Union construction moving slowly

Campus Copy Center now open, credit union on the way

Renovation of the University of Idaho Student Union will not be finished this semester due to problems completing and receiving approval of construction documents before the proposed date for beginning actual construction.

University officials had planned to construct a new food court during Christmas break. Since construction could not begin at that time, students will have to wait until midsummer before they see a Taco Bell or a Burger King on campus.

Despite the delays on the food court, other Student Union construction plans have resumed.

The Copy Center was moved from the basement of the Student Union to the main floor. The Copy Center has been open for a week now.

"We love the location, and the students seem to like it," said Jerlann Worthington, manager of the Copy Center. Worthington said the center now has two copiers that accept Vandal Cards, a fax service, and plans to install a color copier within six months.

The only problem with the place seems to be the heating.

"It runs between 85 and 90 degrees by the end of the day," said Worthington.

A credit union was one logical addition to the area, Student Union Director David Mucci said.

The Latah Federal Credit Union is located behind the Copy Center, but construction is not yet complete.

Latah Federal Credit Union President Glenda Hart said she hopes her office will be open in the Student Union by Feb. 1, but renovations at the main office on S. Washington St. are complicating plans to open the campus office.

The Latah Federal Credit Union was established in 1969 by UI employees and was named University of Idaho Federal Credit Union, said Hart. The office was located on campus until 1986.

"To me this is like coming home," said Hart, who worked at the UI office for six years.

Among the services provided by the credit union are checking and savings accounts, loans, ATM access, credit cards, a notary service and financial planning.

"The biggest advantage for students is that we care," Hart said. "Hopefully we can look at you differently."

Parking enforcers not hiding in bushes

Michelle Kalbeitzer

Many students speculate that the parking enforcers are lurking behind bushes in anticipation of the meter running out.

Joy Aldous, a sophomore at UI, spoke for many when she said, "It seems like the ticketers are merciless."

Last spring break Aldous lost the keys to her car and was unable to move it out of the gold parking lot before leaving on break. She even tried manually pushing it out of the parking space, but that just caused more problems. When Aldous returned six days later her car was plastered with six parking tickets. She considered this a bit extreme.

"It's really frustrating to try to find a parking space, and it's not worth it to buy a parking permit because there is never spaces available in the reserved lots," Aldous said about parking at UI.

Pam Alsterlund, manager of Parking and Information Services, said, "There is no general education money that goes to support parking." Funding comes from permit sales, meter revenues, special events and citations.

The parking enforcers manage to issue an average of 30,000 tickets a year. This feat seems amazing with only one full-time ticketer and two full-time equivalents working on writing tickets.

"Any money that comes into the Parking and Information Services stays within UI and benefits the university," Alsterlund said. Perhaps it will comfort students to know their paid tickets help support administrative costs, enforcement, bond repayments and maintenance.

Alsterlund said, "Sometimes people play the system." She has had people call in and ask how much a ticket will be if they parked at a meter or in a reserved lot without a parking permit.

She said their most common excuses are, "I was just there for a minute" and "You obviously hide behind bushes."

However, perks do exist for permit holders at no charge. It's called the Motorists Assistance Program, and it offers assistance in jump-starts, lock-outs, flat tires and an empty gas tank. All permit holders need to do is call.

Hats are off for the efficiency of the UI Parking Department. Sarah Dudley, a junior at UI, said, "I wish some of the other departments at the university worked as consistently and efficiently as the parking officials."

MLK III warns crowd of America's errors

PULLMAN—"It is a sad state of affairs that America finds herself in," said Martin Luther King III after a passionate overview of black history.

The oldest son of Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. spoke Wednesday at Washington State University to a Compton Union Auditorium audience. Eager listeners squeezed two to a chair and sat train-like in the lobby, cocking their ears for the inspirational speech.

"Individuals have made great strides, but masses are still suffering."

"A nation of people who do not understand their history are doomed to repeat the mistakes of the past," King said. Open your history books, he said, because what needs to be studied is all history of each of the ethnic groups that make up the population.

"Information is disseminated in a slanted way," he said, "objective and unbiased truths are rare." One of the chief aims of education is to teach one to think critically, he said, and encouraged the audience to find out for themselves if even what he said was true.

King opened his speech slowly, with endless thank-you's. Most of all, he said, his thanks go to the children. "A nation is judged by how it treats its most precious resource—its children," King said he was raised in a communal body—a sort of primitive information superhighway—that made sure the young were taken care of.

Today, he said, if young people can master Sega Genesis, they should be mastering other uses of computers. The same point is often made by members of the new congressional leadership, most of whose ideas King was disagreeable with. "You cannot blame the victims," King said of the right-wing attitudes towards welfare reform.

Don't ignore the sandman, everyone needs sleep

Melissa Ramsdell
Staff

The clock on the computer center wall seems to speed up as you try writing about T.S. Eliot's influence on paradigms of deconstructionism.

Next thing you know, the sun's coming up over the clock tower. You print your paper out and reach your professor's office just as the bells chime nine times.

That day in class, your psych TA catches you snoozing in the back row. Or worse, you skip the rest of your classes in favor of a well-earned 12-hour nap.

Yes, the all-nighter is a fact of college life. But researchers say sleep deprivation is bad for you. "At some point the sleep debt has to be paid," said Dr. Max Hirshkowitz, a sleep researcher at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston. "Eventually, the brain will demand sleep."

Problems associated with lack of sleep range from decreased productivity and reduced mental sharpness to increased risk of accidents. The National Commission on Sleep Disorders and Research estimates that sleep-related accidents cost a total of $46 billion each year.

Research shows that college students are chronically sleep-deprived.

For example, Bryan Marenstein, a University of Washington student, says he usually makes it to bed between 3 and 4 a.m., averaging six or less hours of sleep per night.

"Earlier in the quarter, I got a lot of sleep in the library—on the couches, the chairs, the ground—anywhere I could find a place to lie down," Marenstein said.

Most research experts agree that young adults need an average of seven to nine hours of sleep a night.

"But for whatever the reasons, maybe a combination between academic, social and work demands, students end up getting five or six hours on the average," said Michael Vitello, associate director of the University of Washington Sleep and Aging Research Program.

He cautioned against using caffeine, sleeping pills or alcohol as a crutch. "If you have a double espresso each morning, in a couple hours you may find yourself lower than before," Vitello said.

Follow these pointers from the University of Montana's Health Services to get a good night's sleep:

• Go to bed and rise at about the same times every day. Establishing a schedule helps regulate your body's inner clock. Also try to establish a "sleep routine" by following the same bedtime preparations each night, thereby telling yourself it's bedtime before you get in bed.

• Make sure your sleeping conditions, including your bed, are as comfortable as possible. If you are sharing your bed with a snoring, cover-stealing or restless partner, make separate, temporary sleeping arrangements until you re-establish a satisfactory sleeping pattern.

• Wear loose-fitting nightclothes. The more comfortable you are, the better you will sleep.

• Keep your bedroom darkened. If street lights shine in your room or if you must sleep during the day, buy room-darkening shades or blinds.

• Keep your bedroom as quiet as possible. If you can't block outside noise, "cover" it with a familiar inside noise such as the steady hum

Earn a degree with monthly payments

College Press Service

KENT, Ohio—Monthly mortgages and car payments are about as much of the American way of life as apple pie and baseball.

But paying for college traditionally has been different. Colleges often require tuition and fees to be paid upfront and do not allow students to register for classes until financial obligations are met.

Kent State University, however, hopes to make college more attainable for people by offering a regular payment schedule for tuition and fees.

Under the "Kent First" program, incoming freshmen and their families who choose the plan will be guaranteed no increases in tuition while they work toward a degree. Participants, who will know the total price of their degree upfront, will pay for part of their instructional and general fees with a down payment, then pay a fixed rate for the following 36 months.

"We have found a manageable way to keep higher education affordable," said Kent President Carol Cartwright.

The school stands to benefit from the plan by retaining more students, Cartwright added. Enrollment at KSU recently has dwindled, and the school has been losing students after their freshmen and sophomore years, often because of financial problems.

Study finds women die faster from AIDS

College Press Service

ST. PAUL, Minn.—Women who have AIDS die quicker than men suffering from the same disease, say researchers at the University of Minnesota.

The study, which was based on the medical records of 3,779 men and 768 women who were enrolled in various AIDS treatment centers across the nation, indicated that women were 30 percent more likely than men to die suddenly without ever developing ailments that are commonly associated with the disease.

Since a large number of HIV patients die at home or in non-medical settings, researchers say that specific information on the ultimate cause of death is often difficult to obtain.

"Some of the deaths may have been from AIDS-related disease, but there may have been other causes as well, such as violence, motor vehicle deaths and drug overdoses," says Sandra Melnick, who led the study and is an epidemiologist in the University of Minnesota's School of Public Health.

Already concluding that biological differences had no bearing on the difference in death rates between men and women with AIDS, UM researchers couldn't find any specific reasons for the disparity. They did say, however, that the differential may be a result of a variety of socioeconomic factors, including access to doctors and medication.

Researchers say that the men studied were mostly gay and white and had better access to treatment. They were more informed about the disease than the women. The women studied were usually black or Hispanic, and many had a history of intravenous drug use.

Reports of AIDS cases among women have increased by 20 times since 1981, representing almost 15 percent of all U.S. AIDS cases, according to the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Two ASUI Senators Meet Idaho Legislature

Melica A. Johnson

Staff

Two ASUI Senators traveled south to Boise over Christmas break to meet with various Idaho legislators.

"We went to just let them know who we are, to just kind of lay the foundation," said Bill Gilbert.

They had initially gone to hear Governor Phil Batt's budget address. The address was important to Gilbert and Megan Russell because they wanted to find out what Batt had to say about higher-education which is one concern of the University of Idaho.

Gilbert and Russell met with ASUI lobbyist Sean Strickler after the address. The three then spent the rest of the day meeting with Batt's staff members and talking to several different legislators from both the house and senate.

Gilbert and Russell spent a lot of time talking to the Latah County senators and representatives who handle a lot of UI issues.

During their visit, Gilbert and Russell were able to read over a copy of the pre-paid tuition bill (which allows parents to pay their children's tuition at today's rates, so when their children are grown their tuition is already paid).

They were also able to talk to the people in Boise about the possible changes coming in the engineering programs at Boise State University and UI.

Gilbert said the visit with the legislators was a good chance to let everyone know who they are and to exchange names.

"When the education budget comes along, or we need to speak for student rights, the money (allocation of the budget funds) can be used as best it can," said Gilbert about the future benefits resulting from their visit. Gilbert believes they have a lot more contacts now as a result.

"When we go back down there, and we already have the personal relationship," Gilbert said, "then they're going to be a lot more trusting and willing to hear your view and represent your choices."

Many legislators told Gilbert and Russell their doors are open for them to visit. Gilbert hopes these invitations will pay off later in the spring.

"Our job is to represent the students, and I don't think there are too many more effective ways," said Gilbert, "to represent the students than making sure their interests are well represented down in Boise because that's where it all comes from. We're a force down there to be reckoned with," said Gilbert.

ASUI President Sean Wilson has already been recognized many times by several legislators.

Gilbert believes Wilson is going to be a very effective president from what he has seen in his time at UI.

"He already was surprising. He already had a lot of people—legislators, senators—coming right up to him and saying, 'Hey Sean, how's it going?' and he's only been working for three or four days," said Gilbert.

"We have a great senate, to be honest. I think we're in for a really good semester. This senate is going to get along really well. I think it is a real professional group," said Gilbert.

Feds reintroduce wolves despite state objections

Russ Wright

Staff

Eleven more wolves are scheduled to be released into central Idaho today with six more being released in Yellowstone National Park.

These wolves will be the last to be reintroduced for the year. Fifteen more wolves are scheduled to be released in approximately one year in both areas.

The U.S. Department of the Interior and the Department of Fish and Wildlife went ahead with plans to reintroduce the animals into the United States despite evidence the wolves are recovering by themselves and over continuing objections from all of Idaho's congressional representatives and the state government.

Greg Nelson, a representative for the American Farm Bureau Federation, said the Idaho House of Representatives is in the process of writing a bill which contains "all the language the Fish and Wildlife department wouldn't accept" when negotiations were taking place between the federal government and Idaho.

"Basically, it says we didn't want the wolves in the first place," said Nelson. Before the negotiations were ended by the reintroduction of wolves last week, legislators had made an effort to draw up a wolf recovery plan acceptable to U.S. Fish and Wildlife officials.

The new bill, said Nelson, will likely pass both houses and be signed by Governor Phil Batt. What effect the bill will have is unclear, but Nelson says it could cause some problems for Fish and Wildlife officials.

Sharon Rose, a regional representative for the Fish and Wildlife department in Denver, said negotiations between Idaho's state government and the federal government have been going on for some time. Rose believes the controversy over the wolves, at least with regards to the state government, began with the change in administrations. Batt is firmly opposed to the plan.

Senators Larry Craig and Dirk Kempthorne sent a letter to Secretary of the Interior Bruce Babbitt stating their concerns about the reintroduction. The letter, dated Jan. 11, asked Babbitt to postpone reintroduction until "the ongoing lawsuits and appeals are resolved."

The federal government, however, has decided to proceed with the reintroduction. Georgia Parham, a U.S. Fish and Wildlife representative in Washington, D.C., said the department is going ahead with their plans despite litigative actions taken by two groups.

One of the groups is the American Farm Bureau Federation. It has filed a suit to stop the reintroduction of the wolves. Nelson believes the wolves will create problems for ranchers and their livestock in addition to the fears of land being designated as off-limits due to the presence of an endangered species.

Parham said all wolves will be radio-collared but both Rose and Parham could not speculate as to the costs involved if the wolves have to be recaptured in the event the suit is successful.

To date, the reintroduction plan has cost $6 million with an additional $6.8 million slated to be spent by 2002—the year the program is scheduled to end and by which time the federal government hopes the reintroduction program will have been declared a success.

Sightings of wolves in northern Idaho along with tracks have been reported in several newspapers along with claims that the wolves have been reintroducing themselves successfully by expanding their ranges down into Montana, Minnesota and now, apparently, northern Idaho. Parham said she had not heard of the sightings in northern Idaho.

Parham, however, concedes the wolves are expanding their range on their own and said the goal of the reintroduction of the wolves is to speed up their recovery which could have taken "decades longer" without the federal program. Officials hope 2002 will also be the year the wolf can be removed from the endangered species list.

According to an Associated Press story, Idaho state legislators approached Batt about the possible use of the National Guard or the Idaho State Police to stop the reintroduction, but the legislators decided to persuade Babbitt to stop the program instead.

Twelve wolves were imported from Canada last week with four being released into central Idaho's wilderness. The other eight were released into Yellowstone National Park in Wyoming. Rose said the Fish and Wildlife department will shut down its wolf operations in Canada next week.

Of the plan to eliminate the U.S. Department of Education, he said, it is one of many points in the "Contract With America" which are not the right course of action, he said.

To House Speaker Newt Gingrich, King had only a few words, "What comes around, goes around."

This country is going in a direction that is not good, King said, and student activism is needed to change that direction, as it has done in the past.

We must demand Hollywood to make movies not violent but creative, he said, because "You are what you consume," and violence and racism are at epidemic levels.

King, a human rights activist and civil rights leader, said it is not time to celebrate his father's birthday yet—but to observe it. Time for celebration will come only when America has produced the best, he said, when it cultivates self-reliance, self-determination and intelligence plus character for all humans, not just African Americans.

Martin Luther King Jr. would have been 66 years old last Sunday.

Community learns to live with its napalm

Tony Perry
Los Angeles Times

FALLBROOK, Calif.—Just west of this quiet farming community—a continent away from the stark, black wall in Washington that commemorates Americans killed in Vietnam—are three weedy and rocky fields that are host to an equally chilling, if less dignified, memorial to the same war.

The fields, part of the sprawling Fallbrook Naval Weapons Station, contain an enduring symbol of that divisive conflict: more than 35,000 canisters filled with 23 million pounds of napalm, a deadly brew of benzene, gasoline and polystyrene plastic that turns into a flaming syrupy mass when ignited by white phosphorous.

Twenty years have passed since the fall of Saigon, but the best and brightest have yet to find a way to dispose of the Vietnam War's final cache of liquid fire.

Like chemical combatants ready for inspection, the cigar-shaped, olive drab canisters are arranged in neat rows with military precision, each 10-foot-long canister encased in its own open-sided wood crate, row after row, acre after acre, exposed for two decades to the wind and sun and rain.

An eerie stillness envelops the napalm fields of Fallbrook, broken only by the muffled sounds of heavy artillery being used miles away by the

"I'm working for the person on the other side of the counter and not for some stockholder some-place," she said.

As for the food court, Mucci said full scale construction documents are required before construction can begin.

"The construction documents were not coming on line quick enough," Mucci said.

He added that if construction had begun, it would have been a very tight schedule. If the project had taken longer than the Jan. 17 deadline allowed, that would have meant a disruption of food services. Construction is now set to begin June 1.

Another upcoming renovation is that of the service elevator located in the back of the Student Union.

An integral part of the renovation is an overhaul of the elevator. The elevator needs to be improved to meet standards set by the Americans with Disabilities Act. After the renovation, the elevator will enable people with disabilities to access the second and third floors.

A previous proposal to build a completely new elevator in front of the building was rejected because of its $500,000 price tag. The current plan to retrofit the existing elevator will cost approximately $200,000 and will include a dumb waiter. Changes in the corridor leading to the elevator are also required.

"We didn't want our disabled community to feel like they were getting backdoor treatment," Mucci said.

As a result, the corridor will be opened up to create a more active, viable and exciting environment, he said.

Marines training at Camp Pendleton.

Some of the napalm canisters are still stamped with the manufacturer's 30-day warranty attesting to the contents' killing power. A few are leaking a gooey residue. Those that cannot be patched are taken to a toxic incinerator in Arkansas.

The specter of napalm bombs being dropped by American jets once aroused passionate debate, but the fate of this forgotten stockpile has now become a low-key battle of attrition, a bureaucratic mix of environmental concerns, budgetary restraints and governmental red tape.

The residents of Fallbrook, a rural and politically conservative community in Northern San Diego County, have learned to live with the napalm, which is said to be non-flammable without its detonators and with the occasional promise that there is light at the end of the hazardous waste tunnel.

Technicians and environmentalists, mindful that benzene is a carcinogen and that the crates are soaked with a toxic wood preserver, periodically check for leakage and air pollution. But mostly the canisters just serve as a staging area for jack rabbits, rattlesnakes and field rats.

After keeping the news media at bay for years, the Navy has decided to try to rehabilitate the weapon's image by allowing journalists to visit the napalm fields. Fallbrook residents have been offered tours.

"We're trying to demystify napalm," said Richard Williamson, spokesman for Naval Ordnance Center, Pacific Division, headquartered in Seal Beach.

Despite its horrific image among many Americans, troops in the field said napalm saved innumerable American lives by repelling advances by the Viet Cong and the North Vietnamese Army.

- Avoid alcoholic drinks—including beer or wine—before bedtime. When alcohol wears off during the night, you might wake up.
- Avoid too much mental stimulation during the hour or so prior to bedtime. Read a "light" novel or watch a relaxing TV program; don't finish homework or office paperwork or discuss finances with your family, for example.
- Avoid using your bedroom for working or watching television. Learn to associate that room with sleep.
- If you can't sleep, get up and pursue some relaxing activity—such as reading or knitting—until you feel sleepy. Do not lie in bed worrying about getting to sleep.
- Avoid daytime napping, which tends to fragment sleep at night.
- Avoid all caffeine-containing beverages after lunch. Remember that many soft drinks, as well as coffee and tea, contain caffeine.
- Try to get some exercise each day. Regular walks, bicycle rides or whatever exercise you enjoy may help you sleep better. However, avoid vigorous exercise later than three hours before bedtime.

So you want to be a columnist

In an effort to diversify the student voice in the Argonaut, we're looking for a few new columnists. If you've ever been upset by what a Argonaut columnist has written, if you have an opinion, if you want to make a difference, this job is for you. It's also important to note that we don't care if you're a flaming liberal or disillusioned conservative. What we do care about is that you care.

It should be noted, however, that we are looking for a conservative columnist who's willing to put his name and photo in black and white; this has been exceedingly difficult in past years. We hope that the new political climate will help develop this rarely read voice. In the event that we can not find a suitable conservative, the positions will be filled by other acceptable writers—we can only assume that they will represent a significant portion of "the students' voice."

There are a few guidelines, however. Applicants should be able to write well and have something to say. Writer's block is not allowed.

Applicants should also keep in mind they are offering their personal opinions to over 10,000 students, faculty and Moscow residents. There will be times when columns take off in glory. When they do, it's likely no one will let you know. When they crash and burn, you and everyone else will see your name in print in the letters to the editor section. Despite that, it's still a helluva lot of fun to share opinions with other people, who, if they really thought about it with an open mind for a minute, would have the same opinion as yourself.

To apply, application forms are available at the Student Media Desk on the third floor of the Student Union—fill it out, and submit two columns that accurately represent what you would like to write about in the Argonaut. They should be three-quarters of a page, typed and single-spaced. If hired, we'll pay you $25 every two weeks in exchange for two insightful and intelligent columns. Two columnist positions are currently open.

Along the same lines, we're looking for a movie reviewer. This is a new position, designed to give students a better idea of what's worth watching and what isn't. It'll be paid only with two free passes to all movies in the area, but the real benefit is that the reviewer will get the prestige of Siskel and Ebert. The only job requirements are entertaining yourself, and sitting through torturous movies like Don't Tell Mom The Babysitter's Dead. To apply, pick up an application and complete two reviews of recent movies (big screen or VHS) that are no longer than one page double-spaced each. For applicants who are interested in both positions, be sure to pick up two separate applications.

God bless the parking violator

When I grow up, I want to write parking tickets for a living. What profession could be more fulfilling than getting revenge for all of life's unfairness by fining unsuspecting college students for trivial parking violations?

There is a racket going on in Moscow, and its name is Parking Tickets. The chief perpetrators of this shady activity are the Moscow Police Department and the good ol' University of Idaho. I wouldn't be surprised if the Mafia were involved in this great money-making scheme, also. And what a money maker it is! By my calculations, if every UI student received the same amount of parking tickets this year as I already have, the Moscow P.D. and UI would receive $480,000 of cash revenue. Wow!

So, I understand why the city and the university would find parking tickets to be a good use of the police and the lackeys who write tickets on UI property. However, I am having trouble adjusting to the "Moscow Way of Life." You see, I come from a town where the police have more important things to do with their time, like arresting criminals. Nobody ever had to worry about whether they had parked "legally" or not, because frankly, nobody really gave a hoot, especially the police.

But as of Jan. 17, I have amassed three parking violations, and I am fed up with what I perceive to be nothing but a money-making scam on the part of a police station and a university that are apparently in cohorts with one another. I'm not going to be silent any longer.

The people who write these tickets apparently are either just plain stupid or suffer from mental retardation; I'm not sure which. Example one: My roommate had his tires stolen a while back. The day after I mentioned it in my column, the UI parking people had given him a ticket because he had a "disabled vehicle" in the parking lot. Excuse me, but it's kind of hard to move your car when somebody stole the tires!

What did they think my roommate did, decide to take his tires off for the fun of it? No, the ticket person probably just saw dollar signs and wrote the ticket as fast as he could.

Example two: I just received a ticket for "Parking in a Yellow Zone." Come on! The first four inches of my car were in the yellow zone! I could have backed up, but I thought the guy behind me might appreciate being able to move his car sometime!

I'm sure having those extra four inches of my car in the yellow zone probably could have caused some major traffic accident. Maybe if there was anywhere to park in Moscow, people wouldn't be so anarchists to have (gasp), four inches of their bumper in the yellow zone!

Anyway, if any of the Moscow P.D.'s Parking Ticket SWAT Team or the UI Parking Violation Tactical Unit are listening, I surrender! I have already had to fork over forty dollars in parking fines and thirty dollars for a parking permit that allows me to park two miles away from campus. What more do you people want, my firstborn child?

I have a feeling that I am not alone. I am just an average, law-abiding student who is having enough trouble paying for school without having to bleed myself

Zinser defends Boise Engineering graduates, employers

I am writing to publicly correct false information about graduates of the Boise Engineering Program given to a legislative panel last Thursday, which was the lead for a story in Friday's Statesman.

The article stated that Micron interviewed and rejected all 42 graduates of the Boise electrical engineering program. The facts are: Seven of those 42 graduates were hired by Hewlett-Packard. Following interviews with a number of these graduates, Micron hired four, making this company the second largest employer. Graduates of the Boise Engineering Program also have been hired by Morrison-Knudsen, Maida, J-U-B and Microsoft.

Such misinformation as was given to the legislative panel is an affront to the graduates and students of the Boise Engineering Program.

Elizabeth Zinser

Nearly all of the graduates are at work as engineers. Boise Engineering Program students are intelligent, hard-working individuals who have taken the initiative to further their education—some under difficult circumstances balancing school with family and work responsibilities.

These inaccurate claims also are an affront to the companies in Idaho who hire our graduates. Firms like Hewlett-Packard, which makes the best printers and the most reliable discs, have impeccable standards. So, they hire the best.

Idahoans have a right to know the high caliber of the state citizenry and workforce. To publicly question the quality of those individuals or their education is unfair and untrue.

Testimony at the same meeting asserted that the University of Idaho is unwilling to commit resources to the Boise Engineering Program. Again, false.

UI reallocates many dollars to the Boise Engineering Program, from Moscow, on top of new funding specifically for the Boise Engineering Program. Recent examples include:

- $300,000 in base funds for new faculty positions, currently advertised, and position support.

- $30,000 to build a position for a senior engineering educator to serve as associate dean for the Boise program—at a salary at least comparable to that of other associate deans given the responsibilities and stature expected.

- $20,000 for cooperative education program support for student internships.

- $120,000 to install compressed video for live interactive telecommunications between Boise and Moscow.

- $22,000 annually to provide speed access to 220,000 volumes of engineering and related science materials.

These reallocated dollars were designated for other purposes, but are diverted to strengthen and expand offerings in Boise. I ask Idahoans to make their own judgment—outside the heat of the rhetoric surrounding the current debate—about whether that constitutes a commitment. Additional investments from our base funding from Moscow to Boise are planned for projects on line in the coming months. New resources are needed also to expedite program expansion.

The university community and I recognize the changes in Idaho demographics and the growth of the high technology industry. We are changing the way we do business in engineering education—how the curricula are delivered and governed. We realize the state's engineers cannot be educated solely in Moscow. The UI's plan outlines a new paradigm—the Boise Engineering Program, the Moscow Engineering Program and the Idaho Falls Engineering Program as unique and equal partners within the Idaho College of Engineering. All three engineering education centers will enjoy increased local control and a larger role in college decision-making. For example, should the number of faculty and students in a department like electrical/computer engineering become substantially larger at Boise than at Moscow, the department chair can be headquartered in Boise.

Engineering education is a vital part of the future of the Treasure Valley and of the state. Idaho lawmakers and the general public deserve to be accurately informed. Our plans are based on a vision of what is best for the state as a whole and our sincere resolve to apply the best expertise of the institution to meet the needs for engineering education.

Letters to the Editor

Books a path to friendship

It was my privilege last summer to spend a month in Moscow's Sister City in Nicaragua. While in Villa Carlos Fonseca (also called Villa El Carmen) I visited schools, shared letters and pictures from Moscow students, taught English, and visited projects sponsored by Moscow Sister City Association. The village received me with open arms and the friendship extended to me by both students and teachers was genuine and unconditional. We exchanged classroom materials, shared goals for our students, and planned ongoing projects of friendship between our schools and our communities.

One of my first impressions upon visiting the schools was the absence of books. In many classes teachers worked from the only text available. Students copied all information from poor blackboards into notebooks, many of which were donated by Moscow students. Books for free reading were no where to be found.

The few scholastic magazines I had brought with me immediately absorbed the 11 year old in my host family. Reading comics in his own language was far sweeter to him than candy.

It was indeed sobering to realize that my 8 year old daughter has more books in her bookcase here in Moscow than could be found in all the schools combined in the Municipio of Villa Carlos Fonseca.

This coming Sunday, Jan. 22, the Moscow Sister City Association invites you to a Black Bean Burrito Feed in St. Augustine's Center from 5-7 pm.

All proceeds from this fund-raiser will help start libraries in the schools of La Villa. If you have books in Spanish for any age level (not grammar texts) that you would be willing to donate to the libraries you may bring them to the Burrito Feed or drop them off at the public library clearly marked as donations to Moscow Sister City.

There are many ways we can continue to nurture this international friendship which will enrich the lives of all involved, including correspondence between schools and humanitarian aid.

Please consider extending your hand in friendship through donations to their libraries.

—Connie Larson

Need for child care on the rise

I would like to applaud your paper's recent look at an issue that is of great concern to many families—child care. Community Action Agency's Child Care Solutions is the Resource and Referral that administers the Idaho Child Care Program in Region II (Latah, Nez Perce, Clearwater, Lewis and Idaho Counties).

While we do indeed administer the ICCP, our offices are not Idaho Child Care Offices, as reported in your Dec. 16 article "Child care availability low in Moscow," but instead are Resource and Referral offices that offer up-to-date provider profiles to parents searching for child care, offer on-going training opportunities to child care providers AND receive the grant to administer the Idaho Child Care Program.

As the administrator of that program, I would like to clarify some information printed in your recent article.

It is true that recent changes in ICCP have affected many parents. In the first half of 1993, the number of families on the program jumped from approximately 2000 to 5000. Due to that huge increase, monthly reimbursements being paid statewide were not within budget. Obviously, changes were necessary to insure the program continued to function throughout the year. One of those changes involved tightening up eligible activity hours for all participants.

Exact hours of employment are now more closely monitored, as are exact hours of school time. ICCP has never paid for study time, and participants were informed of that at their initial application. However, the program was previously able to pay a flat monthly rate whether the child was in care for 80 hours or 180.

Argonaut Letters Policy.

The Argonaut welcomes reader letters. They must be one page or less typed, double spaced. Letters must be signed and include the phone number and address of each writer. Letters may also be submitted by e-mail to argonaut@uidaho.edu or by fax to (208) 885-2222. The Argonaut reserves the right to refuse or edit letters. Multiple letters with the same position on a topic may be represented by one letter.

dry for the Nazi Parking Enforcers. What happens to the repeat offenders? Are they put to work in the coal mines or sent to the gas chambers?

My message to the Nazi Parking Enforcers is this: try to show a little mercy, okay? Maybe you could distribute handbooks of Moscow parking rules/regulations at the beginning of the year for those of us who come from small towns where there is no such thing as a parking ticket and are not yet accustomed to the "harsh reality" of life in Moscow.

By the way, I have free doughnuts for any police officers in my dorm room. To paraphrase Bob and Doug MacKenzie, "Hey Cops! Read my article! Don't give me tickets!"

Now, the flat monthly rate reimbursement is no longer an affordable option for the program, so rates are calculated according to the actual number of eligible activity hours parents have. For students, actual eligible hours include class time and time between classes.

These changes have been dramatic, but should not be causing providers to lose money. Parents are responsible to pay their child care costs in full, regardless of their participation in the program.

The Idaho Child Care Program is a reimbursement program that assists parents as much as it can. Providers are strongly encouraged to charge a fee that reflects the professional and essential service that they provide, and parents participating in ICCP are required to pay the same rates as other parents. ICCP reimburses parents as a reward for working toward self-sufficiency, but parents themselves are still solely responsible for their child care arrangements.

Child care is a strain on the budget of any family.

However, some families in Idaho are lucky enough to be participating in a program that offers some assistance with those costs. Where would those Idaho families be without this program?

—Lisa Ballantyne-Stoddard,
Child Care Program Manager

Baker adds new blood to Bad Religion

Veteran band Bad Religion rocks into the 1990s

Matt Baldwin
Staff

Beginning in the late '70's — 1979 to be exact — the icon punk band Bad Religion celebrates their 15th anniversary on tour with Samiam and Supersuckers.

Along with their tour is the recent release of yet another album, Stranger Than Fiction. Bad Religion began in Tannoga Park California in 1979. Coming together from the surrounding area of Berkeley.

"It was three people who went to the same high school who knew they were the right people to play in a band — 'cause they were the only people with dyed hair and leather jackets in the school. One of them had a basement."

"It was basically — that was basically the end of the aspirations for the band — was just to get together and play music in a basement. It sort of led to maybe playing a show, after playing a few shows it led to maybe making a record. It sort of sprung from a grass roots thing. No real plans or long term goals," said Brian Baker, a guitarist for Bad Religion.

"The name Bad Religion was at the time sort of a reactionary statement that would definitely provoke the common man from you know if you see it on a leather jacket. It wasn't necessarily religiously based, it was more of a general dogma. The shock value of Bad Religion in 1979 was a lot greater than you would imagine it to be nowadays," Baker said as he described the purpose behind the band's name.

Being the newest member of Bad Religion, Baker was also in many other bands before entering Bad Religion's doors. Other bands which Baker has a claim to fame to are The Circle Jerks, Junkyard of the Guns 'N Roses.

“I would rather have

— Brian Baker, and Minor Threat.

"That is how we kind of knew each other. From the punk rock of old network. Actually, Dag Nasty did a record on Epitaph, which was Bad Religion's old label, and I got back into contact with them through that and when their guy quit I was called."

"Being involved in this kind of music and being one of...the original members of Bad Religion were at the beginning of this American thing. My band started in '80 and theirs started in '79. We qualify as punk-rockers by pedigree," Baker said when stating how Bad Religion fits into punk-rock. "I would rather have the American youth discovering the Green Days instead of Guns 'N Roses."

Their latest album, Stranger Than Fiction was recorded at Rumbo Records and produced by Andy Wallace.

"I was totally blown away by it. I had saw that it had kept up the song writing. The song writing style of Recipe For Hate which was something of a departure for Bad Religion, but it managed to do so without losing touch with my favorite songs; my favorite styles off some of the early records.

"Some of the first records which were widely distributed and it seemed to be a nice blend of the old and new. As a fan I was kind of afraid of show that there was some pressure put on by the label. When I got the record I was pleasantly surprised that it was definitely the record you wouldn't expect for a major label debut. And then of course it gets funnier when they asked me to join the band," Brian said.

Bad Religion, with the release of their Stranger Than Fiction album have launched a national tour. Bad Religion is on tour with another sister band Samiam and Supersuckers. We'll see if this tour brings the same riots as some of their past tours have brought. Bad Religion is definitely headed into another decade of good music.

With the addition of Brian Baker, Bad Religion will have another great influence from another soldier in the punk rock world.

Black Currant Jam is spontaneous rock

Jeffrey Albertson
Staff

Black Currant Jam, a four piece from Bellingham, Wash., will be filling John's Alley with their own special blend of original improvisational rock-n-roll Saturday, Jan. 21.

Formed in 1990, the band consists of Brandt Milczewski on guitar and vocals, John Marvin on drums, Brian Hughes on bass and vocals and Jeremy Hughes on guitar and vocals. Together they pride themselves on the spontaneity of their live shows and the ability to get the audience involved. Drawing from such influences as Neil Young, Bob Dylan, Frank Zappa and Willie Nelson the band focuses on diversity to create an anything can happen live show.

Black Currant Jam has had success touring extensively throughout the western United States playing with groups like G.T. Noah, The Renegade Saints, The Strangers and Sweetwater. They have already recorded a five-song demo tape and have plans to record and release a full length compact disc by the fall of 1995. In the past they have funded their own recording projects and even managed to record the first demo for only $300 in just two days. The short time span and low-budget cost allowed them to record the whole thing live and without studio tricks-something they take pride in as a band.

The music will get underway at 9:30 with a cover charge of $3.

Annual jazz festival announces performers

Amy Ridenour

Lifestyles Editor

Every year for the past twenty-eight years, the University of Idaho has proudly hosted the Lionel Hampton Jazz Festival. This year is no different.

Beginning Feb. 22, musicians from around the world will be performing at the 1995 Lionel Hampton Jazz Festival.

While the festival is a haven for jazz greats to perform, it also gives junior high and high schools from around the country a chance participate in the competition portion of the festival and learn about jazz from its finest members.

This year school-age participants are arriving from Arizona, British Columbia, California, Idaho, Indiana, Montana, North Dakota, Oregon, South Dakota, Saskatchewan, Utah, and Washington.

The Jazz Festival itself has been around for twenty-eight years, but it was named after Lionel Hampton only ten years ago. Since then, the Jazz Festival has become known as one of the world's greatest jazz festivals.

Some of the world's best artists who will be performing at this festival include Lou Rawls, vocals; George Shearing, piano; Dianne Reeves, vocals; The Gene Harris Quartet; Dee Daniels, vocals; Romano Mussolini, piano; The Ray Brown Trio; Oscar Klein, trumpet; and Marion McPartland, piano. Not only do these artists perform, they offer clinics about music, performance, and techniques to students.

Lionel Hampton and the Jazz Festival Quartet, whose members include Brian Bromberg, Bobby Durham, Herb Ellis, and Hank Jones, are featured in all four concerts of the Jazz Festival.

The first event of the festival is the Pepsi International World Concert featuring Ray Brown, John Clayton Jr., Dee Daniels, and many other exciting artists. Feb. 23 is the Northwest Airlines Special Guest Concert with Marion McPartland, Dianne Reeves, Vanessa Rubin, and George Shearing.

The All-Star Concert is Friday Feb. 24 and features Ronnie Cuber, Art Farmer, Benny Golson, Al Grey, Mike Grey, and many other talented performers.

The GTE Giants of Jazz Concert, the final night of the Jazz Festival, will showcase Lionel Hampton and his New York Big Band, the Jazz Festival Quartet, the Ray Brown Trio, Lou Rawls, and Wallace Rooney.

This year marks the tenth anniversary of the Lionel Hampton Jazz Festival and is sure to be one that we don't want to miss. According to Hampton, the festival just gets better and better every year.

Tickets are still available through Ticket Express at 885-7212.

ASUI productions plan spring events

Sci-Fi, Alpha experience, highlight ASUI spring productions

Jeremy Chase
Staff

From laser-disc movies to a virtual reality ride to open mike nights and coffeehouse performers, ASUI Productions is ready to offer diverse programs to University of Idaho students.

Shana Plasters, interim Program Advisor for ASUI Productions, said that this semester will provide students with much more diversity in its programs. "I think the board has done a nice job presenting programs," she said.

One change for ASUI Productions this semester is the addition of laser-disc technology for its film series. Plasters said that the addition of laser-disc movies will let students experience digital sound, sharper images, and movies shown in a letterboxed version. "We're trying to see if people are interested in this format," Plasters said.

Sara Crockett, ASUI Films Chair, is also looking forward to the semester. "I think it will be fantastic," she said. "We're trying a lot of new things this semester."

Crockett said that February will mark the beginning of "Roman Daze," a series of Roman movies to be shown every Wednesday night during the month. Beginning Feb. 1, the series will start with A Funny Thing Happened on the way to the Forum, and continue with Spartacus Feb. 8 and Julius Caesar Feb. 15.

In addition to "Roman Daze," Crockett said that "Sci-Fi Explosion," another film series, will begin on Saturday nights in February. This series will include Pink Floyd's The Wall Feb. 4, Terminator 2: Judgement Day Feb. 11, and Aliens Feb. 18. All movies will be shown at the Borah Theater at 7 p.m. Admission is $1 for UI undergraduates and $2 for all others interested.

As another outlet for entertainment, "Alpha Experience" will be coming to campus Feb. 7. A virtual reality ride, Plasters said that the program will be in the Vandal Lounge from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. The program is free of charge to UI students.

ASUI Productions will also begin the first open-mike night of the semester Feb. 4 in the Vandal Cafe. The first act will take the stage at 8 p.m.

Also appearing in the Vandal Cafe will be coffeehouse performers. Guitarist Judd Grossman will be appearing Feb. 10, and a group of jazz choirs will be performing Feb. 17 as a prelude to this year's Jazz Festival.

Coffeehouse performances begin at 8 p.m. and are also free of charge to UI students. Any questions about ASUI Productions may be directed to Shana Plasters at 885-6591.

THE NEEDLE & THE DAMAGE DONE OUTCESTICIDE II NIRVANA

Keeping its way from the country of Italy, the CD Nirvana: The Needle & The Damage Done: Outcesticide II has hit small stores which specialize in hard to find and obscure CDs.

Nirvana: Outcesticide II is a 21 track album with songs ranging from the beginning to the end of Nirvana.

Starting the album is the song "In Bloom," yet unlike its predecessor this "In Bloom" is an unsued Sub Pop 7 inch taken directly from the master tape. Adding to the song are some different chords played by Kurt Cobain while he sings in a different key.

On the CD are two unreleased songs: "Help Me," circa 1989, in which Cobain repeatedly repeats the words "help me" as he sings about being poor, and "In His Hands," circa 1990.

There are also songs which made it to all of the albums: Bleach, Nevermind and In Utero.

From the In Utero album is: "Pennyroyal Tea," yet, the difference from In Utero's version and Outcesticide's version is that on Outcesticide Cobain is singing different lyrics to the song, as well as playing in a pre-modified version before finalizing it to become the In Utero version. "Heart Shaped Box" also made this album in a different format.

Outcesticide also includes a cover of The Who's "Baba O'Riley" as well as a cover of the Doors' "The End." The latter being more of a slaughter of the song than an actual cover.

Throughout the 21 tracks, some songs find Kurt Cobain going solo, specifically on the song "Where Did You Sleep Last Night" which is an electrical version of the song Nirvana performed during MTV's unplugged session. Another song which appeared on the unplugged special was, "The Man Who Sold The World," and this song is also done in an electrical version.

Among the titles are some live tracks including: "Oh, The Guilt," "Something In the Way," "Negative Creep," and "Smells Like Teen Spirit" live on the Word TV Show and live with Flea from the Red Hot Chili Peppers playing trumpet.

Highlighting the album is a song by the name of "It's Closing Soon." This song is from the famous Rio Tape. It is Kurt Cobain on guitar and Courtney Love, the point-woman for Hole as well as wife of Cobain, on vocals. The date on this song is unknown.

Nirvana: Outcesticide II is released on Blue Moon Records.

For a copy of this album you can special order from Blecker Bob's at (212) 475-9677 or (213) 951-9111 who specialize in rare rock-n-roll records. This album is a definite must for the hard-core Nirvana fan. This album contains material you will not hear anywhere else.

For further information call the Women's Center, 885-6616.

Aquifer battle intensely political

Erik Marone
Staff

Editor's note: This is the second in a two-part series. Part two examines the politics involved in designating the Eastern Columbia Plateau Aquifer System as a sole source aquifer.

When the Palouse-Clearwater Environmental Institute filed a petition with the EPA, over what executive director Tom Lamar refers to as "milquetoast environmental stuff," they didn't expect a huge political battle.

Much like an election year campaign, it has been a war of mud-slinging and misinformation, with several parties going at it with all the fervor of any recent political melee.

The PCEI's petition for Sole Source Aquifer status or SSA status for the Eastern Columbia Plateau Aquifer System was submitted in January 1993. The intention was to protect the drinking water for about 300,000 residents of Eastern Washington and parts of the Idaho panhandle.

Lamar says it is a fairly simple matter. The only reason someone would have to oppose SSA is if they were going to be doing business or polluting the aquifer. This approach has stepped on the toes of some powerful adversaries who have been fighting to overcome the negative image they feel has been painted by misinformation.

Michael Buchanan, deputy director, Big Bend Economic Development Council, represents the seven Washington counties opposed to SSA. Buchanan feels the research is not accurate. "This is not the kind of aquifer the Safe Drinking Water Act was designed to protect. Technically, it is an aquifer system," he said. Buchanan feels PCEI filed the petition primarily to stop a proposed Adams County landfill site. He says "it is illegal to use a SSA in this manner."

Waste Management, the world's largest solid waste handler, is the company that will be developing the landfill. They too feel the information is not accurate and is incomplete at this point. Although they are not flatly against SSA, they want to see more research considered before a decision is reached.

Scott Cave, a spokesman for Waste Management, is disgusted with how it has been handled so far. "Neither the PCEI nor the EPA has proven the connection of the three aquifers or that contamination of one will affect the system."

Cave says that the EPA has only considered about 10 percent of the information available and the research is based mostly on one set of data: a U.S. Geological Survey computer generated conceptual model. Cave said scientific documents so far are "relatively short and primarily use the USGS's data, not alternative independent sources" and USGS field studies are not matching up with data from independent sources.

Scott Downey of the Seattle EPA office says the USGS study is one of the most comprehensive collections of data to date, including research submitted during the public comment period. The public comment period expires in a little less than a month.

Downey says some of the independent data is not matching the USGS study because it is comprehensive, incorporating research from many sources.

He invites anyone interested to contact the USGS to look at their findings and submit their own research or concerns about SSA designation.

Although they have yet to submit any research, Waste Management is currently finishing up their second round of hydrogeologic testing. The testing is required to apply for an operations permit. The permit will allow Waste Management to begin construction of their new facility in East Adams County.

Cave claims that the landfill is "a premier site" that will meet or exceed the existing ecological and environmental regulations, some of which Waste Management have pushed for in the past. He says new state Department of Ecology regulations and SSA designation are unnecessary and often redundant.

Downey says he expects the EPA to render a decision within a couple months after the public comment period, which ends Feb. 17. If you have any concerns to express about the SSA, write the USEPA, Mail Stop WD-131, 1200 6th Avenue, Seattle WA 98101.

Ski bus cruises off to the races

Dennis Sasse
Outdoors Editor

The Powder Express is offering to be your chairlift to the slopes. The first Silver and Gold Cup race will also be held during the first run of the Powder Express.

Each of the three scheduled ski bus trip costs UI students $26 and $35 for others. Participants get a comfortable ride on a chartered coach and a lift ticket for a low price.

The cost of entering the race is $8 if you take the ski bus or have a season pass to Silver Mountain. If you have a ride up to Silver Mountain, entry fees for the race include a lift ticket and cost $25. Either is a hard deal to pass, lift tickets alone usually cost $31 at Silver Mountain.

ASUI Outdoor Program is offering three Saturday trips to area ski resorts. Two trips will be to Silver Mountain and one will visit Schweitzer Mountain. The first trip will venture to Silver Mountain on Jan. 28. The Silver and Gold Cup ski race will be held then.

The Silver and Gold race is sponsored by Campus Recreation and begins at 10 a.m. Jan. 28. Skiers from six area colleges will compete for the Silver and Gold Cup. University of Montana, Washington State University, Eastern Washington University, North Idaho College, Spokane Falls Community College and University of Idaho will vie for the cup. The school that wins the Cup will have its name engraved on the Cup, which will then be on display at the Resort.

Students from rival schools will race on a dual slalom course. They will have an opportunity to best each other in side by side action. Contestant points will be awarded based on time. Points earned individually will help determine the school team winning the Silver and Gold Cup.

"This is purely recreational, not hard-core. Just sign up," said Terece Sheckler, special events coordinator for Campus Recreation. Beginning and intermediate skiers are encouraged to enter the race. This is a chance to race competitively for fun, without pressure. It is a good chance for first time racers to test their skill. Sheckler said the ski bus and race is also a good way to get out and meet other skiers.

Students interested in signing up for the Silver and Gold Cup need to sign up with Campus Recreation by Jan. 25 and anyone interested in taking the ski bus should sign up at the Outdoors Program by the Thursday prior to the trip.

The second ski bus trip will journey Schweitzer Mountain on Feb. 11 and the last trip will go back to Silver Mountain on Feb. 25.

The ASUI Outdoor Program is offering one day ski rental specials for those who need to rent skis. If you own skis, don't worry about space, there is plenty of room on the "Powder Express" for ski storage.

The Outdoor Program does not make money running the ski busses, the bus is run as a service for the students. This is the third year that the Outdoor Program has offered a ski bus. The cost of the trip is kept down because of grant money received from ASUI. Mike Beiser, Outdoor Recreation coordinator, says if the ski busses do not fill it could lead to the end of this program.

Seating on the Powder Express is limited and tickets are sold on a first come first served basis, so don't wait.

Spring Valley offers rainbows

Helen W. Hill
Staff

Have you ever wondered how some idiot could want to sit out on a foot thick slab of ice watching a little red and white ball bounce in the frigid water? What could the appeal be?

While others were off and about this semester break, I was finding out just what is involved in ice fishing. My husband and I decided to try our lines at Spring Valley since it is close by with an established and maintained road and has a good sized fish population.

I certainly wouldn't qualify as a serious enthusiast since I seldom spend much more than an hour; some people spend hour after hour on the ice. I create an inherent limiter to my time by taking my children (Beth and JJ) with me.

Unfortunately, they also limit the number of fish caught not only by limiting the time, but also by not being still. Talking doesn't disturb the fish as it might during fair weather fishing, but walking does, even just a step or two.

All seven year old boys are active. JJ amazed me by actually standing quietly, fully intent on his line for ten minutes the first time we went out. It helped that about twenty minutes after we got a pair of holes broken through the ice and cleared we pulled out our first fish.

Since the children tire of fishing long before we do, we take advantage of other recreation activities offered by open snowy areas. Beth and JJ enjoyed sledding on one of the smaller hills near a parking lot. Someone else had brought snowmobiles and the roar of their engines could be heard for miles.

Tracks from other people's sleds and cross country skis covered the hill our kids chose as well as several more challenging ones.

A couple from Hawaii who were visiting friends in the Troy area watched us for awhile. The woman asked "What are you fishing for, salmon?" I couldn't help but laugh.

I should have been sobered by proof of the ignorance so many people have of Idaho's fish and wildlife. At least she had the excuse of being from a tropical island where the flora and fauna are completely different. Many people in Washington, Oregon and Idaho might have just as honestly asked the same question.

Spring Valley has an excellent population of rainbow trout. The fish we caught there this winter have been very good, with little fishy smell and a delicate, mild taste. They are wonderful lightly seasoned and fried or steamed whole. They can of course be dipped in flour, cornmeal or bread crumbs and seasonings and fried or baked.

Take time to have fun

Dennis Sasse
Outdoors Editor

After a day of battling books and staring out classroom windows feeling like a caged animal, what do YOU do? If you are like most students on campus, you hole up somewhere, do some homework, decide homework is boring and watch television.

Winter on the Palouse can be a gray and dreary time. Students find it easy to hibernate indoors. Anyone who has lived on the Palouse for more than one winter will admit, it can remain gray and overcast for weeks at a time. Perhaps worse than the gray days are the sunny ones. The sun beckons, calling weary students, requesting their presence in any area not surrounded by walls.

The first week of class is particularly stressful. Class cancellations or changes throw a perfectly planned class schedule into chaos. Suddenly, Dantes' vision of hell doesn't seem so bad. Stress, boredom or even a bad day are often breeding grounds for a deep blue funk.

Fortunately, taking time to go outside and do something can do wonders for the soul. There is a multitude of outdoor activities to undertake when the days are gray.

Take a drive out Tamarack Road near Troy. See how far you can get without getting stuck. When you can't drive any further, take a walk. While you are walking look for moose. Dawn and dusk are the best times to go find moose.

Learn how to ice-fish, Spring Valley reservoir is not far and the ice is thick. I am told the fishing is good and I know the folks fishing are friendly.

Cross country skiing is fun and aerobic. It does not cost much to rent a pair of cross country skis from the Outdoor Program. The rolling hills of the Palouse are a great place to learn or hone cross country skills. Both the Outdoors program and the Women's center are offering cross country trips this weekend.

Try your foot at snowshoeing.

A little more expensive, but fun nonetheless, are snowmobile trips.

The Sandpoint Winter carnival starts this weekend. While you are at Sandpoint, check out demo days at Schweitzer.

Alpine skiing is always fun. There are several good resorts not too far from campus.

Go outside, work off some tension and have fun! We spend a lot of time cooped up in class. Treat yourself to a day of your favorite activity. If you can't afford to take a whole day off, set aside a couple hours to just have fun.

Green kicked off men's basketball

The holidays were anything but happy for Idaho basketball player Jevon Green. The freshman guard was indefinitely suspended and later kicked off the team after he was charged with illegal use of a credit card by means of forgery. Green, who led all Washington high school players in scoring last year while at Nathan Hale High School in Seattle, was also charged with grand theft. In addition, Green had an outstanding warrant against him in Seattle.

The Latah County prosecutors office has dropped the forgery charges. Green waived his preliminary hearing on the grand theft charge. His arraignment on the grand theft charge is set for Jan. 25 in Moscow.

Green's last appearance for the Vandals was against New Mexico, in Albuquerque on Dec. 21. He was averaging 4.5 points and 11 minutes a game before his dismissal.

Intramural entry deadlines

Intramural junkies had better gear up for the spring semester barrage and quick. The entry deadline for basketball is Jan. 24 and play is set to kick off Jan. 30. The ski meet entry deadline is Jan. 25 with action taking place Jan. 28. The entry deadline for co-rec volleyball is Jan. 25 with play scheduled to begin on Jan. 31. The racquetball singles tourney is set for Jan. 29 with entry forms due by Jan. 26.

Rice gives opponents double-dose

Mindy Rice may not have much spare time, but she uses the time she does have to excel in everything she does.

Last month Rice decided to walk on to the women's basketball team, after completing a successful career as an outside hitter for the Idaho Vandals volleyball team.

Rice was an all-state basketball player at Rimrock High School in Grandview, Idaho, but decided to accept a volleyball scholarship at the University of Idaho. The senior walk-on is already the second-leading scorer on the women's basketball team, and has become a star on a struggling squad. Although Rice has no remaining eligibility to play volleyball, she is still eligible to play another year of basketball. The 6-foot 1-inch forward is very happy to return to basketball, a sport she hasn't played competitively since high school.

"I love the game of basketball, and I didn't want to finish college without playing...luckily coach Holt (UI women's basketball coach Julie Holt) gave me the opportunity to play," Rice said.

After a successful volleyball season, it has been an adjustment for Rice to play on a team which has been anything but successful.

"I'd be lying if I said the losing didn't bother me, but we have improved, and along with improvement comes confidence," Rice said, adding that the slow improvement will eventually lead to more wins down the road.

Any Big Sky volleyball fan knows of Rice's skills and accomplishments on the volleyball court. In the '94 season Rice led the Vandals to a third straight Big Sky title and a second round trip to the NCAA tournament. Rice was named to the All-Big Sky first team, and the biggest achievement... being named a second team All-American, only player in Big Sky history to boast the award.

"I was amazed...the award came

Tom Hilbert plucked Mindy Rice from tiny Grandview, Idaho in 1991 and the partnership has flourished. Rice is now playing basketball for the Vandals - her first action since high school.

Bart Stageberg

as a surprise, because they didn't call me like they said they would...I didn't believe it until I personally received the award," Rice said.

Rice felt that she stepped up as a leader, although she wasn't always vocal.

"I didn't scream and yell, and I just wasn't a vocal leader. I established myself as a silent leader who could set a good example on the court. Encouraging others, being positive, and setting examples is how I showed my leadership."

The silent leader felt that head volleyball coach Tom Hilbert had a big part in her success, as well as the team's success.

"When I came in as a freshman I didn't know a whole lot, I had to break down, and Tom molded me into what I am today. Tom's a great coach, and he's taught us how to win and be successful."

Rice looks up to a lot of people, but her role model is professional tennis star Steffi Graf.

"I like tennis, and Steffi Graf is one of my role models, because she is so dominating and hard working," Rice said.

Besides being a tremendously busy athlete, Rice has managed to excel in academics by accumulating a 3.12 grade point average. Rice believes that athletics has taught her what it takes to succeed in life, which includes working hard, never giving up, and knowing what you want to achieve in life.

Rice's is a physical therapy major and she has a detailed agenda as to what she wishes to do after graduation.

"I plant to teach and coach in the Northwest somewhere, because I like sports and I like working with people," said Rice.

Whatever the silent leader intends to accomplish, you can almost bet that she'll be a success.

Vandals squash Hornets, host Eagles Saturday

Dan Eckles

Sports Editor

The Idaho Vandals took the sting out of the Sacramento State Hornets Tuesday night in an 87-72 NCAA men's basketball drubbing.

The Hornets, who narrowly fell to a tough Gonzaga club 77-72 in overtime last week, were outmatched from the start. The Vandals jumped to a quick 8-2 edge two minutes into the game and although the Hornets stayed close in the first half they trailed the whole way.

Idaho came out on fire in the second half, melting any hopes of a Sac-State comeback with a 20-4 run in the first four minutes after the intermission. Ben Johnson's breakaway layup with 7:45 remaining in the game put the Vandals up 74-50 for their largest lead of the contest.

"I thought our lapse came right after we left the locker room to start the game," Hornets coach Don Newman said. "You can't go anywhere on the road in Division 1 and spot points. Idaho came out and took it to us. We were playing behind from the start."

UI coach Joe Cravens substituted liberally throughout the final seven minutes. The Hornets cashed in on the Vandal youth and cut the margin to nine points in the final minute, but the Idaho reserves, led by freshman forward Taran Hay, reeled off the game's final six points for the double figure win.

"We just didn't come out and give the effort we needed," said Newman, who starred at the point for UI in the early '80s. "We came out here and I don't know what we were thinking."

The Vandals looked a step quicker all night gaining a 20-6 edge in fast break points. The easy buckets showed as Idaho outshot Sacramento State 50 percent to 45 percent. Most of Idaho's fast breaks came through a solid transition game as UI held a 39-25 rebounding advantage.

Saturday's game in Cheney between the 2-12 Lady Vandals and 4-10 Eagles of Eastern Washington isn't exactly the next Tennessee/UConn battle for number one, but every game is important to these two teams, especially an in-conference win.

"We've got to go out there and play every game like we're playing for the conference championship," Idaho coach Julie Holt said.

The Lady Vandals are heading to Reese Court for their third Big Sky road game in a row. Idaho lost to Idaho State and Boise State last weekend.

While both teams are sporting what might be termed lackluster records, neither team is lacking in enthusiasm.

"Any time you have an opportunity to win there is no problem finding motivation to go out there and play hard," first-year EWU head coach Heidi VanDerveer said. "If we play hard and we're together for 40 minutes we'll enjoy it. It's going to be a very good game."

Holt cites the improvement of her team as an incentive for them to go out and play hard.

"It's difficult to reverse a team's fortunes. It isn't something that happens overnight. We are a much better team than a month ago, two months ago, a year ago," Holt said. The rebuilding process is not just a matter of wins and losses. We're improving and we know what needs to be done."

Idaho goes into the matchup expecting big numbers from the Eagles' Lori Napier and Tina Smith. Napier and Smith are leading the Eagles with a combined 21.2 points and 13.1 rebounds per game. Like Idaho, EWU is looking to Saturday's game to give them their first conference win. Idaho wasn't the only team to have its problems in Pocatello and Boise; EWU was swept on the road last weekend as well.

"We're both trying to establish a winning mentality," VanDerveer said.

Cheerleaders return from Nationals

Ben Carr
Staff

The University of Idaho cheerleaders recently returned from the National Cheerleading Association's National Championships in the not-so sunny Dallas, Texas.

The Idaho cheerleading squad finished among the top 15 schools in the Division II competition. Only the top-ten schools were ranked in the competition.

"The difference in our score and the team that finished tenth was only a few points. We were really close," cheerleader Shad Miller said after the eleventh place finish.

Division I competition included teams from Kansas, Miami, and Florida State.

Cheerleader Becky Stoor said the Division I schools were incredible. "Basically one mistake and you're out," she said.

The Idaho squad competed against Indiana State, Stephen F. Austin, and eventual champion North Texas.

There were no other Big Sky teams or even teams from the West involved in the competition.

In order to even get invited to nationals the squad had to submit a videotape to the selection committee. Stoor said the selection process for teams submitting a video was very rigorous.

"There's a lot of videos sent in. Only 15 schools were picked. We're pretty lucky to have gotten picked," Stoor said.

Despite their unranked performance in the competition the cheer squad was very pleased with their performance.

"We got our highest scores on choreography, but we made up our own stuff," Miller said.

Cheerleader Justin Stern added, "Most teams bring in an outside choreographer to design their routines." The Vandal squad had to do without the benefit of outside help on the design and critique of their routines.

Stoor said, "It was the little mistakes that brought us down. You had to be almost perfect."

Stoor also emphasized that most of the teams Idaho competed against had almost a year to prepare. The Idaho squad was limited to about a month.

The preparation the cheer squad went through for the competition was one to rival any other sports team.

"During Christmas break we were even having three-a-day practices. That's about seven hours of practice a day," Miller said.

One member of the squad, Teresa Davies, tore her anterior cruciate ligament (ACL) and the squad had to bring in Jami Brown as an alternate. Brown only had two days to learn the whole routine before the competition.

Cheer coach Scott Jones is optimistic about next year's tourney, but realistic.

"Financially, going to nationals would be very difficult," said Jones. "We drained a lot of sources to go this year. Maybe next year we can qualify at the cheerleading camp in August instead of qualifying in November. That would give us from August through January to raise money instead of only being able to raise money for a month or so."

The Vandal cheerleaders are planning a mini-camp for junior and senior high school students this semester to help pay back some of the money they used to go to nationals.

The cheerleading squad wanted to extend their special thanks to the people who supported them.

"The Athletic Director's office was behind us 100 percent. We'd really like to thank everyone who supported us on our way to nationals. Without those people, going to nationals wouldn't have been possible," Stoor said.

Indoor track kicks off in Cheney Sat.

Coach Mike Keller enters his 21st year as men's head track coach

Kevin Neuendorf
Staff

The 1995 men's indoor track season gets underway Saturday in Cheney, Wash. at the Eastern Washington Invitational.

Men's track coach, Mike Keller, will depend largely on a group of newcomers to improve on last year's eighth place finish at the Indoor Championships.

Keller, in his 21st year as head coach, will also rely on his two lone seniors, Sprinter Scott Whalen and distance runner Ty Koellman, to provide leadership ability on the freshman laden squad.

According to Keller, the sprints and jumping events will be the strength of his team.

Freshmen Deji Aliu, Garth Chadband, Jason St. Hill, Felix Kamangirira, and Fidelis Mutyambizi will team with Whalen in the sprint events. Transfer Thaddeus Hathaway will join freshmen Christopher Kwaramba and Rick Wassenaar to give Idaho depth in the jumping events. Sophomore Niels Kruller will round out the sprint and jumping squads.

The distance events will include sophomore Frank Bruder and newcomers Bernd Schroeder and Vincent Perez along with defending 1,500 meter champion Ty Koellman, which Keller hopes will be a very competitive group.

Women's track and field coach, Scott Lorek, will not debut his team until Jan. 27, at the Idaho Scoring Invitational in the Kibbie Dome.

Lorek, who returns for his 10th season at the helm of the Lady Vandals, will look to a group of 12 returning letterwinners and 10 outstanding freshman to form a team that could challenge for the Indoor Championship in March.

Lorek's squad of distance runners could be the strength of the team. Freshman Shelley Zickler, who earned All-Big Sky Conference honors in cross country, will be joined by Angie Mathison, Sharry Olsen, Beth Mahn and Shannon Kearney.

The Lady Vandals will also feature returning throwers Jill Wimer and Jessica Welk, who could both score in the shot put.

The Kibbie Dome will be home to six indoor track and field meets for both the men's and women's teams this spring, including the Big Sky Indoor Championships March 3-4. In addition, the U.S.A. Indoor Multi-Event Championships will be Feb. 10 and 11 in the Kibbie Dome and will feature the top U.S. multi-event athletes in the country, qualifying for the World Championships. Dan O'Brien will be competing along with other top men and women athletes.

Idaho is led by 6-foot 1-inch forward Mindy Rice. Rice, the All American volleyball player for Idaho, has come on to lead UI hoop team in points and rebounds (17.1 points and 8.7 boards per game).

The Lady Vandals have also been helped along the way by guards Ari Skorpik, a sophomore, and Kelli Johnson, a freshman. Skorpik and Johnson are a young backcourt that provides plenty of scoring for Idaho.

Between them the duo is scoring a combined 23.9 points a game and has scored 50 times from behind the three-point line.

Holt wants to stress defense in order to keep a tight lid on the Eagles' offense Saturday night.

"I think the biggest thing is playing key defense and dominating the boards. We have to keep them off the offensive boards. That's an area that is really one of their strengths," Holt said.

Next week Idaho plays host to conference rivals Weber State and Northern Arizona.

"Come watch us play and be a part of something," Holt says to Vandal fans.

the last three years, was just what Idaho needed to get back on the winning track after losing second half leads last weekend to Big Sky favorites Idaho State and Boise State.

Idaho wraps up a four game home stand Saturday night when it hosts Big Sky doormat Eastern Washington. The Eagles have not won a league game since the 1992-93 season and have lost to Idaho 18 straight times, dating back to 1986.

If the Eagles are to put up a fight in the Kibbie Dome this weekend they will have to shut down UI forward Harry Harrison. The 6-foot 7-inch junior has been a machine on the boards, averaging 10.7 a game and chipping in nearly 14 points as well. Junior off-guard Shawn Dirden has also been impressive over the last few weeks, averaging 14 points per contest in his last six games for the Vandals.

Kevin Groves and Josh Lewis pace the EWU offensive attack, posting 12.6 and 11.9 scoring averages. Curtis Porter, a 6-3 guard, came on strong in the Eagles Big Sky opener last weekend, scoring 33 points in the two games, and could be a factor.

Changes may induce sportsmanship

The intramural season will begin with a slightly different flavor this year, and the new taste is one of team and personal sportsmanship regulations.

Starting Jan. 30, students involved in intramural basketball will be graded as a team, on the attitudes and conduct while they are playing.

Intramural Sports Director Greg Morrison believes the new code of sportsmanship will increase the participation in basketball, as well as better the game at the same time.

"There was a fight last year, and we are trying to avoid that again this year," Morrison said.

Morrison added this year people will know the consequences of their actions well before they make the choice to act as they do.

In order to qualify for the playoffs now, a team must have a member attend the managers meeting, have a .500 record or better, post a sportsmanship rating of a "C" or better, and have no more than 2 forfeits during the regular season. Ratings will be based on the basic grading scale, with an A giving a team 4 points, a B giving 3 points, and so on down the line.

Scores from all regular season contests are added together, and the total is then divided by the number of games a team has played. If the team average is above a 2.0, and the team meets all other regulations, it is eligible for the post-season. If however, the team average is below a 2.0, it will not be eligible for the playoffs.

Deductions are pretty clear, ranging from dunking during warm-ups or halftime, to "trash-talking" or excess arguing. These actions will also result in technical fouls, which in turn make your highest possible score for that game a 3. If two technicals are given in a game the highest grade would be a "C" or a 2, and if an ejection occurs, the highest grade a team may get is a "D," or a 1.

Many see contemporary basketball, as a sort of "in your face game," but Morrison said, "it's not part of the game, and it simply won't be tolerated."

The intramural executive board hopes the new system forces teams to talk less and play harder. If having to maintain a 2.0 sportsmanship rating sounds harsh, take into consideration that Morrison and the Executive Board (composed of students), lowered the rating from its original mark of a 3.0.

The University of Idaho's intramural program is a successful one, and any changes that can make it better, need to be pursued. Many of us take for granted

Many see contemporary basketball, as a sort of "in your face game" but, "it's not part of the game, and it simply won't be tolerated"

—Greg Morrison

the opportunity to play, without really thinking of the consequences of our actions at times. If their wasn't an intramurals program, many of us wouldn't be able to go back to those glory days of high school athletics where you scored 25 against your arch rivals, and hit the game winner at the buzzer to top it all off. Intramurals is a chance to compete, and if only for an hour a week, bring the kid out in us again!

All changes take time, and they are made for the good of others, so before you say this rating system is stupid, take a time-out and think about your alternatives. I thought they were bogus as well, until I really thought about college without intramurals.
