Housing costs increase again

J. Richard Rock
Staff Writer

If Wednesday's rate hearing was any indication, most students living in UI residence halls are not too concerned with proposed increases in room and board costs.

The meeting, which was advertised for the two weeks prior, attracted fewer than a dozen students and only a handful of them were opposed to the proposal.

The proposal is to increase rates from between 4 percent and 4.3 percent depending on the meal plan and living situation of each student.

That means the typical residence hall member who lives in a double occupancy room and has the 19 meals/week plan, can expect to pay an additional $140 beginning this fall.

Eben Sutton, a senior who serves on the Committee of Housing and Dining, which helped develop the proposed increase, stated during the hearing, "I think the 4.2 percent increase is reasonable. Perhaps that is why there are so few people here."

Roger Oetlli, director of University Residences, also attributed low turnout to improved communications between University Residences and the students.

Jim Bauer, director of Residence Life, stressed they had tried to get the information out to every student in the system.

There was, however, some opposition to the increase. Sue Pierce, Forney Hall, presented Oetlli a letter signed by residents of Forney Hall which stated their opposition to "any increase because it makes it difficult to attract women to the residence halls." Pierce noted that in some cases it is now less expensive for a woman to live in the Greek system than it is to live in the residence halls.

A situation which is also increasingly true of men who are looking at living in a fraternity.

the meeting to protest the increases in rates for cooperative housing. In a cooperative hall, residents agree to share in some of the routine cleaning and upkeep in exchange for lower rates.

"I know some girls in Steele House that are thinking of not coming back because they don't think it is worth it. We just don't save much anymore," said Allmaras.

Oetlli spoke with Allmaras and another resident of Steele House after the meeting to begin assessing their concerns and working toward possible changes in the cooperative residence hall program.

Brian Radford commented on behalf of what appears to be the consensus, "Most of the presidents are satisfied with the increase, they are not pleased to have an increase, but after two years of ten-percent increases they are satisfied."

Most students seem to accept the increase as being reasonable, especially when inflation is considered.

Stuart Davis, associate director

for Business Operations, explained the reasons behind the need for increases. He outlined six basic areas which necessitated the 4.2-percent rate hike including: debt requirements.

SUB to house student groups

Mike Cole
Staff Writer

The UI is taking steps to provide a sense of equal representation on campus.

Up until now groups have had no formal place to set up their organizations. In response for this need for space the new UI Student Organization Center will soon be opening in the Student Union Building. The center is available for registered clubs and organizations who are in need of file or office space. Janet Loucks, chairperson of the Student Union Board, said, "The center will have offices for organizational officers to meet, as well as providing a centrally located place for students to obtain information about each individual organization."

Guidelines for the allocation of student organization space are:

• Any recognized student organization that provides service or programs for the entire university community will receive top priority.

• Any recognized student organization that does not have any space allocated to it in another building at the UI will also receive priority.

• The decision of the Student Union Board will be based on prior usage of space in the Student Organization Center.

If applicable, the following criteria will also be considered: the amount of annual activity, the need for work space or storage space, the need for a central location for easy access to the student body as a whole vs. central location for a specific interest group, cooperation with other organizations within the center and past use of the space by the applying organization.

Part of the center will be an international section which will give groups an opportunity to represent their respective cultures. For those looking to get first-hand experience of a country they may visit one day, these offices should be a great place to visit. Organizations are envisioned to be moving in by April 25 but exactly which groups who will receive priority is yet to be decided.

The committee to decide on the criteria for the placement of organizations met last night to begin discussing potential guidelines. With all of the recent controversy concerning the Women's Center, those groups given space will be watched closely.

Although it has not yet been determined, groups such as the

Gay Lesbian and Bisexual Association may not be deemed appropriate for the center. It will have to be decided where the line will lie concerning simply providing information or pushing an agenda.

The determination of which groups will or will not be given space is not wholly left to those presently in control. The committee is reportedly open to any input from interested students. Loucks also pointed out there are two positions open on the Student Union Board.

All Board members have voting privileges and can vote on the criteria for space allocation. Concerned students who have constructive suggestions for the Student Organization Space Committee should contact Janet Loucks at 885-6331. All interested in applying for a Board position should contact the Senate Office for an application.

Spring Break uneventful

Katé Lyons-Holestine
Editor-in-Chief

With the majority of students out of town over the past week, reports to the police were minimal.

The Moscow Police responded to a report of someone smoking marijuana. Zeke Dexter of Targhee Hall was charged with possession of paraphernalia.

Two Chrisman Hall residents were charged with minor consuming alcohol March 14.

In unrelated incidents, Charles Webb, 18, and Athanasios Katsilonetes, 19, were charged with the alcohol violations.

Mark J. Hall, of Sigma Chi, was charged with malicious injury to property when he drove his automobile on the lawn behind the Sigma Chi buildings.

"It's moist this time of year and that can cause damage to the lawn," Lt. Jake Kershnik said. "There's also a section in the student handbook that states it's a violation to damage UI property."

The UI Campus Police Substation, under the direction of Kershnik, will have five uniformed interns by the end of next week. The Moscow Police had provided opportunities for criminal justice students to do practicum work in their department, but it was loosely organized.

"After my appointment to the Campus Substation, one of the objectives handed to me by the Chief was to set up the program," Kershnik said.

The internship is year-long and is affiliated with the UI Criminal Justice program. There are guidelines to entering the program, but it offers students a very unique experience in law enforcement. Students are exposed to municipal and law enforcement as well as campus laws enforcement.

"We're big enough to be diverse, but small enough to know people and let them feel part of the group," he added.

Another reason for organizing the program was "self serving for the police department." It will provide better services to the campus.

Kershnik envisions the internship program growing to always having someone at the substation to greet people and provide information in addition to the other opportunities it offers the students.

deferred maintenance, life and fire safety issues, meeting the Americans with Disabilities Act as required by Congress, salary and benefit increases which are mandated by the state and general inflationary increases in operating costs.

Managing debt requirements also includes the assumption of new debt in order to take advantage of low interest rates. Some of the projects which will be funded this way include window replacement, roof repairs and elevator upgrades.

Oetlli pointed to the replacement of windows as a big improvement. According to Oetlli, the new windows are so much more efficient the residence system has been able to reduce its energy consumption by 10 percent.

"We have actually been asked to turn down the heat," said Oetlli. Referring to all the changes taking place Oetlli commented that it was the basic "comfort level and increased level of satisfaction" that was at issue.

Information made available by the residence system highlights the need to increase the reserve for deferred maintenance which is used for general upkeep and future renovation plans. Currently the deferred maintenance level is nearly $800,000 short of levels recommended.

Some of the funds will be used to improve fire and safety concerns as identified by an independent architectural firm in 1986.

"Our current funding level is not adequate to address the desired fire and life safety improvements in a cost effective or timely manner," said a housing statement.

University residence halls currently provide no ADA compliant units for people with disabilities. As long-range plans are developed to address ADA requirements, funds will be used to make necessary changes.

The university, as a state run institution, is also subject to mandate pay increases for employees which require additional funding. Davis, who maintains that these increases are needed to maintain quality professional employees pointed to the fact that a full-time custodian makes just over $12,000. "That's just above the poverty line," said Davis. This year's 5.4-percent increase in salaries and benefits, will cost the residence system nearly $70,000 additional.

"The state has not provided increases during the past several years to keep up with inflation, this increase is needed and deserved," said Davis.

The final area that the increase will help in is to offset general operating expenses which have risen due to inflation.

One area of concern in particular is garbage disposal. Garbage rates could increase by as much as 100 percent over the next year. Currently the residence system spends nearly $60,000 to dispose of garbage.

The rate hearing was conducted in order to gauge student opinions concerning the increase and to clarify and questions that students might have. The proposed increase will now be passed on to President Elisabeth Zinser who will have the final decision on the increase.

Cyberspace takes off

In late March and throughout April, the community will have an opportunity to learn about and experience cyberspace when the UI Laboratory for Applied Logic and Department of Computer Science present a lecture series entitled "Cyberspace: The New Frontier."

Cyberspace is that part of civilization that exists in electronic form and already has a major impact on everyone's life. It is not just computers and computer networks, but every telephone conversation, credit card purchase and ATM transaction. It is the technology that provides almost instantaneous access to data and to people and it is considered to be "the newest territory for human exploration." Its most important ethical dimensions are just beginning to be examined.

The lectures are scheduled from 7 to 9 p.m. March 28, April 1, April 11 and April 18 in the University Auditorium. The April 22 lecture will be held in the Student Union Building Silver and Gold Room.

Opening the lecture series on March 28 will be speakers Carlos Schwantes, UI professor of history and director of the Institute for Pacific Northwest Studies and Douglas Lind, UI assistant professor of philosophy. Schwantes is the author or editor of nine books and is a recognized expert on the history of the old West. His lecture is entitled "From GeoSpace to CyberSpace: Ethics of an Evolving Frontier." Lind specializes in the philosophy of law, ethics and environmental ethics and law. He will present "An Ethical Road map for the Information Super-Highway."

On April 1, John Perry Barlow, co-founder and executive chairman of the Electronic Frontier Foundation, will present "Building the Information Superspyway." Barlow writes and lectures on subjects relating to digital technology and society and is a contributing editor of numerous publications. He is a recognized authority on computer security, Virtual Reality, digitalized intellectual property and the social and legal conditions arising in the global network of connected computers.

"Circle the Wagons: Defining Security and the Rules of Cyberspace" will be the topic of the April 11 lecture by Eugene Spafford. Spafford is an associate professor of computer sciences at Purdue University, where he directs the Computer Operations, Audit and Security Tools Project and Laboratory and is an active researcher with the Software Engineering Research Center. He has co-authored or edited several books, is associate editor of the journal Computing Systems and is on the editorial and advisory boards of several other computer-related journals.

On April 18, Michael Joyce, a professor at Vassar, will present

"(Re)Placing the Author: 'A Book in the Ruins.'" Joyce is a prize-winning novelist who is best known for his work in hypertext fiction including his 1987 novel, Afternoon. He will discuss the future of the novel, the library and publishing in general in light of new developments in cyberspace. He also will read from his fiction.

On April 22, John L. Casti will present "The Simply Complex: The Science of Surprise in Nature and in Life." Casti is a resident member of the Santa Fe Institute in Santa Fe, N.M., and a professor of operations research and system theory at the Technical University of Vienna. Casti is author of two popular books on science, Paradigms Lost: Images of Man in the Mirror of Science and Searching for Certainty: What Scientists Can Know About the Future. He is the author of numerous articles, technical monographs and textbooks on mathematical modeling and is the editor of the journal Applied Mathematics and Computations.

The lecture series is funded by donations from GTE, the Microelectronics Research Center, Hewlett Packard, the UI College of Engineering, UI Departments of Computer Science, Electrical Engineering and English and the student chapter of the Association for Computing Machinery. The lectures are free and the public is invited to attend.

Marble keeps tightrope promise

Balancing doesn't happen often. Gymnasts fall off beams, tightrope walkers fall into lion pits, checking account numbers never match, checks bounce. Most students are forced to balance no more than $54.37 in their checking accounts, ASUI President John Marble is responsible for $1 million.

Marble and the Senate Finance Committee, with an unforgiving ax held near various ASUI departments, have managed to consciously trim the ASUI budget, a difficult act that has fallen the last three years. While staring into the mouth of a $38,000 deficit at the start of the year, Marble laid down the law to ASUI departments in the form of a simple choice: You find some areas to cut, or we will.

A three-step plan was phased in, starting with an fee increase of $1.50, making total ASUI tuition fees rise to $34.25. Enrollment growth was also considered, adding a few extra bucks to the pool. And then came the cutting.

It appears as if the cuts were not made with an Idaho backwoods chainsaw, but with surgical steel used to amputate useless sixth digits. General administration operating costs have been cut, some of which came from purchasing a fax machine that will delete expensive charges. The Argonaut also used a little liposuction by combining Advertising and Editorial budgets, and along with other departments, appropriately cutted funds for such things as food in various travel budgets.

Ironically, $5,000 was saved because students weren't allowed to spend it. A fiasco in which Lionel Hampton Jazz Festival student ticket prices were supposed to be supplemented by the ASUI didn't happen and students had to pay the high price. Consequently, ASUI didn't have to budget the supplement for next year.

Only a couple departments enjoyed the status quo or felt an increase. Outdoor Programs and Outdoor Rentals faced no cuts and Outdoor Rentals generates enough revenue to cover all salaries, irregular help, capital outlaw and operating expenses. The International Association saw an increase, partially to catch up Director Joanne Trail with other professional salary increases and also a general expansion of duties and services provided by the IFA.

Marble's budget for fiscal year 1995 is currently in the hands of the ASUI Finance Committee, which has been tweaking it here and there before it will be presented to the entire Senate in mid April.

President Marble kept one of his campaign promises by walking a decision-making tightrope, a feat most politicians never live up to. Thanks.

Résumé built on involvement

Why is it UI students don't get involved in the hundreds of organizations on campus?

Are they too busy trying to get out of here in four years?

Are they too good for the groups or do they feel they are not good enough?

No matter what the reason may be, the fact is there are clubs, organizations, living groups, honor societies, jobs, internships and many other opportunities out there. There is something for everyone. What is the excuse for someone to not get involved?

I have found that even if a group doesn't sound like it would have anything for me, sometimes it has the most to offer.

As a full-time student I have found time to be an employee of the Argonaut and the College of Education, a member and past officer of a fraternity and chairman of an ASUI committee. Tell me what it is about other people that they cannot get involved in campus activities.

The UI offers a full slate of activities that add much more than mere resume fillers. These activities add experiences that can mean the difference between getting a job or not.

It is crucial for people to remember that employers don't care if someone graduated in four years. They are interested in those who were involved in different activities and made themselves better people.

Clubs are a great means of opportunities for people to expand their knowledge on certain subjects.

Most departments have established groups or clubs that offer educational programming and experience in the field student's field.

Departments encourage students to get involved in these groups to add strength to their abilities.

Greek houses, residence halls and off-campus housing offer opportunities to get involved in residence activities.

Strong leadership skills are the most positive results anyone can walk away from the experiences with. One does not necessarily have to be an officer but could just play on an intramural team to learn valuable lessons.

Men's and women's rugby clubs struggle to put teams together to compete as they continue to advertise for new players. So do other sporting clubs.

Remember, a person does not have to be the best at what they do, if they join they will improve by joining a group of those who may be better. Another thing to remember is to not be intimidated by those more experienced because they were in the same spot sometime in their life.

Honor societies can be beneficial to people who get in. I realize they are not open to everyone, but for those who are eligible, it cannot hurt to join one.

The doors could open even wider for those that belonged to any type of honor society because most employers don't know the difference between one and the other.

Daytime television hasn't improved, still incites boredom

Unlike most UI students, who are dedicated to their education and spent most of Spring Break catching up on reading and finishing projects and papers early, I lounged on the couch. I became one with furniture.

Call me lazy. Label me a slacker. But I was comfortable and relaxed for the first time in months. My dog, Shadow, and I laid in the living room for nine complete days. I had everything essential to living comfortably within my reach. The chips, salsa, soda, remote control and my homework were all on the floor at the end of the couch. Yes, my book bag, along with a stack of books that don't fit inside, sat just beyond my fingertips gathering dust for a week.

I spent nine days updating myself on soaps. "Days of Our Lives" is just as riveting as always — I took the opportunity to sleep through most of it each day. I don't have cable, so I couldn't be choosy about the programming I watched. There were lousy soaps, even worse talk shows and the only quality time I could spend with my dog was outside in the rain. I chose to suffer through the soaps.

I'm not a big soap fan. I usually don't watch a lot of television. Over Spring Break I realized why. Daytime television sucks!

You can catch a plethora of real life, real action cop shows late in the afternoon when, traditionally, the masculine bread winner comes home to settle in his easy chair. He needs to boost his testosterone levels with heavy doses of tough guys or "bad boys."

When I was younger, I remember daytime television being filled with soap after soap. There were so many wealthy families suffering through hard times that no rational viewer could really equate the story lines with real life experiences; someone was having an affair, someone else was battling through their 29th divorce and still yet their daughter was marrying some ruffian from the poorer side of town.

While daytime viewers aren't following the hard times of the rich, famous and fictitious, they can tune into the real life horrors and oddities of actual people.

Once again reverting to my younger days when Sally and Phil were still boring and Oprah and Geraldo were breathing new life into the talk show stage, talk shows were few and far between. Times are changing because there are more talk shows than soaps.

Although Geraldo has now disappeared and Oprah has survived, viewers can tune into millions of other talk show hosts who have a new twist on "important things" to discuss.

Montel, Sally, Phil, Ricki, Vicki, Bertice and Regis and Kathy Lee are only the beginning. They are controversial enough to reach the big time — the three major networks. Thousands of others fill air time on smaller stations — not controversial enough to waste national network time.

Nothing is out of bounds for these talk shows. Everyone remembers Geraldo's guest breaking Geraldo's nose with a chair from the stage and Oprah's up and down weight loss battle, but what is so riveting about today's talk shows?

Last week Oprah discussed people's squeaky voices others couldn't stand. Big Deal.

Ricki Lake featured daughters who were tired of their sexy moms. Most of the sexy moms were too overweight to be considered sexy by the studio audience. Montel talked to girls who beat their mothers. My simple conclusion: parents need to discipline their children from day one. Phil hashed over Whitewater and Vicki interviewed child stars who are now old and no longer stars.

These boring bits of television all occurred in one day. We've had a national smoke-out to boycott smoking and promote health reasons to quit. We've even had a national sex-out day to promote abstinence in youth. Maybe we should sponsor a local tube-out day to boycott bad entertainment.

Housing costs increase again

J. Richard Rock
Staff Writer

If Wednesday's rate hearing was any indication, most students living in UI residence halls are not too concerned with proposed increases in room and board costs.

The meeting, which was advertised for the two weeks prior, attracted fewer than a dozen students and only a handful of them were opposed to the proposal.

The proposal is to increase rates from between 4 percent and 4.3 percent depending on the meal plan and living situation of each student.

That means the typical residence hall member who lives in a double occupancy room and has the 19 meals/week plan, can expect to pay an additional $140 beginning this fall.

Eben Sutton, a senior who serves on the Committee of Housing and Dining, which helped develop the proposed increase, stated during the hearing, "I think the 4.2 percent increase is reasonable. Perhaps that is why there are so few people here."

Roger Oetlli, director of University Residences, also attributed low turnout to improved communications between University Residences and the students.

Jim Bauer, director of Residence Life, stressed they had tried to get the information out to every student in the system.

There was, however, some opposition to the increase. Sue Pierce, Forney Hall, presented Oetlli a letter signed by residents of Forney Hall which stated their opposition to "any increase because it makes it difficult to attract women to the residence halls." Pierce noted that in some cases it is now less expensive for a woman to live in the Greek system than it is to live in the residence halls.

A situation which is also increasingly true of men who are looking at living in a fraternity.

the meeting to protest the increases in rates for cooperative housing. In a cooperative hall, residents agree to share in some of the routine cleaning and upkeep in exchange for lower rates.

"I know some girls in Steele House that are thinking of not coming back because they don't think it is worth it. We just don't save much anymore," said Allmaras.

Oetlli spoke with Allmaras and another resident of Steele House after the meeting to begin assessing their concerns and working toward possible changes in the cooperative residence hall program.

Brian Radford commented on behalf of what appears to be the consensus, "Most of the presidents are satisfied with the increase, they are not pleased to have an increase, but after two years of ten-percent increases they are satisfied."

Most students seem to accept the increase as being reasonable, especially when inflation is considered.

Stuart Davis, associate director

for Business Operations, explained the reasons behind the need for increases. He outlined six basic areas which necessitated the 4.2-percent rate hike including: debt requirements,

SUB to house student groups

Mike Cole
Staff Writer

The UI is taking steps to provide a sense of equal representation on campus.

Up until now groups have had no formal place to set up their organizations. In response for this need for space the new UI Student Organization Center will soon be opening in the Student Union Building. The center is available for registered clubs and organizations who are in need of file or office space. Janet Loucks, chairperson of the Student Union Board, said, "The center will have offices for organizational officers to meet, as well as providing a centrally located place for students to obtain information about each individual organization."

Guidelines for the allocation of student organization space are:

• Any recognized student organization that provides service or programs for the entire university community will receive top priority.

• Any recognized student organization that does not have any space allocated to it in another building at the UI will also receive priority.

• The decision of the Student Union Board will be based on prior usage of space in the Student Organization Center.

If applicable, the following criteria will also be considered: the amount of annual activity, the need for work space or storage space, the need for a central location for easy access to the student body as a whole vs. central location for a specific interest group, cooperation with other organizations within the center and past use of the space by the applying organization.

Part of the center will be an international section which will give groups an opportunity to represent their respective cultures. For those looking to get first-hand experience of a country they may visit one day, these offices should be a great place to visit. Organizations are envisioned to be moving in by April 25 but exactly which groups who will receive priority is yet to be decided.

The committee to decide on the criteria for the placement of organizations met last night to begin discussing potential guidelines. With all of the recent controversy concerning the Women's Center, those groups given space will be watched closely.

Although it has not yet been determined, groups such as the

Gay Lesbian and Bisexual Association may not be deemed appropriate for the center. It will have to be decided where the line will lie concerning simply providing information or pushing an agenda.

The determination of which groups will or will not be given space is not wholly left to those presently in control. The committee is reportedly open to any input from interested students. Loucks also pointed out there are two positions open on the Student Union Board.

All Board members have voting privileges and can vote on the criteria for space allocation. Concerned students who have constructive suggestions for the Student Organization Space Committee should contact Janet Loucks at 885-6331. All interested in applying for a Board position should contact the Senate Office for an application.

chiatry at the University of California-San Diego, will be guest speaker for the Spring 1994 Grass Traveling Scientist Lecture Series to be conducted this weekend at Washington State University.

The event, which is jointly sponsored by the Department of Veterinary and Comparative Anatomy, Pharmacology and Physiology, the Grass Foundation and the Northern Rocky Mountain
Chapter of the Society for Neuroscience, is scheduled for Sunday beginning at 7 p.m. at the WSU Compton Union Building in Rooms 206-216.

This year's lecture topic,
"Neurobiology of Drug Dependence," will provide an overview of the various brain mechanisms involved in drug and alcohol abuse and discuss recent findings regarding how abuse affects brain cells and function.
An authority on addiction stress,
Dr. Koob has published over 300 scientific papers and has earned funding for his research from numerous national agencies.

Koob has been the recipient of the Daniel Efron Award for Excellence in Research from the American College of Neuropsychopharmacology and has also earned four excellence in teaching awards.

WSU has an active neuroscience program and the Grass Foundation lecture offers university professors, high school students, teachers, undergraduate students, area physicians, hospital staff members and the general public an opportunity to learn more about neuroscience and its relationship to current research in drug and alcohol abuse pattern.

The lecture is free of charge and is open to the public. An informal reception will follow the presentation.

Spring Break uneventful

Katé Lyons-Holestine
Editor-in-Chief

With the majority of students out of town over the past week, reports to the police were minimal.

The Moscow Police responded to a report of someone smoking marijuana. Zeke Dexter of Targhee Hall was charged with possession of paraphernalia.

Two Chrisman Hall residents were charged with minor consuming alcohol March 14.

In unrelated incidents, Charles Webb, 18, and Athanasios Katsilonetes, 19, were charged with the alcohol violations.

Mark J. Hall, of Sigma Chi, was charged with malicious injury to property when he drove his automobile on the lawn behind the Sigma Chi buildings.

The UI Campus Police Substation, under the direction of Kershnik, will have five uniformed interns by the end of next week. The Moscow Police had provided opportunities for criminal justice students to do practicum work in their department, but it was loosely organized.

"After my appointment to the Campus Substation, one of the objectives handed to me by the Chief was to set up the program," Kershnik said.

The internship is year-long and is affiliated with the UI Criminal Justice program. There are guidelines to entering the program, but it offers students a very unique experience in law enforcement. Students are exposed to municipal and law enforcement as well as campus laws enforcement.

"We're big enough to be diverse, but small enough to know people and let them feel part of the group," he added.

Another reason for organizing the program was "self serving for the police department." It will provide better services to the campus.

deferred maintenance, life and fire safety issues, meeting the Americans with Disabilities Act as required by Congress, salary and benefit increases which are mandated by the state and general inflationary increases in operating costs.

Managing debt requirements also includes the assumption of new debt in order to take advantage of low interest rates. Some of the projects which will be funded this way include window replacement, roof repairs and elevator upgrades.

Oetli pointed to the replacement of windows as a big improvement. According to Oetli, the new windows are so much more efficient the residence system has been able to reduce its energy consumption by 10 percent.

"We have actually been asked to turn down the heat," said Oetli. Referring to all the changes taking place Oetli commented that it was the basic "comfort level and increased level of satisfaction" that was at issue.

Information made available by the residence system highlights the need to increase the reserve for deferred maintenance which is used for general upkeep and future renovation plans. Currently the deferred maintenance level is nearly $800,000 short of levels recommended.

Some of the funds will be used to improve fire and safety concerns as identified by an independent architectural firm in 1986.

"Our current funding level is not adequate to address the desired fire and life safety improvements in a cost effective or timely manner," said a housing statement.

University residence halls currently provide no ADA compliant units for people with disabilities. As long-range plans are developed to address ADA requirements, funds will be used to make necessary changes.

The university, as a state run institution, is also subject to mandate pay increases for employees which require additional funding. Davis, who maintains that these increases are needed to maintain quality professional employees pointed to the fact that a full-time custodian makes just over $12,000. "That's just above the poverty line," said Davis. This year's 5.4 percent increase in salaries and benefits, will cost the residence system nearly $70,000 additional.

"The state has not provided increases during the past several years to keep up with inflation, this increase is needed and deserved," said Davis.

The final area that the increase will help in is to offset general operating expenses which have risen due to inflation.

One area of concern in particular is garbage disposal. Garbage rates could increase by as much as 100 percent over the next year. Currently the residence system spends nearly $60,000 to dispose of garbage.

The rate hearing was conducted in order to gauge student opinions concerning the increase and to clarify and questions that students might have. The proposed increase will now be passed on to President Elisabeth Zinser who will have the final decision on the increase.

Cyberspace takes off

In late March and throughout April, the community will have an opportunity to learn about and experience cyberspace when the UI Laboratory for Applied Logic and Department of Computer Science present a lecture series entitled "Cyberspace: The New Frontier."

Cyberspace is that part of civilization that exists in electronic form and already has a major impact on everyone's life. It is not just computers and computer networks, but every telephone conversation, credit card purchase and ATM transaction. It is the technology that provides almost instantaneous access to data and to people and it is considered to be "the newest territory for human exploration." Its most important ethical dimensions are just beginning to be examined.

The lectures are scheduled from 7 to 9 p.m. March 28, April 1, April 11 and April 18 in the University Auditorium. The April 22 lecture will be held in the Student Union Building Silver and Gold Room.

Opening the lecture series on March 28 will be speakers Carlos Schwantes, UI professor of history and director of the Institute for Pacific Northwest Studies and Douglas Lind, UI assistant professor of philosophy. Schwantes is the author or editor of nine books and is a recognized expert on the history of the old West. His lecture is entitled "From GeoSpace to

On April 1, John Perry Barlow, co-founder and executive chairman of the Electronic Frontier Foundation, will present "Building the Information Superspyway." Barlow writes and lectures on subjects relating to digital technology and society and is a contributing editor of numerous publications. He is a recognized authority on computer security, Virtual Reality, digitalized intellectual property and the social and legal conditions arising in the global network of connected computers.

"Circle the Wagons: Defining Security and the Rules of Cyberspace" will be the topic of the April 11 lecture by Eugene Spafford. Spafford is an associate professor of computer sciences at Purdue University, where he directs the Computer Operations, Audit and Security Tools Project and Laboratory and is an active researcher with the Software Engineering Research Center. He has co-authored or edited several books, is associate editor of the journal Computing Systems and is on the editorial and advisory boards of several other computer-related journals.

On April 18, Michael Joyce, a professor at Vassar, will present

"(Re)Placing the Author: 'A Book in the Ruins.'" Joyce is a prize-winning novelist who is best known for his work in hypertext fiction including his 1987 novel, Afternoon. He will discuss the future of the novel, the library and publishing in general in light of new developments in cyberspace. He also will read from his fiction.

On April 22, John L. Casti will present "The Simply Complex: The Science of Surprise in Nature and in Life." Casti is a resident member of the Santa Fe Institute in Santa Fe, N.M., and a professor of operations research and system theory at the Technical University of Vienna. Casti is author of two popular books on science, Paradigms Lost: Images of Man in the Mirror of Science and Searching for Certainty: What Scientists Can Know About the Future. He is the author of numerous articles, technical monographs and textbooks on mathematical modeling and is the editor of the journal Applied Mathematics and Computations.

The lecture series is funded by donations from GTE, the Microelectronics Research Center, Hewlett Packard, the UI College of Engineering, UI Departments of Computer Science, Electrical Engineering and English and the student chapter of the Association for Computing Machinery. The lectures are free and the public is invited to attend.

Marble keeps tightrope promise

Balancing doesn't happen often. Gymnasts fall off beams, tightrope walkers fall into lion pits, checking account numbers never match, checks bounce. Most students are forced to balance no more than $54.37 in their checking accounts, ASUI President John Marble is responsible for $1 million.

Marble and the Senate Finance Committee, with an unforgiving ax held near various ASUI departments, have managed to consciously trim the ASUI budget, a difficult act that has fallen the last three years. While staring into the mouth of a $38,000 deficit at the start of the year, Marble laid down the law to ASUI departments in the form of a simple choice: You find some areas to cut, or we will.

A three-step plan was phased in, starting with an fee increase of $1.50, making total ASUI tuition fees rise to $34.25. Enrollment growth was also considered, adding a few extra bucks to the pool. And then came the cutting.

It appears as if the cuts were not made with an Idaho backwoods chainsaw, but with surgical steel used to amputate useless sixth digits. General administration operating costs have been cut, some of which came from purchasing a fax machine that will delete expensive charges. The Argonaut also used a little liposuction by combining Advertising and Editorial budgets, and along with other departments, appropriately cutted funds for such things as food in various travel budgets.

Ironically, $5,000 was saved because students weren't allowed to spend it. A fiasco in which Lionel Hampton Jazz Festival student ticket prices were supposed to be supplemented by the ASUI didn't happen and students had to pay the high price. Consequently, ASUI didn't have to budget the supplement for next year.

Only a couple departments enjoyed the status quo or felt an increase. Outdoor Programs and Outdoor Rentals faced no cuts and Outdoor Rentals generates enough revenue to cover all salaries, irregular help, capital outlaw and operating expenses. The International Association saw an increase, partially to catch up Director Joanne Trail with other professional salary increases and also a general expansion of duties and services provided by the IFA.

Marble's budget for fiscal year 1995 is currently in the hands of the ASUI Finance Committee, which has been tweaking it here and there before it will be presented to the entire Senate in mid April.

President Marble kept one of his campaign promises by walking a decision-making tightrope, a feat most politicians never live up to. Thanks.

Résumé built on involvement

Why is it UI students don't get involved in the hundreds of organizations on campus?

Are they too busy trying to get out of here in four years?

Are they too good for the groups or do they feel they are not good enough?

No matter what the reason may be, the fact is there are clubs, organizations, living groups, honor societies, jobs, internships and many other opportunities out there. There is something for everyone. What is the excuse for someone to not get involved?

I have found that even if a group doesn't sound like it would have anything for me, sometimes it has the most to offer.

As a full-time student I have found time to be an employee of the Argonaut and the College of Education, a member and past officer of a fraternity and chairman of an ASUI committee. Tell me what it is about other people that they cannot get involved in campus activities.

The UI offers a full slate of activities that add much more than mere resume fillers. These activities add experiences that can mean the difference between getting a job or not.

It is crucial for people to remember that employers don't care if someone graduated in four years. They are interested in those who were involved in different activities and made themselves better people.

Clubs are a great means of opportunities for people to expand their knowledge on certain subjects.

Most departments have established groups or clubs that offer educational programming and experience in the field student's field.

Departments encourage students to get involved in these groups to add strength to their abilities.

Greek houses, residence halls and off-campus housing offer opportunities to get involved in residence activities.

Strong leadership skills are the most positive results anyone can walk away from the experiences with. One does not necessarily have to be an officer but could just play on an intramural team to learn valuable lessons.

Men's and women's rugby clubs struggle to put teams together to compete as they continue to advertise for new players. So do other sporting clubs.

Remember, a person does not have to be the best at what they do, if they join they will improve by joining a group of those who may be better. Another thing to remember is to not be intimidated by those more experienced because they were in the same spot sometime in their life.

Honor societies can be beneficial to people who get in. I realize they are not open to everyone, but for those who are eligible, it cannot hurt to join one.

The doors could open even wider for those that belonged to any type of honor society because most employers don't know the difference between one and the other.

Daytime television hasn't improved, still incites boredom

Unlike most UI students, who are dedicated to their education and spent most of Spring Break catching up on reading and finishing projects and papers early, I lounged on the couch. I became one with furniture.

Call me lazy. Label me a slacker. But I was comfortable and relaxed for the first time in months. My dog, Shadow, and I laid in the living room for nine complete days. I had everything essential to living comfortably within my reach. The chips, salsa, soda, remote control and my homework were all on the floor at the end of the couch. Yes, my book bag, along with a stack of books that don't fit inside, sat just beyond my fingertips gathering dust for a week.

I spent nine days updating myself on soaps. "Days of Our Lives" is just as riveting as always — I took the opportunity to sleep through most of it each day. I don't have cable, so I couldn't be choosy about the programming I watched. There were lousy soaps, even worse talk shows and the only quality time I could spend with my dog was outside in the rain. I chose to suffer through the soaps.

I'm not a big soap fan. I usually don't watch a lot of television. Over Spring Break I realized why. Daytime television sucks!

You can catch a plethora of real life, real action cop shows late in the afternoon when, traditionally, the masculine bread winner comes home to settle in his easy chair. He needs to boost his testosterone levels with heavy doses of tough guys

or "bad boys."

When I was younger, I remember daytime television being filled with soap after soap. There were so many wealthy families suffering through hard times that no rational viewer could really equate the story lines with real life experiences; someone was having an affair, someone else was battling through their 29th divorce and still yet their daughter was marrying some ruffian from the poorer side of town.

While daytime viewers aren't following the hard times of the rich, famous and fictitious, they can tune into the real life horrors and oddities of actual people.

Once again reverting to my younger days when Sally and Phil were still boring and Oprah and Geraldo were breathing new life into the talk show stage, talk shows were few and far between. Times are changing because there are more talk shows than soaps.

Although Geraldo has now disappeared and Oprah has survived, viewers can tune into millions of other talk show hosts who have a new twist on "important things" to discuss.

Montel, Sally, Phil, Ricki, Vicki, Bertice and Regis and Kathy Lee are only the beginning. They are controversial enough to reach the big time — the three major networks. Thousands of others fill air time on smaller stations — not controversial enough to waste national network time.

Nothing is out of bounds for these talk shows. Everyone remembers Geraldo's guest breaking Geraldo's nose with a chair from the stage and Oprah's up and down weight loss battle, but what is so riveting about today's talk shows?

Last week Oprah discussed people's squeaky voices others couldn't stand. Big Deal.

Ricki Lake featured daughters who were tired of their sexy moms. Most of the sexy moms were too overweight to be considered sexy by the studio audience. Montel talked to girls who beat their mothers. My simple conclusion: parents need to discipline their children from day one. Phil hashed over Whitewater and Vicki interviewed child stars who are now old and no longer stars.

These boring bits of television all occurred in one day. We've had a national smoke-out to boycott smoking and promote health reasons to quit. We've even had a national sex-out day to promote abstinence in youth. Maybe we should sponsor a local tube-off day to boycott bad entertainment.

Letters to the Editor

Shouldn't blame high schools

Your Feb. 8 issue published a feature story concerning one of UI's English instructors, Julie Joki. She bemoaned the writing deficiencies of her students and blamed these difficulties on high school teachers who, she assumes, "Want to just pass them through."

I can only surmise Joki has never taught at the high school level and hasn't bothered to converse with those of us who do.

She expresses concern about students intimidated in their writing by teachers only concerned with "finding fault." However, she seems curiously willing to do just that when she accuses an entire group of teachers of unprofessional conduct.

To glorify one's accomplishments by pointing to the assumed inadequacies of fellow educators is a tactic hardly worthy of an instructor at the university level.

Teaching today is often a frustrating undertaking, but supplying a simplistic solution to a complex problem helps no one.

I would invite Ms. Joki to do a bit of investigating before she speaks in unsubstantiated generalities.

Phil 101 class kills fairy tales

OK, so who didn't get a chuckle out of the religious fanatics in the quad Friday before break? I must say I was impressed with the large number of people who were willing to challenge the zealots' effusive fairy tales.

If, like these brave students, you often wonder with dismay at all of the needless pain, suffering and death that occurs in the name of one god or another, then do I have the class for you!

The class is Philosophy 101,

Ethics and the teacher is Wayne Fox.

This is not another "easy-A" core requirement with no application in the real world. Ethics is a challenging and supportive learning environment that empowers you to examine various beliefs, both your own and others' and the reasons for believing or disbelieving them.

Kudos are due Mr. Fox. All the extra time and effort he invests in being that elusive creature who a real teacher tends to evoke an even more ephemeral beast — a real student.

If avaricious televangelists, present-day religious wars or silent boycotting by certain local religious groups sound a call-to-arms somewhere deep inside you, then sign up for Philosophy 101 next semester.

Learning to think for ourselves is the most important lesson of our university education.

Jesus preached unity not trinity

I response to a March 4 Lyle Cooper letter in the Argonaut: In the Holy Qur'an, Islam is teaching us to "Invite (all) to the way of thy LORD, with wisdom and beautiful preaching; and argue with them in ways that are best and most gracious..." (HQ 16:125).

Mr. Cooper, I wish to affirm to you and the readers of this letter the Muslim believe Christ Jesus is a messenger of Allah to the "lost sheep of Israel" and that he was born miraculously without male intervention, and that he was inspired by Allah like the other prophets sent by Him. But we still strongly disagree about the sonship divinity of Jesus and also claiming that Jesus is God. This strong disagreement is derived from the Words of Allah revealed to Prophet Mohammed (PBUH):

"It befits not (the majesty of) Allah that He should beget a son, Glory be to Him! When He decrees a matter, He only says to it, 'Be, and it is,' (HQ 19:35). For me, as a Muslim, to argue Jesus is God as claimed, then I am asking a simple question: Could God sleep? According to the Scripture Psalm 121:4, God could not sleep: "Behold, He that Keepeth Israel shall neither slumber nor sleep." We all know Jesus used to sleep and eat as everyone else.

Also, nowhere in the Bible does Jesus claim to be God and if there is such an explicit saying, I would like to see someone quote that verse from the New or Old Testament.

I will provide the answer for your response to my letter merely from quoting the Words of Allah revealed in the Holy Qur'an:

Allah, the only God, does not sleep: "There is no God but He, the Living, the Self-subsisting, Supporter of all, no slumber can seize him nor sleep," (HQ 2:255).

Allah does not eat: "He it is that feedeth but is not fed," (HQ 6:14).

Allah is NOT the prophet Jesus Christ: "They disbelieved indeed those that say Allah is Christ, the son of Mary," (HQ 5:17).

Prophet Jesus is NOT more than a messenger of Allah: "Christ Jesus the son of Mary was (no more than) a messenger of Allah, and His Word," (HQ 4:171).

Allah is ONE not THREE: "Say not three: desist: it will be better for you: for Allah is One God: Glory be to Him," (H.Q. 4:171).

To answer your question as why Allah refers to Himself as "WE" (HQ 5:47): "It was We who revealed the Law to Moses."

The reader should be informed the Holy Qur'an was revealed unto Prophet Mohammed (PBUH) in Arabic, which uses the PLURAL OF RESPECT to emphasize the importance the speaker or of the action that was accomplished.

Senate's efforts go unnoticed

In the final distractions of pre-break activities, I wasn't sure if anyone noted the extraordinary efforts undertaken by the ASUI Senate and Executive Officers. The group wrestled with the thorny issue of what to do with Dan Whiting and the issues his attempts to disenfranchise the Women's Center raised.

In the midst of midterms, the group met for a total of six hours Wednesday night, concluding just before midnight. Many of the individuals involved had tests the next day, but all persisted in pursuing the questions involved.

On the following Friday, spring break eve, the group met again at 2:30 p.m. and ultimately concluded at 6 p.m. While their student counterparts began vacation, the group addressed the pragmatic concerns and the moral issues inherent in the situation.

Considerable time outside the meetings was spent researching the problem and gathering information. Most everyone found it a draining, demanding effort in evaluation and judgment.

The dedication of the ASUI Senate and Executive Officers is sometimes overlooked. Their efforts and sacrifice in this painful dilemma deserve attention.

Letters to the Editor

Tired of twisted Christian truths

This letter is dedicated to the efforts of Mr. Ralph Nielsen to destroy Christianity. Mr. Nielsen, let me first say I have no wish to argue with you. However, I do not wish to sit by and let you twist truth to fit your own purposes. If you want to do this in an arena where nobody expects anything different, go into politics. Religion, on the other hand, is a more sacred subject.

The point is, Mr. Nielsen, words, statistics and Seattle grunge music can be twisted into anything you wish them to. Faith and truth, however, cannot be. Truth remains constant, Mr. Nielsen, whether accepted or denied. It will be as it is no matter what we decide. Neither I, nor anyone can ever prove to you the existence of God or the divinity of Christ. Faith is real, Mr. Nielsen, but it is not knowledge. Faith and hope, however, carry much more strength and resolve than knowledge.

The question is, why do you fight so hard against what you do not believe? Certainly, the ideals of living a Christian life cannot possibly hurt you?

"Every knee shall bow," (Romans 14:11) Mr. Nielsen. Bowing is much less painful, however, when it is done voluntarily.

The truth is inside everyone. Don't deny your own existence by refusing to believe in your Creator. You will only harm yourself.

See Ron Rankin for what he is

The March 16 edition of the Lewiston Morning Tribune carried an article addressing a recent newsletter of "The 1% Committee," in which the committee's president, Ron Rankin, issued a vicious attack on both UI and President Elisabeth Zinser.

My service in the Legislature has provided a vantage point from which to observe President Zinser's extremely effective and admirable efforts on behalf of UI. We are indeed blessed and fortunate to have this talented leader at the helm of Idaho's land grant university.

Not surprisingly, Mr. Rankin decries the salaries of government leaders as well as the salaries earned by the professional staff at UI. I suspect Mr. Rankin simply cannot abide anyone whose salary is more than his own. Apparently, Mr. Rankin has never taken the time to understand that many staff members generate their own funds or that the university benefits by having these professionals.

The attraction of highly skilled, internationally respected staff members who are effective fund raisers provides educational opportunities for our students and our communities. Apparently inclined to set wage controls in Idaho, Mr. Rankin believes that "no state education employee be paid more than the governor."

Mr. Rankin, coincidentally, announced his candidacy for that office in Boise on March 17. I guess he wants to be sure his salary will not be outdone by Idaho's teachers, for whom he holds such contempt.

Mr. Rankin's ego first became ruffled when Neil Meyer and Stephen Cooke's research on 1992's One Percent Initiative revealed that its impact would far exceed that espoused by its chief sponsor. More recently, North Idaho's loudest opportunist now takes exception to certain phrases used in textbooks and with the discussion of ideas that conflict with his own narrow views.

While most of us soon learn that the best way to make proper decisions is first to listen and evaluate the opinions of an issue's proponents and opponents, Mr. Rankin would confine truth to exclude all but his own particular dogma.

Mr. Rankin, since arriving here from California several years ago, has sought to discredit our institutions and leaders while passing himself off as a true American. I think it is important to see Mr. Rankin for what he really is.

Women address many issues

The wonderful backlash against women, gays, non-whites and the environment has smeared its ugly tentacles around the Women's Center. I guess Daniel Whiting can't stomach the fact women are political! He must want us to sit quietly and tidily on the sofas, like good women should. Wrong!

The March 4 Argonaut noted the Women's Center is "the focal point for women's concerns at the university and in the community." The Argonaut also gave examples of what Whiting felt went beyond the "legitimate" mission of the Center: Providing a phone line to homosexuals, Bisexual Alliance, conducting women's spirituality groups, taking a stand against the Idaho Citizen's Alliance's anti-gay initiative and showing a film about gay black men.

Whiting fails to understand that these examples are all women's concerns. The same forces that oppress women also oppress gays, non-whites and the environment. These forces are fear, greed and a dislike of anything that doesn't fit a narrowly-defined "norm." To deal with sexism, other forms of oppression need to be addressed — racism, homophobia and the destruction of Earth. Feminism addresses all of these; it is more than just equal pay for women and giving us the right to fight in wars. A women's center must address all of these issues.

Whiting said, "It is wrong to force taxpayers to support causes they strongly oppose." Through taxes, I am forced to support the military, a cause I strongly oppose.

Internships and jobs offer experience to college students for their life after college. For some, it is hard to imagine there is life after college, but it can only be enhanced by a solid internship or job.

This valuable experience is what professionals in the "real" world are interested in seeing from those who apply for a job. I can tell you the experiences may be rough but they help students now rather than hurt them later.

I can write all the columns I want encouraging people to get involved in different groups, but there will always be those people who are not involved and won't get involved.

It is these people who will suffer from their own defeat in the "real" world because no one can make their decisions for them, I can only encourage what I feel is best.

For some people it is too late; they face graduation. For the vast majority, however, there is still hope.

My advice is to get out and get involved in simple ways. Everyone knows someone who is involved and it will only take a short while before everyone is involved. If everyone who reads this column would join some group as a result, I can feel a sense of accomplishment. If nothing happens, I can only feel failure.

If there is one thing I have learned from involvement, it is easy to fail and hard to succeed. This time I can only hope I am a success — I have no control over what the reader can do, but at least I have involved myself in their decisions.

Water fight focus of Borah

Dave Lewis
Staff Writer

The 1994 Borah Symposium explores water as a source of conflict and searches for resolutions.

Martha Kitzrow welcomed those in attendance and opened the symposium by introducing moderator Douglas Grant. Grant, a professor at the UI Law School, spoke briefly on two early water rights conflicts, both involving gunfire. Clearly, water rights are an important source of conflict.

Barbara Sundberg was the first of three speakers Wednesday night. Her speech featured an overview of the political realities of the Middle Eastern theater.

Sundberg gave a crash course in the history and fundamental tenets of Islam, the chief religion of the Middle East. Sundberg said Islamic countries are not autocracies or theocracies but, "political organizations based on religious law."

Sundberg believes Islam is different from other world religions partly because it has no real seat of power or capital city. She said because there is no single geographic center or universal set of political principles of Islam, "the sources of political and economic ideas and forms of expression are as diverse as the house of Islam itself." Neighboring Middle Eastern countries are governed by differing and often contradictory beliefs. When combined with a severe water shortage, this results in political instability.

Jacques Baudot, the U.N. coordinator of the World Summit for Social Development, spoke on the structure and mission of the United Nations. Baudot's topics included the setting in which the United Nations does its work, the culture of diplomacy and U.N.'s ideology.

To work efficiently, the UN depends on formality and tolerance. However arrogance is frequently mixed in, Baudot observed. He continued, "this is unfortunate because what is required is more humility. This is a shortcoming of the United Nations."

Last to speak was Thomas Naff. The previous speakers provided background information concerning "Water and International Conflict." Naff came to the podium armed with extensive, pertinent and detailed knowledge of water conflict in the Middle East.

Naff's discourse on the scarcity of water in the Middle East was sobering. Realizing only 13,000 cubic kilometers of the Earth's total of 1.4 billion cubic kilometers of water is available for human consumption was enough to make his audience thirsty.

Thirst is natural response to Naff's remarks. He said the "red line of danger; the warning signal indicating the global tank is approaching empty occurs at a consumption rate of 10,000 cubic kilometers of water. Present consumption of water has already reached the 8,500 cubic kilometer mark." Limiting population growth is the chief problem faced by world leaders today. "If the world's population, as is expected, doubles sometime around the middle of the next century. And if effective measures to reverse present trends are not taken in time, that 10,000 cubic kilometer red line will be crossed. At that point the world will almost certainly have entered a scarcity zone that will cause hardship even for the most wealthy nations of the world," said Naff.

Concert 'moshes' audience

Lance Graveley
Staff Writer

Words cannot describe the experience of going to The Obsessed/Prong/White Zombie concert in Spokane. In the three-hour performance, I was crushed, pushed and, at least four different times, found myself underneath some guy who was trying to crowd surf.

And through it all, it was one of the most memorable and exciting experiences I have ever had.

Driven by the rough, grunge vocals of Rob Zombie, the crowd threw itself into a head-banging frenzy. Nearly piled underneath the crowd during the band's first two songs, I was able to escape to one of the more passive front-stage sections and still be alive to tell the story.

The band delivered everything the audience had hoped for and more. Starting with a heavy display of fireworks, the band immediately went into the motivating "Grindhouse (Go-Go)."

When the thunderous "W.T.P.M.F./Psychoholic Slag" started up, the pit expanded to take up anybody and everybody who was within its grasp, including myself.

Aside from the songs, the best highlights of the concert came from Rob Zombie himself. Especially when he tempted the crowd by saying he had a bet with security if any crowd member could make it past the guards and onto the stage, they would win $800. Upon hearing that, at least ten people immediately tried to scale the fence and trench that separated them from the stage. Two or three actually made it, only to be hauled off by the agitated "blue-shirts."

The band concluded their Spokane concert with, according to Zombie, their 350th performance of the bass-driven "Thunderkiss '65" — the song that broke them wide open. One of hottest tickets of the year ended as explosively as it started.

Music Review

White Zombie was the headline, but Prong, an opener, was taken by the audience with near equivalent enthusiasm. The blending of punk, dark industrial thrash and heavy metal, the four member band created a blistering impact on the mostly Zombie-loving crowd. "Big to Differ" and "Prove You Wrong" sent the audience in a quivering state as the beat rumbled to a point measured on the Richter Scale.

The only disappointment of the show was the first billing, a little-known band called The Obsessed. They started off strong and let some of the more pumped up audience members practice their moshing skills, but the band dissipated into a set of songs that were long and uninteresting.

I want to offer my advice for anybody who likes alternative/grunge music and is planning to go to a concert in the near future, but is unsure of "moshing."

1. Moshing is more of a reflex than a deliberate form of dance, therefore, if you are in one of the more active sections of the audience, you are going to end up moshing.

2. Do not wear anything you have a fear of losing; jewelry, watches, glasses, etc.

3. Be aware of crowd surfers because one might fall on you.

4. If possible, move to a "watch-only" section because in these concerts, front row often is not the best place to be.

Third time's a charmer

Katy Miller
Contributing Writer

It began as a vision for Diane Walker and Dan Bukvich three years ago. It consisted of bringing together choreographers, composers, musicians and dancers to form an experimental display of imagination and talent.

What evolved has become known as Dancers, Drummers and Dreamers, which allows the merging of structured, formal dancing and music with playful, inventive performances by everyone. The production is a combined effort of 30 dancers, 50 to 70 musicians and various choreographers and composers. All are students, with the exception of one faculty choreographer.

Not all of the musicians will be on stage with the dancers. Many have spent hours beforehand recording music as accompaniment for certain dances. The musicians playing live will not be hidden behind stage or in an orchestra pit. Instead, they share the stage with the dancers as part of the visual image.

Along with 11 dances and a Percussion Ensemble overture, there will be five percussion interludes. One of these is titled "Playing the Hall," and in it percussionists use their mallets to play assorted surfaces in the theater for a variety of sounds.

During the March 25th performance, Dancers, Drummers and Dreamers III will also honor Provost Tom Bell for his continuous support of the arts at the UI with a tribute of bells, as well as vocal recognition.

Over the past two years, public response to this imaginative production has increased. Last year, Dancers, Drummers and Dreamers played for a full house both nights. Shows this year are Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. in Hartung Theater. Tickets are on sale at the door and at Ticket Express: $4 for students and seniors, $6 for the general public.

Week of 'realities'

How many of us really subscribe to the "Brotherhood of Man" concept?

That is, the idea that no matter what club, organization, political faction, religion, etc. a person subscribes to, she/he still belongs to the same massive group as every other person — humankind.

Hopefully, we are able to recognize the people around us as fellow members — as partners in this race through life.

That's the idea behind All Campus Week, which began on Tuesday and ends Saturday.

The ASUI committee in charge of planning the week has worked to provide a variety of different participation and entertainment events for all students with no membership to any kind of club or living group required.

They want students to realize they are not just Greeks, not just dormers and not just off-campus livers. We are all students at one university — it's a title everyone shares. Why not share some fun together, too?

Things began on Wednesday with the international film Landscape in the Mist, moving to Thursday when the volleyball and football teams sparred in the "Beauty vs. the Beast" Basketball jam, and Thursday evening, with the musical The Lion, the Witch and the Wardrobe at the University Auditorium.

This afternoon, free of charge, at the Vandal Lounge from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., UI students will have a chance to visit a new universe when virtual reality invades the Student Union Building.

From the Kramer Agency, an entertainment organization in Grand Rapids, Mich., comes Virtuality, a "stereoscopic 3-D, 360 degree walk-through visit to Cyberspace."

Imagine being immersed in another world. You are not yourself entirely, but some kind of intergalactic traveler.

You're in the midst of surroundings completely foreign to your earth-based sensibilities. You're wielding a "spacestick," which can be your sword, your magic wand, your pointer — basically whatever you imagine it to be. You are in Virtuality.

Says ASUI program director Jan Abrams, "It's something we thought kids would get a kick out of. And it also introduces them to new technology."

The Cyberspace effect of Virtuality is achieved through the donning of an exclusive headset suffering from the effects of water scarcity, crossing the "red line of over consumption" would be catastrophic.

Naff believes a major obstacle in efficient water allocation is the sensitivity of information about water. Even in America, water within a state is jealously guarded by that state.

In the Middle East the problem is compounded because countries there have a tradition of war. Consequently, accurate and timely water data, when it is available, is usually not shared.

Where water is scarce the relationship between water and national security is absolute, especially when two or more parties compete for the same source. All parties believe when water is allocated to one, it is done only at the expense of the other. This perception is the root of water conflicts — the parties involved believe they can not share valuable water.

To prevent water conflict, Naff put forth the following suggestions: manage water on a basin wide or region wide scale, share supply data in an accurate and timely manner and restructure economies to be more water efficient.

Unfortunately, few of these recommended solutions are possible in the Middle East without a stable and lasting peace.

At the close of the program each speaker fielded questions. When responding to the question, "What can we here in Idaho do to help?" Sundberg recalled the American grassroots movement that finally forced the Nestlé company to stop promoting breast milk substitute formula in third world counties. United States citizens wrote letters and boycotted the company. This pressure forced Nestlé, the U.S. government and the World Health Organization to change its policy.

The policy change curtailed the use of formula in many areas.

"There were children dying, so the publicity and the politics were such that everyone believed children were dying. The political awareness was raised enough so something was done about it," Sundberg said.

If, as Naff projects, the Jordan River will run out of water by 2015, we should be doing something about water and water conflict right now.

Attention poets

If the three poetry contests mentioned earlier this semester were not enough, there are three more coming up soon.

Arcadia Poetry Press is offering $500 grand prize in its new "Poetic Achievement Awards" contest. There are 48 cash prizes being offered.

Entry in the contest is free. All entries are considered for publication in the Arcadia Poetry Anthology, a hardcover collection of poetry.

Poets are to submit one poem of 20 lines or less. Poems can be on any subject and in any style.

The deadline is May 31. Winners will be notified by August 31 with prizes awarded immediately.

Send entries to Arcadia Poetry Press, Dept. L, 1101-A Sovereign Row, Oklahoma City, Okla., 73108.

There is also an international poetry contest being held by the Anthology of Contemporary Poetry.

Poems must be typed or hand-printed in double space with the name and address of the poet at the top-left hand corner.

If a student, the university attended should be included in the address.

Poems must be original and previously unpublished. Works printed in magazines or newspapers are acceptable.

They can be of any theme but they are limited to 20 lines.

Foreign languages are welcome to submit works. There is a minimum entry of three poems and a maximum of 20.

Entries must be postmarked no later than June 30. The company is also having a fall contest. The fall deadline is October 30.

called Visette, which transports the player to a new reality (a virtual one, so to speak ...). The player is given a joystick, the spacestick, which functions in the capacities mentioned above, or simply as a guiding hand throughout the journey.

There is a lot of software available at the Virtuality program, including armored combat vehicles, Demolition Derby stock cars, 3-D maneuvering space-ships, and simulations of harrier jump-jet.

The whole effect is made possible through a multi-processor computer system which uses CD-ROM and HARD DISK storage.

These elements provide the stereo images you see, along with the sounds and spoken instructions coming from the "real" world that you hear and speak.

Tonight, from 7:30 to 11 p.m., a variety of "TGIF" activities will be in the SUB. The Vandal Cafe and grill will be open, KUOI will be playing music, horse races on film and "funky 50's UI movies" will be showing. Students can ham it up with Karaoke, computer animated movies will be available in the Borah Theater and pool and bowling will also be at students' disposal.

Mocktails are on the agenda too, plus various prizes for events, from pizzas to CD's to gift certificates from local establishments. And, it's all free.

Saturday wraps up the week of all campus activities with a brand new event-concept called "Bandstravaganza." Four different bands and a DJ will be on tap, in five different rooms of the SUB. ASUI All-Campus Week chairwoman Julie Manthey said, "It's going to be pretty amazing!"

The committee, which consists of members who live in residence halls, fraternities and off-campus, tried to schedule completely contrasting bands so that everyone could find something they would enjoy.

The groups will be: Raspberry, a local alternative band; Planetary Refugees, a Reggae band from Spokane; The Secret Agents, a classic rock band based in Lewiston; and Cabin Fever, a local country band. And a Techno DJ will also be playing in the Dipper, the study lounge downstairs.

The rooms have not been concretely assigned to each band, due to sound difficulties, but each will be in one of the following places: the Silver and Gold Room, the Vandal Cafe or the Vandal Lounge.

There is a $5 cover charge to get into the SUB.

Manthey described All Campus Week this way: "It's a time when people can have fun and not be with a certain group. People can be casual and just hang out."

Snowboarding:

With the snow still falling in the mountains and the chair lifts running, it is time for students to remove their minds from homework or jobs and envision riding big airs and carving deep powder while they still can.

Snowboarding, the fastest growing of all on-snow recreational activities, has become a force to reckon with.

Snowboarding is a decade-old sport. It is currently permitted in nearly 700 ski resorts in the United States and Canada. This includes all local ski resorts. The U. S. population of snowboarders is 1.2 million — with 71 percent male and 29 percent female.

Ski Industries of America said, "While most snowboarders are still teens and young adults, there is a growing segment of the population in their 30s, 40s and 50s who snowboard as another way to enjoy the winter mountain experience. Families are finding that one or two members want to snowboard while the rest of the family skis."

A survey in the Spokesman-Review found the average snowboarder is a 21-year-old male who snowboards 15 days a year. The average skier skies only five days.

With the rapidly growing success of snowboarding, many ski resorts are now offering snowboarding lessons.

Even though snowboarding has gained rapid growth, a common belief is that some ski resorts only allow snowboarding because it generates a considerable amount of revenue. Ski reports complain that snowboarders are bringing up their city attitudes. Another complaint is that snowboarders avoid the rules of the ski areas.

In November's issue of Snowboard Magazine, Gordon Robbins, a ski instructor from Vermont, wrote that it is the attitude of snowboarders and it is the way they act toward other people that does the damage.

"Youth means energy, lack of fear and a certain degree of inconsiderateness that simply comes from inexperience. None of this is bad — it just comes with the territory," Robbins wrote.

Robbins also wrote that snowboarders and skiers in general need to think more about what they are doing on the mountain and how it impacts and affects others. He believes the answers lie in education and control.

All snowboarders and skiers have one thing in common, Robbins wrote, they love snow. "So ride it and groove it and let the rest of us do the same," Robbins wrote.

Photos and Story by Bart Stageberg

A common snowboarding technique is the Halfpike. A "U" shape is cut into the snow and the snowboarders do acrobatic moves off of it. Another advantage to snowboarding is that snowboarders can be on the slopes long after skiers give up the hills for spring.

Combined sports trophy hunt on

The end of the Big Sky Conference is steadily closing in. With that is the quest to gain the All-Sports Trophies.

The trophies are a combination of all the sports which are awarded points by placing. The teams places in all sports are added up. There are three trophies, a men's, a women's and a combination of the two.

In the men's division, the UI Vandals are in second trailing Weber State by 11 points. Idaho State is third. Meanwhile, Boise State is leading the second half of the teams in fifth place.

The UI women athlete's are standing in third. Boise State is leading the bracket with their championships on the golf course, the indoor track and the basketball floor. The Lady Vandals trail second place runner Montana by only a 8.5 point margin.

As far as the combined trophy is regarded, the Vandals are in third. The lead position is a tie between Boise State and Weber State.

Cravens not yet satisfied

Men's head basketball coach Joe Cravens takes a stroll to his bench during halftime of the Boise State contest. In his first full season as a head coach, Cravens compiled an 18-10 mark. His record was the third highest win total by a first-year men's basketball coach at Idaho. Only Kermit Davis and Larry Eustachy had better records.

Cravens on recruiting trail, looks to have 'up-tempo' team

Four jump shots. Four jump shots and the Vandals easily could have been 22-6 according to first-year men's basketball coach Joe Cravens.

The fact is, the team finished 18-10, showing both flashes of brilliance and disarray.

"It was a year that we had to overcome a lot of adversity," says Cravens.

Adversity is right.

A new coach is not always fully appreciated in the eyes of the exceedingly pampered Vandal supporters. After dealing with players who threatened to leave because he was hired, Cravens had to implement a new system, miss games because of his wife's illness, experience the growing pains of a rookie head coach and cope with his doubters.

Explains Cravens, "I had a basic comparison given that I'd been the head coach at Utah. I knew the intensity and the pressure involved."

Being satisfied is something Cravens may never experience.

"Do I wish we won more games — of course," says Cravens. "If we'd gone 26-1, I'd wish we would've been 27-0."

"I don't know if I've coached this game for 40 years, if, at the end of the year, I'd ever be satisfied, by the nature of the profession," said Cravens.

Cravens had to deal with unproven players, unseen players and star players.

"I think we got as much out of everybody as we could," he says sincerely.

The public eye will now be watching Cravens' next move — the recruiting process.

Former coaches Larry Eustachy and namely Tim Floyd and Kermit Davis were excellent recruiters — which could be a hard act to follow.

This year's Vandal team featured a big lineup that opted to execute their half-court offense

Nussmeier adds to collection

Bridget Lux
Staff Writer

The University of Idaho athletic department had a great night Wednesday as they added to their list of awards at the 32nd annual Idaho Sports Banquet held in Coeur d'Alene.

UI football quarterback Doug Nussmeier came out on top by defeating former Vandal Dan O'Brien, the two-time defending world decathlon champion, for the State of Idaho Male Athlete of the Year award.

The volleyball team's success did not go unnoticed or unrecognized. Senior Nancy Wicks captured the Female Athlete of the Year award while Tom Hilbert was named Coach of the Year.

Wicks, a two time MVP for the Big Sky Conference, ended her career last fall by becoming the fifth Vandal to rack up 1,000 kills. She also led the conference and was seventh in the NCAA with an average of 1.7 blocks per game.

Nussmeier led the 11th ranked Vandals to a 9-2 regular season record and into the NCAA Division I-AA semifinals. Idaho defeated fourth-ranked Northeast Louisiana and Boston University in the playoffs but did not manage to overcome Youngstown State, who eventually won the national championship.

Nussmeier thanked his parents, coaches and teammates for their support but did not stop with them.

"I've got to thank the Boise State Broncos for five great years," he said, referring to the five straight wins he has participated in against the Broncos.

The Walter Payton Award, Most Valuable Offensive Player Award and now Idaho Male Athlete of the Year award are a few of Nussmeier's list of awards.

Numerous Northern Idaho teams collected awards including Heather Owen, a Moscow High School stellar athlete, who received the Female Athlete award for the second consecutive year.

instead of a transition, fast-breaking offense.

Five players, consisting of high school and junior college players, have signed letter-of-intents.

Cravens says next year's Idaho team will probably be quicker. Nevertheless, he explains that he doesn't have a system players annually follow. Cravens prefers to "examine and see what the strengths of your particular team are and try to make some changes in what you want to do to play to their strengths."

"We'll probably play a little different style," says Cravens. "I'd like to be a little bit more up-tempo and do a few more things defensively than what we did this year, but I'll have to wait and see of what I feel like the strengths of the team are next year."

Cravens has made it an objective to recruit the best player in Idaho every year. For this season, he recruited Kamiah's Jared Mercer. For next season, sharp-shooter Kris Baumann from New Plymouth will join the team. Cravens is also excited that he signed perhaps the best player in the state of Washington who averaged 35 points per game in high school competition.

However, Cravens remains somewhat skeptical. "They all look good on paper this time of year, but they all have to come and prove that they can play here and contribute as a member of the team."

"I'm happy with the people we've signed," he adds. "We need to sign one more, but they haven't scored a basket or proved anything yet."

were both junior college transfers who had a tough time adjusting to Division-I basketball.

What does Cravens foresee in the near future for Vandal basketball?

"I think we've brought in a real nice mix of some high school kids that I want to build with like Nate Gardner, Chad Coates and Jared Mercer. In three or four years we're going to have some guys who've played in the program under the same system — so that's kind of my master plan."

Cravens believes he'll be a much more prepared coach next season after one year in the Big Sky.

"Am I a better coach than at the start of the year? Of course," said Cravens.

He facetiously notes that the only thing he'd change about this year is to "win the state lottery and live in Southern California, I guess."

I think he's found a permanent home in Moscow.

career this fall at Stanford after graduating from Moscow High.

The Male Athlete award went to the three-time state wrestling champion Bob Maurer of Lewiston.

The Deary High football team, which won the A-4 state championship, collected the Male Team award and the track team of Highland from Craigmont captured the Female Team award. Angie Mathison, who now runs long distances for the UI, was one of three members on that team. She captured first place in the two-mile last spring.

Professional Athlete of the Year was given to Moscow High graduate Doug Reisenberg. Reisenberg is an offensive lineman with the New York Giants.

WHEN WILL HER REIGN OF TERROR GUARENIZ?

Doubles sweep ends match for Santa Clara

For the first time this season the UI tennis men's squad handed its opponent a doubles sweep. In a non-conference match-up with Santa Clara, the Vandals defeated the California school 6-1 Wednesday.

The team improved to a 7-4 record in their first match since returning from Spring Break by winning all six matches in straight sets. Double partners Rusty Tontz/Mark Hadley, Keith Bradbury/Chris Daniels and Ryan Slaton/Niren Lall sparked the team with their opening wins.

This is the second time in two years that the UI swung past Santa Clara. Last season, the squad came out on top 4-3 in a match that took place in Portland. "It's a good win," said head coach Dave Scott. "They are a very improved team over the team we played in Portland last year. My guys are playing with a lot of confidence now."

Idaho met up with similar results on the singles side of the court.

Playing in the No. 2 position for the Vandals was Niren Lall who defeated Larry Olin 7-5, 6-2. Likewise, Bradbury, Tontz, Daniels and Slaton defeated their opponents in straight sets. At no loss to the team, Hadley was defeated by Adam Gagon in the No. 1 position dropping in close sets 6-3, 7-6.

"I was really happy to see the mental toughness out there because we did not have any three-set matches," said Scott.

Idaho met up with Washington State University yesterday afternoon. Idaho's next match will be at the Irvine Tournament on the University of California-Irvine campus Thursday.

Volleyball recruits Big East 'Rookie of the Year'

Last season's Big Sky championship volleyball team has three players who have signed letters of intent to play at the UI next season according to head coach Tom Hilbert.

High school senior Jessica Moore is a 6-foot-0 athlete who has been named to all-state teams in volleyball and basketball, while finishing sixth in the long jump at last year's state meet. Moore comes from Belgrade, Mont., where she was a middle blocker. Moore also was conference MVP in volleyball and basketball.

Jemena Yocom, a high school senior from Ellensburg, Wash., stands 5-11. Last season she led her team to the championship game in the state tournament where the team came up short finishing in second place.

Sarah Toomey, a junior transfer, will assist the team out with her defensive specialty. Toomey, 5-4, played one year at the University of Connecticut where she set quite a precedent for herself. She was named Big East Conference Rookie of the Year for leading the conference as well as all Division I schools in digs per game with 5.4.

"She is a great defensive player, absolutely great," says Hilbert. "If I am going to recruit somebody who is 5-4, she must be very athletic. We are getting a very very good player."

Toomey comes from a long line of talented athletes. Her father, Bill, was the Olympic Decathlete champion in the 1968 games in Mexico City.

Her mother, Mary Reese, set a world record as well as winning the gold at the 1964 Tokyo Games in the long jump. She also won a silver medal in the pentathlon and a bronze in the 4 by 100 meter relay for the Great Britain.

100k run for ultra and team runners April 10

More than 1,200 runners are expected to participate in the Fifth Annual Washington State University 100 kilometer Relay and Solo Run Sunday, April 10.

According to Sonia Hussa, executive director of the event, the 62-plus-mile course will put the competitors over rolling hills, as well as along the Snake River.

Relay teams fit into 5-10 member categories with different sections of the course designed to challenge different levels of ability.

For the first time, the public can join the runners and families for the Rotary Spaghetti Feed from 5-8:30 p.m. Saturday, April 9. The dinner is planned for Pullman's Lincoln Middle School, SE 315 Crestview.

Tickets are $5 for adults and $2.50 for children under 12 years old.

The run begins at 6 a.m. with the ultra (solo) runners starting the course at WSU's Hollingbery Fieldhouse.

The teams will be split into two groups, one starting at 7:30 a.m., the other, 8:30 a.m.

The first teams are expected to be back across the finish line at the fieldhouse at 2 p.m.

A food fair will be offered at the fieldhouse during the afternoon of the run. The awards program is planned for 5:30 p.m.

The deadline was March 21 but people can still register by paying the late fee. Minus the late fee, the entry fee is $10 per team member and $30 ultra (solo) runners.

Questions about the run can be directed to Campus and Community Relations, 509/335-1990.

Congratulations to Nancy Wicks, Doug Nussmeier and coach Tom Hilbert for their newly received awards

Pita Pockets
The pita pocket, preferably whole wheat, is the ideal base for 5-minute lunches for kids of all ages. Keep the pitas in the freezer, cut in halves or quarters depending on size. When ready to eat, pop the pita in the toaster and fill as desired. Here are some alternatives:

- Refried beans and black olives
- Mashed avocado and a slice of tomato
- Peanut butter and finely grated carrot
- Cream cheese and cucumber
- Sliced cheddar cheese and tomatoes
- Egg or tuna salad

For a hot filled pita, put the filling in cold and put the filled pita back in the toaster or in the microwave oven for a minute.
