Chenoweth wants local education

Helen Chenoweth held an open forum before an assembly of students, faculty and concerned citizens at the Student Union Wednesday.

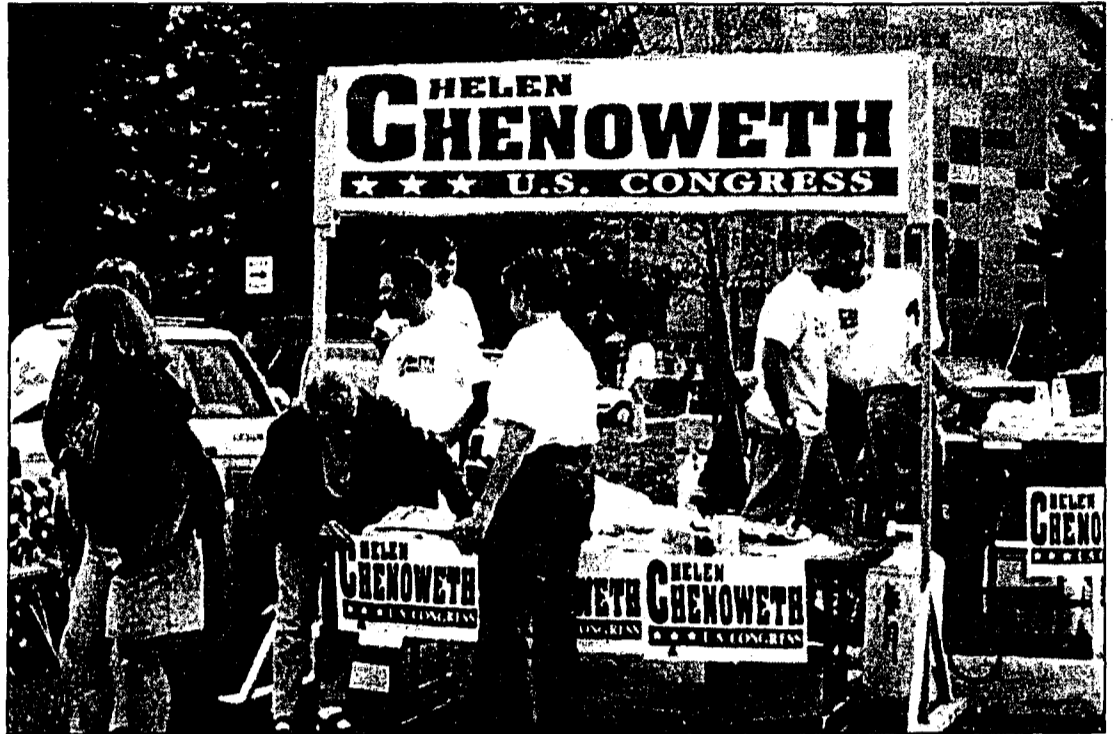

While other topics were discussed, the bulk of the 45-minute forum was dedicated to clarifying her political stance on education, her intent to eliminate the U.S. Department of Education and her stance on Proposition One. In her Sept. 13 interview with the Argonaut, Chenoweth suggested the federal Department of Education be eliminated. Her opponent—Representative Larry LaRocco—has questioned Chenoweth's suggestion.

Chenoweth, when asked about her position on the future role of the Department of Education, said, "I have advocated we do what Ronald Reagan advocated, that we do away with the U.S. Department of Education and put (the money saved) into block grants for the states, and we would have far more money for the states. We can provide sounder programs when we are keeping those dollars on the local level rather than sending it back to Washington to have ninety cents out of every dollar consumed (by bureaucracy). I would rather have the whole dollar here."

Chenoweth said a specific program would be better implemented on the state level as opposed to the federal level because the state or local level generally results in more efficiency since it's "closer to home."

Larry LaRocco, the incumbent Democrat for Idaho's 1st Congressional District, put together a list of federal education programs that would disappear if the Department of Education was eliminated. LaRocco's staff calculated that Idaho's share of the federal outlay is approximately $100 million. This money is used to fund programs such as special education, anti-drug and crime prevention programs and financial aid for college students.

According to a fact sheet prepared by the LaRocco's campaign staff, "Idaho colleges and universities receive over $30 million from the USDE for student financial aid programs. In addition to these programs, the USDE guarantees more than $71 million in Idaho for the major student loan programs; without the USDE guarantee, most Volunteers for the Helen Chenoweth campaign set up a "tailgate party" in which they gave out free food and refreshments before the UI/ISU football game last Saturday. Chenoweth appeared to meet voters and raise support for her campaign.

Larry LaRocco holds the approval of 45 percent of Idaho voters while his opponent Helen Chenoweth follows with 39 percent of the vote according to a poll released Thursday in The Spokesman-Review.

Chenoweth has, however, gained a lot of ground in the 30 percent deficit her campaign has suffered since May to come within six points of LaRocco, according to the results.

The poll was conducted by Political/Media Research and 808 voters were questioned. These results follow the release of a poll in September which showed Chenoweth in the lead by five points.

"The poll shows that I have a good lead and that 58 percent of those polled would vote for anyone but LaRocco," said Chenoweth at a campaign tailgate party outside the Kibbie Dome on Saturday. "My opponent has not been willing to lay the polls out."

However, Mellman-Lazarus-Lake, a research and strategy firm, examined the results of the poll in which 619 people were interviewed over a period of eight days. What they found was that the sample of 619 voters was 41 percent Republican, 19 percent Democrat and 40 percent independent.

"While the district leans Republican, over the last year, we have consistently seen party identification between 39 percent and 41 percent Republican and 32 percent and 35 percent Democratic. We have been polling in this district since 1988 and have never seen a party identification similar to what Chenoweth's poll reported," said a memo from the Idaho college students could not obtain the loans necessary to pay for their education." The fact sheet was based on a scenario in which the USDE was eliminated at once with nothing to replace it.

Chenoweth stated she does not advocate eliminating these programs altogether. She believes they would be more efficiently implemented on the state level. Based on her idea of "block grants," instead of Idaho gaining $100 million filtered through the Department of Education, this money would go to Idaho's state department of education as a grant to be utilized as Idaho sees fit.

The U.S. Department of Education is proportionately a small fragment of the total amount of education dollars spent in the United States. In 1992, $26.4 billion was spent by the USDE in comparison to the total of $425 billion spent on the federal, state and local levels of government for education. Although USDE's budget is relatively small, it has experienced a high growth rate in recent years. In 1994, federal outlays were approximately $31 billion, a 43% increase over 1989's outlay of $21.6 billion.

Local farmers get extension on land

Zachary Craig-Works

Local farmers and ranchers got a break last week when the U.S. Department of Agriculture announced it was going to extend grazing and haying on Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) land until the end of November.

Dry conditions have persisted over the last several years in Idaho, and these conditions have created an early need for additional cattle feed.

"Due to drought conditions, they (the U.S. Department of Agriculture) allowed haying and grazing on CRP lands," said Dick Kern, USDA Soil Conservationist. The Secretary of Agriculture can allow the use of CRP lands when certain emergency conditions exist.

Idaho Senator Larry Craig, a member of the Senate Agriculture Committee, was in support of the extension and had asked for it to last until December.

In a news release from his office, Craig said "I am asking for this extension because of the unusually tough working conditions Idaho's farmers and ranchers have faced this year. This extension could make or break many of our agriculture producers."

The Conservation Reserve Program was created in 1986 to take erodible land out of crop production according to Tom Griggs, University of Idaho Plant Sciences assistant professor. Griggs said the program pays crop producers to take these lands out of annual production.

Interested land owners submitted bids to the USDA to qualify. The USDA then either accepted or rejected the bid.

If the bid was accepted, the land owner would be paid per acre per year according to the bid. The owner and the USDA then enter into a ten-year contract.

Kern added that this program has been very popular with local land owners. "A lot of them have gotten into it," Kern said.

"We've got quite a bit of this (land) in Latah County," said Griggs. He added that the average accepted bid was around $50 per acre per year.

Griggs added that the program was especially popular with farmers nearing retirement age. According to Griggs, the older farmers would sell off their machinery but still be able to be in the agriculture business.

According to Kern, the program has been successful in reducing erosion. He said that with conven-

UI hit with burglaries

Fifteen vehicles were broken into during a rash of burglaries late Sunday or early Monday morning in the Wallace Complex parking lot. Four people have been arrested in connection with the break-ins.

Vehicle windows were smashed to gain entry. In one instance, the roof of a convertible was cut open in order to gain entry. The cost of the damages have yet to be determined.

One student whose vehicle was broken into estimated that it would cost him $155 to replace the damage to his truck and stolen items. "I had to replace my window and I may have to replace my radar detector," said Tomas Smiley.

Early Monday morning, a patrolling officer noticed suspicious behavior from occupants in a parked car. The driver and two passengers abandoned the vehicle and a third passenger, Ryan L. Oatman, 18, was apprehended and charged with minor in possession.

The police officer retrieved several stereos, a stolen checkbook and stolen credit cards from the vehicle. "Eventually the items will be returned to their owners," said Lt. Kershnik.

"If they recover [my radar detector] I have to wait until these guys get sentenced, and I was told that there is a waiting period after that," said Smiley.

Oatman was charged with two counts of grand theft and burglary. Aaron P. Gould, 18, a University of Idaho student, was charged with grand theft and burglary.

Lt. Kershnik said the two suspects face up to 10 years in prison.

press release it's apparent LaRocco does not believe in local control of Idaho's schools. "If he did, he would join the mainstream of Idahoans who want to see the federal government reduced and have more emphasis placed on block grants to the states. The Department of Education is a great place to start rolling back federal intervention into local school decisions."

However, at the forum on Wednesday, her responses to specific questions pertaining to the ramifications of her position failed to provide additional details beyond her concept of block grants.

She was asked to provide specific programs that would be better implemented on the state level as opposed to the federal level, and she answered by saying "Can you think of any that wouldn't be?"

According to Chenoweth, China, Russia and Switzerland all outperformed the United States in math tests. She used this example as an illustration of how deficient education in the United States is.

One person present at the forum debated her claim by pointing out that these three countries have highly centralized educational programs—exactly the opposite of what Chenoweth advocated.

Chenoweth responded by saying "You're centering your question on centralization while I'm centering my answer around efficiency. There will actually be more dollars left over for the programs by doing away with the federal Department of Education and using these dollars as block grants to the states.

So the question of federal centralization, I don't think, adds out to economically being able to help."

Near the end of the forum, Chenoweth was asked about what she believed to be the most prominent problem concerning higher education in Idaho and what she proposed to do about it.

"Right now—politically, as I see it—is (the) confusion as to whether we should maintain the State Board of Education and the chancellery system. I'm very proud of the University of Idaho, the ag sciences and the colleges we have up here, but I think there is a lot of political confusion right now." She concluded her response by asking her questioner his own question: "What do you think is the number one problem facing higher education in Idaho?"

Greeks win awards

Five University of Idaho Greek living groups received awards for achievements this past academic year at an international Greek convention last summer.

According to Greek advisor Linda Davis, "Chris Wuthrich and I, as Greek advisors, are very proud of the accomplishments of these UI Greek living groups. These awards are a tribute to the quality of the Greek system here at UI."

Greek organizations recognized include:

- Alpha Kappa Lambda fraternity—National Rush Award and the National President's Award.

- Alpha Phi sorority—Philanthropy Contribution Award, Fraternity Education Programming Award and selection as of one of 10 chapters to begin a pilot program, Alpha Phi 2000.

- Gamma Phi Beta sorority—Overall Chapter Enrichment Programming Award, Chancellor Haven Award for four consecutive scholastic periods above a 3.0 chapter grade average, Most Improved Public Relations Award and recognition to Julie Trail as Most Outstanding Chapter Advisor.

- Kappa Sigma fraternity—Outstanding Brotherhood Development Award, Top Intramural Participation Award, Community Service Award and Scholarship Award for the fall 1993 semester.

- Sigma Nu fraternity—International Brotherhood Award and the fraternity's highest collegiate honor to two affiliates of the UI Alpha Chapter, Pete McDonald and Dan Winn.

Mellman-Lazarus-Lake office to LaRocco's campaign office.

Members of the Young Republicans on Campus remain optimistic about Chenoweth's campaign and are eager to see her succeed in November.

"I think her campaign is going terrific. It's a classic textbook campaign that's from the grassroots level," said Damon Darakjy of the Young Republicans on Campus.

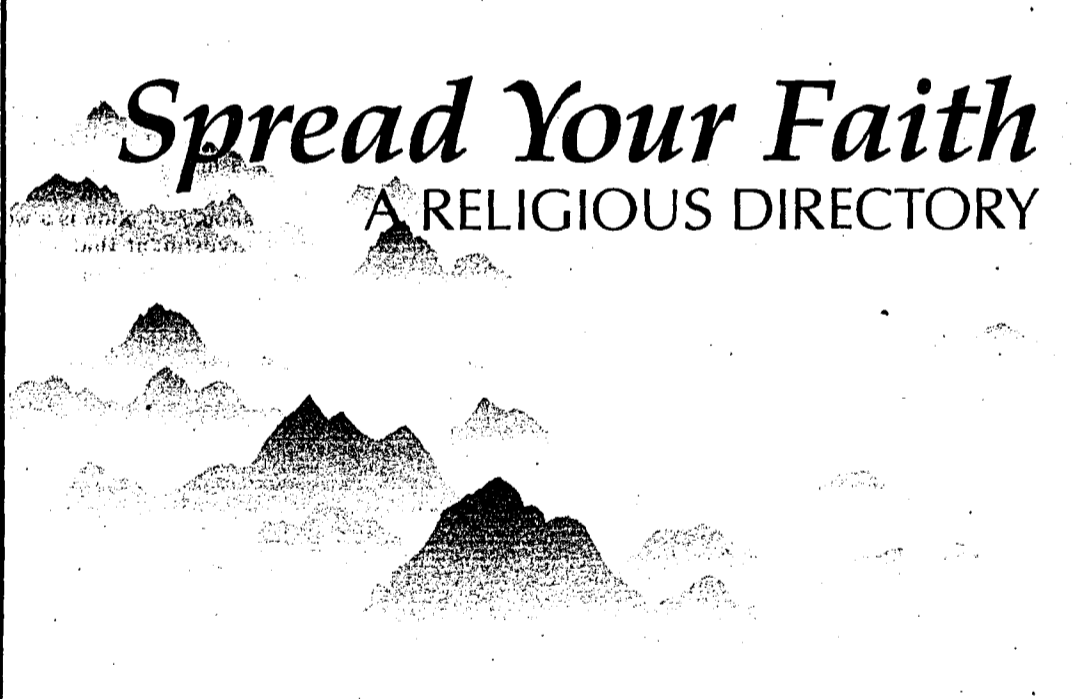

Justin Stiefel, chairman of the Young Republicans on Campus, said the turnout at Chenoweth's tailgate party was much higher in comparison to similar events held at Boise and Idaho State Universities and Lewis and Clark State College. He estimated approximately 1,000 people stopped to pick up a hot dog, don a campaign sticker and talk to Chenoweth.

"It's tough to put a number on how many people stopped, but it was pretty successful," he said. "We looked in some of the garbage cans around the dome afterwards and very few stickers were thrown out."

Courtney Robinson, a student who listened to some of Chenoweth's comments, said Chenoweth was obviously putting forth an effort in her campaign but disagreed with some of her campaign techniques.

"She seemed like she was really trying hard and she really seemed like she wanted to win the student's vote," she said. "But her tone when she spoke of (LaRocco) was very derogatory. I like cleaner campaigns than that."

Argonaut Interview

Peavey shoots for Lieutenant Governor seat

Shelby Dopp

Staff

John Peavey has been a state senator for 10 terms and is currently the Democratic candidate for the office of Lt. Governor. He is from Carey, Idaho, where he runs a sheep and cattle ranch with his wife, Diane; his mother, Mary Brooks and his son Tom. Peavey graduated from Northwestern University with a Bachelor of Science Degree in Civil Engineering in 1957. After college, he served in the United States Marine Corps from 1957 to 1960.

Peavey led the campaign for Idaho's Sunshine Law which requires professional lobbyists to reveal their influence on government and to disclose campaign contributions and expenditures. He has served on state committees such as Natural Resources and the Environment Committee and the Health and Welfare Committee.

Argonaut: What are some personal qualities which you feel will enable you to fill the role as Lt. Governor of Idaho adequately?

Peavey: I think my background in Idaho — living and working a bona fide ranching operation — is one of the sources of my strength. It's a wonderful experience. It encompasses all of the wonderful things when we think of Idaho. The wide, open spaces, dramatic change of seasons, animals interacting with each other — it's just a wonderful, very spiritual life.

I served in the Marine Corps. I've got a strong legislative background. I've got a history of being willing to grasp the really tough, controversial issues and try to work towards a solution of bringing people together to resolve things by making sure each side listens to the other side. I try to find areas of common interest, common ground and I think that record pretty well speaks for itself.

(I have) a real strong commitment to open government. I was responsible for the existing open government requirements we have now — namely the campaign finance disclosure laws where politicians disclose their source of campaign funding (and) the existing lobby registration laws, although they have been weakened seriously over the years by the legislature. Both of those aspects were part of an initiative I ran in the mid 1970's because the legislature refused to deal with it.

I think the problems we have in government today are frustration and anger — mainly because people have lost access to their government, and the special interest money has us all shut away from our government — locked out. We're not heard and we need to recapture our government. I've got a strong commitment to that concept, and we may have to do another initiative at some point. I would love to be able to, once again, lead the charge and try to resolve that problem so we can have a government of the people, by the people, for the people.

Argonaut: What are some top priorities on your agenda which you would like to pursue if elected?

Peavey: I'd like to make the Lt. Governor's Office a working office. I would like to turn it into a place where people can call and get their questions answered and hopefully, solutions to problems.

It's an office where it has one foot in the executive branch of government and one foot in the legislative branch and is an ombudsman for the people, an office where we can go out and try to solve their problems, get the phone calls answered and then work on the open government.

The access problem and the water issue in southern Idaho is very, very important. It's important in northern Idaho, as well. We're all connected to the Columbia River Basin, and the problems with the fisheries down there are very, very serious. I've got a long history of grappling with that issue, as well.

Argonaut: What is your stand on the Department of Energy's proposal to use INEL as a national storage facility for nuclear waste for the next 40 years?

Peavey: I think that's a real mistake. I think it's an inappropriate place to store large volumes of nuclear waste over an underground aquifer. It's a geologically unstable area, and there's just got to be a better place to put that stuff. If we accept it, then I don't think the United States will have the will to find any other place to put it. The chances of that becoming the permanent/temporary repository are very good, and I am adamantly opposed to more storage there.

There are some very good research projects ongoing at the INEL. There seems to be a whole new beginning down there, a new direction away from armaments. I'm real enthused about most of the activities they're talking about now, (they) deserve a lot of support.

Argonaut: Wilderness has become a big issue here in northern Idaho. Do you think we should be logging in the national forests here in Idaho? What are your feelings on logging in the Cove-Mallard area?

Peavey: We have to harvest trees. We all use timber products one way or another — wood houses (would be an example). We all use paper products, obviously. The ways of managing our forest resources are changing dramatically. Since trees are becoming much more valuable, we're finding that we could expend more effort in good husbandry practices and promote the growth of trees, reforestation efforts, thinning, pruning, planting activities and helicopter logging.

As far as Cove-Mallard, I'm really not familiar enough with that area to have an opinion as to whether it ought to be wilderness or whether all or parts of it ought to be opened for logging. But I do support some additions to our wilderness system.

At the same time, we need to resolve issues internally in Idaho and not (have) the outside interests telling us what to do. It's important that we have coupled with a solution some release language for the other forested areas that would allow the multiple use and management of those areas for timber production and other attributes of the forest. We need to get a total solution if we can.

Argonaut: What is your stand on abortion?

Peavey: I'm pro-choice. It's an incredibly difficult area to get government involved in, and it didn't work when we did. I'm very, very comfortable with the situations that now exist.

Argonaut: Does that include the current Idaho abortion laws?

Peavey: I don't favor parental consent. Remember the Spring/Adam's case down in Payette where the father impregnated his daughter, and she wanted an abortion? In the aftermath of all the trauma that family was obviously going through, he killed his daughter. So, I think there are some unintended consequences sometimes, and the parents who want parental consent are going to have it. They have the relationship with their daughter, (and) hopefully, she can communicate and use her parents as a source for strength and advice. That shouldn't be dictated by government.

“ We have to differentiate between a job and a quality job. We need jobs where families aren't forced to have five and six jobs to support a family between two partners.

—John Peavey
Democratic candidate for state Lieutenant Governor

Argonaut: The costs of higher education have outpaced inflation for the last several years. While we still enjoy a comparatively inexpensive education in Idaho, students have still seen some significant increases in tuition and fees in the last two years. Do you envision the state government stepping in to control this?

Peavey: Relying on tuition too much is a mistake — it locks too many people away from access to an education. Education is a wonderful investment that society makes in its young people and its future. We shouldn't make it prohibited. I don't favor increases in tuition. My record on education compared to my opponent's (current Lt. Governor Butch Otter) is black and white. He's been incredibly negative in his legislative career when he was in the house as opposed to my very strong support for adequate funding for education at all levels.

Argonaut: Idaho sat out of the recession most of the rest of the nation experienced in the early 90s. How do you intend to keep Idaho from falling victim to economic woes in the future?

Peavey: We have to continue most of the policies Governor Andrus has supported over the years — mainly a strong commitment to young people and education, investing in them and empowering them to earn a good living wage; to hold a quality job.

We have to differentiate between a job and a quality job. We need jobs where families aren't forced to have five and six jobs to support a family between two partners. We've got lots of those part-time jobs out there that pay barely minimum wage and have no fringe benefits. We have to have an economy that's balanced.

Basically, the really good jobs are usually found in the natural resources industry. We need to maintain reasonable access to those natural resources, but at the same time, manage them in a sustainable manner so they continue to produce in an ongoing, environmentally-sound manner.

We need to maintain support for the Department of Commerce. But at the same time, communities that are growing very rapidly need to have tools to insulate their citizens from the enormous cost that's caused from rapid growth in places like Coeur d'Alene, Ada County or Blaine County, for instance. Things like local-option impact fees to support construction of new schools — for those new schools are going to service the new people who are moving in — are appropriate, especially if they are on a local-option basis. We need to pursue an active, local planning effort so growth maximizes the benefits (for) the community and minimizes the negative aspects.

Argonaut: Where do you stand on Proposition One?

Peavey: I'm against Proposition

One. I was one of the earliest legislators to stand on the capitol steps in opposition to Proposition One. It's based on a hate campaign. It's just not necessary in Idaho. It's going to cause lots and lots of problems with curriculum, books (and) libraries. I abhor boycotts, but I am sure various elements of our economy are going to be subjected to the threat of boycotts.

Argonaut: What advice do you have for today's college students?

Peavey: Study hard and get the best education they can. Take advantage of the resources available here at the university. Be willing to pick up the responsibility and carry the load for those that are going to follow them when they're in their middle to later years. Our young people today, I think, pay attention to the responsibilities of citizenship — not just voting but being an informed voter. I urge them not to be afraid to enter the political arena and get into the debate.

Learn how government works, and more importantly, why it works certain ways.

tional tillage, erosion could claim between 30 and 40 tons of soil per acre every year. On CRP land, this is reduced to one or two tons per acre a year. The additional grassland is also good for wildlife.

"It provides excellent wildlife cover and habitat," said Kern.

John Foltz, UI Assistant Professor of Agriculture Economics, said the program also has financial rewards for its participants. Land put into the CRP is marginal.

"It is not going to yield 70 or 80 bushels of wheat," said Foltz.

According to current wheat prices, as quoted by the Latah County Grain Growers, wheat is priced at $4.04 per bushel. Foltz said an average acre of land would grow around 70 bushels. Before costs, that comes to $282.80 for an acre of wheat. After costs of production are figured in, Foltz said CRP offers good money for land that would not be very productive in the first place.

HJR 16 offers rights

Shelby Dopp

House Joint Resolution 16 is a proposed amendment to the Idaho State Constitution to give victims of crime ten specific rights.

Already passed by the state House and Senate, the resolution now only needs the vote of the people. It will be on the election ballot on Nov. 8. The question on the ballot will read as follows:

"Shall Article I of the Constitution of the State of Idaho be amended by the addition of a new Section 22, Article I of the Constitution of the State of Idaho to provide for rights of crime victims?"

If passed, HJR 16 will provide the following 10 rights to crime victims:

1. To be treated with fairness, respect, dignity and privacy throughout the criminal justice process.
2. To timely disposition of the case.
3. To prior notification of trial court, appellate and parole proceedings, and upon request, to information about the sentence, incarceration and release of the defendant.

4. To be present at all criminal justice proceedings.

5. To communicate with the prosecution.

6. To be heard, upon request, at all criminal justice proceedings considering a plea of guilty, sentencing, incarceration or release of the defendant, unless manifest injustice would result.

7. To restitution, as provided by law, from the person committing the offense that caused the victim's loss.

8. To refuse an interview, ex parte contact, or other request by the defendant, or any other person acting on behalf of the defendant, unless such request is authorized by law.

9. To read presentence reports relating to the crime.

10. To the same rights in juvenile proceedings, where the offense is a felony if committed by an adult, as guaranteed in this section, provided that access to the social history report shall be determined by statute.

To get involved with HJR 16 call (208) 332-7243 or write to Equal Justice for Victims Committee, P.O. Box 1066, Boise, ID 83701.

Residence halls compete in GDI week

Joey Wellman

University of Idaho residence halls competed in the annual GDI ("Gosh Darn" Independent) Week from Sept. 25 through Oct. 1. Ten halls vied for the prestigious title by participating in various events. Women's residence Forney Hall earned first place with 980 points while co-ed Olson Hall took second with 930 points.

According to Donovan Neese, program coordinator of the Residence Hall Association, the Penny Wars raised approximately $1590 which was donated to the United Way. Halls collected pennies for their jars or added "silver money" to competitors' pots, which subtracted any previous amounts.

The sixth annual Paint the Palouse — a project assisting community members lacking ability or resources to paint their homes — attracted more than 110 volunteers. The project was able to complete painting in one house and paint half of one other home. Columbia Paint, several community businesses and UI donated supplies.

"This year was very successful due to the large turnout," said Diana Glennon, Resident Director of Programs. "It only took two hours as all 100 volunteers showed at once." In preparing the houses for painting, the volunteers scraped, wire-brushed and power-washed the houses in advance.

Raffle prizes were awarded and participants received free T-shirts donated by residence halls. Local businesses donated food.

Forney Hall, the GDI Week Champions, have turned their 1994 win into a "three-peat." "It felt really great to win for the third year in a row," said Hall President Sue Pierce. "During the week, Carter Hall was our biggest competitor — they put up a big fight which kept my girls going. I'd like to thank Forney for doing such a good job — we'll do it again!" Pierce said.

Candidate season opens early this fall

Rifle hunting season starts Monday, but the candidates in this fall's race opened the season early this week with guns blazing.

Unfortunately, most of the targets have only been wounded.

Thus far, Republican gubernatorial candidate Phil Batt has blasted off a few rounds at Democratic candidate Larry EchoHawk by stating EchoHawk is a Clinton crony and that Batt can work better with tribes.

Ron Rankin, and independent gubernatorial candidate, has nicked both EchoHawk and Batt by claiming he's the only candidate not dictated by special interest groups.

Democratic Congressman Larry LaRocco's Boise campaign office loosed an arrow toward Republican candidate for Idaho's 1st District congressional seat, Helen Chenoweth. LaRocco's office held a news conference and pointed out the fact Chenoweth had suggested abolishing the U.S. Department of Education in an earlier Argonaut interview with her. Chenoweth has since spent much of this week defending and clarifying her position.

LaRocco has also used the radio as a weapon by running ads that, according to Chenoweth, distort her position on abortion.

Chenoweth—when she's not shooting herself in the foot—has called LaRocco the most ineffective congressman in history. Chenoweth has consistently wounded herself by saying, "I was caught off guard," especially in regard to her education stance. During hunting season, a politician should always be on guard.

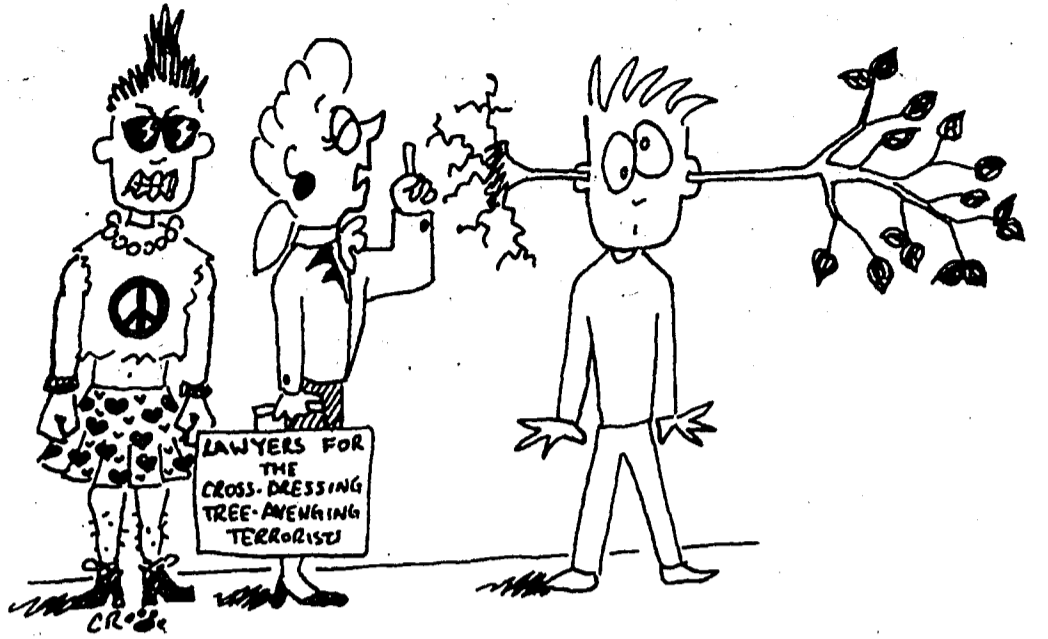

In the Lt. Governor's race, which seems to be a little slower entering the general season, Democratic candidate John Peavey said incumbent Lt. Governor Butch Otter has been "incredibly negative in his legislative career when he was in the house as opposed to my very strong support for adequate funding for education at all levels."

Another indicator of fall hunting season is the use of polls. Chenoweth's campaign conducted a poll in late September that showed Chenoweth with a lead. LaRocco's campaign immediately lodged a complaint against how the poll was conducted.

Political/Media Research conducted a poll last weekend about the Batt-EchoHawk race for The Spokesman-Review, KTVB-TV of Boise and KHQ-TV of Spokane. The poll found that EchoHawk had a substantial lead. Batt's campaign promptly questioned the validity of the poll, claiming the results aren't accurate because pollsters didn't ask for party affiliation.

So far this season, all the candidates have been shooting standard ammunition—inaccurate factory loads. Toward the end of the season, everyone should be getting more desperate and will start firing at anything that moves. That's when the true hunters and sportsmen will surface.

Silly insight from minds at CNN

Anyone who reads this column more than once (assuming that such a hypothetical person must exist) has probably noticed that I preface many of these with "I saw on CNN..." or "On Headline News..." or something similar. Well, hold on to your remote, because here I go again.

While channel-surfing the other day, I came across one of many CNN blurbs that caught my attention. The new head of a legal group, rather ridiculously named the Defenders of the Defenders of Life, was being interviewed. The gist of what she said was this: the group was created to protect those who feel strongly enough about abortions to commit what we laughingly call "crimes" here in the real world. There must be quite a market for this kind of thing now.

After I finished howling with derisive laughter, I thought about it some more. The idea is not as politically illegitimate as it might seem.

After all, the IRA have the Sinn Fein; why can't the lunatics have their own little action group of lawyers? If terrorists can have representation in the parliament of a major industrialized nation, surely we can give our gang of terrorists lawyers. Come on, it's easy.

Hey, why stop there? Every

political action group should be represented, whether they be affiliated with the mainstream of their movement or not.

The ACLU will fight for the gay-rights movement, but the splinter groups like Queer Nation are not often represented. Let's form a group for them; we'll call it Lawyers of Queer Nation. Better yet, let's scare the fecal matter out of the GOP and call them Nation of Queer Lawyers. Oh boy! You can almost hear Bob Dole's sphincter tightening in fear. Watch out there, Bob.

Earth First! needs a special group, too. I mean, Earth First! has a nasty reputation of doing extreme things like spiking trees and sabotaging equipment in ways that could kill loggers.

This is a much better tactic than trying to work out policies that allow land usage while protecting the environment, but some loggers want to rape the world so badly that they refuse to listen to sweet reason, and so we get lawsuits and criminal charges. We'll (I mean the nation of taxpayers, who eventually pay this bill, too) call them Fees First! Appropriate, n'est-ce pas?

While we're at it, let's put on our thinking caps and imagine some other ones. We could create a firm of lawyers who defend celebrities from criminal charges and other pesky legal actions. Naturally, they would be called Riches to Rags. O.J. Simpson could be their first client, and Robbie Shapiro could be the president. Ah, the perks of judiciary fame.

A few years ago, Louisiana saw the first admitted Klansman attempt to run for office. Since then, the Klan has started to become more active in politics and whatnot, so they might need a group of their own sometime. How could we denote this group dedicated to protecting men who run around in their wives' good sheets trying to push back the concept of equality a century? Idiots is out, and I think we're all tired of acronyms. Let's just call them Three Sheets to the Wind and be done with it.

Ridiculous? Surely, but no more ridiculous than giving resources and time to terrorists who fight a moral battle in the political arena. Murder and violence are many things at many times, but free speech is not one of those things at any time. How can these groups consider themselves credible?

One of the most telling indicators of insanity is a total inability to diagnose one's own problem. If that assumption is to be considered valid, I'd say that we've reached a stage of mental breakdown.

Hand me the Thorazine, my good man; we're off to Never Never Land.

We should be giving out guns to restore democracy

Monday night on the McNeil-Lehrer News Hour, John Deutch, deputy secretary of defense, made a comment regarding Haiti that should bother, if not scare, all Americans. He said, "We are disarming a violent nation."

Before, we were told that our job was to restore democracy, not to "disarm a violent nation."

While the United States has become involved in many conflicts, it has never set out to disarm anyone. If anything, the United States has proliferated weapons across the globe. Did we attempt to disarm Vietnam, Korea, Nicaragua,

Shea Meehan

Guatemala, Honduras, or Iraq? While we did attempt to confiscate weapons in some of these nations, we did not attempt to disarm any of them as a whole. If U.S. policy requires the disarming of violent nations, we should schedule invasions for Northern Ireland, Chile, Argentina, Guatemala, Honduras, Bosnia, Somalia, Syria, Rwanda, South Africa, Mexico, India, Israel, Jordan, Iraq, Iran, China, Brazil, and most of all, ourselves.

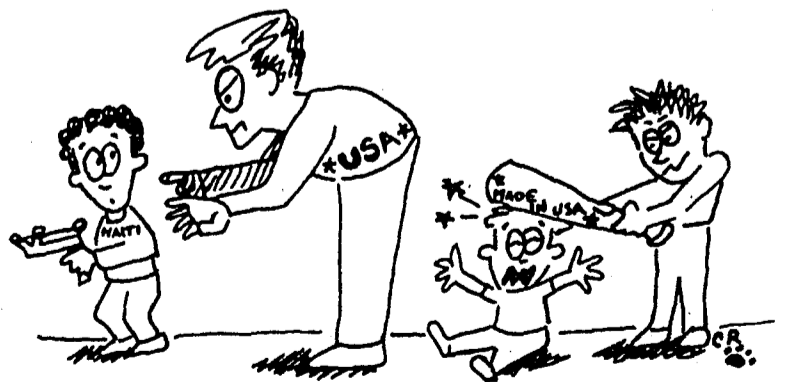

As the leader of a sovereign nation I would feel imposed upon if the United States attempted to disarm my nation.

Sometimes we must forget our revolutionary roots. While I do not feel that the historicity of the Second Amendment is a valid argument against gun control, anyone who knows how the United States became independent from tyrannical rulers must support their right to buy, possess, and stockpile weapons and munitions.

If a U.S. citizen retains enough sovereignty over their person to have the right to carry a gun, why should Haiti, a sovereign nation of seven million people, not have the same right? Guns can be bad, if they are used for bad things. However, was our war for independence a bad war? Most will say no. By this logic we should be supplying guns to the people of Haiti, not taking them away.

The poor people in Haiti cannot afford guns to defend themselves from the people who do have money for guns, a.k.a. the rich and the military. As long as people have money they will be able to get guns.

When it comes down to it, however, guns really are not that important. Look at the people in Rwanda, they have done fine without them.

Career Fair a grand success

We are writing to thank the many University of Idaho students and faculty members whose participation in the Sept. 28 Career Fair generated a remarkable success. Both employers and students alike responded enthusiastically to the event.

Although the All-University Career Fair was the first of its kind in recent years, we believed our university's reputation and student support would attract a sizable number of companies and organizations to the Fair. Thanks to you, our goals were surpassed. Representatives from more than 40 companies and organizations attended the Fair, each kept busy with a constant stream of nearly 1200 students.

Owing to this year's success we believe next year's Career Fair will be even stronger, with a greater number of employment, co-op, and intern opportunities for our students. With your continued help, we can impress upon employers a need to recruit UI students.

Once again, thank you for your interest and support.

Chenoweth wrong choice

As a student, I judge political candidates by what they can do for me, the UI and my education. Prior to her Argonaut interview, I felt I knew what Helen Chenoweth's radical right candidacy was all about. I knew Chenoweth was a lobbyist for special interest groups; she had foolishly stated the E. coli bacteria (one of the Earth's most abundant organisms) was on the endangered species list; I heard she was pro-life in ALL cases, even rape and incest; and she lied about being Sen. Symms Chief of Staff, a title the Idaho Statesman reports she never carried. Though these issues alone were enough to convince me to vote for hard-working Congressman Larry LaRocco, reading her interview made me even more satisfied with my decision.

In an obviously ridiculous move, Helen Chenoweth now wants to abolish the U.S. Department of Education because, as she sees it, all it does is "fund the hot lunch program and some programs for special education." In actuality, ALL levels of education would be devastated by Chenoweth's renegade proposal, from preschool, elementary, secondary and adult education to general literacy programs. The revenue losses realized in Idaho alone, would total well over $100 million and cause Idahoans' property taxes to double. Idaho would also lose all federally funded special education teachers at a loss of over $77 million a year. In addition, Mrs. Chenoweth proposes to end anti-drug, suicide prevention and dropout prevention programs, math and science improvement grants, and all USDE programs. Chenoweth must feel Idaho's children — our FUTURE — are just not worth the effort. All this from one who says she stands for the Idaho way!

At the university level, abolishing the Department would cut millions from Pell grants, work-study programs and Perkins loans — money enabling thousands of students to attend college. Idaho colleges receive and would lose well over $25 million in student financial aid programs. The USDE also guarantees major student loan programs (Stafford, Parent Supplemental Student Loans and others), without which students could not obtain necessary education loans. In fact if, as Helen Chenoweth desires, the USDE were abolished, student financial aid would cease completely. From these facts, it would seem Helen wants only children of the wealthy to be educated.

What's more, Helen Chenoweth is one of a very select few from either party campaigning FOR Proposition One, the derisive, imported civil rights attack. Helen would relish making Idaho libraries spend tens of millions screening and banning the Holy Bible, Time magazine, encyclopedia sets, textbooks, even the Argonaut to readers under age 18; she would force educators to discuss homosexuality only to say it is "unacceptable," and counselors to discriminate in providing guidance. Chenoweth wants to waste millions of taxpayers' dollars in library and court costs and more government intrusion in our lives.

Not only would Helen Chenoweth be bad for students at every level, she would also — clearly — be bad for all of Idaho as well. Helen Chenoweth claims she represents "Idaho values," but she most certainly does NOT represent MY Idaho values. I sure hope Idahoans join me in voting to ensure she never gets the chance, either!

AKL good brother frat

In difficult and trying times, it can get old to talk about the same depressing and repetitive topics over and over. The alcohol policy, the alcohol policy, and did I mention the alcohol policy? I am happy to write about an incident that has nothing to do with the policy and makes me proud to be a part of the University of Idaho Greek System.

At the beginning of the semester an out-of-house member of Sigma Nu Fraternity woke up to a fire in his bedroom. He was able to put the fire out and luckily only suffered a few severe burns and some damaged property. One can only imagine the fear and anxiety caused by such an event.

Some members of the Alpha Kappa Lambda Fraternity heard about this and went back to their Chapter and pooled $250 together to give to the Sigma Nu. That is a very unselfish and giving action and an outstanding example of interfraternalism. It is really nice to hear about something positive and something else that makes one glad to be a Greek. Good job, AKL! They have set an example for everyone (Greek and Independent) to follow.

LaRocco right choice for Idaho

I am writing to express my support for our first district Congressman, Larry LaRocco, in the upcoming election. Larry LaRocco has been instrumental in representing Idaho's interests in Washington, D.C.; his positions on the environment, government spending, rural health care, and the deficit have been in step with that of mainstream Idaho.

Taking a position on environmental issues is never easy, but Congressman LaRocco has worked to offer thoughtful and well-balanced legislation to provide an equitable compromise between industry and conservationists. His Forest Health bill is a prime example of how logging practices and sound resource management can be used to improve the health of Idaho's forests. Plus, LaRocco has the leadership ability to resolve Idaho's wilderness debate — so that it is not decided for us, by outside interests.

Congressman LaRocco's stance on spending has been clearly that of a "deficit hawk," based on his work with a bi-partisan group which has been working to reduce government spending by $90 million. Coupled with the fact that the federal deficit has declined for the past three years, his support of sensible deficit reduction is obvious.

Also, in the turbulent debate regarding health care reform, Congressman LaRocco brought the Idaho perspective into the fray. By offering three separate bills to increase the health care access and technology in rural areas such as Idaho, LaRocco helped to prevent rural states from being overlooked.

Finally, and perhaps most importantly for us, LaRocco has continued to work for students; to help keep federal Pell grants available, and to get the direct student loan program. Programs such as these provide more lower and middle income students the ability to pay for the ever-increasing cost of college.

Overall, Larry LaRocco is a hard-working, qualified and experienced representative of Idaho's interests. He can and will get the job done for Idaho. A vote for LaRocco would be a vote for continued effective leadership and representation of Idaho values in the United States Congress.

Tests are simply regurgitation

Yeah, we have mid-terms and papers almost every week. I hate examinations. Most tests I took were like regurgitating back to the instructors. I did not know before I enrolled in the university that I would be changed to a parrot, mimicking what I've heard. I thought that the purpose of education is learning. Over my four years of school, I am not sure that I've learnt to be a scholar or a parrot.

Any comments?

Review meant as fact, opinion

In defense of Amy Ridenour's review of Kathy Acker's reading, I'm compelled to tear apart certain letters to the editor. Ridenour's review was honest and quite substantiated. I cannot share my own opinion on Acker's works because of my unfamiliarity with them. But only a hypocritical person would lash out in such a manner at Ridenour's opinionated review. Of course it was opinionated. A review is intended to convey facts AND opinion. What good is a critic without opinions in some quantity? One definition of being human is having opinion and subjectiveness. No one can be totally objective, ever!

Ridenour was well-informed in this subject matter from first hand experience, contrary to certain allegations of "complete ignorance." This "poorly read" Lifestyles Editor has obviously read enough to form a basis for quality comparison and found Acker's work sorely lacking in quality. Ridenour was motivated "into thinking, action and tasting life" when she realized the crass content she was exposed to. It doesn't sound like she needed to "imagine" or desired to "interact" with any of what she saw. From my admittedly second hand knowledge of Acker's "innovative" work, I would like know who respects those "folks who find Acker's writing very important and very literary."

I'm not banning, burning, or bashing anything. But I would much rather have all opinions out in the open than have a legion of "individuals" all chanting "we opened our minds, we accepted everything, we celebrated diversity." I suppose one opinion deserves an equal and opposite opinion. So why don't we attack opinions instead of people? Change is not always good, "stagnancy" not always bad, and neither have very much to do with enjoying or detesting anything. Let's all get our voices heard, but let's not throw that sneaky elbow when the ref isn't looking, or a blatant punch for that matter.

-Eric Aston

Censorship not just in books

How delightful to see Diane Prorak of UI Library speaking against censorship and for banned books and viewpoints. In honor of the recent national Banned Books Week, I would like to challenge my neighbors to look around and see what information is really gagged in the United States today. It's not the information Ms. Prorak pointed out was being publicly read at WaldenBooks Sept. 24, nor the information filling library display cases. It's really a wonder that the American Library Association says nothing about the vital, human-interest information daily censored in our own local libraries, high schools, and newspapers. If you consider yourself a free-thinker, I have some eye-opening reading to suggest for you.

As of 1994, there are now 24 medical studies worldwide proving a strong link between abortion (especially of a woman's first pregnancy) and breast cancer. Citations of these studies and a medical synopsis of them by Dr. Joel Brind (Dept. of Obstetrics, Gynecology and Reproductive Science, Mt. Sinai School of Medicine, New York City) can be found at UI Students for Life table at UI's October 20 Health Fair at the Student Union. And don't forget about Dr. John Wilke's Post-Abortion Review.

If you feel you have the courage to examine this information in spite of what your friends say, and if our local libraries do not have this important information, simply request it through either of the two university libraries' extensive interlibrary loan systems.

Now if the newspaper you are reading has not censored this letter by "shortening" it, misplacing it, or filling it with strategic "typos," I wish you happy reading, and a taste of what real freedom of information is.

-Denise Ortiz

University fast food coming up

I would like to congratulate the ASUI and the powers that be for the brilliant decision to make (or better said, take) space in the Student Union for Burger King, Taco Bell and Sub Connection. Having been abroad last year, I missed what must have been a consuming debate concerning how the building could better serve the academic and entertainment interests of its students. I am so pleased that fast-food won out.

But why prematurely stunt this fast-food manifest destiny? We should now work with UI administration in order to utilize more unprofitable building space on campus: perhaps a Pizza Hut in the Admin., maybe a Chinese take-out place in the Library, or, dare to dream, a mini-mall or satellite Wal-Mart where that bothersome Arboretum (inhabited only by rabid squirrels) now stands. Why shouldn't the university system take part in this orgy of consumerism politely referred to as American society?

-Malcolm McNee

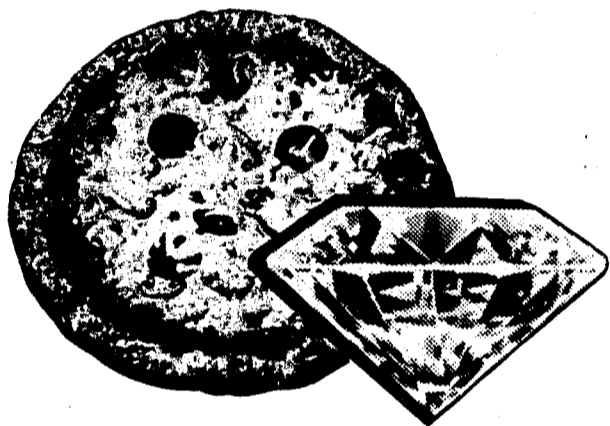

What do we get for money?

Students are consumers of university-provided services. Usually, their quality is easily judged and most of us seem to approve of the educational product. Shameful offerings, like the spring of 1994 version of CS 100, are rare.

Other university services are not so easily evaluated. Like thousands of other students, I enrolled in the insurance plan offered at registration. Neither then nor since have I seen any information about what I bought.

Since it appears you sometimes can not find interesting stories relevant to a majority of readers, you might consider exploring this mystery product so many of us rely upon.

Pizza & Diamonds are a lot alike.

Pizza

- No two pizzas are the same.
- Someone's medium size pizza is another's large or small.
- Cheaper isn't always better. Quality does vary.
- Pizzas are being sold by people who don't know anything about them.

Diamonds

- No two diamonds are the same.
- Comparing diamonds is hard; and some claim them to be a certain quality and they aren't.
- The lowest price doesn't mean the best quality and in the long run is not the best value.
- Anyone can sell a diamond but do they know any more than you?

When buying a diamond, Consider Integrity, Quality & Real Value.

At Dodson's Jewelers we know diamonds. As the Inland Empire's oldest family owned jewelry store, we know Integrity, too. Let us show you the way quality makes a difference in the value of a diamond. Wilson plays 'Jail House Rock' benefit Question: What do ASUI Senator Sean Wilson and the North Idaho Correctional Institution have in common?

AnsWER: Wilson performs tomorrow in a concert for the grand opening of the of the Cottonwood Butte picnic area which inmates from NICI helped construct.

The dual purpose of the grand opening, fittingly called "Jail House Rock," is to raise money for the Prairie Community Development Council, which organized the construction of the picnic site, and to celebrate the 20th anniversary of NICI.

"Inmates from NICI helped in the clean-up of Cottonwood Butte, tore down old buildings, and constructed benches around the picnic area," said Judy Forsman, the Vice-President of PCDC.

"Basically, we're fundraising to help pay for the materials that went into the project up there — the gravel, the cement, all the things we had to pay for up there," said Forsman.

The concert features three acts: the Prairie High School band, performing music from the fifties and sixties; keyboardist Mary K. Jungert; and Wilson on saxophone, performing with several musicians from Grangeville High School and the University of Idaho.

Wilson, who worked with PCDC while still in high school, said the council asked him to organize an act for the concert.

"I'm trying to model my part of the concert after a Kenny G. concert," said Wilson, who has an autographed photograph of the musician on his ASUI office wall. Wilson will perform several songs by Kenny G., Glenn Miller, and Michael Bolton.

Wilson said he wants to use different concert techniques like those used Kenny G. For instance, he plans to use wireless microphones and go directly into the audience to play to individual listeners.

"I'm stressing improvisation. I want to get people riled up," said Wilson.

Wilson's intentionally diverse act features Idaho County Junior Miss Julie Schmidt on vocals and Eric Cannavaro, evening news anchor for the Moscow-Pullman Daily News, on jazz piano.

UI pianist Sarah Dudley, who runs on the track and field team for UI, will also perform with Wilson, along with percussionist Jeremiah Crane, a senior at Grangeville High School and Kathleen Stubbers, a UI graduate of the Lionel Hampton School of Music and a music teacher in the Prairie school district, on synthesizer.

ASUI senator Scott M. Wimer will assist as the sound systems and recording engineer.

In addition, Wilson said he plans to record his performance and send it out to friends as Christmas presents.

"There's a certain adrenaline and feeling you can't produce anywhere else," Wilson said in a prepared statement.

"Jail House Rock," the grand opening concert for the Cottonwood Butte picnic area, begins noon Saturday at the summit of Cottonwood Butte. Cottonwood Butte is located 90 miles south of Moscow, via Highway 95. The event is not associated with or sponsored by the ASUI.

Flaming Lips influential musicians

Matt Baldwin
Staff

From the dust cyclones of the mid-west comes the band The Flaming Lips. These guitar packing Oakies originate from Oklahoma. Playing for around ten years, they are veterans of the music industry.

The Flaming Lips released their first album in 1985, and a year later they released their first full length album, Hear It Is. This year they are touring with the band Candlebox. I was able to catch them at their second stop in Pullman. Flaming Lips are Wayne Coyne, vocals and guitar, Steven Drozd, drums, vocals, Michael Ivins, bassist and vocals and Ronald Jones, guitar and vocals.

The Flaming Lips got their start not in clubs, but in just playing wherever they could. They didn't like being a band that plays a certain town, drumming up a local fan club base.

Their attitude was of just taking care of business. Their only concern was getting their equipment working and being at the show on time.

The bassist, Michael Ivins, describes their discovery: "The Flaming Lips has actually been around a long time. We used to just go out and play. There was this guy who was working at a radio station in San Francisco. He had done an interview with us and he really liked us. Well, he ended up going to work for Warner Brothers — which was a plus for us. After that we began calling up record companies and just kept asking for people. We ended up talking to anyone that answered the phone, including the janitor. Eventually we got a call from Warner Brothers asking if they could fly out and see us play a show. We said of course and set up a show in two days — a last minute thing. After the show we went out to eat at Denny's and they asked us if they could talk about a deal."

Ivins says that "the reason people think that we are a new band is that a few years ago we were on a totally screwed up tour.

So we decided to call it quits and went home midway through the tour. We didn't write much after that for awhile. We eventually put out another album."

The music from these four is a broken pop sound. Their newest release includes the LP "Transmissions From A Satellite Heart." The Flaming Lips formed from "various cool-hip circles." They have gone through two major member changes and are now on a national label, touring with a major band.

It is not the charisma of the band on stage, it is their influential rock that makes a person say "wow." It is a wonder why The Flaming Lips were not discovered ten years ago when they released their first album.

Hartung Theater Auditions

Auditions for the next Hartung Production, Dancing at Lughnasa, are today and Monday, Oct. 10 from 2:30 to 5:30 p.m. Fall backs are Oct. 12 at 2:30 p.m.

Today's auditions are in the Collette Theatre in the U-Hut. Auditions Oct. 10 and 12 are in the Arena Theatre in the same building. Auditions are open to UI students and non-students.

Scripts are available for 24-hour check-out at the Theatre Arts Department office in the U-Hut. For more information, contact Forrest Sears at the Theatre Arts Department.

Fun Flicks Returns

On Oct. 14, ASUI productions will present a repeat performance of Fun Flicks from noon to 6 p.m. in the Student Union Vandal Lounge. Make your own music video, or star in a mini-movie complete with costumes, special effects and soundtrack.

Come as an individual, or come as a group. Free to UI undergraduates.

Folklife Festival seeks entrants

The Northwest Folklife Festival from May 26-29 in Seattle is seeking applications. Entrants can be performers, food vendors and crafts people from Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana, Alaska, and British Columbia. For more information, contact David Mandapat at (206) 684-7300.

Kappe Lecture Series

Davis L. Ford, Ph.D, president of Davis L. Ford and Associates, will lecture on "Applying traditional Biological Science to Non-Traditional Bioremediation Cleanup, Superfund and Non-Superfund Hazardous Waste Sights" on Oct. 25, 3:30 p.m. in Janssen 104 Auditorium.

SWE Plans Activities

The UI chapter of the Society of Women Engineers (SWE) proposed field trips, intramural teams and bowling as possible activities this year at their first meeting Tuesday night.

Chapter president Mickie Bielenberg introduced the other officers — Amy Reed, vice president; Abbie Parker, secretary; Jill Mays, treasurer; and Nichole Goeden, public relations officer.

The purpose of SWE is to inform students of opportunities, offer scholarships and help women in engineering to support one another, said Bielenberg.

"Despite the name, men are welcome to attend," said Bielenberg.

Future meetings of SWE will be the first Tuesday of every month at 6:30 p.m. in room 321 of the Janssen Engineering Building. The next meeting, Nov. 1, will feature a guest speaker from the Cooperative Education Office.

Latin Festival Saturday

The International Friendship Association is sponsoring a dinner on Oct. 8 at 6 p.m. The festival features costumes, live music, exhibits, food and handicrafts. The dinner is prepared by the students. The festivities begin at 6 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom. Tickets are $6 for adults and $3 for children under 10 years. Tickets may be purchased at the door. For more information, contact the IFA at 885-7841.

Recycling Competition

The American Plastics Council (APC) and the American Institute

Dancers perform as part of Latin American Week in the UI Vandal Lounge at the Student Union last Tuesday. On Oct. 8 the International Friendship Association presents a traditional Latin Festival dinner in the Student Union Ballroom beginning at 6 p.m.

of Chemical Engineers (AIChE) are co-sponsoring a Plastics Recycling Competition. The competition is open to undergraduate students across North America.

Students must write a comprehensive technical report that outlines a process for recycling mixed plastics that have been separated from municipal solid waste. The system must convert the post-use plastics into marketable petrochemical products through advanced recycling technologies (ART).

Students wishing to participate must first complete a form verifying their eligibility. Entrants must be full-time undergraduates currently attending a four-year accredited college or university in North America and have the permission of their faculty advisors.

For more information call (212) 705-7840.

SIA Will Discuss Activities

Today at 4:30 the Students' International Association (SIA) will meet to discuss and plan social activities and international events. If you or your group have any international concerns please feel free to come and share them. The meeting is in UCC 103. All students, U.S. and international, are invited and refreshments will be served. For more information, contact Mary Furnari at 885-6757.

College Model Contest

up will appear as models in a national magazine. The contest is open to college women ages 18-26 who have never been married. The entrant must be a full or part-time student. For application and information send a self-addressed stamped envelope to Susan Peterson, National College Director, 5400 W. Cheyenne #1098 Las Vegas, NV 89108.

Sparrowgrass seeks poetry

Sparrowgrass Poetry Forum's new "Awards of Poetic Excellence" seeks entries of 20 lines or less, any subject, any style for a contest and anthology. The deadline is Nov. 10. Cash prizes totaling $1,000 are awarded. Entries go to: Sparrowgrass Poetry Forum, Inc. Dept. L 203 Diamond St., Sistersville, WV 26175.

The Vision is more than beauty

Amy Ridenour
Lifestyles Editor

Haunting, melodious, and calming. These are the words that describe Vision. Vision is a complicated musical conglomeration, to say the least. Its story goes far beyond the typical one for most albums.

According to a release from Angel Records, "Vision" is a collaboration between two creative artists who never met." The music is based on ancient chants by Hildegard von Bingen, a German mystic and prophet who lived from 1098 to 1179. The music is arranged by Richard Souther, a contemporary musician.

Von Bingen, a woman ahead of her time, taught about the rights of women, their honor in the world, and their role in the church. Von Bingen composed music that reflected her thoughts, beliefs and philosophies, all of which are universal and true today.

She has a Kahlil Gibran-type quality to her philosophy: "There is the Music of Heaven in all things and we have forgotten how to hear it until we sing." And also, "Just as the body takes delight in good food, so the soul takes delight in good works." Souther has taken these philosophies and chants and arranged them on this album. The chants are performed by Sister Germaine Fritz, a Benedictine nun, and Emily Van Evera, a world renowned vocalist and historian. The chants are accompanied by contemporary music.

The music and the chants are arranged in such a way that the listener is transported to a quieter, safer place. There is a spirit involved, an inner peace that can be found. The listener needs only to close their eyes for a moment and they can then hear the message in the music. The chants are haunting, they are lovely, they reverberate through the mind, echoing their promise.

The CD will be available Nov. 1 at music stores everywhere. The CD contains a 32 page booklet with historical notes, lyric translations, and the tip of von Bingen's apothecary. There is also a bibliography of her life, work and art.

I encourage anyone interested in hearing a sound other than the typical grunge, rap, country, or classical stuff that we usually find in the music stores to branch out and try this, I guarantee buyers won't be disappointed.

Not only is this a musical album, it is an historical account of a woman with a vision.

'Burn' entertaining, unrealistic

Kate Maresh
Staff

The basic premise of Lanford Wilson's Burn This — the dancer Anna falling in love with the ruff and crude Pale — is absolutely unbelievable.

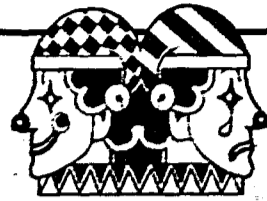

In the play, a month after Anna's roommate Robbie dies, his brother Pale shows up drunk at 5 in the morning to pick up Robbie's things. They fall for each other, she breaks up with her boyfriend, etc.

The whole concept is wistful thinking on the part of the author. The two lead characters are blatantly mismatched stereotypes. Fortunately Kelly Quinnett gives a great enough performance of Anna that for long periods of time I could forget that she was just the "girl." Actually, the play flows well up until the arrival of Pale.

In Pale's first scene with Anna, Wilson lets the dialogue ramble on and on, establishing no sense of connection between the characters. The scene is awkward, things just do not click, and there is no chemistry happening. The whole scene might have been more effective if they just jumped straight into bed.

I do not believe that Anna would have slept with him — with or without the dialogue — no matter how grief-stricken she was. The scene was pointless. All that it left me with was a sense that Pale would be just as much of a bastard drunk as sober.

Theater Review

The improbability of Pale and Anna's relationship (or lack thereof) is for the most part not the fault of the actors. If Wilson had given the characters half of the personality that he gave to Larry, Anna's homosexual roommate, the play would have been flawless.

Burton, the spurned boyfriend, is another interesting character, but unfortunately Andy Wyke's delivery is too wooden.

Because of Wyke's stilted performance, I kind of brushed off Burton until his last scene. That scene, the one between Larry and Burton, is Wyke's most sincere and effective acting of the night. It is really the best part of the play, the emotional event that the whole thing has been building to.

I could have sat and watched an entire play of the other three characters interacting and not have noticed anything missing. In fact, the directions that the plot would have taken without Pale would have made a much stronger play. I wish that Wilson would have been bold enough to let the play stand alone on its subplot: Larry.

The play would have died without

Larry, superbly played by Carey Gibbar. The whole play rolls forward under the steam of his wit. The awkward parts happen when he is off stage. Wilson gives so many tantalizing glimpses of Larry, with his mysterious phrases that leave the audience hanging. Too many questions about Larry are left unanswered and I would much rather know his story than Pale's.

I personally enjoyed most of the play. Of course, Larry is on stage quite a bit to save the rest of the characters from their dullness.

I would go just to see Quinnett and Gibbar interact together on stage. The scenes between Anna and Larry are very entertaining, hilarious and touching. Quinnett and Gibbar make the play come to life.

The Collette Theatre is located just north of the Administration Building and diagonal from the Art and Architecture Building. The theatre is in the U-Hut, an army green building on the corner. Burn This is playing through Oct. 9.

Bike race to donate T-shirts

If you would give the shirt off your back to go on a bike ride with friends, don't miss the "Shirt off your back" mountain bike ride.

This 10 kilometer ride is not a race, but is intended for friends to meet friends and get out on the road. The only cost to participants is two dollars and the aforementioned shirt, actually two clean used T-shirts. The shirts will be awards for participants finishing the ride. Each finisher will select one T-shirt as a souvenir. Those left will be donated to a local charity.

The ride will start at the University of Idaho Administration Building parking lot at 9 a.m. tomorrow. A drawing will be held and prizes awarded after the ride. The following sponsors have donated for this program: Follett's Mountain Sports, Paradise Creek Bicycle, Intrepid Water Sports, Northwest Mountain Sports and Little Bear Bike Works.

It is recommended riders wear a helmet and obey all traffic laws.

Huff'n Puffin Fun Run Oct. 8

A Moscow tradition will be renewed Saturday morning. The Huff'n Puffin Fun Run will live again.

Participants for the 11th edition of this 5 or 10 kilometer race should gather at the Eggan Youth Center early enough to be ready for the 10 a.m. starting time.

"This fun run is intended for all who wish to participate, especially those who, like the name suggests, will be huffing and puffing," said race co-organizer Tereee Sheckler of Campus Rec. "It's certainly not reserved for elite long distance runners."

"This fun run is a combined community effort promoted jointly by the university and the City." Said the other half of the race organizing team, Gina Richardson of Moscow Parks and Recreation. "This fun run is for everybody; youngsters, oldsters, all types of people run or walk the route."

Day of race registration will start at 9:30 a.m. The registration fee is $12, the fun run registration fee is $4. Organizers suggest you be one under 12 years of age please.

Rifle season set to begin Oct. 10

Dave Claycomb
Staff

Oct. 10 marks the beginning of what looks to be a great season for both deer and elk for hunters who hunt with a rifle in Idaho.

Although a few panhandle units have off-setting seasons, deer and elk season will be open at the same time in most units. To be certain of season regulations check the big-game regulations for the area in which you intend to hunt.

Most bow hunters have found that the elk were just beginning to start talking as their season ended, so rifle hunters may find themselves hunting in the middle of the rut next week. It is exciting to hear a big bull bugle in the mists of morning.

"I think if bow season had run all the way up to the start of rifle season, we (bow hunters) would have had a lot better luck," said local bow hunter and University of Idaho student Greg Gridley. The recent change in weather should help to keep the elk bulging as well.

All but one of the panhandle units have a season for either sex of elk, so hunters who are strictly after meat should try these northern areas. All of the units in the state should produce well too, however.

"We've had record or near record harvests in the last several years and we expect that to continue through this season," said Jack Trueblood of the Idaho Dept. of Fish and Game's Headquarters office. "With virtually no winter kill, this should be a great year."

Deer hunters can expect the rut to begin in mid-November. Several units have late season hunts on white-tailed deer only, so be sure you're hunting for the correct species of deer.

If you're an out-of state student, you may find it difficult to purchase an elk tag.

Difficult as in impossible. The Idaho Dept. of Fish and Game said they have been sold out of non-resident elk tags since early August. Plan ahead next year and buy your elk tag early.

The outlook for deer tags is not so glum however. Fish and Game said they still had 2,500 nonresident deer tags left.

Anyone purchasing a non-resident license and deer tag can expect to spend some serious money though. Nonresident hunting licenses are $101, and nonresident deer tags are $226.

Trueblood also wanted to let hunters know that if they have any questions about hunting in the state of Idaho, they could use the Idaho Fish and Game Public Access Computer Bulletin Board. The number for that is 334-3958 or 1-800-217-0603 within the state of Idaho and anyone with a telephone or a modem can access the information.

Anyone who goes hunting next week should obey all Fish and Game rules and regulations. One regulation that many hunters ignore has to do with check stations. Anyone who has been hunting and comes upon a check station must stop.

Many hunters who were not successful may not know this and often drive by, thinking they are exempt.

This is not true, however. All hunters are required to check in because officers at the check stations record data on animals killed, information on areas that were hunted, number of animals seen, and other facts used to compile the regulations from year to year.

One practice that is not required in this state is that hunters are not required to wear hunter orange. The Dept. of Fish and Game does recommend using it though. "We had no hunting related firearm deaths in the state last year, and we attribute this both to self imposed safety measures used by hunters as well as the influence of the hunter education classes," said Trueblood.

Many local businesses are offering deals on hunting equipment for the upcoming season. "We have some great deals on hunting packages," said Ian Sampson of Gart Bros. "People are really getting a good deal on the rifle/scope com-

Clarkia hunter scores big this season

Dave Lewis
Outdoors Editor

Hunters in the Clarkia, Idaho area rely on Chuck Skilling for all their elk hunting needs.

Chuck and his wife Valerie own and operate the CV Stop, a gas, grocery and sporting goods store in beautiful downtown Clarkia.

Skilling is an excellent source of information about elk hunting. He has spent many days exploring in the woods and knows where the elk are. "The amount of elk is real good this year. They've been hanging down real low in the creek bottoms, because of the dry conditions we have had. I think they will stay low until we get a little rain."

Skilling said it is good there are plenty of elk around this year because there are plenty of hunters too. "For the last two weeks lots of guys have been out setting up their camps and getting ready for opening day of rifle season. They come in to buy elk bugles, cow talkers, and of course many buy ammunition too. They must be target practicing or sighting in their rifles." He knows his business and says, "If it has to do with elk hunting we probably sell it."

Admittedly, Clarkia is in the boonies, nestled between timbered slopes and clear-cuts, 50 miles northeast of Moscow on Highway 3 and the St. Maries River.

A sign at the Clarkia area motorcycle race track and fossil digging site Fossil Bowl reads "85th and Plum." It means Clarkia is 85 miles from Spokane, plum out in the middle of nowhere. However, good hunters know that is where the elk are.

Clarkia is a jumping off point for the back country. The main road into the Floodwood area, Marble Creek and Avery all begin at the Old Clarkia School junction. Several other all-weather roads also connect with the county road at the school junction. Another graveled Forest Service road a few miles north of Clarkia, where Highway 3 crosses the St. Maries River, allows access to the Blackwell Hump-Crystal Peak area. These are main roads that are normally not gated during hunting season.

Skilling, a native of the great lakes region, was born in Sturgeon Bay Wis. He found Clarkia in the late 1970s while touring the west on his motorcycle. After 10,000 miles he had trouble in Clarkia. He explains it this way, "I had a flat tire here and haven't been able to get out of town since. And I don't want to either."

Skilling must have liked what he saw because he bought one of only two retail businesses in town. He re-modeled the building and redesigned the merchandise with his interest in the outdoors in mind.

At CV Stop the old saying is true as far as elk hunting equipment goes: "If you can't find it at CV Stop you can probably get along without it."

The number of elk around Clarkia must be good, because the six point bull elk Skilling killed with his bow this season was the 58th elk he saw. It was a large elk to say the least, scoring 285 on the Pope and Young scoring system.

Skilling might know where the elk are, but he is not likely to be specific when sharing information. When asked where he shot the big bull, he reply was simple. "Right behind the shoulder." At least he didn't say he shot it on Notellum Ridge.

Hunters can store meat in locker

Dave Lewis
Outdoors Editor

When a hunter bags a big game animal the fun is over and the work begins.

Depending on where the animal is killed and how warm the weather is, speed could be of the essence. It takes only a few hours for a carcass left in the sun to spoil, so the hide should be removed as soon as possible and the meat covered to prevent flies from getting on it.

Unless the hunter is incredibly lucky the carcass will be quartered for backpacking anyway, but even if the animal could be loaded whole it should halved at least to let the best part of the meat, the tenderloin, cool out efficiently.

If the successful hunter is a student living in a dorm room there are big storage problems. However, there are businesses catering to big game hunters. C and L Locker Company will store, cut and wrap wild meat for $.40 per pound if they have space available. They will also grind meat if the successful hunters cut the meat themselves.

They also rent freezer lockers to store wild meat or anything else that needs cold storage. The temperature inside is a cool minus five degrees Fahrenheit. The rent for a 12 cubic foot locker is $35 for six months or $60 for a year.

Another business cutting wild meat is Potlach Pack in Potlach, Idaho.

Their prices are comparable to C and L Locker as is their rule of only storing meat they cut and wrap.

Neither of these business have time to pick hair off the meat so be careful to leave the hair on the hide when working up your elk.

Fires still hazards

Dave Lewis
Outdoors Editor

Hunters heading into the forests in search of a wily elk this fall should be aware of forest fire activity.

"Fire activity on the Clearwater National Forest is slowing, but hunters and other recreators should be aware of fire locations and potential hazards," said a prepared statement from the Clearwater National Forest. On the North Fork Ranger District two fires have been controlled, but two continue to burn.

The 95 acre Aquarius Fire two miles southwest of Canyon Work Center is controlled, as is the 1,442 acre Slam Creek Fire on the Idaho-Montana border.

The fires that continue to burn are the 270 acre Elmer fire and the 235 acre Isabella Fire in the Mallard-Larkin primitive area. Helicopter water drops are slowing the fire's spread towards Goat Creek.

There are four fires burning on the Lochsa Ranger District in the Selway-Bitterroot Wilderness. All four show signs of slowing.

The 250 acre Horse Camp Fire showed only minor activity recently burning along Horse Camp trail in brush and on the ground.

The 200 acre Cliff #1 Fire showed no activity. It is located north of Shasta Lake between Surprise and Cliff Creeks.

The 625 acre Sponge Mountain

Fire located south of Highway 12 showed minor activity along Stanley Creek, near Trail 206 one mile east of Long Lake. Hunters may find fallen trees weakened by the fire.

Farther up the Lochsa River on the Powell Ranger Station there are several fires burning.

The king of lions hunts

When I was a young lad I was crazy about Tarzan stories. By the time I was in Junior High School, I had read every one of Edgar Rice Burrough's books and I never missed a Johnny Wisemiller movie. The influence of these stories and movies led me to feel I would love to go on an African Safari and see the beautiful country and animals.

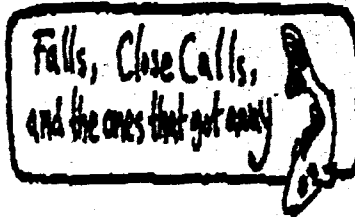

After World War II, I met Gene Grossclose when he was home on furlough. He lived near Juliaetta when he was home, but was stationed in Africa writing the history of that theater of the war.

He also hunted every spare minute. It would be through Gene that I would finally realize my dream of an African safari.

Gene said he would take me on a safari if I could get myself to Africa. I had to work my way over there on a cargo ship, but I met Gene in Tankami, Ethiopia.

It was a super safari and hunt. Gene was after water buffalo this time and I took many pictures. I did no killing on these hunts because there was but one animal I was interested in bagging; the king of beasts — the Lion King.

The time to hunt the king of beasts finally came and we moved camp farther up river into lion country. We began our hunt the next morning. When we spotted our lion, Gene gave me the honor of the stalk.

I began my long awaited stalk by keeping a large tree between that lion and me. When I reached the tree and peeked around there was the biggest lion I had ever seen, only 75 yards away. He was at least 15 feet long.

I leaned against the tree, took careful aim and squeezed off a round. I couldn't believe I missed, but I had. The bullet had apparently passed through his mane.

It took that lion only a few seconds to locate me, and he was raging mad. He began to hunt me. I tried once more to kill the beast but the gun jammed. I looked for my partner, but Gene was nowhere to be seen. I glanced at the lion; he was on the trot coming right at me. I looked for the gun bearer for an extra rifle but he had vanished too. Probably up a tree, I thought.

Again I glanced at the lion king; he was on full charge now. What was I to do? Obviously I could not outrun him.

I looked up to the Lord for help and there growing out of the tree above me was a huge overhanging limb. However, the limb was 20 feet up. One more glance at the lion and I knew 20 feet up or not I would have to give it a try.

I took one step back and with the lion mere feet away, I made my leap.

Ladies and Gentlemen, I'm sorry to say that I missed that limb completely. Fortunately for me I caught it on the way back down!

Enrichment program sets trip dates

Mountain Bike through Utah

The trip to Utah will combine mountain biking on great single track and camping in spectacular scenery.

This trip can be taken for two college credits. However, enrollment is strictly limited to no more than 12 participants. Places will be filled on a first come first served basis.

Participants will spend 10 days in the Canyonlands of Southwestern Utah.

Moab, Utah is Mecca for mountain bikers. Even the names evoke thoughts of adventure. Slick Rock Trail, Onion Creek, Jackass Canyon and Poison Spider Mesa, Pritchett Canyon and Merrimac/Monitor Trail are locations to which intrepid biker trippers will ride.

Those planning to ride will need a good mountain bike. Mountain bike rentals are available through the Washington State University Outdoor Program.

Bikers should be in good physical condition and be ready for a challenging experience. Dr. Mike Kinziger will lead the trip. He has extensive experience guiding trips through the Canyonlands.

Van transportation, bike shuttle, instruction, breakfast and evening meals, cooking gear and some group equipment will be provided. Participants will be responsible for their sleeping bag and personal equipment.

Three pre-trip orientation sessions will be required. These meetings will be scheduled in the evening.

Cost for the trip is $290, which includes:

- Round trip transportation from Moscow.

- Breakfast and Dinners.

Participants are responsible for their own mid-day meals.

- Special equipment.

- Instruction.

Participants will leave March 17 and return March 26.

To register, pick up a brochure and fill out the registration form at the bottom. Return the form with $50 non-refundable deposit to the University of Idaho Enrichment Program. For more information call the UI Enrichment Program at 885-6486.

Mexico will be hard to skip

Exploring the ancient art of Baja Mexico is the focus of a spring break trip offered by UI Enrichment Program.

From modern day crayon doodles on the kitchen wall all the way back to cave paintings done at the dawn of time, Homo sapiens have always expressed their feelings through art.

The trip to Mexico, scheduled for March 18-26, will provide a great opportunity to study early art. The rock art on the Baja Peninsula offers splendid examples of early human creativity.

The itinerary includes:

- Exploring dramatic examples of the great mural tradition of Baja cave painting.

- Examining ancient petroglyphs and pictographs.

- Investigating Spanish colonial missions.

- Shopping for bargains and dining on seafood and Mexican cuisine at its best.

- Strolling along miles of white sand beaches on the Pacific Coast and The Sea of Cortez.

- Basking in balmy waters in the private coves and scenic bays.

- Tackling incredible sport fishing at its finest.

The cost of this trip is $1074, single or $849 double occupancy.

The price includes economy air transportation on Alaska Airlines from Spokane to San Diego. Land transportation from San Diego throughout the itinerary will be in a 15 passenger van. The price of the trip also includes all hotels, breakfasts and a complimentary cocktail upon arrival. All personal expenses and meals other than breakfast are the responsibility of the participant. Hotel gratuities and the services of an escort are also included.

One or two credits can be earned on this trip. There is no additional cost for full-time UI students registered for the spring semester. Idaho teachers wanting to receive credit will pay a special inservice rate of $28.50 per credit. For non-Idaho teachers the cost is $154 per credit.

A $100 deposit per person is required with the balance due Jan. 11, 1995.

To register with VISA or MasterCard, call the Enrichment Program at (208)885-6486, or mail a check to UI Enrichment Program, University of Idaho, Moscow, ID 83844-3224.

Rec. club goes camping

Recreation Club members and guests are headed to Moose Creek Reservoir Campground and looking forward to camp fire songs, Dutch oven cooking and a fishing derby.

The Rec. Club camp-out is tonight. Chris Klingon-Smith, the special events coordinator for Rec. Club says, "Everyone should bring their favorite meat to grill tonight at the barbecue. I am cooking potatoes in Dutch ovens, and I know we will have a fine feast." Breakfast will be provided Saturday morning.

Water at Moose Creek Campground is not potable so bring drinking water as well as snack food and whatever you need to keep warm.

Moose Creek Reservoir Campground is 35 miles east of Moscow, on the last road to the left before Bovill. The lake is about two miles off Highway 8.

Britt Drewes, Rec. Club president said, "The camping trip is a good time to get together as sort of a family. It's a good time to bond. The Rec. Club has been busy this year, as always, selling programs at the football games and getting ready for their Thanksgiving banquet. This weekend is a chance to kick back and just veg-out."

The fishing derby is Val Hemsley's program. Registration will begin at 7 a.m. Saturday morning and continue until noon. Prizes will be awarded.

four miles northwest of the Fish Lake Air Strip is almost out, as is the 8,212 acre Freezeout Fire which showed only minor activity yesterday.

A crew of 20 fire fighters contained the 50 acre Bear Fire at Bear Mountain. Some snags continue to burn.

Two inches of snow quieted the 736 acre East Beaver Fire. The fire is located 2 1/2 miles from Beaver Ridge Lookout.

Snow also helped fire fighters on the Parachute Creek fire. It took only 3/4 inches of snow there, however.

The following trails are closed due to fires: Army Mule, Fern Ridge, Long Lake, Eagle Mountain and Pedro Ridge.

High-powered offense meets tough D

Andrew Longeteig
Sports Editor

The University of Idaho football team is hard to please. Geez, they're downright stubborn.

"We still made too many mistakes," head coach John L. Smith said, referring to last week's win over Idaho State.

There was certainly no mistake about the Vandals' 70-21 annihilation of the Bengals. Hell, what would the score be if we played well?

Idaho would make the scores of the 1985 Laker basketball team seem fluctuated.

"A football team that's averaging 54 points a game and that has only thrown one interception," EWU head coach Mike Kramer said, "is always going to be a real threat."

The Vandals take their No. 4 ranking and undefeated record into Cheney, Wash. to face the Eastern Washington University Eagles (2-2, 1-1 Big Sky) Saturday at 11:07 in Woodward Stadium.

Idaho boasts the No. 1 ranked total offense at 590 yards per game.

The Vandal offense isn't the only one scoring points, however.

Idaho's defense has produced 13 turnovers, all of which led to scores. Defenders Tommy Knecht, Ryan Phillips and Cole Wilson

Fore! Golfers swing into Big Sky tourney

Andrew Longeteig
Sports Editor

The University of Idaho women's and men's golf teams will travel to Eden, Utah for the Big Sky Championships Oct. 9-11.

Last year, both teams finished fourth place in the tournament.

However, Don Rasmussen, the women's coach, said the "goal is to better that."

There are teams to watch out for, though.

"Idaho State, Montana and Montana State have raised the caliber of their programs," Rasmussen said of the women's teams.

Each Big Sky team is allowed to take five players from both squads.

Marci Bernhardt, Kathryn Cassens, Cori Omundson, Darcy Ritz and Kellee Vosberg will represent UI. One of the Vandals' better players, Jennifer Tesch will not make the trip due to illness.

On the men's side, Rasmussen noted the strength of ISU's and Boise State's programs.

The men are coached by Dan Koesters.

Koesters is taking Wade Balliote, Chris Blayne, Jason Hicks, J.T. Jones and John Twining.

Last year, Weber State won the men's championship and Boise State the women's.

Tournament scoring consists of taking the top four scores for each team, then adding them together.

'Jacks, 'Cats pay friendly visit to Memorial Gym

Dan Eckles
Staff

With Big Sky Conference foes Weber State and Northern Arizona making their annual trek to the Palouse, the Idaho Vandals will look to extend their nine match winning streak in NCAA volleyball action this weekend.

Idaho (16-1, 3-0 BSC) jumped to No. 20 in the Tachikara Coaches Poll on Tuesday after throttling border rivals Washington State and Eastern Washington last week. WSU, which was No. 20 last week, dropped two slots to No. 22 this week. Idaho, which bolted into the national poll three weeks ago, is the only team in Big Sky history to be nationally ranked. In addition to the coaches poll, the Vandals are ranked No. 17 in Volleyball Monthly magazine.

Off to their best start in school history, the Vandals still need to be leery of their opponents this weekend, especially NAU. The Lumberjacks have had the Vandals number in recent years taking five of the last six meetings between the two schools. NAU is the last conference team to beat the Vandals in Memorial Gym. That win came nearly two years ago on Nov. 12, 1992. Idaho has reeled off 20 consecutive home wins since.

The Flagstaff, Ariz. based club is 9-6 on the year, but only 1-3 in BSC play. Weber State is 6-7 and 2-2 in BSC matches.

"They're both pretty good. NAU has some impressive wins, but they haven't played well since league started and I think Weber is solid," Vandals coach Tom Hilbert said. "I think they are both better than they were last year. We will need to be focused and ready to go."

If the Vandals need to be focused NAU and Weber State will need to be more mentally focused, than they have ever been. Idaho has the top winning percentage of any Division I team in the nation with a loss. Four Division I schools are currently undefeated.

Outside hitters Tzvetelina Yanchulova and Mindy Rice have led an Idaho offense that is the first in the country to reach 1,000 kills. Yanchulova is fourth in kills per game with a 5.5 average and 801 total while Rice has earned the tenth spot by pounding 678 for a 5.1 average.

The Vandals are the only Division I team to boast two players in the top 20 in kills per game average. Yanchulova and Rice have provided at least half of Idaho's kills in each match this season.

"We want as a team to improve in certain areas. We want to be more evenly distributed and we would like to block better," Hilbert said. "Our success so far has come from siding out and digging balls and we need to continue to do those things."

have scored one touchdown apiece.

"It's (Idaho) a team that seeks the turnover and seeks to destroy you with the turnover," said Kramer, an ex-Vandal player.

Idaho has been experimenting with a 3-4 defense which features four linebackers and three down linemen. Traditionally the Vandals use a 4-3 defense.

"We use it to get an extra guy in coverage," defensive end Barry Mitchell said. Mitchell leads the team with five sacks.

Meanwhile, the Eagle defense is ranked third in the country against the run, allowing 49 yards per game. This is attributed to EWU's talented defensive linemen, all of whom are seniors.

"(Craig) Steinmetzer had a hell of a game against us last year," Idaho offensive lineman Jay Lukes said. "He's going to give us a lot of problems inside."

Steinmetzer isn't the only one. Defensive end Tob Aronow is among the Big Sky leaders in sacks with six. Another lineman, Troy Alexander, is second on the team in sacks and fourth in tackles.

Lukes said, "As an entire front four, it will probably be the best front four we see all year."

Kramer, however, has other worries.

"We're real concerned about the temperament of our secondary and the ability of our secondary to make big plays," he said.

The Eagles' secondary is giving up 311 yards per game in the air. Last week, they surrendered 337 against Division II power Portland State.

“A football team that's averaging 54 points a game and that has only thrown one interception is always going to be a real threat.”

Quarterback Eric Hisaw and the Vandal receiving corps must be frothing at the mouth. Against ISU, Hisaw threw for a career-high 374 yards on 17-of-26 passes. He has thrown 12 touchdown passes with one interception.

Senior wide receiver Kyle Gary is also having his best season to date. He is second in the Big Sky in catches per game and had a career-best 153 yards receiving last week.

EWU's 31-21 loss to PSU last week could be a factor.

"After a loss, they're going to be rip-roaring and ready to go," Smith said, who owns a 48-18 record in Big Sky action.

Morrison seeks change

Matt Shifley
Staff

As the years go by, people and times tend to change, and now you can add the intramural program to that list.

The first alteration for the program is the new director, Greg Morrison.

Morrison began at Montana State as an intramural official in 1986. In 1991, he came to Idaho, and through campus recreation he did his masters and graduate assistantship. He then worked for Pullman Parks & Recreation last year before being hired this past August as University of Idaho's intramural director.

"I love the job, it's great, it is a little more than I expected because it's a lot of work trying to keep everyone busy, in line, and all the leagues going," Morrison said.

He commended his two grad assistants, Andria Scanlan and Mia Stivers, for helping him out with score sheets and setting up events.

Another change for the program is a sportsmanship rating system, which could begin as early as next semester for intramural basketball.

"I'm trying to get a little more sportsmanship back in the system, to get people to understand intramurals is important to all of us but it is not professional sports, it's a social activity," Morrison said. "It is a lifetime sport activity where we want to teach people how to stay physically active playing sports without the complaining."

Morrison said he could not say for sure how the sportsmanship system would work, but basically the officials would be evaluating teams. Then, they would rate them A, B, C, or D, and you must have a B average to make the playoffs.

So, if you win all your games but your team plays like Dennis Rodman, you probably won't get to the second round. If all the details are worked out it, the system will start for only basketball this year.

If you have been competing in intramurals lately, then you have already felt the wrath of one the new changes already taking place. No hats or bandannas.

"In my view, it is a safety issue. Intramural sports decided for the better of the program and for safety to make the rule, and I'm backed up by every rule book we use," said Morrison.

He also said he has seen too many strange things happen on the intramural fields. They are not going to take any chances with liability; safety is the most important issue.

Another idea being thrown around for next year is ideal for men of average height: a 6-foot and under basketball league.

The only drawback Morrison said would be finding enough gym space so it would not interfere with open recreation hours and having enough officials.

He had several options of remedying these problems. It would be either in the fall or have a tournament like the 3-on-3 tournament several weeks ago.

Finally, the office may start giving points to recreational teams and award them a trophy for being the overall points winner — an idea which Morrison is very fond of because he feels that these teams that play together throughout the year deserve some recognition.

Cross country fares well

Last Saturday, both University of Idaho men's and women's cross country teams competed.

The men finished ninth at the Sundodger Invitational in Seattle, Wash., while the women placed 10th at the Nike Invitational at the University of Minnesota.

Shelley Zickler led the Vandal women with a 10th place finish on the 5,000 meter course. The freshman's time was 17:57. Angie Mathison and Dawn Horvath finished 52nd and 53rd respectively with times of 19:02.

The men were led by Frank Bruder, as he placed 13th out of 73 runners. He recorded a time of 25:50.59 in the 8,000 meter run. Jason Uhlman was the second-best Idaho runner, earning a time of 26:38.99 which placed him 30th.
