UI Housing makes changes

Michelle Kalbeltzer
Contributing Writer

An alarming increase of unsatisfied students has prompted housing officials to reevaluate the University of Idaho Residence Hall policies. Shawna Bricker, a junior at UI, lived three semesters in the residence halls. "I would have left earlier if I could have," Bricker said about her experience. Her unhappiness starts with the noise level of the halls.

Bricker is enjoying life in her apartment. "It's quieter. There aren't people right next door that you can hear."

While it is true that apartment buildings encase several apartments, they are not as close to each other in proximity as are dormitory rooms.

Another complaint includes a lack of privacy. Sharing such limited room with another person puts a strain on any friendship.

Probably the most familiar complaint remains the cost of living at the residence halls. When Bricker lived in the halls she paid $385.00 a month for a double occupancy room. When the fees increased once again she decided to move out and into an apartment. A total of $282.00 covers Bricker's portion of rent, food, phone, and electric bills for one month.

"I didn't like the feeling that I was always at school — I felt that I couldn't relax," Bricker said about her overall experience.

Deric Wheeler, a senior at UI, lived three years in the residence halls. "You don't feel so pressured on the hours you need to eat. When you live off-campus you can eat when you want to," he says.

Apparently these complaints have not gone unnoticed in the Housing Office. Jim Bauer, Director of Residence Life, says that for three consecutive semesters surveys have been offered to students who are leaving. Bauer says the results of the survey have led to "reevaluating the style of communities we offer to students."

The Housing Office is working with Residence Hall Association to establish a committee whose duties include hearing student concerns before they move out.

According to the past surveys, some students feel influenced by alcohol that others around them possess. This complaint resulted in a new alcohol-free residence

Festival peaceful, helped by late Rush

Russ Wright

LollaPalouza, despite its turnout of nearly 6,000 students, created no problems for Moscow police. Lieutenant Jake Kershnik was happy with the way things went last weekend.

"There were no problems at the event," he said. Kershnik was also very "pleased with how things went this weekend."

Apparently the administration's decision to delay Rush has helped to reduce the number of alcohol-related incidents the police usually see on the last weekend of summer vacation.

According to Kershnik, "Citations issued were down significantly from years previous when Rush ended."

Linda Davis, UI Greek Advisor, had this to say about the decrease in alcohol-related incidents: "I couldn't agree with Lieutenant Kershnik more. Much of the credit goes to the LollaPalouza committee and the GAMMA committee."

The GAMMA committee, started by the Greek community, formed last February in response to the concern over alcohol related incidences on campus.

"Everybody, including students, seems to agree that it was an excellent way to start the school year," said Davis.

Gem yearbook looking for better sales

Russ Wright
News Editor

Tim Helmke, editor of "Gem of the Mountains," says there are changes afoot at the UI yearbook this fall.

After being threatened with extinction last year, the staff will be working hard to generate better sales for the yearbook this fall. John Marble, ASUI

President, suggested last spring that the yearbook be discontinued since sales were slipping.

According to Helmke, there have been "quality books in the past but the knowledge (of the yearbook) hasn't been there." To help with this problem, the Gem is hoping that the ASUI will appoint Tamie Bremer as promotions manager.

The yearbook sold just 445

Students need to discipline card use

Sam Woodbury
Staff Writer

Often college students make use of credit cards to supplement their income while trying to meet constricting budget limitations. Credit can be a useful tool if used properly, or as far too many students have discovered the hard way, access to credit can be financially devastating in the long run.

Dan Davenport, a university financial advisor, warns students to be very cautious of credit cards. "Our advice is not to have them at all, except for emergencies only," he said. He also stated that many financial problems for students spark with credit card debt.

Part of the problem with credit cards is the ease of their use and the sense of an expanded income. A student at Columbia University in New York City discovered that credit is potentially a hindrance. "I ended up buying things I wouldn't buy otherwise, and I had to work extra that I wouldn't have done otherwise," she said.

One student at the University of Idaho amassed a relatively small debt of $1,700. In comparison to the several thousand dollar sums that many individuals accumulate, this may seem pretty insignificant. This individual used several credit cards to build this debt—from department store cards to national bank cards.

It wasn't long before the minimum payments became overwhelming. When this happened, she made use of a national consumer assistance organization to pay back all of her debt. This organization works as a mediator between the individual and the credit card companies. Agreements can often be established to suspend interest accumulation as long as payments are kept up.

At the start of a new semester, advertisements for major credit cards line the walls of the University Classroom Center. They offer low interest rates, no annual fee, discount airfares, and sizable credit limits.

The Citibank Classic Visa advertises low interest rates—at 9.4 percentage points above the prime interest rate, not to exceed 19.2%. With this interest rate, if $1,000 is used and repaid a year later in one payment, $1,192 will be paid back; or if it is paid in full two years later, the total payback will be $1,420.

Last year, American Express offered a student package

Workshop for scholarships

A workshop is being held for students interested in applying for major scholarships including the Rhodes, Truman, Marshall, Mellon, Goldwater and others. The guest speaker will be Mr. Louis Blair, Nation Executive Secretary of the Truman Foundation. Dr. George Simmons, Vice-Provost of Academic Affairs, Dr. Stefan Flores, Rhodes and Goldwater Scholarships Advisor and Dr. Dan Zirker, Truman Scholarship Advisor will also be present. An overview of important skills and requirements will be given. Time will also be set aside for a question and answer session. The workshop will be held September 8 at 2:30 p.m. in the faculty lounge in the bottom of Brink Hall.

Addresses need updating

Students are being urged by M. E. Telin, registrar, to make sure that local and permanent addresses and phone numbers are up to date in the on-line registration/address update system. The Campus Directory (Blue Key) information is taken from the on-line system, so any incorrect information not updated soon will be printed in the directory. The address update system is available throughout the year. Students who wish to restrict access to local and/or permanent addresses in the directory should submit a written request to the Registrar's Office prior to September 12. Students with questions can call 885-6731 or go directly to the office in the Administration Annex room 104.

4-H invites involvement

The UI 4-H is holding a meeting and social activity in the SUB Chiefs' Room on September 12 from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. For more information contact Janet Edwards at 103 Morrill Hall or 885-6321.

KUID hiring for sports positions

KUID-TV, the public television station on campus, is hiring students to work on the broadcast of Vandal football and basketball games. A production meeting will be held September 8 at the station. Call John at 885-2612 for the meeting time or if you are unable to attend.

Habitat to hold walkathon

Palouse Habitat for Humanity will be holding a walkathon on September 25 from 1:00 to 4:00 p.m. to raise money for their volunteer organization. The route will cover three and a half miles in Moscow from WalMart to Tidyman's. Prizes, free food and live radio coverage will be offered. WalMart has pledged to match the first $2,000 raised. Pledge envelopes and more information are available by contacting Pam Peterson at 882-1349 or the Habitat office at 883-8502.

Organization fair on Sept. 7

A student organization fair will be held September 7 from 10:00 a.m. until 2:00 p.m. in the Student Union Lounge. The fair will feature music and booths which will showcase different student organizations. All students are welcome. Free popcorn and snowcones will be available along with coupons for a 50 percent discount at the Vandal Cafe. Door prizes provided by the bookstore and ASUI outdoor rentals will be awarded. Contact Otey Enoch at 885-2236 for more information.

Gonorrhea cases on the increase

The American Social Health Association reports that gonorrhea cases have seen an upswing among teenagers. The U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention found that the number of reported cases rose by 13.6 percent for the first quarter of 1994. ASHA is warning both college and high school students to be aware of the dangers of gonorrhea and other STDs and to make responsible choices about their sexual practices and partners.

Comic team to perform at WSU

Williams & Ree, who bill themselves as "The Indian and the White Guy," will perform comedy at the WSU Beasley Performing Arts Coliseum on September 9 at 8 p.m. Tickets are $14.00 and are available at the coliseum box office, 509-335-1541, through Ticket Express here at the UI Student Union, or through G&B Select-A-Seat outlets. Telephone orders can be placed by dialing 1-800-325-SEAT.

Teleconference free to public

The National League of Women Voters will be hosting a national teleconference on health care reform on September 16 from 11:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. in the Borah Theater in the Student Union. No preregistration is necessary. Everyone is welcome. There is no admission fee. The teleconference will be followed by four presentations/discussions with local health care providers, administrators, insurance industry and Idaho Congressional representatives. For more information, contact the UI Women's Center at 885-6616.

193 women pledge Greek

After a "very successful, smooth running rush," 193 women have pledged the University of Idaho's seven sororities, down slightly from a year ago when 214 women pledged.

According to university officials, "everything went as planned and everyone was pleased." This year's Rush format was slightly changed from previous years with increased emphasis on conversation between house members and rushees and fewer skits and similar activities.

See related story on page one.

Workshops offered

The University of Idaho Career Services will be offering workshops next week. All workshops are free, but registration is recommended. An orientation will be offered September 7 at 11:30 a.m. A workshop on resumes and cover letters will be held September 7 at 3:30 p.m. Interview preparation will be the subject on September 8 at 2:30 p.m., and another orientation will be offered on September 8 at 3:30 p.m. Please call Career Services for more information at 885-6121.

Registration deadline to vote in October

Shelby Dopp
Staff Writer

It is that time of year again. People who are 18 years of age or older and are U.S. citizens have another opportunity to exercise a constitutional right.

Not to fret, the draft is not being reinstated. It is time to either restate or replace some state and local politicians.

However, in order to take place in the democratic process, one must first be registered with the county in order to practice this given right.

For those who live in Latah County, the deadline for voter registration is October 27—ten days before elections. However, voters do have one last chance to register at the polls on November 8. A valid ID must be shown with a current address on it to prove residency.

For those who are not residents in the area, an absentee ballot can be used instead. In order to file an absentee ballot, the voter must be currently registered in the county in which they claim residency. Second, a current address must be given to Voter Registration in the Latah County Courthouse located on Van Buren Street next to the Sheriff's Department. They can then send out an absentee ballot, so people can vote in absentia for their state or national elections.

If a trip out of town is planned during election time, Voter Registration can arrange to have absentee ballots filled out beforehand. A voter registration booth will be set up during the Latah County Fair on September 14, 15 and 16 at the Latah County Fairgrounds or call the Voter Registration Office for operational hours.

Polls will be set up at the Latah County Fairgrounds and at the Kibbie Dome on November 8. The two polls are for different precincts. Voters will need to check with the Voter Registration Office to find out which precinct they live in.

Forgetting to register or neglecting to vote eliminates the chance to have a say in how the country is run.

which included discounted Northwestern Airlines fares as an incentive to students.

However, these airline fares were restrictive. They only allowed the passenger to make reservations two weeks in advance and they had to return within two weeks—not ideal for students who want to go home for the summer.

The student from Columbia used this offer to fly home from New York during Christmas. Because of a high volume of holiday traffic, she ended up departing on Christmas Eve and returning six days later.

However, credit cards are a useful tool if used with discipline.

They can be a convenient alternative to handling cash or travelers checks while traveling, so long as a budget is established.

Many rental car companies will not serve someone without credit. If they do, they may require a cash deposit of somewhere in the realm of $500. And they can be of particular value in the event of an emergency or in being stranded on the interstate hundreds of miles from home.

Best advice: read carefully any credit application. Note the interest rate and annual fees, if any. Best of all, be sure of budget limitations and keep track of how much, exactly, is spent each month.

Correction

Editor's Note: The Argonaut would like to make a correction to an article printed in Friday's paper. Regena Coghlan did not get intoxicated at a fraternity Rush party. Fraternities are forbidden to have alcohol at Rush activities. The party was not an official Rush activity.

Health insurance and services benefit students

Health center receives 27,000 patient visits per year

Zach Craig-Works
Staff Writer

With the rising debate over national health care, all students at the University of Idaho can rest assured that they have access to the Student Health Services office.

The office operates a full clinic with a staff including three doctors, a nurse practitioner, two pharmacists, a nutritionist and a board certified interest.

The Student Health office is able to handle all illnesses and injuries, broken bones and even minor surgery. The office also focuses on wellness and works with women's health care and sexually transmitted disease testing.

Student Health Director Dr. Donald Chin wants students to know that the office is open to all students and offers numerous medical services at very reasonable prices.

A doctor's visit at the Student Health Services office only costs $3.50.

Students are also eligible for prescription drugs at a lowered price.

This is available because the entire Student Health Services office is non-profit and is funded entirely by the $33 taken out of every student's fee.

Spouses and dependents of students are also eligible to make use of Student Health Services.

According to Dr. Chin, Student Health Services receives 27,000 patient visits per year.

The facility is used by about 85 to 90 percent of the UI student body.

Students are also covered under a mandatory accident plan required by state law.

For full-time students, this coverage applies 24 hours a day and does not end until five days after the last day for final examinations. Part-time students are covered only while on property owned or leased by the University, participating in official University programs or traveling as authorized by the University.

Students have the option of extending their coverage for a $147 premium per semester. This extended coverage increases benefits to $55,000 and covers expenses resulting from illness and pregnancy.

Zinser requests external review

Move to Big West under consideration

President Elisabeth Zinser has recommended that the University of Idaho obtain an external management audit to evaluate the proposed move to Big West.

An ad hoc committee appointed by Zinser came to the conclusion that UI should move to the Big West Athletic Conference only under certain conditions.

"Representatives of our faculty, administration, Vandal Boosters, alumni and UI Foundation have examined options for conference affiliation, considered some of the pros and cons of each and offered valuable advice. Their opinion will play an important role in my consideration of future affiliation for UI."

The committee forwarded the following guidelines, among others, to apply to all the university's options for athletic competition. Some of the guidelines included remaining a strong leader in achieving gender equity, maintaining the program's strong fiscal integrity and preserving the UI athletic tradition.

The committee also recommended that UI and Boise State University "move forward together" in seeking approval from the Idaho Board of Education to join the Big West Conference.

Joining the conference would mean that UI would be competing in Division 1A instead of in Division 1AA. The Big Sky Conference belongs to the 1AA division. The move would mean tougher competition for UI athletic teams. The possibility also exists that the football team would have to use Washington State University's stadium for home games.

Once the external review is completed, President Zinser is expected to forward her recommendation for consideration by the Board of Regents when it meets in Moscow on September 22 and 23.

books last year. However, this year 142 books have already been sold without the benefit of advertising or other promotions.

The threat of extinction still remains, however. Although, according to Helmke, "most of the major roadblocks have been removed," the Gem staff "still (has) that challenge."

This challenge is being faced by the staff on several fronts. This year the staff is working extra hard to ensure that every student's photo ends up somewhere in the book. Helmke says this is probably a major reason that most students do not buy the yearbook.

Although getting some 12,000 students somewhere seems like a very big mountain to climb, the yearbook staff "will make the attempt" to include photos of everyone.

The staff also plans to target new students and seniors in hopes of generating extra sales.

The yearbooks are priced at $32.50 this fall—up from $25.00 for last year's edition. Funding for the book comes from advertising sales, actual yearbook sales to students and is also partially funded by ASUI.

The staff is facing some other challenges as well. "We have only one returning staff member (from last year)," says Helmke. The staff has also been forced to accept smaller office space as well.

Helmke is optimistic about the move, though. "The office may be substantially smaller, but it will bring the staff closer together."

Support Services there for students

Shelby Dopp
Staff Writer

Student Support Services offers help to both first-generation students (meaning that neither parent has earned a baccalaureate degree) who are financially limited or to students who have a physical or learning disability as defined by the Federal Government.

The program is an academic assistance program that is funded by the federal government through the Department of Education. The government's purpose in funding the program is to give students the help that they may need in order to graduate from the University of Idaho or some other institution.

Student Support Services is a highly individualized program that focuses on the student's needs. It helps both undergraduates and graduate students.

"We will work with students for as short of time as they want or as long as time as they want," Meredith Goodwin said. Goodwin is the Program Director for Support Services.

The staff at Support Services works with several non-traditional students and with those who are not completely prepared for college life.

According to Goodwin, "We are very successful with students who are committed to doing well in school."

The graduation rate of students who partake in Student Support Services runs between 58 and 62 percent, Goodwin said.

United Way holding family fair Sept. 10

The United Way organizations of Moscow/Latah County and Pullman would like to invite the public to their annual joint campaign kick-off rally, "The Family A-Fair."

The event will be held September 10 at the Palouse Empire Mall from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m. The price for a single activity ticket is $.25 or twelve can be purchased for $3.00.

The tickets can be used for any of the activities throughout the evening. Activities include a Wheel of Fortune, Bingo, an auction and many children's games.

Food and beverages will be available. Music will be provided by the Swing Era. Family A-Fair will represent 30 Human Service agencies in Latah and Whitman Counties. All proceeds go towards helping the United Ways of the Palouse start their 1994-95 campaign season. Their combined goal this year is $225,000.

Program offered for counselor certificate

The UI Community Enrichment Program is initiating an Alcohol/Drug Abuse Counselor Certificate program.

A free information session will provide general information about this program on September 7 from 7 to 8:30 p.m. The session will be held at the Business Technology Incubator, Highway 95 and Sweet Avenue in Moscow.

Instructors will discuss what the requirements are for receiving a certificate and what having the certificate means in terms of career development, personal growth and job opportunities. For more information about this free class contact the UI Enrichment Program at 885-6486.

Students who do not wish to purchase optional insurance must decline on their first fee billing statement.

Jon Kimberling of Newsome and Kimberling Insurance, the agency through which the University has contracted for coverage, reports that the agency was able to offer extended health insurance at the same rates as last year without any reduction in coverage.

"We're thrilled that we have been able to renew insurance at last year's rates," Kimberling said.

"The University works very hard to make sure that students are covered without making one penny on any of the insurance plans."

In fact, the catastrophic insurance plan, which offers benefits above and beyond that which extended coverage offers, has double the coverage of last year's plan. At the same time, the cost for catastrophic insurance has only increased a few dollars.

According to Newsome and Kimberling Insurance, some 1604 students and 178 dependents and spouses of students opted for the extended insurance last spring semester.

Last fall, 1763 students chose to buy extended coverage along with 153 dependents.

"The number of students purchasing extended coverage goes down in the spring because a lot of people buy for the whole year," according to Linda Kropf customer service representative at the insurance agency.

Student Health Services office hours run from 7:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday. After hours and on weekends, emergencies must be taken to Gritman Medical Center Emergency Room.

Student Support Services has the funds to aid about 200-225 students per year. However, 6,000 students do qualify to participate in the program.

Students must show academic need and also benefit from the services. Enrollment is based on a first-come, first-served basis.

Offices for Student Support Services are now based in the Continuing Education Building in Room 106. Their previous location was on the third floor of Phinney Hall.

"We are now accessible to people with mobility impairments," Goodwin said, "whereas in Phinney we were not."

The university is currently striving to meet the requirements of the Americans with Disabilities Act in several areas on campus. Student Support Services now has more space and is able to provide better, higher quality service.

Students are invited to stop by their office near the Lionel Hampton School of Music Building or call 885-6746. The staff is willing and able to answer any questions or help any possible way they can.

The students also wanted different styles of quiet hours. In the past the choices were between twenty-four hour quiet halls and the ordinary halls that had quiet hours from 11 p.m. to 7 a.m.

The new additions include certain halls extending quiet hours from 9 p.m. to 7 a.m. and the new Scholars Residence—previously known as Sweet Avenue House—for the students interested in a more academic environment.

The surveys also showed that students want more options related to food. In response the Dining Services in the Wallace Complex now offer continuous dining services. The availability of food begins early in the morning and continues to late in the evening.

The Dining Services recently introduced a new meal plan called flex-plus. Now students not only get a certain number of meals but also new flex dollars to buy food at other Dining Services locations. The “flex” dollars are used with the Vandal ID Card.

The changes at University Residence Halls not only pertain to the programs but also to the buildings themselves. Currently two full buildings are not being used to allow for renovation projects for super single rooms.

Greeks rolling down right track

The Greek system won their first big battle.

Nobody got hurt and crime was down.

In the past, the Greek system has been nailed repeatedly, often because they should have been or simply because of their reputation and high profile. This is not to say other students don't act irresponsibly, especially when it comes to alcohol, but that Greeks, as a group, are graded on a different level of performance.

In a lot of ways they get shafted.

In a lot of ways they deserve it.

Yet now, under the shadow of Regena Coghlan, somebody seems to be listening. In an effort to change opportunities for the seduction of unlawful or just plain stupid behavior, Fraternity Rush was delayed, Sorority Rush was toned down, and LollaPalousa was created.

All succeeded.

As Moscow Police Lieutenant Jake Kershnik noted on the front page, "Citations issued were down significantly from years previous when Rush ended."

Credit that to alcohol education, proactive stances by the Greek system and the community. LollaPalousa was a huge hit. The fact approximately 6,000 people showed up for it during its first year says students are more than willing to try something new.

Everyone who made LollaPalousa what it was deserves one helluva big hand. That would be David Mucci, Jan Abramson, Shea Meehan, Jim Rennie, Ray Horton, Bruce Pitman, Pam Alsterlund and Linda Davis to name a few. Mammoth events like LollaPalousa don't become a reality over night, yet they do get over with in a single night, which brings up the next point.

The entire Greek system will still be under scrutiny. They are fighting a series of mistakes and stereotypes built up over decades. They won't be able to overcome the problem in the span of a single weekend. It's impossible and it's the truth.

They have, however, gained a significant chunk of ground. The likelihood of future incidents are greatly reduced—students suddenly will be thrust into homework and more diverse methods of entertainment. Call it calculated risk.

If one or two or three Greek members drive off a road, it'll get noticed and everyone will sigh and say, "I told you so." Three off-campus students do the same and it's more tragedy, less stupidity. Such is the manner of groups and labels.

In essence, Greeks have to be better and quieter than "regular" students. They have an affiliation and people are watching. This is not an excuse, it's a fact of life. High profile never goes away.

Instead, it's a responsibility—one that is working on being met.

Lieutenant Kershnik also mentioned he was "real pleased with how things went this weekend."

And so is everyone else.

Embargo doesn't hurt Castro

The United States and Cuba agreed to talk last week. A discussion of migration policy is the only thing on the agenda. For the first time in post-World-War-II history, the US is showing contempt for immigrants from Communist countries. Our president receives constant accusations of having "no foreign policy." Cubans keep sailing for the "American Dream," and policy advisors keep reminding us that all the rich Cubans already live here anyway.

Why can't we solve the problem? We don't want to. Cubans sail for North America because conditions in Cuba have plummeted since the break-up of the Soviet Union. The US continues its economic sanctions, and wonders why Castro never dies or loses power.

While these sanctions attempt to show Castro who's boss, they give him added leverage. Since Castro realizes that the US will not lift the economic embargo until it is to the US advantage, he is using the tactics that remain to him in an effort to show us "Norte Americanos" that Cuba still floats in Caribbean sovereignty, and can fend for itself.

His last great weapon is Cubans. Due to turmoil in Haiti, emigration from the Caribbean had increased even before Cuba began sending people en masse again.

Commentary Shea Meehan

These immigrants to the US are not like the desirable, rich, Miami Cubans. Instead they are peasantry. Many of them are poor, black or mixed race. These people do not fit the description of the "welcome immigrant." They do not pass Staten Island, are not "enrolled into our democratic nation." They are the lost boat people who play the role of pawn in Caribbean-American politics.

The US holds all the cards in this game, but is letting Castro effectively play the hand. Until the US lifts the economic embargo, conditions in Cuba will continue to worsen. Castro can afford to let Cubans drift towards America, because each Cuban who reaches US shores or is saved by the Coast Guard is one less problem for Castro and one more problem for Clinton. When the crisis conditions of Haitian migration are factored in, each Cuban immigrant becomes all the more costly.

When will we learn? We cannot beat Cuba by out-spending them like we did the USSR. Castro has nothing to lose and everything to gain by sponsoring mass migration to the US. It remains as his last weapon. Unlike ballistic missiles, however, human weapons cost nothing. Not even Cuba will ever become poor enough to stop producing people. When will the US learn that it cannot compete with a nation willing to sacrifice its poor huddled masses, unless the US will do the same.

There is only one way to beat Cuba. Lift the embargo, drop our self image of ideological superiority and begin working to make Cuba livable under its current regime. Someday Castro will die, but if the US does not change its policy it probably will not mean much. Another leader will come (most likely Castro's brother) and continue to show the US that though we may hold the cards, Cuba will play the hands.

Right-wing 'christian' lunatics gaining power in America

This year, three men have been executed by gun-wielding fools because of their involvement in performing abortions. Our national police force, ye olde FBI, is on alert, searching for confirmation and information about what they believe to be a national extremist pro-life movement. Hardcore right-wing Christian groups are aligning with far right Republicans and forming coalitions to block school boards from teaching certain literature, block certain groups from civil rights and choke off anything not considered right by their narrow views.

Who is doing all this, you ask. Take a guess.

That's right. The same people who brought you the Crusades, the Spanish Inquisition, the Salem witch trials and the fundamental reason Northern Ireland is drenched in blood. Everybody give a round of applause for: the right-wing Christian movement!

Yes, that's right. The mindset that has brought more pain, suffering, death and oppression to this world than any other group in history is alive and well and trying to conquer your minds and hearts, even as we speak. Envied by the Nazis, loved by arms merchants and feared by anyone who enjoys thinking for themselves, the right-wing Jesus-shouters are working their way into mainstream culture.

If you've even been near a TV this year, you've no doubt heard that idiot preacher speak about how he and others like him are ready to trade a life for a life and kill abortionists for the sake of the unborn. It seems he skipped the part of the Bible that said, "Thou shalt not kill."

Most rational Christians agree that job belongs to God, as well as the right to judge. Abortion is a doubtful issue; murder is not.

It never fails to amaze me how many of these sanctimonious bigots who claim abortion is wrong, and who act as front-line terrorists against it, support the death penalty. Talk about hypocrisy in action. How these people avoid drowning in their own filth, I don't comprehend. No doubt smug self-righteousness helps.

What terrifies me is that right-wing Christians and Republicans have been joining forces nationally to form political groups and power bases. In Iowa and other states, legislators with purely extremist Christian agendas have been voted into office.

Great; give these goons with their Messiah complexes and $200 leather Bibles official power and the principle of church/state separation will get flushed right down the drain, along with the rest of our Constitutional rights and privileges. It's bad enough that Jesse Helms has been suffered in Congress for so long; do we really need more of his breed?

I don't get nightmares, but every time I think of these Christian guerrilla soldiers infiltrating the American power structure and warping it to their own twisted ends, my blood runs cold. In the end, the only thing you can count on from these extremist groups is that they will try to bend everyone they can to their own way of thinking. Christians and non-Christians alike should band together against these radicals, because if we don't, we could end up in a world where Big Brother would be a breath of freedom.

In my eyes, extremist Christian thought is a mental disease, pure and simple. The symptoms vary, but they all boil down to an overpowering need to make the world conform to their own views. The reasons are complex, and probably beyond the scope of this column. However you look at it, though, it's still a violation of each and every one of us.

Many people believe in Hell; many more don't. However, the faith of everyone in question will be moot if the extremists take power. Hell will be our own backyard, where conformity is forced upon us and the feral eyes of power smile and say, "This is how God wants it to be."

Jesus wept.

Timber industry exaggerates fire problem in Idaho forests

I take this opportunity to refute a massive media campaign brought to us by the timber industry. The lies being spewed by the timber industry, the U.S. Forest Service, and members of Congress are part of a well-funded, cleverly orchestrated campaign to convince the public that we can save our forests by cutting them down. The media campaign blames this summer's forest fires on environmentalists, and paints them to be catastrophic.

In actuality, only 1% of Idaho forests are on fire now, according to the Idaho Statesman. This is far from being catastrophic. Fire is a natural, necessary part of a healthy, functioning ecosystem.

Fifty years of industry sponsored fire suppression have led to increased fuel loadings, but it is not the terrible epidemic industry and the Forest Service would have you believe.

Many western species are dependent on fire for germination of their seeds. Whether standing or downed, trees that survive a fire are the nutrient resource of the new forest.

The Forest Service and the timber industry are intent on passing legislation that would allow them to bypass environmental laws such as the Clean Water Act, Endangered Species Act, National Environmental Policy Act and the National Forest Management Act in their attempt to expedite "salvage" sales of burned stands. They oxymoronically claim that they can save the forest by cutting it down. If the Forest Service were a doctor, they would cut your head off if you had a headache!

My main point is that a "salvage sale" of burned trees is an economic activity, not an ecological activity. If industry and the Forest Service would say that their greed for profits is the reason for "salvage" sales, that would be honest. Saying that "salvage" is for ecological reasons is a lie. "Salvaging" a burned stand is like mugging a burn victim.

Chinese government needs to have its organs removed

Nearly two decades ago, Larry Niven invented the term "organ-legging" in his series of Known Space novels, in reference to the practice of hijacking people for their internal organs. At that time, the idea of the government abrogating the rights of citizens for their body parts was too fantastic for consideration, even for paranoiacs.

Not any longer.

In a report released Monday, Human Rights Watch-Asia, a human rights group, claims that the Chinese authorities have harvested executed prisoners for their organs, often scheduling executions to accommodate transplants and regularly botching executions in order to keep the organs fresh a little longer.

Prisoners in China are often convicted using coercion and torture, reports HRWA, and the risk of innocent people being forced into organ donation is terrifyingly high. Not only are executions often botched on purpose, some removals are actually carried out the night before an execution is scheduled, especially kidneys.

This, in a way, should come as no surprise. China's human rights record has always been abysmal, and the fact that China received MFN status without changing policy probably removed any residual fear of American economic reprisals.

Even for a nation that spawned the Cultural Revolution and accompanying purges of the intellectual class, though, the organlegging program is barbaric. Genghis Khan would be proud. Why it is that way is a question for historians and sociologists; the fact is, the Chinese system of government has exhibited the same moral sense as Cujo.

Especially disturbing is that China is Earth's sleeping giant, with the potential to become the superpower of the next century.

Already part of the global nuclear club, they have access to resources that can turn them into a world leader, blazing a path for all to follow. Or perhaps recreate the days of the Golden Horde, looting every country in its path.

Civilization is one of those things that everyone has to cooperate on to make it fly. Without it, things fall apart; the center will not hold. Rome found that out several centuries ago, and the Visigoths weren't all that well-trained or armed. Imagine China as an industrialized nation with barbaric sensibilities, Visigoths with nuclear weapons.

Even if the metaphor is a touch strong, the continued violation of human rights on a national basis is an issue that can't be ignored. Irregardless of politics, the ongoing abuse of fundamental civil rights by China and other nations diminishes us as a race. By closing our eyes to it, we lose a bit of what we call our humanity.

How can we live with that? —B.N.

White Water Rafting!

Outdoor Program offers wet and wild trips

Dave Lewis
Outdoors Editor

The Outdoor Program is offering two cooperative river trips this season. A cooperative trip is a good way to enjoy the great outdoors with the benefit of cost sharing. Participants will also share the work on this trip.

Float trips using paddle rafts differ from those using oar frame rafts in that everyone has to help navigate the rapids.

Instead of trusting in one experienced oarsman, everyone is responsible for getting through alive.

The first trip this semester is the Salmon River Gorge Paddle Raft and Kayak Trip.

It will start down river from Pine Bar and take-out at Heller Bar. Participants will motor out from Heller Bar to Moscow by car.

Mike Beiser says, "This is a good chance to do a fun trip down the best part of Idaho's premier white water rivers. It is a cooperative trip and is open to all levels with no provision for specific instruction. This trip is just a good chance to have fun."

There is a $35 fee covering transportation and group equipment.

The white water enthusiasts going on the second and last paddle raft trip of the season will float down river from Hammer Creek near where the Salmon River leaves Highway 95 and take-out at Pine Bar.

The Salmon river below Hammer Creek is at class III. Beiser says, "The lower stretch of the Salmon has some of the finest scenery around. It is an incredible rush to ride through such beautiful terrain while experiencing such exciting white water. Even though the water is a little lower than usual now it should be a great trip."

The Hammer Creek Trip departs at 7 a.m. Sept. 10. A planning meeting is scheduled for Sept. 8 at 5 p.m. at the Outdoor Program Office. A $25 fee covers transportation and group equipment.

Salmon river photos provided by the Outdoor program show both the size and the majesty of Idaho's premier white water river. Interested students can still participate in the Hammer Creek Paddle Raft trip on September 10.

Aggressive warfare guides essential for safe trips

A good river guide is indispensable when rafting white water. When a party of friends from my home town floated the Salmon this summer, we found several reasons why.

Floating the Salmon River is fun, but dangerous. Without a competent guide there is risk of falling out of the raft, hitting your head on a rock and being swept unconscious through a rapid to your death. Without the right guide it is also possible to be drowned in your raft during a water fight. Our guide the first day was well versed in safety but we found him lacking in the finer points of water warfare.

Seconds after boarding the rafts we were surprised by a sneak attack! The attacking raft, though full of friends, was skippered by an aggressive and devious guide named Junior.

They approached from the front by back paddling ever so slightly, then when they were sure surprise was complete, drenched us with a bucket barrage of cold river water. Those buckets thrown so early in the day served as the "Fort Sumter" of our war between the rafts. It started a two day water war.

The part of the river we were on has few rapids, which was a good thing, because our attention was focused on fighting, not navigating the raft. This problem became evident some miles down river.

After their cowardly act of aggression, Junior's raft made a run for it, staying out of range. We begged our guide catch them so we could get even.

He was unresponsive until we openly threatened mutiny. It was only after receiving the ultimatum of catch those guys or be thrown from the boat that we began to gain on our unsuspecting prey.

They had apparently become complacent and let their raft drift into an eddy. We found them there as we rounded a bend. We caught them before they could escape. I only wish they would have tried to escape. It was a trap.

At first it looked as if we were going to get them good. Our best men were in the front ready to fight. Junior's nearest defenders were women. As we came within range Junior spun his raft around protecting the women and brining the men into the fight. Soon I felt water squirting out of my right ear from the force of the water hitting my left ear.

I sensed they were trying to get away so I grabbed onto their raft and held on.

This was a big mistake.

Suddenly the battle was over. As looked up and shook the water out of my eyes I was horrified to find out why.

In the heat of the moment we hadn't noticed our raft was headed straight for a large boulder and certain disaster. What was worse, Junior's boat was in no danger at all. Our guide tried in vain to pull our boat out of harm's way but to

Dry flies, slack lines & BIG black hornets

Chris Miller
Editor-in-chief

My best buddy, Chad, and I were fly fishing on our favorite cutthroat trout stream I flatly refuse to name. It was a warm July morning and the fish were rising near our dry flies, slurping up some unseen insect, just often enough to tease us into staying awhile longer.

Chad, whose countenance was always one of less patience, had worked his way downstream around a bend from me. His favorite method of fishing was to cast once and walk downstream as his fly floated along. He covered a lot territory that way.

I continued to do my own thing, watching over my shoulder as my tight loops of fly line turned smoothly along the backcast before shooting forward like a speeding super train toward the back of my head.

My fly caught in a knot in my hair (which I had refused to brush earlier in the morning to create a perfect shield for my ear) when chaos erupted.

Down around the bend I heard the screech of a wounded animal, a large wounded animal, maybe even a family of wounded animals, then water splashing so loud the first thing that came to mind was a herd of wild water buffaloes were fleeing up the river from Chad.

The fact wild buffaloes are not native to this continent didn't even cross my mind, such was the noise.

I spun around (I had been facing directly upstream as all good dry fly fishermen do) when I saw Chad running up river in knee deep water, high stepping it as if he were a duck on a hot plate. He was waving his arms wildly around his head and just as he hit a more shallow portion of water his velocity increased enough to send his fishing hat flying high above him. "BEES! BEES! BEES!" he shouted, his fly line snapping and flapping mightily in the wind behind him. "BIG, BLACK, HORNET BEES!"

"AHHHRGGG—" his voice was cut off to me as he reentered deeper water. It quickly became thigh deep, but it would have taken a greater man than me to observe any change in his speed.

The water exploded around him like two twin rooster tails talented water skiers can make and shot over both banks, leaving behind him a patch of dry ground.

As he shot past me, I saw a 12-inch cutthroat flopping behind a rock, briefly thought of tackling it, then discarded the notion as any true fisherman would. Instead, I noted its position in a triangular fashion using several large landmarks.

Chad's hat settled slowly back onto the water and floated downstream.

When the depth reached Chad's chest, he lost all momentum and simply stopped. He pulled the emergency cord on the CO2 life vest he always wears and floated slowly back down the river toward me like a spent fish.

"B-b-b-bees," was all he could say.

"Where? I don't see any bees."

"D-d-down there," he pointed to around the bend, where a nice hole obviously began.

"I didn't see a single bee. Did you get stung?"

"No," Chad replied slowly. "Damn lucky—I could've got killed."

"Well, I'm going to try that hole anyway," I said. I ignored Chad's protests and continued downstream.

It was a beautiful hole. The river cut under the bank and if I had Superman's X-ray eyes I would've seen a 17-inch cut feeding under its protection. I slowly maneuvered downstream into position, inching my way along, when I stepped on something soft and squishy and a cloud of bees, big, black hornet bees, erupted around my face and I screamed.

The squishy thing had to be the killer bees' latest victim, probably a leg of a cow.

As I turned back up river, my foot lost purchase and I fell. I was unable to protect my fly rod by sacrificing my body, as all good fishermen do, and it broke with a sickening crunch when I landed on it.

I rolled swiftly to the left, into the stream toward safety. Unable to get a proper gulp of air, I had to come up to get more.

As I did so, I saw a dead—stinky dead—fish. A hoard of black flies, common black house flies—but bigger, like maybe they were on steroids—buzzed around then landed back on the fish.

I snatched up my broken rod and ran back upstream around the bend toward Chad, waving my arms around my head.

"BEES!" I shouted. "BIG BLACK HORNET BEES! Let's go! Let's go! They made me break my best rod!"

Are you taking advantage of the Guard?

You should.

There's only one person who can help you get everything you should be getting out of the Army National Guard.

Yourself. The opportunities are waiting for you, as they always have been. How you take advantage of the benefits is up to you.

There's the Montgomery GI Bill that offers financial assistance for college. Discounts at the PX. Valuable retirement benefits that continue to grow the longer you serve. All this on top of a decent part-time salary. Think about the professional training and skills you will pick up while serving in the Guard and how they will help you. We've got more for you to experience. But just like in any organization or business, getting ahead is in your hands.

Those good feeling of Comradery and patriotism - working together with other to help your country and neighbors - have become second nature to you. Join the Guard, and take advantage of us for all we're worth.

Player, coaches profiles for 1994 season

Tom Hilbert

HEAD COACH

Combining an aggressive coaching style and an exciting brand of volleyball has made Coach Tom Hilbert one of the top young coaches in the Northwest.

After finishing his fifth season at the Idaho helm, Hilbert has led the Vandals to back-to-back appearances in the NCAA Tournament. The Vandals fell to a tough University of California-Santa Barbara squad in Santa Barbara 3-15, 8-15, 13-15 in the first round in 1992. Idaho then accomplished what no other Big Sky Conference team had ever done when it hosted and won a first round NCAA match in 1993. The Vandals defeated Appalachian State 15-5, 15-8, 15-2 and advanced to the second round, where they fell at Ohio State 15-7, 6-15, 14-16, 2-15.

Coach Hilbert spent five previous seasons as an assistant in the University of Oklahoma program. He helped guide the Sooner team to a 23-8 record in 1988, a number 12 national ranking, and a fifth place finish in the NCAA Tournament. Oklahoma also made an appearance in the NCAA in 1987 by winning the Big Eight Tournament.

A native of Norman, Oklahoma, Hilbert graduated from the University of Oklahoma in 1984 with an undergraduate degree in marketing. He earned his master's degree in sports management from Idaho in 1994. Tom and his wife, Leslie, were married in August 1988.

Leslie was an outstanding high jumper for the Oklahoma track team and she qualified for the NCAA Track and Field Championships as a freshman. She also has experienced coaching volleyball, as she has coached locally the past three seasons.

Melissa Stokes

ASSISTANT COACH

Melissa Stokes is in her third season as the assistant coach for the Vandals. Her hard work and dedication to the program has paid off as Idaho has advanced to the NCAA Tournament in each of the past two seasons.

Her responsibilities include coordinating the Vandals' weight training, scouting opponents, recruiting and performing on-court coaching duties.

Last season, under Coach Hilbert, Stokes helped guide Idaho to a 24-6 record and the school's first-ever Big Sky Conference regular season title. Prior to Idaho, she had served as a head coach on both the high school and club level. She was the varsity boys head coach at Saint Augustine High School in California during the 1990-92 seasons. Her teams were the league champions in both 1991 and 1992. She also served as the varsity girls head coach at San Pasqual High School during the 1990-92 seasons and lead the teams to consecutive league titles.

A former standout at San Diego State from 1986-89, Stokes was a three-year starter, helping lead the Aztecs to the NCAA Tournament three times during her career. She was the setter in the 1987 match against Fresno State when teammate Angelica Jackson set an NCAA record with 52 kills.

A native of El Cajon, Calif., Stokes received her degree from SD State in Physical Education in 1991, and has earned her masters degree from Idaho in Sports and Recreation Management.

Leah Smith

OUTSIDE HITTER

Leah joins Mindy Rice and Brittany Van Haverbeke as returning starters for the defending Big Sky Champions. Smith, who red-shirted in 1992, was one of the top defensive players for the Vandals in 1993.

A fiery competitor and excellent defensive player, Leah has solid court speed and a potent serve.

Leah has played in every match of her three years as an active Vandal and has recorded at least six digs in a match on 47 accessions at UI. Her career high 7 kills came against Rice on Sept. 1, 1991, while she has recorded a career best 15 digs against Eastern Washington in 1990, and against Northern Arizona this past season.

Hilbert said of Smith earlier this spring, "We haven't had her all spring but I feel confident that she will come in good shape and be able to pass the ball and hit on the outside. She will be a great leader and a fiery competitor. I would like to have her hit more balls on the left side because that is where she can have the most success."

Tzvetelina

Yanchulova

OUTSIDE HITTER

With the graduation of four outstanding players, Tzvetelina is ready to explode upon the scene in the Big Sky Conference. After an outstanding freshman campaign, she fell off a bit last season. She recorded 78 kills, 83 digs, 23 assists and a .241 hitting percentage.

The 1992 Big Sky Freshman of the Year, Tzvetelina was named a co-Big Sky player of the week during the last week of her freshman season after recording 38 kills in two matches, averaging 4.2 kills per game. Perhaps her best outing of the 1992 campaign was at Boise State, when she recorded 23 kills and 4 service aces. Her freshman of the year award marked the third straight year that Idaho earned the honor, following in the footsteps of Nancy Wicks in 1990 and Brittany

Van Haverbeke in 1991.

A tactically smart player, Lina made the most of her bench time during her freshman season by watching the opponents movements on the court. Coming on strong down the stretch, Lina finished the season leading the Vandals against Big Sky opponents with her .326 attack average.

Coach Hilbert said of Lina this spring, "She really has become much more consistent. She is a very good all-around player and has the ability to dominate games. Her communication skills have really improved and as a result she has become a much better leader and team player. I expect her to be someone who gets a lot of swings on the outside."

Lisa Stoltz

OUTSIDE HITTER

Lisa Stoltz returns for her senior season as a serving specialist and outside hitter for the Vandals.

She has earned the respect of her teammates and coaches alike for her positive attitude and solid work ethic. Playing in only 54 games last season, she recorded 18 digs and five serve aces. Used primarily to serve, Lisa's role should increase this season as she gains more court knowledge and maturity.

Stoltz served the final point for the Vandals in the 1992 Big Sky Conference Tournament championship game over Montana. Lisa managed the playing time in the tournament despite having a case of the shingles.

After her third knee surgery, Lisa returned to the Vandal squad Oct. 11 of her freshmen year, and managed only three digs and four serve aces on the year. Two surgeries have been performed on her right knee, and one on her left. In 1992 she had five kills, three aces and 18 digs.

Coach Hilbert said of Stoltz this spring, "Lisa emerged as a solid blocker. She is the best server of the team. She has been hitting outside all spring and will compete for a position next fall."

Louisa Kawulok

OUTSIDE HITTER

Louisa saw limited playing time in 1993, playing behind all-conference selections Mindy Rice and Jessica Puckett. With the graduation of Puckett, Kawulok's court-time should drastically increase.

She recorded 12 kills in just 24 attempts last season in just five games. Louisa red-shirted in 1992.

Coach Hilbert said of Kawulok this spring, "She has had a great spring. She has really made some improvements in her hitting mechanics and is hitting a lot harder now. She is also showing that she is one of the better passers on the team. She can play middle and outside. With her size, she could become a force at the net. She will be a good support player for the seniors who will carrying most of the load."

Lynne Hyland

SETTER

Lynne came in last season as a highly touted freshman. She backed-up all-conference setter Dee Porter, while adjusting to the collegiate game. This season Coach Hilbert is very confident that she will be able to go onto the court and lead the offense.

Last season she dished out 171 assists in 35 games. She also had 37 digs.

Coach Hilbert said of Hyland this spring, "Lynne has surprised me this spring. I thought she would be good, but she has shown me a lot of maturity in her decision making and she has been very accurate. Watching Dee last season, without any pressure on her, helped her learn what we want out of a setter at this level. Lynne can hold her own on blocking and defense and she has been working on her foot speed. I think that next fall she is going to be very effective in running our offense."

Mindy Rice

OUTSIDE HITTER

The 1993 Big Sky Conference Tournament Most Valuable Player, Rice finished second on the team last season with 419 kills and 3.9 kills per game. She hit .302 for the season and had a season-high 30 kills against Fresno State in the Safeco Classic. The Grandview, Idaho native recorded 10-or-more kills in 26 of 30 matches last season. She really came into her own while playing for the 1993 conference champions. Her career .293 hitting percentage is currently the best in Idaho history.

In her sophomore year she came strong in the late season to average 1.4 kills per game, Mindy played in only 37 games on the season. But made the most of her time hitting .222 on the year. Her most impressive match of the year came at Lewis Clark State when she led all hitters at the net with 15 kills over the three games, tying a career high for the junior.

As a freshman, she also managed 15 kills against Weber State, adding 3 blocks. During that freshman year, Mindy played in 40 games, reaching double figure kills twice.

Coach Hilbert said of Rice this spring, "She just continues to get better and better. She is one of the best athletes that we have ever had here. She can hit any position. Her blocking and ball-handling skills are improving daily. I expect her to be a major weapon next year."

New players bring fresh spirit to Vandal squad

Jeri Hymas

MIDDLE BLOCKER

Jeri joins the volleyball team after spending her first two seasons as a member of the Vandal women's basketball team.

The 6-3 sophomore will play middle blocker for Coach Hilbert's squad.

She started 20 of the 25 games for the hoop team and blocked a conference-leading 45 shots.

In high school she was an all-conference and honorable mention all-state volleyball player.

Coach Hilbert said of Hymas, "She is really raw, but has a lot of physical talent and loves to play. We have to do some refining on some of her skills, but when we do she will be a very good player. She can hit the ball high and hard and has a very good mobility for as tall as she is. She is behind a little bit in her skill development but she is a fast learner."

Jessica Moore

MIDDLE BLOCKER

Jessica Moore is a 6-0 middle blocker from Belgrade, Mont. She was named first team all-state in both volleyball and basketball, while finishing sixth in state in the long jump.

She was also conference MVP in both basketball and volleyball.

Coach Hilbert said of Moore earlier this summer, "She is a great athlete and also loves the game of volleyball. She was the most dominate player in the state of Montana. She is someone who we look to be a big-time middle blocker for us in the future. She is 6-1 and has jumping ability and a powerful arm. She needs some training, so, depending on how quickly she picks up volleyball at this level she could be playing for us real soon."

Kyle Leonard

MIDDLE BLOCKER

Kyle red-shirted for the Vandals last season. She is a very powerful player that will challenge for playing time in the spot that is open in the middle with the graduation of two-time conference MVP Nancy Wicks.

Coach Hilbert said of Leonard earlier this summer, "She has shown a lot of improvement this spring. She has a chance to compete for a middle blocking position. She has been working hard on her arm swing. If she gets some consistency she will be an effective middle blocker in this league."

Robin Dalton

OUTSIDE HITTER

Robin is a transfer from the University of Tulsa, where she played for former Vandal assistant coach Dawn Colston.

She played in 32-of-33 matches for the Golden Hurricanes last season. She had 61 kills, 92 digs and 20 blocks in 82 games.

Coach Hilbert said of Dalton this spring, "She is a good defensive player and a good ball-handler. She will back-up our outside hitter. She started a lot of games at Tulsa last season and had 14 kills against Wichita State late in the season. She is athletic and a very good volleyball player."

Sarah Toomey

DEFENSIVE SPECIALIST

Toomey, a 5-4 defensive specialist, played one season at the University of Connecticut before transferring to Grossmont Community College last season. At Connecticut, she was named Big East Conference Rookie of the Year as she led the conference and the NCAA Division I in digs per game with 5.40.

Coach Hilbert said of Toomey earlier this summer, "She is a very fast, very athletic player who makes up her lack of size with speed and athleticism. She'll see time as defensive specialist and as back-up setter. Her personality is very outgoing and she will have no problem fitting in with our team on and off the court."

Jemena Yocom

MIDDLE BLOCKER

Jemena Yocom, from Ellensburg, Wash., at 5-11 is another very athletic player. She led her team to a second place finish in the state tournament.

Coach Hilbert said of Yocom this summer, "She is really fast. She jumps well. We will train her as a middle blocker. Because of her good club experience, I expect her to get on the court for us very soon."

Dumb grouse still challenge

Upland game bird season opens September 1.

Chris Miller
Editor In Chief

Hunting grouse is oxymoronic. The grouse is easily the least intelligent upland game bird in the state, but at the same time one of the toughest birds to get—legally, that is.

While the bird, usually a Ruffed Grouse in this area of the country, is often and easily run down by pickup trucks on rural, wooded roads, it still offers the hunter a challenge. Unlike the pheasant, which is often blasted out of the air in open country, the grouse has hundreds of shields to hide behind—usually a very thick tree.

Most grouse are taken more by chance than anything else. They are shot when an unsuccessful big game hunter happens to trip over one or spends some time driving around back roads while scouting for an upcoming deer and elk season.

The fact it's one of the tastiest critters in the forest is just a bonus.

The Idaho Department of Fish and Game has no survey procedure for monitoring grouse populations, but according to Regional Wildlife Biologist George Pauley, other upland game surveys are good indicators of population. This year appears to be a solid year for all upland game birds.

"Last year was pretty much below average with the wet conditions," Pauley said. "This year will be better—about average."

Grouse live in wooded areas and can be found alone or in coveys nearing a dozen strong.

"It's pretty dry out there and grouse are going to be hanging out close to water or shady spots under timbered canopy," Pauley said. "Hunters should concentrate there."

For the newcomer, the most obvious place to hunt is on Secret Saddle and NoTellUm Ridge. The best way to find a true grouse hunting spot is head for timber. Bovill, Clarkia or Elk River are all suitably large, solid bets. Find a Forest Service road off the highway and pull over.

If it's has a gate—likely that it does—all the better.

"I'd like to caution hunters it is illegal to hunt and shoot from a road," Pauley said. "A lot of grouse get shot on the road on the way to elk camp and hunters should get off the road—it's for safety reasons."

The above is what makes grouse hunting difficult. You have to walk, and no dog is going to flush grouse loose for you. The best way is walk down a game trail 10-20 feet—don't even attempt to walk quietly when the woods are so dry—then stop and listen for a few seconds.

When you hear one, you'll be surprised how much noise the birds make walking over the ground, pecking at food and rustling leaves.

From this point, the hunt really starts. Under the darkness of early morning or dusk, spotting an active grouse can be an exercise in patience. More often than not, you were moving too fast and scared the grouse into flight.

A grouse flying through timber is an extremely tough target to hit, and I've blasted more tree trunks than I'd care to admit.

No, the best way is to take them on the ground—something a die-hard pheasant hunter would cringe at—because grouse hunting is a different game and wounded birds are bad luck.

When grouse start to figure out danger is near, they'll start to bob their heads up and down, which is your cue to shoot. Be sure to aim for the head or you'll be picking BB's out of the breast.

The really neat thing about grouse, is you can make hunting them as challenging as you want. Grouse are the only game bird you can hunt with a slingshot, rifle, pistol, boomerang or rocks, though .410 gauge through 12 gauge shotguns are typical weapons. Grouse also can be hunted without an upland game permit, which is required for pheasants, quail and chukar.

One last law grouse hunters should remember is that "one fully-feathered wing or the head must remain on any dressed upland game bird."

This is needed for identification of species and sex while birds are being transported from the hunting area to the home.

For greater detail on bag limits, species and general regulations for all small game, pick up a copy of 1994-1995 regulations at any sporting goods store.

UI Research Center having photo contest

The UI Research Center is sponsoring a wilderness photo competition to commemorate the 30th anniversary of the Wilderness Act and 25th anniversary of the UI Wilderness Research Center.

Photographs that exemplify the wilderness resource, the wilderness experience, people interacting with wilderness or any combination thereof are eligible to win. Submit an 8x10 inch or larger print mounted on form core board to Lee Cantrell at Room 102, UI Media Center. Photos must be turned in by 5:00 p.m. Sept. 12

Denise Ortiz says a cash prize of between $35 and $50 will be awarded. The judging will take place at the Administration Building Auditorium during the rededication of the UI Wilderness Research Center Sept. 15.

Photos will also be displayed for two weeks at the Student Union following Wilderness Week. No entry fee will be required.

The Wilderness Writing Competition also sponsored by the UI Wilderness Research Center is open to all, students faculty and members of the community. The theme is wilderness issues or nature.

The contest has two categories, poetry and essay writing. The poetry entries must be no more than two typed double spaced pages of original unpublished poetry. There is no entry fee, however there is a limit of three entries per person.

The essay writing entries must be no more than 500 words of original unpublished writing. There is no entry fee. Essays should include the author's name, address and phone number. Essay writers are limited to two entries. Essays will not be returned.

The deadline for both competitions is 5 p.m. Sept. 12. Entries may be turned in at the Forestry Publishing Dept. For more information call Denise Ortiz at 885-6673, or Ron McFarland at 885-6937.

Kayaking Clinic Wednesday

Students can learn the basic skill of kayaking in the Swim Center Pool.

This semester's first session of Introduction to Kayaking is next week.

This clinic is designed to give participants more time with an instructor and provide them with a boat for an evening.

Skills taught during the clinic will include: boat fitting, wet exit, paddle movements and Eskimo rolls.

Sign-up started Aug. 31. The clinic begins at 7 p.m. Sept. 7. The cost is $15 covering equipment, instruction and pool fee.

no avail. With every second the rock loomed larger until we were upon it. For a long instant we slid down the back side landing sideways in the foam. Only luck kept us from swimming. Holding on to the other raft was my second biggest mistake of the trip. Unfortunately, I would soon make a bigger one.

In the next encounter with Junior and his cohorts I threw a large bucket full of water at them. Too bad I threw the bucket with it. I will never forget the look of victory on Tom's face as he yelled, "I guess Dave is giving up, he threw me his weapon."

I immediately dove after my bucket, but Tom didn't want to let go of it. Even though he wouldn't let me have the bucket back he did remember that we went to school together because he kept handing me my hat as I floundered in the water trying to board their raft.

In the morning we met Chuck, our new guide. We also got my bucket back, thus bringing our boat up to full fighting strength.

In addition to that, my raft mates started speaking to me without using negative sobriquets. I was almost happy, but I still had to redeem myself in battle.

During the next squirt skirmish I was further disheartened when I threw away yet another bucket. The malady must have been catching however, because Junior's raft immediately threw one at us and then lost another.

The bucket they inadvertently threw at us was hotly contested in the water between the boats and since it was two of us against one of them, we took their bucket. However, I am sorry we tried to drown Wendell.

I did retrieve his hat though. After the "lost" bucket came to the surface only a few feet from our raft, we had all of the buckets. We ruled the river from then on.

The change in our luck was not fortuitous; it was the fault of the new guide, Chuck Hendricks. Chuck is the "David G. Farragut of the Salmon River." To say Hendricks is aggressive is an understatement.

With the first salvo fired, he boarded Junior's raft and tried to steal their buckets. He didn't get a bucket, but he served notice that we were not to be trifled with that day. A good river guide is important when floating the Salmon river.

Climbing Clinic

The UI Outdoor Program will present a clinic titled an Introduction to Rock Climbing. There is no need to leave campus to learn beginning rock climbing. At the Artificial climbing wall experienced rock climbers teach basic skill in roped climbing, knots, rope handling, belaying signals and movement over rock. Participants in this clinic will satisfy the requirement to use the climbing facility. The cost of $10 covers instruction and use of the wall.

IRT season best turnout ever

The Idaho Repertory Theatre wrapped up its 1994 season with a number of success stories. According to IRT Producer Bruce Brockman in a press release, the UI supported summer theatre had its strongest season in five years.

Final attendance figures show a 25 percent increase in attendance this year and a 31 percent increase in season ticket sales. The IRT also offered a children's season ticket for the first time.

Financial support also was up significantly. Brockman reports a 15 percent increase in corporate and business sponsorship and a 6.5 percent increase in individual contributions. In the past year, the IRT Endowment Fund has grown by 20 percent to $31,000.

That will allow the summer theatre to look at several new programs for next year. IRT hopes to sponsor a high school actors camp at the UI next summer.

The Argonaut is now taking applications for the position of Lifestyles Editor. Applications may be picked up on the 3rd floor in the Student Union at the Student Media desk.

New enrichment fall offerings

Jill Pittmann
Staff Writer

"The best thing about the program is that it offers students and non students alike a chance to learn in a non threatening atmosphere," Peggy Waterman, an employee of the Community Enrichment Program, said.

The Enrichment Program was started over 20 years ago, Program Director Sid Eder said. The program offers over 100 classes for people of all ages including courses on Drug and Alcohol Abuse Counseling, Arts and Crafts, Career Development, Computers, Food and Gardening, Health and Fitness, Recreation, Self Improvement, Swimming and Travel.

The Drug and Alcohol Counseling classes offer professional development opportunities for people in the helping professions.

"Although some of our courses will be of great interest to students, others will not be," commented Eder. "For someone going into social work, they will be working with addicted people and through our courses they can receive classes that will be a great asset to them and which they cannot receive through the regular UI curriculum."

The Arts and Crafts program teaches everything from weaving and whittling to the techniques of tatting. With over three different types of basket weaving classes offered, plus seven other craft classes, there is bound to be a course made just for every creative mind in the community.

One of the most popular parts of the program are the computer courses. Whether you have never touched a computer or are pronounced by your friends as the local computer whiz, these classes will definitely teach you something you might not know.

That something, according to computer instructor Kit Wilchek, can be as simple as remembering to have fun while you are working with the computers.

"It's great to see people of all ages come in and take my classes. It's an excellent experience for families or groups of friends as they can support each other throughout the course and if and when someone gets frustrated with the computer, they can just turn it off for awhile," Wilchek said.

"The knowledge gained in the computer courses is essential in today's marketplace and is an excellent addition to any major."

Two other important areas of the program are the classes on Self Improvement and Language. One of the courses offered in the Self Improvement section is a class on Law for Everyday Life. Here you can learn about legal matters that affect you and your family and friends.

Many people run into problems with landlords (and landlords with tenants) and this class can teach people how to deal with those problems quickly and legally.

There are also classes on traveling which offer professionally guided trips to fascinating locations throughout Idaho.

The tours allow participants to experience new sights at a lower cost unknown to the average tourist.

For those interested in swimming, sign up for the classes which are held at the UI Swim Center. In addition to regular swimming, there is Water Aerobics, Scuba Diving, Aqua Fitness and much more.

Karen Tripepi, a landscape horticultural instructor for the program, said the best thing about the program is "people who wind up in my classes are actually there because they want to be and they are interested in the material of the course. It keeps me on my toes as an instructor knowing that people

Dulcinea
Toad the Wet Sprocket

Fans of Toad the Wet Sprocket's 1991 album Fear may be a bit surprised at the harder edge to Dulcinea, but that shouldn't turn them away. Gone are the mandolins and violins that made songs like "Walk on the Ocean" stand out. This time around, the band sticks to the guitars, and the result are songs that stand on their own, equal parts raw energy and articulated thought.

Glen Phillips' knack for storytelling continues to produce memorable lyrics, usually tantalizing bits of people in all stages of decay. Beginning with swaggering Paul in "Fly From Heaven" and ending with a man reduced to crying for his mother when faced with the afterlife in "Resurrection Song," we are introduced to a neighborhood of real people, but in Toad the Wet Sprocket's hands, their problems are poetic.

Phillips' voice is in fine form, coloring in the protagonists that extra inch. It doesn't take that much, really, but it seems to be somewhere too many vocalists are afraid to go.

The production is a lot more aggressive on this album, sonically taking up more space than Fear did.

The band isn't afraid to make some noise, punctuating the soaring chorus of "Fly From Heaven" with a burst of distortion or chugging the harmonics into overdrive on "Inside."

That's not to say the band isn't at home unplugged - far to the contrary.

The country-tinged "Nanci" is a bouncy tale, one of the happier moments on the album, and the scenic sparseness of "Windmills" is a needed reminder that "anyway the wind blows/ it's all worth waiting for."

While it may be tougher and louder, Dulcinea is not a digression, but a maturity.

And since Toad the Wet Sprocket already had plenty of stories to tell, this album is doubly impressive.

Come
Prince (1958-1993)

Let's face it: sex sells. Over the years we've heard such eloquent and subtle numbers as "Bump and Grind" by R. Kelley, "Freak Me" (thankfully I forgot that group's name), and recently "I'll Make Love to You" by the previously original Boyz to Men. Prince's new album is the next logical step: funkier music, even less subtlety.

Rumor has it Prince changed his name to that unpronounceable symbol thing in 1993 to be able to do projects outside of Prince's contract, but this album is compiled from unreleased old material in order to fulfill that contract.

Perhaps that explains the banality of the whole thing. Sure, the wailing horn section on "Come" is vintage Prince, as are his gymnastic vocals, but they can't save songs like "Loose!"

Attempting to be a hard-edged dance jam session, it comes off like sample-loop minimalism.

Equally annoying is "Solo," so drowned in reverb soup it's no wonder it didn't make an album cut. In fact none of the grooves on Come quite make moving to the music involuntary.

Prince albums have always been half sex and half spirituality, one of his talents being to seamlessly combine the two.

On this album, there is nothing spiritual about the sex.

It's almost comical in places, and you have to wonder how he can take himself so seriously. The whole "Orgasm" bit (don't think for a minute it's an actual song) is clearly a ploy to attract the pubescent consumer base, for there is no artistic reason for it. Ditto with the raunchy background noises behind the sax solo in "Come."

There are bright spots though: "Space" is a jaunty number, demonstrating again Prince's ability to construct perfect catchy pop songs, and "Dark" puts the horns to good use for a genuinely soulful breakup song.

For the most part, these perverted sex songs could have stayed on Prince's shelf and noone would have missed them.

Lace heritage displays

Beverly Penney
Staff Writer

The McConnell Mansion is currently showcasing the 1800's Horse Era and Lace Heritage from this area. Ronna Robertson and Winnie Robinson have contributed their families' lace for display.

Kathleen Warnick has displayed her appaloosa motifs done in Tenerife and Tatting. The Bobbin and Battenberg lace methods are also intricate designs in the showcase.

In the Latah County Historical Society's press release on The Horse Era: Work and Recreation with Horses, states, "You can also identify the parts of a nearly complete work harness which once sold for only $77; the price now would be in the thousands of dollars."

Early use for horses were used for many reasons.

The early settlers used horses to travel in staking their land claims in the northwest. Charles Munson has two books, Cayuse Trails, and Westward Paradise describing his travels from Dodge City, Kansas to the Palouse region.

There is a story about Nat Brown's ordeal in staking his 20,000 acre claim with mostly white pine on it in the Quartz Creek area. It describes how he out-maneuvered McCloud who wanted the same area. Read the story in the print-out on the shelf.

Later, ranchers and farmers used horses in building their log homes, fueling the sheds, and fencing their lands. In the 1800's, land claims resulted in more development operations to meet the demands of the people.

The Potlatch Timber operations, harvesting cattle, and horse breeding became the mainstay to these northwest settlers.

The "Draft Horse" was the workhorse valued by the settlers in this region. The horse is a cross-breed from the Percheron, Clydesdale and quarter horse.

The original Belgian breed came from Flanders. In England this remarkable breed was bred with wide withers, big hooves and deep chest to support the weight of the armor for jousting knights.

Photos display the winter and summer seasonal work with the horses pulling the logs over frozen and dry ground. The logs eventually reached the Potlatch Timber Company either by the rivers or railways.

The company had kept hundreds of horses for its operations. The local ranchers and farmers supplied the stables with hay and feed.

The grain growers in this area used numerous mules to pull their combines over the rolling hills. Late summer work was cutting, raking hay, harrowing and disking. The photographs depict the arduous labor in this era.

The NezPerce peoples are included in the display. The first horses were introduced by the Spanish and Portuguese.

The NezPerce are known for breeding the Appaloosas. Camping, root digging and berrying took less time, once the horses became a part of tribal life. Years later, the appaloosa were used in parades, shows and recreation.

The children will be able to touch the bridles, harnesses, and other items, like horseshoes, grooming brushes, combs, currys, hoof picks, liniment, and conditioners for manes and tails.

The feed bin has several brands along with an oat bag beside it. In future years the children will appreciate this craftsmanship in the leather and wood trades in making carriages, coaches, and wagons for mail delivery, handy work, and sleds for recreation.

WSU quintet

The Solstice Wind Quintet opens its fall season with an August 30 program on the Washington State University campus. The 8 p.m. program, set for Kimbrough Concert Hall, is open to the public without charge.

WSU senior horn major Chris Schindler will join the faculty quintet for a performance of the Sextet, Op. 271 by Carl Reinecke.

Two arrangements by Logan will be featured. The concert opens with his recent arrangement of the "Gigue" Fugue by J.S. Bach.

The first half of the concert will conclude with Logan's arrangement of the "Graceful Ghost Rag" by William Bolcum. Also on the program will be WSU faculty member Gregory Yasinsky's "Wooden Miniatures for Wind Quintet".

Extra dollars go to France

If, after buying books and paying UI Tuition and Fees, you have already found yourself a little low on cash, consider spending your Saturday nights in the Borah Theater at the SUB.

UI has been chosen as one of the sixteen colleges across the United States to be a part of the Festivals of French Films. The project was designed to promote awareness of the exceptional entertainment found in French Films.

"The University is lucky to have been chosen as one of the participants in this projects," commented Sara Crockett.

The films are extremely popular and full of great acting." Although UI did not participate in the project last semester, it is hoped that, if properly promoted, the Festival will be an important and exciting part of the entertainment offered on campus.

One of the goals of the Festival is to introduce students to the fun and excitement of films from the French culture. "Our story telling point of view is different and we are confident that the more young audiences enjoy our features the more they will want to see," said Nicole Jouve in an Interama Inc. Press Release. Jouve founded Interama Inc. in 1981. Sponsors are doing everything possible to make these festivals a success by providing free on campus advertising and materials to build the size of student audiences.

Last year the Festival had an audience of about 15,000 students. Currently, the promotion of the project has reached over 380,000 students according to the Interama Inc. Press Release.

By focusing on how unique of a production this festival truly is, organizers hope students will become highly interested and these numbers will continue to increase.

Last year the post Festival student survey indicated that 65 percent of the students like French Films because they have a completely different style and culture base, 95 percent said they preferred the subtitled to dubbing and 90 percent will attend the next festival. "The films will begin on September 10 and run on alternating Saturdays until Nov. 5 and are brought to campus by ASUI Productions," stated Crockett.

The Festival will include the following films: Nikita (The Specialist), Cyrano De Bergerac, Madam Bovary, Three Men and A Cradle and Too Beautiful For You. One of these films will be shown at 7:30 and again at 9:30 on the dates listed above. The cost of the films are $1 for UI Undergraduates and $2 for General Admission.

actually come from Clarkston and Potlatch to take these classes."

The program offers really practical topics. "In the classes I have taken I have found enthusiastic instructors. It's also a great program because the material taught can be immediately applied," Tripepi said.

Tripepi also noted in the classes she has taught that students have been willing to share knowledge and information with each other and are eager to hear what everyone has to say. "It's an energetic, dynamic program for the community."

"In short we cannot say UI students should be interested in our program, but many of them may be and many of our courses would be beneficial to all students who need these classes not offered through regular UI core curriculum," Eder said.

The Program office is located at Blake and Nez Perce just across from the Administration Tennis Courts and is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

You can register for classes by phone, 885-6486, by mail, or at the Enrichment Program Office. The average cost of classes is approximately $12 to $14, but prices vary due to equipment and materials needed for some specific courses.

Time off the field with Sherriden May

Amy Ridenour
Staff Writer

Last January in one of my classes, as the professor was giving roll call, I heard the name "Sherriden May," and I rolled my eyes. I rolled my eyes not because I knew a whole lot about him, but because I had heard his name in connection with football — that meant I didn't want him in my class (mainly because of nasty athlete stereotypes).

Then, because of some intangible force in this world, I found myself in a small group situation with May and discovered what a truly wonderful person he is.

I decided I wanted to interview him so that people could catch a glimpse of May outside of football. I won't tell you about his incredible touchdown record and I won't bore you with any statistics because those are found in the Sports section. My goal is simply to show a side of May that a lot of people might not get to see.

May realizes being "easy to get along with and very good with people" are often thought of as unusual or uncommon ways to describe himself. I know this to be true, and I also know that this is not the response some people would expect from a football phenomenon like May. Sherriden is a humble man who recognizes his achievements and but does not dwell on them. "I'm not really a proud person," said May. Sherriden realizes that others consider his greatest achievements to be football related, but May sees it quite differently. "(My football talent) is an opportunity given to me by God," said May. Sherriden's

I'm just a person just like everybody else. Judge me as a person.
—Sherriden May

happiest moment was when he received his full ride scholarship to UI, because he then knew his parents wouldn't have to finance his college education.

It is important to realize that Sherriden May is human just like the rest of us. He doesn't want to be given any special treatment because of his athletic ability. "I'm just a person just like everybody else. Judge me as a person," May says. He said that people should judge him by knowing him, not by what they've heard about him or what he's done. In case it has not become apparent, Sherriden is one of the most modest individuals I know. He finds it very hard to say good things about himself, not because he is lacking in self-esteem, but because he sees himself as an ordinary person.

The most influential adult in Sherriden's life has been his high school football coach. He coached with a positive approach and told Sherriden that he believed in him and believed that he would be a success in football. Not many coaches are that willing to tell their athletes that they believe they will be successful.

As an athlete, Sherriden faces many stereotypes. I asked him to name one stereotype people might have about him. He said that people look at athletes often times and immediately think they are dumb jocks and always drinking. His advice to combat stereotypes is for people to know the facts before they judge someone. Sherriden certainly does not fit the "typical football player" stereotype at all. May carries above a 3.0 grade point average — after a lot of hard work. Sherriden said he hoped to carry around 15-16 credits this term, during football season, because he would study more with a heavier load.

Besides playing football, one of May's hobbies is electronics. I asked Sherriden about his future plans, and he replied that he would like to play in the NFL. After his sure-to-be-successful NFL career, Sherriden would eventually like to go into advertising and possibly open up his own advertising agency.

Sherriden has taught me a few things since I've known him and one of them is that modesty is a virtue. May also taught me that hard work is the key to success. I learned that I should get to know a person before making judgments regarding their character, and, as a result, I solemnly swear never to roll my eyes during roll call again.

Bart Stageberg

Idaho football fans are well aware of the running skills of number 32. However, few people know Sherriden May is an advertising major interested in someday owning an advertising agency. That is, of course, after a successful career in the NFL.

Johnson serves as sports liaison

Matt Shifley
Staff Writer

As Vandal football and volleyball players prepare for action this weekend, the athletic department's new sports information director is ready also.

Sean Johnson, a 1983 graduate from the University of Missouri, took over this past July as a sports information director for the Vandals.

Idaho is Johnson's fifth school in 11 years. He arrived from Angelo State University in San Angelo, Tex. He worked there for two & half years before coming to Moscow.

In describing what his job entails, Johnson said he is a public relations director for the athletic department — a liaison between the press, the coaching staff, and Idaho's athletes.

New UI Sports Information Director Sean Johnson chats happily on the phone. He came from St. Angelo State in Texas. He replaces Rance Pugmire.

"Basically, what we do is handle all the publicity, we put all the programs together, and media guides for media coverage and recruiting," said Johnson. "We keep all the stats on all the games, we are the media contact. If people want to interview our players, they call us and we set it up."

Johnson described his profession as being a jack-of-all-trades.

"We do a lot of different things. You have to know how to do publications, you need to know how to write press releases, you need to know how to get your story ideas out to the media, which includes print, radio, and television."

Johnson said to some people it may not sound like much, but he says it is a lot because Idaho has a pretty big athletic program.

Another factor which makes Johnson's job unique is that not all of the media is right here in Moscow. He says they deal a lot with Spokane, Boise, and Lewiston, so they log some hours over the phone.

In dealing with the press this year, Johnson said quite a lot of attention has fallen on Eric Hisaw because the last two Vandal quarterbacks are in the NFL and Hisaw has not had a chance to prove himself yet to the media. Johnson described the situation as weird because Sherriden May could break the NCAA Division 1-AA record for most touchdowns in a career, and he is almost taken for granted by everyone.

However, once the season starts Johnson believes things will change because in the pre-season no one knows what is going to happen.

Since he has been here only since the middle of July, Johnson says it is too early to say if he will do things differently from the previous sports information directors.

"Right now, it is not necessarily catching up, but jumping in and maintaining because there is no real time to change a whole lot.

This year we are gonna kind of see how things go, and see how we've done things in the past and incorporate some of my ideas. Obviously, things have gone pretty well here because we have had the Division 1-AA Player of the Year twice in the past few years."

Johnson also believes nothing but positive changes will occur if Idaho moves from the Big Sky to the Big West. He feels it will really open up the California media market, which will help with recruiting and publicity.

With a new year of high expectations for Vandal athletics, Johnson may have his phone ringing off the hook.

p.m. in the inaugural game of 1994.

"As I look at those guys (SU), they're very good," said Vandal head coach John L. Smith. "The biggest thing we've got to do is go out and play defense."

This shouldn't be a weighty problem for Idaho which boasts one of the best linebacking corps and defensive linemen in Division 1-AA football.

They are so deep that Avery Slaughter, an honorable mention Big Sky selection last season, is now the backup to Stanford transfer Tommy Knecht.

Ryan Phillips, Miregi Huma, Jason Shelt and Duke Garrett are some of the better defensive players.

Idaho, ranked 10th in the nation, shouldn't be too shabby-offensively, either.

"Consistency and execution are the two keys for us offensively," Smith said.

The Vandals have senior Sherriden-May in the backfield, who only needs 12 touchdowns to become the all-time leading scorer in 1-AA history. He also needs just 652 yards to become the all-time leading rusher at Idaho.

Additionally, a new face will be starting at quarterback for the first time, junior Eric Hisaw.

Hisaw has thrown only 27 passes in his collegiate career, thanks to former Vandal star and New Orleans Saints quarterback Doug Nussmeier. Hisaw, however has been doing well in practice according to Smith.

Hisaw's backup, freshman Brian Brennan has also been impressive.

Would Smith hesitate to put the freshman in the game if Hisaw falters?

"No, not at all. If he's not getting it done, then you're gonna take the other guy and give him a chance."

Although Hisaw may not be quite as superb as his predecessor Nussmeier, Smith said, "We're not going to turn more conservative. We're not going to run a ton more — we're going to do both."

Smith noted that Southern Utah's offense is "very explosive," and doesn't want to let them control the ball.

The Thunderbird run an option offense — an offense that has historically given the Vandal defense fits.

Junior quarterback Rick Robins will lead the Thunderbird offense. He has started every game for the past two seasons.

He is already SU's second all-time leading passer with 3,507 yards, which would be a good season for an Idaho quarterback.

SU also boasts a pair of speedy senior receivers in Melvin Lowe, the team leader in receptions last year, and Shawn Jones, the team leader in receiving yards.

"We're ready to play a game," Smith said. "How ready we are, I don't know. I think we've got a long ways to go here before we become a real good football team."

Safeco Classic begins tonight

Blas Telleria
Staff Writer

Coming off back-to-back Big Sky Championships, the Vandal volleyball team will open their 1994 season hosting the annual Safeco Classic tournament today and tomorrow in Memorial Gym.

Joining the Vandals will be the three-time defending Sunbelt Champions Arkansas State, Portland University, and the Big Eight's Oklahoma.

Last year the Vandals won the Safeco Classic defeating Portland, Gonzaga, and Fresno State. However, that was with Big Sky MVP Nancy Wicks, and First Team All-Conference team members Jessica Puckett and Dee Porter.

Vandal Head Coach Tom Hilbert said, "This year's team is going to have young players who are going to improve with every match, but we still have strong senior leadership." The Vandals are returning three starters who are all seniors, Mindy Rice, Leah Smith, and Brittany Van Haverbeke.

Idaho's first match of the Safeco Classic is against Arkansas State today at 7:30 p.m.. Despite the fact that Arkansas State is the three-time defending Sunbelt Champions, they are also returning all of their players.

"Arkansas State is a tough team to play, they don't make mistakes," Hilbert said.

Saturday at 12:00 p.m. the Vandals take on Portland

University. The Vandals beat Portland last year in the Safeco Classic in straight sets. However, Portland has a new coach at the helm this year along with the return of All-Conference player Julie Knight. Because of this Hilbert says, "We don't know what to expect from Portland".

Later in the day at 7:30 p.m., Oklahoma challenges Idaho. There is one word that describes the Oklahoma volleyball team — big. They have players ranging from 6'0" to 6'4", which puts them as one of the tallest teams in the NCAA. Oklahoma has lost only one starter from the previous season and are returning their star player Gretchen Anderson, who was All-Conference in the Big Eight.

Hilbert added, "Oklahoma is a very good young team. We hope to capitalize on them being young and making young mistakes."

The 1994 Safeco Classic Volleyball Tournament is becoming more exciting and competitive with the success of the Vandals and their higher level of competition.

Hilbert said, "Oklahoma is one of the best teams that they have played at home in five years."

The Safeco Classic is just one of three pre-conference tournaments. The Vandal volleyball team travels to Madison, Wisconsin for the Wisconsin Tournament and then to San Luis Obispo, California for the Cal Poly SLO tournament.

The Vandals success could be contributed to the increasing popularity of Idaho volleyball and the fans that pack into Memorial Gym. Last year, Memorial Gym averaged 707 people per home match.

Coach Hilbert would like to see that number increase. "Memorial Gym is one of the hardest places for other teams to play in, I would like to see that tradition continue. This year's team has the potential of the previous two, so Vandal volleyball is going to be exciting to watch this year."
