened to be with Yohan Kost. Don't worry if the name isn't familiar, at the time it wasn't to Sun either. Kost went on to win three gold medals and three world records in speed skating.

The perspective of the story was to get ideas from

NCAA's again prove worthiness

The men's NCAA basketball tournament has once again beckoned fans of all shapes, sizes and nationalities to the most exciting sporting event in the world.

Buzzer-beating shots, schools you never heard of, traditional schools (i.e. Indiana, Duke and North Carolina), spirited crowds and major upsets all comprise the 64-team tournament which began last weekend.

Despite the differences in the caliber of teams, they all have one thing in common — they play basketball. They are men who can all dribble, pass, shoot and play defense, although at sometimes alarmingly different levels of ability. Some 17-year-olds are twice as good as experienced 23-year old seniors, however they both play the same game.

Whoever could correctly pick each and every game of the tournament has probably an impeccable working relationship with God.

Every year there are at least a couple of huge upsets. It's nearly impossible to predict which basketball giant will fall from the ranks of the elite to some college that probably is more known for their engineering school than their basketball team. Even ex-presidents George Washington and James Madison decided to show up to play.

Wisconsin-Green Bay, Tulsa, Maryland,

Boston College and Pennsylvania all pulled off victories over much better teams — or higher ranked. Additionally, there were also several potential upsets, like Pepperdine's close game with over-confident and overrated Michigan and Liberty's close contest, until the last seven minutes, with top-ranked North Carolina.

The Tar Heels, on the other hand, just lost to the Boston College Eagles in the biggest upset of the tournament. Center Billy Curley vaulted the Eagles to victory by dominating the final minutes of the game in their 85-82 win.

Why then, are there so many upsets?

Usually, the underdog really has nothing to lose and the favorite is playing not to lose.

BC had nothing to lose. They were not expected to even advance past the first-round. They weren't trying to win any popularity contests or trying to get shoe endorsements for the future.

Halftime
Andrew Longeteig

North Carolina, nevertheless, is riding on many years of basketball success. Not just winning seasons, but remarkable seasons as evident by last year's national championship and having the number-one Associated Press ranking for most of this year. Their basketball program has produced Michael Jordan, James Worthy, Sam Perkins and George Lynch to name a few.

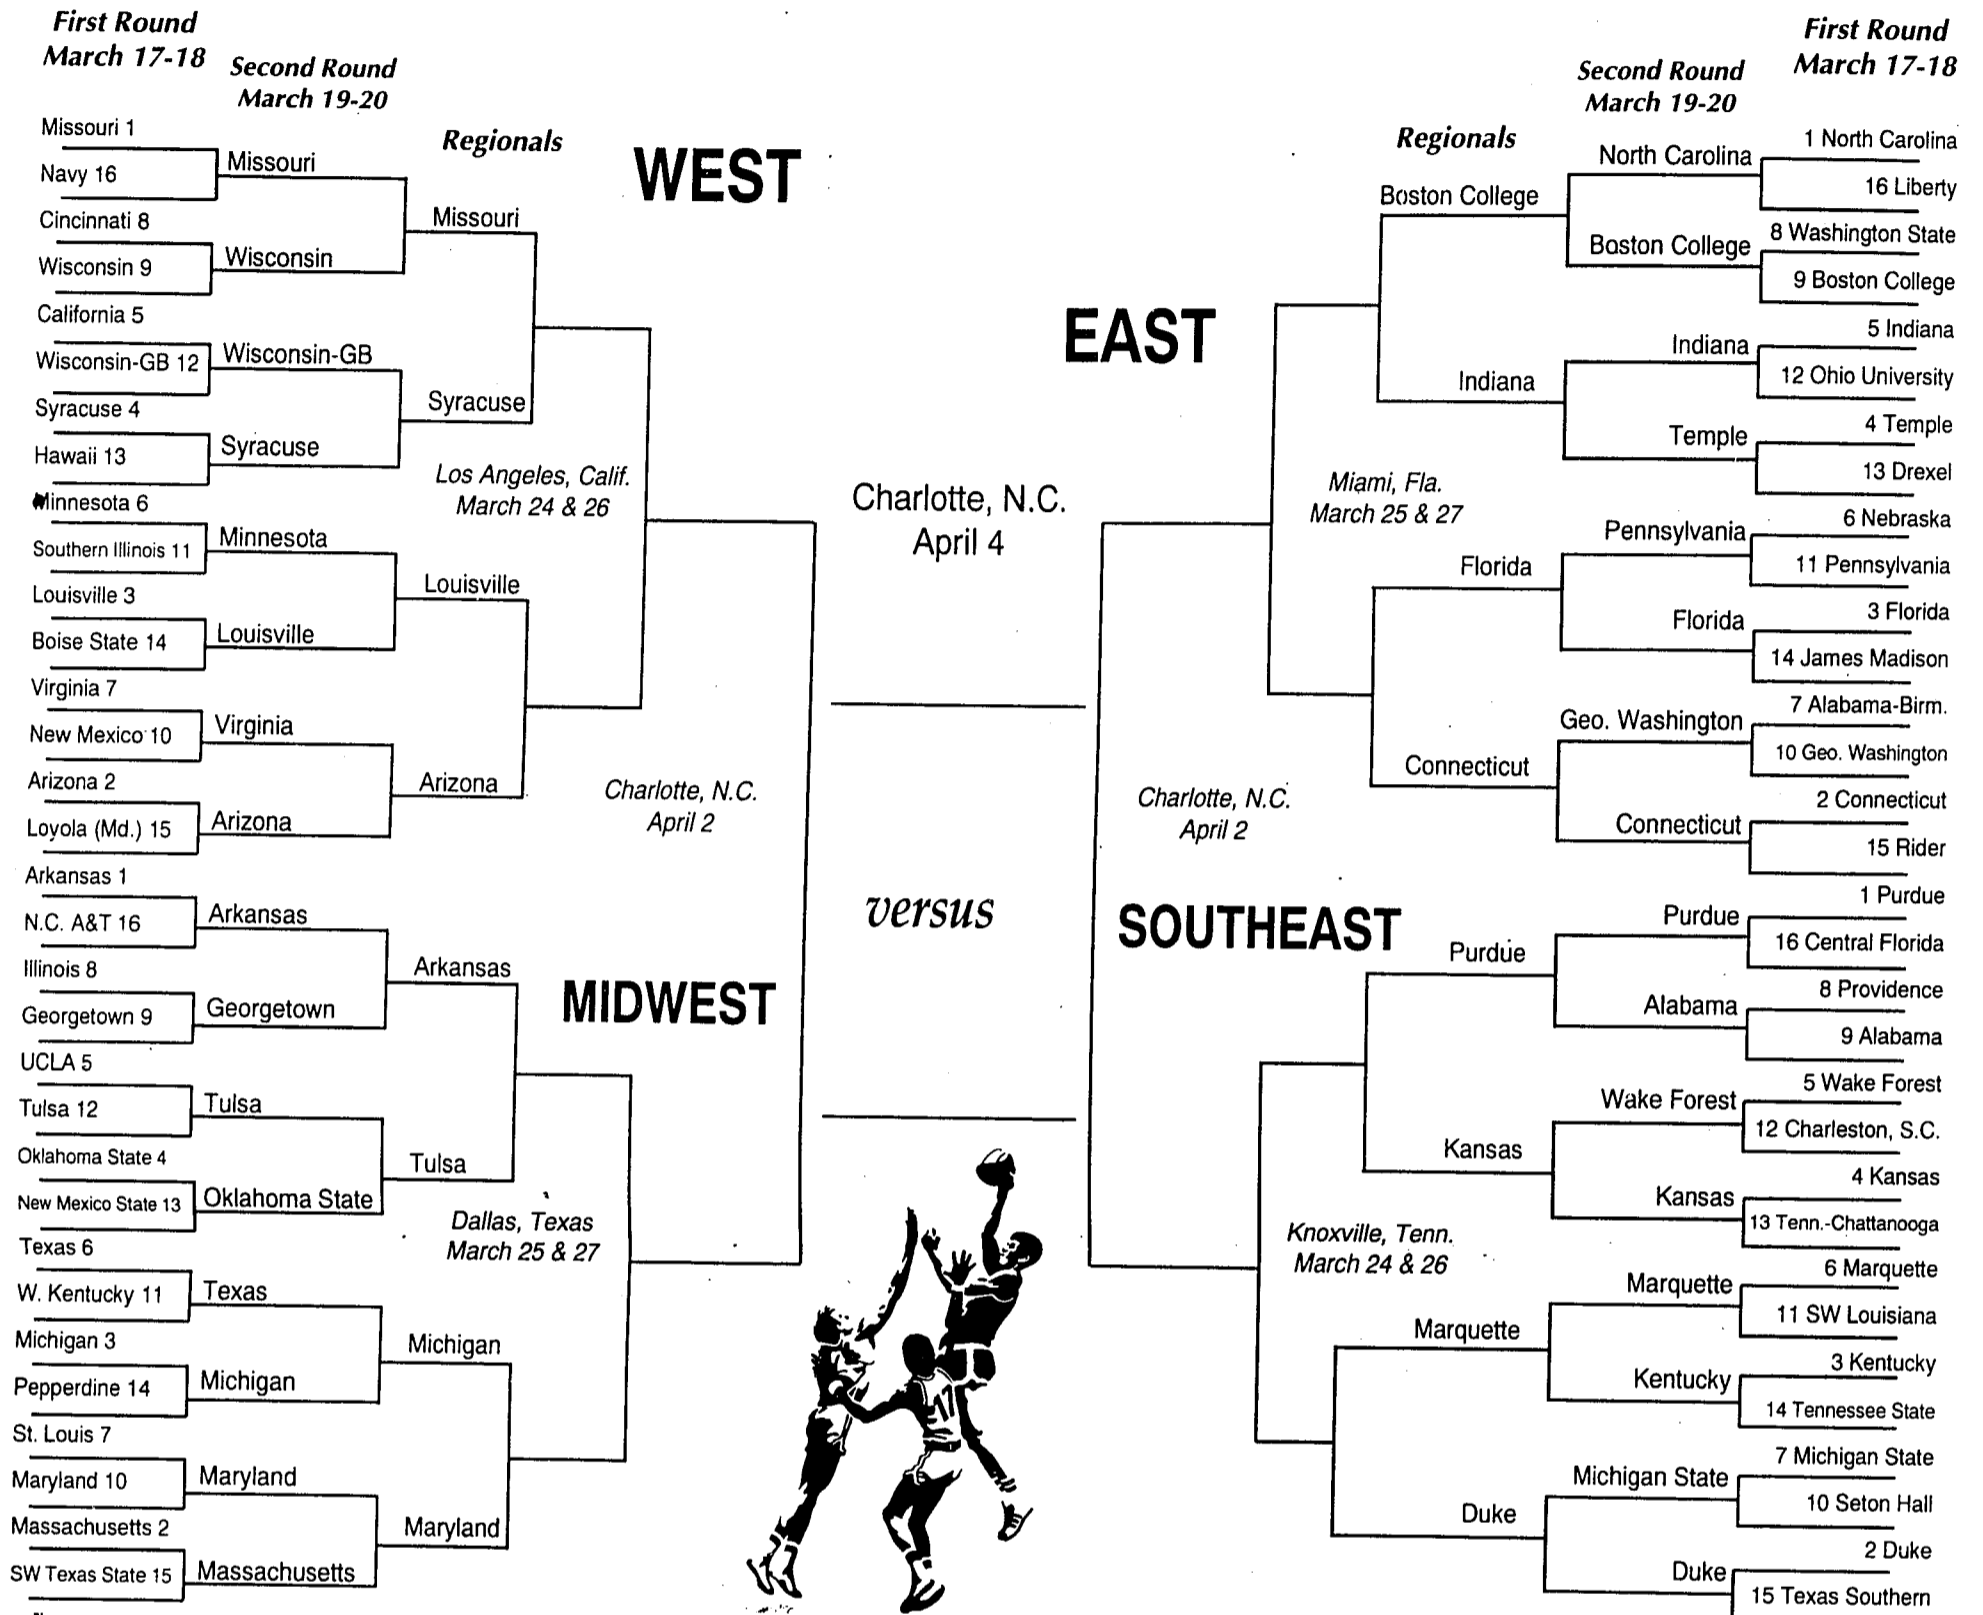

BC had too much desire, courage and will to bow down to one of the tournament favorites, picked by many sportswriters, sports casters and sports fans to win their second consecutive title.

BSU 'steals' tourney

Andrew Longeteig
Staff Writer

The men's Big Sky tournament ended shortly before spring break. It also ended the Vandals' season — as well as top-seeded Weber State's and second-seeded Idaho State's.

The Boise State Broncos, boasting a lackluster 7-7 Big Sky regular season mark, were the eventual tournament champions and advanced to the NCAA tournament.

That's great for the BSU athletic program, however, couldn't the Big Sky be more representative if they sent one of the better teams in the BSC like Weber State or ISU?

The fifth seed of the Big Sky, not the most talented Division-I conference, happened to win the tournament.

BSU did play well against Weber State and ISU, however, it was on their home floor. He does his best to deliberate and win the debate, but it doesn't matter — majority rules.

The majority in this case is BSU's boisterous fan support that seemed to uplift the less-talented Broncos while suppressing Montana State, Weber State and ISU.

Boise State finished 15-3 at the BSU Pavilion; on the road — 1-8.

It is unfair to the teams that play well all season only to see it slip to a mediocre team who is almost unbeatable at home.

BSU didn't deserve an NCAA berth. Last year, however, BSU did earn it with a victory over the Vandals at Idaho.

BSU's NCAA bid last year was fair — this year was not.

Unfortunately, in our money-over-righteousness society, the tournament was held in Boise for financial reasons only. True, Boise is an excellent site to host the tournament, but if the respective team didn't earn it during the regular season, they shouldn't be handed a gift for the post-season.

The BSC had it right a couple of years ago by awarding the team who won the regular season to host the tournament. Therefore, the team who earns the title should be granted the right to host and maybe bring some cash flow into some other Big Sky cities other than Boise.

BSU received $250,000 to just suit up against their first-round opponent Louisville.

Maybe if BSU can build a strong team, they can host the tournament justifiably.

No more complaining. The Broncos, nonetheless, represented the Big Sky admirably in nearly pulling off a huge upset over tenth-ranked Louisville.

After falling behind by 22 points, BSU climbed to within four points with 29 seconds remaining thanks to their three-point shots.

BSU actually received a generous seed (14th) with their 17-12 record. The Vandals, for instance, won 25 games in 1990 and were similarly seeded.

Perhaps this is a sign that the BSC is attaining respect from the national scope, erasing their image as a pushover conference.

My only concern for the future is the determination of tournament sites. The current one, where it looks like it will be in Boise annually, will not work — except for BSU.

Fairness must be restored.

ISU ends men's season

Andrew Longeteig
Staff Writer

Five seconds. Five seconds was all it took to end the Idaho men's basketball dream of an NCAA berth.

Late in the game, during Idaho's comeback attempt, Nate Gardner was controversially called for a five-second violation on an inbounds pass.

Although Idaho didn't play their best basketball, the inconsistent referees didn't help them much either in their trying to return to the NCAA tournament for the first time in four years.

The Idaho State Bengals, eventual losers to Boise State for the tournament championship, handed the Vandals a 73-66 defeat.

Idaho finished a very respectable 18-10 overall and 9-5 in the Big Sky.

The Bengals leaped out to a 37-27 lead in the first half. However, an 11-1 Vandal run in the last three minutes led to a 38-38 half-time score. The run was capped off by an alley-oop slam dunk from Mark Leslie to Orlando Lightfoot.

Idaho was plagued by foul trouble in the first half. Deon Watson and Ben Johnson picked up three fouls each. Watson played only eight minutes in the first half.

Remarkably, Idaho connected on all 15 of their free throw attempts in the half.

It looked as if the Vandals were about to break the game open as they established a 57-47 lead midway through the second half. Idaho's interior passing was superb and they were taking care of the basketball.

The Bengals, however, streaked back to tie the score at 57 apiece with 7:37 left on the game clock.

ISU's Jim Potter and freshman Nathan Green were instrumental in the victory.

Lightfoot, recently named the Most Valuable Player of the Big Sky, was the only Vandal who scored in the last 11 minutes of the game.

His final basket as a Vandal was a jump shot from just inside the midcourt line that shocked the restless crowd with little time left on the clock.

He eventually fouled out and received a warm, appreciative standing ovation from the 10,000 fans at the BSU Pavilion.

Lightfoot amassed 2,102 career points — the most ever by any Big Sky player. He also holds the Big Sky record for most three-point field goals with 168.

Deon Watson grabbed a UI record 877 rebounds and tied ex-Vandal great Kelvin Smith with 133 career blocked shots. Frank Waters is third with 88.

The loss was especially disappointing for Vandal seniors Jeremy Brandt, Dan Serkin, Frank Waters, Watson and Lightfoot who never experienced the NCAA tournament.

Only two other coaches have done better in their first trial at Idaho. Joe Cravens' 18 wins are only surpassed by Kermit Davis' 25 and Larry Eustachy's 19.

Idaho strangely ended up with a better road record, 5-2, than a home record, 4-3.

Despite the loss, Idaho had a very successful season. A new coach with seven new faces and having a team expected to win the Big Sky are not easy circumstances.

With Cravens' establishment as head coach, his potentially good recruiting class, and the returning players, next year should be a season of comfort instead of transition.

Turner not returning as coach

Bridget Lux
Staff Writer

After an eight year reign as head coach of the women's basketball team, Laurie Turner will not return for the 1994-95 season. She has been "reassigned" to other duties within the athletic department.

"The feeling was that a change in the program was needed," said Pete Liske, Idaho Athletic Director.

Liske did not comment on whether Turner was fired from the head coaching position. Also, no reasons have been given as to why the demotion occurred.

"It is pretty standard policy that we will not comment on personal matters," said Liske.

After eight seasons, Turner has compiled a record of 97-123 including a disappointing season record of 3-2 this year.

Along with Turner, assistant coach Robyn Stewart, who has been Turner's assistant for five seasons, will be reassigned to another position on the Idaho athletic staff.

Both Turner and Stewart's coaching contracts expire in June.

Turner began her coaching career after playing four seasons for the Washington State Cougars and graduating from WSU in 1979. She was a graduate assistant for two seasons at WSU and then moved to La Grande, Ore., to become the head coach for Eastern Oregon State College.

During her four years at Eastern Oregon, Turner's teams compiled a 77-34 record and in 1982 she was named Coach of the Year for NAIA District II.

Turner was not only head coach at Oregon for four years, she was also their athletic director for two.

During her eight years at Idaho, Turner's teams finished above the .500 mark in only three seasons.

Her most successful season was the 1989-90 season when her team went 20-9 overall and 11-5 in conference. That season as well as the previous season, the Vandals finished second in the BSC behind the University of Montana.

Turner began her career at Idaho with two discouraging seasons. Her first season, 1986-87, ended in an overall record of 8-19. The next season the team went 7-20 overall and 4-12 in conference.

A change was needed, so Turner turned her team around and came up with a promising 18-11 season the next year.

Then, during the 1989-90 season, Turner led the women to the BSC championship game where they came up short against UM.

The next three seasons ended with Idaho finishing near the .500 mark. Last year, the women came up with a 7-7 record in the Big Sky Conference and a 12-15 record overall.

Losing five underclassmen from the 1992-93 squad due to personal reasons, including P.J. Hall, Andi McCarthy and Sharleece Keller, hurt the Vandals tremendously. They also lost seniors Brenda Kuehlthau and Kortnie Edwards who averaged 13.7 and 11 points respectively.

These losses left a young, inexperienced group for most recent season.

The head coach and assistant coach positions have not yet been filled.

"We will have a strong program and will move as quickly as possible to fill the position," Liske said.

Outdoor track starts on right foot

Jill Wimer qualifies for NCAA Outdoor Championships

Lance Graveley
Contributing Writer

Jill Wimer provisionally qualified for the NCAA Outdoor Championships to lead the Idaho women's track team at the Willie Williams Track and Field Classic in Tucson, Ariz., the first outdoor track meet of the season for the men and women.

Wimer, a sophomore, made her qualifying mark in the javelin competition. There, she threw for a second-place distance of 152 feet, seven inches, tying the qualifying NCAA provisional mark.

This means that while she is not automatically given a berth in the championship meet, her name is presently on a ranked list of potential qualifiers. Wimer also competed in the shot put, finishing second with a throw of 42-11.

While Wimer made the provisional rankings, Tanya Tesar, the school record holder in the heptathlon, barely missed getting on the list.

In the heptathlon, which consists of five track and field stages, the senior came within 160 points of the qualifying score, finishing fifth with 4,915 points.

In the triple jump, she had better luck in the overall standings by placing third with an against-the-wind leap of 38-7 1/2.

Sweet 16

Boston College will face an Indiana team that has seen better seasons, but it will be a miracle if BC maintains that same intensity they had versus North Carolina — Indiana also wants to prove that they have the team and the talent to advance to the Big Dance. Prediction: Indiana 79, Boston College 65.

The Florida Gators, who survived 14th seed James Madison and a stingy Pennsylvania team will battle with Connecticut. Florida has the athletes to advance but not the tournament experience Connecticut has. Husky Donyell Marshall will break out of his mild slump and lead the Huskies to victory. Prediction: Connecticut 88, Florida 81.

Purdue versus Kansas may turn out to be one of the best Sweet 16 matchups. The Boilermakers are led by the best amateur player in the country in junior forward Glenn Robinson. Kansas' unselfishness and outside shooting may cause Purdue some problems, but Robinson is just too tough. Prediction: Purdue 80, Kansas 74.

Marquette is feeling fine after a mild upset of third seed Kentucky and will face a typically strong Duke Blue Devil team. Duke has the best fundamentals out of any team in the country thanks to basketball wizard and coach Mike Krzyzewski. The Blue Devils will be trying to earn their 7th straight trip to the Final Four. Marquette, on the other hand, will be vying for another upset and I believe they'll do it. Prediction: Marquette 64, Duke 62.

The Midwest and West regions of the tournament should produce equally exciting games.

Missouri and Syracuse match up pretty well in terms of quickness, but Missouri has been playing too consistently to lose to an inconsistent Syracuse team. Prediction: Missouri 91, Syracuse 79.

The game between Louisville and Arizona could be the best game of the tournament. Louisville arguably has the best starting lineup in the country — just ask Boise State. Forward Clifford Rozier should have the game of his life. Likewise, Arizona guard Khalid Reeves should scorch the Cardinals with his outside shooting prowess. Prediction: Louisville 77, Arizona 76.

The Tulsa Golden Hurricanes are appearing in their first NCAA tournament in seven years and have made the best of it. They easily defeated a talented UCLA team 112-102 in the first round but will not keep up with Arkansas' relentless pressure defense and transition basketball. Prediction: Arkansas 106, Tulsa 87.

The underrated Maryland Terrapins, 10th seed in the Midwest region, defeated the overrated Massachusetts Minutemen and will now face Michigan. The Wolverines have an abundance of talent and their not afraid of telling you that. Maryland has a good chance to upset them but they probably won't be able to stop Michigan's Juwaan Howard, who has been on a tear. Prediction: Michigan 68, Maryland 62.

If any of these predictions are reasonably close, I'll be surprised. Post them up on your bathroom mirror and either become inspired or annoyed.

More NCAA analysis and predictions are right around the corner.

Traci Hanegan, who just came off setting a new school indoor record for the 200 meters, finished ninth in the 100 meters with a time of 12.52 seconds to complete the women's presence in the Arizona invitational overall standings.

On the men's side, Oscar Duncan, a freshman competing in his first outdoor meet as a Vandal, made a strong impression by finishing first in the javelin throw. His distance of 222-1 was 12 feet further than his nearest competitor's throw.

Frank Bruder and Jason Uhlman both finished third in their respective events to give Idaho a strong appearance at the meet. Bruder completed the 3,000 meter steeplechase with a time of 8 minutes and 55.52 seconds, coming just five seconds shy of Gary Gosner's 14-year old school record. Uhlman, finished the 5,000 meters with a 14:56.4 time.

In the fourth place standings, Paul Thompson beat out teammate Travis Allen to come in with a time of 53.46 in the 400 meter hurdles, just three seconds shy of Mike Kinney's 11-year-old record, while Scott McCarty threw for distance of 162 feet in the discus. McCarty also participated in both the hammer throw and shot put, placing seventh with 125 feet, eighth inches, and eighth with 43-11 3/4, respectively.

Jerry Trujillo, Charlie Wheeler, and Niels Kruller all placed fifth in their respective events. In the triple jump, Trujillo went for a distance of 45 feet while Wheeler overcame a height of six feet, eight and three-quarter inches in the high jump.

Kruller leaped for a distance of 23-1 3/4 in the long jump and in the 200 meters, he finished thirteenth with a time of 22.01.

Aside from placing sixth in the 400-meter hurdles with a time of 58.86, Travis Allen also ran in the 110-meter high hurdles, finished seventh in the event with a time of 15.36.

The seventh place finish was the same placing Kienan Slate received in the 3000 meter steeplechase, where his time was nine minutes and 24.12 seconds.

Rounding out the men's track team in the overall standings was Cory Johnson, who finished tenth in the pole vault by going over a height of 15 feet.

The next track meet for both the men and women will be the Cougar Invitational at Washington State University on April 2.

a super athlete and someone new to the profession of worldwide competition.

Another classy story was done by Norway TV, NRK TV, which was played throughout the host country. However, as training and the races started, Sun withdrew invitations to interviews so that the focus of why and where he was would not be upset.

Being at the Olympics was the equivalent to being a Hollywood superstar. Gifts were given out to each of the athletes, a silver cheese slicer — from where it originated, two dolls of the mascots, a participation medal and what not. They were chauffeured around with a team van, chauffeur and hostess and taken to see different parts of the country and other Olympic arenas.

All in all, they were set up pretty nicely.

Forming a new bobsled federation for the country and with no outside support, the expenses tended to add up. An interesting way the team saved money was the rental of their sled.

On the way to the track one day, Sun passed a pub. Atop a gas station set a bobsled. Through a little help they got a sled pretty cheap. Most sleds were being rented for around $3,000 and another team bought one for $8,000. The Trinidad's managed to get theirs for $200 a week.

As one could probably imagine, they got the one off the gas station. The sled was missing runners, bolts and scabbards, the case to carry the runners in. Then the chassis ended up breaking as did the bungees. They just fixed problems as they occurred.

Luckily they called their coach in New York to get scabbards, received bolts to attach the runners from the French and got the a set of runners. For all their effort, they were soon referred to by their American friends as "Team Esso." This was the name of the gas station.

The sled was pretty heavy. It was so heavy that they didn't eat race day in fear of going over the 389.8 kilogram weight limit. They raced pretty well, although they were competing with the last 15 sleds. It is all part of being new to the sport. They beat a fair amount of teams including those who were shelling out money for sleds. Trinidad could have done the same but it wasn't worth it to notch up four or five positions.

Sun thought he was going fast when he broke one minute in Cortina. In Norway he couldn't get close to the time in Cortina — he kept beating it — on a track that was 20-meters longer. Overall, they were heating G-forces that would measure to be close to five.

One of the most intriguing events to happen to Sun was getting a better understanding of the Bosnia situation. The team had the fortunate opportunity to be seated side by side with them in sled stalls.

Fortunately, they made it to the Olympics. It was a rough road and was not a complete success. A member of the team was shot and killed on the way to the Olympics. The team was being flown out by the United Nations and was shot on the runway.

The team has a bond. It consisted of two Serbians, two Croats and a Muslim. They are their own family now. They cannot travel back into the country to visit their families because they are being sought after. When the events ended it was not clear what would happen to them.

Sun has currently been taken time away from training to let his body heal. Beginning April 1, training will resume. His training will consist of light biking, Nordic Track, swimming and other activities that will take pressure off the right knee which has undergone surgery three times.

Sun is now looking to 1998. If all goes well, he will be in Japan for the Winter Olympics. He is hoping to be in the 4-man bobsled. He hopes to be able to get two men from their homeland army.

It is not important to put the best team forward now, he plans on saving this for '98. In 1998, his team will be competing with the front 15 — not the last.
