Shepard talks on wilderness

Wilderness, the environment and the role of nature in human development will be the topics of the keynote speaker for the UI's annual Honors Convocation Friday.

Paul Shepard, Avery Distinguished Professor of Natural Philosophy and Human Ecology at Litzer College and Claremont Graduate School, will discuss "Getting Ready for the Millennium" at 3 p.m. Friday in the Memorial Gymnasium.

At 7 p.m. Thursday, Shepard will give a lecture on "The Future of Wilderness: Rethinking Human Identity" in Forestry 10. Both sessions are free and open to the public.

Throughout his career, Shepard has focused on the role of the natural environment in the development of individuals. He has done extensive teaching and research on the role of animals in expressive culture, the biological development of individual organisms in the non-human environment and human ecology.

Shepard has looked specifically at the differences in human perception about the natural environment in different economic systems.

Shepard earned his Ph.D. in an interdisciplinary program combining conservation, landscape architecture and the history of art from Yale University in 1954. He has a master's from Yale and earned his bachelor's in English and Wildlife Conservation from the University of Missouri.

Shepard has written numerous scholarly articles. He also has authored several books including: The Others: Animals and Human Begins; Man in the Landscape, An Historic View of the Esthetics of Nature; The Sacred Paw, the Bear in Nature, Myth and Literature; Nature and Madness; and The Tender Carnivore and the Sacred Game.

Classes will be dismissed from 2:30 to 5 p.m. Friday for the Honors Convocation, one of the premier academic events held at UI each year.

An unexpected snowfall Monday morning caught students off-guard. The spring weather we grew accustomed to last week should return later on in the week. The snow caused some scheduling changes in university events.

Chenoweth gains support in race for Congressional seat

Alissa Beier
Staff Writer

Helen Chenoweth, first district Congressional candidate, has recently welcomed the support of former candidate Gene Summa to her campaign.

Summa, who dropped out of the race to endorse Chenoweth's candidacy, said he is anticipating a close race for the Republican nomination in the first district. He also felt that his candidacy could cost Chenoweth the election.

In an earlier prepared statement, Chenoweth said, "The Summa endorsement shows that my campaign is gaining momentum district-wide and the issues oriented are being heard."

Chenoweth continued, "Idahoans who take the opportunity to examine the focus of our campaign will reach the same conclusion Gene Summa has."

Summa's conclusion was, "Chenoweth is the only candidate out there really addressing the issues."

Chenoweth upheld this conclusion by lashing out at politicians in general, but particularly Congressman Larry LaRocco. An example was cited on LaRocco's expansive Wilderness Bill. Only eight hand-picked representatives from Idaho, selected by LaRocco, would be allowed to testify in the Congressional hearings.

Chenoweth feels that, "it is not the Idaho way to limit public input to a select few, chosen by the Congressman and his eastern environmental cronies. Idaho should not be locked up as a playground for environmental elitists." Instead, Chenoweth has suggested holding the field hearings in Idaho, "so those who are most affected by the impacts of the bill can comment on it."

After commenting on the continuation of others parroting her message, Chenoweth added in her prepared statement, "I've been battling and winning at all levels of government on behalf of mainstream Idaho for many years. That winning attitude, coupled with experience, can make a difference for Idaho."

Murder appeal heard this week

Tim Helmke
News Editor

UI students will be able to see first-hand how a murder appeal can be argued before the Idaho Supreme Court this week.

The Supreme Court, convening in the UI Law School Courtroom, will hear arguments in the appeal of State of Idaho v. Marcus W. Mathews Thursday at 10 a.m. Mathews originally pled guilty to the first degree murder charge in the January 12, 1992 death of his common-law wife, Holly Morris.

Connie Taylor, a graduate of the UI College of Law and a former Legal Aid Clinic intern, will represent the defendant/appellant, Mathews. Taylor will argue under the Legal Aid Program. Michael Kane, Special Prosecutor in this case from the Attorney General's office in Boise, will argue for the State of Idaho.

Maureen E. Laffin, associate professor of Law, is the supervising attorney in the case along with Genessee attorney Joan Fisher. Third-year UI law students David R. Fox and Kristine Stedman are also working on this murder case.

UI students are welcome to attend the session. They are encouraged to attend if they are interested in a legal career of any sort or if they are merely interested in seeing an actual appeal case argued.

Anyone who attends is

Wimer and West work together for safety

Senator Scott Wimer is working with West to determine the best places for safety survey voting boxes. Wimer wants to be sure that all students have the opportunity to respond to questions concerning safety at the UI.

University accepting manager applications

Applications for Resident Manager positions for University Housing apartment complexes are now available. Applications can be picked up at the University Residence Office on the second floor of Wallace Complex. Applications are due April 15. Call Nancy Sue Chase at 885-6571 for more information.

Women's Center holds victims' rights session

The UI Women's Center will present "Victims' Rights Amendment: An Idaho Ballot Issue in November," Wednesday at 12:30 p.m. at the Women's Center. An Idaho Attorney General's Office representative will explain the amendment. The program is free and open to the public.

Law College program honors recent donors

The College of Law will present "Celebrating Idaho's Legal History ... It's Constitution ... Its Courts ... Its College" at 1:30 p.m. Thursday in the Law College courtroom.

The program will honor L. Weldon Schimke and Fred Clagett for their recent donations to the law school and will pay tribute to the Idaho Supreme Court for its support and assistance. Chief Justice Charles McDevitt will offer remarks. A reception will follow in the foyer.

Prior to the event, from 12:30 to 1:15 p.m., the Idaho Women Lawyers student group will host a brown bag lunch in Law School Room 104. Justice Cathy Silak will speak on diversity in the law and the changing roles students will play as they begin their legal careers. The university community and the public are invited to attend all functions.

Honors Convocation in Memorial Gym Friday

The 1994 UI Honors Convocation will be held Friday at 3 p.m. in Memorial Gym. This event is open to the public. Classes will be dismissed to allow students, staff and faculty to attend.

The convocation honors students who have achieved academic success over the last year at UI. Students who have made their college Dean's list, been inducted into an honor society or are being honored for scholastic success.

Casino worker teaches blackjack techniques

The UI Enrichment Program instructs participants on "Winning Ways of Blackjack." Learn game strategies, casino rules, terms, bets and how to recognize when it is best to walk away or cash in on a "roll."

The instructor, Kathleen Kinglsey, has dealt blackjack in Nevada casinos for eight years. The class will meet Wednesdays, tomorrow through April 27 from 6:30 to 8 p.m. in the Moscow Mall.

For more information or to register call the Enrichment Program at 885-6486.

Cookbooks available at International Bazaar

Homefront International cookbooks will be available at the International Week Bazaar Friday in the SUB. These cookbooks are $3 each. The recipes were compiled from residents living in UI apartment communities. More information on these recipes is available from Nancy Sue Chase at 885-6571.

WAMI speaker to talk about medical schools

Dr. Michael Laskowski, director of the Washington State University/UI WAMI Education program, will meet with interested students at 7 p.m. tonight in Life Sciences Room 280. He will discuss the WAMI program and the University of Washington School of Medicine. He will also answer student's questions concerning applications to medical school and trends in medical education.

Chaser's to hold Latin event Thursday night

Latin American Night will be offered at Chaser's Lounge Thursday after 9 p.m. The event is for people over the age of 21 and is free of charge.

Salsa, Merengue and Punta music styles are sponsored by the Latin American Student Association. There also will be a Karaoke contest.

Computer Services to hold monthly sessions

Computer Services is hosting a 90-minute information session Thursday from 2:30 to 4 p.m. in the Home Economics Building Room 6. The emphasis will be on access security and finance training.

News Briefs

After the presentation, Linda Mitchell and other project leaders will be available for 30 minutes to answer questions on any subject relating to the Banner implementation project.

To reserve a spot, call Computer Services at 885-6721. Reservations are on a first-come, first-served basis.

Friday colloquium will feature two speakers

The UI Electrical Engineering Research Colloquium will present "Space Sprouts: The Final Frontier in Interplanetary Cuisine," by Dr. Marilyn A. Swanson, extension professor and food safety specialist at the UI School of Family and Consumer Sciences, and Dr. Dale O. Wilson, Jr., associate professor and seed physiologist at the UI Parma Research and Extension Center, Thursday at 3:30 p.m. in Janssen Engineering Building Room 26.

Enrichment Program to allow sleeping in class

The UI Enrichment Program has a course titled "Sleep — From A to Zzzzzzz." The class will meet today from 6 to 8 p.m. on the UI campus.

Sleep in an active state is essential for physical and mental restoration.

Gain a basic understanding of what is considering normal sleep, how sleep needs change throughout life and helpful tips on getting a good night's sleep.

For more information or to register, call the Enrichment Program at 885-6486.

Students educators to present new program

The UI Women's Center will present a "University of Idaho Students Working for a Safer Community" program today at 12:30 p.m. at the Women's Center. Student Peer Educators will present their "Acquaintance Sexual Assault Awareness and Prevention" program. This is part of the Women's Center brown bag series and is open to the public. The program is free.

Cooperative Education holds info session

UI Cooperative Education Orientation will be offered today from 12:30 p.m. to 1:15 p.m. in Education Room 106. Come discover how students can find paid work opportunities which provide practical experience related to their major.

For more information contact Cooperative Education in Education 204 or call them at 885-5822.

Students reminded to meet with advisers

Advising for fall semester registration started yesterday at the UI. Students are reminded to meet with their advisers to discuss classes and scheduling for the future. Advisers need to meet with students before the registration block can be taken off the computer.

House holds bike race

The UI Gamma Iota chapter of Delta Sigma Phi and the March of Dimes would like to present "The Great College Bike Race." The race is a challenge from the UI to Boise State University to see who can raise the most money for the March of Dimes Birth Defect Foundation, as well as who can win a tandem bicycle race from Moscow to Boise.

The race will take place April 8 and 9. The men of Delta Sigma Phi will leave the UI campus around 8 a.m. on April 8 and ride until they reach Riggins where they will stop for the night. The race will resume Saturday and finish at the BSU campus. Delta Sigma Phi is trying to get all the Greek houses and living groups involved in the race and the fund raising. They would like every living group to participate, even if they don't have a rider they can help in the fund raising portion of the race.

The UI campus is somewhat at a disadvantage to BSU due to the size of the community we live in so the goal of Delta Sigma Phi was to raise money over Spring Break and raise money for the UI. This will be done by pledges per mile or just a set donation.

The Jaycee's of Moscow are helping out by setting up the starting line and getting donations from the community and businesses.

The March of Dimes is taking care of all the transportation and lodging for the riders. They will also take care of the prizes for the winners and public service announcements that will be aired on television in Spokane and Boise.

Governor Cecil Andrus will contribute a commemorative coin to the campus that raises the most money. This should be a huge money-maker for the March of Dimes since there will be two campuses contributing to one cause. It is also an excellent way for the UI campus to receive good publicity from around the state.

Apology for April Fool's Day spoof

The Argonaut would like to apologize. We have realized our April Fool's Day spoof accident story was in poor taste.

David Gebhardt was attributed as the author, but the story was written by Argonaut staff.

Our intent was not aimed to mock anyone or their grief.

CASE

reminded to arrive early in order to get in. People will not be allowed to enter the courtroom once the arguments begin.

Taylor is to argue that the crucial evidence seized by the police in this case was illegally seized and therefore should be repressed. A .357 Ruger Blackhawk revolver and a pair of Jordache tennis shoes were the items Taylor will argue were illegally seized.

Taylor will argue that the seizure was illegal because they occurred within the confines of the Nez Perce Indian Reservation without prior approval from the Tribal Court.

Facts in the case show that the evidence was seized with an unsigned search warrant. Magistrate Gary W. Elliott had found probable cause for the warrant to be issued and had intended to issue the warrant. Elliott said he simply forgot to sign the warrant.

Fox told the Lewiston Morning Tribune in February, "It is a sad day when an Idaho court says that it is all right, in some circumstances, for policemen to conduct searches within Nez Perce County with unsigned search warrants."

If Taylor is successful in her argument, Mathews will be allowed to withdraw his conditional guilty plea to the charge of first degree murder.

If the evidence is then suppressed, Mathews would be allowed to plead anew, based on the state's ability, given the exclusion of these two highly incriminating pieces of evidence, to prove beyond a reasonable doubt to a jury that Mathews committed the crime.

Morris, 22, was found in her Lewiston apartment shot in the back. She and Mathews had separated a few days prior to the shooting and she had moved out of their Lapwai home. Witnesses in the case told investigators they had overheard Mathews threaten Morris the night before.

The prosecution and the defense both said that without the evidence of the shoes and the gun, Mathews would not be found guilty of murder.

Residence hall faces changes in Fall 1994

Joey Wellman
Contributing Writer

Forney Hall, a residence hall in Theophilus Tower, will be missing its first floor next semester. A proposal for the academic year of 1994-1995 states "that first floor Forney Hall be designated an alcohol free, quiet floor and be taken off line and used for guest residence and sorority overflow for 94-95."

According to Jim Bauer, UI director of Residence Life, the first floor will be held open for a number of possibilities. The floor could be an alcohol free hall, open to sorority housing or available as guest housing.

For example, McConnell Hall, which currently houses guests, will be under renovation next fall. Consequently, a need for such housing would then be available through the vacancy of first floor Forney Hall. Bauer understands that this will present difficulties for Forney residents, but the first floor is the "most equitable" at the present time.

As it is, residents of Forney may find the change not so easy to adapt to.

"Forney is such an active hall—there is such a demand for space and we're already full," said Gwen Hansen.

Veteran Forney resident, Kerry Baxter, states, for as long as I've been here, Forney has been known to have three floors. I think if this goes through, it will take away from not only Forney but from the Tower as a residence hall."

Either way, residents will have to face the change this fall.

Marble looks to fill open seats

ASUI President John Marble announced that there are several openings in the ASUI that he will be trying to fill in the next few weeks. Positions available include Argonaut Editor-in-Chief, Advertising Manager and KUOI Station Manager. Marble also noted that there are three vacancies on the Student Issues Board, and the need for 15 election workers. Students interested in applying for these positions may do so in the ASUI office.

Murray names head safety group

Senator Danielle Murray has been named to head up efforts to improve safety in facilities on campus. Students with safety concerns about buildings or other facilities should contact Murray in the ASUI office.

Wilson looking to computerize swap

ASUI Senator Sean Wilson is looking at computerizing the ASUI book swap. The book swap, first started by ASUI President John Marble and Wilson last Spring, could benefit from being on-line says Wilson. Making the book swap available on Gopher would allow students to access book swap information and place orders all over campus. Wilson is looking for a computer science major who would like to take the book swap on as a project to assist him.

Stroschein spent time in Montana over break

ASUI Senator Steve Stroschein spent part of his Spring Break visiting with student leaders at Eastern Montana College in Billings, Mont. Stroschein hopes that by increasing communications with other student governments the ASUI can find new and better ways of doing things.

Cvancara not running for Senate re-election

ASUI Senator Kathy Cvancara announced that she will not be seeking re-election this year. "I have decided to graduate next fall," said Cvancara. She expressed to the Senate her desire to continue being affiliated with the Senate next fall in order to help the Senate accomplish its goals.

ASUI BRIEFS

Senate will meet at Alpha Kappa Lambda

The ASUI Senate meeting will be held at the Alpha Kappa Lambda house this Wednesday at 7:00 p.m. according to Senate Pro Tem Tom Sheffield. Pre-session will be held at 6:30 in the SUB. Last week's meeting was hosted by Kappa Kappa Gamma. Senators were pleased with the sorority's hospitality when members served refreshments.

Russell reports provost search narrowed to four

Megan Russell, student Faculty Council member, announced that the search for a new provost to replace retiring provost Tom Bell, has been narrowed to four candidates. Those candidates are being evaluated during last week and this week to determine who will take over as second in command at UI.

Bennett bill to start new filing fee died in vote

A bill by ASUI Senator Kristen Bennett, which would have implemented a filing fee for students wishing to run for ASUI office, died for lack of a second. The bill was intended to help offset the cost of elections and to discourage frivolous campaigns. Other Senators, however did not see the need. "Students already pay their ASUI fees, they shouldn't have to pay an extra fee," said ASUI senator Ian James. The proposal, if passed, would have required candidates to pay a ten dollar filing fee.

Ten people registered to run for Senate seats

ASUI elections will be held April 20. Ten students qualified to run for seven open senate seats as of Friday's deadline.

Blinzler works on task force for yearbook

Senator Rob Blinzler informed those at the Senate meeting that he will be participating in the task force on the Gem of the Mountains yearbook. The task force has been formed to look into possible reasons for the decline in yearbook sales during the past few years. The committee also hopes to develop creative solutions to selling more books and reasserting the book as part of the university experience. Students that have comments concerning the yearbook are encouraged to call their senator or contact the Gem of the Mountains office in the SUB.

UI will host student leader summit in fall

Senator Kristen Bennett announced that the ASUI will host the second annual Idaho Student Summit. This event which will bring student leaders from around the state to the UI is scheduled to take place next October. Student leaders have the opportunity during the weekend summit to plan state-wide student legislative strategies and develop the relations necessary to work together more efficiently. Last year's summit was hosted by Boise State University's student government.

West makes progress in safety concerns

Senator Laura West announced that the Safety Committee continues to go great. She mentioned that many faculty responded to the survey for students, which was in the Argonaut, asking if there was going to be a similar survey for the faculty. West intends to develop a survey for faculty which will ask many of the same questions relating to safety on campus.

Winter working on a network for Senate

ASUI Senator Jeremy Winter has been working to network student governments in the Northwest including Idaho, Montana, Washington, and Oregon. "I believe there are many issues that we can solve on our own," stated Winter. The idea could be similar in design to the Idaho Student Lobby which was formed by Idaho schools several years ago, but has since failed. The primary goal would be to increase communications and cooperation between schools and students that have a great deal in common.

Society teaches kids

Golden Key National Honor Society members at the UI will be reaching out to children in the community Thursday in a drug and alcohol abuse prevention program. With the availability of drugs on the increase, all children should be considered "at risk." Therefore the goal of this program is to educate children and youth on the dangers of drug abuse and to encourage personal goal setting and decision making.

Directed at fourth grade students at Lena Whitmore Elementary School, the program will bring Golden Key members together with students and other college leaders to serve as positive role models for children.

Golden Key is an academic honors organization which promotes scholastic achievement among college students and encourages voluntary service in the community. The Society is dedicated to fostering an environment in which young people aspire to achieve scholastically; through the services they perform and the example they set, members are able to contribute to the community.

The Best of America program is a nationwide program presented by Golden Key members from across the country. This will be the UI chapter's first time at presenting the program. They would like to thank the following people for all of their time and help in putting the program together: Margaret Fosberg, Nick Almquist, members of the UI men's basketball team and the staff and students at Lena Whitmore Elementary. Without their help, the presentation of this program may not have been possible.

AND YOUR WHEELS ARE SOMETHING SPECIAL, TOO.

There's a Ford or Mercury Just Like You... and Your Ford or Lincoln-Mercury Dealer Has a Graduation Present to Help Make it Your Own...

- $400 Cash Back or • a Special Finance Rate*

Personally speaking, what you drive says a lot about who you are. So why not say you're one of the most exciting, fun-loving, even sensible people going? In other words, why not say it with a sporty new Ford or Mercury?

Now's the perfect time to make a personal statement—because the 1994 Ford & Mercury College Graduate Purchase Program** gives you your choice of $400 cash back or a special finance rate* when you buy a new Ford or Mercury. Or lease your vehicle and get $400 cash back!

Plus, Ford Credit can offer qualified applicants pre-approved credit up to $18,000 or the MSRP, whichever is lower, which could mean no down payment on finance purchases. You may also defer purchase payments for 120 days in most states (excluding Michigan, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Washington, DC).

So take time out to see your Ford or Lincoln-Mercury dealer today and ask about the College Graduate Purchase Program. (It's a terrific way to show the world just how smart you really are!)

*Special Finance rate alternative and Ford Credit programs not available on leases.

**To be eligible, you must graduate with a bachelor's or graduate degree, or be enrolled in graduate school, between 1/1/94 and 9/30/94. This program is in addition to all other national customer incentives, except for other Ford private offers, including the Young Buyer Program. You must purchase or lease your new vehicle between 1/1/94 and 9/30/95. Some customer and vehicle restrictions apply, so see your dealer for details.

Summer class teaches Spanish

The UI's Spanish Department has an exciting course called Summer Intensive Spanish that will be offered during the Summer Session. The program features an entire year of language and cross-cultural study in just six weeks with a smaller classroom to enable more personal attention and individual assistance. Instead of spreading out two semesters of Spanish and risk the chance of forgetting information, take the summer course and coordinate the two levels.

Focusing on communication skills and practical application, participants can fulfill the university core curriculum requirements in the communication category to catch up or move ahead for the fall semester.

Spanish is the national language of over 20 countries and is the language of the fastest growing "ethnic" group in the United States. Learning this language presents uncountable professional and service career opportunities.

The course combines intensive language study with exposure to Spanish culture through lectures, slides, films and music. There are three instructors for this course who will provide a diversity of background, experience and teaching style.

The course will be held from June 13 through July 29. There will be a one-week break preceding the last two weeks of the course to allow students to digest the material covered the first four weeks and to ensure a positive and successful language learning experience.

For more information about the intensive Spanish course, call the Summer Programs Office at 885-6237.

Students can hunt down lousy profs

Here's the situation: A student needs to choose between two professors for the same class, same time. He has been unable to determine from friends information about either instructor. A coin toss could radically affect the next semester.

And it's up to the student to distinguish the good from the rotten.

Students can do this by tromping up to Room 201 in the Administration building and asking to see teacher evaluation files, which are available for student examination.

Other than word of mouth from trusted friends, this is the only way students can determine which professors are worth their time and money. But students need to get their lazy butts up that first flight of stairs and check out the information available, or possibly face a horribly incompetent instructor.

Tom Bitterwolf, director of the office of teaching enhancement, said an average of two students actually use the information available each year.

That's pathetic.

Because students are essentially faced with a Darwinism-like approach to learning, where it's every student for himself, swim or sink, find the best professors or drown.

The information is set up for easy access, professors are listed alphabetically by colleges, which are also listed alphabetically. Last fall's classes are listed with the professor's "grades" in an easy to read format on a 4.0 scale. A "strongly agree" answer garners four points while a "strongly disagree" gives the professor a whopping zero. The categories are the same ones students see on evaluation forms they fill out every semester — instructor's preparation, informed on progress, effective instruction, relevant material and concepts and would recommend this instructor to a friend.

Bitterwolf said the third and fifth answers would likely help prospecting students the most, since questions if the material was relevant are often misunderstood by younger students fresh into their fields.

On a sampling of the 5-inch thick book, two professors came up with radically different scores. Scott Morris, a geography instructor who taught three classes last semester, averaged about 3.5 in the "would recommend to a friend" category, with his largest class tallying at 204 students and his smallest at 20. Michael J. Dinoto, an economics professor, taught a labor relations class and came up with a 1.4 "would recommend" in a class of 34. The student must take this information and make a logical choice based on the 4.0 scale and his other options.

For instance, if the professor seems worthy, stop by his office and ask for a sample syllabus. If there's too many tests and lengthy research papers, hit the road and keep searching.

Tuition, housing top wish list

I don't know why I never thought of writing this column before. It's a great idea, but as usual, it took someone else to turn on that Christmas-size light bulb over my head.

Anyway, I'm sitting in my History 102 class on Friday morning under the whip of Elsie Sakuma. This is a class I really enjoy, not only because Elsie is a fine instructor (Yeah, I've got a test coming up). It's also because the thirty or so students in the class make for some of the most interesting and intelligent class discussion I've encountered in my four years here.

Most instructors at UI could learn a lesson from Elsie. Instead of walking into the classroom and shoving 50 minutes of facts down your throat, she instead begins with a discussion of current events, which sometimes ends in polite discussion and sometimes ends in a polite war. At any rate, we learn a lot and keep our history lecture in perspective.

Anyway, enough of looking suspiciously like I'm a brown-noser. Last Wednesday, we discussed my Whitewater column since it is a topic on the agenda. Friday, Elsie decided it would be cool to have everyone write down on a sheet of paper one thing the Argonaut needs to do a better job of covering. After all, the

I'll Tell You Why Jeff Kapostasy

Argonaut is paid for in student fees and reaches over 10,000 people. So figuring I was glutton for punishment, I agreed and later decided to incorporate these ideas into a column. For the record, the class covers a wide variety of majors and class standings.

The results were surprising in some ways but not in others. Probably the biggest thing students wanted to see more attention devoted to was skyrocketing tuition and housing rates. Not necessarily what the increases were, but exactly why they were occurring and where the money is going to.

In all fairness to the Argonaut, this topic has been covered fairly well. True, I would like to see more hard-hitting investigative pieces on this, but I know this is easier said than done. At any rate, Tim Helmke, Argonaut news editor, estimates around six or seven stories have been written about this topic. I get the feeling from some responses claiming the fee increases are unfair and the Argonaut should do something.

Having covered fees for the Argonaut several semesters ago, this is frustrating. Trying to get straight answers out UI bureaucracy can be like pointing your car towards a wall and stomping the gas pedal. If students are truly angered about fee increases, a better thing to do would be to go to hearings UI administrators hold when a raise is announced. Having seen how students are dealt with at these hearings, I've come to the conclusion the only way to halt fee increases would be to have some sort of revolt. However, I'm going to suggest to Tim that we do a series of in-depth stories on the ever-escalating price of college.

We also had some people say they would like to see world news

Clock's fickle reign throws man for daylight savings loop

The cavemen didn't need one. Artists don't like to work by one. McDonald's only pays if you punch one.

Instructors frown if you stare at one.

Ancient civilizations introduced the conception of time. Thousands of years ago humans tried to gain control of passing time with the sun dial. Then came the introduction and, more recently, the proliferation of clocks.

Modern society has come to depend upon clocks and time.

Today we harness it, manage it, waste it, lose it, control it, use it, schedule it, pass it and occasionally watch it dwindle away.

Time is sometimes referred to as our greatest resource, sometimes our greatest enemy.

It becomes our ally when we "beat the clock." On these occasions we are proud of ourselves. Many of us have finished a term paper a week early and are able to have it previewed by the instructor.

I Think...Huh? Katé Lyons-Holestine

Others have gotten out of bed early and will make it to that 7:30 a.m. lab on time.

Time becomes our enemy when our alarm clock decides not to arouse us and we lazily look toward it until we realize it's 10:20 a.m.

Then, as we are conditioned to, we jump from our beds, throw on some type of hat and run through the day. It is also our greatest rival when that timely term paper rolls around — obviously due on a Monday.

(Instructors must know the weekend contains the least amount of working hours of any section of the week.)

Once a year time and clocks become our best friends. Once a year they become our worst enemy. This weekend time and our clocks took up armament against us. The clocks marched forward one hour without asking our consent. It was time to change.

Over the weekend the only important reason to watch Mickey incessantly is to make sure you don't miss the most recent episode of Star Trek: The Next Generation, Walker, Texas Ranger or COPS.

But, as Monday rolled around Mickey was pointed to as the person to blame for missing class, being 10 minutes late or just not getting out of bed.

The concept of time was a miraculous revelation. The invention of the clock was the downfall of western society.

We are born and die by the clock. We work and sleep by the clock. We eat and socialize by the clock. Our everyday lives are ruled by those little round faced, two armed, no eyed wall decorations.

We are preoccupied with time. Daylight Saving's Time leaves a lot to be desired twice a year, but after a week most of us won't even notice the change.

But, as with most things students will procrastinate as much as possible, but there's a lot to be said for being on time.

After more than 100 years Daylight Saving's Time hasn't saved much the average person can relate to.

Must sell body to attend UI

Recently, while I was filling out my Alaska State Loan application, I realized just how damaging the current non-resident tuition increases are. After calculating my estimated expenses for the 1994-95 school year, I became overwhelmed. I am going to pay around $6,000 per semester to attend UI. The estimate includes tuition, registration fees, books, room and board, transportation and personal expenses.

Even with my $2,500 loan per semester, summer jobs and parental help, I will be left with about a $2,000 gap, which I don't have the resources to pay. I am either going to have to sell my body to science or work 24 hours a day during my three month summer vacation. Vacation, what a joke!

Look, I'm not saying I am the only person with financial problems. On the contrary, a majority of the non-resident students attending UI are balking at the tuition increases. Three of my friends are leaving for the sole reason the cost of going to school at UI has become horrendous. I may have to transfer to a less financially challenging school in my home state for my senior year if the cost of attending this institution continues to increase.

I realize resident tuition has increased also, but not nearly to the extent to which non-resident tuition has. My tuition, having entered UI in 1992, will cost $1,700 a year more than when I started, and this doesn't include the increasing registration fee.

The standard explanation for these increases by the university may be the extra money is used to fund projects, classes and activities that will help improve UI as a whole. To this, I say if the funding was used to improve the student life, why haven't I seen the direct result of the spending? The only changes that have impacted me are the library, the concrete landscaping in front of the library, more parking meters in front of the agriculture building and few extra TV/VCR set ups in the UCC classrooms. I don't know about the rest of the students, but I could certainly live without all of those.

Without a contingency of non-resident students on campus, UI will become a boring and culturally deficient institution. The beautiful landscape, friendly people and small town atmosphere attracts those of us from different states to Moscow. Without non-resident students, cultural diversity at UI will be non-existent.

I like the education I receive and I don't want to be forced to leave because of the greed of those higher on the totem pole. Take a stand UI staff, students and government! Without your help the non-resident student at UI will become extinct.

—Angela Armstrong

Heber prison term inhumane

The imprisonment of Megan Heber, who killed her newborn son at a moment of stress, is inhumane and unjustified. After giving birth to her son in her dormitory in the 1992 fall semester, she pressed on his chest and killed him. She was found guilty of second degree murder and sentenced to five years in prison.

I do not see any justice done to her or to her unjust society for detaining her as a murderer. To imprison a mother for killing her infant is like imprisoning a person for committing suicide.

A mother who kills her own baby is like a person who has been in a severe car accident. She needs immediate help to recuperate; otherwise, she will be permanently impaired. Unfortunately, the course of action that was taken against her was to bury her much deeper in her problem.

Judicial punishment is given for several purposes — one is to discourage the perpetrator from doing mischief again. For example, a police officer gives you a speeding ticket so you will be discouraged from driving fast again. It is not conceivable to think she will do the same thing to her child as she did to the previous one.

The second reason for punishment is to give a lesson to other people not to do the mischief. For example, rapists are sentenced to a long prison term so that guys are discouraged (despite their natural inclination) to jump on women and rape them. But this cause, too, does not apply to Megan. Be careful mothers, don't kill your baby because you will be imprisoned!

The third reason for punishment is to keep the bad people in detention so other people are safe from threats of these individuals. Again, this does not apply to Megan. She is not a threat to anybody except to herself. Relatively speaking, is she more threatening to society now, after being released from prison, than she was right after the incident?

The last reason for judicial punishment is compensation. For example, if you wreck someone's car, you pay for it. This does not apply to her case either.

There is no reason to humiliate this poor girl with imprisonment when she is already severely humiliated from inside. At least she was human enough to carry the baby nine months and give delivery to it. If you want to doom this girl to the same destiny as her son, keep her in prison among other criminals. But if you want to help her to recover, get her out of prison and provide her with love and forgiveness.

—Hossein Latifi

Time for all to be 'Americans'

While reading Mr. Ahshapanek's letter last week, I wondered why a portion of "minorities" continually cry discrimination when treated like the mainstream. Despite reasonable accommodation, nothing satisfies!

Ahshapanek complained there is no Native American Cultural Center in the Student Union Building. I don't see a Caucasian American Cultural Center either. Imagine the cost if every ethnic, religious, sexual or other group demanded an exclusive "cultural center." Would anyone be able to afford an education? When does uniqueness justify special treatment at the cost of the majority?

Admittedly, Native Americans have had it rough historically, but the sins of the father are not the sins of the son! What happened, happened — get over it! It is time to live in America as an American, not as a Sioux, a Swede, a Korean, an African-American or a redheaded-left-handed-short person. One can simply look to Bosnia to see what happens if racial or religious heritage is made a point of contention and hatred. While my ancestry is Scottish, something I am proud of, it does not override the fact I am an American.

The Native American Student Association should get a new spokesman. Mr. Ahshapanek should stop complaining and preaching divisiveness. He would do well to look to the majority of American "Ethnic" people, people like Larry Echohawk, Clarence Thomas and Connie Chung. People who worked hard and improved their lot in life and in every sense lived up to being "Americans."

Minority groups isolated by PC

Talking about minorities is like listening to a br-br-br-oken record. It's always "my little clique group is right and all others are wrong." So, in the context of the Katé Lyons-Holestine article on name's, I want to bring up a new subject, or maybe its content is as old as time.

I'm a handicapped student (not a student with a handicap). Recently, I sat down with a disabled rights person. I am now utterly embarrassed to be disabled. I say I'm handicapped for three significant reasons. One, I think once in a while I'm Handi to have around and sometimes I wear a cap. Second, disability is hard to say, H, C and P sounds are easy, D and S sounds are typically harder for Studders (people who have a speech impediment). Third, I'm handicapped because I hate political correctness.

Why am I so embarrassed about my Handicap, when I love life? I'm embarrassed because I'm in yet another stupid minority group, who is horridly ungrateful. I see "normal" people all the time who love sign language, professors break their backs to help us (if I go to class, which I hate to do) and yet as a group we complain because we're called Disabled People instead of People with Disabilities.

Jerry Lewis put on a big fund raiser for muscular dystrophy, instead of getting a pat on the back, he got slapped in the face. Why? We, the people with the disabilities, weren't presented right. Lewis put out a poster of a kid who appeared to be horribly unhappy and helpless. A disabled rights activist claimed the message was "donate money so there will be no disabled people left." The claim is disabled people want rights, not cures. And even though I can identify with all the ill feelings, I see people are just trying to help. Oh, we are ungrateful people. I wonder what would happen if Rush Limbaugh got mad because he's never presented rightly. Not much!

I've read an article about handicap discrimination. A prominent disabled business woman was sitting in a wheelchair, sipping a cup of coffee, and a person walked by, had sympathy and put money in the cup. I can see the frustration (again we don't want pity), but the person was just trying to help. It is sort of funny and yet sad. The disabled woman was just about to board a plane to go speak for a disabilities rights movement to talk about how normal people treat disabled people so "horridly."

You see, disabled people, like everyone else, are wanting to change society, but they're doing it entirely wrong. You can't pass laws that will make people respect you. Passing laws changes actions but it doesn't change hearts. Just look around: Pro-life people stomp up and down at every abortion clinic for right reasons but wrong motives. Gay rights people demand schools accept them for their behavior and Christians shove the four spiritual laws down our throat. Stomp, Demand and Shove have become the heart beat at every movement. Does it really help? Sadly, people walk away saying, "I just want to meet real people who give a gentle word," (Prov. 15:1).

If minorities adopt this pattern of stomp, demand and shove, they will lose. If we pass laws minorities will be isolated and people will be afraid of them. That is not what is needed. If handicapped people demand to be called "people with disabilities," their new name will be "people with ungrateful hearts." Life is rough whether you're white, black, male, female, handicapped or normalcapped. We've got to roll with the punches.

I have a lot of white male friends and it's really not their fault people are handicapped or Indian or black or female. Why punish the whole group? And no, I'm not nazi or a skin head, I'm just trying to be grateful!

—Matthew Gibbon

Fee hearing coverage poor

On March 24, there was a public hearing with administrators. This allowed students to voice concerns about fee and tuition increases. ASUI President John Marble and Argonaut Editor-in-Chief Katé Lyons-Holestine mentioned the hearing in a March 4 article. The hearing was not mentioned in any of the next three issues of the Argonaut.

The hearing gave students a chance to voice their opinions directly to administrators on an issue affecting all students. The ASUI, which publicizes events, did not publicize the hearing. Yet they claim they want students to get involved. The Argonaut bills itself as "The Students' Voice." They, too, failed to publicize the hearing. The ASUI and the Argonaut combined to hinder student involvement and muffle the voices of students.

At the hearing, people spoke about past, present and proposed fees and the effects these have had and will have on students. I was one of those people. The only reporter at the hearing was Rachael Conlin of the Moscow/Pullman Daily News. Argonaut News Editor Tim Helmke did not attend the hearing and then plagiarized Ms. Conlin's report. The Argonaut then issued a public apology and promised they learned a lesson.

Yet we heard the same line in the Feb. 8 issue when the Argonaut admitted various writers (including Mr. Helmke) had put their own names on articles that were really press releases from other organizations. Retaining Mr. Helmke on staff, let alone as News Editor, is doing a great disservice to students of this university. The students deserve a News Editor whose view of covering news is not to ignore the biggest news issues affecting students on this campus and then plagiarize the work of others.

Instead, we got to read about ASUI political in-fighting. The ASUI should be fighting for students instead of with each other (i.e. President John Marble and the Senate). The ASUI should be advocating the students' cause instead of killing it by not publicizing the fee hearing, supporting fee and tuition increases, the recent actions of ASUI Lobbyist Dan Whiting, etc. The Argonaut should be voicing student concerns, not ignoring them. The Argonaut should be intensively covering the news affecting large numbers of students on this campus, instead of plagiarizing news stories from other sources.

Here are some issues from the hearing that we should be reading about. We should be reading about how student fees and tuition will increase by more than the rate of inflation for the sixth consecutive year for all students, how education at this university is becoming inaccessible to highly qualified non-resident students purely for financial reasons, how GSA President Michael Brennan has fought for and received a 4.2 percent salary increase for all teaching assistants, how, despite this modest success, the standard of living for graduate employees will decline once again if the proposed fee and rent increases come to pass. We should be reading about how this will hurt the quality of education received by undergraduates. These are only some of the issues that have been raised and should be discussed extensively in the paper that calls itself, "The Students' Voice."

Local sorority tells all

Is there still a local sorority at UI? Yes!! We, the women of Phi Sigma Upsilon, would like to thank the Panhellenic and Interfraternity Councils and the other living groups on campus for their support.

Phi Sigma Upsilon is a local sorority that functions within Sweet Avenue house located behind Kappa Sigma Fraternity. Our sorority was formed in Sept. 1993, after Alpha Xi Delta left the university and has doubled in membership since that time.

We have implemented our own codes of conduct, bylaws and symbols, such as a crest to unify ourselves as a group. We have regular meetings and a set night every week that allows us to gather together as a group and include our out of house members to promote our sisterhood.

The Spokane Shriner's hospital is our philanthropy and we have raised money for them by selling valentines. We have had many social functions, including a formal dinner/dance, an SYRD, a graffiti dance and exchanges with other residence halls and fraternities.

We hope to continue participating at a high level with functions we may sponsor or activities sponsored by other living groups to let everyone get to know us and our name.

Currently, we are contacting a national affiliate who we hope will sponsor us and are looking for a new place to live for the upcoming school year.

Activities we hope to participate in before the school year ends are: Greek Week, Phi Delta Theta Turtle Derby, a progressive dinner and the Fraternity Forum on April 4 outside the library. Activities we are planning ourselves include making Big Sister/Little Sister wall hangings, having a Second Annual Boyer Bash and an etiquette dinner.

Once again, we thank all living groups for their continuous actions and interest in our group. Being a local sorority with small numbers can be exhausting at times.

With your support and our strong bond of sisterhood and dedication, we hope to bring another national sorority to UI.

If anyone is interested in finding out more about the women of Phi Sigma Upsilon or would like to share an exchange, please contact Dominique at 885-6292. We would love to hear from you!

SAEs, Betas help swim team

With all the negative publicity the Greek system has had during the past several months, I would like to take this opportunity to give two men's fraternities some positive coverage.

This past weekend, the Boise

YMCA Swim Team hosted the 1994 YMCA Regional Swim Meet at the UI Swim Center.

Over 500 swimmers and parents from Washington, Oregon, Montana and Idaho attended the two day meet. Sigma Alpha Epsilon and Beta Theta Pi fraternities assisted us for several hours during both days of the meet, providing much needed timers.

Their presence helped to make the meet a great experience for all involved and generated a good deal of positive publicity for UI.

The Boise Y Swim Team appreciates the time these young men took from their busy schedules to help us with our swim meet.

COVERAGE

in the Argonaut. Whether to put national news in the Argonaut has been a debate since I set foot up here. On one hand, it would be nice to have students be able to pick up the Argonaut and get a summary of national and international events.

But there are real drawbacks to this. First of all, getting world news would almost definitely mean a subscription to the Associated Press, the huge news behemoth where nearly every paper in the world gets its world news. This isn't cheap. A satellite link that constantly feeds us the latest stories from around the world via a printer is astronomically expensive. A more realistic option would be for us to get something called Newsfinder which gives us stories 24 hours late and allows us to yank AP stories out of other newspapers because we bought the rights to them. I am personally against this news because I think if anything, we should devote extra space to more local coverage, if that's possible. Others disagree with excellent points for going international, so it will be interesting to see what route we go.

There were also plenty of complaints about advisors. One woman said her advisor basically gives her no shot at having a career because she's married with children. Other students complained many advisors told them what to take instead of advising them of what to take.

I think a story about advisors would be worth looking into. Overall, I do think a good many advisors should spend more time letting their students know what it takes to graduate and get out of here. Plenty of my friends in fields from journalism to engineering say they were assured they would graduate at such-and-such a time only to be politely informed later that to do so, they'd have to take 32 credits in one semester.

Several people say they are hungry for a good conservative columnist to hit the opinion page and counter what they see as a liberal bias. So do I. Unfortunately, no one with that particular bias has shown the interest to work at the Argonaut. That's too bad, because I would love to see an aspiring Pat Buchanan or William F. Buckley counter my admittedly somewhat liberal bias. If you are interested, apply.

Unfortunately, I'm out of room, but those are some pressing and commonly brought up ideas. I see room for improvement, but that's part of the learning experience involved in working at the Argonaut. Keep the letters coming!

Because this
"It's a free country" stuff only goes so far.

It's everywhere
you want to be.

Who Are These People?

Each one of them are students, working to gain real-world experience while working to receive their education.

Learning the ups and downs of their careers instead of just reading about them in a textbook.

Employers are looking for quality people with experience, don't pass up the opportunity to graduate with a four year degree and four years of experience.

Applications are now available for fall semester employment. Pick one up on the 3rd floor of the Student Union, today! You'll Be Glad You Did!

Memorial tree set for planting

The money has been raised and the tree and plaque have been ordered, and now it is time to plant the Jeff Bever Memorial Tree.

Thanks to the efforts of family and friends the goal of $500 was exceeded. The total raised was $645.

April 10 the tree will be planted on the south side of Brink Hall at 11 p.m.

A plaque will be placed later. The tree is a type of red Maple which changes to dramatic colors in the fall.

Anyone who knew and loved Bever is welcome to come to the ceremony.

Casa de Oro offers Tex-Mex

Jeff Kapostasy
Staff Writer

Although the Casa de Oro may not quite reach the golden dining experience the name suggests, there is now a really good additional Mexican restaurant on the Palouse.

After being bummed out about Barleyhoppers and Jeff's Food's being closed and being an avid fan of Mexican food, I was pretty gosh darn excited when some Mexican words were spanned over the old overpriced Biscuitroot restaurant.

So anyway, my companion and I were on our way to the Old Peking when we noticed the green "Margarita Bar" sign brightly lit. Yea! No more of that really authentic Mexican food at Johnnies Las Hada's! Maybe this could be Moscow's edition of Chi-Chi's Restaurant.

After fighting our way through a crowd and getting onto the waiting list, my companion and I settled in at the nifty little bar. Being a lover of any drink of Mexican origin, I ordered a Margarita while my companion, who drank too much tequila in Mexico, settled for a whimpy strawberry daiquiri.

Ordering the drinks was a bit of a task. Both my girlfriend and I stood at the bar like totem poles but the bartenders either didn't see us or were too busy to help us. We sat back down and a friendly waitress took our drink order. A very friendly Mexican man who seemed to be the manager or something was very kind and brought us chips and salsa. The chips were tasty, as was the salsa.

After a wait that extended a bit beyond the estimated 15 minutes, we were led to our booth. The decor of the place really struck me as odd, especially for a Mexican restaurant — it actually had personality. The ambiance and decor could fool anyone into believing they were relaxing at a nice place in Mexico after being burned on the beach by the noonday sun.

There were plants everywhere and wicker furniture. The walls were accentuated by groovy stucco. And I don't mean Mexican in the way Johnnies decor is Mexican, which translates into dull.

Our waiter was cool. He brought us more chips and salsa and me another (smaller) margarita. Dipping into what I thought was the same stuff I had last dipped my corn chips in, I dove in heartily only to realize quite painfully that the salsa was of Burn-Your-Mouth-Out heat intensity.

Finding that nice roving manager guy, he politely brought me some very authentic mild salsa, which was garden-fresh and chock-full of veggies.

I ordered what I think was called a Casita de Pollo, although I don't remember exactly. While we were waiting for our food, our waiter talked and joked with us:

Waiter: "Still waiting for your food?"

Me: "Yes"

Waiter: "So am I." (Hearty Mexican laugh.)

So far, things had been pretty good. But then, Opening Night Problem Syndrome set in. The waiter goofed up my girlfriend's order which, luckily, turned into a happy mistake. The way my dish looked led me to suspect I was actually eating in a Chinese restaurant: a mess of chicken, onions and peppers all surrounded by rice. Nonetheless, it was delicious, as was my companions.

The food definitely not as good as some, but much better than others. Surrounded by the nice decor and friendly servers, this was turning into a very pleasurable dining experience despite the glitches.

Bloated and full, we skipped dessert. In terms of price, Casa de Oro is comparable to Alex's — perhaps a bit cheaper.

Overall, Casa de Oro looks very promising. If you like the way Mexican food tastes in Mexico, then Johnnies would probably fit you better. But if you like Americanized Mexican food — barring Taco Time — Casa de Oro may be the best on the Palouse.

International feelings belong to all

It is the time of year when the UI celebrates International Week. The main emphasis for this year is International Family and several events will be addressing this topic.

The celebration comes at a great time of the year, in the beginning of spring in the northern hemisphere, a season of many good feelings, sunshine and the general blooming of life. A good environment in which to think about cultural diversity, nationality, peace and understanding.

Some events took place last week that gave the right start to International Week. The Borah Symposium with the issue of water in the Middle East provided a great opportunity to learn more about a part of the world which struggles to survive in the midst of wars.

On the other hand, and on a minor scale, the World Issues Committee of the Students' International Association, organized a great discussion regarding the Role of the UI in the International Community. Many interesting ideas came out of the event, indeed a lot was learned.

However, there are a few things that we must keep in mind while celebrating International Week:

- We are all international, since we all belong to a Nation.
- Therefore, the international feeling must be shared by all of us — locals and foreigners. We all belong to the international community; what happens in one part of the world affects other parts.
- There are parts of the world that are suffering from war, hate, starvation, poverty and diseases. If we all are internationals, shouldn't we be concerned about this?

- To learn tolerance and respect will help us to build our international baggage.
- The foreign students at the UI are more than exotic food, interesting music and costumes and different languages and culture. We are human beings with aspirations, dreams, problems and concerns, who are willing to share their culture and to learn about other cultures, including Moscow's.

We are also students and professionals. Most of us have important roles to play back home. We have lots of responsibilities and commitments with

Adventures in Austria

Buses, groceries, police provide daily challenges

Mike Edwards
 Contributing Writer

I had a difficult time adjusting to life in Graz my first week in Europe.

I arrived on a Tuesday and by Friday I planned to be fairly familiar with life in Graz, and the little important things such as buying groceries, learning how to use the bus system and knowing the city well enough to avoid getting myself lost.

Although my first attempt at buying groceries was slightly unnerving, I did manage to buy enough staples to last a week.

Every day I found another reason to go to the grocery store and each time I found it easier and easier to find what I wanted and how to second-guess the lightning-speed cashiers.

I learned how to use the bottle recycling machine and the fresh fruit and vegetable pricing machine — devices I never used in the states. I also learned how to shop without using a 3 Schilling grocery bag or cart (1 Schilling = $.10).

Having conquered the process of obtaining food in Austria, I then set about learning the bus system.

The program booklet informed me that I had to obtain a six-day, 10-trip, or month bus pass at a Tabak or Trafik, a tobacco store found on almost every corner in Graz.

I soon learned that Tabak served as the Austrian equivalent of the American convenience store, offering cigarettes, tobacco, magazines, newspapers, lottery tickets, and Meldezettel, or police registration forms (everyone in Graz must register with the police — it's a European thing).

Tabak also sells bus passes and a kind lady at one of the many Trafik helped me purchase a one-month for 260 Schilling (about $26.00).

The campus at Karl-Franzens-Universität, my university, is spread throughout the city, so I figured that it would be wisest to have access to the bus system in Graz. The past few weeks I have spent in Graz have proved me correct.

Having a bus pass in my possession, I set about using it for the first time. One of my American friends from Arkansas, Ida (no relation to Don Ho), informed me that I had to validate it by "putting it in that little orange thing."

I took my first bus trip from my apartment to the university, about a mile away, on Thursday, March 3. I looked at the confusing schedule at the Marienplatz bus stop.

The numbers appeared to be written in a foreign language. So I guessed.

Fortunately, I guessed the right bus and right time. I climbed on bus 63 and put my ticket in "that little orange thing."

I felt like a mountain man from Idaho taking his first bus ride as I squeezed cautiously into the crowded vehicle.

Better benefits from Norplant

There have been many important developments in contraception over the last thirty years.

However, none have been as strikingly different as the Norplant system — a unique subdermal (under the skin) system that provides a highly effective contraception for as long as five years.

A short office procedure, by which the system is inserted in the upper arm, provides continuous, long-term contraception that does away with the need for daily pill-taking.

The system is also more effective than the pill in preventing pregnancy.

Norplant delivers a low-dose hormone, a progestin, through six thin, flexible capsules made of a soft tubing.

The progestin is not new to the field of medicine and is widely used in oral contraceptives.

The insertion takes about 15 minutes. After a local anesthetic is applied, the capsules are inserted into the inner part of the upper arm. In most cases, there is no noticeable scar.

The capsules are not visible. One of the most important characteristics of Norplant is that it is totally reversible within 24 hours of removal.

Health Minute

As with any birth control method, there are some drawbacks. The most common side effect is an irregular menstrual pattern, especially in the first year.

Up to 60 percent of women will have some irregularity. Less commonly, women complain of headache, nervousness and nausea. While the Norplant System is newly approved by the FDA in the United States, more than 500,000 women in 17 countries have used Norplant.

Over 1,000 women in the United States have been involved in the clinical trials.

The most common reason to discontinue the Norplant was due to bleeding irregularities.

Those who have had difficulty using other contraceptive methods are good candidates for the Norplant.

The cost varies from about $350 to $500 for the insertion.

Unfortunately, only a few insurance programs cover the cost at present.

The Norplant Foundation has financial assistance available to a limited number of women who qualify by income guidelines.

The new birth control method is now available locally.

You may contact Student Health Services for more information.

Moscow Food Co-Op

310 W. 3rd St.

Open 9-7pm DAILY

Pita Pockets

The pita pocket, preferably whole wheat, is the ideal base for 5-minute lunches for kids of all ages. Keep the pitas in the freezer, cut in halves or quarters depending on size. When ready to eat, pop the pita in the toaster and fill as desired. Here are some alternatives:

- Refried beans and black olives
- Mashed avocado and a slice of tomato
- Peanut butter and finely grated carrot
- Cream cheese and cucumber
- Sliced cheddar cheese and tomatoes
- Egg or tuna salad

For a hot filled pita, put the filling in cold and put the filled pita back in the toaster or in the microwave oven for a minute.

Gary Wintz, world-renowned photographer, will speak April 5, in the Borah Theater at 7 pm. The program will cover life in the Asian nation of Tibet featuring Wintz's photography.

Wintz graduated with a degree in philosophy from Duns Scotus College in Michigan and has spent the greater part of the past 28 years traveling to more than 200 countries, including exotic locations such as Madagascar and the Trobriand Islands.

This internationally acclaimed speaker, writer and photographer has contributed to a number of books, including White Lotus, an anthology of Tibetan culture. His articles have been published in national periodicals and international magazines such as Far Eastern Economic Review.

His photography has been featured on postcards and book covers and he has presented numerous slide shows to audiences including the National Geographic Society in Washington, D.C., and His Holiness the Dalai Lama.

An active humanitarian, Wintz has been involved with projects in Indonesia and Bangladesh. He also worked as a UNICEF consultant to develop projects in Ethiopia. In 1982, Wintz and his wife, Molly McGinn, became the first Westerners to reside in Tibet since the Communists Chinese occupation when they became employed at Tibet University in Lhasa, Tibet.

Wintz's work has led him to work as a consultant for media projects with NBC, PBS and CNN. He has been the subject of numerous interviews around the world, and lectured at University of California at Los Angeles, Cornell University, Gonzaga University and across the Asian continent.

Tuesday night's presentation will show life in Tibet through Wintz's photography. His slide presentation will be accompanied by a discussion of the current situation in Tibet.

Parents visit college students for weekend

Just in case books, classes and studying weren't enough, now parents have been invited into our college lives.

As International Week closes Parents Weekend kicks off.

Friday at 2:30 p.m. classes are dismissed so students, faculty, parents and guests can attend the annual Honors Convocation. This assembly recognizes students on the Dean's List, Scholastic Honor Society, University Honors Program and the Alumni Awards. A reception with President Elisabeth Zinser will follow the convocation in the Silver and Gold Room of the SUB.

The International Coffeehouse and Bazaar pulls double-duty on Friday. Serving both as part of International Week and as part of Family Weekend. It starts at 5:30 p.m. and runs to 10 p.m. in the SUB Ballroom. The room will be filled with food, music, dance, costume, stories and cultures from around the world.

Also Friday evening in the SUB is the Marketing Club Comedy Show at 8 p.m. in the Borah Theater. The comedians performing in the show are on the Pacific Northwest circuit plus a few others. Following the SUB show they will stick around and play at Chasers Lounge.

Saturday morning starts off at 9 a.m. with the Family Weekend Breakfast. It is being co-sponsored by the Parents' Association and the Alumni Association, but according to Robin Kelly, it is "open to everyone." Kelly is part of the Alumni Association. Kelly stressed, "The breakfast is for more than just the Parents' Association. It is for all parents and families." Throughout the week a camera person will be out taking pictures of students on campus and in Moscow. This candid video will be shown at the breakfast.

The reception following the awards assembly is called the Vandal Open House and, unlike the Honors Convocation, it is not on the outside of campus. In fact, it is right downstairs in the Vandal Lounge.

The open house starts at 2 p.m. and is open to anyone and everyone who wishes to attend. This is a chance for students, faculty and parents to gather and get to know each other in a social setting.

Finishing up the official weekend is the Blue Key Talent Show at 7 p.m. in the SUB Ballroom.

For information on weekend's events please call the SUB Information Desk at 885-6484.

'Tiny' no small project

Tristan Trotter
Staff Writer

Last year Jon Spreke and Ariana Burns went to the board at UI's Collette Theater with 10 pages of an original script by Burns and a quote from Euripedes' The Bacchae seeking space and support for the production of Burns' show-in-the-making.

Eager to encourage original work, the board granted Burns' show, Tiny Lives, the second slot this spring. Graduate student Jon Spreke sits in the director's chair.

Says Spreke of his concept when he and Burns first partnered: "I wanted three things: a song, to put nudity on the Collette stage and to use the space in interesting ways." He got two out of the three. Sorry — no bare skin this spring.

The project entailed a semester-long undergraduate theatre workshop culminating in a performance.

The show's five member cast and technical crew is made up almost entirely of undergraduates, with the exception of lighting designer Kelsey Hartman, theatre graduate student.

The process has been, according to both Spreke and Burns, "a roller coaster." Rehearsals were split between exercises designed to create "an ensemble of actors who worked together instinctively" and technical work with the metamorphosis of the script itself.

"Every other week, Ariana would come in with new script revisions. We'd read and discuss them every time," said Spreke. The final product, the script's 12th revision, was cemented only one week ago.

Tiny Lives is Ariana Burns' third original show to see production. Patchwork, her play dealing with AIDS, was a Northwest Playwrights' Guild winner. It premiered in Moscow, traveled to Eugene, Ore., toured Honolulu, then made a second Moscow run.

In addition, Burns' The Stick in the Spoke, selected to be read at the Northwest Drama Conference, was produced by Kim Bouchard at the Collette.

Spreke was involved in both shows — making

Tiny Lives the couple's third partnership. Like the play, their relationship has gone through a series of transformations, resulting in an obvious creative chemistry.

"Our relationship is the key," Spreke says. "Ari trusts my instincts more now. But she's also more willing to stand up for her script.... She doesn't blindly trust."

Their decision to make Burns a constant presence in the rehearsal process was essential to the growth of the play. Trying out each new idea on the actors, their discoveries fed the re-write process.

"It's been a long haul," says Burns. "We're all pretty wiped."

But they agree that the show is definitely ready. "Last week, the show took off ... It sprinted," Burns asserted.

Spreke calls Tiny Lives, plainly and simply "a love story." Burns expanded this to include elements of dealing with loss and salvaging damaged friendships. The story, about two women who rediscover their own relationship through the loss of a mutual friend, is, as Spreke says, "an all-nighter where people scream at each other and work out their conflict in order to start over."

Utilizing the entire Collette Theater, including the audience, Spreke has stylized the show with driving rave music and expressionistic concepts. "It swings from modern realism, to expressionism, to the bizarre," said Spreke.

The show also includes an original song, co-written by local musicians Dana Chapman and Jennifer Caldwell, performed by Bevin Flynn.

Both Burns and Spreke extended gratitude and praise to the actors, technicians and faculty members who have given time, talent and feedback. The cast includes undergraduates Darcy Hughes, Rama Lash, Carolyn Hitt, Paul Erwin, Bevin Flynn and Jodie Parsley.

Says Spreke of the actors' own metamorphosis: "They all know so much more now — the difference is amazing. The characters are really alive."

Tiny Lives plays at the Collette April 7-10. All shows are at 8 p.m., and tickets are $4 at the door.

An Empty Tomb.
 Makes you wonder how anyone could not believe!

More than Easter bunnies and colored eggs, Easter is the celebration of two historical events, the death and resurrection of Jesus of Nazareth. We believe Christ died for our sins and rose again. He conquered death and offers us forgiveness, peace with God, and eternal life.

But if the resurrection of Jesus is a hallucination, a hoax, or a myth, faith in Jesus Christ would be worthless and, as Paul the Apostle, a follower of Christ, wrote, "Christians of all people would be most pitied."

We have come to the conclusion that the resurrection of Jesus has been well-documented historically, and provides strong reasons for each of us to consider the truth of his claims for our lives. If you would like to know more, we invite you to talk with any one of us further about this.

the development of our own countries.

Hopefully, the things we learn in the classrooms at the UI will help us to adapt to our realities. Can you imagine people talking about Moscow, Idaho, in New Zealand, Central America, Africa, Asia or Australia? Picture yourself traveling to any other country where you can meet a fellow UI alumnus!

- Forget the stereotypes. This will make your life easier and will help you better understand other cultures.

For instance, you will not find everybody dressed like a "matador" in Spain; you will not find mariachis all over Mexico; not all the people from India are hindus; and Costa Rica is not the same as Puerto Rico.

We all have the chance to learn a little bit more everyday. I invite you to take advantage of the opportunities offered by the International Week. It does not matter where you come from or where you live, remember, we are all international. Let us all meet in the celebration of the international community, represented by all of us at the UI.

AUSTRIA

Everyone spoke German and an array of new and interesting buildings passed me as the bus hit every bump and curve in the street. Standing in the middle of the aisle with a crowd of people, I felt like one of many cows waiting to be herded somewhere.

I prefer the subway in Washington, D.C.

I arrived at my destination without incident. It took me awhile to learn to read the Austrian bus schedule and a bit longer to figure out how to use the street car system, how to make the bus stop, and how to open the door once it stopped.

The UI, unfortunately, does not have a transit system to educate me about the intricacies of taking the bus.

During my first week in Austria I also experienced the joy of registering with the police.

Buying a Meldezettel at a local Tabak, I filled it out the best I could and brought it to the nearest station.

The police officer who helped me spoke in a language completely foreign to me, a sort of local dialect apparently unrelated to German.

He talked to me, he joked with me, he smiled and said something when he took my passport, but I had no idea what he said to me. I felt like a stranger in a very strange land.

Things have gone better for me since that first week in Graz. My experiences helped me adjust quickly to the culture and I now fit in well while feigning to understand the local Graz dialect.

Anyone who has traveled abroad can relate to the experiences I have written. Those who haven't traveled — should.

Waif model sings

Abby Bandurraga
Staff Writer

It's doing the early morning routine of toilet sitting and toothpaste spitting when my roommate sticks in music.

"Jess," I yell, through a mouthful of blue foam, "Which P.J. Harvey album is this?"

"It's not ... it's that model girl, Milla Jovovich. You know, the one everyone thought was Kate Moss, but then she turned out to be 11-years-old."

Hearing a copy cat of your favorite artist at 8 a.m. is a tough thing to take if you're a cranky witch — such as myself. But, out of obligation to my editor, and some twisted desire to remain cranky, I kept listening to Milla's debut album The Divine Comedy.

I decided to give Milla a chance and listen past the obvious "P.J. Harviness" of her voice, to the lyrics and the music.

Lyricaly, the Russian Jovovich has a lot to say about her people, her feelings of alienation during her modeling years (I'm sure she'll get over it with a couple million more dollars) and silly, shmealy crushes ("it's my heart in your hands" she sings). These feelings could be extremely moving if they were worded effectively.

Unfortunately, they're pretty trite. The music which accompanies the copy cat voice (which, by the time I've hit the song "Bang Your Head," has come to emulate Kate Bush) and the mundane lyrics ("Oh my, am I high/Is that a glow up in the sky") are the saving grace of this album. The opening three songs: "The Alien Song (For Those Who Listen)," "Gentleman Who Fell," and "It's Your Life," have beautiful string accompaniments that include a mandolin and a ukulele.

The song that closes the album, "In A Glade," is a very nice, traditional Russian folk song. In between these songs are some pretty interesting techno-meets-Russian-folk maneuvers, which aren't nearly as listenable as the rest of the album.

Basically, by the time I was off and ready for school The Divine Comedy, was finished playing.

I found a soft spot in my cranky heart and mustered up a small amount of respect for Milla's attempts to produce a non-mainstream album. However, I found myself agreeing with my roommate when she said, "Thank God it's over."

UNFORTUNATELY, THIS IS WHERE PEOPLE ARE PUTTING TOO MANY RETIREMENT DOLLARS.

Every year, a lot of people make a huge mistake on their taxes. They don't take advantage of tax deferral and wind up sending Uncle Sam money they could be saving for retirement.

Fortunately, that's a mistake you can easily avoid with TIAA-CREF SRAs. SRAs not only ease your current tax bite, they offer a remarkably easy way to build retirement income—especially for the "extras" that your regular pension and Social Security benefits may not cover. Because your contributions are made in before-tax dollars, you pay less taxes now. And since all earnings on your SRA are tax-deferred as well, the money you don't send to Washington works even harder for you. Down the road, that can make a dramatic difference in your quality of life.

What else makes SRAs so special? A range of allocation choices—from the guaranteed security of TIAA to the diversified investment accounts of CREF's variable annuity—all backed by the nation's number one retirement system.

Why write off the chance for a more rewarding retirement? Call today and learn more about how TIAA-CREF SRAs can help you enjoy many happy returns.

Benefit now from tax deferral. Call our SRA hotline 1 800-842-2733, ext. 8016.

Ensuring the future for those who shape it.™

CREF certificates are distributed by TIAA-CREF Individual and Institutional Services. For more complete information, including charges and expenses, call 1 800-842-2733, ext. 8016 for a prospectus. Read the prospectus carefully before you invest or send money.

Charity scramble this weekend

This Saturday, Beta Theta Pi Fraternity is having a golf scramble. The proceeds from the scramble will go to benefit the National Child's Burn Awareness program.

The event will take place at the UI golf course. Tee times will be made from 10:30 a.m. and will extend until 1:30 p.m.

The scramble is set up in teams of four. The cost is $18 per player. The cost includes a $13 greens fee.

The way one plays a scramble is simple. Everyone tees off. The longest of the four drives is the one the team should play. There is an order that is followed. Once the longest drive is hit it is simply a matter of taking turns amongst the team players until the hole is sunk, then move on to the next hole for the same thing.

Prizes for the competition will be awarded. They will go to the first and second place teams as well as the longest drive and closest to the pin competitions.

The event is designed to be fun. So, spend part of Parent's Weekend on the course with your parent(s).

More importantly, however, is that $5 from the fee will benefit a worthy cause — the National Child's Burn Awareness program is the charity of the Beta's General Fraternity.

For more information contact Tobby or Chris Waddell at 885-6251.

Banquet honors graduating seniors

Tonight the UI will hold its annual banquet where the UI men's hoopsters will be honored.

The event will take place at the University Inn Convention Center where a social hour will be held at 6 p.m. followed by dinner at 7 p.m.

The Vandals will see the departure of UI basketball legend Orlando Lightfoot and teammates Deon Watson, Frank Waters, Jeremy Brandt and Dan Serkin. Lightfoot will long be remembered for his senior season where he set the Big Sky Conference all-time scoring mark.

The event costs $18 for adults and $8 for children. For tickets call the UI ticket office at 885-6466. Seating is limited so early registration is advised.

After two days of cutting, climbing throwing and chopping, loggers finally got to sit down, take it easy and eat some pig.

Matthew D. Andrew
Sports Editor

Believe it or not, the smell of wood, sweat and teamwork conjure up images of athletics.

The smell of wood. Athletics. That's right. The UI Logger Sports Club held its first home competition of the year Saturday and Sunday and that's exactly what was happening.

The smells of wood and sweat were not generated from the use of a chainsaw but pure energy and muscle-bound talent.

In all, eight teams traveled from parts of the Northwest to take part in the Logger Sports Jamboree. Teams from the University of Montana, Flathead Valley Community College out of Kalispell, Mont., Spokane

Community College, Treasure Valley Community College from Ontario, Ore., and Colorado State University from Fort Collins, Colo., along with two teams from UI.

In all there are 13 events in which either men and women can compete or team together for.

UI's club was quite successful. Finishing in second place was UI team B and right behind them was team A.

Walking home with distinct honors was Eric Marcellus who was named Top Male Logger. He also took first in the vertical Speed chop as well as the men's birling. Birling might not sound familiar but if one was to see it it would look familiar, simply put — log rolling. He also took third in the hard hit chop.

Other men that took home first places were Eric Keller in the vertical hard hit chop. Likewise, in the same event, Rocky Gilbert and Wayne Hutchinson placed second and third respectively. The men's obstacle pole competition requires each to go through a series of events, Mark Mahon placed second. He also took honors in the pole climb.

The women also had some distinct honors of their own.

JoAnna Duguay took first in the women's ax throw which tries each contestant's skill at sticking the ax in a small target. Angie Elkins was the one who finished the pole climb faster than anyone else could. In the women's birling contest Chrissy Marcellus stayed on the log longer than any of the other competitors while Raini Rippi was a close second.

JoAnna Duguay took third in the obstacle course. Rippi also teamed up with Sandi Pike in the double buck for a third place performance.

A special thanks goes out to Bob Bobsworth and Alvie Marcellus for volunteering their time to judge the events as well as to the runners, score keepers and timers.

Following the Logger Jamboree was an awards banquet and dance which was finely catered by Harry Lee who brought all of the food, and that includes the pig.

Arkansas claims first national title

Andrew Longeteig
Staff Writer

After each Arkansas victory, head coach Nolan Richardson pays tribute to his daughter who died from Leukemia earlier this year. "Baby we got you another one."

The Razorbacks got another victory to improve their record to 31-3.

This win, however, happened to come in the NCAA championship game. What a coincidence.

Arkansas used timely shooting and forced 23 turnovers in a 76-72 win over the Duke Blue Devils last night.

Sleek and slender Razorback forward Scotty Thurman hit the most important shot in Arkansas basketball history. With time running down on the shot clock — one second to be exact — Thurman launched a 3-pointer over the outstretched arms of Antonio Lang. The ball seemed to be in the air for about as long as President Clinton's term as it softly fell through the hoop with 50.7 seconds remaining in the game. The shot gave Arkansas a 73-70 lead.

Duke guard Chris Collins, who hit two big 3-pointers late in the second half, thought he was really lucky by attempting a 30-foot jump shot with plenty of time left on the shot clock.

After an Arkansas miss, Collins flubbed a lay-in and Duke was forced to foul with 17.2 seconds left.

Corey Beck missed the first one and was substituted on the second free throw, not because he was a poor shooter from the line, but he sustained a bleeding cut. Al Dillard replaced Beck and nailed the second free throw.

Duke's Cherokee Parks rebounded and scored after an errant 3-pointer, pulling the Blue Devils within three points with 10.2 seconds left.

After an Arkansas free throw, Duke couldn't get organized on offense and ultimately turned the ball over, and ultimately gave Arkansas its first ever NCAA tournament title.

Thurman was named Player of the Game thanks to his big shot and a 15 point, five rebound effort.

Corliss Williamson, however, made Arkansas tick. The forward led the Razorbacks with 23 points and eight rebounds — many of those which came in the last five minutes.

Duke finished the season with yet another excellent record — 28-6. The senior class of Lang, Marty Clark and Grant Hill finished their careers with a remarkable 18-2 NCAA tournament record.

"The type of effort they (the seniors) gave tonight is the kind of effort they've given for four years," said Duke head coach Mike Krzyzewski after the game.

Duke impressively made Arkansas play to the Blue Devils' tempo for most of the game. The Razorbacks, however, ran more and more as the game went on.

"They wear you down," said Duke head coach Mike Krzyzewski after the game. "We were subbing a lot to try to keep

Track teams show strong performance

Five members of the women's track team placed first in their respective events to lead the women at the Cougar Inland Invitational at Washington State University Saturday.

First place standings by Cindy Smith, Angie Mathison, Angie Smith, Tara Hamilton and Tanya Tesar helped the women receive an overall record of 2-1 in the dual meets. UI outscored Eastern Washington, 102-30, and Portland, 113-18, while losing to host WSU, 81-54.

Cindy Smith finished first in the high jump with a leap of five-foot-five. In the event, she beat out fellow teammates Teresa Batt and Cathy Ballensky, both of whom finished tied for fourth with a five-three mark.

In the 3,000 meters, Mathison finished with a time of 10 minutes, 6.47 seconds, out-racing all and UI third-place finisher Laura Moore, who had 10:17.96.

The 400-meter hurdles featured Smith crossing the finish line with a 57.96 time, while Amy Frank came in second for the UI with a 58.94 time.

In the triple jump, Tesar finished with a leap of 39-6 and one-half inch, culminated her best standing at the invitational. The senior also participated in the 100-meter hurdles, finishing second in 14.91, the shot put 34-8 and one-half and the javelin, 99-6.

Hamilton, meanwhile, received her standing in the 1,500 meters where she finished with a time of 4:46.61.

Aside from those receiving first place, there were a slew of second place Idaho finishers that helped the team in its strong dual-meet record.

Heidi Bodwell overcame a distance of 18-5 and three-quarters in the long jump for her second place finish. In the 100 meters, the junior finished fifth with a time of 12.85. Bodwell also competed on the 400-meter relay team.

In the shot put, Jill Wimer threw for a distance of 43-8 and three-quarters for her ranking. The sophomore also competed in both the discus, 134-1, and in the javelin, fourth with 121-10.

Traci Hanegan finished the 200 meters with a time of 25.18 to finish second and beat out Lani Bachman, who came in fifth with 26.83. In the 100 meters, Hanegan finished third with a 12.55 time and was also a member of the 400-meter relay team.

The 400-meter hurdles featured Althea Belgrave coming in with a second place time of 1:04.49, beating out Kelly Hunt, who was fifth with 1:06.01.

In the 1600-meter relay, the team of Belgrave, Tara Gehrke, Tami the javelin throw with a distance of 127-11 to finish not only ahead of Wimer and Tesar, but also Lorri Thompson, who was fifth — throwing for a distance of 120-11.

Jessica Welk came in two spots behind Wimer in the discus for a fifth-place finish of 124-1.

In the 400-meter relay, the team of Emily Wise, Fife, Bodwell and Hanegan finished fourth with a time of 48.81 seconds.

On the men's side, the team finished with an official 1-1 record in the dual meets.

They outscored Portland, 94-40 and were defeated by WSU, 109-46. Their score against EWU was ruled incomplete after an equipment malfunction made the results from the 100 meters inconclusive.

Oscar Duncan and Niels Kruller finished first in their respective events to lead the men in Pullman. Duncan placed in the javelin with a 214-1 throw, while in the 200 meters, Kruller finished with a time of 22.08, his best placing. In the long jump, the freshman came in second with a leap of 23-3, beating out Jerry Trujillo, who was third with 21-11.

Other second place finishers included Travis Allen in the 110-meter hurdles with a 15.17 time, Scott McCarty in the shot put with a distance of 48-9, and Corey Johnson in the pole vault, overcoming a 15-5 height.

McCarty not only participated in the previous event, but also in the discus, where he finished third with a distance of 154-3, and in the hammer throw, 145-2.

Meanwhile, Pat McFadden finished his best invitational standing in the pole vault, where he came in third by going over 15-5. Aside from participating in this event and in the long jump, where he leaped for 21-0 and one-half, the senior also finished strongly in the discus and the 110-meter hurdles, coming in fifth in both events with respective finishes of 140-7 and 15.74.

Along with placing in the long jump, Trujillo finished third in the triple jump with a 46-6 and three-quarters leap, beating out Shane, who came in fifth with a 43-11 and one-quarter effort.

In the 400-meter hurdles, Paul Thompson came in third with a 54.90 time, while in the 5,000 meters, Frank Bruder finished with another third-best time of 14:51.33. In the event, he outraced Jason Uhlman, who was fourth with a 14:52.25 time.

Besides Bosch, other fifth place finishers included Todd Barbour in the 800 meters with 2:01.59 time and Ty Koellmann in the 1,500 meters with 3:53.74.

Steinbronner and Kerri Fife finished behind the WSU's No. 1 team with a time of 4:02.9.

Jessica Puckett came in third in

Tennis nets important win

Matthew D. Andrew
Sports Editor

Idaho's men's tennis team won what is probably the most important win in UI tennis history within the past two years.

At the University of California-Irvine/Marriott Tennis Classic, the team defeated Virginia Tech. During preseason tennis, Virginia was rated No. 20 in the nation.

The Vandals have received strength in the youth behind Chris Daniels and Keith Bradbury. Both Daniels and Bradbury have been named Big Sky Conference Players of the Week.

The team is also relying heavily on their upper-classmen who lead the team, if any had dropped his match the team would not have won. All this is in midst of head coach Dave Scott's resignation from the team.

At the same meet last year, the Vandal squad lost all four matches. This year, however, they earned themselves some well needed and deserved respect. This respect will carry over to next season when they will probably be asked to return to the invite-only tournament.

In Scott's seven year reign as head coach, never has any squad knocked off a ranked opponent. The match concluded with the victory as Bradbury playing at the No. 3 singles slot won the final match of the day 7-6, 5-7, 6-3. Bradbury teamed with Daniels to give the squad its only doubles match win.

Mark Hadley brought the match to the final game, Daniels, when he himself defeated a nationally ranked player, Oliver Mayo who is

No. 39, after dropping the first set 3-6. He then came back to win the next two 7-5.

Nothing would have flown if the team veterans Niren Lall and Ryan Slaton had not produced victories of their own on the singles court. Lall defeated his opponent in straight sets 7-5, 6-3 at the No. 2 position. Likewise, Slaton produced his match victory with ease winning in straight sets 6-0, 6-4.

In other matches, the UI found itself playing Big Sky Conference rival Idaho State.

Defeated 2-5, the UI's only wins came not from Daniels and Bradbury but rather the veterans Lall and Slaton.

Lall defeated his No. 2 opponent 6-3, 3-6, 6-0. Slaton beat out his opponent with little difficulty in straight sets both at 6-2.

Club battles men's rugby

Club rugby team loses a disappointing game to Central Washington

Amy White
Staff Writer

Easter Weekend served productive for the UI men's rugby team when they played a tough game against Central Washington University in Washington on Saturday.

Among other things, the weather added to the Vandals' bad luck. It was overcast accompanied by strong wind conditions.

UI came out slow in the opening 10 minutes of the game, and CWU took control right from the start, scoring as a result of the Vandals' missed conversion.

Vandal standout rookie, Ben Williams, then made an interception and was fouled. The foul produced a penalty kick and was converted by Mark Dobrilovic which left the team down by two.

Chris Staroska had the next significant play. He had a one man run to score under the post and Dobrilovic again kicked the conversion leaving the score 10-5.

The second half immediately held a 6-5 overload try by CWU, luckily they did not try to their score and also missed the conversion. They were quick to recover a winning run making it under the posts and the conversion, increasing the score 10-17.

The last play of game was a 7-5 man overload that CWU had in the far corner of the field where they scored and won the game with a final score of 10-22.

This was the first loss for the Vandal team this season. UI has defeated Gonzaga and Washington State, leaving their record at 2-1.

Forward Mark Dobrilovic added about the team's performance, "(the) UI pack had trouble gaining control of ball — this allowed CWU to pull forwards and place them in the back line, resulting in large overloads."

Back player Ben Williams said, "our backs had more trouble controlling the ball while going into the wind, than did CWU."

Team captain, Jess Porter, added, "we made mistakes in offensive intensity. We had players on the field who played as if they didn't want to be there. However, those who did, played an excellent and intense game, despite increasingly dirty play by CWU."

Luckily there were not any serious injuries due to CWU's "dirty" playing methods. However, there were a few eye, ankle and shoulder injuries.

This is the first year the UI team has played in the Canadian Inland International Rugby Union, which provides a higher level of competition for the team and a wider variety of men's club teams available for them to play.

In past years the club team participated in the Pacific Northwest Collegiate League. Canada has a very strong rugby program and several of their better teams will be playing the UI team in a tournament in up-coming weeks.

April 9, the Idaho rugby team will play in the Fool's Fest Tournament, hosted by the Spokane men's club. This will serve as their first league game. The Spokane men's club is highly favored and Dobrilovic added about the upcoming game, "Spokane's club is highly favored, but we might surprise them."

The next home games for the rugby team will be April 16 against the University of Montana Jesters on Guy Wicks Field ourselves fresh. It was a great college basketball game."

The game featured 9 ties and 13 lead changes.

The Blue Devils' second-leading scorer, Parks, played only 12 minutes in the first half due to a knee injury sustained in Saturday's game with Florida. Duke, nevertheless, stayed neck and neck to Arkansas, as they were down 34-33 at halftime.

The Razorbacks attained this lead without attempting any free throws. Likewise, Duke only shot three in the first half.

Arkansas was destined to improve their 23-0 record when leading at halftime.

A 13-0 Blue Devil run, however, almost changed that. In the first three minutes of the second half, Duke outthrustled Arkansas for a 48-38 advantage.

Arkansas countered with a 12-4 run of their own with 13:36 left.

From there on, no team led by more than five points until seconds remained in the game.

Hill showed why he is the most complete college basketball player by amassing 12 points and 14 rebounds while playing relentless defense.

The most deserving, on the other hand, was Richardson who brought a program from dormancy to prominence and earned the respect from not only his fans and critics, but his daughter, too.
